Work of the Red Cross

The Eastland County Red Cross chapter has been highly successful during recent years in carrying on its work. This was shown at the annual meeting of the organization here Saturday morning, when it was announced that the organization now has in its treasury $1,211.62, following the annual roll call.

The Red Cross here has been almost invaluable as a relief agency in time of emergency. During the first years of the Depression it was the principal organization, outside the local Welfare Association, that extended aid to the needy. This it did first by supply flour and later groceries and clothing to those unfortunate enough not to have employment or means of providing for themselves and their families. More recently the Red Cross has been aiding in other ways. The county chapter was praised at Saturday's meeting by R. T. Bridge, field representative, for its contribution which was used in an emergency in East Texas. At present it is extending aid to needy families and those not reached by other forms of relief.

But it was made very clear at Saturday's meeting that the Red Cross is not a general relief organization. That is, it is an organization which extends relief only in cases of emergency or disasters. If its funds were suddenly to be turned to the matter of general relief the organization—national as well as local—would find itself unable to meet the situation. It realizes this and does not intend to take over the general relief problem which recently has been handled by governmental agencies. It will continue to confine its activities to relief in emergencies and disasters.

At Saturday's meeting the present county chairman, J. E. Spencer, was given a vote of confidence and asked to accept the chairmanship for the coming year. The action of the Red Cross members of the county was a wise one. Thoroughly familiar with the work, Chairman Spencer not only is capable in the matter of handling the relief funds for the organization, but he knows the condition of the people with whom he is dealing better than anyone else in the county.

It is the selection of such officials and their workers over the nation and throughout the world that has made the Red Cross the organization it is today.

The County Meet

One of the really big days of the school year for the average youngster is the day of the county Interscholastic League meet. All boys and girls, especially those of the smaller schools, look forward to the day for weeks and months, planning what they will wear, how they will go, and what they will do when they reach the place where the meet is to be held.

The meet for this school year will be in Cisco, with the public schools and the people of the city as hosts. Cisco was awarded the meet at the annual county institute—now the Eastland County Teachers association—last week. The location of the county meet city was chosen by popular vote.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—In one of the capital's better interior decorating shops works an upholsterer who served on the jury which several years ago convicted Albert B. Fall of bribe-taking in the oil cases.

Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of the supreme court justice who won fame in prosecution of E. L. Doheny, Harry Sinclair, and Fall—Fall alone being convicted—went into the shop the other day.

The upholsterer told her how he had been one of a minority on the Fall jury standing for conviction and how he had helped swing the others around.

"Lady," he announced, "if it hadn't been for me, your husband wouldn't amount to a damn!"

(Mrs. Roberts took it and liked it.)

YOUR government and mine, which always is pulling quaint little surprises on us, has opened up some shop windows and is displaying its wares behind plate glass in the downtown shopping section.

That's a result of the policy under which your government and mine is grabbing every inch of office, store, hotel, and other space on which it can get its hands, even to the point of taking over big apartment houses and ordering all the tenants out so government executives and clerks can move in.

When it takes over a store with a lot of window glass on a busy street, it naturally figures it should stick something in the window.

THIS, now that the FERA-WPA Educational Division has moved into an abandoned sporting goods store at 1340 G street, it has filled the windows with a display of pamphlets about workers' education, emergency education, vocational education, and so on.

On top of this display are some little stuffed bunnies, little stuffed elephants, and little dresses which parents on relief were taught to make while undergoing FERA education. To say nothing of an autographed photograph of Mr. Roosevelt.

Down at 1423 F street the United States Information Service has a grander layout for window-shoppers, behind about 14 feet of glass. There's a big chart of the government with dozens of strips of red tape pinned on it and the strips run from names of federal agencies on the charts down to corresponding pages on a lot of opened copies of the United States Government Manual strewn around.

There's also a big chart of the National Emergency Council book which tells you what the federal agencies are, what they're for, what they do, how they're organized—with charts and pages of questions and answers. It's come to be quite a big book.

The backdrop of this window has some early painted pictures of the White House, the supreme court building and the Capitol and it looks pretty swell at night when a big searchlight is turned on.

There's also a printed quotation from Mr. Roosevelt to the effect that people should know more about their government.

Naturally, a lot of people are lured inside, where you can buy the manual for $2. You can also get all the free service you want and if your questions about your government and mine can't be answered orally at once you can write them down on a special blank and the USIS will tell you later.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

After the death of her parents, DANA WESTBROOK comes from abroad to make her home with a grandmother she has never seen.

Dana's half-sister, NANCY WALLACE, resents Dana's coming. Dana's grandmother, however, young granddaughter, will marry rich RONALD MOORE, and is determined to marry with her. Dana, meanwhile, has become attracted to DR. SCOTT STANLEY.

Nancy, who masks her love for Ronald behind an antagonistic attitude, unobtrusively watches Dana's interest in Dana. Just as suddenly, PALLA LANG watches Scott Stanley's attraction to Dana develop.

Ronald becomes jealous of Scott and stays away. Dana wonders what has happened.

Mrs. Cameron asks Scott to stop visiting Dana. Believing Dana excites her grandmother's interference, Scott ceases his attentions.

Dana and Scott meet at a dance and, swept along by their love for each other, decide to marry. Dana breaks the news to her grandmother.

CHAPTER XVII
MRS. CAMERON sank into a chair and stared at Dana. She looked tired, dejected.

Dana, her eyes on the white, drawn face of her grandmother, said, "I'm sorry to hurt you, but I can't help it. Scott and I love each other."

"Love, tommyrot!" scoffed Mrs. Cameron. "What do you know about love? It will be a different story when there's rent to pay and grocery bills and you need clothes and haven't the money to buy 'em."

"We know all that," Dana said, "but we're not worried."

"Not worried now," Mrs. Cameron said darkly. "More fool you! He's a fool, too. He might have had a chance to get up in the world, but there's no chance now. Saddling himself with a young wife before he's able to support one. You'll both live to regret it. Mark my words, young lady!"

"She got to her feet then, swaying under the stress of her words like a broken reed bent by the wind. "Here, Sarah, give me a hand."

The excited voices had drawn Aunt Ellen and Nancy, Sarah, in humble devotion to her mistress, was hovering near, too.

Aunt Ellen followed her sister, with frightened eyes. Nancy said excitedly: "So you're going to marry Scott Stanley! Well, I am surprised. I didn't know he was the marrying kind. There are lots of girls who will envy you, Dana, even though he hasn't a bank account."

"Scott and I aren't afraid to be poor," Dana answered proudly. "Lots of people have been poor and married. Think of the pioneers."

"So you're gettin' married," she said, as she placed hot waffles and a pitcher of melted butter before Dana, "and not to Mister Ronnie, I allus thought 'twould be Mister Ronnie. I could jus' see you settin' down in that fine house. I guess Ol' Miss could, too."

"I'm marrying the finest man in the world," Dana said firmly, attacking her waffle with healthy relish.

"Yes'm," said Sarah doubtfully. "I sure hopes so, Miss Dana!"

At the top of the stairs Dana met Aunt Ellen's beckoning finger.

"Your Grandmother wants the ceremony performed here, Dana."

Aunt Ellen said, when the door closed. "She couldn't bear it if you ran away. It would bring back too many sad memories. And it would be such a blow to her pride."

"We'll be glad to be married here if she wants us to," Dana said.

Aunt Ellen looked at Dana in a sort of breathless wonder. "I think you're very brave," she said finally. "And I believe you will be happy."

"Oh, thank you, Aunt Ellen," Dana cried. "I know we will!"

"Wait, Dana—I have something for you. It's a wedding present."

Aunt Ellen crossed to an old trunk in the corner of her room and opened it. After a moment she came back, holding a worn chenille purse in her hand. "There's almost $100 in this purse," she said in a low tone. "It's been there 50 years. Old money, but it will buy some of the pretty things every young girl should have when she marries."

"I couldn't," Dana cried. "I wouldn't take it from you for anything in the world."

"It will give me if you don't," her aunt said.

"Dear Aunt Ellen, I couldn't take your savings!"

"It was saved many years ago," Aunt Ellen's voice was almost a whisper. "You see, dear, I too expected to be married. To someone handsome and young, and very poor. Your grandmother had married well, and she was bitter because I wouldn't be as comfortable and secure. I had always looked up to her, and obeyed her. In the end, I gave up my fiance, and after a while he married someone else. He was Scott's grandfather, Dana."

"Aunt Ellen!" breathed Dana. "Oh, poor darling!"

"You see, I feel a sort of claim on Scott, too. And then I would like this money to be used for what it was originally intended—a trousseau."

Christmas Is Quiet For Mary Christmas

AUSTIN, Dec. 9 — Mary Christmas, Austin girl who for more than 20 years has been plagued by reporters and curious wants to spend one peaceful Dec. 25.

"I'd rather nothing be said this year," she explained. "I have no plans for the holidays."

The Texas Mary Christmas (with no holiday significance) is the only known American of that name.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER

United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Dec. 9—First returns on local option elections under the new state liquor law sustained the contention of Sen. Clint C. Smith in his defense of a strict provision against an "open saloon."

Small's home county, Potter, and Sutton county, both voted for package sales of hard liquor. The Amarillo senator had predicted that much of the northern and western dry area of the state would sanction package sales as a deterrent to bootlegging, but would not stand for by-the-drink sales.

Austin, seat of state government, also voted this week for hard liquor sales.

The election, however, did not threaten aridity for state employes and residents of Austin. Two package stores have been in operation in a wet precinct of Travis county, just outside the city limits.

Records of relief activities in Texas will be preserved after the closing of state relief headquarters. To keep the records will cost $100,000. A building for the purpose is being erected in cooperation with the federal government. It will occupy a state owned site.

After all of the records have been audited to the satisfaction of the state and federal governments, it is expected they will be available for state office use.

Another bit of construction out of the ordinary now in progress at Austin is the new vault for the state treasury. The excavation for it provides a hole large enough for the cellar of an ordinary building. Much of it is being cut through rock.

From its size, the contractor apparently took at face value State Treasurer Charley Lockhart's bon mot when asked what the new vault is for.

"It's to hold the state deficit," replied Lockhart.

The state tax of ten cents a pound on butter substitutes made from imported oils isn't doing much to reduce the state deficit.

Since the law was passed, it has brought in only $8.54.

The tax is only on products made from imported oils. Apparently it has not been effective as a tariff, if it has as a tax. Production from Texas oils has increased.

Gerald Mann, former secretary of state and now Washington contact man for the Texas planning board, was called back to Texas on business at a lucky time for him. The trip enabled him to see Southern Methodist University play the brand of football that is sending its team to the Rose Bowl. He saw Bobby Wilson perform in the backfield in the same way Mann did a few years ago, when he became famous as the star of the Mustangs.

District Judge W. F. Robertson, 126th district court, Austin, has entered a "finding of fact" that the act of the 44th legislature to move the state board of pardons from Austin to Huntsville would have cost the state a "cost" of $100,000, if he had permitted it to take effect.

He enjoined the removal however, because the legislators failed to repeal a former law under which the board is domiciled at Austin.

Judge Robertson's investigation brought out some interesting figures on clemency. He found: That the pardon board is called upon to pass upon 3,000 cases a year; in four years, 11,000 convicts have been released, discharged or have escaped; in the same period of time 5,000 have received paroles, conditional pardon or furloughs. The secretary of state's files now hold records of 6,000 convicts.

Judge Robertson estimated that it would cost $60,000 to copy these records and make them available to the board if its offices were removed to Huntsville; $60,000 more to copy records of the Court of Criminal Appeals, and $15,000 to provide storage space for them at Huntsville.

Another finding was that during the last year the pardon board investigated 3,500 cases and made 1,512 reports to the governor; examined about 1,000 different records in the court of criminal appeals; that postage between Austin and Huntsville for the board work there would cost $4,000 a year; telephone and telegraph, $1,000 a year; and necessary traveling expense, $1,000 more.

Orville S. Carpenter, who will be executive director of the old age assistance commission, finds himself swamped with applications for jobs in the pension administration. Personal appeals have become so numerous that he hasn't time for his present duties as state auditor.

The pension act is not effective until Feb. 14, 1936, and until then, Carpenter says there will be no jobs available. Meantime applicants can obtain blank application forms by writing:

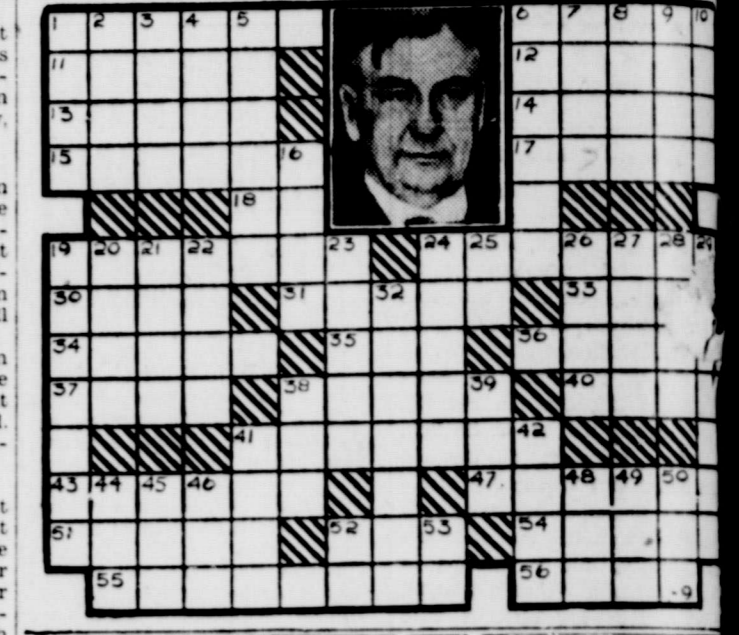

"A call is unnecessary and a personal visit at this time would be unprofitable," he said.

Mustangs on All-Southwestern Conference Eleven of United Press

By ROSS BEDELL
Press Staff Correspondent
AS, Dec. 9 — Six members of the Southern Methodist football team—eastern Rose representative—were selected to the United Press All-Southwestern first team.

On paper probably as an aggregation of stars as could be assembled in the west, represents the selected sports editors, coaches and Press sports writers.

Christian University, which placed Clara on the West Saturday, placed two men on string squad, while Rice conference title holder placed three places.

First and second teams follow:

Team	Pos.	Name	Team	Pos.	Name
Stewart	End	185, S.M.U.	End	180, TCU	Roach
Spain	Tackle	210, S.M.U.	Tackle	210, A&M	Lindsey
Bale	Guard	180, Rice	Guard	180, S.M.U.	Spence
Lester	Center	218, TCU	Center	180, S.M.U.	Johnson
Sney	Quarterback	185, S. M. U.	Quarterback	171, TCU	Stephenson
Carr	Fullback	211, S. M. U.	Fullback	175, T. C. U.	Wassell
Glyester	Halfback	195, Rice	Halfback	160, Baylor	Lawrence
Wagoner	Linebacker	185, TCU	Linebacker	178, Rice	Lawrence
Wilson	Defensive Back	147, S. M. U.	Defensive Back	185, TCU	Lawrence
McCauley	Linebacker	195, Rice	Linebacker	190, Texas	Lawrence
Shuford	Fullback	190, S.M.U.	Fullback	190, Texas	Lawrence

Darrell Lester at the center position. He stood out in every TCU game and proved as immobile as a stone wall on defense. He has been an outstanding player for two years, being selected on the 1934 all-American team.

Guards
At the guard positions, Wetzel of SMU and Bale of Rice were selected. Wetzel was chosen almost unanimously, but Bale barely nosed out Kellow of T. C. U.

Wilson and Abright were selected unanimously. Both were selected by every coach and every sports writer.

McCauley was pushed all the way by his mate Bill Wallace, John nosing out in the end by a margin of only a few votes. He was selected for his ability as a blocker and an outstanding defensive back.

Even though he didn't play the entire season, Harry Shuford, Mustang fullback injured in California in the game played against UCLA, was chosen for the fullback post. While he did play, Shuford was the hardest driving and blocking back the conference has seen in some time. He probably will go a long way in helping his fellow Mustangs against Stanford in the Tournament of Roses game New Year's Day.

INDIA SEEKS MAIL COURSES FROM TEXAS

AUSTIN, Dec. 9—That the services of the extension division of the university of Texas are known throughout the civilized world is indicated by an air mail letter received by Dean T. H. Shelby of that division from K. S. R. Acharya, principal of the City College of Madras, India. The letter follows:

"Sir—
A few of our students wish to join the correspondence section in a few of the subjects of your University to qualify for a degree.
I would be much obliged if you could give me all the necessary information, rules and regulations and application forms with regard to the above.
Kindly also inform us whether you could arrange to have these candidates examined in convenient centres in India.
Thanking you in anticipation."

Mail Box For Santa Claus

Cisco, Texas
Dec. 6, 1935

Dear Santa Claus:
I am a little girl nine years old. I have been a fairly good girl this year. I want you to bring me some riding pants and a black board and chalk and anything else you think I need. Please don't forget the poor and wish them a happy Christmas.
Signed with love,
Billie Jean Cleere

300 Cookies Served At Demonstration

More than 300 home made holiday cookies were served to Cisco housewives Saturday in Skiles Grocery by Miss Albertine Berry, cooking and home economics expert who conducted a consultation-demonstration on Christmas menu planning, according to A. I. Skiles, manager of the store. Miss Berry, well known for her cooking and home economics broadcasts over station WFAA, is director of the home economics department for the Community Natural Gas company.

Next Saturday, Miss Berry will return to Cisco for another holiday food demonstration in Norvell-Miller's Grocery store. She will again feature recipes and suggestions for preparing attractive and tasty holiday meals and foods for Christmas parties.

The cookies served to housewives who shopped at Skiles Saturday were prepared in various sizes and shapes, including stars, Christmas trees and other appropriate holiday designs.

help the carrier boy and enable him to draw a larger salary. We pay all our delivery boys a weekly salary and the larger number of papers they deliver the larger salary they get.
Fourth, when you subscribe for one of these papers you help your merchants to give you better prices for it is a well known fact that the larger volume a merchant can sell the lower his prices can be. The more you save the more you can spend for life's necessities and pleasures.
Fifth, when you subscribe for one of these papers you help the loyal force of more than 30 people working on these papers to give you a better newspaper and enable the publishers to do better and more faithful work in making the Cisco territory a better place in which to live.

Every Minute Counts
So short is the time and so near is the end of this subscription campaign that even every mill to new counts with each candidate.

The candidates turning in the largest number of subscription and having the largest number of credits are the candidates who will drive away those beautiful new cars and be awarded the other valuable premiums and each candidate is striving to get every subscription they can as so close together are some of the candidates that even a years subscription may decide the winner.

Only 14 Days Left
Only 14 working days remain in which you can give one of these candidates your subscriptions. Only fourteen days left in which you have the opportunity to help yourself; to help your favorite candidate; to help the carrier boys; to help the merchants of your community and each member of the Cisco Daily News and American Roundup's big family.
