MRS. LOIS SMITH WINS GRAND AWARD

About Our Friends

By STEVE A. LONG

Met Karl Armstrong, formerly of Tulsa, Okla., but now of 1010 West 22nd Street, Cisco. Brother of Armstrong... been ill recently but recovering strength now... glad to welcome these people to Cisco... If he and his family are as aggressively participating in all Cisco activities as W. J. and his family, we are indeed fortunate in acquiring this family....

Joe Clements, tireless street superintendent, announces that all the benches and tables at Lake Cisco park have been stored for the winter... Before being replaced in the park next spring they will be repaired and re-painted for picnic service as before... Lake Cisco picnic facilities attract people from many miles around and the way this equipment has been looked after has played its part in the attraction....

We thought they had all bought Christmas gifts Saturday, but Monday and Tuesday's business make it appear that folks had only started... Prices have been unusually reasonable in Cisco during the holidays... Merchants are to be congratulated on the fine way in which they have treated shoppers... Never have we seen a Christmas season when you could buy so much of real value for so little money....

Met Mr. Andy Rhodes, of Eastland, a very genial gentleman... driving a new Lincoln... Zephyr

FAIR MARKET FOR PEANUTS IS DUE SOON

A "fair price" for peanuts produced in this area within a few days was seen here yesterday by W. B. Starr, chairman of the marketing program committee of the Southwestern Peanut Growers association. In a letter to the peanut producers of Texas and Oklahoma, Starr pointed out that members of the marketing program committee have been encouraged over the prospect of an active January market with a "fair price" of $65 a ton of 97 and 98 cents a bushel. The growers are waiting only for the signing of contracts between the millers and the department of agriculture, Starr pointed out, and several bids already have been submitted. Following is the text of Starr's letter:

"Members of your marketing program committee have been very active during the last 30 days, endeavoring to secure our peanut growers a 'fair price' for their peanut crop. We are greatly encouraged over the prospect of an active January market. An official representing the peanut section of the U. S. department of agriculture has been in the southwest during the last week, contracting shellers, oil crushers, county agents, and grower representatives. Several oil crushers have submitted bids, covering some 5,000 to 10,000 tons of peanuts, same to be delivered from the regular channels of trade into oil and peanut meal. A 'fair price' of $65 per ton (97 and 98 cents per bushel) will be paid for peanuts delivered at the oil mills on a grade of 70 per cent sound nuts, with 93 cents per ton differential from each variation of one point up or down from 70 per cent. At the urgent request of Southwestern growers the department of agriculture has increased the bonus paid on mills for peanuts diverted to oil, while no contracts have been signed at the time this is written, we are assured that such action is the matter of a few days only."

War Threat Mars Christmas Peace

EUROPE TENSE IN KNOWLEDGE OF NEW CRISIS

PARIS, Dec. 24—(U.P.)—Rumblings of war—more menacing than at any time since 1914—gave an overtone of gloom tonight to Europe's Christmas eve. Residents of this part of the world divided attention between traditional observance in churches and homes and chancelleries which were able to loose for only a few hours. Knowledge that events in the near future will reveal whether Italy's attempt to conquer Ethiopia, one of the oldest Christian empires, will be isolated or will spread to the Mediterranean, caused universal tension.

BRITAIN MAY MOVE PORT OF FLEET LONDON, Dec. 24—(U.P.)—Great Britain, confident of its strength, is contemplating the possibility of withdrawing part of its fleet from the Mediterranean tonight. Consideration of this move was made possible by an agreement between the French and British army and navy general staffs and promises of cooperation in event of an attack by Italy from Egypt, Greece, Jugoslavia, Rumania, Spain, and Turkey.

Such withdrawal now would be a profession of strength and confidence, not a confession of weakness. At the same time it was calculated to be welcomed in Italy as a friendly gesture, relieving tension caused by the appointment of Anthony Eden as foreign secretary. It would also, some of the alarm felt in Italy at the British request for promises of aid from the Mediterranean powers. War talk natural continues. It is frank but the prevailing opinion is that a war with Italy will be avoided.

Redheads Wanted To Run Drink Stands

DALLAS, Dec. 21—Wanted: one hundred and fifty redheaded girls and the same number of blondes to operate 30 cold drink concessions stands at the Texas Central Centennial Exposition. The Turf Catering Company of Texas, Inc., signed a contract Monday with Centennial officials to operate fifteen Orange Crush and citrus drink stands at the exposition erecting the stands at an approximate cost $1,500 each. Total expenditure is expected to run near $40,000. All girls operating the stands during the Centennial will be redheaded—no blondes or brunettes need apply. At the same time it was announced the Turf company has been authorized to operate fifteen more stands for sale of root beer, this concession held by the Southwest Drug company. Blondes only will do the drink mixing.

Math Professor Kills Colleague In New Mexico, Then Turns Gun on Self

LAS CRUCES, N. M., Dec. 24—(U.P.)—W. A. Stone, associate professor of mathematics at New Mexico State College here, today shot and killed Professor F. E. Oakes, his colleague at the college, and then committed suicide. Oakes' home not far from the college, was the scene of the slaying. Stone, apparently crazed by his belief that Oakes had been "telling lies" about him, drove to the Oakes home and shot his fellow teacher. There were no witnesses. Then Stone drove a mile from the Oakes home and shot himself. A coroner's jury was informed that a letter was mailed by Stone to Dr. G. N. Storman, head of the college, at an early hour today. The letter informed Dr. Storman of Stone's intention of killing Oakes and himself and said: "Oakes has told his last lie." Oakes was head of the feed and fertilizer division of the extension department of the college. Both Christmas is over, but the fun lingers on. Cecile is fascinated by discovering that her new doll carriage will roll along on its rubber tires if given a good shove. Look at those little hands, which have just released the carriage handle—and at the contents of the carriage, a set of doll quintuplets, no less.

PEACE PLEA BY ROOSEVELT LEADS NATION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—(U.P.)—In the shadow of snow flecked bronze statues of daring men whose business it was to kill at war, President Roosevelt tonight led the nation in observance of Christmas with an earnest plea for peace on earth and good will to men. A gay holiday crowd massed in historic Lafayette Square facing the White House heard the solemn chief executive remind them of the "anxieties of the common day" and of the young children "who know nothing about the cares of life." "I greet you," Mr. Roosevelt said, "with the greeting of the angels on that first Christmas at Bethlehem, which, resounding through the centuries, still rings out with its eternal message, 'Glory to God in the highest and on the earth peace and goodwill to men.'"

Ethiopian, Italian Worship Together

BETHLEHEM, Dec. 24—(U.P.)—Ethiopian priests and Italian prelates knelt side by side with the world's pilgrims within the Church of the Nativity tonight, murmuring their adoration of the Christ child who was born in a Bethlehem manger.

Merry Christmas

The day of peace, Christmas originated more than 19 centuries ago in a period of strife, of petty bickering and ambitions which put gains in power and wealth above personal freedom and the rights of nations. In that time of strife, the first Christmas stands out as a brilliant, peaceful light in a great darkness. Today, Christmas 1935, there is another period of strife

LINDBERGH TO GET NO GUARD FROM BRITAIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 24—(U.P.)—Re-shipment against Governor Harold Hoffman of New Jersey for reopening the Hauptmann case was voted tonight by individuals and newspapers who said he was chiefly to blame for the flight of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh to England. Hoffman, who made a secret visit to Bruno Hauptmann in the Trenton state prison death house and started a wave of publicity and conjecture, turned away all questioners with a terse "no comment." Hauptmann was informed by his wife today that the Lindberghs had taken their second son, Jon, to England because they feared he too might be kidnapped. Hauptmann, sentenced to die in the week of Jan. 13, was quoted as saying: "Why has Lindbergh left? Are they afraid to face a few crank letters? Are they afraid to stay and face it? What is the matter with them?" Other persons joined Hauptmann in asking why the Lindberghs did not stay and face it.

CHRISTMAS IN CISCO GAY AS PAYROLLS UP

It's a very merry Christmas folk are wishing one another today. It's a gay Christmas in Cisco, with Christmas giving and Christmas buying playing a big part in making it gay. Last year the nation was cheered over the fact that the people were able to buy more at Christmastime. This year there has been a marked increase in buying both locally and over the entire country. The Cisco merchants have reported that their retail sales have jumped considerably over last year's with no particular branch of business cornering all the trade. The general wave of buying has included the clothing, department, grocery, toy, and drug stores. Yesterday people—happy people—were trudging up and down the streets doing their last minute shopping. There was no grim look upon their faces that would indicate they probably were trying to stretch their last few cents as far as they would go. The Christmas buying is said by observers to have shown a greater increase in Cisco than in some of the other cities of this area. Employment increases, with private industry absorbing some formerly on relief rolls and many more at work on WPA projects, have been responsible for the greater buying ability this year.

TRADITION IN PERIL

LONDON—Stoke Gabriel church, near Paignton, Devon, has had a Narracott as sexton for nearly 500 years. Now the death of James Narracott has ended the family tradition unless his 16-year-old son is appointed to carry on.

1865 GRADUATE LIVING

IOWA CITY, Ia.—The oldest living University of Iowa graduate is Mrs. Kersey Raymond Holmes, who received her degree in 1865. Alumni records show that Mrs. Mary Howe of Carpentaria, Cal., and W. H. Baldwin, Chicago, run the Iowa woman a close second. Each was graduated in 1866.

DOG INSURED

LONDON—A little white Pekingese dog—said to be the only pure white "Peke" in England—has been entered in Lloyd's insurance books as being covered against kidnapping while traveling to and in the United States. Mrs. Sammie Lewis, dancing partner of an American stage artist, is the holder of the policy.

Pope Sad at War Threats to World

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 24—(U.P.)—Pope Pius, responding to Christmas greetings of the College of Cardinals, spoke sadly today of the "threat of new wars." He begged God to end them. He deplored also persecution of Roman Catholics in Mexico and Germany. Receiving 30 cardinals who went to his apartments to extend Christmas greetings, he said in part: "It is too bad that we have reached these festivities with a threat of new wars. May God dispense such visions. 'Christmas arrives with dark clouds hovering above us and with signs of human blood on the road, which is difficult and menacing. One might say that this road, as mountaineers speak, is 'filled with treacherous passes.'"

TREATMENT IN CAMPAIGN FAIR SAY WORKERS

The candidates of the Daily News and American Opportunity club subscription campaign have testified to the courtesy and fair treatment by the club and the papers in the following statement, the original of which may be seen at the Cisco Daily News and American and Roundup offices: "We, the undersigned candidates in the Cisco Daily News and American and Roundup subscription campaign, desire to testify that we have received from these newspapers and the management of the Opportunity club every courtesy and consideration and assistance that we could expect. We believe the campaign has been conducted honestly and fairly and that we have been given credit for every subscription and the credits due for securing such subscriptions. We are satisfied that each and every candidate working in this subscription campaign has conducted her efforts to secure subscriptions fairly and aboveboard and we are well satisfied that no candidate has taken or attempted to take any undue or unfair advantage of her co-workers and we are unanimous in our opinion that the management has accepted no money from anyone or from any source unless a subscription has been secured to warrant the acceptance of such money. SIGN MARKS GRAVE

GRINNELL, Ia.—A highway sign warning motorists to "think" marks the roadside grave of Lyle Sullens, former Grinnell high athlete, who was killed in an auto-motorcycle crash. Highway officials and workers have not molested the grave.

Zazu Pitts Summoned to Tell Grand Jury of Thelma Todd's Mystery Man

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 24—(U.P.)—Zazu Pitts, film comedienne, was subpoenaed by the county grand jury today as a result of what was described as a "hot tip" on the possible identity of a San Francisco man with whom Thelma Todd reportedly said she was having a "marvelous romance" a few hours before her death. Zazu, who frolicked with Thelma in half a dozen movies, was ordered to appear and to say what she knew about a "tea party" at a fashionable Wilshire boulevard restaurant Saturday afternoon, a few hours before Miss Todd's death. Miss Todd apparently attended the tea party at which four persons were present. Two were Miss Pitts and her husband, J. L. Woodall. Investigators believed the fourth was the mysterious "gentleman from San Francisco." Woodall reportedly told authorities he thought the last time Pitts and Miss Todd were together was on Wednesday preceding her death. Investigators said they had definite information on Saturday afternoon the party took place and asked Woodall also to appear before the grand jury.

FORD COUPE IS PRESENTED TO MRS. JONES

Mrs. Lois Richardson Smith, Cisco, district one, was awarded the 1935 Chevrolet sedan, grand prize for both districts in the Opportunity club subscription campaign, at the Cisco Daily News and American and Roundup Monday night. Mrs. Pauline Jones, Moran, district two, was awarded the 1935 Ford V-8 coupe, second grand prize. Mrs. O. C. Lomax, Cisco, district one, was awarded the $164.50 RCA-Victor 11-tube radio. Mrs. C. F. McMillan, Putnam, district two, was awarded the $141.50 nine-piece bedroom suite. Mrs. E. M. Oney and Mrs. Charles Yates were each awarded an $80 scholarship in Randolph college. Mrs. Virgie Comer, Cisco, district one, was awarded the $100 diamond ring. Mrs. Guy Baggett, Gunsite, district two, was awarded the $60 wrist watch. Mrs. Etta Hart, who had, under the rules governing the subscription campaign, failed to qualify, was generously rewarded by the newspapers with an annual pass to the R and R Palace theater for 365 days, a Christmas present as well as a reward for the work she did. Crowd Jams Office There were tears of joy and heart-breaks of happiness and enthusiastic applause on the part of the candidates and their friends as the names of the winners were announced and the awards made. The large offices of the Cisco Daily News, as well as the sidewalks in front of the offices, were jammed by the many friends who were almost as anxious over the outcome of the campaign as were the candidates. J. E. Spencer, secretary of the Cisco Chamber of Commerce, H. R. Garrett of Randolph college, and Dallas V. Ales, manager of the Laguna hotel, judges selected to make the official count, took painstaking care to count and check each candidate's credits before the awards were made. After the judges announced that they had finished their count, W. H. LaRoque, manager of the two newspapers, said: "Clean Campaign I feel confident that each of you candidates and your friends have full confidence in the men who have been selected as judges."

SNOW COVERS MUCH OF U. S. FOR HOLIDAY

CHICAGO, Dec. 24—(U.P.)—The color scheme for the United States this Christmas will be white edged in green, weather forecasters predicted today. From New England west to the Rockies in the northern portion of the country there will be enough snow on the ground for sleds and snowballs. On the west coast, the gulf coast, and the Florida coast, it will be a "green Christmas" with the mid-southern states supplying a happy medium between green and white. A cold wave from the northwest moved into the midwest, driving temperatures to the zero mark. The great mass of cold air will roll eastward on Christmas day, sending temperatures generally lower. In Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas, there was no prospect of snow, the weather man said.

News and American Combined Thursday

The Cisco Daily News and the American and Roundup will be combined tomorrow, giving the readers a paper as usual and allowing the staff a little more of the Christmas holiday than would otherwise be possible. The combined News and American will give readers the late news, local, state, and national, and will also give the staff a longer rest after the heavy Christmas work Tuesday night.

Death Rides the Highway Today

Throughout the nation today many persons likely will meet death violently on the day which should mean more of peace and good will than any other during the entire year.

All over the nation merry, happy folk will be traveling, hurrying to celebrate Christmas. Many of them likely will never live to celebrate the day. Many others may remain invalids the rest of their lives, the result of holiday accidents.

Last weekend more than 50 persons were the victims of the early holiday traffic mishaps, and that was before Christmas.

The day can mean much to everyone who is able to spend it with relatives and friends. It can mean much to everyone who is still sound of mind and body. But for the unfortunate ones who are the victims of the tragedy of the slippery curve and the treacherous brakes, of gin and the heavy foot, of the faulty steering wheel, the day and all its joys can be only mockery.

Throughout the United States in recent months there has been a vigorous campaign waged to lessen the number of highway accidents. Christmas, when there usually are more than the normal number of tragedies, seems a good time to stop and ponder a bit before taking the chances that may mean the loss of an eye, a mashed in head, or broken ribs that grind into the delicate mechanism of the human body. Today is the day to start your own safety campaign.

The Lindberghs Leave

The Lindberghs are gone, driven away to foreign soil to build the home that never could have been secure in America.

Always in this country there was the lurking fear that the same fate would befall little Jon Lindbergh that overtook his elder brother, Charles Augustus, Jr. Always there were the cranks and the mentally deranged who derived an insane pleasure from the torture they brought to the heart of the parents by their threatening notes aimed at the child.

In a prison cell, awaiting death in the electric chair sits Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted of murder in the kidnaping of the first Lindbergh baby. As he waits friends rally to his aid and more and more threats go out toward the Lindberghs. To wait means death to the German carpenter. Perhaps it would have meant death also for all the Lindberghs.

Perhaps, however, the Lindberghs might have been spared the tortures of abduction or death at the hands of enemies of any public figure. But Baby Lindbergh never could have grown normally to manhood. His play days would have been shadowed by guards constantly watching over him to save him from the fate of little Charles. He would have been in the national spotlight all his life and would not have had that quality for which Americans have

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON — Senator William E. Borah of Idaho is a busy man.

Few get in to see him except those with more or less mysterious missions bearing on Republican political problems.

One of these visitors is former Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa. He and Borah are working on a substitute farm program, something which may be offered whether or not the supreme court upholds AAA.

Conservative Republicans and administrationists who have heard about it suggest the Borah-Brookhart plan may prove to be a bit on the wild side.

ADDRESSING the mayors in conference here, Harry Hopkins said, "I feel somewhat like the landlord in the Bronx, whose tenants decided to picket the place. You know since relief has been going on everybody knows how to picket. And they have picketed you fellows. I imagine. And they carry these big banners and cards."

"Most of these tenants who were on relief were picketing this Bronx landlord, demanding everything under the sun. Finally he caved in and got them all together and said:

"All right, I will reduce the rent 15 per cent. I will put running water in every flat. I will move the toilets from the backyard and put a bathroom on each floor. But how the hell can I free Tom Mooney?"

ACTING under orders from on high, a certain federal office is concocting a far-reaching plan for reorganization of the federal government. Most of the very few who know about it understand

Roosevelt will spring the plan of the next Congress as one of his major economy gestures in advance of the presidential campaign.

Old-timers have seen so many reorganization plans killed off in the last dozen years that they wouldn't advise you to take this too seriously until you actually observe tangible developments.

Nevertheless, there's a strong feeling within the administration that the emergency agencies must soon be cut down and merged with the regular departments if they're not to become permanent. The reorganization planners of 1935 are taking the precaution of consulting key members of Congress, with the hope that the plan won't be promptly pulled to pieces when— if ever—it is sent to Capitol Hill.

The plan hasn't been submitted to top men in the administration for approval and dissection yet, but in its sketchy outline it would, among other things:

1.—Change the Interior Department into a Department of Federal Works, merging under it all public works and construction activities, including the housing activities of some 37 separate agencies, the Procurement division of the Treasury, and work-relief activities.

2.—Transfer public lands and national parks and definitely merge AAA into the Department of Agriculture.

3.—Build the Labor Department into a Department of Labor and Welfare which would include the public health service, Office of Education, and consumer and similar agencies.

There's a lot more to it which hasn't leaked out from the planners yet. One thing that's being taken into account, however, is that this administration looks forward to a big future in housing.

fought and died—freedom and equality with other American boys and girls.

The Lindberghs are gone, perhaps never to return to America. This nation will miss them, for the Flying Colonel is one of the really great men of his time. But they are gone because they value a quiet, peaceful life more than they do all the notoriety and insecure existence which would have been theirs in the United States.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Against the wishes of her grandmother, aristocratic MISS WILLIARD CAMERON, DANA WESTBROOK marries a struggling young physician, DR. SCOTT STANLEY before her marriage, she had broken with wealthy RONALD STODOL. Dana's half-sister NANCY is in love with Ronald but hides it behind an antagonistic attitude.

Both Mrs. Cameron and PAULA LIGHT, who has loved Scott for years, hope the marriage will go on the rocks.

Paula, patient of Scott's, is always calling him and managing to see him at parties. Dana has become aware of Paula's infatuation. Scott, deeply in love with his wife, is uncomfortable over the situation.

The stormy night the crisis in Dana's domestic drama comes. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXI

DANA stood at the window looking out at the rain-washed street. Night was descending rapidly.

"When I was a child," she said, "we used to say on nights like this, 'A night for witches and dark deeds.'"

"It probably is a night for dark deeds," Scott told her, smiling, "even with the witches and goblins missing."

"Nothing can scare me now with your handsome self to protect me," Dana said. And in the next breath, "We have broiled steak and cauliflower with cheese—the way you like it. And if you don't say the biscuits are the best you ever ate in your life, I'll never forgive you. There's a prune pudding, too."

When dinner was over Dana got out her sewing basket and sat, a picture of housewifely devotion, not far from Scott, reading one of his "overlapping" medical journals.

At 10:30 Scott yawned it was bedtime, and Dana agreed. For a while after Scott was asleep she remained awake. In the darkness the lightning and Dana had a childlike fear of storms. Finally her long lashes swept her cheeks and she dropped into a sound slumber.

It couldn't have been long before the telephone jangled. Almost instantly, it seemed, Dana was answering the summons, stumbling sleepily from bed.

A woman's voice, a voice with a foreign inflection, asked: "Is Dr. Stanley in?"

"Yes," Dana replied. She called, "It's for you, Scott," and got back into bed.

Then Scott's voice, disturbed, uncertain, was saying hesitantly, "Well, of course, if it is necessary. After a moment he added, "All right. Tell her I'll be right over."

DANA waited. Scott was standing in the hall as though he was considering something, trying to make up his mind.

"Dana," Scott said suddenly, "I've got to go out."

"In all this storm?"

"Yes. Try not to worry. I'll be back as soon as I can."

He was dressing quickly. Still he had volunteered no further information about the call. "If he'd only say something," Dana thought miserably. "I can't bear for Scott to be secretive."

A minute more and he had gone.

Dana told herself, "I'm letting my imagination run away with me. I'm developing into a horrid, suspicious wife. Not the kind of wife for a doctor to have. Every physician in the world goes out in all kinds of weather, at all hours, to see patients. Perhaps it never occurred to Scott that I'd be interested."

But the unhappiness remained. There had been something just faintly familiar in the voice over the telephone. Some foreign quality. Surely, Dana had heard that voice before. Where?

Suddenly the answer came. It was Charlotte—Paula's housekeeper.

Dana went to the telephone and dialed Paula's number with fingers that shook slightly. A woman's voice, the same woman's voice, answered.

Dana, controlling her voice with an effort, asked, "Are you expecting Dr. Stanley?"

There was a slight pause, as though the person at the other end of the connection was hesitating. Then came the reply, "Yes."

Dana said, in a low tone, "I wanted to tell you he's on his way."

She hung up the receiver, but her face down in her hands. Sneaking, spying on Scott. Yes, of course. But, greater than the humiliation and loss of self-respect, was the torturing question, "What power has Paula over Scott that she can drag him from his bed on a night like this?"

Dana was shivering. She pulled the cover closer around her, but the shaking continued. Her face was burning and her hands and feet felt like ice.

CHARLOTTE had told Scott: "Miss Paula's going crazy with pain. She has taken that prescription you gave her, but it hasn't helped. You must come. She said you would."

When Scott hesitated, Charlotte had continued, "It's awful the way she's suffering. I think you should see her, Doctor."

Yes, Scott thought, he should see Paula in one of these seizures. He'd know better, then, what was causing them. As it was he had his suspicions, but he was only guessing.

He stood for a moment, trying to decide what to tell Dana. Months before he wouldn't have hesitated to tell her where he was going, but that scene the night he had played bridge at Paula's stayed in his memory.

If he told Dana where he was going, she would worry about it. It would be best to wait until he came back and then make a clean breast of the whole story. Dana could be trusted to keep Paula's secret, if it developed that Paula really was taking a narcotic.

He found he had accepted the theory that Paula was doing that hellish thing. If this was true he'd have to persuade her to go away some where and fight the furies intelligently in some sanatorium.

Charlotte met him at the door of the apartment and then went out of the room. Miss Paula, she said, was feeling a little better.

Paula came into the room almost immediately.

She sat down in a chair across from Scott. Her melancholy eyes, lighted by some strange fire, were fixed on him.

Any suspicions Scott might have had that Paula had staged illness to bring him here, were gone. Paula's face was entirely without color. New lines, from suffering, were etched sharply about her mouth and eyes.

SCOTT said in a low voice, his eyes on the queer tricks of light in the amber pools that were Paula's eyes: "Paula, I know. It's ghastly, the trap you've gotten yourself into. Who ever started you on this road should be hung, but that doesn't help you any. You've a fight on your hands, but you'll get through it. You'll have to go away at once and be treated intelligently."

Paula said in a mechanical voice, forming the words as though she were talking in a dream, "By helping me, Scott, you mean getting rid of—" She didn't finish the sentence, continuing to stare at him vacantly.

"Yes, that's what I meant," Scott replied.

"You didn't mean anything else, Scott? Yet you know how I feel toward you—" Her voice broke and she shuddered violently. Then she went on, "That's been a fight, too, Scott. It's been torture, feeling your indifference, knowing you had nothing in your heart for me. Seeing you slip away—utterly."

"Paula, you mustn't let yourself go like this! You're ill. All this will pass when you are well again."

Her eyes concentrated on him queerly. He wanted to get away, yet, in decency, he couldn't pull out at this moment.

Paula was apparently trying to get herself together. She laughed a little, but it was a laugh that sounded harsh in the silent room. "I know, you are right, Scott. I must go away—far away. Where do you think I should go?"

Scott breathed easier. He said, "As far as treatment goes, you could get the same help here, but it would be almost impossible to keep your friends from finding out."

"No," Paula's voice was almost a whisper. "I want to go a long way off."

Scott said, "I'll let you know tomorrow. I want to think about it and decide on the best place for you."

Paula rose and Scott got to his feet also.

Paula said, "Wait a moment, Scott. Let me fix you a highball. We'll drink to victory—my victory!"

Without waiting for a reply, she walked swiftly toward the dining room. In a moment she returned with a tray on which two small glasses sparkled invitingly.

Parking Space At Centennial Planned

DALLAS, Dec. 24—Parking space for more than 7,000 automobiles will be available in the vicinity of centennial park without the proposed space in the infield of the race track W. A. Webb, manager, has announced.

One concern is planning to establish a parking lot on the space near the exposition, that for many years has been used as a site for circuses. Motorists could bring their automobiles to the gates of the exposition where they would be received by attendants of the parking lot. A person wanting his car after attending the exposition would go to a stand at the exposition gate, present his parking ticket and attendants at the parking lot would be notified by telephone and the car would be delivered at the gate. A charge of 25 cents is contemplated.

The City council has rebelled at the suggestion that it furnish $50,000 as part of the expense necessary in transforming the infield of the race track into parking space. Unless means are found whereby the infield can be so used; all cars will have to be parked outside the grounds.

THE PARADE THAT NEVER ENDS

Day after day they pass before you in review—these advertised products which fill the pages of this paper. And, as they pass you, single out one here . . . compare it with this . . . mark that one for future reference . . . here's something you've been waiting for . . . there's something to try for breakfast tomorrow . . .

Think of the wealth of information before you every day! What's new in cereals? What's the mode in printed dress goods? What's the latest wrinkle in kitchen appliances? The answers to these and hundreds of other questions are at your finger-tips—just for turning the pages.

How much it means to be able to make up your mind before you start out to buy! How many steps and minutes you're saved. How well you're able to budget your expenditures—apportion your money before you begin . . .

You no longer need to parade from shop to shop—counter to counter—looking . . . looking . . . Today you read the advertisements and let the things you want and need march before your eyes for comparison and selection.

Read the advertisements daily. Keep in step with the progressive parade of merchants on the printed page. It pays!

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Dec. 24.—Texas has a big program of state government activity in store for 1936. Many new steps will be taken. Numerous old functions will go ahead on a larger scale.

The state still is crawling on all fours in preparation for one of its "first steps." When it will be able to put a sure foot forward on old age pensions is uncertain. After State Auditor Orville Carpenter returns from Washington, D. C., New York and California, he expects to be able to give Governor Alford and legislators some estimate of what money will be needed for old age assistance and how to set up an effective organization without spending more than the five per cent permitted for administration.

Another really new step for the state will be liquor administration under repeal of statewide prohibition. Charles Miller, liquor administrator, has begun an emergency administration as 1935 draws to a close, but much of the way still uncharted. Legal advice must be asked on many points.

The pension and liquor administrations are related by a provision that three-fourths of the state's income from liquor administration shall be used in old age assistance. State Tax Commissioner R. B. Anderson is preparing a report on what 1936's tax program must be to carry the rest of the pension load and the state deficit.

The state highway department will have a $50,000,000 road and bridge building program during the first part of the new year. This is considerably more than the average and double the program for some years.

WPA and PWA make some of the $50,000,000 program possible and the regular federal aid to road work and emergency relief funds also help.

The state labor department will carry on a re-employment service in cooperation with the federal government. The work was started this year on a limited scale and is to be enlarged greatly in 1936.

Under a program approved by the state planning board and to be directed by the bureau of economic geology of the University of Texas, there will be a federal paid survey of the state's natural resources. A water survey already is in progress.

Numerous school districts, municipalities and counties will have 1936 projects aided by federal loans and outright grants.

The Texas Centennial celebration will have a share of state administration as well as state aid. Memorials and markers, a state building at the central exposition and other phases of the celebration will call for activity of state boards and commissions.

State government costs will be higher than usual—probably not more than in some years past. All of the state's $20,000,000 "bread bonds" will be exhausted in the first quarter of the year, and relief expense of recent years necessarily will end.

In 1934, the total of state government cost is estimated to have been approximately $115,000,000. Figures for 1935 have not been compiled. Costs have increased about 200 per cent since the World war but many new government activities have been started and there are more people to govern.

Christmas holidays for state department workers will start at noon on Saturday, Dec. 21. Some of the departments will require their staffs to return on Monday, Dec. 30, work Tuesday, and then have New Year's day off.

Some lucky ones have arranged to "save up" enough vacation time to use it on the two work days intervening between the Christmas holiday and New Year's. They will be able to make extended trips.

It's too far to the Rose Bowl in Pasadena for mere employees. Some officials will go. More expect to go to New Orleans and cheer for T. C. U. in the Sugar Bowl.

Fathers generally approve Governor James V. Alford's refusal to separate William Nottley, 8, from his "partner" daddy, who is charged with kidnaping his son in Michigan. Fan mail has poured into the governor's office since the decision which Mother Nottley said is proof Alford is "no Solomon." Fathers took most interest. Of the first 20 letters, three were from mothers.

All were not commendatory. Texas citizens have no scruples about carrying their kicks direct to the head of the government. Residents of other states also wrote. Letters came from Michigan, Washington, California, Oklahoma and Tennessee.

State Safety Commission Chairman Albert Sidney Johnson was telling a house of representatives committee about what he termed the "water haul" in an attempted gambling raid.

"Wasn't there a water haul made up at Sherman one time?" asked a committeeman. He referred to the riot in which the courthouse was burned. Johnson commanded a national guard detachment sent there.

"Yes," Johnson replied, "but we had orders not to shoot. I have a cracked jaw as a memento."

OLD WORLD OBSERVES CHRISTMAS IN STRANGE WAY BUT GIFTS SAME

LONDON, Dec. 24—Christmas customs, strange to Americans, mark the festive season in foreign lands, but gifts to children are universal although they may not always be given on Dec. 24 and 25.

In many European countries it is not Santa Claus who brings presents and often it is not on Christmas that gifts are distributed. In Spain, for instance the Three Wise Men are the legendary bearers of presents and they come on Jan. 5. Santa Claus time in Austria is the eve of Dec. 24. In England, usually pictured as the ideal Christmas land, celebrates in the same manner as does America. Everyone, it seems, turns to caroling and bands of singers and church choirs go about every town. Christmas trees are popular although they were introduced less than a hundred years ago. According to one story of their first use Prince Albert wanted to celebrate Christmas as he had in his German home, so that he had a fir tree brought for the day.

Scots Mark New Year Santa Claus comes to Scotland the same night that he does in the United States, but the real celebration of the holiday season is New Year's Eve. The old custom of "first footing" still is carried out that night for it is the time of celebrating and visiting. There it is regarded very lucky to have a dark-haired person be first to set foot in one's home after midnight. New Year's Eve, but no matter what color the hair, the visitor always bears a gift. Hosts, in turn, offer food and drink, a specially rich pastry, "black bun," being the most popular.

In Sweden, children wrap presents in plain white paper and write a funny rhyme on the cover of each. This rhyme is supposed to describe the contents, without giving away what the present is. Gifts are opened Christmas Eve, as Christmas itself is a religious holiday with long sleigh rides to church. If the road leads through forests, the drivers carry lighted torches, throwing them into a heap outside the church door to make a great bonfire.

Gnomes Live in Legend The "Julenisse" or "Christmas gnome" brings the Christmas presents to Norwegian children. According to an old belief, gnomes live underground throughout the country, and everyone must be kind to them or they will bring misfortune. In Denmark, after church service on Christmas Eve, everyone returns home for a banquet, at which a traditional dish, rye porridge, is served. In it the mother of the family always drops an almond, and the one who finds it in his portion receives a special advance gift.

The tradition in Germany is for every city to have a community Christmas tree, and everyone receives Christmas presents from a multitude of sources. Even traffic policemen are remembered in Berlin, drivers heaping up packages at their stands. In Holland, too, where he is supposed to be a bishop from Spain, Santa Claus comes earlier than he does in America. He calls early in December.

Celebrations of Christmas itself in Spain are religious and start early in December, when every family and every church build scenes representing the Nativity. The more elaborate ones have small mountains, streams, fountains, mirrors to represent lakes, clay figures of shepherds, sheep, horses and other animals. There is a great rivalry among families, churches and convents for the best ones. Nativity Scenes Created Representations of the Nativity scene also are popular in Italy, where churches sometimes work a year to create the finest one. Often chapels within a church vie with one another in making them. In France Christmas is a day of gifts only for the children. On the night before the visit of the French Santa, "Pere Noel," children put their shoes near the fireplace, to find them filled with presents the next morning. In homes Christmas trees are rare, but in the Elysee Palace official home of the French president, one is set up for orphans and poor children, and at each

CROW INDIANS HAPPY TO SEE BISON RETURN

CROW INDIAN RESERVATION, Hardin, Mont., Dec. 24 — A hundred bison are enjoying a new domain in the wilds of the Crow Indian reservation here after a 250-mile trip in seven trucks from Yellowstone National Park. To Chief Robert Yellowtail, full-blooded Crow Indian and superintendent of the Crow reservation, goes credit for conceiving the idea of bringing the buffalo back as a part of Indian life. Yellowtail was appointed superintendent of the reservation a year ago—the first Indian ever to hold a similar position—and immediately outlined his plan, now considered one of the greatest of social experiments for the benefit of the American Indian. It is conservatively estimated that at one time some 60,000,000 buffalo roamed what is now continental United States. But with the coming of the white man the buffalo was killed off and in 1902 was well on the road to complete extinction.

4,400 Animals in U. S.
In that year congress appropriated funds for establishing a herd in Yellowstone Park to perpetuate the species. That herd paved the way for other herds and today there are some 4,400 of the animals in the United States. Canada has a herd of some 17,000.

The Yellowstone herd is maintained at about 1,000 animals and each year the surplus is disposed of—slaughtered, sent to zoos and Indian agencies. Chief Yellowtail decided to obtain some of these surplus animals and establish a herd for his tribe. He obtained 115 head from Yellowstone and the National Bison Range herds.

This year he wrote: "We have just completed one of the best fences made completely of logs, which completes the inclosing of a land-locked area, locked on three sides by precipitous rock walls and inclosing an area which will support around 1,000 head winter and summer, using the deep canyons in addition, which have heretofore produced wasted feed."

The reservation, with 2,200 Indians, comprises more than 2,500,000 acres of land, much of it suitable for wild animals.

More Land Available
"Whenever our herd outgrows the present area," Yellowtail said, "we have another land-locked area where we can put them. I am sure we have demonstrated to the country at large that we are safe and proper persons to entrust the protection of wild life to, including buffalo, elk and other animals."

Reports of visitors to the reservation bear out his statement. The Indians apparently are enthusiastic about the game preserve project, conscientiously observing the no poaching regulations established by Chief Yellowtail.

Shipping of the animals to their new home provided the greatest problem. After they were brought to the corral in Lamar Valley, Wyo., they were crated and hauled to the reservation by truck. Such is the buffalo's temperament that it cannot be shipped as are cattle, but must be placed in an individual crate. Four crates to the truck is the accepted load.

'Bucket Shops' Of Toronto Are Closed

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 24—Work of his department during the past year has effectively cleaned up the bucket shops and "boiler works" brokerage offices in the city. Securities Commissioner J. M. Godfrey, K. C., stated.

"A year ago Toronto was infested by what seemed to be the entire financial underworld of the United States," Godfrey said, "but through the work of the department the situation has been cleaned up."

Concert of 'Lost' Music Is Offered

WELLESLEY, Mass., Dec. 24 — The Wellesley College Orchestra gave a musical performance which has not been played or heard for centuries and may not be played again.

Malccolm Holmes, director of the orchestra, searched libraries and museums here and abroad. He discovered lost music of the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries.

Key signatures, dynamics and expression marks, even bar lines were usually omitted by the ancient composers. Rest marks were a miscellany, and instead of the staffs and black and white ovals, now the universal method of showing the value of notes, these composers gave their notes these different shapes as pleased their fancy. Diamond, square or rectangle notes were used to distinguished whole, half or quarter notes.

to make the official count of the credits. The standing of these men is unimpeachable and the success they have attained in their respective lines and the high place they have among their associates and the people of this community assure you a fair count, and if any candidate or any candidate's friend feels that any mistake has been made, I want that person to speak up and say so. I assure you that it is the desire of the management of these newspapers to have this campaign clean and fair in every particular and we want to award the valuable prizes to those who have honestly earned them.

The candidates, without a dissenting voice, expressed themselves as being satisfied with the treatment accorded by the newspapers and the management of the Opportunity club under whose auspices the subscription campaign was conducted.

Manager LaRoque, feelingly thanked the candidates for their good work, saying: "I want you—each of you who have worked so hard and so loyally in this campaign and worked under such difficulties to know that we appreciate it—appreciate what you have had to contend with and the difficulties you have had to surmount—the bad weather and the general economic condition."

2,000 New Subscribers
I want you to know that we are satisfied. The circulation department tells me that we have added through your efforts 2,000 new names to our subscription lists, and for this good work we give you full credit.

I also want you to know that all the prizes which will be awarded tonight have been entirely paid for. You will not be asked to pay one cent. I gave checks for all the prizes this afternoon. I admit it almost gave me heart failure when I signed the checks for so much money but the joy of seeing your happy faces as these prizes are given to you is full compensation for that.

I wish each of you happiness and a full measure of joy. I want each of you, losers as well as winners, to be and to remain our friends. I also want you to help us to get any mistake that may have been made on our subscription galleys straightened out. Throwing the large number of new subscribers you have brought us, added to our Christmas rush of business has made a big job for our mailing boys and it would be more than humanly possible to handle all these new subscribers without making some mistakes. We want each one who has given you a subscription to set his papers and I ask you to tell all who are not getting their papers that we want them to let us know and I assure you the mistake will be corrected.

V. Y. Scofield, manager of the Opportunity club announced the winners and Manager LaRoque of the papers, as the names were called, presented the prize or an order for it. As the awards were announced the friends of each successful candidate gave voice to hearty and enthusiastic applause.

INSURANCE ON SHIPS SOUGHT IN EMERGENCY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—The department of Commerce today asked Congress for authority to underwrite war risks of American commerce "in times of emergency."

The request was made in the department's annual report signed by Secretary Daniel C. Roper. A number of other shipping legislation recommendations were made along with various other requests by the department covering other activities.

An eight-point shipping legislation program was laid down by the report which it recommended as "in the interest of the merchant marine."

They comprised:
1. Authority for the department to underwrite war risks in connection with American commerce in times of emergency.
2. Abolition of indirect subsidies for direct aids based on building and operating differentials.

3. Amendment to Shipping Act of 1916 giving more power over rates.
4. Changes in laws governing divisions of sea collision cases.

5. Appropriation of funds for establishment of a merchant marine naval reserve.
6. Repeal of provisions of International Shipping Act of 1933.

7. Amendments to coast-wise laws as contained in legislation introduced in last session of Congress.
8. Removal of limitation of $185,000,000 for construction loans and an increase in the future to $250,000,000.

9. Adoption of the Hague rules for carriage of goods by sea.

FITTSFIELD, Mass., Dec. 24 — When the cat's away this mouse won't play.

Mrs. P. L. Tobey's pet cat has a pet mouse that it plays with until the mouse has to quit from sheer exhaustion. The mouse seeks refuge in a hole or atop a chair. After resting, it scampers back onto the floor for more play.

The cat picks up the mouse in its mouth, carries it upstairs or around the house but never harms it.

Borger Youths Aid At Traffic Police

BORGER, Dec. 24—City officials of Borger believe they have solved the problem of traffic violation.

Borger has a uniformed police force of 17 high school youths from the ages of 16 to 19 who patrol the streets during the two busiest hours of the day, handing out traffic tickets, lecturing reckless drivers, and keeping the streets orderly.

The force grew out of a school-boy patrol near the schools, and was sponsored by a local civic club.

"The formation of the student traffic patrol has cut the accident rate among children a thousand per cent," Mayor Miller declared. "It makes school children safety-minded, and somehow drivers seem to have respect for the youngsters, more than they might for grown-ups."

"Some fellows who might try to run it over an adult officer will respect the boy patrolmen simply because of a sense of fair play," Miller said.

The boys are under the direction of Buck Trammel, traffic officer stationed here, and are regularly commissioned as police. They elect their own captain, sergeant, secretary, and treasurer.

Pay? They get two passes per month to the theater.
