Our Changing Attitude on Traffic

Almost every reader whose eye comes to this item can remember the days when we had "unavoidable accidents." Auto collisions were given this name because we were reluctant to fix the blame for poor driving, for careless thinking, for defective machinery. Even in the scattered fatal accidents of the early 1920's, the most common opinion was that the accidents were "unavoidable."

But as our daily automobile gathered a larger toll, year by year, on our city streets and highways, we learned that every accident has a cause either speed, careless thinking, indifference, faulty humanity or faulty machinery. Our lawmakers increased the penalties and our courts began applying them to car operators who were having more accidents each year, on our city streets and highways. We learned that every accident can be traced back to causes contributing to accidents—speed, machine and human faults—and the notion of "unavoidable accidents" went on the shelf.

Soon Texas car drivers will begin operating under a license. The law is a patchwork, made so by petty-minded lawmakers unwilling to yield to the common good. Slowly their attitude will change and the law will be repaired and improved. Slowly and surely the penalties for an accident will be increased. Slowly and certainly the influence of politicians on the handling of traffic accident cases will diminish. Ultimately suspended sentences for driving offenses will be limited and abolished. There seems no certain way of reducing our heavy toll of accident save through fear of certain and heavy penalty. Driving an automobile is a privilege subject to license, not an inalienable right. Being denied the right to drive, being locked up in jail is a severe penalty. So is being put in the hospital for months with broken legs or fractured skull. So is it a heavy penalty to be sent to the morgue and the grave. If only the penalty was certainly applied to the offending driver, our indignation might be limited. But too often a small child, an old man, a youth not offending the traffic laws is the victim of some other person's carelessness.

A Market for Cisco Produce

A long felt need of Cisco appears to be supplied with the possible location of a milk depot and produce market here by a national packing company.

Cisco farmers have been struggling along for a good many years without much return from their investments and labor. When times were bad and drouth or too much rain caused short crops the farmers had to struggle to make a living. When weather conditions were favorable the crops produced were in excess of the demand. The farmer had a hard time of it regardless of what happened.

A national packing company has announced its intention, if the farmers believe it worthwhile, of establishing a milk depot here to take all the whole milk—not just the cream—produced in this area, for cheese manufacture.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

WASHINGTON—This new farm program in its first year will be a crude makeshift insofar as its administration and operation are concerned.

Transforming farm relief into a soil conservation plan is a giantly complicated administrative job. Farm experts believe they could work out a good sound system within a year which would achieve their goals. They are doing the best they can in a few weeks and there is more confusion and difference of opinion than progress.

The individual farmer, planning his crops for the year, wonders what he must do to qualify for the program and its payments. He won't know for weeks, perhaps months, whether, assuming he has a 300-acre farm, he will be expected to plant 50, 100, or 150 acres in soil-building or soil-conserving crops or both.

Congress passed a law giving Secretary Wallace and Administrator Chester Davis enormous power and left them with a correspondingly enormous job of planning and administration.

SIX million farmers theoretically are eligible to receive money for participation in the program. Fewer than 3,000,000 received AAA benefits. Now must be determined: 1. Standards of performance on each farm which will make the producer eligible for payments. 2. Amounts of grants for which each farmer will be eligible if he participates. 3. Mechanism for checking up on his compliance with the standards which he agrees to maintain for this year. Administrative technique—reaching the long arm of the national plan down to individual farms—

'The Wind Blows Wild and Free'

In connection with the milk station and milk routes over this area, the company would also establish a produce market, purchasing poultry and other products at the regular market price.

Cisco cannot afford to pass such an opportunity. The farming class in this area has been the hardest hit of all during the depression years. Establishing a market for the farmers would be offering them a chance to help themselves. At the same time, it would be offering Cisco an opportunity to bring here a profitable trade with the farming people.

In the past there has been far too little contact between farmer and merchant, the man in the country and the man in town. That is lamentable but it is true. It has hurt both classes. The plan advanced at a Chamber of Commerce meeting and which will be explained more fully during this week offers a chance to better this condition.

IRISH HUMOR PREVAILS TO EASE ULSTER-FREE STATE LINE ROW

DUBLIN, March 14 (AP)—Irishmen may like to wax eloquent over the distressful state of the border between the northern and southern sections of the Emerald Isle but it's just provided them with their biggest laugh for a long time.

Patrick Gallen owns a farm at Aghrim, near Ballyconnell, County Cavan. Part of his property is in the Free State and the rest in Northern Ireland, with a tumbledown wall to make the frontier. It was this wall that nearly precipitated an international incident, according to the story just told in the Dublin High Court.

Some of Patrick Gallen's cattle roamed over the frontier from time to time, thereby arousing the suspicions of Sgt. Henry Murray Lee of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. One day, accompanied by a muscled constable, the sergeant walked up to the wall and blew his whistle to attract Gallen's attention.

The farmer and the sergeant had a friendly "chin-war" over the President Roosevelt will be in Dallas early in June. His tentative arrangements call for visits to San Antonio and Houston.

While Chairman Roy Fry and officials of Lower Colorado River Authority are in Washington, they will consult with Senator Connally and Sheppard and Congressman J. P. Buchanan toward inviting President Roosevelt to stop off at Austin and visit Buchanan dam, as the biggest southwestern project of his "arsenic" policy.

If the invitation is accepted, President Roosevelt will be asked to make the formal dedication of this flood control dam to the public service.

The president's personal recognition of the Texas project was especially sought as a direct answer to the attack made by utility corporations seeking to keep the federal and state government from completing the Colorado dams.

Director Lilienthal, commenting on this said: "We have a modern illustration of the same conflict between private monopoly and the rights of a community that roused Andrew Jackson in his fight on the Bank of the United States a century ago."

"While the rights of private property are sacredly guarded, we must not forget that the community also has rights, and that the happiness and well-being every citizen depends on their faithful preservation."

Texas Topics By Raymond Brooks

AUSTIN, March 14—Suit of Texas utility corporations, tying the earned pay and the jobs of 425 men at Buchanan dam, and threatening the jobs of 4400 men on the Colorado program, had its recent parallel in the fight of Alabama Power company on the TVA program.

Recently, the power companies fought the effort of TVA to furnish power to the cities of Sheffield, Florence and Tusculmia, Ala. David E. Lilienthal, a director of TVA, visited these cities, and in a speech there, he quoted an opinion of Chief Justice Taney of U. S. supreme court. Taney said:

"While the rights of private property are sacredly guarded, we must not forget that the community also has rights, and that the happiness and well-being every citizen depends on their faithful preservation."

TAGGERING STATISTICS STUD 'MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION' FILM

One hundred and seventy-seven miles of motion picture film, enough to reach from New York to Saratoga—that is a "Magnificent Obsession." A talking picture has to be a great deal more than just conversation," says John Stahl, director of universal's "Magnificent Obsession," which will be seen at the place today. "A picture has to be a reflection of life as it is going on about us. Not merely wise cracks, polite parlor repartee or brilliant street verbiage. Every spoken line has to show that the character is thinking that person has done, or will do, with reference to others in the story. No matter how excellent a player's lines may be, they must be woven into the rest of the narrative. If a speech, dramatic in itself, is not knit closely to the action of the picture, it detracts from the entire presentation. The audience becomes impressed by such a talk and tries to figure how that utterance fits in with the rest of the story. While they are doing this, and finding no satisfactory answer, their attention is taken away from the subsequent happenings. "Suppose, for illustration, I were to have a fine dramatic actor recite address, or Lincoln's classic Gettysburg speech. The audience would be greatly stirred by that, but the performance would hurt the picture, if it did not possess a direct connection with the other scenes. "We need strong dialogue, of course, but the dialogue must add something to the dramatic situation. Let us take an example from "Magnificent Obsession" to show just what I mean. In one of the opening scenes, a wastrel's life is saved at the cost of a great physician's. A man seemingly worth nothing to anybody else—and little to himself—continues to live while another, whose science can save thousands, must be snuffed out even as he is striving to develop further his great gift to humanity.

"That scene must fairly throb with action. Too much conversation would make it deadlier than a soundproof wall. Of course, the sequence calls for dramatic lines, but they must not be overwritten, any more than the scene may be overplayed. The speeches of each character must add definitely to the situation, just as their actions contribute to the flow of the camera story. The words must be spoken in the same tempo as the pacing of the scene. Every word, every move must be done so that it will be convincingly lifelike and carry the audience smoothly into what follows.

'A Midsummer Night's Dream' To Show At Connellee Theater in Eastland Wednesday

Max Reinhardt's super production of Shakespeare's comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," plays at the Connellee, Eastland Wednesday with the biggest and most talented casts of Warner Brothers stars ever to appear in a single picture.

Reinhardt, long acknowledged to Europe's greatest stage producer, consented to present his spectacle in film form after it had met with tremendous success at the Hollywood Bowl and in San Francisco.

It is said to be the ultimate in spectacular grandeur, while at the same time, its comedy and romance are as hilarious and as human as the mortal race.

James Cagney heads the all star cast with Joe E. Brown, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Otis Harlan, Dewey Robinson and Arthur Treacher playing with him as the artian mummies who present a play before the Duke of Athens on the occasion of his wedding to the Queen of the Amazons.

The leading romantic roles are played by Dick Powell, Jean Muir, Ross Alexander and Olivia de Havilland, whose mixed up love affairs lead to some strange pranks by the elf of mischief, Puck, portrayed by Mickey Rooney.

Others include Victor Jory, Verree Teasdale, Anita Louise, Lar Hunter, Hobart Cavanaugh and Grant Mitchell.

Scores of beautiful dancing girls take part in the fairy spectacles, the dances being created and directed by the two famous European ballerinas, Bronislava Nijinska and Nina Theilade.

The spectacle is set to the beautiful music by Mendelssohn, arranged by the noted Viennese composer, Erich Wolfgang Korngold. The play was arranged by Charles

BASE IN SYRIA URGED TO AID FRENCH NAVY

By HAROLD EPTLINGER
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, March 14—(U.P.)—Italy's African campaign and its repercussions in Europe have caused French as well as British military and naval experts hastily to divert their attention from the waters of the north to the Mediterranean.

Naval bases are uppermost in their minds for the tension in Europe has brought the realization that it is not impossible and that if it comes the position of France and England will not be nearly as strong as they could wish. Attention has centered in recent weeks on England's ambitious scheme for powerful air and naval bases at Haifa and other points in the Near East, but French experts, too, have given much study to the protection of colonial routes and to their country's position along the air, sea and land lands to Asia.

Suggested by Expert
First the French Navy Ministry pushed forward plans to add Mers-el-Kebir near Oran to the list of French Mediterranean strongholds. Now Rene La Bruyere, a leading French naval expert, puts forward the suggestion that Tripoli in Syria should be improved and fortified as a naval and air base.

La Bruyere's suggestion is carried out, importance again will be given to that historic port, which was one of the vital trading posts of the Phoenicians in ancient times, the stronghold of Saracen privateers in the ninth century and one of the most useful conquests of the Crusaders in the twelfth. The Christians held Tripoli until the successful drive on it by Mameluke Kalaun in 1289.

New Tripoli is important for one thing—it is the western terminus of the Mosul, Irak pipeline.

La Bruyere in putting his idea forward does not express official Navy Ministry opinion, but he is a retired naval officer who, authorities admit, is consistently well informed and versed in current French naval problems.

In Mandated Territory
Tripoli is the mandated territory of Syria, but it is believed that since the British have been able to fortify Haifa in the Palestine mandate, there should be no difficulties encountered by France. Local Syrian authorities need to agree, and it is believed that they would do so readily, for making Tripoli an important sea and air base would give Syria many economic advantages.

According to La Bruyere, Tripoli is recognized as being even better fitted to be a key strategic position in the Near East than Haifa, because it has more natural advantages. An ideal harbor can be formed by building a jetty connecting the key of islands extending northward from the town, and another jetty eastward from the farthest island thus forming a perfect shelter. Anti-aircraft batteries would find ideal situations along the heights stretching eastward along the road to Homs, and other fortifications could be constructed on the islands.

On Route to Damascus
To appreciate the strategic value of the Tripoli plan further, it must be considered that the route to Homs, the pipeline and the railroad connecting Homs and Damascus passes between two chains of mountains of Lebanon and the Djebel Ausamieh, and thus this pass leading toward the east easily could be guarded. The Crusaders realized the strategic importance of Tripoli and made it the principal center of their occupation.

La Bruyere does not believe that England would offer any objections because it would provide a friendly nation with means of seconding England in the protection of the route to India.

Bobbies Will Get Shooting Training

LONDON, March 14—(U.P.)—British policemen, who aren't allowed to carry a firearm, are going to have their own shooting range where they will be taught revolver and rifle marksmanship.

But the range will be "purely for sporting purposes," officials of the Metropolitan Police hastened to add.

"There is no intention of training our police students along the lines of American policemen or of the famous 'G-Men' of the United States department of justice," an official said.

The range, to be built at the police "college" at Hendon, also will be used to test weapons seized from criminals and crimped in which gas have been used will be reconstructed to aid the police in identifying bullet marks.

CODEX SINAITICUS IS REBOUND; 500 YEARS ADDED TO BIBLE LIFE

LONDON, March 14—(U.P.)—One of the oldest and most valuable copies of the Bible in the world—the 1,600-year-old Codex Sinaiticus—has been patched up and rebound to give it a new lease of life of another 500 years.

The Codex was bought by the British Museum from the Soviet government two years ago for the record price of $500,000. It was brought to London in an old tin box, wrapped in cotton wool, with its pages tattered and crumpled and many of them loose. After six months exacting work it has been rebounded to enable it to withstand the ravages of the next five centuries.

The job of mending and binding the 347 leaves of the Codex was accomplished by one of the foremost bookbinders in this country, Douglas Cockrell, and his son, Sydney. Owing to the great age of the manuscript, each page had to be treated with the utmost delicacy. The crumpled vellum leaves were straightened and flattened, one by one, in a special stretching frame, with damp cloths held within an inch of the pages to give the necessary damp atmosphere. Weights of one pound each were attached to a device which gave an even pull in every direction. At the same time many of the leaves had to be washed, patched and sewn together.

The first page has 15 invisible patches, which it is said only an expert could now detect. Many other pages also had to receive a similar amount of "first aid." The patches were made from tiny scraps of vellum chosen to match the original vellum on which the manuscript is written.

In addition to the work of patching the sheets, the whole manuscript has now been bound into two volumes with soft-colored polished oak boards and morocco backs. The her, "The name is Jamieson—Timothy Jamieson."

She wrote it down. "Twenty rhinestone clips at $2.98 each," she said. "That's—let's see—$79.60."

Tim Jamieson nodded. "Will you—er—have them sent?" The address he gave was one which even Toby knew was fashionable.

She nodded. "The package will be delivered in the morning, Mr. Jamieson. Thank you very much. And I hope you like your clips."

"But see here—"

"Was there anything else you wanted?"

"Yes," he said, "there's something I want very much. I want you to have dinner with me tonight. I'll be waiting for you any time you say. Or, if you'd rather, I'll pick you up somewhere—"

Toby smiled, but shook her head. "I'm sorry," she said. "I can't."

"Oh, but you'll change your mind! A girl like you couldn't be so hard-hearted. Now, listen, when the store closes I'll be waiting for you."

Toby didn't bother to object to that. A customer had passed at the other end of the counter and she hurried toward her. When she looked back a little later the young man was gone.

TOBY thought of the $59.60 in her sales book. It certainly wasn't every day that you made sales like that in the costume jewelry. Maybe she'd get a bonus this week. If she did, she could buy the shoes she needed and galoshes.

He really was a nice-looking young man. There was something about him that was rather—rather exciting. Oh, well, she'd never see him again. That was the end of that.

But the day that had begun in such an ordinary fashion had more in store for Toby Ryan—much more.

The oddest thing about it was that it all happened so naturally. It was a few minutes past 3 when Miss Burrows, the jewelry buyer, approached Toby. "The artists have finished with those watches we sent up to have sketched for the Saturday advertisement," she said. "Will you go up and bring them down. Ask for Mr. Keller. He'll get them for you."

Toby said, "Yes, Miss Burrows."

She knew exactly what to do; she had gone on such errands before. Toby stepped into the elevator and said, "Ninth floor." She liked going to the advertising office. It was so different from the rows and rows of counters on the first floor.

She entered the big room, hesitated, and then went up to the nearest desk. "Is Mr. Keller here?" Toby asked.

The door of a private office opened just then and a man stepped out. It was Mr. Keller, the art director, and Toby recognized him. She hurried forward. "Miss Burrows sent me for the watches that were sketched," she said.

"Oh, yes," the art director crossed to a desk, picked up four tiny watches attached to bracelets. Three of them were yellow gold discs. The fourth was the handsome "debutante special," white gold with tiny diamonds gleaming on either side of the oblong face. "Here they are," he said, and put them in Toby's hand.

She looked down at the watches. The glittering handful, she knew, was worth something like $250.

A minute later Toby stood in the hallway, waiting for the elevator to take her to the first floor.

Eldridge Explains Transfer Procedure

EASTLAND, March 14—Procedure in the transfer of a school student from one district to another was explained today by County Superintendent C. S. Eldridge.

"If the grade is taught in the home district it will be necessary for the parent transferring the child to get the approval of both the board of trustees of the home district and the receiving district also. If the child's grade is not taught in the home district, then the transfer is discretionary with the county superintendent.

"Forms for making transfers may be obtained by writing to or calling at the office. In order to comply with the new transfer law from the county board of education will classify schools the first Monday in May."

GORGEOUS

BEGIN HERE TODAY

TOBY RYAN, 19, works behind the jewelry counter of a large Manhattan department store. On her way to work during the crowded morning rush hour Toby collides with a good-looking young man. She murmurs apologies and hurries on.

Later that morning she poses for some photographs to be used in a store advertisement and MARY HART, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face." The selected her instead of MARY HINE HALL to pose for the pictures and Maudie is jealous.

Toby leaves the store at 5:30 and meets BILL BRANDT. Bill works in an advertising agency. They go to dinner.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV

It was just an ordinary February day like a dozen others. Toby didn't see anything unusual about it as she hurried to the subway station. There was time enough this morning, but hurrying had become a habit. Besides, the air was cold and damp and it was slushy underfoot. Toby was glad to reach the store.

She had a customer almost as soon as the doors were opened. From then on, the morning routine was just as it had been the day before. Toby lunched in the employees' cafeteria and wondered why it was that the pea soup tasted exactly like the bean soup the day before and the cream of vegetable soup the day before that. The prune pudding was good, though. She had an extra cup of coffee and talked for five minutes with a girl who had been transferred two weeks before, from the jewelry department to the fourth floor misses' wear.

Promptly at 1:15 Toby was back at her counter. So far, nothing had happened to set that February day apart from any other.

Gladya Sorenson ate lunch at the sandwich shop around the corner and came back to report that it was a growing colder outside. "Wouldn't surprise me," she said. "It's snowing by 5 o'clock."

Toby said, "Ugh! I hope not," and wished that she owned a pair of galoshes.

Gladya, who had a fondness for discussions of the weather, went on. "Last year, just about this time, we had that terrible snow storm. It lasted for three days. Don't you remember—?"

Gladya's reminiscences were cut short by the approach of a customer, and Toby moved away. Business, oddly enough, was not so brisk during the early afternoon as it had been through the morning.

It was while Toby was showing the new white and jade compact to a woman wearing a leopard coat that she noticed the young man. Involuntarily Toby's eyes raised. Then she lowered them quickly. It was the same young man—no doubt about it. The one she had bumped into on her way to work the day before. He was standing less than a dozen feet away.

Toby said, without looking up. "It's really the nicest compact we have. The medallion is real jade—"

The woman in the leopard coat interrupted. "Yes, it's very attractive. You said the price is $4.98, didn't you?"

"That's right. Four ninety-eight."

"I'll take it," the woman announced. She opened her handbag, drawing out a coin purse. Abruptly she stopped. "Oh," she exclaimed. "I'd forgotten. I meant to cash a check this morning." She stepped at Toby, went on hurriedly.

The glittering handful was worth more than $250.

"I haven't the money to pay for the compact. Could you have it wrapped and hold it for me? I'll be back within an hour or so."

"Why, certainly," Toby agreed. "I'll have it ready for you. I'm Miss Ryan. If you don't see me, just ask one of the other girls—"

The woman smiled. "Thank you," she said. "I'll remember." As she moved away she repeated, "I'll be back within an hour."

Toby nodded and bent over her sales book.

"Miss Ryan?"

She hadn't expected to hear her name, and looked up, startled. The young man—yes, it was the same one, all right; the brown eyes, the gray hair, the tweed topcoat all checked—stood directly before her.

"You are Miss Ryan, aren't you?"

"Why—why, yes."

He smiled, looking very well pleased with himself. "That's what I thought you said," he told her. "I heard you talking to that woman—nodding in the direction in which the woman in the leopard coat had gone. You know, you rushed away in such a hurry yesterday—"

Toby met his eyes. She looked as though she were about to rush away a second time, but instead she said, "You'll have to go. I can't stand here talking. We're not allowed—"

"But just a minute—please—"

The young man began. "I'm sorry," Toby said firmly. "It's against the store rules."

"What is?"

"Talking."

His face showed amazement. "You mean you can't talk—no, never, not to anyone?"

"I did sound ridiculous and Toby couldn't help smiling. She said, a little more kindly, "Only to customers."

"Oh—then that's all right. I'm a customer."

"Are you?" she asked. "What is it you want?"

The brown eyes twinkled. "That's a large order," the young man said, "but I'll begin. First of all, your full name, address, telephone number—"

Toby backed away. "Excuse me," she said coolly. "I thought you were a customer."

"But I am! I mean I want to be. I want—"

The young man looked at her. His eyes lighted on a tray of rhinestone clips. "Those," he finished triumphantly. "I want those."

"You mean those clips?"

He nodded. "Clips," he said. "Is that what they are? Yes, I want them."

"All of them?"

"Yes."

"But—there are 29 of them."

"They're for sale, aren't they?"

"Yes."

"Then I want them."

Toby hesitated only an instant. Above the tray was a sign reading, "Genuine hand-set rhinestone clips, $2.98." Her pencil on her sales book, Toby said in her most businesslike tone. "Will it be a cash or charge purchase?"

"Charge," the young man told

This is a comparatively new organization for the men of Baptist churches and has grown rapidly, creating as it does, a means of fellowship among Baptist men that has filled a need for closer fellowship.

Training School To Start Here Today

Beginning this afternoon at two o'clock the Methodist of the Cisco district will gather at First Methodist church here to attend a training school. Four courses are being offered. They are:

1. "Teaching Children," taught by Mrs. Juanita Kent of Waxahachie, Texas.

2. "Intermediate Department Administration," taught by Rev. E. R. Stanford, Eastland.
3. Worship in the Young People's Division taught by Mrs. Leola Mason of Cisco.
4. Organizing for Christian Education, taught by Rev. J. B. Curry of Cisco.

This school will meet Sunday afternoon and then every evening during the week through Friday evening. The local leaders are expecting groups from all the surrounding towns for this school.

This is a part of the plan of the Methodist denomination to give every member the opportunity to prepare to live a better Christian life and to be able to render efficient service.

"Mr. and Mrs." In Navy Blue

Remembers "Mr. and Mrs." of "Flirtation Walk"? They're reunited again in their first co-starring picture of a whole year. They are Ruby Keeler and Dick Fowell, in their newest and biggest triumph, "Shipmates Forever", the Cosmopolitan Production coming to the Texas Theater today for a three-day run.

ROMANCE IS IN 'SHIPMATES FOREVER' FILM

Warner Brothers gave talking pictures to the screen. They also discovered that the United States government and its various departments furnished the background for stories of human interest far exceeding fanciful adventures in mythological lands.

That they were correct has been proved by the remarkable success of its various service stories. "Here Comes the Navy" was the first; then life at West Point was dramatized in "Flirtation Walk". The marines had their hour in "Devil Dogs of the Air" and the success of "G Men," telling the story of the Department of Justice's war on crime started an entire series of lesser imitations.

Now comes the story of Annapolis, in the Cosmopolitan production "Shipmates Forever", which has its local premiere at the Texas Theater today, with Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler in the stellar roles.

This is a sweeping panoramic film packed with thrills, romance and infectious song. The life of the naval cadet is presented in all its vivid coloring. He is shown aboard the training ships, on the great battleships of the Pacific fleet, at play and at work, as well as in love.

"Shipmates Forever" is the most romantic as well as the most thrilling of the service pictures. Never has Powell been given such an opportunity to prove his versatility before the screen as in this picture. Not only does he sing many catchy airs in his inimitable manner, but his part calls for real dramatic action, to which he rises with genuine artistry.

LAND PROBLEM TERMED ACUTE IN FOUR AREAS

BERKELEY, Cal., March 14 (UP)—With virtually no good free land left in the United States for families to settle, the future of the country depends largely on the conservation and conversion to proper use of vast tracts that have been made useless by abuse in the past, believes L. C. Gray, assistant administrator of the Resettlement Administration.

Less than a century ago, said Gray, "there were hundreds of thousands of acres of good land in the public domain available to citizens who wanted to stake out a homestead. Today, not only is there scarcely an acre of such land, but countless thousands of acres that once were profitable have been ruined unless they can be converted to other uses or restored to their original productivity."

Gray cited four great districts in the United States where the misuse of land has not only made it unprofitable but in many cases has reduced the occupants to economic misery.

Poverty in great portions of the southern Appalachian Mountains where living conditions are particularly severe, he said, is the direct result of an unscientific use of land.

Forest Rapidly Thinned Forests, which formerly provided the chief income, were cut off without any care for the future reproduction of trees.

The land as a rule is too steep for farming; cultivation only aggravates the problem by encouraging soil erosion, and with both the forests and top soil gone, the standard of living of the inhabitants has decreased steadily.

The old forest region bordering the Great Lakes which presents a similar problem, the western plains where the destruction of forests has eliminated moisture and produced dust storms in recent years and finally the old cotton belt of the south, he said, are instances of the misuse of soil that is now causing poverty for great portions of the people.

Problem Grows With Years The situation, he declared, is even graver for the future than it is for the present. With an inevitably increasing population the nation will require more land under cultivation in the future than now.

Whenever industrial depressions occur, hundreds of thousands will go back to the land as they did during the present one.

With no virgin land left, and with great sections of the country made profitless by misuse of the land in the past, the problem, he declared, can only be solved by a well defined governmental policy of soil conversion and conservation.

Studies made by the Resettlement Administration, Gray believes, show that unless all people living off the soil can do so profitably, a great burden of taxation is thrown on persons in other parts of the country.

Cost to Country Shown In one case, 28 families were found who cost the county $185 each a year to transport their children to school. Yet their farm lands were so unproductive that their taxes averaged only $6.40 per family.

In another state it was found that $7,000,000 was spent on relief, private charity and uncollectable

Mayor Berry Sets March 29-April 4 For Fire Prevention Cleanup Week

Mayor J. T. Berry Saturday proclaimed a city fire prevention clean-up campaign for the week of March 29 to April 4, urging Cisconians to participate.

Mayor Berry directed attention to this is Centennial year and a clean-up is important for that reason, that much property is destroyed by fire through "careless" house-keeping, and that "in the past 10 years entirely too many of our citizens have lost their lives due to carelessness in their daily use of fire."

The Junior Chamber of Commerce directors, in a meeting Thursday night, had already set April 2 and 3 as dates for a city-wide clean-up campaign which the organization will sponsor. The drive will occur on Thursday and Friday of the week which the mayor destroyed by fire, which frequently is the result of "careless" house-keeping in the home and in the average place of business, is a serious drain upon our present economic condition. Third and humanly most important, because in the past ten years entirely too many of our citizens have lost their lives due to carelessness in their daily use of fire, and the preservation of human life is an important matter.

NOW THEREFORE, I, J. T. Berry, Mayor of the city of Cisco, do hereby designate the week of March 29th to April 4th, inclusive, as SPRING FIRE PREVENTION CLEAN-UP WEEK and most respectfully call upon all departments of the city, the Chamber of Commerce, Civic clubs, Patriotic clubs and our people in general, to take active part in this Clean-Up Campaign.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I hereto sign my name and seal of office this 14th day of March, A. D. 1936.

J. T. BERRY, Mayor of Cisco, Texas.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson Jesus Teaches His Disciples to Pray

Text: Luke 11:1-14
International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 15.
BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance

JESUS, by precept and example, laid profound emphasis upon prayer. What did Jesus mean by prayer? It could not have been merely the repetition of petitions and the saying of formal words, because we are told in one place that, at a time when He was facing days of unusual demands upon His strength, He went into the mountains and continued all night in prayer to God.

That night of prayer must have been a night of rest and relaxation and meditation. The yearning of His heart, and the sense of His deep dependence upon God the Father, no doubt found expression in spoken words, but a "whole night of such expression would have been far from peaceful, and we must think of that long period of prayer as a time of the outgoing of His soul to God in ways that could not be expressed in words.

Similarly, Jesus laid the great stress in prayer upon its private exercise. Men were not to pray to be seen by their fellowmen, but the true prayer was the prayer in secret where a man was alone with God.

It is instructive, however, to remember that Jesus did not confine all emphasis to prayer in secret and prayer that never finds any full expression in words. He has in very definite form set for us the model of all praying in what we call "the Lord's Prayer."

The disciples evidently found the need of some form of expression in which they could put their aspirations.

Disciples of later generations have felt this same need. There

Balmy Weather Brings Brisk Trade Here on Saturday

Saturday in Cisco was one of the best days from the standpoint of shopping, merchants have had in many weeks.

The balmy breeze, just enough to keep it from being sultry, and the spring sunshine evidently put it into the hearts of people in the surrounding territory to come to town. By noon the streets were crowded with men, women and children, chatting each other as they passed or paused a moment at the corners or let others pass.

Trading was brisk in most all stores, more especially in the dry goods stores and grocery stores. The shows were well patronized both in the afternoon and in the evening. Drug stores had good runs on ice cream cones and bottle and fountain drinks. Cafes and coffee shops were likewise doing a brisk business most of the time.

Some stores were thronged at times as these crowds like all shoppers seem to go in waves. Piece goods, ladies hats, shoes, hosiery, and dresses were in demand. One clerk sold two suits to one man around the noon hour. Who said the depression had not ended?

George Stewart Is Given Two Years

FAITLAND, March 14 — A jury in 91st district court Thursday afternoon found George Stewart of Ranger guilty of a charge of burglary and assessed his punishment at two years in the state penitentiary.

Stewart was charged with entrance into a railroad car controlled by C. D. Hartnett, on Jan. 8.

Frank Jenkins was counsel for the defendant and the state by Criminal District Attorney Grady Owen.

J. C. Carothers was foreman of the jury composed of L. G. Ball, W. L. Coleman, Albert Gage, J. F. Morgan, W. L. McCorkle, W. E. Brown, C. L. Carr, D. H. Gaston, A. O. Hall, R. R. Reagan and R. F. Wynn.

New Treatment For Ex-Convicts Urged

AUSTIN, March 14 — (UP) — Sensible treatment of ex-convicts was urged tonight by Frank Loveland, classification expert now working in the Texas prison system, and Reed Cozart, United States probation officer at San Antonio.

Loveland recommended this state for being among the first to study penal classification and segregation. The records made, he said, will be helpful to parole and pardon officials.
