Eastland First In Choral Singing Contest

BULLOCK WINS RURAL GROUP, RANGER THIRD

By CECIL EDWARDS
The county Interscholastic League meet was officially begun last night when the choral singing was held at the high school auditorium.

The affair was a unison singing. The groups were divided into rural and city groups, each group singing two songs each.

Thirteen units competed, 11 from the city group and two from the rural. Each town represented, had a large supporting group of fans with them.

The choruses were judged on tone quality, rhythm, attack, pitch, presentation, interpretation, and ensemble. The songs were practiced by the choruses from Victrola records. These records were first played to the judges before they were sung at the contest.

The contest was at very colorful affair. Some of the girls wore white uniforms with blue tri-colored scarfs around the neck, some, their robes with black Windsor ties, others, Irish green uniforms with white ties and green ribbons around their hair.

Eliminations for the typing contest will be held this afternoon, Robert Maddox announced today.

Reuben Wende and Vada Belle Tomlinson will be the high school entries for the extemporaneous speaking contest. This will be held Saturday morning at the high school, as will the spelling contest, Principal Hiram Brandon announced today.

Crows Build Fence-Wire Nests

Dead Mulberry trees stretch gnarled fingers into the sky near Dalhart, Texas, their trunk scoured clean of bark by the flying sand of repeated dust storms. In the bare, dead branches, crows have built nests from strands of broken and rusted barbed wire from abandoned fences. To the far horizon, nothing breaks the wind's force.

J. J. Livingston, Butter-Maker Says Milk Plant is Booster for Dairymen

J. J. Livingston, dairyman, butter maker and trucker farmer, endorses the proposed establishment of a milk depot and a cheese factory for Cisco as proposed by George H. Sweeney, of Abilene, who will meet farmers and business men in a discussion of plans, at the city hall, Friday, March 27 at 3 p. m.

"A market will help my business whether I ever sell a pound of milk to the milk plant or not," he says. "It will do this, he explained, because it will remove competition by who would rather sell their milk whole than manufacture it into butter. They are making butter now and going into the retail game for no other reason than that it affords the only possible market open to them for their dairy product."

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning at the Church of Christ, corner of avenue H and West Eighth street, for Mrs. H. J. Webb who died this morning after a lingering illness, at her home, 303 East Seventh street.

BEAUTIFYING OF HIGHWAYS IS UNDERWAY

Plans for highway beautification are well underway. The clubs of the cities have made this project their main subject of study in order to prepare for the Texas Centennial.

Points to be observed in judging of farm and ranch homes, rural schools and service stations in the state-wide Highway department sponsored beautification program were announced Wednesday by Mrs. James Horton, county chairman for highway beautification.

Points to be judged are: General appearance, cleanliness, orderliness of premises, trees, flowers, lawn; display of native trees, location of service buildings, appearance and state of repair of gates and fences, naming of property and culverts where necessary general appearance of buildings and grounds, state of repairs, painting, etc.; orderliness, cleanliness, planting arrangement and selections.

COMMITTEE WILL ACCEPT TAX REPORT

WASHINGTON, March 26—(U.P.)—The House Ways and Means committee voted today to accept its tax subcommittee recommendation for a first year $799,000,000 tax bill as the basis for public hearing to start next week.

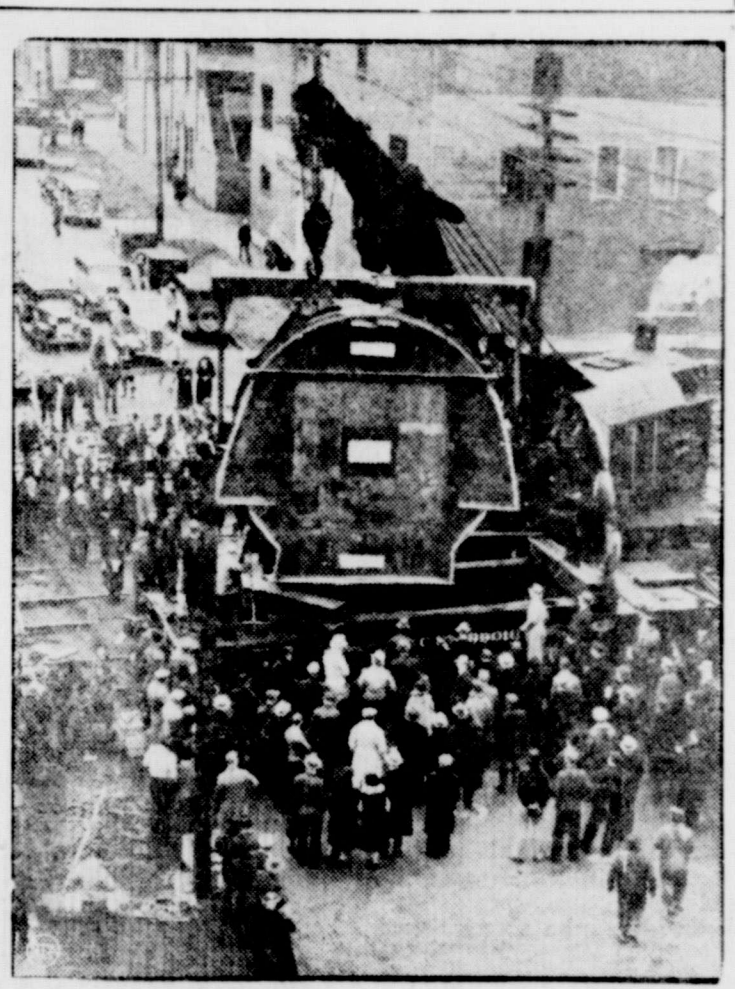

The report revealed for the first time that the sub-group recommending that railroad be placed under the new graduating corporation tax but be allowed to retain their present privilege of making consolidated returns.

Urges Donations Be Sent at Once

Red Cross Chairman J. E. Spencer, announced this morning the donors to the flood victims fund which was set as Cisco's quota at $185. While the sum collected to date is small, Mr. Spencer expresses appreciation and at the same time, urges that other add their contributions at once so that wide spread suffering and need, may be alleviated in the Ohio Valley and elsewhere.

SALT BAGS SOLD AS GOLD
BRANTFORD, Ont. — (U.P.) — A new high price for two bags of salt was reported to police here. The purchaser paid $800 for the bags, believing they contained gold. Police are looking for the salesman.

Priceless Mirror on Way West

Loaded on an underslung flat car as hundreds watched, the huge crate containing astronomer's $50,000 telescope mirror is shown here, as its guardians prepared to leave Corning, N. Y. for the trip to California. The 200-inch mirror will be taken to the California of Technology at Pasadena, where it will be ground to perfection.

Wage Earners' Dollar Buys More, But Survey Shows Living Cost Higher

MINNEAPOLIS, March 26—(U.P.)—A wage-earner's dollar goes further these days, but his wages are still behind the cost of living, according to a survey.

The report of a two-year family buying-power survey recently completed here was based on payroll records of 13,000,000 urban workers.

The average family's $120 monthly income in 1933 increased only $2.52 by the last quarter of 1934, while expenses rose $9.28, leaving a monthly deficit of $6.76 to be taken out of savings if the same living scale were maintained, the report revealed.

At Topeka, Kansas, dust clouds practically obscured the sun. Visibility limited to one mile. At Wichita the fog reduced visibility to one-half mile.

Canadian, Texas reported one-fifth mile visibility.

CHORAL CLUB TO MEET
It has been announced that the meeting of the Cisco Choral Club which was announced for 7:30 at the First Baptist church, has been changed to meet at the home of Mrs. R. C. Hayes, 710 West Eighth street.

MANY MORE APPLICATIONS ARE EXPECTED

AUSTIN, March 26—(U.P.)—Applications from 140,000 Texans seeking old age assistance today were reported on file here by director Orville Carpenter.

Carpenter expected many additional applications in view of the 300,000 blanks distributed.

The directors said they were working with all possible speed to facilitate payment.

Schools are being conducted among the 300 investigators teaching them method so as to properly conduct applications.

"Payments will start just as soon as investigators complete their work as required by law. We hope to complete all before July 1," Carpenter said.

HOUSE QUESTIONS TOWNSEND PLAN WITNESS

WASHINGTON, March 26—(U.P.)—Robert Clements, "resigned national secretary" of the Townsend old age pension organization told a congressional committee today that he had never made any "Fundamental study of economics" in connection with the $200 a month pension plan.

"Do you know the difference between economy and profit?" asked committee chairman James Sullivan.

The resigned secretary was the first witness at an officially significant investigation in old age pension movements resigned to reveal the "inside story" of the Townsend and other plans.

Learning forward on the table and clasping his hands as he testified, Clements said that he had made a detail study of the plan and of opinion of economists and other authorities.

He added that he had read stories of the ability of a nation to produce and consume but admitted that he never studied textbooks on economics or taxation before the Townsend plan.

ROBBERS TAKE SILVER, STAMPS SEARCH PAPERS

A robbery which pointed to a search for some important document as well as taking what loose cash and stamps they could find and making of with a bundle of auto glass, was discovered this morning at the Cisco Lumber and Supply company's office when opening time arrived.

Charles Sandler said that about $5 in silver and two or three dollars worth of stamps and stamped envelopes were also taken. The remains of a box of matches, that had been used in persuing all the papers in the safe, which had also been forced, were left behind. They had furnished the matches themselves and had worked by match light in searching for what they were seeking.

Illegal Whisky Cause of Arrest

Paul Tomlin, who was arrested and lodged in the Eastland jail and his brother, Tivey Tomlin, arrested in Cisco, were taken to Abilene Monday by federal officers, where they were charged with illegal possession of whisky.

Another Duster Hits Three States

KANSAS CITY, March 26—(U.P.)—A severe dust storm swirled over south central Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma panhandle and moving northeastward at swift pace.

Weathermen predicted it would be one of the worst dust storms this year.

At Topeka, Kansas, dust clouds practically obscured the sun. Visibility limited to one mile. At Wichita the fog reduced visibility to one-half mile.

Canadian, Texas reported one-fifth mile visibility.

Food Prices Drop

The drop in food prices since December, 1935, reduces the average householder's food bill nearly $1 a month, bringing "the average family income still closer to its 1933 ratio of buying power," the report said.

The drop in food costs during the first two months of 1936 meant

Cottages Should be Built at Lake Cisco

Tourist homes, camps or lodges are needed at Lake Cisco. Each year there comes a crying demand for some kind of housing facilities for those who have heard of Lake Cisco and its possibilities for making a few weeks or month stay, a delightful pleasure.

Many out of town people have mentioned to Cisco business men their desire to come and camp for a week or two, inquiring as to facilities for housing themselves and families while fishing, swimming or just resting. Of course the reply has always, and must continue to be, the same negative until something is done about the matter. The subject has often been discussed among groups of local men who see the need of such a thing, and who, themselves, would like to own a cottage where they could recreate over the week end, or where they could invite friends from Dallas, Fort Worth and other cities, to visit them at appropriate times during fishing or duck seasons, or during the swimming months.

The gist of the whole problem seems to be disposal of the sewage so as to form no danger of contamination to the water supply from the big lake. It would seem that if land could be secured, a start could be made by building disposal pits just as has been done in many places where there is no regular sewerage system—just as the country club and other houses at the lake are being cared for now.

Once a few houses are built, the idea will develop just as fast as it can be handled. And it must be done if our plans for making this a recreational play ground for west Texas. It can never grow much more until we do provide a place for people to lodge while availing themselves of the things we are building for them.

Anything humanly possible can always be accomplished if people set themselves to the task. Let's play with the idea, develop it with some logical plans, and then discuss it seriously. It is surprising just how many people there are in Cisco who would put a little money in an idea like that. It is necessary for our further development as a recreational center, so, what are you going to do about it?

Slaughter On The Highways

Slaughter of the innocents continues on the highways of Texas. Week-end automobile accidents claimed eight lives. Mrs. W. B. Stokes, age 26, a mansion bride and the youngest sister of Governor James V. Allred, was one of the victims. She was slain when the automobile in which she was riding with her husband near Mineola was crushed by an oil truck. Driver of the truck is charged with negligent homicide. It is said that he was drowsy, his truck touched a concrete bridge, colliding with the Stokes automobile and death came to Mrs. Stokes almost instantaneously.

All in all, there were eight lives sacrificed to careless drivers and many persons were injured the state over in highway mishaps. Indeed, these agencies of death covered the commonwealth. Texas has a licensed drivers law which is a mere makeshift. Registration is free. Inspection or examination of those who apply for license is not called for by the law—or the lawmakers. Many accidents have been caused by trucks and their drivers. On the city streets, there are drivers who cannot distinguish a green light from a red light. Apparently they are color blind. There are drivers who never think. There are drivers who never give a thought to traffic rules or regulations or the public safety guide literature distributed by those who are determined to make life not only sacred but safe on its highways and the city streets.

In Texas, it is one of the great problems of the hour—this demand for public safety and this determination that life and property shall be made secure. Drunken drivers should be punished. Careless drivers should be punished. Maniac drivers should be denied license and demons of the wheel should be placed behind the bars where they will not menace the lives of their fellows.

After all, the salvation of the farmer is the cow, the sow and the hen.

Some one ought to be blamed for the dust storms in the west and the floods in the east. Might as well blame it on President Roosevelt, he's blamed for about everything else.

One reason the hen has been a successful breakfast food manufacturer is that she was the originator of the sanitary container, and she is a wonderful advertiser.

Alaskans again are trying to guess when the ice will break up. American bridge fans have no trouble along this line. They know it occurs about the third drink.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

AUSTIN, March 26.—Gov. James V. Allred, who chose the accomplishment of his first year's proud of during his first year as executive of Texas, probably that prison would be a prison and parole reforms. On a serious reverse was encountered last year when Dave Nelson first Allred chose as prison manager, Gov. J. B. Hester, Nelson's successor, has been over, however, and is putting into practice many of Allred's ideas gained as a governor, attorney general and prosecuting attorney.

Classification and segregation work at Huntsville's prison, undertaken jointly by the University of Texas bureau of research in social sciences and the Rockefeller foundation is a pet project of the governor. Even more proud is he of the county parole board system.

Observers at the conference here last week were surprised at the enthusiasm of voluntary parole agents. The spirit was something like that of a "big brother" club which many cities sponsor at Christmas time. Few of the board members have had important dealings with law or lawlessness, yet they have given of their own time and money to aid paroled ex-convicts.

Allred read one letter which he viewed half-seriously despite a chucking in the crowds. It was from an anonymous Houston writer:

"Dear Governor: I am sure that you do not have time to be bothered with every fool thing that arrives at your desk. However here is the homespun opinion of a cotton tail rabbit chaser in Harris county on the apprehension of criminals which is as follows: Put them to death just as quickly as they can be got to the chair and also put his lawyer to death if he appeals the case. This nation has got to be rid of these damn scoundrels." Allred termed the letter "an attempt to express the feeling of a large number of our people."

Prisoners in Texas penitentiaries are getting more studious—at least more are going to school. Not always is the attendance at prison classes an indication of desire of learning—the inmates get "time" deducted for going to school. Significant figures were revealed in the prison's 1935 report.

More than 6,000 convicts are now in prison. Of those admitted in 1935 alone, 956 were unable to read or write. Prison classes attracted 4,464 men last year, with 1,686 in the first and second grades. Texas given 3,000 prisoners revealed that less than one-third have the equivalent of a grammar school education.

While the total served in prison schools was 4,484, the daily average attendance was 2,234, a 30 per cent increase over last year.

While ex-convicts "pardoned" have legally served their sentence, those who leave on parole are expected to be meticulous in their personal conduct. If returned to prison for violation of paroles, they are put in "stripes," very obvious to visitors and fellow convicts.

Four printed forms fairly accurately described the life of a lawbreaker out on parole. Two of them are addressed to the department of state at Austin and signed by county parole board members. One shows when the parole "checks in" at his home county sheriff's regular monthly report form, showing how the parolee spent his spare—if any.

Form three is designated as a "blank" parolee has failed to appear for his regular monthly report and would the state police please "contact" him.

The fourth form is a small card carried by the parolee. It gives the name of his county advisor and the cards are often valuable. Several local officers sometimes know their one-time criminal, and might wonder how he "got out of prison."

Best joke of the recent anti-panic conference was by a panhandle judge. It concerned a negro youth brought into municipal court on a busy day. "Judge," he said, looking about the crowded room, "I sees you're rushed today—so I'm gonna be just as short with your time as I hope you will be with mine."

The Texas planning board has been asked to help make Padre Island into a state park. W. M. Neyland, Corpus Christi, enlisted the aid of Planning Board Chairman W. M. Massie, adding that the land must be bought from its present owners and caseways, built near Corpus Christi and near Brownville. Many south Texas county commissioners' courts and civic clubs are sponsoring the move.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Regular Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—A nasty little situation down in the Caribbean is causing one of the New Deal's minor headaches and somebody seems to have thrown away the aspirin bottle.

Fanatical nationalism and terrorism in Puerto Rico threaten to embarrass an administration which has given a great benevolent program of rehabilitation to the island itself, while holding out the hand of a "good neighbor" to the rest of Latin America and abandoning the old State Department traditions of imperialism.

The situation is tense following the arrest of Pedro Albizu Campos, the Harvard-graduated Nationalist party leader, and six followers. The administration will consider itself lucky if there are no bloody sequels to the recent assassination of Col. E. Frances Riggs, Puerto Rico's police chief.

Other American and Puerto Rican officials are known to have been marked for death. If terror on a large scale breaks loose on the island, you will want to know the background.

MANY Puerto Ricans favor independence, not as a revolutionary movement, but as a friendly arrangement of mutual advantage. Most of them are concentrated in the big Liberal party.

Exploited into poverty by sugar corporations and absentee ownership, Puerto Rico needs to develop her agriculture and industry and must have help from Washington. Congress has provided the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration under Dr. Ernest Gruening with $20,000,000, with the idea of transferring the burden of debt from the Treasury to Puerto Rican soil by getting land back in the hands of the people.

The Nationalist party had only 5000 votes in the last election, but extremists who think they can further the independence cause by violence are concentrated in it and overtop into other political parties. The two young fanatics who murdered Riggs were members, but doubtless acted as individualists. Puerto Ricans generally condemned the murder, but respect the nationalist ideal which they see behind it.

NEW Deal recognition of economic rights of the people robbed nationalists of the chance to incite hatred against the United States on grounds of "Yankee imperialism and exploitation" and caused them to turn to racial hatred against Americans which somewhat resembles that of Nazis for Jews.

American officials must watch their step if they're to avoid causing thousands of more excitable Puerto Ricans, including many in the Liberal party, to join up with the nationalists.

Sympathy for the independence ideal and fear of reprisals probably will result in acquittal for Campos and his associates, charged with recruiting an army and possessing arms. Jurors now trying a nationalist accused of a riot murder are said to have received about 50 death threats apiece.

Acquittal of Campos would mean a moral victory for the extremists, and probably more trouble, whereas conviction would tend to make martyrs of the group—and probably more trouble.

Community visited Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Reich Tuesday.

Edwald Reich of the Lutheran community spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. Reich.

Rev. Pollard is on the sick list at this writing.

Mrs. Bangs of Winters is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Boatman and family.

Mr. and Mrs. John Alvey were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Clark at Pisgah.

Clarence Callaman visited Uncle Abe and Aunt Betty Alvey Sunday evening.

Mrs. Ed Callaman and Mrs. P. O. Schaefer visited Mrs. J. M. Boatman Wednesday evening.

Mrs. R. E. Dillon of Cisco was the Sunday dinner guest of her son, Jim Dillon and family.

Scout Activities Include Radio Club

By CECIL EDWARDS Saturday night, March 21, was the first anniversary of the Boy Scouts Amateur Radio club. The event was celebrated by a big supper at the club house.

Included in the menu were sandwiches, iced tea, fruit salad with whipped cream, and a large cake. The boys began eating at 9:30 and didn't stop until all the food had disappeared from sight.

As soon as a member gets his license a station will be established. Two of the members have taken their test but neither passed it. They will be eligible to try again in 90 days after the first trial.

An effort is being made by Mr. Barton to have the Junior Chamber of Commerce take over the sponsorship of the club, and to set aside a small fund for the club. Work will be started soon on the transmitter which will be put in use as soon as the station is established.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

TOBY RYAN, 15, works behind the jewelry counter of a large Manhattan department store. She poses for a photograph to be used in a store advertisement and MARY HAYT, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face."

Discharged from the store due to the scheming of jealous MAURINE HALLS, Toby has difficulty finding another job. Then she meets MARY HAYT and MARY HAYT, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face."

On a bus one afternoon she meets secretary TIMOTHY JAMIESON who asks her to have dinner with him. Toby refuses. In arriving home, Toby hears a message has come for her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIV

Toby read the penciled message. "Thank you, Mrs. Moeller," she said. "I suppose I'd better call right away."

She went to the telephone and dialed a number, aware that though the rooming house keeper had stepped out of sight, the door of her room remained open. Mrs. Moeller, ever curious about telephone calls, was showing increasing interest in Toby's. Privately, Mrs. Moeller admitted that a job like Toby's—posing to have her picture taken—might be all right. Just the same—

It was Harriet Holm's voice that came over the wire. "Hello," she said. "Is that you, Toby?"

"Yes. I just came in and got your message. I hope I'm not bothering you, calling so late."

"Not at all. Say, Toby, there's nothing to be a fashion show tomorrow—a benefit of some kind at the Ritzmaris hotel. I'm going to model and I told Sally to put you down for the same assignment."

"But, Harriet, I've never done anything like that. Why, I wouldn't know the first thing about it!"

"I knew you'd say that. That's why I called. But this kind of modeling is lots easier than standing before a camera. There's nothing to it—and if there is anything that bothers you, you can ask me. I thought it would be fun working together."

"It would be! And it's awfully nice of you to offer to help me, Harriet, but still I don't know—"

"Listen, don't you suppose all the other girls were beginners once? I want you to call the office the first thing in the morning and see that Sally's got you on the list. There'll be about eight other models, I suppose. There usually are that many."

"Well, if you're sure I can do it—"

"I wouldn't have said a thing about it if I wasn't sure. Of course you can. Listen, why don't you stop here for me? It won't be out of your way and we can go on together. I'll tell you exactly what you're supposed to do—"

been pushed out of the way. Racks from which bright-colored costumes hung, obscured one wall. On a large table in the center of the room hats, gloves, furs, shoes and handbags lay in confusion.

Half a dozen girls—all young, slender, attractive—were grouped about the table or before the racks of dresses. In the center, her voice raised in crisp authority, was a small, dark woman in a tailored suit.

"That's Miss Landers," Harriet whispered to Toby. "She's the stylist who's running the show."

Miss Landers turned and took in the two in the doorway. "Are you girls models?" she asked.

"Yes," Harriet said, coming forward. "I'm Harriet Holm and this is Toby Ryan."

The older woman consulted a memorandum and nodded. "Then everyone's here," she said.

A door into an adjoining room swung open and a girl appeared. She was tall, and height accentuated her slowness, as did the lines of her black and white dress. She wasn't a pretty girl, exactly, though she certainly was unusual looking. There was a hint of peevishness about the crimson lips and an odd upward swing to the dark eyebrows.

Harriet had turned away and was talking to some girls who evidently were old friends. The newcomer came into the room, halted a few steps from Toby and eyed her, unsmilingly.

"Who're you?" she asked abruptly.

"I'm Toby Ryan," Toby told her. "I'm going to model in the show this afternoon."

"Oh, are you?" It was a question, yet the tone implied no interest at all in an answer. The dark-haired girl continued to stare at Toby a moment longer. Then she said, in a drawing voice, "Seems to me I've seen you somewhere."

"I—I don't think it's very likely."

"No?" Again she studied scrutiny. Toby felt her cheeks flushing uncomfortably. She would have moved away, but the other girl's voice went on. "Could it have been in Miami? Were you there in February?"

"No," Toby said. "I wasn't in Miami."

"Then, perhaps, it was last fall at Aiken, or on the boat crossing from Cherbourg?"

Toby shook her head. "I haven't been in any of those places."

"Really? How quaint!" Suddenly the girl laughed. "I have!" she said. "You look exactly like a maid I used to have. She wasn't a very good maid; I had to discharge her. Something about stealing some spoons—"

There was no opportunity for a reply. With a shrug of her shoulders, the dark-haired girl was gone. Toby stood motionless, held by the stinging words. The girl had been deliberately insulting. It was in her manner and tone as well as in the words themselves. And there wasn't any excuse for it—

Harriet came up beside Toby. She said something, but the other did not seem to hear. Harriet repeated, "Come on, Toby. Miss Landers is ready for us."

She put a hand on the other girl's arm. Toby nodded, but instead of answering she asked, "Harriet, who is that girl over by the windows?"

Harriet looked across the room. "You mean the one in the black and white dress?" she asked.

Toby said "Yes." It was the girl she had been talking to.

Harriet lowered her voice. "That," she said, "is about as nice a dish of poison as you'd be able to find in a day's search. Carol Marsh is her name. One of the Park avenue darlings who think it's too, too thrilling to have a career, my dear! So they use the family pull and get jobs that other girls really need. And the other girls go hungry. The blond beside her is her pal, Betty Turnbull. They're two of a kind—only Carol's worse. If you're lucky, you won't have to work with them very often. If you do—well, stay out of Carol's way."

Toby looked at the girl by the window. "I'll stay out of her way," she said, "if she stays out of mine. If she doesn't, she'd better watch out!"

Toby wouldn't have echoed Harriet's statement that there was "nothing to" modeling in a fashion show. She thought there was a good deal to it. But working in the studios had accustomed her to being stared at, and she had learned to forget herself and think of the costume she was displaying.

She had some lovely things to wear—bright colored sport things, mostly, because she was small, and an evening dress that was a dream—crisp, bouffant net shading from deep rose at the hem to misty pink over the shoulders.

The charity fashion show was being held in the hotel ballroom. Small tables had been set up for tea and the models were to parade slowly among the tables, pausing when anyone showed interest to tell the name of the designer of the costume and the price.

Toby had expected to be frightened when she first entered the room. She found she wasn't. Carefully she watched the girl ahead of her. When the other girl was half way across the room, Toby followed. The orchestra was playing a popular tune and she matched her step to the music.

She was wearing a black taffeta suit with a short jacket, supposed to be the sub-deb's Easter costume. There was a huge black and green checked bow under Toby's chin and she wore a green hat, slanting provocatively over one eye.

"This is an original Claudette model," she said to a woman who looked up inquiringly. "The price is $185. The hat is from Charles Raymond—$49.50."

She said it over and over until it almost became a chant. "This is an original Claudette model—"

Women glanced up from their tea and eyed the other girl with criticism. And some asked about sizes and if the suit could be had in different colors. Slowly Toby circled the room. Her own amazement at suits that sold for $185 and the women who bought them had ended long ago.

She reached the final table, paused to repeat the familiar words and turned toward the door. A sound behind halted her. It must have been a sixth sense that warned her, for, even before she turned, Toby was sure whom she was to face. She looked up into Tim Jamieson's eyes.

"Hello," he said, smiling. "This time's charm, you know."

ally to carry it out, and that there have been many rumors of "track-steering" in its management.

The Townsend bloc, composed of 33 Representatives, has been supporting a bill in the House offered by Rep. John Steven McGroarty, Cal., venerable Townsend supporter, which would carry the pension provisions.

The investigation committee, headed from Bell, is composed of Joseph A. Gavanag, N. Y., John H. Tolan, Cal., and Scott W. Reynolds, Ill., Democrats, and Republican B. Hollister, O.; Claire P. Hoffman, Mich.; Samuel L. Collins, Ill., and J. Williams Ditter, Pa., Republicans.

Tolan and Collins have supported the Townsend movement. Special Counsel Young James R. Sullivan, youthful Kansas City attorney, has been engaged as the committee's special counsel. He has been directing a small corps of investigators into the accounts and financial set-up of the Townsend organization for the past three weeks.

Committee members have hinted here will be "startling revelations" when the quest for evidence is shown. Sullivan was assistant counsel for Kansas City. Supporters of the Townsend Plan are understood to have a battery of legal counsel ready to defend their interests. Some estimates place the number at 30, but that it is understood that at least a dozen attorneys will be present to defend the pensionists.

Other Schemes Under Fire While the inquiry is aimed primarily at the Townsend plan, it will go into numerous other old age programs.

Reports have reached the committee that Dr. James E. Pope is "working" again. He was under fire of postal authorities several years ago and was called to testify before a previous House investigation.

There are several minor pension bills fostered. The McGroarty bill was included so in the scope of the investigation committee has broad powers to subpoena witnesses and documents necessary to carry out its investigation. It will report its findings to the Speaker of the House regarding as to whether the House is in session.

An amendment was inserted in the original resolution, which will permit the committee to print its findings as "public documents" to insure wide dissemination.

TEN GUIDES OFFERED JOB HUNTERS; 'HAVE SOMETHING TO SAY... SAY IT'

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 26.—With thousands of youths looking for jobs and many more to join them upon graduation from schools and colleges in June, Ralph R. Wulf, senior placement assistant at the Yale university bureau of appointments, cites 10 rules for getting a job.

1. Find out what you want to do. An employer doesn't care what you're interested in.

2. Study yourself. What have you to offer a prospective employer? Remember, getting a job, is largely a matter of "selling yourself."

3. Study your market—the places where you are likely to find jobs.

4. Prepare the story of your experience and your capabilities carefully.

5. Find out all you can about your prospective employer. Look up his business and know exactly what you can offer his organization.

6. Wear suitable clothes.

7. Be well groomed.

8. Avoid Mondays, Saturdays and days before and after holidays.

9. Look alive.

10. Have something to say. Say it. Stop talking!

Highway Problems Becoming Serious

HOUSTON, March 26.—Speeded up motor transportation, plus the tremendous increase in traffic on our roadways, imposes upon our highway engineers vitally serious problems, according to Col. Ike Ashburn, executive manager of the Texas Good Roads Association.

"Even though we are scarcely more than 50 per cent complete in our state highway program, we find ourselves confronted with a problem of reconstruction and readjustment of our highway planning to meet the demands of safety in highway traffic," says Col. Ashburn.

"To stop the slaughter in the United States annually of 36,000 persons, the hopelessly maiming of 107,000, the seriously injuring of 1,170,000 and an annual loss of $1,600,000 in earning power and property is to a considerable extent, at least, the inescapable responsibility of the planners and designers of our highways.

"Today there are 26,000,000 automobiles registered in the United States. Predictions are that by 1960 this number will have increased to 31,000,000 passenger cars and 6,000,000 motor trucks.

"In Texas our registration is well in excess of 1,250,000 with greatly stimulated sales in the future anticipated by automobile dealers. Moreover, whether it be the inherent restlessness of our people or not, we are taking increasingly more and more highways for both long and short trips. Here is a picture that augurs for an increase in traffic disasters unless something is done to make our roads more fool-proof.

"The Texas Highway department already has gone far in two or three directions to act in the interest of safety. Wayside parks are attractive, but serve a further purpose of clearing the roads of those who are weary from travel, and who seek a few moments relaxation or a bite to eat.

"New highways include turn-arounds where the motorist may swing on widened and walled shoulders in safety to reverse his direction. The highways of Texas are well-marked and the signs 'Soft shoulders,' 'Slippery when wet,' 'Do not park on highways,' 'Do not pass cars on hill,' 'Curves,' 'Dips,' etc., all carry a warning to the motorist.

"Fifty percent of the fatal accidents are to pedestrians on our through highways footpaths or sidewalks which are actually to be used by the pedestrian must be made an integral part of the highway design.

Elimination of curves, guarantee of proper sight distance, clear vision of interesting roads, elimination of slippery surfaces, widening, multiple lanes, with safety devices for the dividing line in the middle of our highways, all must come.

"But they cost money. That is just one other reason why motorists' fees, a special obligation levied for special purposes, must be preserved for expenditure upon the highways. Constantly changing requirements for performance by highways means constant improvement in existing thoroughfares and new and expensive departures in highway design. The gasoline tax is a road toll, a tax by the mile paid by the motorist. Let us preserve it for roads."
