LEAGUERS AND VISITORS THROUG CITY

OVER 2,000 IN ATTENDANCE FOR EVENTS

By CECIL EDWARD
Hundreds of visitors jammed the high school this morning as the county interscholastic league met here under way. People from every direction were still pouring into town at 2 o'clock today. The number of visitors for that time was estimated at 2,000.

They have taken possession of the high school auditorium, every room in the school and have filled all the churches, declared Superintendent R. N. Cluck as he tore madly up to the city hall auditorium and then back to his car to pick up something he had forgotten.

Visitors Welcomed
Cisco welcomes the visitors and every business and civic organization joins in the greeting, and trusts that the program, the most enthusiastically patronized in many years, may be all that the visitors are given every consideration and protection from traffic mishaps while they are here.

Before any contests were held this morning Director-General R. N. Cluck called a general assembly in the high school auditorium. All the directors for the various events were seated upon the stage and Cluck introduced them and let them make their announcements regarding the events they were in charge of.

Morning Contests
Contests held this morning are: Declamation, all divisions; Essay writing; 3-B contest; Typing and Story Telling. The Picture Memory contest was held this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Preliminaries for the track and field events started at 1 o'clock. Work has been going on all this week preparing the ball park for the athletic events. Finals for these will be held Saturday afternoon at 1, and a large crowd is expected for these events. Finals for the debate (both girls and boys) were scheduled to be held this evening at 7:30.

Owing to the large number of declaimers that event was divided into four groups. The senior department was divided into two groups.

About Our Friends

By STEPHEN A. LONG

Henry Stubblefield is getting pretty tough.... He has a little edge on his friends around the police department, it seems but.... when every thing is very still.... it is sometimes the forerunner of a storm.... Better look out.... Gus Frank Warren, Pierce and Perdue may turn any minute.... Cates too.... finding figures to know anything, he says.... Lonnie gives you that quiet smile, like he does before making a home-run on the soft ball field, and says, "Nothing here"....

Now what is a fellow going to do?.... we ask you.... when our friends refuse to divulge their information?... People must have gossip and scandal.... the more scandal on the other fellow, the more we enjoy it.... J. T. Elliott gets up sick.... wife scolds him for sleeping late instead of planting the garden.... no news there....

Well, there goes Mrs. J. W. Mancill, new frock, looking very spic and span.... Mrs. Troy Powell and Mrs. E. H. Birnie.... planning something.... J. E. Armstrong, happy smile.... reading the News.... Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Shockley parked on the street.... Meeting E. Mayer on the street.... tells us that Ellsworth, his son, now in Abilene.... good job, traveling part of the time.... with Swinney Glass and Paint company.... Ellsworth will get along.... Miss Bertha Welty, cousin of Blair Clark.... visiting Blair and Mrs. Clark.... Miss Welty lives in Granite, Ill.... but works in St. Louis....

Joe Lea Moore being over-persuaded by two friendly customers.... Wytman Moore smiles and shakes his head as he goes to wait on a parked car.... wise boy....

Henry Drumwright, strutting around in front of us poor fellows.... it is a nice pinch back.... even if it does make us jealous.... R. N.

Townsend Declares For Borah as Nominee

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the messiah of the Pacific coast, has endorsed Senator William E. Borah of Idaho for president. Messiah Townsend pledged himself and the organization he boasts has approximately 4,000,000 members to work for the nomination and election of the pride of Idaho for the high office he seeks. Early in the springtime in the city of Los Angeles, Dr. Townsend changed his voting registration from democrat to republican. Two months ago the messiah accused Senator Borah of committing "political suicide by terming his pension plan not practical." Borah has not endorsed the old-age pension plan, but the messiah has ruled that he is the only republican candidate who "even approaches the standards set up by his followers."

Ohio and Illinois republicans hold their conventions to elect delegates to the national convention at an early date. Governor Harold Hoffman, the republican leader of New Jersey, has instructed his six delegates to vote for Landon and he will ask the congressional districts to instruct the delegates to endorse Landon as their choice. According to news correspondents of New York, republican leaders have decided that Landon is their one best bet "to destroy the new deal administration and retire Franklin D. Roosevelt to private life." As for the brilliant and outstanding son of Idaho, who follows his own convictions and votes the straight republican ticket on election day, he appears to be fated to walk the political gauntlet or to be kicked to death by the riders and the trammers of the elephant. Just now in all cities and states of the north and east, the republican trainers of the ancient Jumbo of the jungle have their emitters doing valiant yet secret work to teach the negro voters that Borah is their most deadly enemy and that his nomination would prove disastrous to the party of "Abraham Lincoln and its early founders."

War---But What About Money?

In recent critical appraisals of the tense European picture, one vital point seems to have been overlooked. That is the financial status of Germany and her neighbors—a status which makes war practically impossible now or perhaps for a long time to come.

John T. Flynn, leading American economist and financial writer, brings this point home forcibly. The Europe of 1936 is a very different Europe from that of 1914. Flynn reveals. Every country is ridden with debt which, if war were declared, would immediately increase.

Moreover, the next war will find foreign credits difficult to obtain, with the result that governments necessarily would have to fall back on gold reserves and nationalization of the investments of citizens; all of which would make a weak support for a prolonged conflict.

Unless the weather man changes his tactics, the republican party will have to find some other state than Kansas as the home of their favorite nominee. There just won't be any Kansas.

Now comes Lloyd George to remind England that she hasn't paid her war debts to the United States. Well, we are glad there is one European who hasn't forgotten the "bloody past."

An East Cisco woman says the reason she contemplates being a widow again is that hubby is trying to trade the wedding ring for a wash tub and rub board.

In our opinion, the only reason George Washington threw dollars across the Delaware river was to teach Scotch boys how to swim.

In the matter of politics, it seems, army officers should be yes men. Even the radio major confines himself to "al right, al right."

Nepotism has its advantages, if only for the feature of having a brother-in-law handy to double for the statesman during assassinations.

Authoress Pearl Buck has adopted two small boys. After scrubbing their necks a few times, it is wondered if she will still think it the good earth.

You can't tell Europe that the United States isn't preparing for armed conflict. Haven't they heard about all these training camps?

Gorgeous

BY LAURA LOU BROOKMAN
© 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
TOBY RYAN, 19, works behind the jewelry counter of a large Washington department store. She poses for a photograph to be used in a story about advertising and HARriet HILL, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera eye."
Discharged from the store due to the scheming of jealous MARIE HALE, Toby has difficulty finding another job. Then she meets Mary Hilt and he suggests her to HEEN BLANK, manager of a model agency. Toby registers at the agency, secures work as a model.
On a bus one afternoon she meets timothy j. jamieson who asks her to have dinner with him. Toby refuses.
Toby and her friend, HARriet Hill, take part in a beauty contest. CAROL MARSH, wealthy and snobbish, also models in the show. Toby, appearing as a model, sees Jamieson again.

Can you imagine Tim at a style show? I was never more surprised in my life! But I suppose somebody told him I was modeling here this afternoon and that's why he came. He follows me everywhere; honestly, it's almost a nuisance— but of course, I'm crazy about him.
"Who wouldn't be?" Betty had the ornament in place now and turned. "He's got everything, hasn't he? Looks, family money— what more could a girl want? If there were more Tim Jamiesons in the world I'd be a lot better pleased."
"It was sweet of him to come, wasn't it?" Carol wiped rouge from her lips, preparatory to smoothing on a fresh supply. "You know what I think, I'll do? I'm going to tell Tim he can take us to the Seville Club tonight. They say there are some divine new dancers there. I was supposed to go somewhere with Tom Prescott—he's been calling and calling and I finally promised him a date—but I'll get out of it somehow."
"Oh, do, Carol! I'll call Wally—or, no, I don't believe I will. We might run into someone else."
They went on, making plans for the evening. Toby could hear their voices clearly but she was not listening. So Tim Jamieson was mad about Carol Marsh, was he? Followed her everywhere. That was the reason he had come to the fashion show—because Carol was there.
"Oh, what a little devil she's been! What a silly, ridiculous little fool!"
SHE looked at Carol Marsh again. Yes, Carol was the sort for Tim Jamieson. She had money and family position, just as he did. She'd never worked at bargain counters or fought her way through rush-hour crowds. She'd never hunted, day after day, for a job that would pay enough to keep her alive. "One of the Park Avenue darlings," Harriet had called Carol. That was what she was—whether she lived on Park Avenue or not. One of the Park Avenue darlings.
The maid was slipping a dress over Carol Marsh's head. One of the fastenings caught in a bit of fragile lace and Carol spoke sharply.
"Clumsy creature!" she said. "Can't you watch what you're doing?"
Well, if that was the sort of girl Tim Jamieson was crazy about, all right. That was fine with Toby. That was wonderful. "I never thought to see him again!" she told herself. "Never. And this time I mean it!"
Suddenly Toby realized that she had been wasting time. She'd have to hurry; she was supposed to go on in a few minutes. The models had been warned that if one of them were late she'd throw the entire show off schedule.
Toby took down the ratcheting suit everyone had exclaimed about, and got into it. The suit had white trousers and a blue coat like a ship's officer's. To top it, there was a frivolous version of a sailor's cap, to be worn at an audacious angle.
Toby stood before the full-length mirror, trying the cap. Yes, it was better tilted to the right. It was quite becoming. She stopped back, studying the effect. The ratcheting suit looked well on her, too. Miss Lander had said at once that Toby was to wear it. So few girls could wear trousers; Toby was one of the few.

A voice at her elbow cut in. "Of course we all know you're beautiful, but would you mind giving someone else a chance to see a mirror?"
It was Carol Marsh. Toby moved away, not trusting herself to speak. If Harriet Hill had said the same words they would have been a joke. But Carol was not joking. There was cool insolence in the tilt of Carol Marsh's head, the steady, smiling dark eyes.
TOBY crossed to a window, turning her back on the room. The usual afternoon traffic was in progress in the street below, but Toby saw none of it. Tears that she refused to shed blinded her. Fiercely she winked them back.
She would not give way. She would not! Nobody was going to know that anything Carol Marsh could say would hurt Toby Ryan. Who was Carol Marsh, anyhow? Why did she think she was so much better than everybody else?
A tear drop slid down Toby's cheek. She wiped it away hastily. In a few minutes she'd have to go back into that ball room and parade like a peacock among the tables of women drinking tea.
Violently, Toby wished she had not come to the fashion show, wished she'd never heard of it. But that was a silly wish. Why not be frank with herself? It wasn't the fashion show that had gone wrong. It was because she'd found out that a man she—well, was interested in—wasn't all she'd thought him—
The maid who, a few minutes before, had been helping Carol Marsh to dress, approached Toby. "Miss Ryan?" she said.
"Yes."
The maid came nearer and her voice lowered. "A gentleman asked me to give you this." Discreetly, she handed Toby a folded slip of paper.
"But—" Toby began, and then suddenly stopped. She took the slip of paper and moved to the rack of clothes a few steps away. The rack served as a screen, affording privacy. Toby unfolded the note and read:
Dear Miss Ryan—Meeting you so unexpectedly has made me believe this is my lucky day. Won't you prove it by having dinner with me? I've asked you twice before, you know. Please let the third time be the charm. I haven't nerve enough to step around through the entire fashion show even to see you model, but I'll be waiting at 5:30.
TIM JAMIESON.
Toby turned. At the end of the room Carol Marsh was inspecting herself in the mirror. Intent on her reflection, Carol was the embodiment of aloofness and self-confidence.
So Carol Marsh thought she was going to the Seville Club with Tim Jamieson that evening, did she? Hastily, Toby made up her mind. She crossed to where the maid was smoothing out discarded garments. Toby said, "Do you think you could find Mr. Jamieson—the young man who gave you the message?"
"I think I could," the maid smiled. "He said he'd be waiting for an answer."
Toby moved nearer. "Tell him," she said, "that Miss Ryan will be ready at 5:30."

"Much Relieved," Says Lady After Taking CARDUI

Although they may be very active and apparently in good health, many women, at certain times, will do well to take Cardui. It may relieve some of the nagging symptoms that are so annoying every month. Mrs. F. T. Foster, of Greensburg, Ky., writes that she has "derived great benefit" from Cardui. "Before taking Cardui, I was weak and extremely nervous, and suffered from sleeplessness. This made me tired and worn in daytime. My back ached continually. Being an active woman, I did not want to continue in this condition. Having heard a great deal about Cardui, I found, after just a few bottles, I was much relieved. I continued taking Cardui and was so much helped." Of course, if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Beer Vote May Be Set Monday

All election on whether voters of this county up to 14 per cent should be allowed to be legally authorized by commissioners court, Criminal District Attorney Cleary Owen was advised late Wednesday by Assistant Attorney General Louis S. Moses.

No date has been set for the election, but the commissioners court will likely set the date at that time, which must be within 30 days and not less than 10 days from the time of the order.

Moses reply to Owen's query was as follows:

Your letter of March 18, 1936, addressed to the Hon. William McCraw, attorney general, has been referred to the writer for attention. In said letter you request an opinion upon the following:

"For the benefit of the county judges and the commissioners court, in order that they may properly determine whether to order an election, please advise with reference to the following:

"Eastland county is in dry territory as to all alcoholic beverages. In the early part of this year said county as a whole voted against the legalizing the sale of various and malt liquors that do not contain alcohol in excess of 4 per cent by weight.

"Assuming that a proper petition is presented to the said commissioners court as provided by Section 32 of the 1935 acts pertaining to intoxicating liquors, would it now be legal for said commissioners court to order an election, and for such election purposes there to be held in this county an election on the question of legalizing the sale of various and malt liquors that do not contain alcohol in excess of 4 per cent by weight.

"Please base your opinion on the assumption that said election, if held to be legal, is contemplated as a county-wide election."

"I refer you to section 32 of Article 1 of the Texas Liquor Control Act, wherein it is provided as follows:

"* * * After the first local option election held as provided in this Act, in any county, justice precinct, incorporated town, or city, no subsequent election upon the same issue as the state political subdivision shall be held within one (1) year from the date of the preceding local option election in said county or said political subdivision of said county."

You are, therefore, advised that in my opinion it is now legal to submit the issue of legalizing the sale of various and malt liquors that do not contain alcohol in excess of 4 per cent by weight as the only previous question submitted was that of legalizing the sale of 4 per cent beer.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) LEON O. MOSES,
Assistant Attorney General.

AS A TEXAN—WHAT WOULD YOU SAY?

THIS PICTURE TELLS THE STORY of the defense of the Alamo, one hundred years ago. On March 3, 1836, 181 poorly-armed Texas patriots prepared to face certain defeat against another attack of the Mexican forces, 3,800 strong. The brave Texas commander, Colonel William B. Travis, drew a line on the ground, in front of his soldiers, with his sword. He asked every man who wished to remain and die fighting like a hero to step across the line. As a Texas soldier, what would you have replied? See the sketch to the right.
