THREE POWERS MEET SOON TO MAKE PLANS

LONDON, April 3—(U.P.)—Members of the British, French, and Belgian general staff will meet here on to plan joint-defense action in event of an unprovoked attack against France or Belgium. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, announced today in the House of Commons. In consenting to the meeting, Britain is fulfilling an obligation under the Locarno Powers, now pledges itself specifically to France and Belgium if Germany attacks without just reason until a plan of European peace consolidation can be effected. The government determined to go ahead with the meeting despite German protest. A joint defense plan for air, sea, and land action to be worked out.

Britain made reservation in arranging for the meeting that no political aspect arise and dispatches shall consider only technical military matters given on a program drawn up in advance and approved by the cabinet. The conference will proceed coincidentally with negotiations between Great Britain and Germany for formula on whose basis the powers may proceed to negotiate a plan for a long range peace consolidation.

Honor For Lady Who Nears Century Mark

Preparations are being made by Mrs. J. A. Jensen to celebrate the ninetieth birthday of her mother, Mrs. M. J. Howard, Sunday. Mrs. Howard is 90 years of age today, but the celebrations will take place Sunday when relatives and friends will assemble and do the grand old lady the honor best fitting one who falls just ten years short of the century mark.

ENDEAVOR TO PROVE OTHERS SLAYED VICTIM

The theory that H. L. McBee did not die at his home and Raymond Henry was not the slayer as charged by the state in the "hanging skeleton" trial at Eastland was further developed by defense counsel Friday.

Proceedings in the case were enlivened by a brief encounter between a state and defense witness outside the courtroom. M. E. "Sandy" Tyler and Dick Brown, a defense witness, were separated by A. D. McFarlane in the court hall after an exchange of blows, the latter reported.

Oscar White of near Rising Star testified to a jury, over the protest of the prosecution, of events in front of his home May 1, 1933, the night of which the state contends and witnesses have testified Raymond Henry declared he inflicted stab wounds fatal to McBee.

Hearing a commotion, White testified he saw a car about 70 yards from his home which was 70 yards from the road. "I went out on the porch and heard a baby crying and a woman's voice." The jury was withdrawn from the courtroom but later returned after the state lodged an objection.

White heard the baby's cry as he stepped from his home, he testified. A man's voice was heard in protest of the baby's cry and later was quiet after the woman addressed the person whom White indicated was her husband. "You're a hell of a daddy," White quoted the woman as protesting to her husband.

Three men surged out before the lights. White stated one man said, "you have wrecked my home." White stated he heard "moans and licks" and the car drove on. One person cried out to the departing group: "I never will be out with you again," White quoted the man.

"You stuck that knife in me two times," the man left behind muttered to himself as he recled along the road, White said he overheard the man as he stood on his porch. The car came back and picked up the man who exclaimed he was knifed. "Shut your mouth and we'll get some whiskey before we get to town," the injured man was told, White testified.

White said in his best judgment he recognized one of the voices at a later date as that of M. E. "Sandy" Tyler, whom the defense has by implication made accusation in the case. This further developed the defense's theory that McBee left his home early Monday morning, obtained whiskey and was killed by another party than whom is charged by the state. The fight related by White was testified as occurring about 9:30 p. m. Monday, May 1, 1933.

England Honors Dead Sea Hero

England paid an impressive farewell to her beloved sea hero, Admiral Earl Beatty, as pictured above, when thousands of Londoners lined the streets and watched, bowed by sorrow, as the funeral procession passed under Admiralty Arch, shown in background, and through Trafalgar Square on its way to St. Paul's cathedral. Two royal dukes—York and Kent—walked behind the coffin after the hero of the Battle of Jutland was honored by a picturesque Horse Guards parade.

Women Organize Over Thirty Club To Compete For Jobs With Girls

LONDON, April 3—(U.P.)—Several hundred "discarded" women who find themselves too old at 30 to compete for a livelihood with young girls of more alluring look and figures have banded together in the Over Thirty Association.

The organization, which will wage a crusade to educate employers on the advantages of experience, has the backing of the London Council for Voluntary Occupation. During Unemployment, "women who describe their plight as 'urgent and dire,' are the victims of the post-war period when Britain's sacrifice of a million on the battlefield left thousands of attractive women with scant hopes of marriage.

Now, they admit, they are older and romance has passed them by. The modern business world puts accent on youth to such an extent, leaders of the Over Thirty Association explained, that many women find themselves too old even at 25. They read advertisements for sales people, models, chorus girls, clerks and beauty operators stipulating "under 25."

"It's a bit grim," said Miss Cecile Matheson of the International Council of Women, "when you remember that great artists and writers have said that woman's real beauty isn't attained until she reaches 30."

Miss A. G. Rees, manager of an employment exchange, said growing old for the majority of women workers is a frightening thing. "I have watched too often the smart woman go gradually downhill, physically and mentally," she said. "Worry and anxiety alter her facial expression and her chances of competing with younger women, in spite of her better qualifications and wider experience, are made more difficult."

EXECUTION OF BRUNO MAY BE TONIGHT

TRENTON, N. J., April 3—(U.P.)—Attorney General David Wilentz today informed the warden of the state prison that Bruno Richard Hauptmann must be executed tonight unless the Governor grants a reprieve. The attorney general said that he informed the governor that he was without authority to grant a reprieve. He told the head keeper, Kimberling, "if an order of reprieve is served upon you by the chief executive it is your duty to obey it."

STATE PRISON, TRENTON, N. J., April 3—(U.P.)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was in tears this afternoon as he prepared himself to die in the electric chair at 8 p. m. tonight.

TRENTON, N. J., April 3—(U.P.)—The electric chair was made ready for Bruno Richard Hauptmann again today. Colonel Mark Kimberling, head keeper of the New Jersey state prison, announced as far as he was concerned the Lindbergh baby killer would be put to death tonight.

Hauptmann's reserve of good luck began running low at midnight when the grand jury recessed without taking any action in the case of Wendel which had caused Kimberling to postpone Hauptmann's death before. Allyn Freeman, foreman of the jury, told Kimberling this morning that the grand jury had no reason for asking further delay.

Kimberling then went to Erwin Marshall, prosecutor of Mercer county, after talking with him for an hour, the head keeper announced he would go ahead with plans for the execution tonight, but would check with Attorney General David Wilentz.

Although Wilentz is this state's highest legal authority, his work alone may not be enough to send Hauptmann to the chair. Wilentz, and Governor Hoffman are bitter political enemies. The governor may again eject himself into the case at the last minute. Observers believed that in event of a disagreement Kimberling would follow Hoffman's instructions against Wilentz.

C. Loyd Fisher, counsel for Hauptmann, today sent to supreme justice court demanding submission of the Wendel case to Hunterdon county grand jury. It was a last desperate move to save the condemned man.

Vera Stretz Case Goes to Jury Today

NEW YORK, April 3—(U.P.)—The trial of blond Vera Stretz for murder of Dr. Fritz Gebhardt goes to jury this afternoon. Lawyers completed their summations last night and Judge Cornelius Collins announced he would complete charge by 2 p. m.

Prosecutor Miles O'Brien did not ask the jury to consider a death penalty and did not argue he had proved a case of first degree murder.

A Backpat for Italy From France

Strikingly illustrative of the attitude of France toward Italy in the Rhineland crisis is this picture—a pat on the back for Signor Dino Grandi from M. Pierre-Etienne Flandin, the Italian ambassador to London and the French foreign minister are shown as they proceeded to a meeting of the league council in St. James palace.

FLOOD MENACE AND COLD ADD TO DISCOMFORT --- 40 KNOWN DEAD

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press) The state was visited by heavy winds. A flood menace and a cold wave were added to the weather discomfort of the southeast, which counted 40 dead from tornadoes and electrical storms in five states. Tennessee was the sixth southern state brought into the weather picture as the river rose rapidly. A sudden drop of temperature occurred after the storm.

Georgia counted 25 storm dead, 18 at Cordele and seven in other sections of the state. Other deaths in the south were 12 at Greensboro, N. C., from tornado; one in Alabama from a tornado, one killed by high wind in South Carolina, and one struck by lightning in Florida as the northwest section of the state was visited by heavy winds.

The body of Bufford (Jack) Tarver, 26, Cisco, was found by Justice Joe Wilson and police officers Pierce and Hendrix, last night at a few minutes past eleven o'clock, about 400 yards north of the dam on highway 23, when they arrived after being notified of the killing, by two Nimrod men, who had been with Tarver earlier in the evening. They had heard shots, aimed at themselves, they thought, and had fled pursued by a car.

Justice Wilson and police officers were notified by Quinville Ingram and Herman Noigrass, who lived near Nimrod, that a man had been shot beyond Lake Cisco and that they had fled to town to get parts for their car after being pursued by parties who had shot at them. They came to town to get parts for their distributor which had been tampered with they said, while the cars of Tarver and themselves had been parked on the Canyon road, which branches off from highway 23 beyond the lake.

When they returned to their cars last night, they found that the distributor of Harver's car had been tampered with, they stated. Ingram and Noigrass came in their car to town to secure parts for Tarver. After returning and fixing the car, Tarver told the other men to drive on that his car was firing all right now, and that he would follow.

When arriving near the highway, a car was said to have dashed out and parties began firing at them. Ingram and Noigrass fled, being pursued for a short distance. Losing their pursuers, they came to town and took officers back to the scene.

The body of Tarver was found about 10 feet behind his car which was still running, with a bruise on his head and a bullet entering his breast and lodging in his back. The bullet was secured by Justice Wilson, who has charge of the body, pending an inquest verdict. Meanwhile two men from Ibeex, Stephens and Mason, who had stopped when they found the body in the road, were present. The body was still warm and was thought to have been killed about 10:30.

Tarver lived at 512 West Ninth street, Cisco, and is survived by his wife and two small children. His father's family also reside south of Cisco.

No arrest have yet been made, but questioning of several parties is in progress.

The body of Bufford Tarver is held at Green's Funeral Home, pending funeral arrangements.

Hauptmann and His Extraordinary Career

Bruno Richard Hauptmann was arrested for the murder of the Lindbergh babe. He protested his innocence. He was indicted by a New Jersey grand jury. He was sent to trial. His sympathizers subscribed thousands for his defense. He had brilliant lawyers to defend him. One of the veteran judges of New Jersey presided, and the able attorney general and his assistants prosecuted the case. There was a unanimous verdict of guilty as charged. There was an appeal to the court of last resort of New Jersey. Eminent jurists reviewed the evidence. That New Jersey court of last resort sustained the trial court and the verdict of guilty. Then an appeal was taken to the supreme court of the United States. The verdict was sustained and thus it had passed from the jurors in the box in New Jersey to the court of last resort in this republic. Then Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, after the death sentence had been ordered granted a reprieve. His campaign for Hauptmann to discover new evidence and if possible to find loop holes for the escape of the condemned is familiar to all readers of newspapers in the civilized world. Then it was the board of pardons reviewed all the evidence in the case. Again the decision was that Hauptmann had been given a fair trial and that all the evidence pointed to his guilt and that he must face the electric chair. At the last moment, almost, the warden saves him and now unless some miracle happens, he dies tonight. But his lawyers have succeeded in causing a doubt in the minds of thousands, who here-to-fore had made up their minds as to his guilt. Truly, a remarkable case.

Flood and Depression Have Like Problems

As if the administration's relief program didn't produce enough headaches already, widespread floods have added some 400,000 men and women to the list of unemployed. Much of this unemployment doubtless will be temporary. As the waters go down, and harassed factory managers get the mud wiped off the gears and the stray hen-coops fished out of the production lines, most of these 400,000 will be going back to work.

But for the moment an already had unemployment situation has been made a great deal worse, and the victims of the flood can line up with those of the depression.

Now you can argue that both sets of unemployed are on absolutely the same footing; that both were detached from their jobs by overwhelming natural forces which organized society has no chance of holding in check.

There isn't a great deal that can be done about a flood, for instance. When the snow lies banked deep in the mountains, piled up in huge drifts along every watershed, waiting to be touched off by the spring rains so that every little creek becomes a miniature Mississippi—when that happens, there is going to be a flood somewhere and about all we can do is to hold our breath, get some rowboats ready and hope that things won't be too bad.

Similarly, the creeping paralysis of an industrial depression seems to be something that we don't know how to check. We can see it coming, just as we can see the flood coming. Things begin to pile up around the headwaters of our industrial system—goods are produced a little faster than we can digest them, prices rise out of all proportion to earnings, productive capacity is banked up beyond the capacity of our ordinary channels to accommodate it.

And then, presently, we have a depression. Like the flood, it finds us utterly unable to erect an effective barrier. It inundates thriving industries, produces the same sort of stagnation brought on by high waters, and washes men by the thousands out of their jobs and their homes.

When a flood strikes, we never doubt that it is the duty of society as a whole to care for the victims and to do everything that may be done to get the wheels turning normally again. And we are beginning to learn that the same thing is true with regard to a depression. But we had to take a fearful beating to learn it.

The parallel goes even further. Our engineers tell us that we could do much, on a long-range program, to prevent floods—by erosion control, by reforestation, by the construction of dams and reservoirs and so on. Isn't the same true of depressions? Can't we, by the proper preparations in advance, keep them from being the uncontrolled curse they are now?

What has become of all the can of malt that was used "for making bread" that we use to see in the grocery stores before the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment? Wonder if people have quit "making bread".

Some fellow hit upon the bright idea of having the governor of Texas find a wife for him. That's fine, but let's hope some other fellow doesn't hit upon the idea of trying to have the governor get rid of his wife.

We may be mistaken, but it is our presumption that the weather man has gone on a vacation and the kids are fooling with the business.

Traffic expert says that dancers are the best auto drivers. Well, we presume that those who can't dance make the pedestrian do so.

If all the skyscrapers in New York were laid end to end—it wouldn't have been a bad idea during that elevator strike.

One reason they call it "Scotch whiskey" is that a fellow gets tight on it.

Who Will Investigate the Investigators?

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, April 3.—(UP)—Death of Governor James V. Allred's sister plus eight other fatal traffic accidents in one week-end had repercussions throughout the state capital.

From L. G. Phares, director of the state safety department, went a terse warning to patrolmen and rangers—"safety or else!" Phares accompanied his order with a statement that mollycoddling of auto law violators must stop. He recommended maximum sentences, the "else" in this case being stiff fines and jail sentences.

Among other things the patrol chief pointed out were:

The speed limit on passenger autos is 45 miles an hour outside towns and 25 miles per hour inside towns—regardless of size. Trucks carrying 6,000 pounds or more must not go over 25 miles per hour even on highways and those of less capacity may travel 40 miles an hour.

The stateboard of health passed a resolution condemning the number of traffic fatalities in Texas. Last year fatal accidents in this state increased 15 per cent, while the nation as a whole showed a one per cent decrease.

The increase was attributed largely to trucks without tailights, without horns with defective headlights, brakes and steering apparatus. The health board recommended an educational program to reduce accidents and urged stricter enforcement of laws by local officers. Ministers and welfare agencies were asked to devote one day of "State Health Week" to spread information on how to decrease auto and truck wrecks.

A special committee was appointed to study the methods employed in New Hampshire, where fatalities declined sharply.

Attorney General William McCraw and Texas railroad commissioners also commented on motor laws following the death of Mrs. Hazel Allred Stokes, Jr., at Mineola.

McCraw informed anxious East Texans that there was no law to prevent truck drivers from working as long as they choose. Contracts carriers are limited to 14 hours continuous employment and may not drive for eight hours.

Mark Marshall, chief of the railroad commission's motorbus division, reiterated McCraw's statement. The railroad commission can deal only with trucks hauling for hire. Application of the 14-hour law to all commercial vehicles was suggested as a remedy.

The railroad commission itself pointed out that several key highways had been closed to further contract truck and bus travel. These were restricted on evidence that traffic was as great as the commensurate with safety for travelers.

Members of the state liquor control board were started this week to learn that one of their inspectors had gone into the bootlegging business. Investigation showed, however, that the agent had only been loose in his dictum.

An anonymous inspector had written the board, "Have spent considerable time working with the sheriff on bootlegging propositions."

Governor Allred is rapidly setting a record for nationwide radio speeches by a Texas official.

His mark during the first 14 months was three speeches that went into all 48 states. A fourth is scheduled April 21 when Texans gather at San Jacinto battlefield for Centennial exercises.

To date he has spoken twice from Houston on national networks. Once he shared the time with Gov. Phillip La Follette of Tennessee and Hill McAlister of Wisconsin and the two came to Texas for the Independence Day ceremonies. The other time, the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce presented Allred as "the outstanding young man of 1935."

The third speech—probably to the largest audience—came at half-time of the Stanford University-Southern Methodist University Rose Bowl football game, New Year's day, when Allred took time to admire California weather and invite the world to the Texas Centennial.

Texas map-makers are getting plenty to do these days. The most interesting one is that released for Centennial year by the state highway department, but many others have been prepared both for the Centennial and other purposes. The state planning board recently completed a series of maps showing the growth of Texas during each decade from 1840 to the present. The shift in population will be shown.

The planning board, assisted by Dr. W. P. Maroney of the Baylor university sociology staff, has prepared a brief history of the state to give a background for planning improvements.

The highway department, incidentally, was very pleased over their new map, both from the standpoint of response and because it is entirely "made in Texas." The state map was reduced to pocket size by a Houston map-making company after a New York company had produced a small scale map that did not prove satisfactory.

Skeleton Case---

The 12-year-old daughter and 11-year-old son of H. L. McBee for whose alleged murder Raymond Henry, 25, is on trial at Eastland told jurors the last time they saw their father was Thursday afternoon.

His voice barely audible, Billy Ray McBee was transferred from the witness stand to a stand in position in front of the jurors at Judge B. W. Patterson was in for the group experienced difficulty in hearing the youthful witness.

"That Monday morning when I went down the railroad track," his the witness' answer to the question of Defense Counsel L. H. Farr, "I saw my father."

Billy Ray declared his father home all-day Sunday and his appearance was Monday morning, May 1, 1933, the date which state attorney Henry inflected as the date of the murder.

He testified T. R. Crosswhite, Henry was at the McBee residence early Monday morning before the family had risen. They were bed. Billy Ray told jurors. He no hard words were exchanged between his father and Henry.

Crosswhite has testified he was at the residence when he observed Henry and Mrs. McBee displaying affection behind her husband's bed. The deceased's son stated Crosswhite and Henry left at the same time. Crosswhite testified to the state he waited outside for Henry and later his helper ran from the McBee residence with an ice pick in his hand, his eyes "kind of glassy."

The young witness corroborated testimony of Raymond Brookshire, asphalt gang foreman at Rising Star for the highway department in 1933, when he said Brookshire came to the McBee residence May 1, 1933 and his father signed a paper on the fender of Brookshire's automobile.

While at the McBee residence, Crosswhite obtained a "rheumatism belt," Billy Ray testified. He said his mother handed Crosswhite the belt. While Mrs. McBee dressed in another room of the house, Crosswhite and Henry stood outside. Billy Ray answered Special Prosecutor Allen D. Dabney.

The family ate breakfast as usual that morning, the witness continued. He said after the father left that morning his mother directed him to inquire if any town residents had seen McBee. None had seen his father, Billy Ray said he told Mrs. McBee after making inquiries.

One of the persons whom Billy Ray asked about the location of McBee was Raymond Henry, the former testified. "He said he hadn't seen him."

After making the inquiries the lad was sent with his sister Geneva to M. E. "Sandy" Tyler's residence. Nature of a note by Mrs. McBee which the lad delivered to Tyler was not disclosed.

After the Tyler residence visit, the young witness said he went with his sister to Lynn Smith's house. Roy Smith, a brother of the man who is now charged as an accessory in the case, took them home to their mother in Lynn's automobile. Billy Ray continued.

Henry did not visit his mother on the day of McBee's disappearance. Billy Ray answered for the state.

Corroborating testimony of her brother, Geneva said the last time she saw her father was Saturday preceding the date of his disappearance.

Asked why she did not tell information she told jurors to officers at the time of her father's disappearance, Geneva stated she "didn't know for sure he left."

Alice Smith, wife of Lynn and a former resident with her husband at Rising Star, now of Coryell county, stated he was at home Monday on the date of disappearance of McBee. Asked why she remembered the date, Mrs. Smith testified she recalled her husband and Jack Smith were "out all night Sunday."

(Jack Smith, charged with murder in the McBee death, was adjudged a suicide after his body with the throat slit, was found in the county jail recently.)

Mrs. Smith testified she is suing her husband for divorce and had been "trying to live with him since 1923."

Testimony of several state witnesses in discord with that of Mrs. Smith. The state witnesses have sworn Jack and Lynn Smith were at McBee's residence Monday night, waiting with Henry for the highway worker to die, testified as 10 p. m., and that afterward they with Pete Fenwick and Tyler buried the man in a shallow grave early Tuesday, May 2, 1933.

The defense attempted to discredit reputation of state witnesses Tyler, Crosswhite and Fenwick when many old-time Rising Star residents said the trio were held in ill-repute and Henry was regarded high in his community as a "peaceful and law abiding citizen."

Character witnesses for Henry included: Sterling White, Rising Star; A. H. Morris, Rising Star; farmer-carpenter; E. F. Bucy, Rising Star road contractor; W. A. Williams, Rising Star; Tom Montgomery, Rising Star; B. M. Carrell, Rising Star farmer; Jess Parker, Andrews county ranch worker, former Rising Star resident; D. A. Zellers, Rising Star carpenter; S. J. White, Rising Star assistant postmaster; T. E. Bowers, Rising Star grocerman, and H. J. Whitehead, Rising Star.

Attorneys argued long over admissibility of testimony by Brown County Deputy Sheriff Ivan Ellis, whom Fiewellen attempted to elicit information on recovery of an abandoned automobile purportedly owned by Lynn Smith, which the

KAY FRANCIS AT THE TEXAS IN HER GREATEST ROLE

Showing at the Texas today and Saturday is Tim McCoy in the "Outlaw Deputy." On the same program is "Rustlers of Red Dog" with John Mack Brown, a story of the west as it was. Coming to the Texas Sunday is Kay Francis' latest picture "I Found Stella Parish." She rises above all her other triumphs of the past, never before have you seen her so lovely and oh, girls, how you'll go for Ian and Paul her two new love boys. Not to mention that latest five year old bundle of cleverness, Sybil Jason. Kay learns from three men how to be to a woman. Ladies, to see the latest in evening wear, the luxurious velvets. Kay says, "Metallic-threaded crepes are tops for afternoon and even at home. The newest and loveliest negligees and lounging robes are being made of metallic cloth." This latter use of metal is one of its most practical as well as flattering interpretations. For despite its luxurious appearance, its apparent fragility, lame is in reality one of our sturdiest fabrics. The woman of today has come to have a greater appreciation of her home than ever before. Miss Francis explains perhaps it is because more women have gone into business, as a result they have learned to prize their hours of leisure and relaxation. And in order to find the greatest enjoyment from their hours of rest, women have needed a costume that would be more formal than a negligee or hostess gown. Such a frock Kay wears in "I Found Stella Parish."

BEHOLD HERE TODAY TOBY RYAN, is a commercial model, posing for photographs to be used in advertisements. She shares an apartment with HARRIET HOLM, also a model. At a studio she shows Toby some wealthy TIM JAMIESON who showers her with attentions for a time. Tim says to her, "a few days," promising to call Toby as soon as he returns. The door strikes out and he comes from him. BILL HIRSH, an old friend of Toby's, asks her to go to dinner but she refuses, preferring to stay at home waiting to hear from Tim.

CHAPTER XXI
THERE was no time next day for Toby to sit at home waiting for messages from Tim Jamieson. At 2:30 a call came from the Model's League. Marty Hiatt wanted Toby to pose for some magazine illustrations and the job was to be "on location."

Toby knew what that meant—making pictures outside the studio some place where the background and surroundings were exactly what they were supposed to be instead of studio props. "You're to be at Hiatt's studio at 11 o'clock," Sally told her. "Yes." "You'll need a thin summer dress—not an evening dress the sort you might put on on a summer afternoon if you wanted to be a little bit dressed up. It should have a neckline something sort of frilly. The color doesn't matter, so long as it's light. Have you anything like that?"

"I'll see it," Toby promised. "White shoes and light hose, of course. Then you'll need a sweater that will photograph dark and a light skirt. That's all. Remember you're to be at the studio at 11."

Toby said she'd remember and put down the telephone. "I've got to have a frilly summer dress," she told Harriet. "Where on earth do you suppose I can find one?" "How about my flowered organdie?" Toby shook her head. "No, it isn't supposed to be an evening dress. It's to wear in the afternoon. I've got to buy something. I guess, but where can I find a dress like that at this time?"

It was the last week in March—too early for new summer dresses in the shops, months since the last from the year before had disappeared. "That's the way," Harriet crumpled. "They always want summer clothes in winter and winter ones in summer." Toby dressed hurriedly and set off on her shopping trip. She went to four stores before she found a dress that was summery-looking, with short sleeves and frills at the neck. It was in the "home frocks" department—too big but it could be pinned over in the back. The dress was crisp and fresh and in a photograph it would look like a delicate voile or organdie. But the shopping had taken time. Toby, glancing at a clock on a building across the street, saw that she had less than an hour to get back to the apartment, press the new dress, pack it with the other things she must take, and reach the studio.

"Going to give you a boat ride today. How'd you think you'd like that?" He led her to where a young man and an older woman were standing. "Mrs. Gregg," Hiatt said, "this is Toby Ryan. Toby—Dick Alper. You three make up the company today. We'll be ready to leave as soon as Frazier shows up." Frazier looked, was the art editor of the magazine for which the photographs were being made. They were to illustrate a short story that would appear monthly. Toby was to be the heroine and Dick Alper the hero. Mrs. Gregg was to be Toby's mother. "Where are we going?" the girl asked.

"Out on Long Island. There's a house there, belonging to some friend of Frazier's, and a bay where we can get the shot of you and Alper in the boat. How about wardrobes? Have you all got everything you were to bring?" The suitcases were opened and the costumes checked. While they were doing this Dwight Frazier arrived. He was a short, square-faced individual who spoke in a slow, low-pitched voice. He looked at the costumes, said they would do.

Presently they set off in Hiatt's car—Hiatt and Frazier in front, Toby with Alper and Mrs. Gregg behind. Toby liked Mrs. Gregg at once. The older woman was pleasant and friendly. She asked Toby about her work and seemed interested in the answers. Alper told them he was studying art. The year before he'd had a job as a commercial artist, he said but had discovered he could earn more and make better use of his time modeling. His wife was in the chorus of a musical show. "Some day," he said, "she's going to be a real actress."

ALPER told them about the "real break" he had had a few months before when he and a dozen other models had boarded a cruise ship for a week's trip to the West Indies, enjoying the deck sports and swimming pool sunning themselves by day and dancing by night. Camera men had been making pictures meanwhile to use in cruise advertising, but the models enjoyed themselves and were paid for their work.

It was after one o'clock when they reached the "location." The house set apart from those about it was on the edge of the bay. It looked like an old-fashioned farmhouse which Frazier told them was what the story called for. They left the car and went up to the house. "We'll take the porch shot first," Hiatt announced. This was to be a picture of Toby and Mrs. Gregg. The two went into the house and a servant showed them the room they were to use for dressing. Toby slipped on her sweater and white skirt and Mrs. Gregg put on a simple cotton frock. She put on spectacles changed the outline of her hair and Toby was amazed at the transformation. Then they went out to the porch and Frazier explained the pose. Mrs. Gregg sat in a low, old-fashioned chair and Toby on the step below. Frazier was exacting and the scene, though it was simple enough, had to be rehearsed and tried from several angles. At last Frazier was satisfied and the camera clicked.

"And now for the boat ride!" exclaimed Hiatt. Toby went into the house again and put on the ruffled summer dress. She came back huddled in her coat and found Alper, coatless and in white dannels. They walked to the rear of the house where the others were waiting. There was a private boat landing and, securely fastened, a rowboat bobbed on the rippling surface of the water.

"Get in," the photographer instructed, "and push off a little way." Toby dropped her coat and sat down in the boat. The wind over the water was raw and sharp. Alper pulled on the oars and the boat moved away from the landing. Toby leaned back against a cushion, tried to smile. She had been told to drop one hand into the water or raise it carelessly. She did and almost screamed. The water was like ice.

FROM the bank Hiatt shouted, shaking his head that something was wrong. Alper headed the boat back and they tried it over again. They tried it a third time and then a fourth. Toby was chilled to the bone by this time and the hand she dropped into the water felt numb. "Come back," Hiatt called. "Get out and put your coats on for a while. Then we'll try it again." Toby said climbing up on the landing. "How can you take my picture when I'm s-s-shivering like this?" "We'll get it," Hiatt assured her. And they did. Twenty minutes later the pictures were finished and all of them were back in the house, drinking hot coffee and eating sandwiches.

Mrs. Gregg insisted Toby should toast her feet at the radiator and that Alper should sit beside her. "You two children," she said, "look half-frozen. It's dangerous to risk a cold at this time of year." She took Alper's coffee cup away to refill it. Toby looking after her said, "She's a dear, isn't she? Where in the world did Marty find her?" Alper looked surprised. "Why don't you know?" he asked. "That's Margaret Gregg."

He saw that she did not understand and went on. "Twenty years ago Margaret Gregg was one of the best known actresses in New York. She played leads in half a dozen Broadway shows. Then she got older and went into stock. Since—well, I guess she's had one bad break after another. Now and then she gets a little part in some play and she models whenever she gets the chance. Hiatt likes her, and so do most of the photographers. She's a real trouper!" Margaret Gregg came back with the coffee. "Here," she said, "drink this. You want to be thoroughly warm before we start back to the city." Toby looked up at her. Not all the lines in Margaret Gregg's face had come from age. But there was courage there, and something that spoke of sweetness as well as strength.

Toby thought, "She's seen suffering. She's known real trouble." Her own doubts and difficulties suddenly seemed less important. When she reached the apartment that night there was a letter lying on the table. It was addressed to Toby Ryan.

Texas Pioneer Patriots Choose Heroes' Death

JUST 100 years ago Texas pioneers, defenders of the Alamo, made the greatest back-to-the-wall stand of all time. Outnumbered by Mexican forces 3000 to 181, these hard-bitten frontiersmen chose certain death rather than the dishonor of surrender. Drawing his sword, Col. William B. Travis, their leader, drew a line on the ground. He asked all those who preferred to die fighting to step across the line. As all America knows, every man stepped forward. Even the wounded asked to be carried across. This etching portraying that dramatic moment is one of a series of nine done by the famous artist, Norman Price, for the sponsors of a $5000 prize contest dealing with Texas history now being conducted by the makers of Post cereals. Prizes will be awarded every week for the best answers to questions based on nine of the most important crises in the history of the Lone Star State. Giant reproductions of these historical etchings will be used later as wall panels in the Mr. Tower Doughnut Building at the Exposition in Dallas.

ARM SAGAS FOR RAIL MEN GAIN GLAMOR

HENRY D. RENWALD
Press Staff Correspondent

GO, April 3 — (UP)— In indhouses where grease-men work over puffing and in offices where
"clerk" employes scan books
a new saga of the iron is in the making.
made up of the stories men tell of the winter of crusted men who fought to a stalled Rock Island train between Des Moines and Des Moines, told this one:
and hungry passengers up and down the aisles of stalled between mountain-Winds swirled the snow
st car windows and burtrain deeper and deeper.
sides were exhausted.
Security Below Zero
asures hovered far below passengers didn't starve.
officer of the road butch-ing in a stalled freight car.
stalled car yielded grocer-imals were prepared as western train battled its Jackson, Wis., and could gether. One hundred passenembarked and spent the a hotel. They were freed but they had organized ound Club" and had drawn es agreeing to meet next year at the same place and date.

For days crews of the Illinois Central fought ice-crusts rails and drifts. Finally the trains were free to travel and a car of coal arrived in a little farming community where 400 residents had used the last of their fuel.

Conductor Lost 24 Hours
On the same line, a conductor left his stalled freight train and attempted to walk to the nearest station to report his trouble. He became lost and for 24 hours, while fellow workers feared him dead, he waited in an isolated farm house for release from the storm.

A giant passenger engine stalled in the drifts at Kellogg, Ia., and a crew was sent from Des Moines to dig it out. But the relief crew became stalled. So did a second and third. Four giant locomotives were helpless in the drifts, and a hand crew was forced to go to the rescue.

Equipment Scattered Widely
Four rotary plows, five ditchers, five Russell plows and 92 wedge plows were scattered throughout the middle west in the battle to keep the lines open.

"The Burlington", said Jackson H. Finn, "was blanketed with snow over virtually the entire system. It was a desperate struggle to move passengers, food and fuel. Fortunately, we had the man power, rotary snow plows and cars necessary to handle the traffic."

"The zephyrs (streamlined Diesels) gave a splendid account of themselves."

Frank Newell, of the Milwaukee road, told the United Press:
"Trains were coming down from Minneapolis to Milwaukee on time, and then losing from five to seven hours between Milwaukee to Cheago. We employed hundreds of men digging out stalled trains and aiding snow plows which could not penetrate the solidly frozen snow."

WIDOW SPIDER THRIVES

WILLOWS, Cal. — (UP)— Rev. C.
G. Roberts caught a Black Widow spider last August and put it in a bottle for safety. Then he forgot about it. Recently he found the bottle again, with the Black Widow still hale and hearty, although apparently having had no food for seven months.

ANCIENT SKELETON FOUND

LES EYZIES, France — (UP)— A human skeleton believed to date from the 11th to the 12th Century has been unearthed in the fields outside of Les Eyzies in the Dome department. The discovery dates back to the Stone Age and has been placed in the prehistoric museum of Les Eyzies.

Testimony of Fenwick and Tyler has been introduced by the state to show Lynn was present at the death of McBee and aided a group in the burial and exhumation.

Roy Smith, brother of Lynn and Jack, 40, also a defendant in the case who was adjudged a suicide after he slashed his throat in the county jail recently, stated he was at Rising Star May 1 and 2. He said his brothers were at home on those dates.

Roy asserted he took the McBee children to their mother after Lynn was requested to go to Tyler's home and carry Mrs. Tyler to Mrs. McBee who was ill. Smith said he took the children to their mother's home and remained there until Sunday. Pte Fenwick and Henry Clark, who the witness stated were at the McBee residence that afternoon, left before his departure, the witness testified.

He declared only that Mrs. McBee and her children were at home when he departed.

Mrs. McBee informed him "my husband went off this morning and didn't leave any groceries," the defense witness quoted the present Mrs. Henry.

Smith could not approximate number of times he has been indicted, after the state queried him.

Mrs. Beas Terrell, reporter for 51st district court, was on the stand for the defense and testified the following in regard to taking of statements from Pete Fenwick for Frank Sparks, attorney for Mrs. Henry, and Frank Judkins, attorney for Lynn Smith: (The witness stated this was Feb. 28, the day when a habeas corpus hearing was held for the Henrys.)

Fenwick said he did know who killed McBee.

That he denied knowledge of Henry telling him he killed McBee.

This was all in contrast to Fenwick's testimony for the state. The statements were not sworn to her, Mrs. Terrell testified.

Dick Brown, Rising Star public weigher, said Pete Fenwick told him once, "I don't ever see how they can ever pin anything on Raymond Henry as he is innocent as he can be."

Judkins and Sparks testified they had difficulty in talking to Fenwick until Judge George L. Davenport, instructed officers at a habeas corpus hearing that attorneys have legal rights to converse with witnesses, either on defense or prosecution.

Additional testimony will be found on page three
