Home in Ashes, Trudge 500 Miles

It's a long, long way to Little Rock, Ark.—500 miles in fact—from Red Oak, Ia., but this family, leaving its home in charred ruins, is making the best of the arduous trip. After a blaze had destroyed nearly all their possessions, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Berrick bundled into this makeshift cart their three children, Violet, 2; Roy, 5; and Baby Theodore, hidden by blankets, and started the long hike to the Little Rock home of Berrick's parents, sleeping at night by the roadside. They are pictured here near Hickman Mills, Mo.

Acquire The Habit of Letting Down

The tireless activity of the heart cannot fail to impress anyone who thinks about the subject. That marvelous little pumping engine throbs along hour after hour, day after day, year after year, sometimes for more than a century, and apparently without getting a moment's rest. Yet unless disease assails the heart it does not complain, and except under stress shows no fatigue.

How is it possible for human tissue to stand such a pace for so long without rest? But along comes scientists who declare the heart does rest—that between each beat it completely rests for a fraction of a second; and that if those fractions of seconds were added up for the twenty-four hours the heart would be shown to be taking quite a reasonable amount of relaxation each day.

The remarkable performance of the heart should open the eyes of every business person to the importance of making use of every opportunity to let down. The lower animals instinctively know the trick of conserving their energy. If an animal has something to do he does it; but when he is not about some sort of business he rests.

Watch your cat and see how at every opportunity she lets go. Go out for a walk with your dog; stop and look at the scenery; while you stand up and put a tax on your muscles to keep your body perpendicular, your dog sits down or lies down and perhaps rests his chin on his paws. Observe the horse; when he is not busy he eases into a state of repose, his head goes down, his body slumps.

The human being would do his work easier, he would last longer and he would feel better if he emulated his cat and his dog and his horse and his heart, and take advantage of every chance to relax. Just a moment's repose here and there throughout the day would prevent one's getting all tired out.

A man should have his office so equipped that he can utilize every moment to relax. There should be a couch on which he could drop down. His desk chair should be easy, it should fit, and have a back against which he could lean his head.

Economy is served by so arranging establishments as to minimize wear and tear on employees. The salesgirl who can sit down for a moment between customers keeps fresher and better natured and is more valuable to her employer than the girl who is forced to stand all day.

If the housewife would make a point of sitting or lying down for just a few moments at intervals throughout the day, she would get just as much done with less fatigue.

More relaxation is required to restore the tired body than to prevent the body from becoming tired.

Gulf Oil Corporation Building Studios

Nationally known radio stars will appear in these studios, now nearing completion on the grounds of the Texas Centennial Central Exposition at Dallas this summer and fall. Singers, comedians, operatic stars, famous orchestra leaders, stars known from one end of the country to the other, but stars who, up until now, have remained only "voices" to millions of Texans, will appear here in person and put on their air-shows free of charge in this big glass-front studio building. The radio studios, which are being built by Gulf Oil Corporation, are located in almost the exact center of the Exposition Grounds. From the patio or court in front of the U-shaped building, visitors to the Centennial will be able to see their favorites in action. Inasmuch as both of the big studios, the monitor rooms, and the central control room are in full view through plate glass, the audience in the patio will not only be able to hear the program as it goes out over the air but see how it is produced, enacted, and controlled. The Gulf Radio Studios, with their equipment and the "singing tower" radio installation being provided by this company for the amusement and entertainment of Exposition visitors at twenty other points on the grounds, constitute the most elaborate installation of its kind ever set up. Through the installation, it will be possible to have in production at one time twelve different programs, all of them under control from the control studios. An organization of thirty or thirty-five men and women will be required to operate the system. It will include a program director for radio, a program director for public address, production men, continuity writers, announcers and maintenance technicians. The studios will be staffed cooperatively by Gulf Oil Corporation and the Texas Centennial Central Ex-

You need good digestion to face the nervous strain of modern living!

1935 WORLD SERIES HERO, Goose Goslin, says: "A big-league ball player has to watch his digestion. Smoking Camels while I'm eating makes food taste better and helps stimulate digestion afterwards."

"I HAVE TO EAT in 30 minutes," says Harry Fisher, steel worker. "Smoking Camels helps my digestion, gives me a swell 'lift.' And they've got real flavor!"

Smoking Camels Assists Digestion and Promotes Well-Being

When people are tired, worried, or nervous, the flow of digestive fluids slows up.

Science now recognizes that smoking Camels has a favorable influence in increasing the flow of these digestive fluids. Thus, there are sound, definite reasons why Camels add to the enjoyment of your meals.

Camels are supremely mild—never get on the nerves or tire your taste. Enjoy Camels as much as you like... for their good cheer and "lift"... for their rare flavor! Camels set you right!

THE TERRACED MARINE DINING ROOM of the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago. Those who dine at leisure also appreciate Camels for their aid to digestion. "Good times and good tobacco go together," says Fred (left), maître d'hôtel. "So many of our guests smoke Camels. They are immensely popular."

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

FEEDS THOUSANDS daily. Miss Lenora Flinn, dietitian, says: "With me, it's always Camels! Smoking Camels stimulates digestion, causing increased flow of digestive fluids."

Gorgeous

BY LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
TOBY RYAN, 19, is a photographic model, posing for photographs to be used in advertisements. Unknown at first, she is chosen as "The Hillyer Soap Girl." Toby shares an apartment with HARRIET HOLM, another model, engaged to marry CLYDE SABIN, whom Toby distrusts.

Worthy TIM JAMIESON shows Toby with attention for a time and then seems to forget her. Toby's oldest friend is HILL BRANDT, advertising salesman. She is fond of Hill but has never thought of him romantically.

Clyde Sabin marries a wealthy widow and Harriet heart-broken, attempts suicide. She recovers and later goes to the country for a rest.

Toby goes to dinner with Hillyer and he tells her about his joyful marriage, his wife's death, and his recent discovery that he has a daughter.

agreed. "And what about your father?"
"ALL I know about him is that he was Aunt Gen's brother. My father and mother both died when I was so small I don't remember anything about them at all. I have a picture of my mother, though. It's in a locket."
"A picture?" Hillyer asked. From a pocket he took an old-fashioned, yellow gold watch and snapped the case open. He held it toward Toby.
"Was the picture," he said, "like this?"
"Why—why—!" She stared up at him. "That's my mother's picture," she exclaimed. "Where did you get it?"
Her hand lay on the table. Hillyer covered it with his own. "She gave it to me," he said gently. "Toby, my dear, your aunt evidently didn't want you to know the truth about your parents. She changed the story. Don't you understand what I've been trying all evening to tell you? You're the daughter I've found, Toby. You!"
"I'm—I'm your daughter?"
"Yes, Toby. I've had detectives at work for weeks—ever since I first suspected the truth. They've pieced together the whole story; all the legal documents are in my office. Toby, you said a while ago that you wouldn't mind having me for a father. Do you still mean it?"
She could not speak for a few moments. She was smiling, yet her eyes were filled with tears. "My father!" she said, almost in a whisper. "My own, real father—!"
Hillyer drew out a handkerchief and sneezed. His eyes, too, were suddenly suspiciously moist.
"And my Toby," he added.
"But how did you know? How did you ever find out? Oh, I want to know all about it—!"

SHE had to hear the whole story, then, from the beginning. And the beginning was the day weeks before when a dozen photographs were laid on Jay Hillyer's desk—photographs of models from whom the "Hillyer Soap Girl" was to be selected.

"It wasn't your photograph—not at first—that decided the question," he told her. "It was your name. I was curious about a girl whose name was my name. Jay T. Hillyer. The T is for Tobias and it was my grandfather's name. I was Toby as a boy and that is what your mother called me. Later when I went into business I thought Jay was more dignified so I took to using it instead. It's the name I've used for 20 years now."

"Your mother gave you my name, and it was that that led to my finding you. Your mother—and dear Mary—bringing us together, dear as all these years. You see, your aunt misled you when she said you were her brother's child. I suppose she did it because she thought, as she had said so often, that the annulled marriage was a disgrace. She didn't want any connection with the Hillyer name, so she called you Toby Ryan. Your mother's name was Mary Fern—Mary Fern Ryan. That was before I changed it to Mary Fern Hillyer. There's a record of your christening among the papers I've gotten together. I'll get them all out and show them to you in a day or so.

"Do you remember the afternoon I walked into Duryea's studio when you were posing for a photograph? You had on a blue dress with a long, full skirt and ruffles. You can't imagine the shock it gave me. Your mother wore a dress like that years ago. Oh, I suppose you would see differences, but the dress you wore looked to me exactly like your mother's. You looked amazingly like her."
"I asked you to have dinner with me that night. After I'd talked to you, I made up my mind that I had to know more about it. I had to find out who you were and where you came from."
"Next morning I got in touch with a private detective agency and put them to work. They pieced back the facts—but it took time. You see, trying to find your mother, I had no clues to work with, but tracing your story was simpler. After a while when you were able to put the two stories together, the jig-saw puzzle began to show a pattern."

"AND all this time," Toby said reproachfully, "you've known and never even given me a hint!"
"How could I until I was sure? That's why I went away on this trip. To establish the truth of the last link in the proof. I was able to do that."
Toby shook her head. "You can't know what it means to me," she said. "To have a father—a real father of my own after these years when I haven't had anyone!"
"Don't forget, Toby, that I'm finding out what it's like to have a daughter—after all these years when I've had nobody either. My parents are dead now. The breach that developed between us as a result of my broken marriage was never healed. I'm sorry to say, I've been alone for a long while, Toby."
She smiled and her eyes glistened mistily. "You asked what I thought of you as a father, didn't you? I hope that, as a daughter, you're going to find me acceptable."

"As a daughter," Hillyer told her, "you are everything in the world. I could hope for. As a daughter, Toby, you are eminently a success. In the last weeks I have come to know you better, I believe, than many a father who has lived in the same house with his daughter all her life."

Toby said, as she had before. "My own father—my own real father—!"
"We've missed a lot," Hillyer told her, "but we have a great deal ahead of us, too. We'll have to make plans together. I've made some of my own, but perhaps you can improve on them."
They talked for half an hour longer. Suddenly Toby said, "Father—look! Everyone else has gone. We're the only ones left!"
Hillyer glanced about the room. Except for themselves, the dining room was deserted. Wary-looking waiters were eying them from a distance. "So we are," Hillyer said. "Well, we'll have to fix that—!"
He dug into his pocket for a tip, then turned to Toby, beaming. "Do you know what you said?" he asked. "You called me 'Father.' I've been a father for 19 years and this is the first time I've ever been called that!"

Committee Renounces Home Arms Industry

WASHINGTON, April 20—(U.P.)—The senate munitions committee today renounced American private arms industry and asked the government to investigate the home multi-million dollar business of producing guns for warships and other armament for the United States army and navy.

Recommendation was made to the senate by majority vote of the committee in the first of several reports based on a two years scrutiny on international traffic in arms.

The committee rebuked American munitions manufacturers for corrupt methods of arms sales abroad, for opposing arms limitation for high profits and for a "very considerable threat to peace" throwing the "nation into continued frantic expenditure for devices of warfare."

SCHOOL MAN'S CAR STOLEN IN FRONT OF HOME

Both license plates belonging to the 1935 Chevrolet coach, taken from in front of the home of R. N. Cluck, superintendent of Cisco public schools, about 8:30 Saturday night, were found Sunday by officers where they had been thrown into a mud hole, near Scranton.

Mr. Cluck said he had company Saturday night and they chatted in the house for a while and when the company left the car was still standing in front of his residence, but when he went back later, the car had disappeared.

It was his custom, Mr. Cluck said, to take the key out of the lock and put it in the car pocket, but he is not sure whether as to where the car key was, but believes he followed out his general habits.

Last January a year ago, Mr. Cluck lost a similar car in a similar manner while parked in front of his residence. It was found later badly wrecked and abandoned. Police think this car will be hard to trace since the numbers have been changed.
