TORCH SETS FIRE TO NITE CLUB IN CALIF.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 13—(U.P.)—Four persons were killed and 11 injured early today when a flaming torch held in the hands of a night club dancer set fire to Shamrock night club. The dead were John Manson, 22, San Francisco; Robert Pattison, Berkeley; Elsie Forrest, 27, and Jo Luckerson, hat check girl at the night club. According to police reports the fire started when an unidentified patron seized the arm of Miss Flossom as she started her dance. To avoid his advance, she threw her arm upward and a blazing torch she carried ignited with the draperies on ceiling of the club. Most of the injured, police and hospital reported, were crushed in the flight of patrons down a narrow stairway from the second floor to the street.

WOOD EXPERT IN HAUPTMANN CASE LET OUT

WASHINGTON, May 13—(U.P.)—Public Works Administrator Sherill Eakin today discharged Archer Loney, government wood expert, who sought to save Bruno Hauptmann from the electric chair. This action, an official said, "has no connection with the Hauptmann case." He was dismissed, he explained, "without prejudice" because he "falsified federal forms he filled out when applying for a job." Loney, a bushy haired, rugged man, did not appear in the Lindbergh kidnaping case until Hauptmann had been sentenced to die. Then working with Governor Harold Hoffman he sought to prove that the kidnap ladder was not made from boards taken from Hauptmann's Bronx home. Loney entered the case with permission.

Lion Ladies Night Monday Laguna Roof

The Lion ladies night will be held Monday evening, May 18, on the Laguna roof garden, it was decided today at the Lions luncheon hour. At this meeting it was explained, Lion ladies will receive explanation of the program for lady visitors entertainment during the convention here June 16-17, so that they may enter into the planning for their entertainment.

"The Lions have talked about the entertainment, but the ladies have not been apprised of what is going on," said certain members in speaking of the matter. "We want them to know what is expected of them so that they may give their usual cooperation in making this an outstanding affair."

The junior chamber of commerce is sponsoring a letter which will go out this week to all lady Lions in this district telling them of what is in store for lady visitors to the June convention. Lion Charles Sandler reported that every living mother of Cisco Lions had received a letter from the club concerning her son. This is an annual custom formed by the Cisco club three years ago. There will be no regular Wednesday meeting next week.

A Glimpse Into the Life, Habits of Justice Department's Head

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the first of two articles portraying the little-known life and exploits of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, who climaxed a ruthless drive for extermination of the kidnap racket with a thrilling series of personally-directed raids last week.)

By RUSSELL TURNER

WASHINGTON, May 13—(U.P.)—Pick a small boy these days and ask him who, of all people in the world, he wants to be like and 10 to 1 he will reply: "J. Edgar Hoover." Hoover's name today probably is one of the best-known in the country. The reason for this is as any small boy can tell you, his spectacular raids which netted three of the nation's four remaining criminals in the public enemy class. Thus the names of Karpis, Campbell and Mahan have been added to the list of bad-men who have fallen before the weapon of scientific crime detection coupled with fearlessness. John Dillinger, Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, George (Machine Gun) Kelly and a host of others had gone before, each of them a victim of J. Edgar Hoover. Despite the fame that his accomplishments have brought, only a handful of people knew anything about him beyond the fact that he heads the justice department's Bureau of Investigation. His name probably has made more headlines than any other except President Roosevelt, but those who know he is a stamp and antique collector, that he is a baseball fan and an expert fisherman, could be assembled in a small drawing room. On the first meeting this man who directs the hard-hitting, far-flung "G-men," has one characteristic that stands out above all others in his efficient manner. A youthful, efficient business executive? Yes. A detective—a man who gun-shoots around chasing criminals? Never. Hoover is of medium height, inclined to stoutness, sharp-featured with coal-black, curly hair. He speaks with snap, clipped staccato phrases. He dresses like a magazine fashion-plate. The boss G-man is one of that rarest of species—a native Washingtonian. He was born here Jan. 1, 1895, attended Washington public schools and was graduated from Washington's red-brick Central high school in 1913. He got his first job as a clerk in the congressional library. One of the most rigid requirements which Hoover has set up for men aspiring to join the Bureau of Investigation as special agents is that they must be lawyers. Many people wonder why a man must be a lawyer to be a detective. Hoover cites the answer from his own experience. He gives credit for many of his innovations in the bureau to efficient business executives? Yes. A detective—a man who gun-

Fewer Needy Aged

Old-age pension officials have been surprised to find considerably fewer applications filed than population estimates had forecast.

Originally, it was estimated there would be from 200,000 to 220,000 applicants for the pension. In the early rush for application forms, evidence was the number would run still higher.

But, with the law in operation 90 days, there have been roughly about 150,000 requests made for old-age assistance. The final number of pensioners will run below the original 80,000 estimate, and much below recent preliminary estimates which runs as high as 110,000.

The pension administration is giving attention to all the cases of aged persons on relief, and working through 2000 applications a day. From the list of those on relief, 90 per cent of the applicants are found eligible for pension; but from others, the percentage is very much smaller.

The economic plight of the aged in general is bad enough; but it seems they are not as badly off on the whole as the depression period had indicated.

Rangers, Sheriffs and Politics

The recurrent row over the public safety department proves one mistake at least was made when the department was created.

There should have been a state police, retaining neither the highway patrol nor the ranger service as separate agencies. Any of the trained officers who could qualify should have been eligible to the new service. Certainly, a phase of the service would have been similar to the patrol.

But the legislature tried to placate the rangers' friends, and the patrol's partisans. The result was, inherently conflicting entities were harnessed together, and discord has been the obvious result.

The quarrel may be quieted; but the source of the strife will not be removed until the legislature puts all the state police into one organization.

Mopping Racketeers

The state has been dealing firmly with two types of racketeers, to assure its citizens that when a public-service agency flaunts the fact of state supervision, such fact shall not be permitted to be used as a label of respectability to cover wrongful or fraudulent operation.

Its drive has been against the sellers of stocks and bonds, and against the fly-by-night type of irresponsible insurance operation.

Permits of scores of small insurance outfits have been cancelled, and the most glaring abuses of blue-sky stock-selling of dubious securities have been checked. This campaign has gone only against the type of stock seller or the type of insurance company wherein proof has been adequate to show abuses.

The legitimate firm, the legitimate dealer in valid securities, has nothing to fear; but rather, has the benefit of the protection given the public against crooked and racketeering competition.

J. Edgar Hoover---

Continued from page one. The fact he was trained as a lawyer. He won his law degree in 1916, by studying night at George Washington University law school while he worked days in the library. He holds that law training invaluable. In 1924, with the bureau still a minor unit engaged solely in investigating work, famed William J. Burns resigned as director. The then attorney general John G. Sargent, chose Hoover to take over the reins of the bureau.

Hoover would be a powerful, crime-fighting authority, capable of coping successfully with organized gangsters, early took shape in his mind. Hoover took over the task with enthusiasm. Since then he has served under three administrations—confounded politicians who firmly believed that the job should be a political plum.

Hoover's acquaintanceships are innumerable but those who could be classified as intimate or close friends probably could be counted on the fingers of one hand. Privately he admits that his position, with hundreds of criminals ever on the alert to "get" him on any pretext, keeps him ever on guard.

He lives in a small, unpretentious frame house at 413 Seward Square in Southeast Washington. He spends his evenings there with his mother on the rare occasions when he is not out in the field inspecting FBI offices or leading raids, or directing—via telephone—from his office—the closing in of a network of federal agents on some criminal wanted for violating federal statutes.

FOLLY and FAREWELL

By Marie Blizard

BEGIN HERE TODAY
LINDA BORNHE, 26 years old, pretty, is left almost penniless by the sudden death of her father. PETE CARLSON, newspaper reporter, helps her get a job writing society news. Linda is in love with Dix Carter, but he goes abroad to study singing. When Peter asks Linda to marry him she agrees, but postpones the wedding.

HONEY HARMON, film star, comes to Newtown, making a "personal appearance" tour. She has a scenario written by Linda. Later, Linda goes to Hollywood and, by expressing ideas that are really Peter's, secures a reputation for being able to discover new stars. Soon she is a celebrity.

Dix Carter comes to Hollywood to get into films as an actor. Linda tries to help him. To please her, he invites Basil Thorne, director, to her home, though she dislikes and distrusts Thorne.

Thorne's career writes a successful play and later comes to Hollywood. Linda sees Peter and quarrels with him. She promises Dix that as soon as he gets a job she will marry him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XIX
SOMETIMES at night, with the din of carpenter's hammers still ringing in her ears, the incessant repetition of orchestral rehearsals, the piercing darts of light from the brilliant studio lights still hurting her eyes, Linda lay in the cool fragrance of her bed and wished herself back in Newtown.

When a girl was engaged to be married back there, being engaged was a business all by itself.

Linda's engagement was an entirely different thing. She had days and nights that had to be devoted to her work. There were strangers without number and no intimates to share her all-important joy. When her wedding day came, it would have to be sandwiched in somewhere between her job and Dix's hours at the studio. When he got a job!

There again Thorne came into the picture. He had told Dix he would—or might possibly—give him a chance to play in the re-takes of his last picture. If only he would, Linda felt assured that Dix would have his great chance and then the way would be made easy for them to marry.

She must see Thorne again. She had been putting him off—pleading fatigue, overwork, anything she could think of. But now she must see him, hurry him into a decision.

On Thursday he asked her to have a cocktail with him the next afternoon. She accepted quickly and gratefully, and then had to break the engagement because she couldn't get away from Commonwealth City. She hated having to break it, and feared she would not hear from him again.

She need not have worried. Thorne also was in the picture industry. And he was persistent. He telephoned on Saturday and asked her to dine with him at his home on Monday.

Linda had to think quickly this time. Remembering her last visit ruling of the Industrial Accident Board of Texas. It was a non-jury case.

County Bee Growers See Demonstration

More than 30 honey growers and bee enthusiasts of Eastland County witnessed two transferring demonstrations which were held in Eastland county last Friday, May 8th. R. R. Reppert demonstrated proper methods of handling bees, assembling hives and other equipment and stressed proper housing and care as being necessary to realize a profit in raising bees. Five persons who attended the bee demonstrations were interested in forming a club to buy an extractor to use in getting honey from the comb without injuring the comb. An extractor will probably be bought a little later in the season. Persons in Eastland county who are interested in improving their bees are urged to get in touch with the county agent or assistant county agent, who will cooperate in transferring, extracting honey and obtaining equipment.

HERE'S HOW THE FORD V-8 TRUCK IS Selling itself TO AMERICAN BUSINESS

1. WE LEND YOU A Truck for an "on-the-job" test. Truck picks up your load.
2. YOUR OWN DRIVER takes the Ford V-8 Truck out over your own regular routes, hauling your own load.
3. YOU CHECK THE RESULTS. Test proves V-8 performance, efficiency, economy.

Why not try it on your own job now?

MOST Ford V-8 Trucks are being bought by, rather than sold to, truck operators who try before they buy. These owners haven't been asked to listen to sales arguments—they are choosing their Ford V-8 Trucks strictly on the basis of superiority proved by "on-the-job" tests. Their experience confirms what owner records show—that the 80 horsepower Ford V-8 Truck engine offers the ideal balance of power, speed, flexibility and economy for modern hauling. That chassis, frame and bodies are designed to meet 90% of all hauling needs, and built to stay on the job! Now, in the Ford V-8 Truck for 1936, you get time-proved V-8 performance and rugged Ford dependability—plus new advancements that give even smoother operation and longer life. Examine for yourself the many vital features of this truck. Consider how much they mean to anyone who wants to cut trucking costs. Ask your Ford Dealer to lend you a 1936 Ford V-8 Truck. Put your own driver at the wheel and put it on the toughest job you have. Then check results—and draw your own conclusions. There's no charge or obligation to you for this convincing test.
