Belief Versus Performance

During the World War a little man who had previously been a Y. M. C. A. secretary, and who secured an executive position in war work in Washington, telegraphed a local organization in another city that he would arrive there on a certain date.

The publicity man of the local organization had no use for the former Y. M. C. A. man. "I'm not going to give him a write-up," he declared savagely. "He's too sticky now."

However another person connected with the local organization, who knew that the visitor would be affronted if he were not properly puffed, called the newspapers and gave them the story.

"Where is he from?" asked the newspapers.
"Oh," said the misinformant, misunderstanding the question, "Pennsylvania is his home state."

So the newspaper contacted him with Pennsylvania instead of Washington.

When the visitor reached his destination and discovered that he had not been advertised as coming from the national capital he was furious.

"Who's responsible for that?" he loudly demanded.
"I am," replied the man who was.

That day at a Rotary luncheon the president of the club introduced the visitor as being from Pennsylvania; whereupon the erstwhile little Y. M. C. A. man, his face distorted with anger, leaped toward the chap who had unwittingly offended him while trying to serve him, and hissed "Damn you!" Then he stood up on his hind legs and proceeded to tell the Rotarians about the necessity of teamwork, and cooperation, and of putting aside personal preferences and individual differences in order to win the war.

That sounded sort of hypocritical didn't it? But it wasn't. The speaker firmly believed in what he said. Fundamentally he was heartily in favor of doing the decent thing, the tolerant thing, the worth while thing, the generous thing. But he had a mean spiteful peevy temper that persisted in getting away from him. He likewise could have given an earnest, conscientious discourse against egotism, although he himself was a concerned little rascal.

Folks go to church and hear a minister set forth the importance of observing some rule of conduct; then they go out of the house of worship and try to discredit the minister's sincerity by calling attention to the fact that they have known him to violate the very principal that he has been exhorting about. But that has nothing to do with the matter. The minister meant what he said, he believed what he said. The fact that he had not been able to live as he preached had nothing to do with his convictions.

"Youder is a peck," says a moralist. "We must reach his height."
"Have you ever reached it?" the moralist is asked.
"No," he replies, "but I am trying to."

That is the idea, he is trying to. Because a fellow has not been able to do a thing himself is no reason why he should not call other folks' attention to the necessity of doing it.

OUT OUR WAY

"The Mississippi river should be controlled," you say. Can you control it? Certainly you cannot. Neither can we. But we believe it should be controlled. Human passions should be controlled; ignorance should be supplanted by knowledge.

The best of us are full of flaws as an egg or meat; as full of links as a plantation darter's hair. But is that any reason why we should not believe in polishing out the flaws and smoothing out the links? It is quite possible that man who has a certain thing wrong with himself is better qualified than anyone else to talk against that thing.

ROSE HAD HER SHARE
GAIL EVERETT, PROBABLY the most beautiful woman in New York, had come to New York City from her home in New Jersey. She was a model and a star in the city. She had a great many admirers and was very popular.

NATALIE PRESTON stopped at Gail's door and knocked, but received no answer. She knocked again and still there was no response. "I suppose some of the Spruells have come for her," Natalie murmured rather bitterly. It was just like her cousin Maude to telephone when Natalie was at dinner with Gail. Maude had said she was at Grand Central station. Natalie had gone down to wait with her cousin between trains; and then Maude had discovered that her train didn't leave until 4 o'clock.

Going to her room, Natalie took off her dress and slipped on a filmy negligee of chiffon and lace (she had bought it for a trifle at a sale at the store) and picked up the Sunday newspaper. She turned at once to the "Personal Notices." Why she always looked at them first she couldn't have told you.

Yet there was something exciting in reading these curious ads that might mean a complete change in fortune for some unassuming man or woman. Carefully she looked at each one, inwardly commenting on them. Then she gave a queer, stomach-like cry as she read.

"Information wanted about Peter Everett or his heirs, formerly of Hudson View Gardens, New York. Suitable reward will be given by a friend. P. O. Box 11, downtown."

Then Natalie went to her desk and wrote an answer to the advertisement, dressed again and went outside to mail her letter.

"Did you notice this in the newspaper yesterday?" Giles Harding's secretary asked as she handed her employer a paragraph cut from the personal column.

The old lawyer took the clipping from her and read:

"Information wanted about

Peter Everett or his heirs, formerly of Hudson View Gardens, New York. Suitable reward will be given by a friend. P. O. Box 11, downtown."

"Well, what's the meaning of that, I wonder?"

"I've thought of several things, but of course it may just be that some old friend has got around to wondering why he hasn't heard from Peter Everett lately."

"Yes, but I think there's something more to it. I'll keep it here on my desk. Anything else interesting in the column?"

"No, nothing today."

"All right, thank you," and Giles Harding turned to his task. But his thoughts were with the advertisement. Picking up the clipping, he suddenly decided to call Miss Cranston.

So he put through the call, and was surprised to learn that Gail Everett was now living and working in the city.

NATALIE'S letter reached its destination—the office of the Travers Mining and Development Company. As the manager read it, he smiled rather grimly.

Pressing a button that brought the office manager, he said as the handsome, well-dressed, middle-aged woman appeared, "I'd like to talk to you for a few minutes. Mrs. Barton. Just sit down."

"Certainly, Mr. Gage."

"The fact of the matter is, the Travers Mining and Development finds it imperative to secure some land out west, but the owner has died, and we don't yet know about his heirs. I put an advertisement in yesterday's newspaper and have received this answer. He handed Mrs. Barton the letter Natalie had written.

"Evidently there are some heirs," Mrs. Barton commented, laying the letter on his desk.

"Yes. Now I want you to invite this woman to meet you at a hotel and ask her to lunch with you. Talk to her and get all the information you can, assure her that it is on account of friendship you are anxious to get in touch with Peter Everett's family. You understand what I mean?"

"Yes, I do."

"All right, Mrs. Barton. Now about the reward. I'd be willing to pay as much as $100 if you get the information, but of course you'll have to judge about that yourself. Perhaps it would be well to offer not more than $25 or this person, whoever she is, may become suspicious."

"Very well, I'll make an appointment and I'm sure I can find out all you want to know."

NATALIE was thankful that her mysterious correspondent

Judges and the crowds that will gather there on the eventful night of June 16th.

There will be three beauties selected and three prizes given. The first prize is $25.00; the second $15; and the third $10. These prizes will go to the three Lions clubs who sponsor the winners.

To the winner of the first prize, the "Convention Sweetheart," will go the honor of an audition before Billy Rose, with all expenses paid by Mr. Rose. If she succeeds in obtaining the approval of Mr. Rose, she will be given a part in Texas Centennial Frontier shows.

Mr. Rose will send out three judges for the occasion, according to chairman of convention committees, H. L. Dyer. They are: Edward Clark Lilley, New York City, former director for Ziegfeld, and now theatrical director for the Last Frontier.

Robert Alton, New York, internationally known dancer and now director of dancing for Billy Rose's Casa Manana.

Harry Connelly, For. Worth, public relations director of Fort Worth Frontier Centennial and Star-Telegram representative.

Rotarians of World---

ers, so that they will become predominating attributes in all conferences in which men gather together to deal with problems of this world, then we will be making a contribution which will make the aim of the fourth object of Rotary (international understanding, goodwill and peace) obtainable.

"If we could only get rid of some of our selfishness! If we could only feel friendliness and confidence with the same intensity with which we seem to feel dislike and distrust, many of the serious problems confronting the world today could readily be solved!"

"When Rotarians in 4,000 cities of the world are living Rotary as a message of thoughtfulness and helpfulness to others and as an influence for the betterment of mankind, slowly but surely, then indeed we have a great and wonderful world fellowship of business and professional men united in a common idealism."

The formal opening of the convention is scheduled for Monday afternoon. Prior to this, the Council on Legislation, composed of representatives from each of the 105 Rotary districts over the world, will meet to consider the proposed enactments and resolutions and formulate recommendations to be presented in the session of Thursday.

At noon on Monday, Rotarians in the newspaper classification will hold a special assembly for discussion of problems of their own business. The chairman of this assembly will be Edwin N. Jaquin of the Champaign, Illinois, News-Gazette. A number of well-known newspaper editors are expected to take part as discussion leaders on various topics.

Messages of welcome, at the opening session Monday afternoon will be given by Mayor Charles D. White, President, Wm. B. Wilson of the Rotary Club of Atlantic City, and Henry N. Schramm of West Chester, Pennsylvania, governor of the 50th Rotary district which is host district to the Rotarians of the world. Two Rotarians from opposite sides of the world will make the responses—Tsuneichi Asabuki of Tokyo, Japan, and Hugo Prager, of Zurich, Switzerland.

The feature of the opening session Monday will be the message of President Johnson, describing the growth and progress of Rotary in his year of office, and giving his first-hand impressions of Rotary in action as he has seen it in many parts of Europe and North America. He was received by many heads of government in Europe, who expressed a keen interest in the development of Rotary and its mechanism through friendly contacts such as this convention, for the advancement of international goodwill and understanding.

When President Johnson concludes, he will present a group of his predecessors in that office, extending back to 1912, and Glenn Mead of Philadelphia, the president in that year, will be the speaker for the past presidents. After the adjournment of the general session Monday afternoon, the delegates from Rotary clubs in the United States will hold a separate meeting to present nominations for the international board of directors, delegates from Great Britain and Ireland will meet for the same purpose, and the following morning the delegates from Canada will choose their nominee.

After these opening formalities, the convention will get down to consideration of the obligations and opportunities of the "The Individual Rotarian," following the lines to be laid down in the principal address on this theme by Clinton P. Anderson, Albuquerque, New Mexico, which will start the program of Tuesday morning. Other speakers who will develop this topic along specific lines will include Felipe Silva, Cienfuegos, Cuba; Dr. William Trufant Foster, Newton, Massachusetts; and Thomas A. Warren, Wolverhampton, England.

Rotarians in the same business or profession will get together on Tuesday afternoon for the discussion of the particular problems of their own vocations, viewed in the light of the principles of service which Rotary teaches.

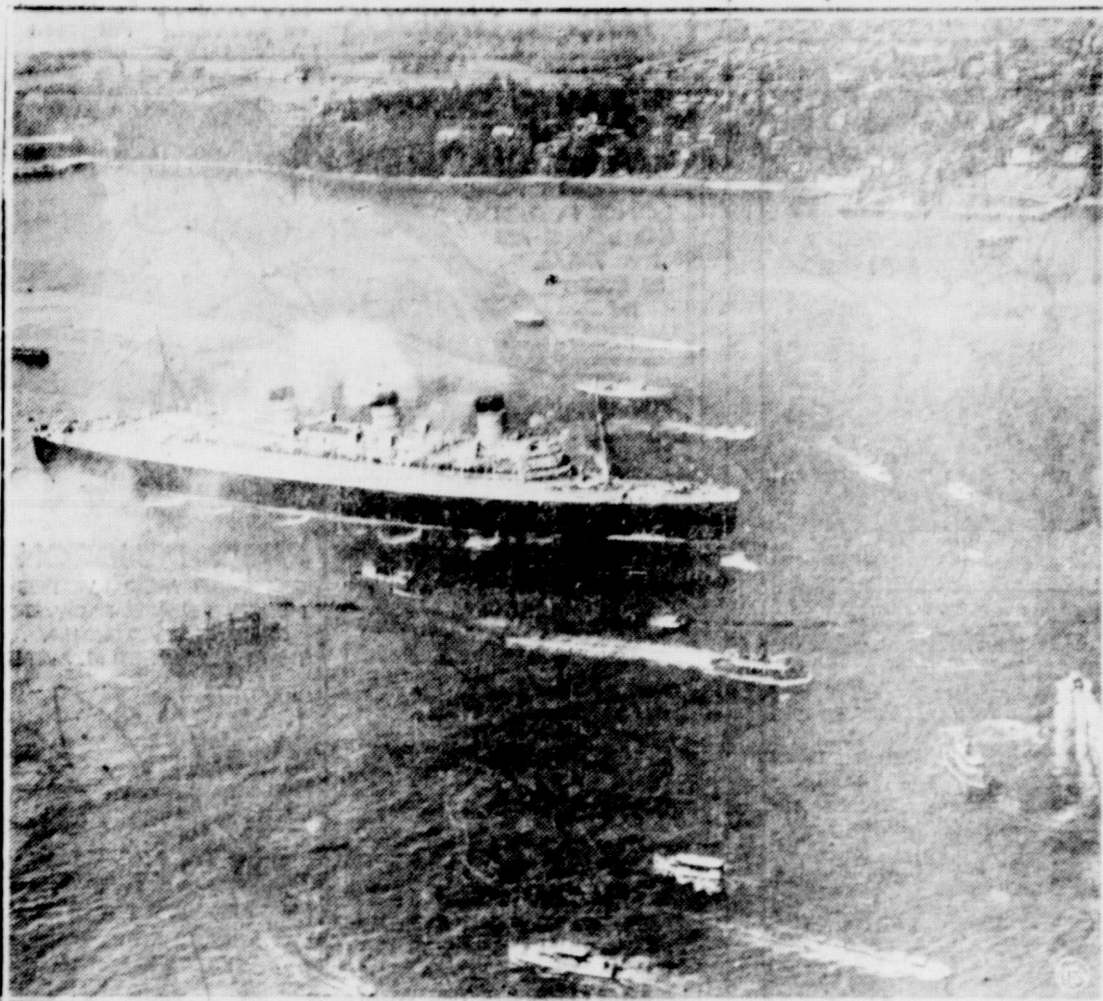

Laying the groundwork for special assemblies to discuss the problems of youth, Dr. Amos O. Squire, for many years chief physician of Sing Sing prison, will start the Wednesday session with an address on "The Man of Tomorrow." This will be followed by an international round table which will give Rotarians from ten different countries an opportunity to describe conditions in their own country.

This world-wide picture will be summed up by Paul C. Martin of Springfield, Ohio, in an address entitled "The Golden Chain of World Fellowship." Thursday's session will be largely occupied with official business—reports of the officers and consideration of legislation proposed. Voting on the candidates nominated will take place Thursday morning, outside the session. The newly elected officers will be presented on Friday morning, including the new governors of the 88 districts who have been selected by the Rotarians of their own districts.

The great growth of Rotary in China in the past year or two, and the outlook for the next few years will be described at Friday's session by Dr. Chening Wang of Shanghai. Following him, Wilfrid Andrews of London, England, will extend his Rotary club's invitation to attend the 1937 Rotary convention which will be held there. The closing address of the week's program will be given by W. W. Emerson of Winnipeg, Canada, on the topic "Why I Am a Rotarian."

Harbor Craft Give the Queen Mary Royal Welcome

Her sleek sides resplendent in gleaming fresh paint and pennants flying, the Queen Mary made a leisurely, regal entry into New York harbor, signal for a tumultuous welcome that began long before she reached Quarantine and continued as she proceeded up the Hudson River to dock at the end of her speedy maiden trans-Atlantic voyage. Britain's mighty new liner is pictured in the narrows at the entrance to the harbor as tugs, excursion boats and yachts swarmed around her.

Ever Make Lights From Vases? It's Worth Trying!

By Jean Prentice

Vases make charming decorative lighting units when wired and equipped with 100-watt bulbs. The interiors of the vases must be pure white, of course. Some stores carry them already wired. The effect produced is charming indeed.

We hear so much about indirect lighting nowadays. Architects and decorators who strive for soft, pleasing effects invariably incorporate it into their plans and designs by means of built-in coves and panels.

A very simple and effective way to achieve lighting of this type is by means of ordinary vases. That is, ordinary vases that are given a different sort of treatment. Let me tell you about it. It's really quite simple, and costs a mere trifle.

Must Harmonize With Furnishings The vases are selected to harmonize with the decorative scheme of the room, then wired to accommodate a 100-watt bulb. Some of them come ready-made in this way, and may be obtained at most department stores and specialty shops handling objects of this kind.

Should you decide to use an old vase and do the wiring yourself, or have the work done for you, be sure that you get vases that are white on the inside, so that they will properly reflect, and not absorb the light. The small hole through which the wire runs from the lamp socket to the wall plug or convenience outlet should be drilled not at the bottom of the vase, but at the side, about an inch or so from the bottom, so that the fixture will rest on an even base. A small reflector attached to the socket inside the base will throw more light upward and onto the ceiling, where it will be reflected in all directions. Better have the wiring done by an electrical expert unless you are quite experienced at this sort of thing.

Results Should Be Checked Light thus obtained is very decorative in character, and provides soft general illumination. I have seen as many as four in a room, mounted on bookcases and tables where they couldn't glare into anyone's eyes, and the result was really something to enthuse about.

Of course, even the best of decorative lighting effects must be aided by light of sufficient amount from floor and table lamps, and the general result checked by a light meter to make certain that there is enough illumination for such severe eye tasks as reading and sewing. Among the advantages of supplementary decorative lighting such as that obtained from lighted vases is that the illumination in the room becomes more flexible, and may be adapted to the changing moods and requirements of the family.

Mrs. Modern GOES SHOPPING

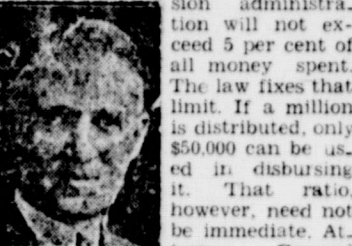

PERTINENT POINTS ON BUYING A MODERN GAS RANGE I MIGHT have kept my old-fashioned range. I might have continued to put up with its bother and inconvenience. I might have kept my eyes closed to its out-of-date unattractiveness. But I went shopping one day and saw a Magic Chef gas range. I was greatly impressed with its modern style and beauty. I became very much interested in its many advanced features. I realized then that if I ever was to have a really modern kitchen my first step was to replace my old range with a Magic Chef. "Until I bought my Magic Chef I never would have believed that any modern range offered so many advantages. Its speed, flexibility and efficiency are simply amazing. It has so many features that appeal to a woman and save her time and labor. The top burners light themselves when I turn on the gas. The Red Wheel Lorain Oven Regulator does its own oven watching and attends to cooking the whole meal properly while I am away. My meals are better cooked and more delicious. Full insulation keeps my kitchen cooler and saves me money on gas bills." Mrs. Modern also appreciates the top burners with a thousand even heats; the high burner tray and smooth oven linings easy to clean; the handy drawer-type broiler, smokeless, trouble-free; the handy utensil compartments—to mention only a few more of the many Magic Chef features. No other range of any type will give you more. You can prove this to yourself by visiting our store and inspecting the many Magic Chef gas range models on display on our floor. You will find many sizes, styles and colors. And among them is one which will meet exactly all your particular needs.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEPHERD United Press Staff Correspondent AUSTIN, June 6.—(U.P.)—Cost of administering old age assistance is in the spotlight particularly since it may have a bearing in the state gubernatorial campaign.

In the long run, the cost of pension administration will not exceed 5 per cent of all money spent. The law fixes that limit. If a million is distributed, only $50,000 can be used in disbursing it. That ratio, however, need not be immediate. Attorney General William McCraw ruled that the legislature did not intend to apply the 5 per cent at the outset, and have the same proportion apply after the old age assistance system has finished its initial organization, investigation, classification and other expensive duties. As legislative appropriations are made for two-year periods, the presumption is that the law will be complied with if administrative expense has not exceeded 5 per cent of the total outlay during that period.

To start the pension system, the legislature provided $100,000. That is less than $400 a county. It is less than $1 per application received for checking and investigation. The same legislature allowed the state comptroller's department, for extra work entailed in registering and issuing pension warrants, $35,000. It allowed the state treasurer $20,000 for the office cost of checking and cashing warrants. The two were given for clerical purposes more than half as much as was allowed for administration.

The $100,000 must be included in the 5 per cent allowance for administration. The federal government, however, has provided $65,250 for administration if the state needs it. This need not be included in the 5 per cent.

The federal grant of $1,181,250, to match state aid in July and August, contained a provision that the state might use $1,125,000 for actual assistance and $56,250 either for administration or distribution.

John T. Smith, editor of the Texas Tax Journal, combed state treasury records for data on pension administration costs. He gives these figures up to May 1: Total—$193,306, including $145,318 for salaries. The statement corrects former figures to show 432 full-time and 24 part-time employees. A former campaign statement placed the total at 685 employees.

Presuming that the figures are correct, the state's $100,000 appropriation plus Uncle Sam's $56,250, leaves only $37,056 to be taken from the accumulated state pension funds. This total is made up of $1,190,000 in the state treasury on May 1 and the $1,125,000 federal fund earmarked for distribution. The aggregate is $2,315,000. Deduct the $37,056 and the cash-on-hand is $2,277,944. Five per cent of that amount is $113,747.

A comparison with early costs of administering state rehabilitation and relief makes pension administration expenses seem trifling. A state senate inquiry revealed that relief administration in August, 1933, six months after it had been set up, cost $138,176. The state headquarters in Austin had 101 persons on the payroll. These did not include county administrators and employees.

"Equitable Tax League" is the name suggested by T. E. Andrews, member of the Texas board of pardons and paroles, for an organization proposing the following revenue sources: A two per cent sales tax; seven cents a barrel oil production tax; a natural gas tax of three cents a thousand cubic feet; $1 per ton tax on sulphur; liquor and cigarette taxes to total to total $6,000,000; an electricity tax to produce another $6,000,000; and a carbon black tax to add $6,000,000.

From this tax program, Andrews estimates the annual return would be $107,187,667. Biggest item is the sales tax, estimated at $40,000,000. The natural gas tax he estimates at $27,668,909. The oil tax is estimated at $19,061,544 and sulphur at $1253,814.

In computing the sulphur tax, he used a 1935 report by the U. S. Bureau of Mines. The same type of automobile and truck license plates will be used next year, the state highway commission has decided. The year and color combination will be changed of course. But the same kind of metal plate that was issued from state prison factories this year will be placed on vehicles in 1937. The decision was made early because the commission had been urged to adopt a special type plate. The designers contended it would lessen the switching of numbers. In 1935, compared with 965,928 in 1934, registration of motor vehicles this year totaled 1,129,572 up to April the entire year 1935. Licensing of new cars continues. Harris county again had the largest registration. Since registration began, an order has been issued to permit police cars to bear free license plates of the same kind ordinary motorists must buy. Heretofore, police plates have been of a special color. Officers said the distinctive plates hampered their sleuthing. Let us figure your next job of printing. Our job printing department is equipped to serve your needs.—Phone 80 Cisco Daily News want ads are a good investment.

YOUNG FRIEND, WHAT NEXT?

When your high school days are over, you begin looking about en, endeavoring to decide what to do next. You have perhaps thought of studying medicine, law, theology, or some other four year college course. Can you finance yourself for four years in college? If you could, would you want to do so since you find the profession over-crowded? Even the teaching profession is crowded so that thousands of teachers cannot secure schools. With these perplexing problems before you, why not give serious thought to preparing yourself for a good position in a business office where you can earn a good salary, learn your chosen line of business, and some day become an outstanding business man or woman in your county. ### EASTLAND P. O. CONTRACT LET IN WASHINGTON

EASTLAND June 6.—That the desire of Eastland citizens, civic groups and business men for a federal building to house the postoffice will soon materialize was shown Friday in the announcement that a bid had been accepted by the treasury department for construction work.

The Templeton-Cameron company of San Angelo, according to a Washington dispatch, submitted the winning bid of $60,200 to the treasury department.

Although definite date for construction was not known, Eastland citizens remembered the assurance given May 7 by Congressman Thomas L. Blanton that activity will be expedited.

A site has been selected and the lot cleared for the building on the Payne Hospital block. The site was bought for $5,000 from Dr. T. E. Payne, who removed his hospital to another location on the same block.

It was acquired in February of this year.

The delay in getting construction underway was occasioned by a failure of the Labor Department to furnish wage scale requested in December; a recent message from Blanton stated.
