Subsidized Farm Prices

Republican platform language promises Texas cotton growers that the party, if its nominees are elected, will continue governmental support of prices.

That is not likely to cause Texas farmers to rush into the republican column next November. These farmers will remember the old-guard rejoicing when AAA was thrown into the discard by supreme court. They will recall protests of republican leaders that government had no business meddling with subsidies or the law of supply and demand. They will see, deadily, that for vote-catching purposes, the republican party is promising the very thing a democratic administration has been doing for American agriculture. No farm-aid program has yet been initiated by the republicans, since, indeed, they persuaded the western voters to link arms with eastern industrialists by paying them off with billions of public money in the form of free farms.

State Courts Building

The legislature has appropriated $200,000, to be available if federal funds are secured to supplement the sum for erection of the supreme court memorial building sponsored by the Texas State Bar association.

Gov. James V. Alfred has pledged his fullest cooperation in this excellent undertaking. The bar association has a committee, headed by Frank Andrews and John L. Darrouzet, working to its achievement.

The best that now may be hoped for is a 45 per cent grant on the building cost, without any loan, from the public works administration. No doubt the next session of the legislature will add another $75,000, if it will secure for Texas the much-needed half-million-dollar building.

A Very Happy Landing

Texas extends its warm congratulations to Jesse Jones and Gov. Hobby in their fortunate escape from injury in the crash of a burning airplane.

It is typical of Mr. Jones that he was calm enough, even in such a perilous adventure, to think of the other fellow, and quickly pull the pilots from the blazing cockpit.

We can only be thankful that the lives of these Texans have been spared for the careers of public service in which each has been eminent.

A Detroit reader asked how to identify old China. After Japan's next move, we'd suggest use of magnifying glass.

Detectives investigating WPA workers reveal they "have uncovered only three cases of political solicitation and activity." The "activity" part is hard to believe.

- WE—Raise the body completely off the chassis with contact jacks, which jacks contact the frame at the center.
- WE—Pull the spring leaves back into their natural curl—we call it "Temporary Re-arching."
- WE—Put the proper lubricants where the ACTUAL WEAR takes place—the highest points of friction.
- WE—Do thorough lubrication, which means more than pumping grease through high pressure guns INTO OPEN CAVITIES.
- WE—Permit 100% lubrication, apply grease while the car is in motion and while the weight of the body is on the MOTOSWAY.
- WE—Locate that HIDDEN BODY SQUEAK; we detect impaired parts.
- WE—Spread spring leaves to acutally put lubricants between the leaves—not just smear on the outside.
- WE—Free frozen shackles without the aid of a "Crow-Bar". The use of a "Crow-Bar" is DANGEROUS.
- WE—Examine and refill shock absorbers which can only be done with MOTOSWAY. (Optional, at slight additional cost.)
- WE—Lubricate "Knee-Action" cars. See it work, it's perfect while the parts are all in motion—"floating action."
- WE—Lubricate the "Enclosed Springs." How else can you do it? Only with MOTO-SWAY.
- WE—CHANGE YOUR OIL IN THE CRANKCASE WITH MOTO-SWAY; all old oils and sediments come out thus keeping repair bills away.
- WE—Make old cars ride like new ones, keep new ones riding like NEW—We prove it.
- WE—Challenge any other means of lubrication; the old stationary method has become obsolete. The MOTO-SWAY method is the only CORRECT WAY TO LUBRICATE YOUR CAR.

CHAPTER I
 MARCIA CUNNINGHAM was descending the wide stairway led to the drawing room and conservatory beyond. She was due officially on that stairway for nearly two more hours. She was walking slowly, yards of tulle swirling around her. Her amber curls shone under the halo cap that held her train. Her wide gray eyes were dark and lovely. The brief, gay moment of slipping down alone, dressed in her wedding frock, didn't require the poise and restraint that would be befitting 150 guests watching her assured approach.

"Here comes the bride—"
 The orchestra was practicing and the palms. Marcia paused a moment, standing in a pool of light. She had tried to go to sleep before her mother, her aunts, and the bridesmaids who were house-sitters agreed a bride should do her wedding. Sleep didn't come. Counting sheep didn't help. The sheep turned into electric clocks and toasters and coffee irons, and a hundred other things that were reposing on the tables that held the wedding presents in the library. Anyway, Marcia reminded herself that she was marrying Bob, and that was something to stay awake and remember. Bob, who had a way of laughing, smiling, talking that would bring the moon right down from the sky, if you wanted to sentimental about it. She was carrying him in one hour and 54 minutes.

She had got up at last, moved a sudden impulse to wear her wedding gown and walk down the stairs alone. In was bad luck, so someone said, for a bridegroom to see his bride in her bridal gown before he met her at the altar where a clergyman waited in a book. But he would never see her.

She had come down the stairs. Voices drifted through the long hall. The caterer and the cook and the butler and the pianist. The musicians stopped playing music and the voices were faint.

"Certainly I love you, Sylvia," Bob's voice was saying. "I love you and Marcia and half a dozen other girls. You girls set entirely on much store by what you call love. What difference does it make whom I marry—you or Marcia or someone else?" The voice was light, a little teasing. "But you're marrying Marcia," girl's voice answered dully, as though she had thought about it for a long, long time.

Marcia's amber curls shone beneath the halo cap. Her gray eyes were dark and lovely.

"Marcia's father's giving me a job with his outfit, and I'm fond of her, that's why," Bob spoke again. "As for you, Sylvia, I couldn't afford to marry you."

MARCIA didn't move away. Bob was marrying her, then, for her money. All of the time that he would be standing with her before the altar she would know that he would have been just as happy with any one of six or seven other girls—just as happy with Sylvia, who was so soon to wear a rose tulle frock and precede her down the stairway and the ribboned aisle. Maybe this was a nightmare—she would wake up in a minute. . . . She heard Bob's voice again. "After all, Sylvia, we have to be practical about marriage today. This economic upheaval has knocked the props from under romance. No woman can own a man. Good Lord, Sylvia, I'm not going to jail!"

Own a man? A woman who loved did not want to possess. She knew that love was a free-will offering. It built no walls. Two people stayed together because they wanted to, not because there was no other place to go.

"We'll still be in each other's lives, Sylvia dear." Now Bob was a little cajoling as though he sensed he had hurt where he had not meant to. "We'll see each other at people's houses, the theater, the club—"

"Oh, no, Bob!" That was Sylvia. "I love you terribly. I'm not ashamed of it. . . . but if you marry Marcia . . . and of course you are marrying Marcia . . ." Marcia knew that Sylvia must have motioned, then, to the palms, the white ribbons, the heavy flowers. The girl who was marrying Bob stepped forward, walked down the ribboned aisle to the two who waited her coming, silent. The ivory train trailed along, forgotten.

"Sorry," Marcia said quietly. Her voice mustn't break. If it did, it would make such a brittle sound as it fell. "Or maybe I'm glad. It's better to understand things."

"But, Marcia darling, you don't understand!" Bob stepped forward. "It's the emotional strain—you know how people swing into moods. . . ."

"Yes, of course you know!" Sylvia supplemented with her lips, but her eyes showed that she didn't know at all.

"Yes," Marcia agreed. "It's rather tense for all of us. There isn't much time left for dressing, Sylvia. Better hurry, Bob."

Now to walk slowly, calmly. To straighten a bow and smell a rose. Not to let on that her world had crashed. She must climb the stairway, head high, just as though the tall steps led to something, instead of not going anywhere—not anywhere! Nothing could be important enough to matter much without Bob, and Bob could get along without her. He had said so. "What difference does it make whom I marry?" Those were his words.

"Sort of dumb of you, Marcia, not to guess," she told herself.

She wouldn't marry him. Yet the wedding cake was arranged in small silver boxes, the vases were molded into hearts and 150 people were even now dressing to wish the bride and bridegroom a long life of happiness together. Marcia was sitting on the edge of the bed when the house phone rang. It would be Bob, trying to make atonement. Maybe she would let him. After all, he didn't love anyone else any more than she loved her. . . . No, she couldn't compromise. She was giving too much. Love and marriage were something sacred. She removed the receiver and placed it on the desk so she wouldn't hear the repeated clamor of the bell.

A few minutes later the outside telephone rang. Marcia gazed at it dully. Bob, apparently, had gone outside the house, thinking that his strategy would deceive her. But perhaps he did love her really and didn't know it. . . . but people knew when they did! She mustn't be indecisive, foolish. . . .

But she answered the telephone. "Marcia? Oh, my love! I'm nearly crazy. What did you hear? It must have sounded ghastly but it was nothing but a goody. You know that?"

"Yes, I know. I was in a sentimental mood, too."

She loved him. She wished he would hang up. His voice was tearing her heart, ripping it as though it had been paper. A bride's heart should be whole. She wasn't going to marry him. She must remember that. She wasn't sailing with him to England and France on the tickets which were part of her father's wedding present. She wasn't living with him forever—or at least until they could afford a bigger place—in a white clapboard house in Connecticut, whose awnings were bright against a green hill. She must do something quickly.

"Let's skip it all, Bob," she suggested. "I understand. I'll see you later."

"Marcia, you're an angel from heaven!" She caught his relief.

"Tell me later, darling." Her voice was light, so light that she knew the man who listened would whistle in his shower as he dressed for his wedding.

She must do something, go somewhere, quickly—somewhere so she could think things through before it was too late.

RUNAWAY BRIDE

CHAPTER I A
 HALF an hour later a slim girl in a rust frock and cape, banded with dark fur, was ushered into Wenda Andrews' room. Wenda, standing before the mirror, in a green tulle frock that resembled the white tulle one that was spread out on Marcia's bed, gave an audible gasp.

"Marcia, what in the world are you doing running around foot-loose?" As the rust-clad figure sank wearily into a chair, she grew more puzzled. "Marcia, honey, have you forgotten that this is your wedding night? The handsome, debonaire Robert is giving you his name."

Marcia motioned to the green frock. "Take it off, Wenda. You won't be wearing it. There isn't going to be a wedding."

"Are you crazy? Is it a quarrel?"

"No, we'll still be concerned about each other's health when we meet. We just aren't marrying each other. Bob's love is parked around in too many places. But he was going to hang his hat in my house. That's all."

Wenda glanced at the cloisonne clock on the dressing table and pressed a button. "Quick, hot tea, lots of it," she told the maid. "Tell Carl to have the car ready." Then she turned back to Marcia and smiled. "Want to tell me about it?"

Marcia nodded. She made the story brief but complete. "—so the wedding's off and you have to go over to the house and tell my family. Tell them I'll call tomorrow. I can't—go back."

"Men are queer," Wenda mused. "Drink your tea, Marcia. It'll warm you up. Men do utterly inconsequential things that look mountainous. They all like to think they are Don Juans. Maybe he was being dramatic. Your wedding's planned and he chose you. That's something."

"Something—but not everything. That's why I'm not going on, Wenda. He might not be willing to leave his old girls behind him."

"Maybe you're right—but I'm not sure." Wenda looked down at the green swirls of tulle. "I've always wanted to be a bridesmaid seven times, but that's as near to the altar as I can get. Never an advanced position! But if the wedding's off—what shall I tell your mother?" She reached for a long white cape, thought again, and began to unfasten her frock.

"That'll get in touch with her tomorrow, and I'm sorry."

"You'll wait here for me? Promise?"

"I'll wait. And don't take off your dress. Go as you are."

Wenda put her arms around the girl in the chair. "Cry, Marcia. It will help." Then she was gone.

He was a tall young man . . . browned as though he had been in the sun and wind a long time.

room that carried the touches of a wedding preparation. Wenda had forgotten her flowers, and the old-fashioned nosegay, fastened with silver foil and looped with green tulle, lay on the dressing table by the slender jeweled vanity case that had been the bride's gift.

The hands of the clock moved slowly. The house grew quiet. Another car pulled out. Evidently Marcia's parents had started to the wedding by now. There was nothing in the world but time—hours and days and months and years, and there was nothing to do with them any more. Nothing to do with them! Marcia jumped up swiftly and scribbled a note at the desk.

"Wenda darling, you're a dear and I tried to wait. The jitters have me—pre-nuptial jitters. I have my car downstairs and I'm going to drive. I'll telephone you tomorrow. Forgive me, Wenda, and thank you for everything."

She climbed into the roadster, stepped on the accelerator, and began to go faster and faster. She wondered what excuses her mother would make to the wedding guests—maybe she would pretend that her daughter had the measles or appendicitis. Everyone would be polite but no one would believe the story. She might have been driving for two hours or 20 minutes—she didn't know—when she came down Park Avenue on the east side of the green carpet of grass that runs through the center of the street. It was dark now, quite dark.

Maybe her father would put private detectives on her trail. He might be afraid that something would happen to her. If there was a chance that detectives would recognize her car she must dispose of it. She pulled in at the next garage and left it. She hailed a cruising taxicab.

"Drive," she commanded the cab driver.

"Where, lady?"

"You think of a place."

"Okay by me."

A long time later the driver spoke again. "Gosh, lady, you're running up a whole of a meter. Don't you want to go some place?"

"No place. Just drive."

"But you aren't getting anywhere," he muttered, and sped on again.

"Central Park, isn't it?" She glanced from the window.

"We've been through it seven times."

"Make it eight." She had driven here with Bob, skated on the lake with him, bicycled in the spring when the debutantes had been gay with wheels and hoops and roller skates. She had taken a ride with him in a painted boat, on the little lake where the sailors took their girls when the boats came in. She must stop being a sentimental idiot! She had better see if her money was in her bag. Her father had given her a roll of bills that morning. "To buy yourself some beads and gloves in Paris—," he had said. Yes, here they were. Her hand touched something firm and smooth. Her passport. Two passports. Bob's was with hers.

SUDDENLY her mind began to function. She would go to Europe! She would sail alone! Alone at midnight, in the bridal suite.

"Pier Number 59, North River," she told the driver, one eye on the sapphire-studded watch on her slender wrist. "Hurry! The ship sails at 12!"

"But, lady, why didn't you say so?" the cab driver ejaculated, and suddenly sent the loitering car flying across town.

Marcia sat tense, holding the wrist with the watch, so she could tell the time. Now they had turned into the street along the docks—she could smell the water—could catch the tug ends of the day's odors from the fish markets. Here pier—the lighted ship beyond. "Maybe we're too late. It's 12," the driver warned her.

Marcia pressed a bill into his hand and ran across the floor to the elevator. There was one passenger on it, a tall young man whose face was browned as though he had been in the sun and wind for a long time.

Up, up, up. Slowly. Oh, why did all elevators that carried people to the floor that was on a level with the gangplank proceed so calmly? It stopped. She got off and began to run. So did the young man. They could hear the waves of laughter and chatter on the pier. Chains were beginning to rattle as they grew nearer to the boat.

"Gangway!" the man called, and reached out a hand to her. Laughing, she took it, and followed his broad shoulders as he cleared a passage through the crowd. They were on the gangplank. They were on the ship!

"Your baggage, Madame, Monsieur?" a steward asked.

"It came on earlier," Marcia answered. She turned to thank the young man with the tanned face, but he had tipped his hat and disappeared.

She gave the number of her cabin to an attendant. "Monsieur?" His eyes followed the man.

"I'm alone," Marcia answered, and quite suddenly a wave of longing engulfed her—a wave so fierce that it swept away all her resolutions, dissolved her courage, tore down her pride. She wanted Bob! Wanted him any way she could get him! And she had run away from him! She turned back to the gangplank. It was gone. The ship was moving slowly, quietly.

AN ANIMAL? WHAT DID IT LOOK LIKE?

IT'S DIFFICULT TO DESCRIBE! I HAVE YOU EVER EATEN WELSH RAREBIT AND THEN HAD TERRIBLE NIGHTMARES, AND DREAMED ABOUT AWFUL ANIMALS?

SURE! PINK ANIMALS WITH PURPLE DOTS, WITH TUSKS GROWING OUT OF THEIR EARS, AND HORNS ON THEIR FEET!

EXACTLY! WELL, DID YOU EVER SEE A DREAM WALKING?

Singing Sunday at Primitive Baptist

There will be an all day singing at the Primitive Baptist church of Cisco Sunday, using the book "Old Sacred Harp". It is urged that everybody is invited to come and bring your book. There will be dinner on the ground.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SCHERER, United Press Staff Correspondent.
AUSTIN, Tex., June 18 — (AP) — Before the cement had hardened, protest was raised in Austin against the design for the new terrace floor being placed in the state capitol.

SCHERER

Objection was made to the large oval directly under the dome. The design pictures the various sovereignties. In the center was the seal of the state of Texas, superimposed on a large five-pointed star. Between the prongs of the star were the seals of Spain, France, the Republic of Mexico, the Confederate States and the United States. The Republic of Texas had been forgotten.
A happy solution was found. The seal of the state and that of the Republic of Texas are identical, except for the lettering. By substituting the republic for the state, the situation was saved.
Responsibility for omitting the Republic was not clear. Most people view it as the distinctive period of Texas history... when Texas was a nation. Complaint is made that Centennial decorations, generally, failed to place emphasis on this phase.
In Austin special notice is being devoted to it. Streets winding up the hill to the French Embassy are being repaired to make access to the still standing building easy for Centennial visitors. Heroes of the Republic are being brought from scattered graves for interment in the state cemetery, which is near the Embassy.

One more class of graduates of the law school of the University of Texas will march before the State Supreme Court and be admitted to practice in Texas courts, was done this week for the 1936 class.

After that, graduates will have to face the examinations conducted by a state board of bar examiners. Non-graduates now get law licenses in that way. An act requiring examination for all was passed some time ago. Its taking effect was deferred so that it might not operate against students already enrolled in the university's law school, as catalogs had announced the university diploma gave the right to practice.

No decrease in law school matriculations has been noted since the change. Enrollment has increased in proportion to that of other schools of the university.

Rep. Harold Hankamer, shortest member of the Texas House of Representatives, will have the tallest opponent in his race for reelection. Hankamer is 5 feet 4 inches tall, and his opponent is more than 7 feet in height.

Austin, or a portion of it, envisioned a snub to the Governors Ferguson during the visit of U. S. Secretary of the Commerce Daniel Roper. When they were breakfasted at the Mansion, neither of the former Governor Fergusons was invited. Former Gov. Dan Moody was out of town but Mrs. Moody was a guest.

The Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court (C. M. Cureton) and Presiding Justice of the Court of Criminal Appeals (W. Morrow) will share with the governor responsibility for the state pardon board if the constitutional amendment on pardons is adopted No. 3. Now the governor names all members of the pardon board. Under the proposed plan, he would name one member and each of the designated judges would name one. Terms will be six years with one member retiring every two years. To start the board off with staggered terms, the three first appointed are directed to draw lots for the long, medium and short terms.

Secretary of State R. B. Stanford has his own way of observing the Centennial. Letters from his office are not dated "1936." Under the designation of day and month appears: "The One Hundredth Year of Texas Independence." Cass county may show the way to other counties of the state in providing local school taxes. State school funds are in such good shape that the state board of education will consider increasing the state apportionment to $20 a scholastic for next term, but most counties find local funds short. Cass county discovered that it owns oil land within the Rodessa field, and will lease or develop it.

All of the early counties of Texas were given school land. Some received land within the county, as Cass did; others were given tracts in other parts of the state. Under the plan, for instance, received land in Throckmorton county. At the time of the distribution, each county, then organized, was given four lengths. Translated into modern measurement, this means about 17,000 acres. Commissioners' courts were given control of the land and directed to put proceeds in a local school fund. Most counties have leased or sold the land, investing the proceeds in bonds.

This county school land is distinct from the state school land which is administered through the state land office. Most of it near proven oil territory has been leased. Law suits in recent years have contributed greatly to the state's holdings and their value. Early land surveys in Texas fail to join in many places. Vacancies between them become school land. When oil is discovered surveys are checked and many vacancies found. Usually individuals make the discovery. By doing so they have first opportunity to file applications for leases on the new found territory.

DESDEMONA
 Mrs. W. C. Bedford and family left for morning for their home in Texas, after visiting relatives, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. O'Brien and their many friends who were here for the funeral of Mrs. O'Brien, who died two weeks ago. Mrs. Bedford is recovering from a serious illness. Her 8-year-old son, Fred, passed away Friday morning at Gorman. Services were held at the Baptist Church at Ranger Tuesday afternoon, with the pastor, Rev. J. H. Whitworth, officiating. The services and the funeral were in the Ranger cemetery.

Formerly of Desdemona, and Mrs. Jimmie Upton, formerly of Oiden, visited Mrs. J. H. Jackson and Mrs. Bally Stark and a number of other friends here Friday before returning to their homes at Healdton, Okla.
 Mrs. Bill Parks drove up to Strawn Saturday and took Miss Mollie O'Rear, John O'Rear and Mrs. Annie Daniel, who had been called there to attend the funeral of their great-nephew, the two weeks old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Seed, formerly of Eastland, but now of Clovis, New Mexico. Mrs. Seed is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milt O'Rear of Strawn. Their many friends here deeply sympathize with the sorrowing relatives. Milt O'Rear visited the family here on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Stover drove over to Stephenville Sunday afternoon to visit her half-brother, Gene Lookingbill, who is seriously ill at the hospital following a major operation. They were glad to find him better, though still in a critical condition.
 J. G. Williamson, Jr., of Santa Anna, was the guest of his little cousin, Charles Bragg, Jr., last week.
 Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Skipping left Thursday for a visit in Brownwood. Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hilliard and children left Wednesday for their home in Overton, after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Nabors.
 Mrs. Horace Morrison and baby daughter, Patricia Ann, were brought home from the Blackwell Sanitarium on Tuesday night of last week and they are receiving visits from their friends at their home at the Bedford Hotel. Her mother, Mrs. Woody, of Gorman, and Gene and Herbert Crenshaw visited them Sunday.

 Mrs. Roy Ashburn and daughter, Anita are visiting her sister, Mrs. Willie David, at her home at Tulsa, Okla.
 W. C. Bedford drove up to Eastland Monday to attend the meeting of democratic precinct chairmen. He was accompanied by W. H. Whitworth.
 Miss Joe Ceille Crenshaw accompanied by Miss Leta Troy Huddleston drove over to Gorman Sunday afternoon.
 Mr. and Mrs. Preston Sparks returned Tuesday from Austin for a short business trip.
 Host of friends here regret that John Hammond has moved to his farm near Comanche. He and his family have been among our most popular people for many years and we hope they will soon return.
 The Methodist Missionary society church and had the monthly program from the World Outlook. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Charles Lee. Roll call responses were answers to Bible questions on the book of First Samuel. Miss Mollie O'Rear read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. E. M. Dally offered prayer. During a short business meeting it was reported that the society still had a good supply of vanilla and several packages of Betty Brite's for sale and members were urged to assist in the sales to replenish the local treasury. Those present were Miss Mollie O'Rear, and Misses G. S. Bruce, W. H. Whitworth, Charles Lee, S. E. Snodgrass, E. M. Dally, C. C. Bragg and W. C. Bedford.

 The first Centennial visitors to reach Desdemona were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Maltby of Whittenton, Texas, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Compton and little daughter, Marjorie Faye, of Terleton, Okla. They came on Tuesday of last week to visit C. W. Maltby and family. W. C. and C. W. Maltby are brothers. The visitors had been to the Centennial which they said was wonderful.
 We are glad to report that Hoyt Lee Browning was improved enough to be brought home Sunday afternoon from the Blackwell sanitarium.
 Mrs. Nannie Noel left Thursday for Dublin to visit her children.
 Weldon Rushing left Saturday for Houston where he was to start working for the Humble Oil and Refining company on Monday. He worked for the Humble company in East Texas two years ago this summer and fall. His many friends regret to see him leave town but are glad he has a position with the Humble company.
 Miss Johnnie Buchan is expected home today from a short visit in Denton.
 Rev. Mrs. Earl Alexander and her husband and Miss Naomi Alvis came home from Stephenville Sunday morning and held the regular services at the Church of God. For the past week Rev. Alexander had been holding a revival meeting at Stephenville where the crowds were estimated at between 300 and 400. They were accompanied by Miss Capito Browning when they went back Monday afternoon. Rev. Alexander plans to organize a Church of God there in the near future.
 Mr. and Mrs. Maborn Wilcoxson drove down to DeLeon on business Friday.
 Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Wright and their sister, Miss Romalee Wright and Miss Nell Robert who are attending the State Teachers' college at Denton came home Friday for a short visit with relatives.
 Miss O. T. Arthur formerly of Desdemona but now of Coahoma arrived Friday for a visit with Miss Ruth Abel and a number of other friends who were delighted to see her.
 Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barron and son, Billy Jack formerly of Desdemona but now of Olney spent Friday here on business and visiting with their many friends who are always glad to see them. Billy Jack was the guest of Paul Stanley Arnold and Mr. and Mrs. Barron took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Acree. While here they made arrangements for the tearing down of their home which will be shipped by train to Olney and there will be rebuilt. The Barron home is one of the most attractive houses on the south side of Main Street and we regret to see it moved. Frank Moore has the contract for tearing down and rebuilding it.

Presbyterians Will Install Pastor Here

Rev. W. H. Applewhite, who moved to Cisco June 1st, from North Fort Worth, is to be installed as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock by a commission of the Fort Worth Presbytery. The members of the church are urged to be present—visitors are welcome.

Rev. R. M. Hall, D. D., is to preside and propound the constitutional questions; Rev. T. S. Knox, D. D. of Abilene, is to preach the sermon; Rev. S. C. Guthrie, of Graham, is to deliver a charge to the pastor and Elder R. E. Sherrill of Haskell, is to charge the congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Applewhite was pastor at Spur, Texas, before going to Fort Worth in September, 1931, since which time he has been pastor of the North Fort Worth Presbyterian Church. He is stated clerk of the Fort Worth Presbytery and chairman of Presbytery's committee on young people's work. He has just returned from Kerrville where he has been teaching Bible in the young people's conference where there were more than 700 in attendance for ten days. Mr. Applewhite is also director of the Intermediate-Senior young people's conference which is to be held at Lake Cisco July 9th to 15th.

Sunday evening at 8 the young people who were delegates from the local church to the Kerrville conference will make their reports to the congregation. They are: Billy Wallace, Jean Alexander, Thomas Lee Jones and Peggy Van Eman. The sermon Sunday night will be delivered by the new pastor.
