About Our Friends

By STEP A. LONG

Yes, the tourists and vacationists seem to be coming back to work. "It's a little hard to get back in the job," said A. G. Tuttle who with Mrs. Tuttle has been taking a three-weeks rest on the Del Frio anyone fishing, eating and just resting. Tuttle says he caught fish every day he was on the river. He ate them all, too. Had a wonderful time but is delighted to be back and note the good business the store had while he was away.

And Mr. and Mrs. Nance have returned from their long trip. Had a wonderful time and saw some of the most beautiful country imaginable, they report. The great green belt was beautiful and rich looking but the vast orchards of berries seemed to Nance like real farming. Saw lovely mountains, lakes and beautiful, rich valleys. The cities were in most instances rich and with historic significance. Was near Plymouth Rock and saw the old aristocratic city of London with its memories of the war of the revolution which freed the British from England. Saw the big city of New York City and says can talk for a week. Saw many cars from Texas and was always glad to meet them.

And now Henry Drumwright is arriving home this afternoon from his shopping tour that brought him back from New York by way of St. Louis. He could tell us many things that would be of interest since this is his 24th year. It would all seem rather old to him if it were hard to get anything out of him. However, it will be easy to get him to talk of his City since it is safe to say he spent much of his leisure there.

The oil fever has rather cooled for the week end with the Hickok well drilled out and set of pipe. But with the plug being drilled out this afternoon and filling into the pay tomorrow, interest may be revived. The rumor that salt water might ruin the well placed a damper over the enthusiasm that was beginning to run last week and had people asking just where they would have well drilled in the back yard.

But if, as is expected, the salt water is not there,

The trouble with the present system, as he sees it, is that Americans are work crazy. "All we know is work. All we do is work." And with that he advances his plan of a one-day work week. He figures that two days of the workers' week go to pay profits, interest and rent of those who own land and machines. Another two days are taken up by waste. The waste is accounted for in inefficient machinery, idle machinery, crime, harmful drugs and general foolishness, Payne argues.

UNHEALTHY CHILDREN!

The doctor of health education in a large school system made public an astonishing report the other day. He said that 71 per cent of the school children of the city were in poor health. Of 72,961 examined, 52,086 were suffering from some physical defect, ranging from decaying teeth to heart disease. Malnutrition was quite prevalent, among children from well-to-do families quite as much as among the poor.

It was found the boys and girls were going to school on breakfasts of coffee and toast instead of the foods that children particularly need, such as milk, cereal, fruit and eggs. Great progress has been made in keeping under control the contagious diseases that used to ravage the schools. But organic defects have been shockingly neglected. Big cities get too little sunshine, because the air is adulterated with soot. People do not take advantage of such sunshine as they have, because they live, work and play too much within doors. Children are in school rooms in the day time, in movies at night. They don't get enough wholesome exercise or enough sleep. A study of high school pupils discloses the same defects as in the kindergarten and elementary grade youngsters, in more exaggerated form.

What is true in one great city is probably true in many others. It may also be true in smaller communities where the rush of modern life has brought about a preponderance of indoor activities and where there is just as much carelessness about proper diet for growing children as anywhere else. This is a little reason for pride in fine school buildings and up-to-date homes if the commonsense health rules are ignored.

WILLS AND WIVES!

A woman asks a question-answer column whether her husband should not make a will. He thinks it needless, because "if he dies everything will be hers." She is not sure, because they have a son. The answer-lady replies strongly that he must indeed make a will if he wants his wife properly provided for. She adds that the only wise way for a man who has a wife and children is to put his affairs somehow in trust so that the heirs cannot waste the principal, but will always have the income. This is sensible stuff, and every adult, male or female, who is providing for dependents, should give it ear and thought. The person who is dependent is by that very fact showing himself or herself incapable of managing property. This may be due to youth or inexperience, which can be cured. But independence and competence do not grow over night, and dependents need protection while they are learning. There is another side to this picture. Children should be taught something about business and the handling of money while they are young. Business competence should be developed along with their years, from the handling of the weekly dime at eight years of age, through the full allowance covering clothing and all incidental expenses at sixteen or seventeen, to the handling of property of some kind in the twenties. In any case, a will which expresses the wishes of the maker is wise. The probate court cannot read the minds of those whose estates it must administer.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER United Press Staff Correspondent AUSTIN, Aug. 4 (UP)—A large typewritten book was placed in the State Library last week. It is "Fifty Years on Forty Acres," the memoirs of T. U. Taylor, retiring Dean of the University.

SHEARER Dean of the School of Engineering of the University of Texas. At 78, he is giving up active service on the University's 40-acre campus (now enlarged) after a half century of teaching there. In his memoirs, Dean Taylor says he has made a "violent" effort to tell the truth. A sketch of his life and his public speeches follow the memoirs but "Each has been labeled fully as a stop signal to the public."

The typed pages of the autobiographical volume offer a rare mine for a publisher. Beside intimate stories of the founding of the University and events in its official career, there are anecdotes of B. Hall; water tower class numeral rivalries; a chapter on the code of duello, telling of famous fist fights at the University; and a priceless facsimile of the original draft of "The Eyes of Texas."

A picture of the old man building when it consisted only of the west wing, which stood against a barren skyline, and a picture of the University as it appeared when the state capitol was being erected are included in the volume.

From Dean Taylor's memoirs it is learned that the cornerstone of the University Main Hall has two errors. The date carved on the stone is Nov. 16, 1882. That was the date intended for the ceremony. A "norther" caused delay and the laying took place Nov. 17. The other error is spelling the name of Regent E. J. Stukins, Stimpkins.

Dean Taylor traced the University's birth to a remark of Prof. O. H. Cooper of Sam Houston Normal Institute at a dinner given in Sam Houston's former home, Huntsville, at the opening of the institute. Cooper complimented Gov. O. M. Roberts on the founding of the school and said: "I think you should have the credit of starting the State University during your term." Roberts became interested, requested Cooper to write about the plan, and submitted it to the legislature. Legislation was by election held Sept. 6, 1881.

The fights, concerning which Taylor at great pains obtained first-hand versions, include notable battles between men now famous in public affairs. Watt Gregory and Bob Henry both later to become famous Texans in Washington, fought in the cedar brakes west of Austin over a dispute now uncontain, though attributed to rivalry over a senate committee chair ship. Class fights between the Laws and Engineers and the full story of Pergrinus, patron saint, are given in detail. C. E. Scoggins, author of The Tyeoon, is photographed in a mo-lasse and features costume he received during one of the class frays.

State tax rates have had a see-saw career in Texas. Usually rates have been lower just before a governor's campaign for a second term and have gone up in the first summer of a new governor's term.

Prior to 1884 one levy was made for all purposes. In 1883 the tax for all purposes had been 30 cents on $100 valuation. A separate school levy was started in 1884 at 12 1-2 cents. A separate Confederate Pension levy started in 1913 at five cents.

The constitution limits the general revenue tax and the school tax to 25 cents each and the Confederate pensions levy to seven cents. Within these limits the state automatic tax board works out mathematically a tax rate that will, supposedly, meet all expenditures. Failure to collect the full taxes in depression years has resulted in deficits. In two depression years the state legislature also reduced the possible general revenue tax by statute, establishing 22-cent limit. Lowest tax after separation of school and general taxes was four cents general levy and 16 1-2 cents school tax in 1910. Lowest after three levies were required was 12 1-2 cents general tax, 20 school tax, and five cents Confederate pension tax. This year's is expected to be 35 cents general tax, 20 cents school tax and seven cents Confederate pension tax.

An edition of 150 pages last week recalled to pioneer Central Texans that the Austin American-Statesman, once, was a four-page paper supported by the Democratic party. After the war between the states, Austin publications had been Republican. The state Democratic convention in January, 1873, took cognizance of the need of publicity and by resolution authorized establishment of the paper. It was first issued as "The Democratic Statesman." John Cardwell, was the editor. Early numbers were chiefly political. The next few weeks will see the combined papers into which it has "grown," housed in a new modern building. The edition was in honor of the new building. Stories in it told of many Austin and Texas "firsts."

Patrick Dacus Moreland, governor's secretary already well known for his poems, has now entered the radio field. He appeared recently in a "national hour" giving selections from his poetical works, and received an appreciated fat check from the sponsors of his broadcast.

Hunt Pair After Clyde Hijacking

ABILENE, Aug. 4.—Following a hijacking at Clyde in which $10 was taken from a filling station operator, two men were being sought by West Texas peace officers last night.

Fred Kniffen, who runs a station three miles west of Clyde on the Bankhead highway, told Deputy Sheriff Bill Ray two men in a 1929 Chevrolet coupe drove into his place about 9:30 o'clock. One of the pair drew a gun on Kniffen and forced him to stand still, while Mrs. Kniffen, in the station, was ordered to bring out all money in the cash box. The two men drove west down the highway, and Abilene officers were quickly notified to watch roads leading into the city from the east. However, the pair failed to show up here.

They were driving a 1929 Chevrolet coupe, with an Oklahoma license plate, No. 135-958. Both were about 35 years old, one wore khaki suit and the other black trousers and checkered shirt, it was reported.

Deputy Sheriff Ray came here later in the evening, to confer with Abilene police on the case.

2,000,000th Visitor Chooses Navy

Luella Lee Weaver, 18, of Los Angeles, was the 2,000,000th visitor at the Texas Centennial Exposition. One of the honors accorded her was a date with her choice from the army, marine and navy officers encamped there. She chose Lieut. J. P. Roach, of the Navy. As a result, Capt. Leonard Smith, of the army, and Lieut. J. C. McHaney, of the Marines, had to "toe" the pair through the grounds.

REPEAL ISSUE TOPS PRIMARY IN TENNESSEE

By H. I. SAMFORD
United Press Staff Correspondent

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 4 (UP)—Repeal of state prohibition laws will be one of the important issues facing voters of this state when they go to the primary polls Aug. 6 to nominate Democratic candidates.

There will be about 30 people named for the state committee to nominate a few candidates, but none of them has campaigned for major offices. Democratic nominations are tantamount to election.

While there is no fight of national significance in the state, the internal strife has been bitter. The race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, in which loyalty to President Roosevelt and the TVA has been made a paramount issue, has been lively.

Legionnaire in Race
Gordon Browning, of Huntington, former congressman, and Burdett Dossert, of Jacksboro, former state American Legion head and county school superintendent, are the major contenders.

C. E. Wright, of Oneida, the third candidate, has campaigned little.

Dossert favors a local option form of liquor control, while Browning promises a statewide referendum for the desire of the people.

Crump Supports Browning
Former Rep. E. H. "Boss" Crump, of Memphis, head of the Shelby County political organization, has given his unqualified support to Browning. Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar has come out for Dossert.

In Memphis, the state's most populous city, repeal is a vital issue. Thousands of dollars are spent annually there for legal liquor from Arkansas, just across the Mississippi River. Business men long have protested against this flow of money outside the state.

The race for the congressional seat from the Fifth (Nashville) district, left vacant by the recent death of Speaker Joseph W. Byrnes, is centered in a three-way fight between Will T. Cheek, financier; Carlton Loser, county attorney-general, and Richard Atkinson, former county attorney-general, all of Nashville.

Junior U. S. Sen. Nathan Bachman, up for re-nomination, is expected to win easily over his opponent, John R. Neal, Knoxville.

Q. What is the Indian population of Texas at this time? R. A. Thornton.

water is taken care of and does not come from the Ranger sand, the hopes of Cisconians may mount again. We are assured that the Hickok is a good well. So if we can save it or make it a bigger one by drilling deeper into the sand which has only been touched by the bit, Cisco is likely to get on the boom again and revive the nervousness of the old days when people expected to become owners of oil wells and all the luxuries that was supposed to follow. A good well in this sand would prove up lots of territory and that is the best thing to be hoped for. May it come?

that will be available under the quota allowed this state. Of course some disappointments are anticipated.

"As the need of the applicant is the yardstick by which the possibility of his being accepted or rejected is determined, it will be necessary that trained case workers be given control of intake and investigations. Applicants will apply at your county welfare office, where interviews will be held. In the larger counties, we expect to add to our staff workers who will cooperate with your county welfare employees in handling this new phase of our work. In the smaller counties, where she is only employed part time, the county welfare worker will be asked to assist us and we will supplement her present salary to make it possible for her to put in full time.

"As applications are referred to WPA district headquarters for final analysis and decision, there is no particular need for this work to be completed in a few days or weeks. Consequently, may I request that you assure those appealing to you that everyone will be given an opportunity to make application, but with our limited personnel, it cannot be accomplished overnight. As the WPA office accepts the applications they will arrange to notify them where and when to report for work. Writing or calling at the local or district office is to be discouraged, as no information will be given out.

"The fact that an applicant is without a job does not follow that he will be given one by the Works Progress Administration. Only those who can prove dire need have any reason to expect to be accepted. Where one is accepted, they will be entitled to receive surplus commodities until such time as their pay checks arrive.

"To sum it up: First, The need of the applicant is the deciding factor for his or her employment.

"Second: Case workers will fill out forms with information given by the applicant and from what has been learned or established through accepted channels (home visits, etc).

"Third: Final decision rests with WPA, the case worker having nothing to do with this matter.

"Fourth: There will be approximately 61,000 jobs for about 185,000 people, and many will be disappointed at not getting a place.

"I will gladly meet with you and any and all civic or service organizations, to explain this new department. My primary interest is to assist those unfortunate citizens to better their condition, and to point out to the more fortunate ones how they may lend a hand in assisting you and the local welfare bodies.

"May I ask your continued and highly appreciated cooperation, so that we may put those showing the greatest need for employment to work.

"Yours very truly,
"C. J. SWEENEY,
District Administrator."

Need To Be Basis Of WPA Employment

County commissioners have received the following letter from C. J. Sweeney, district administrator for the Texas Relief Commission, pointing out that the need of the applicants for positions under the WPA setup will be the basis on which applications for jobs will be approved, and giving some of the regulations that will be used as a guide in considering applications.

"The Federal Works Progress Administration has assigned to the Texas Relief Commission the task of accepting applications from the needy unemployed in this state.

"The fact that an application for work is taken does not mean the applicant will receive employment. It is anticipated that there will be at least three persons for every job

Why Gulf is the Gas for August

"C'MON IN, FELLAS, and cool off!" Most days are hot in August. Gasoline must be refined specially for this weather. If it isn't, part of the fuel goes out the exhaust unburned, wasted... and you don't get the mileage you should. Use That Good Gulf Gasoline in August. It's refinery-adjusted for summer weather—"Kept in Step with the Calendar"—all of it goes to work, none of it goes to waste.

Exporters Surpass Britain
Comparing Japanese cotton cloth exports with those of Great Britain Miyake states that Japan exported 2,735,109,000 square yards in 1935 and Britain only 1,948,884,000. In 1932 Britain was exporting more than Japan.

"Despite its impressive progress, one may legitimately ask whether the cotton industry will continue thriving forever," the writer continues. "Several problems must be discussed before an answer can be attempted.

"First of all, it must be noted that the rate of increase has begun to become smaller, despite the fact that cotton cloth exports last year were the largest on record. Still more significant is the fact that apprehension of over-production is being felt, due to the great expansion of productive facilities and the continuous increase in output, while the rate of consumption is remaining static.

Quota System Enforced
"As a means of mitigating the threat the Spinners' association has enforced a quota system of production among its members, but this has led to constant disputes among spinners, weavers and traders. On the whole, it is safe to say that the cotton industry is facing a period of trial."

Discussing possible methods of dealing with the situation, the article states:
"There are a number of ways in which the situation might be met; for example, a further cut in the production cost, the manufacture of high quality goods, transformation of the cotton industry into a 'comprehensive' fiber industry and more vigorous efforts to develop foreign trade might singly or in combination prove instrumental in furthering development of the cotton business.

"There is no possibility of restoring the old free trade system and discriminate barriers against Japan's goods are being strengthened."

COTTON TARIFF WORRIES JAPAN

TOKYO, Aug. 4 (U.P.)—Japan's cotton industry is suffering from the twin specters of over-production and a slackening of the export trade. Taking stock of the industrial situation after a period of rapid expansion, Harutera Miyake, writing in the periodical Industry and Education, declares that raising of tariff walls against Japanese goods has prevented many difficulties. The article quotes statistics showing that at the end of 1935 there were 10,330,320 spindles and an annual output of 3,560,734 bales of yarn, as compared to 7,045,029 spindles and 2,524,696 bales in 1930.
