What Do The People Want?

Recently I was in a city where for some time considerable agitation had been going on in favor of a splendid civic center. On the street I met the man in charge of the committee to put the plan over.

"How is the civic center coming along?" I asked.
"It isn't coming along at all," he replied. "Bill doesn't want it. When it got to go to Bill he stopped it."

"But," I inquired, "what do the people want?"
The man threw back his head. "Ha, ha!" And he walked up the street still ha-ha-ing.

Now what made that man ha ha that way? Had I said something irresistibly funny? I am asking myself, are we a democracy or a republic or an oligarchy or a monarchy, or what the deuce are we?

The city has a hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants. From what I understand the majority of those hundred and fifty thousand people want that civic center. But they don't get it. Why?

Answer: Organized leaders and unorganized public. It is remarkable what the organized few can do with the unorganized many. And it is also remarkable what a powerful personality can do with the organized few.

I remember my first experience in a matter of that kind. It was quite important to the promoters of a certain organization that certain men be elected as its officers.

"But how," I asked in my greenness, "are you going to get those men elected?"

The old war horse who was steering the undertaking eyed me indulgently.

"Just elect 'em," he grinned. And he did elect 'em, too. The chairman of the meeting announced that they would now hear from the nominating committee. Whereupon the chairman of the nominating committee arose, and with impressive solemnity read weightily the names of certain persons.

His last syllable had not died away before a man in the audience leaped to his feet and began to offer up enthusiastic praise and thanksgiving to the nominating committee for the marvelous work they had done in securing such wonderful officers. It was his great privilege to move that the list of persons proposed by the nominating committee be accepted and those persons elected.

He had not closed his mouth before another man popped up in another part of the audience and likewise, launched into a dissertation of glowing approval, and said it was his honor to be able to second the motion. Whereupon the chairman of the meeting immediately put the question to the house and asked that all in favor say aye. A chorus of ayes was heard.

"The motion is carried," announced the chairman.
He did not ask for any discussion, and he did not give the opposition a chance to vote.

Once at an executive meeting of an international organization, I heard the chairman put a motion to the assembly. No man answered.

"If there is no other business," he said, "we stand adjourned."

But even at the risk of causing somebody to laugh himself to death, I am still asking the question, "What do the people want?"

Q. Where were the remains of the heroes of the Alamo interred? S. G. Rockdale.

A. Recent excavations in San Fernando Cathedral, San Antonio, resulted in discovery of bones, and human ash-dust, confirming a letter from Col. Juan N. Seguin, written long after their burial, telling of having buried the remains of the burned bodies in front of the altar of the church.

Q. Who was W. V. Criswell, whose remains were removed from an abandoned Fayette county cemetery to the Austin State cemetery recently? A. S. Henrietta.

A. He fought in the Battle of San Jacinto in Capt. Jesse Billingsley's company. He was a native of Kentucky and died near Praha, Fayette county. Several grandchildren live in Texas.

Q. Do you welcome letters commenting on the "Let's Know Texas and Texans" feature? F. R. Waco

A. The writer is glad to receive letters of approval, suggestion, or criticism, his desire being to make the feature of greatest possible help to all who are interested in any way in Texas.

Q. Where and what is Granite Mountain? S. F. Alamo.

A. It is a huge mountain of 80 acres of pink granite about two miles from Marble Falls, Burnet county, from which granite was used for the State Capitol at Austin, for the Galveston sea walls and many important buildings throughout the Nation. The quarry is still being operated.

CENTENNIAL SONG BOOK

In the homes, in the schools, in public gatherings of all kinds, Texans are singing the best known typical songs of Texas—songs of the range, songs of the Texas home, patriotic songs—songs every Texan should know and delight in singing. Twenty-eight of the best songs sung in Texas have been carefully selected by competent musicians, set to music, and published in a 26 page, 6 x 9 booklet on heavy coated paper, with covers in colors.

The booklet will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents. Send all orders to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

The saga of the last frontier of western progress blends curiously but effectively at the Fort Worth Frontier Centennial today with the new frontier of entertainment. "Sashay All," rousing musical climax from "The Last Frontier," is shown above, scores of Texans participating in modern conceptions of folk dancing of the period. And below is an air-view of "Casa Manana," most talked-of cafe-theater in the world, with its huge circular stage floating in water and revolving the cast before the eyes of 4,000 spectators. Close by their glittering attractions on the Frontier Centennial grounds are "Pioneer Palace" and its Honky Tonk revue, and "Jumbo"—"Bigger than a Show, Better than a Circus."

SCIENTISTS OF WORLD TO HELP AMERICA LAUNCH FIRST CANCER INSTITUTE AT MADISON SEPT. 7

By ANTHONY G. DE LORENZO
 United Press Staff Correspondent
MADISON, Wis., Aug. 18—America's first cancer institute will attract world famous scientists who have devoted the most productive years of their lives seeking a cure for the disease to the University of Wisconsin campus Sept. 7, 8 and 9.
 Investigators whose contributions to the scientific and medical world based upon careful laboratory research are considered among the most advanced data available in treating the dreaded disease have been invited here by Dr. William D. Stovall, director of the state laboratory of hygiene and chairman of the three-day conference.
 The institute, financed by the Wisconsin Alumni Research foundation, has as its purpose, according to Dr. Stovall, to bring together internationally prominent investigators for a critical analysis of the cancer problem, for an exchange of ideas among themselves and for the stimulating effects such a meeting will have on young investigators.
To Serve As Clearing House
 Dr. Stovall explained further that the institute will seek to translate the expert opinion after consideration of the results of research into the possible signifi-

day from a fellow because it's some traveler."
 "Going away?" Molly asked.
 "I'm thinking of it."
 Odd. Everybody seemed to be going away. Molly was wishing now that she had gone to Lake Placid, as Donna had suggested. Then she wouldn't be moving away from familiar surroundings in a car that could travel. Nelson Whittaker must make a marvelous salary to be able to go out and buy a car like this so casually.
 Molly breathed quickly, then spoke impulsively: "I'm afraid it was only an impulse, asking me out to dinner, and already you're regretting it. Or perhaps I hurt your pride accepting your invitation and coming dressed like this. Somehow I have the feeling you are not pleased. There's something wrong. Let's turn back."
 "Not a chance!" His voice rang vibrantly. "I'm sorry if I've been rude. To tell the truth, there's a deal. I'm trying to put over a big deal, and my nerves are jumpy. Maybe you've never gambled. If I lose—"
 "My father says you can't trust anybody who's too anxious to sell you stock these days," Molly said.
 Nelson Whittaker nodded. "Just let me catch any of my friends selling me the wrong kind of stock! Well, here we are at Frenchy's."
 He assisted Molly from the car, and she entered the building with a feeling of relief. "Frenchy's" was really not far. Perhaps 10 miles or so from the city.
 "Here's 'Frenchy' himself," her companion said. He raised his hand in salute. "Hello, 'Frenchy'!"
 The wrinkled, dark-haired old man who had advanced to meet them stared a moment, perplexed. "Back from the dead!" he whispered.
 Nelson Whittaker laughed. "More alive than ever, 'Frenchy.' Ghosts don't drive 12 miles for good food and wine."
 The table at which Molly and Whittaker were seated was directly in front of the orchestra stand. Molly stared at the young musicians frankly. Already a plan was forming in her mind. One of the youths had a sensitive, attractive face. He would be the one to aid her, if a way opened for her to communicate with him. "Ask them to play something from Leoncavallo's 'I Pagliacci,'" Molly said quickly, and was rewarded by seeing the blank amazement in her escort's eyes. He didn't know grand opera, Molly said, and would be loathe to reveal his ignorance.
 "May I send them a little note with a request number?" she asked, smiling flatteringly, straight into his eyes. "I've decided on something more romantic. From 'Butterfly'."
 "Certainly. Here, waiter, pencil and paper."
 The waiter was suddenly animated. He placed a stubby pencil and pad of paper before Molly. When the note went up Molly saw the young man with the sensitive face smile. She had requested Butterfly's aria, "Some Day He'll Come," and as she listened to the tender music she thought of Brent.
 "Frenchy's" guests were regarding the extraordinary young lady who appeared to care more for music than wine with momentary interest. Molly's companion, his mood mellowed by his first drink, whispered indulgently: "You women, with your music!"
 Molly's long lashes swept her cheeks and were raised suddenly to reveal deliberate admiration. "For you men!" she said.
 She sipped the wine cautiously. A long time ago—a very long time ago when she was safe and protected—she had heard that sometimes knockout drops were administered in wine in dangerous dives. So she raised the glass to her lips but barely tasted its contents.
 Some impassioned Wagner music flowed about them now. The dark-haired young musicians were playing with fine feeling. Boys who could play like that could surely be trusted. Maybe she didn't know this was a wicked sort of place. Or maybe it wasn't wicked. You couldn't judge a place always by the people who came to it. Molly knew now she had definitely decided Nelson Whittaker was not to be trusted.
 The elderly Frenchman was making his way toward their table. "For you," he said to Whittaker. "A man out front—Louis! He called himself—wants to see you."
 Molly waited only a moment after her companion had left. She wrote an address on a slip of paper. On the other sheet she wrote: "Am at Frenchy's. Twelve miles from the bridge. Place with a green front. Please come, Molly." Taking the bill from her purse—she noted it was $20—she folded it within the paper. Then, quickly crossing to the orchestra stand, she placed the papers in the hand of the young musician.
 She saw him read one message and place the other in his pocket. After a moment he looked toward Molly and nodded, a smile lighting his dark eyes.
 "He thinks I've repented of a bad bargain and am sending for my best beauty," Molly thought, adding audaciously to herself, "Well, I am!"

SOUTH RALLIES AT ROOSEVELT FETE SEPT. 10

By DAVE WARNER
CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 18(UP)—Southern Democratic supporters of the Roosevelt administration will give their 1936 election campaign a sendoff at a seven state rally here Sept. 10.
 An afternoon address by President Roosevelt will be the focal point of the entire meeting program.
 This opportunity to participate in a gigantic political "family reunion" probably will bring 50,000 Democrats from tobacco and cotton fields; from the mountains and dozens of Southern cities and towns. Florida, Georgia, the Carolinas, Virginia, Alabama and Tennessee will be represented.
Attendance May Reach 100,000
 Haywood Robbins, young lawyer in charge of arrangements, is preparing this municipally of 90,000 persons for a possible influx of 100,000 visitors.
 Object of the meeting is, essentially, to weld the "solid South" into an even stronger New Deal camp.
 In the rear of Charlotte's little armory-auditorium, WPA workers are bolting down seats and adding final touches to a new concrete stadium. The meeting will serve as its inauguration.
 An estimated 20,000 persons will crowd into the stadium proper. Temporary stands around the rim and on the central field will place another 20,000 to 30,000 in sight of the speaker's platform. Loudspeakers will carry the speeches to those unable to enter the stadium, and the program will be broadcast.
City to Be Bedecked
 A display of bunting and flags unprecedented locally will line the President's route to the stadium. At least 25 bands will join in a street procession.
 Tentative plans call for the festivities to start shortly after noon, and end by nightfall.
 National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper are expected. Senators likely to attend are Hugo Black, Alabama; Walter George, Georgia; James Byrnes, South Carolina; Harry Byrd, Virginia; Josiah Bailey and Robert Reynolds, both of North Carolina.
 Other outstanding guests probably will include Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus of North Carolina, Gov. Olin Johnston of South Carolina, Rep. Robert L. Doughton, N. C., and Clark Howell, Atlanta publisher.
