Teamwork Important For Football Squad

Dexter Shelley football coach, reported a good morning practice at the 7:30 hour today. The boys are beginning to get used to the ball and are getting control of their muscles, he said. Shelley coached the backfield while Bill Cooper will see to it that the line holds fast, if training continues to check as they expect it to do. Both coaches emphasize the importance of teamwork and perfect co-ordination if this light team is to win laurels on the Oil Belt grid this season. There is no reason, they say, why a light team should not overcome a team with less action and trained movement. Boys and training in accept less action and training in all phases of the preliminary field and this is to continue throughout the training and playing season.

Full Investigation Demanded

The minority political party, Seiyukai, has taken official notice of the widespread rumors that have been circulated about alleged government intentions. It submitted a written request that the nature of any "lead" might be traced. "Recently rumors have been current on measures the government has not yet decided on for reform of state administration, causing considerable popular unrest and disturbance in financial circles," the party's statement said. "If the cause of the leakage is found within the government, enforcement of stricter discipline among officials is urgently called for. If such rumors are groundless appropriate steps should be taken by the government in accordance with existing regulations."

Hired Thinking

A frank columnist, speaking from his own experience, declares that much reading keeps one from thinking, just as dope keeps one from feeling. "I myself read too much," he admits, "but I do so with the full knowledge of the consequences. The fact is that I prefer reading to thinking." The man who wishes to keep his muscles and lungs and liver in good condition mows his lawn and digs his own garden. If he prefers loafing to keeping fit, he hires these things done. So we who read constantly may be said to have hired our thinking done. We let the author do the thinking. Intelligent persons addicted to reading may take umbrage at this, but it is the truth. We have all seen people with minds dulled by much reading. We have also seen persons whose conversation consists almost entirely of high-row discussion and repetition of the ideas of authors, with never an idea they have arrived at themselves through original thinking. Lincoln read little. Herbert Spencer, the great English philosopher, wasn't much of a reader. Neither was Thomas A. Edison. One settled great political issues, one clarified philosophy and one made unprecedented contributions to mechanical knowledge and progress. They used their brains.

Restful Noon-Hour

Energetic Americans often find the siesta of southern people amusing, although Americans in tropical climates soon follow the native example. Now, it appears, a nap or period of quiet and rest immediately after the noon meal has its advantages even in the temperate zone. The afternoon nap between 1 and 2 o'clock has been established at Stephens' College, for women, at Columbia, Mo. The faculty reports an appreciable improvement in scholastic attainment. Perhaps few people in this busy land have opportunity—either as to time or suitable place—for a post-luncheon daily nap. Yet it is probably true that the duties of the afternoon would be better performed, the fatigue at the end of the day would be greatly lessened, and general health would be improved, if more Americans made saner and more leisurely use of their noon-hour.

OUT OUR WAY

HEROES ARE MADE—NOT BORN.

BORN THIRTY YEARS TOO SOON

and whose forehead bears a crease from the tomahawk of a Comanche Indian, said:
"I'd like to shake hands with Garner—Cactus Jack Garner. To meet Vice President Garner, I wouldn't give a darn."
"I hit Texas in the Spring of 1875," said the former Texas Ranger. "Fellow named James Parrish owned a ranch near Leon Springs, about 25 miles from San Antonio. Some years before, Parrish had imported from Asia a buck and three female goats. When I got there he had pretty sizeable flocks and an order to deliver 100 male kids to ranchers in and around Eagle Pass on the Rio Grande river."
Met General Beauregard
"Parrish was scared of reports of Comanche Indians on raiding parties in the counties of Bexar, Uvalde and Maverick. The famous Confederate general, Beauregard was a visitor at the ranch when I rode in. I needed a job, so I volunteered to drive the herd through Eagle Pass, providing Parrish would send along with me Patrick Thompson, foreman of the ranch. He did without seeing a redskin. From these goats were sired the present herds of Garner."
Asked about the scar on his forehead, Vatek said, "Oh, that's just a crease I got from a Comanche tomahawk at Neuces Canyon in Uvalde county. I was a Ranger then and we were trailing horse thieves."
Vatek's first meeting with Jesse James was strange. He was camped on the Texas border with Bill Patterson, of Boonville, Mo., home town of the James brothers. They were preparing breakfast.
"Three hombres rode up," said Vatek. "I knew one of 'em. He was Finky Burns, a horse thief. I made up my mind the other two were outlaws, too, cause Bill did not introduce 'em. Well, they ate breakfast and stayed with us nearly three days. They were pleasant hombres, at that. They didn't have much to say. We didn't ask any questions, either."
Frank James Not Identified
"About a week after they had drifted, Bill asked me if I knew the three riders. One was Burns, I told him, and the other was Jesse James. He seemed surprised that I guessed correct on James. He never told me the other fellow's name, but I suspect it was Frank James."
"Now Jesse it was a fine-looking fellow. His features were clearcut. His dark hair was long and wavy. His manners were faultless. Jesse wasn't a thug in any sense of the word. He had a code of honor such as it was. He was merely a product of the time."
"I knew Wild Bill Hickok when he was marshal of Fort Dodge, Kas. I met him once at Ogalaia, Neb. Bill was about six foot-one tall, narrow-hipped and supple as a panther. A fine looking man, and one you'd pick out of a crowd. Hickok differed from Bill Cody, though. He was not a ruthless killer—that is to say, he didn't go looking for trouble, but when it came his way he didn't shay away from it."
Noted For Lightning Draw
"He could get plenty old in the eye. His draw was like lightning. And like many another two-gun man of the Old West, he was always polite; in fact, I drank with him on a number of occasions."
"Buffalo Bill Cody killed in self-defense. Always Indians. He, too, was a fine specimen, as everyone knows. I knew Cody well. The last time I met him was 35 years ago out in Illinois."
Vatek was one of the first five white men to explore the interior of Dutch Guiana in 1872. After that he sought adventure in the Far West.
"Funny things, too," he remarked. "I went to school in New York with Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the Supreme Court. That was in the old Tom Hunter school, known as 'old 35'. I was a few classes ahead of him. I was born at 653 Broadway."
Vatek said he came East because of his wife. She was an eastern girl and a university graduate.
"If I had my life to live over again," he said, "I'd do just as I have done—only I'd remain in the West."

KING ALEXANDER of Serbia, weak in mind and spirit, was 24 when, in 1900, he married his mistress, Draga Mashin. Then Serbia suffered under the cruelty, intolerance and selfishness of a queen who had no thought but to increase her power and that of her two arrogant brothers in the army. When the congress objected to her actions, the queen had Alexander suspend the constitution, dismiss the legislators, and replace them with men of Draga's choice. Stories were spread of Draga's cruelty, selfishness, and immorality. These the people believed, and prepared to overthrow the regime of Alexander and Draga.
Taking advantage of that feeling, one night in 1903, a band of conspirators entered the palace, slew Alexander and Draga and hurled their bodies into the streets of Belgrade.
This story is recalled by a picture of King Alexander on a Serbian stamp that was issued during his reign.

necessary to get rid of his car sooner. His turnover is more rapid. Wherefore dealers find themselves with used cars, and manufacturers themselves have trouble.

This is due to style changes, explained a representative of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He urges an audience of automotive engineers to ease up on that form of activity. Aided and abetted by them, the public is growing too "style-conscious" about autos, just as it has grown about many other things.

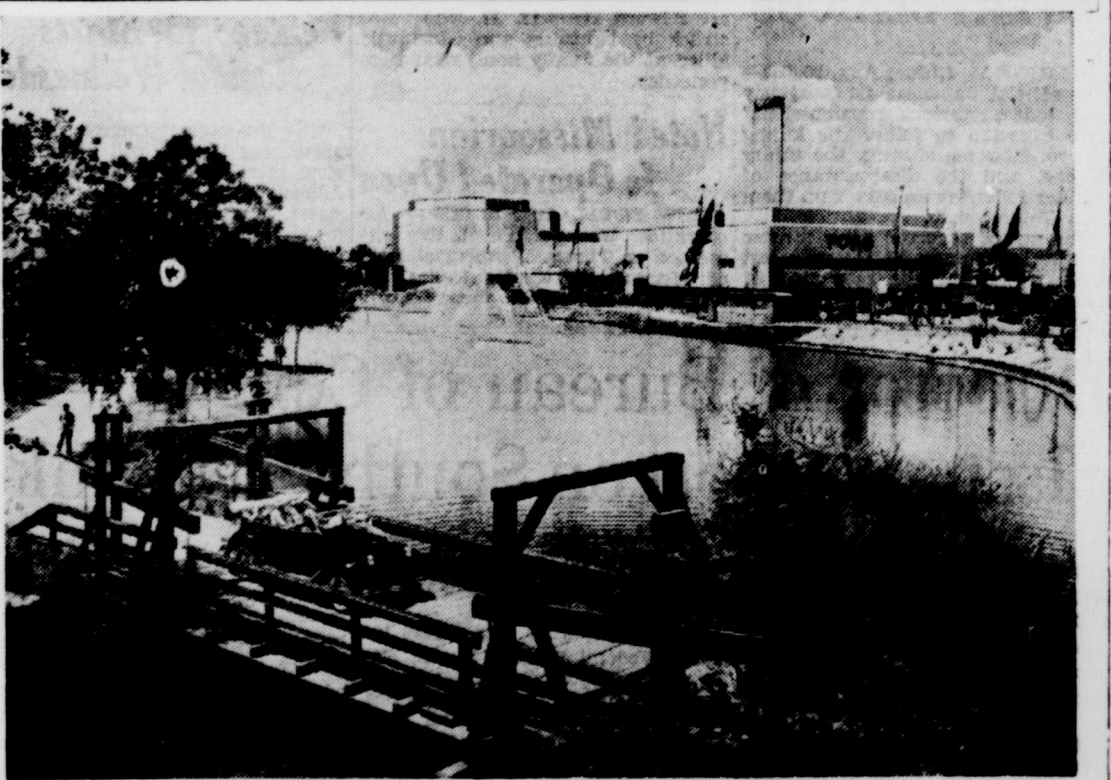

"If you make continued changes," he says, "how can you expect the public to have confidence in your output. You must build just as solidly from the art side as you have from the mechanical side. Right now you are over sold on novelties, and so is the public. I am hoping that you will develop a car style that will last just as long as the engine does." Many more of us are hoping that. It is bad enough to have clothing styles change once or twice a year. Radio receiver styles are changing too often, too. Also furniture styles and house styles. Soon we'll all have to get a complete new outfit every year, from front steps to garbage can and clothes line.

EASTERNER, 83, EXTOLS WEST'S TWO-GUN MEN

By GEORGE R. MORRIS, Jr.
United Press Staff Correspondent
MYSTIC, Conn., Aug 25 (UP)—An 83-year-old insurance agent, Leon Vatek, bit off half a black cigar, leaned back in his swivel chair to day and told how he drove Texas' first angora goat herd through Eagle Pass, the nucleus for the herds owned by Vice President John Nance Garner in Uvalde county. The former "Fency" Vatek of the Chisholm trail, who camped three days with Jesse James, knew Wild Bill Hickok, Buffalo Bill Cody, Bill Thompson and "Pink" Burns.

MISS MCKISSICK MARRIES IOWA PARK COACH

Miss Helen McKissick became the bride of Mr. Richard Allison of Iowa Park this morning, in an impressive ceremony performed at the lovely decorated home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. T. McKissick, at Fifth and Ave. I. Dr. McKissick officiated. About fifty guests were present.

Little Anne Arbough was flower girl, with Ruth McKissick as bridesmaid, and Charles McKissick as best man.

The bride's wedding gown was white net worn over white satin, copied from the wedding gown of her mother, which accentuated her brunette beauty to advantage. The bridesmaid wore a gown of peach organdy and carried a nosegay of multi-colored flowers. Little Anne wore a peach organdy, carrying a basket of rosebuds which she strewed in the path of the bride.

The spacious living room was decorated with zinnias, roses, marigolds and ferns. An improvised altar was constructed over the fireplace, on each side of which stood two tall white candles.

Marion Bruce sang "O Promise Me," accompanied by Mrs. C. M. Arbough, pianist, sister of the bride, who played the wedding march by Mendelssohn.

After the wedding, the guests were invited into the dining room, where a large table was laid with lovely Madiera cloth. Silver holders held pink candies, and a beautiful bouquet of cut flowers stood in the middle of the table.

A large cake, three tiers, with a miniature bride and groom was cut for the guests. Punch was served with the cake.

Tropic Plants Grow Fruit at Centennial
DALLAS, Aug. 25. — The lower Rio Grande Valley exhibit, the only growing exhibit at the Texas Centennial Exposition has changed faces since the world's fair was opened June 6.

Flower plants, shrubbery, and trees, peculiar to that section of Texas, which were transplanted the latter part of May, are flowering into bloom in their adopted setting.

Now only half grown, the Ponderosa lemon is five times the size of a normal lemon. It was average size on opening day. The Papaya plant, referred to as breadfruit in the Bible has begun to bloom.

"Our rubber tree causes much excitement," laughed Mr. White. "Visitors pass by, crane their necks to see if we are looking, then yank the leaves to see if they will stretch. Of course they don't, and the people always seem so disappointed."

Twelve palm trees have put on a half dozen leaves apiece since the opening of the Exposition, and more than 20 varieties of flowers native to the valley are blooming now, which were not in bloom then.

Which Did Mother Wear?

Uniform styles at Texas State College for Women (CIA) have changed with the prevailing fashion, and the demure miss of 1916 bears little resemblance to the trim young modern of today. Miss Joy Hawley of Denton models the uniform worn by her mother two decades ago, and the uniform she will wear this fall.

Six Texas Flags? Here Are Ten More.

Many believe that Texas had only six flags flown over her borders in the four centuries of her history, but in reality there were battle flags from seventeen different states flown during the Texas Revolution. Jan Fortune, author of Cavalade of Texas, has gotten together all these historic banners for use in the Cavalade at the Texas Centennial Exposition. These include flags from Ohio, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, South Carolina, Alabama, and some half dozen flags fashioned by Texas men and women patriots. Ten of the flags are shown above held by actors on the Cavalade set.
