Business Boom Forecast by Gov't. Officials

MANY LINES TO OPERATE AT 1929 PEAK

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17 (UP)—A holiday business boom hitting 1929 prosperity levels and rising 10 per cent above last year was forecast today by department of commerce officials.

Assistant Secretary Earnest Draper said preliminary reports indicated many lines of business would operate at 1929 peaks. He based his contention on improved conditions, lessening of unemployment, higher earnings and distribution by scores of corporations of millions of dollars in dividends, and increased wages and bonuses.

'Sky High' Play Sees First Night's Run

Tonight is the night! The curtain will go up at 8:17 promptly for the first presentation of the big community show "Sky High" which is being given by the East Ward P.-T. A. for the purpose of aiding the under-privileged children of Cisco.

You will first be entertained by a specialty number, "Reddy's Mammoth Show", a circus number consisting of East Ward 4 and 5th grade actors, with Donald Squaglia as the bally-hoo man.

After this specialty comes the thrilling three-act comedy-drama, "Sky High" with a talented cast of 12 people headed by J. B. King as Walter Stephens, the designer of the plane, and Shirley Shields, his stenographer, played by Gertrude (Dutch) Van Horn.

Twenty-six high school girls add plenty of color, pep and rhythm to the play with songs and dances in the four choruses, The Troupers, The Air Hostesses, The Dutch Chorus and the Big Hats.

Mrs. Ben Krauskopf's 7-piece orchestra will entertain you before the curtain goes up. Billie Ponder appears between the first and second act in a soft shoe tap dance number, while Doris Jean Stirling does a buck tap dance between the second and third acts.

Between the first and second acts the presentation of eighteen kiddies in the popularity contest will be made. A booth will be placed at the door tonight where you will be given an opportunity to cast ten votes for your favorite child as you turn in your ticket.

Remember to vote and help your favorite boy and girl win the prize of two dollars. Contest closes Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock and the winners will be presented between the first and second acts of the show Wednesday night.

This community show is being sponsored by the East Ward P.-T. A. in cooperation with the Grammar school, as so many have believed. One-half the money derived from the sale of tickets and advertising will go into a fund to provide better food, warmer clothes and school supplies for children whose parents are unable to supply them.

Miss Lydia Sherman, an employee of the National Producing Company of Kansas City, manager and director of the play, has worked hard and faithfully developing the characterizations of this show, and those who desire real entertainment and who enjoy seeing their home folks take active parts in such amusements, will not miss this means of thanksgiving each and every one.

To those who have given their time and talent to take part in the play, Mrs. Fred Steffy, president of the East Ward P.-T. A., and those directly connected, extend their appreciation and thanks.

Mrs. Fred Hayes, who has been so seriously ill, was reported resting some better this afternoon. She is usually reported better during the day but her fever runs to 107 or there about each night. A fourth blood transfusion is expected to be administered this afternoon at 6 o'clock, hoping that it may serve to counteract the rise of high temperature for tonight.

Solves 'Home vs. Career' Issue

U. S. Army to Enlist 17,000 Men For Duty

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Nov. 17 (UP)—As a result of increasing allotments for enlisted men by the war department the Eighth Corps Area will enlist approximately 17,000 men during the month of November.

This figure included enlistment of new quotas, re-inlistments and enlistments to fill normal losses occasioned by discharge.

The increase was in line with war department plans for bringing the enlisted strength of the U. S. Army up to 165,000 men by July 1, 1937, as authorized by Congress in 1935.

Filling of additional war department enlistment quotas during November and December was expected.

FARMERS TAKE TURKEYS HOME AND WON'T SELL

CUERO, Nov. 17 (UP)—A sizeable increase in the supply and a drop in price gave thousands of Thanksgiving turkeys a brief respite today.

The markets closed at noon yesterday, and farmers, angry because buyers offered only 11 and 12 cents a pound, compared with 16 and 17 cents paid last year took their turkeys home.

"This city, 'the turkey capital' of the world, had its smallest Thanksgiving business in 15 years.

Getting Ready for Eastland Football

By TOMMY LA MORE Coaches Dexter Shelley and W. E. Cooper are spending long afternoon practices with the Cisco Lobos in preparation for Friday's game with the Eastland Mavericks on the latter's home field.

Fighting, passing, running and signal practice is all a part of the regular afternoon sessions. The spirit of the Lobos is very high and they have great hopes of making a good showing against the Eastland team, who have previously tied the Big Spring team and whipped the Ranger squad 45-6.

Last week the Lobos tied Ranger 6 all but should have won the game had not the team been off sides on the conversion which was good.

Meanwhile the B team of the Lobos is getting ready to play in the Brownwood team of that class in Cisco either Thursday or Saturday, O. L. Stamey said today. The date is not definitely settled yet, he said.

The siege of the city seemed near its climax. Government forces were resisting desperately and according to advices in London, planned a counter-offensive.

The woman's husband is in jail here on a theft charge.

30 MILLION IN PWA GRANTS ARE APPROVED

He touched on a dozen pressing questions at his final press conference until mid-December, when he returns from his South American trip.

He indicated major attention was being given to the problems of farm tenancy and unemployment.

He proposed a registration method for an unemployment census and named a commission to study the tenancy question.

About Our Friends

By STEPHEN A. LONG

We have promised faithfully we would do our best to keep out of the paper and we have goodness knows... We have not about this matter... Woke at night and worried... or was rich turkey dressing... and laughed out loud when we thought about the chief and his... what a wicked turn they him... Wife heard us laugh thought we had finally gone... had been looking forward a long time... we could tell Stubblefield was worried it, too, by the way he trembled... fairly shook his chair, we when we glanced his way.

All you know there is a newspaper that forbids you suppress news when it should be told... so for that reason we just can't resist this... we wouldn't want a criminal after so much talk to police-ministers banquet last night about crime prevention...

The chief is a nice, modest chap, more like a congressman than a chief of police, but he is breaking into middle age and is breaking in to wearing us to read with... You know these eye doctors are don't you? The glasses so strong that blur your vision... can't see off a distance and then you take them off you can't find the glasses if you fail remember where you laid them.

Chief started off with his report last night but made the mistake of putting on his glasses too early in the speech and when he couldn't see the people he threw them off and unfortunately for where he laid them. He had figures all laid nicely, we are balanced up the books... know how they do... so much g out and so much coming in so much crime going out and much crime coming in and baling the thing off nicely at the end or perhaps leaving a margin of it... But poor old chief... couldn't see his figures and by way he held his paper and turned about we are sure he was using those figures from memory... He got them all wrong he followed him correctly... a big deficit at the end... crime going out than was coming... what with half the chance forgetting to lock their

Progress and the Stores!

A practical and work-a-day application of the story of human progress may be seen in the Cisco business district and in the numerous units of that district.

Even within the present generation there has been a noticeable transformation in local business. The store 30 or even 20 years ago was a crude, unfinished, unsystematized and half-hearted sort of institution, if it could have been called an institution in those days. How different it is today! It dwells in a house of imposing height entered between sparkling expanses of crystal and public displayed of alluring merchandise. Within have been accumulated the wonders of the world in accessible and protecting showcases. No more is the store crude, unfinished, without system and anemic.

Specialization in business and industry has been nowhere more marked than in the store. Our forefathers did their buying at one store, the general store, usually situated on the village square or the cross-roads. There they bought everything from the baby clothes to the farm machinery and after buying "everything" they had actually bought little, for pitifully small was the complete stock of the "general store." Today the business of the general store is scattered among scores of establishments each specializing in one of those many varieties of merchandise offered by the general store. The result has been that the public is offered complete stocks. Instead of taking what it can get the public now gets what it wants. Modern business offers, even in the smallest communities, stores making a special study of each branch of merchandising. The hit or miss way of doing business has been eliminated for the merchant and the buyer.

It is often remarked that less than a score of years ago life insurance was sold by those who had failed in other things. It was a business requiring no special merit on the part of its salesman. Today it is a highly developed business with a staff of highly trained salesmen. Even more recently was the term "clerk" dropped for "salesday" and "salesman" in the hometown stores. The store is now a highly developed business with a staff of highly trained salesmen and salesladies. Salesmanship today is in the hands of experts who are authorities on that which is being sold.

Millions of Roses To be Set Next Year

TYLER, Nov. 17 (AP)—Cultivation of 18,000,000 rose plants to be set out in the gardens of the nation next spring—more than enough to form a continuous rose fence from New York to Los Angeles with bushes set out at intervals of 100 feet—was announced today by the Tyler district, Texas, as a record growing year, commercial rose producers estimate. Approximately half of the huge yield will come from the concentrated rose cultivation area around Tyler, Texas. A. F. Watkins, "dean of the rose growers" in that region predicts. With the opening of the 1933 shipping season, he said, indications point to a production of about 9,000,000 plants from the Tyler district, easily tapping last year's record output of 7,400,000.

Most of the remainder of the rose plants will come from the producing areas on the Pacific coast, and from the eastern section, including Ohio, western New York and eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware.

The pronouncement of Texas rose fields is due largely to the protection from plant diseases afforded by use of sulphur, a natural fungicide produced in the state, he said. The fields are usually well protected against "black spot," the worst scourge of the industry because of regular dusting with finely ground sulphur. The ability to obtain sulphur at low cost from Texas mines gives the growers a great advantage over other areas in fighting plant diseases.

The extraordinary success of the Texas "Centennial" rose—a few varieties developed in 1933 and marketed in connection with the Lone Star state's exposition—has played a large part in the growth of the Tyler rose district, Watkins pointed out. He said contracts had been signed with 40 major plant distributors, representing every state in the nation where roses may be grown out-of-doors.

There's No Substitute for Guaranteed Circulation
DAILY NEWS—AMERICAN AND ROUNDUP

HALF-ACRE in EDEN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MARCIA CANFIELD, daughter of wealthy PHILIP CANFIELD, knows that the neighborhood is buzzing with gossip over the sudden disappearance of FRANK KENDRICK, who was engaged to her. Since his disappearance a searching in Wendell's business accounts has been discovered.

Catching up with Marcia, he handed her a paper. "This isn't a mesh note," he said. "Uh—good night."

THE plane carrying Marcia from New York reached Chicago in the evening, and she called John Waddell's apartment from the airport. There was no answer. She rode in a taxicab to a Loop hotel and called his number again from her room; still there was no answer.

Instructing the hotel operator to call him at half-hour intervals, Marcia ordered dinner served in her room and after the meal went immediately to bed. She was awakened at midnight by the telephone bell.

"I have Mr. Waddell for you," said the operator.
"Hello, John," said Marcia, wide awake immediately.
"Hello, Marcia," said John.
"This is Marcia Canfield, John."
"Marcia in Chicago?" Then they talked for a moment.
"About Frank Kendrick, yes. And neither of us knew what to do about him. So I—well, I came along to do it. Will you help me?"
"Of course."
Marcia was silent for a moment.
"Where is he, John?"
"In the morning then," said Marcia. "And thank you."
"Think nothing of it, Say, Marcia."
"Yes, John."

"This may or may not have any bearing on the whatever-it-is, but Frank wasn't there today."
A finger of fear scratched across Marcia's heart.
"I see," said Marcia, trying to ignore her fear. "Well, will you call for me in the morning then?"
"You can bet the family diamonds on it. Pleasant dreams, Marcia."

FOR a while she lay in bed, trying to ignore her fear. She had been striving since her conversation with Helen in Bobbs Neck early that day, to think clearly and constructively on the problem that was presented, that was not to be dodged. Then, on an imperative impulse, she rose and went to a window.

drank the hot chocolate gratefully, for she had been chilled by her walk. Finished, she opened her bag and took out her cigaret case. She was an infrequent smoker, but she felt the need of a solace now.

The case was empty.
"Will you have one of mine?" said a voice, and Marcia found a young man extending a package across the space separating her table from the next.

"Thank you," said Marcia, "but I can get some from the waiter."
But the waiters had vanished, according to their craft custom.

"Do have one."
"All right," Marcia laughed. "And thank you."
"Light it."
"I still have matches."

The man returned the cigarette to his pocket and looked with apparently great interest at a newspaper propped up before him, from which, strangely enough, he seemed to have been distracted by Marcia's unspoken need of a cigaret.

A FEW minutes passed, during which—and with a regularity which might have been remarked had the restaurant contained anyone else besides two meditative and watching waiters—the young man glanced in turn upon Marcia and then at his newspaper, or at something concealed by the paper, where it was supported by the table's community of sugar bowl, shakers and sauce bottles.

A bellboy entered from the lobby.
"Mr. Bruce McDougall!" he bawled. "Calling Mr. Bruce McDougall!"
"Here," said Marcia's neighbor. "Telephone call, sir."
"Right!"
The man scrambled up excitedly.

"Here, waiter!" He folded his paper clumsily and dropped it on a chair, tossed a few coins on the table and followed the boy.
Marcia smoked her cigaret at leisure, called for her check and was rising to go when McDougall reappeared, hurriedly. From a chair at his table he picked up the newspaper, and from its folds a leather notebook.

"Damn glad I remembered that," he said to no one in particular. His eyes fell again on Marcia. He opened the book, tore out a page, and catching up with her as she was passing into the lobby, he handed her the bit of paper.

"This isn't a mesh note," he said. "Uh—good night, or good morning!"
The page bore a pencil sketch of Marcia in profile, as she had appeared to her coffee shop neighbor. For signature it had an odd device—a sketched scrap of plaid.

The drawing was an excellent likeness, although no more than a couple of dozen pencil strokes. But more startling was the fact that it reproduced an expression of worry and apprehension, exact as Marcia's face, in her abstraction, had mirrored her mind.

She had the odd sensation, for a moment, of fearing that she had been telling her thoughts aloud. She looked in the direction McDougall had taken, but he had disappeared into an elevator. At the top of the sketch was printed in pencil, "Portrait of an Unknown Lady."

doors at night and most of the people going to the bank night and leaving their houses and cars unlocked no self respecting police as engering as ours should allow more stolen articles to go out than they could bring in . . . they should watch and keep the budget balanced . . . show a profit, you know . . . it was a good speech anyway and we are for him . . . we've passed through the stage and know how it is . . .

Now there were Gus and French . . . sitting close to their wives where they could be prompted, they did fine jobs . . . Gus as fire marshal, backed way back to the early 20's and took a running start . . . quoted fire losses for Cisco that put to shame those of the big San Francisco fire following the earth quake and the Chicago fire that burned for several days and nights, then tapered off like the point of a lead pencil and almost ran out of fires entirely by the time he got to 1935 . . . we really believe that in another year or two instead of a loss we will be showing a profit on our fires and there won't be enough fires in Cisco to burn the trash in the back alleys . . . and Gus will be out of a job . . . but then we can get him some kind of an old age pension . . .

And French . . . he recently heard the great G-Man, Edgar J. Hoover speak on fingerprinting and believe you me he waxed eloquent on that subject . . . showed that we should be printed in order for identification . . . and when he reached his height of eloquence with the exclamation that if a train ran over us and ground us into powder and only a little tip of one finger remained they could identify us, we believe if someone had started a good old Methodist song and asked for volunteers, the whole audience would have come down front to be fingerprinted then and there . . .

Speaking of Methodists . . . that new preacher, Joe Patterson . . . he is a 15-plate battery and dynamo of a thousand volts all melted together . . . If his flock follow him this year they will either go places or burn the church down . . . and his vivacious young wife . . . with her charming southern drawl . . . and she wanted to know how we knew she was from Virginia . . . as Rev. Applewhite aptly put it. "It was not what she said but how she said it that made us know she was from the Old South . . ."

Of course they threw flowers to the police department . . . what could you expect? . . . Now in our case we meant every word we said, we are always serious that way . . . but those ministers were all comfortably full of the pre-Thanksgiving turkey and pumpkin pie with rich cream spread over . . . they had to be complimentary . . . and then, too, Henderson had just announced that fines were cash now . . . no more dollar down and the rest when you get it . . . Cash or jail sentence . . . and what minister has the price of a fine, we ask you? . . . and then it would read rather awkward in our paper to say, "Rev. So and So will fill his regular hour Sunday and will use the text: 'Our Deliverance,'" provided his friends get the money for his fine . . . But anyway, it was a fine meeting . . . a fine fellowship and much good feeling accomplished . . . we all vote, that as the guests, for a continuation, only make it semi-annual . . .

advances into 1937 with the LOWEST PRICE IN YEARS and new operating economy

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines. 85 horsepower for maximum performance, 60 horsepower for maximum economy.

In basic design, the new 60-horsepower V-8 engine is a replica of its famous older brother—the V-8 "85." But its reduced size and weight make possible a lighter car, with lower operating costs, and the lowest Ford price in years.

The 60-horsepower engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high and fuel economy is vitally important. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success. Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase, to the same advanced design, with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." It has all the distinctive Ford features for 1937. And it delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour.

Two engine sizes—but only one car and one purpose—to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937. We invite you to see this very modern car at the showrooms of the nearest Ford dealer.

APPEARANCE—Distinctive modern design. Headlamps streamlined into fender aprons. Modern lid-type hood. Larger luggage space. Interiors entirely new. Slanting V-type windshield opens in all closed cars.

BRAKES—The Easy-Action Safety Brakes in the new Ford give you "the safety of steel from pedal to wheel." Cable and conduit control type. Self-energizing. About one-third less pedal pressure is required to stop the car.

Buckner Home Has Interesting History

The history of Buckner Orphan Home is like a Horatio Alger story of the poor boy who made good. Begun in a rented cottage in Dallas Dec. 2, 1880, it has grown to a physical property of hundreds of thousands of dollars value, a set of buildings for housing and training that is a small town within itself, and a family of almost a thousand souls that never grows less but constantly more. No success could exceed this.

Its history is like a great drama that runs the whole range of dramatic situation. If the drama were accompanied by suitable music, that music would swing all the way from Allegro to Penseroso. Buckner Orphan Home is a family. Wherever there is a family there are burdens, cares, sorrows, joys, problems, travail, shouting. This home is no exception. Those who stand in the place of proxy parents share all those experiences.

A look at the home itself is interesting. It normally numbers more than six hundred. Children spend an average of 12 years in it. Its average per capita cost is around $25 a month. For that outlay, the inmates are given food, raiment, medical care, vocational training, spiritual nurture and education through high school. Each child spends an average of two days a year in the hospital. One of every 20 children undergoes some sort of surgical operation each year. Religious nurture is given every child, so that it is a very rare thing for a child to leave the home without conversion and church membership. All that the most painstaking parents do for their sons and daughters, is done for the children of this home.

A home of over 600 children that cost $25 a month per capita to provide for, has to be supported. The resources of the home are: (1) the generous impulses of men and women of all faiths who know of and appreciate the home's contribution to human welfare, and (2) the tender hearts of Texas Baptists who bear the home in their affections. Texas Baptists began it, have sponsored it, claim it as their own; on them rests the perennial burden of its support.

A Glass Mug with an Interesting History

Mrs. Gracie Lou Shepard of Guntersville writes an interesting piece of news about a glass mug owned by John Watson which has been in constant use for almost a half century.

Mr. Watson drove a team of Oxen and broke up the field of Nathaniel Booker in 1891 to obtain money enough to purchase household goods, belonging to Jim Cullum, who was selling out. Among the goods was a glass mug since that day, 45 years ago, many events have happened Watson, along with his wife worked hard, acquired land and provided a nice home for ten children, 8 of which are enjoying successful manhood and womanhood today.

Even during the prosperous oil well flowing days when moneys were sold at $1,000 per acre, the glass mug was good enough for the fresh milk and has been used every day unto this good hour.

Watson makes his home with his daughter, Ruthie Thorpe.
