CISCO WELLS FIND TROUBLE IN DRILLING

The course of true love never runs smoothly, is a saying old as the hills, and it is true of many things, more especially in the well drilling business. Driller Dick Hickok and the Lone Star drillers are having trouble with a fishing job and a well with a crooked hole. Both wells began drilling about a week ago and both set casing at 150 feet. The Hickok placed the casing at around 500 feet, or a little deeper, with a hole full of sludge. They now have a fishing job to bring the casing and lost the hole some time yesterday, it is reported. They were a little short of sludge. The Lone Star drillers, Gallagher and Lattin, have a bad hole and are being procured to cure the hole, it was stated today. The fishing was set last week and the hole now is about the same as the other.

BIG 'SKY HIGH' SHOW ENJOYED BY AUDIENCE

And did you see the big community show "Sky High" presented for the first time at the Cisco high school auditorium last night? If you didn't you missed a grand show, and splendid entertainment. But, if you failed to see this show, you still have an opportunity to see it again tonight, and besides getting your money's worth in entertainment, you will be helping some unfortunate boys and girls of Cisco go through this winter with a little more clothing on their bodies, and a little better food, perhaps, than last year, and with school supplies their parents are unable to buy.

Clark-Donica Give Comedy

Particularly entertaining was the comedy team of A. C. Donica and Mignon Clark who played the Detective Mookshaw and Maize, the maid. The audience responded enthusiastically as they went through their comedy parts.

NEW YORK TO HAVE USUAL STREET DECORATIONS FOR HOLIDAYS

The Chamber of Commerce, rarely scantily attended last night, only five directors being present, discussed a number of items of value to the community, appointed a committee to arrange for street decorations for the Christmas holidays and discussed plans looking to the betterment of the Cisco livestock show for next year, while hearing the report of the one just held here.

WELLS TO HAVE USUAL STREET DECORATIONS FOR HOLIDAYS

ready have these streamers of variously colored lights. A street celebration to open the holiday season was discussed but the expense was thought to be prohibitive and so was not recommended.

WELLS TO HAVE USUAL STREET DECORATIONS FOR HOLIDAYS

Following a report on the stock show brought out the idea that Cisco would do well to emphasize the beef element in stock raising since more interest seems to have centered around that type of stock than on the dairy type. Cisco has some outstanding types of beef cattle in her territory and the recent stock showing was very gratifying it was suggested.

WELLS TO HAVE USUAL STREET DECORATIONS FOR HOLIDAYS

Those in attendance at last night's meeting were: Dr. E. E. Clark, J. J. Collins, J. D. Lauderdale, Jewel Poe, Charles Sandler, T. G. Caudle and J. E. Spencer.

Television to Span Atlantic!

A prediction that television may soon span the Atlantic was made by Senator Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of radio, in a record-breaking four-way shortwave broadcast which linked his yacht in the Mediterranean with David Sarnoff, in New York, and with 26 members of the International Broadcasting Union flying between Niagara Falls and Washington in two American Airlines cabin planes.

The principal participants in the broadcast, arranged as a special feature of the National Broadcasting Company's Tenth Anniversary celebrations, were Marconi; Mr. Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America; Robert Jardillier, minister of Communications of France, and Maurice Rambert, President of the I. B. U.

The program was opened over NBC networks by Mr. Sarnoff, who spoke over a desk microphone in his office in the RCA building, New York City. The RCA President was answered from one of the speeding cabin planes by Rambert, who is also head of the Swiss Broadcasting Company.

Transatlantic shortwave was then used to pick up the voice of Senator Marconi, speaking from aboard his yacht, the Eleetra, cruising near Genoa in the Mediterranean. French Minister Jardillier joined in from the other cabin plane, and all four broadcasting points were talking and answering in a general conversation.

Senator Marconi did not elaborate on his prediction regarding the future of television. He was exchanging greeting with Mr. Sarnoff and after felicitating the National Broadcasting Company in its Tenth Anniversary, he declared "we will soon be able to see you by television."

OUT OUR WAY

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDO NK SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Nov. 18.—State government is undergoing its usual fall season of "hunts." Officials go hunting game while capitol visitors vainly hunt officials.

Gov. James V. Allred topped off a campaign for the national democratic ticket in New Mexico by a week's hunt with Gov. Clyde Tingler. While he was hunting for Lt. Gov. Walter Woodul planned a fox hunt in East Texas, leaving the executive chair at Austin vacant. Woodul missed his hunt because of a cold.

The real absence period begins Nov. 16. Then deer and wild turkey are enduring an "open season." Some of the hunts held during this open season have become annual events with practically the same participants each year.

One inseparable hunting group includes Justices Richard Critz and John Sharp of the state supreme court. Board of Control Chairman Claude Teer and State Rep. Harry N. Graves of Georgetown. Three of them have been hunting together for years. Judge Sharp is the junior member.

A senatorial hunting party that visits the Hill country west of Austin, sometimes acquiring a new newspaper correspondent en route is made up of Senators Allan Shivers, Port Arthur; Will Pace, Tyler; John Redditt, Lufkin; and Wilbourne Collier of Eastland.

Members of the Court of Criminal Appeals save their hunting until the Christmas holidays. The courts are closed then, so the judges get in their shooting just before the season ends.

C. V. Terrell, railroad commission chairman, uses his vacation for big game hunting. His office is decorated with some wonderful moose and elk heads brought back from such trips.

Nineteen guns fired by A. & M. College's student artillery corps were not in honor of Houston's Jesse Jones, head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who received an honorary law degree from the agricultural and mechanical college.

Although Jones' power and duties outweigh those of many cabinet officers, his position entitles him to no military salute. The guns boomed for Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul, who attended the ceremonies as Acting Governor of Texas.

Nineteen guns did fire a salute once for Jesse Jones and they were set off by Woodul. Jones had just secured the national Democratic convention of 1928 for Houston.

Woodul decided he should have a prouder welcome home. As part of the arrangements he wanted a salute. Military organizations could not give it. Regulations specified exactly for whom the guns might be fired. Officials in charge of the program substituted for the gun salute 19 sky rockets of a type that exploded with a bang after being shot into the air. As the train with Jones aboard rolled into Houston the first of the rockets was set off. Eighteen others followed at proper intervals. So far as the crowd knew Jones had been given a nineteen gun salute.

Salutes, incidentally cost about $50. That much powder is used, up in the artillery courtesy. A President's salute of 21 guns costs proportionally more.

Football and politics both are fertile fields for those who care to speculate. It remained for an Austin news writer to combine the two with this remarkable result—a forecast that Jack Chevigny, former Notre Dame star and University of Texas football coach, would become a member of the Attorney General's department in January.

It was a good yarn but Chevigny denied it. Attorney General William McCraw hadn't been consulted about it. He hadn't talked to Chevigny. Chevigny had not talked to him. There are no vacancies in the Attorney General's department. McCraw says he knows of none likely to occur. He hadn't heard of his "new assistant" until he read the prediction.

Texas' old folks are going to have something for which to be thankful. They will get their November assistance checks before Turkey Day. Originally scheduled for mailing on November 1, the 87,000 checks have been held up because the old age assistance act was amended and a new administrative plan adopted.

This called for new federal security board approval of the Texas plan, in order to obtain matched federal dollars. Pension Director Orville Carpenter airplane between Austin and Washington and hopes the way will be cleared for check issuance before Nov. 20.

Suggested to a State Senate committee this week was a law to require persons who receive awards from the State Industrial Accident Board to undergo rehabilitation training during the period in which they draw compensation. Cases were cited where persons being rehabilitated quit training when they received compensation awards.

Another suggested law change was a provision that the amount of awards for disability should not be reduced because the injured person was being rehabilitated and might become an earner again in some other capacity.

SHEARER

MARCIA CANFIELD, daughter of wealthy PHILIP CANFIELD, knows that the neighborhood is buzzing with gossip over the sudden disappearance of her fiancé, FRANK KENDRICK, whose engagement to her she has just announced. Since his disappearance a month ago in Kendrick's funds has been discovered.

Refusing to let others know how deeply she has been hurt, Marcia goes to the dramatic club retreats and gives the leading part in a new play. Afterward, with others, she stops at a restaurant. There is a holding and Marcia loses a ring that was her mother's.

From her friend, HELEN WADDELL, Marcia learns that Frank is in Chicago, decides to go there to persuade him to return and face his financial obligations. She takes the first plane to Chicago.

In Chicago Marcia telephones Helen's cousin, JOHN WADDELL, who arranges to meet him next morning. In the hotel restaurant a stranger offers a slight service. Later she hears him address her as "MRS. E. MELIOT GALL." As Marcia is leaving he gives her a pencil sketch of a woman's face. "Portrait of an Unknown Lady."

CHAPTER VII
AT 5 o'clock in the morning, while Marcia, a few hours after her return to the hotel, was sleeping, Frank Kendrick, a dozen blocks away, packed a suitcase in a dingy room. His meeting with John Waddell, on the day before yesterday, had seemed imperatively for further flight.

In the darkness of the winter morning, in the chill of the cheap room, Frank Kendrick felt the coward's comfort of a wash of self pity over the sorrows of his self respect. A few weeks ago he had been popular, successful. Popular because of his success; successful through his popularity. Success had been so easy, he had always thought it must be because he was of stuff superior to other men. Only recently had the thought occurred to him that his marketing of conservative investments in a town of moneyed people had not been a difficult task. The Kendricks had been favorably known in that neighborhood for generations; the last of their line had been borne smoothly on an accumulation of esteem. And popularity had been so easy; only recently had it occurred to him that his prestige and reputation might not have survived an earlier test. "Weighed and found wanting." Well, he had never been weighed before.

He had brought his own weight into question. But if it had not been for others—

THERE, of course, was the real fault. He had been led into strange, deep waters, and abandoned to struggle alone. He would never have foundered had he followed his own course. How, Frank Kendrick demanded of himself, could he be blamed for the actions of other people? He had always sold safe investments—the best municipals and other bonds of the same character. One might say that it had involved hardly more than sitting at a desk and accepting funds of friends and acquaintances, and sending the orders to New York for the stuff they wanted. But he had always given good investment advice—"Four per cent without a gamble, instead of 6 per cent with a chance."

Unfortunately, his New York connections had introduced him to the possibility of profits above his own recommendations. Before converting a considerable sum of money into the 4 per cent ordered by his customers, he had been attracted by a scheduled pool operation in a certain industrial share. Appalled when his customers' money disappeared in violation of the schedule, he had thrown his own conservative investments into the operation, in an effort to rebuild, and had witnessed their quick demise.

He missed Marcia; they had been friends for so long. Strange, he thought of her as his old friend, not as the girl he had been going to marry. Funny how they had sort of slid into that engagement! He wondered—briefly—whether this whole affair meant more to Marcia than it did to him; after all, she was a girl—and he had to acknowledge it—he had left her to face alone the friends who would be raising eyebrows over the punctured romance.

He strapped the suitcase—an expensive bag, left over from those recent, prosperous days; put on hat and coat—expensive clothes, foreign to the shabby room. Softly he walked down the stairs, softly closed the street door behind him, fugitive from a landlady.

There was a heavy fog—wet, cold fog; and Frank Kendrick walked away in it, and was lost again.

MARCIA met John at 8 o'clock in the lobby of her hotel. "What's the program?" he wanted to know. "I wish I could figure one out," said Marcia soberly. "The direct method is the only one that occurs to me. Let's just walk in over there and try to see him; he can't refuse to talk to me. I'll tell you all about this later, John. Right now let's go over."

Seated in the quiet restaurant where at midnight a gay crowd had danced, where at noon hurrying business people would lunch, they ordered breakfast and looked about them. Among all the employees, Frank was not in evidence. Marcia was conscious of a sinking heart. She thought she could guess the truth. After all her brave planning and hoping—"So he wasn't here yesterday?" she said dully.

"No, but, as I said, he may have had a day off, or may have been ill."

"On the other hand, John, having seen you and suspecting that he would be looked for, he may not come back at all, don't you agree? Oh, why didn't I telephone you before I left New York, to hold him, somehow, until I could get here? I might have known he would be expecting something to happen, after seeing you and knowing that he was Frank Kendrick, when he knew that you knew him!"

"Hold him?" said John. "Remember, I'm in the dark about this. But look here, whatever it's all about, if you're afraid he is running away, let's call the manager over and get Frank's address. Perhaps we can go after him before it's too late."

No, the manager said, he could not help them. Yes, he recognized the young man in question from their description. He had worked the day before yesterday, but had not returned yesterday, nor this morning; they'd had to hire a new man.

Gene Abbott Doped

Gene Abbott, doped by Laura to keep him from flying Sky High, in the super-air race, portrayed the character of Harry Hunter and nobody else could have taken the part and rendered it so well as Gene.

As a radio announcer, Edward (Red) Lee was perfect. He broadcast the news from the airport about the flight of the airplanes in the air, and kept listeners informed as to how high "Sky High" really flew.

The specialty numbers—the Ben Krauskopf orchestra, which played beautifully before the curtain went up, the tap dancing, and the presentation of the entrants in the popularity contest, gave the audience sidelines to which they responded with appreciation.

The circus was presented at the beginning of the show, by East Ward Fourth and Fifth grades. Donald Squaglia was the "Bully-Hoo" man, with a curling mustache, high hat and swallow tail coat, and he really knew his circus.

It all ended happily, and there were murmurs through the audience of "I really enjoyed it," and "Didn't you think it was just splendid?"

PTA TO CHOOSE BEAUMONT FOR NEXT MEETING

FORT WORTH, Nov. 18 (U.P.)—Beaumont was expected to be chosen for the 1937 convention of the Texas congress of Parents and Teachers as 1,500 delegates attended programs today.

Members discussed the activities of the public school system, after an address by Miss Charl Williams of Washington, field secretary of the National Education Association. Miss Williams said most rural and small town schools were "as antiquated as prairie schooners."

Cisco Baptist Made Thanksgiving Gift

The Cisco Baptist Association made its annual Thanksgiving offering to Buckner's Orphan Home. Twenty-six churches had a part in this offering, the total amount of the offering was more than a thousand dollars. It is the desire of the committee to express thanks to all who aided in any way and to those who gave to the offering.

Rev. T. J. Sparkman takes this means of expressing deep appreciation on the part of Cisco Baptist Association and the Buckner's Orphan Home to the Merchants Motor Line for the service they rendered in giving free transportation from Cisco to the home in Dallas. Local employees were very courteous and offered every assistance possible, reported Rev. Mr. Sparkman.

Gene Abbott, doped by Laura to keep him from flying Sky High, in the super-air race, portrayed the character of Harry Hunter and nobody else could have taken the part and rendered it so well as Gene.

Jury Acquits Man In Baird Slaying

Special to Daily News
BAIRD, Nov. 18.—Fred Bracheen was acquitted late Tuesday by the jury in the case of the slaying of M. B. James, rail engineer at Baird, Nov. 3.

The jury returned its verdict in less than an hour after receiving the case.

Bracheen, a cafe cook, testified he shot in self defense and "saw no other way out."

Defendant Heard
The defendant recounted a story of the gradual breaking of affection between him and his wife which he said was because of Jones' intrusion into their life.

Bracheen said he rented a house from Jones and the latter retained a room in the dwelling which he used between trips out of town as a railway engineer. The defendant said he saw his wife's affection gradually slipping away from him.

He testified once he came home to find Mrs. Bracheen under the influence of intoxicants and in Jones' room. He said she finally left him and went to live with her mother, although he told her he could not furnish money for the trip.

Lunched with Jones
Bracheen said he lunched with Jones a few hours before the killing. W. L. Henry, who escorted Bra-cheen to the sheriff's office after the shooting, quoted Bracheen as saying at the time: "I hated to do it but I had to." Henry said Bracheen then accused Jones of trying to kill him.

Mrs. R. L. Edwards, wife of the sheriff, said Bracheen expressed regret for the deed when he surrendered, several minutes after the slaying.

The following were presented: violin and clarinet duet, Norma Ghormley and Bobby Grace McWhorter accompanied at the piano by Velsie Woods; story "Smoked Ham," Garnet Hart; bass clarinet solo, June Morehart; piano solo, "Folly" Nannella Bible; cornet solo Jack Lauderdale; cornet duet, Jack Lauderdale and R. L. Maddox; accompanied at the piano by June Morehart.
