LONDON, Dec. 2 (U.P.)—King Edward's legal advisor was summoned to Buckingham Palace today as Great Britain entered upon one of its gravest constitutional crises in history over the friendship of the king for Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The result may be the king's abdication, or the resignation of the cabinet. It was learned on absolute trustworthy authority.

The cabinet has "notified" the king not to marry Mrs. Simpson. The king so far has refused to listen.

The cabinet, whose head is Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, has threatened to put through parliament a bill compelling the king to obtain the consent of the privy council before he can marry.

The king has threatened to refuse to approve any such bill.

The cabinet adjourned after a session of two hours without any disclosure whether the king's affairs had been discussed, or ministers were concerned with the Spanish crisis.

His Majesty was informed at Fort Belvedere, his country residence, early today that the subject had been brought into the open and that editorials in newspapers were informing those able to read between the lines of the struggle between him and his cabinet.

In the fierce light which beats upon a throne, an historic drama of the struggle between love and duty was being enacted. It was the drama of two human beings asked to sacrifice their personal lives and feeling for the state.

The church and the conservative leaders of Great Britain have joined forces to make it impossible for King Edward to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson, twice divorced American commoner without sacrificing his throne.

The king does not wish to quit his job and run out under fire from the duty to which he was born. It is extremely likely that the mass of common people would be in sympathy with the king and approve any action he might take. He cannot appeal to them, however. They do not know the real story of what is going on. The press makes no mention of the real story and prints no word about Mrs. Simpson.

Let's Shop Early In Cisco!

With the lighting of the street and the decorating of merchant's windows we are brought face to face with the fact that Christmas is getting very near. As we grow older we are prone to put this fact aside and think of it as some remote date still far off and find we have put off our Christmas buying until the things we really wanted have been sold to someone else and only the refuse articles have been left for the late shopper.

Merchants of Cisco are following the trend of the times which are optimistic and bullish. Christmas buying will far exceed any shopping year since 1929 in Cisco as well as in other parts of the country. Merchants in many places have based their buying on previous years and have not prepared for the flush buying that seems apparent. Therefore, late shoppers will experience difficulty in finding the things they want—stores in many cases will be depleted unless they find it possible to replenish their stocks.

It is a wonder that has never been solved just why people wait until the last moment to shop. It would seem the point of wisdom to select what one wants while the stocks are yet full. A wide selection would be possible then, but we never seem to be able to get around to the matter until the day is almost here and the stores are so crowded that it is difficult to get a salesman to give any attention.

Ordinarily we suddenly realize that Christmas time is here. The people from the country and surrounding small towns are crowding the stores and making parking places hard to find, and then we start the mad search. We go from store to store and find that the things we saw in various windows 20 days ago have all been sold and our lists must be re-vamped in order to make our gifts as we intended.

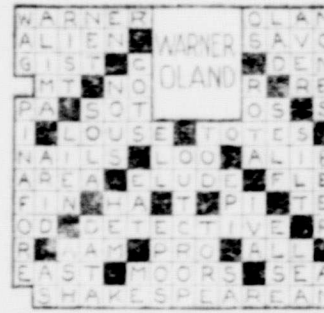

Wonder if we couldn't all turn over a new leaf this year, so to speak, by doing it differently? Suppose merchants make their bids for business a little earlier so that we will realize it is really Christmas buying time. Then if customers will make their selections earlier we can all get what we want without the last minute hurry and bustle and our out-of-town friends can have the time for shopping without being crowded by local people. Do you agree?

THE IMPORTANCE OF AIR!

Requirement of food, water and air to sustain life.

Food . . . 3 pounds per day { An adult can exist for approximately 40 days without food

Water . . . 4 pounds per day { An adult can exist for approximately 12 days without water

Air . . . 27 pounds per day { An adult can exist for approximately 10 minutes without air

The air supply of a person is of first importance. Therefore it is a wise precaution to keep the air in the home during winter as pure as the warm oxygen-laden air of summer. A room that is poorly ventilated can be injurious to health. Inadequate fresh air and a lack of pure, warmed air throughout the home make it easy to "catch cold."

A simple method of providing a constant circulation of fresh air is found by keeping a window in each room slightly open. Connecting doors left open between adjoining rooms, when the entire house is adequately heated, provide a natural circulation of pure, warmed air from one room to another.

Never permit the air you breathe to become "stuffy" through lack of pure air circulation. Heat your entire house and provide fresh air ventilation for your health's sake. It's important to you and your family.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MARCIA CANFIELD, daughter of the late PHILIP CANFIELD, was the neighborhood buzz with gossip over the disappearance of FRANK KENDRICK, who was announced to have been shot in a garage. Since his disappearance, a shortage in Kenrick's funds has been discovered. With her friend, HELEN WADSWORTH, and others, Marcia is in a restaurant when there is a hold-up. Marcia loses a ring that was her mother's.

Marcia's father, Philip, was a wealthy man in Chicago. Marcia goes there to persuade him to return and face his financial obligations, but before she reaches him, Frank disappears.

JOHN STELLICI suspects his neighbor, CARLO, of being involved in the hold-up, and finds some of the loot in Carlo's home. Tony, Marcus Marcia's ring, tells police that he knows of the hold-up. Carlo escapes.

FRANK McDOUGALL, artist, comes to make his home in the town. DOROTHY OSBORN, who is married to Marcia, invites him to her home.

Carlo, in New York, becomes a partner for many and retains his criminal associates. They attempt to rob the bank, but the police intervene. Although the hold-up, cries out to Dorothy to start the car. The robbers escape.

the cavernous depths of the back seat.

"What's happened?"

The policeman had not even been aware of anyone else in the car. Now he glanced back.

"Blue blazes!" he cried. "I didn't know there was anybody but the driver!"

"What's happened?" Philip Canfield repeated impatiently.

"The lady—!" the policeman began.

"Keep her rolling, Tommy!" Marcia echoed to the chauffeur.

ALREADY the car had swung into Shore Road, where the black waters of the Sound were a contrasting border to the snow-covered land. A quarter of a mile away, running without lights but visible in the glow of the street lamps, an automobile was speeding away from the town.

"That's them!" shouted the policeman.

His pistol was over the sill; the passengers were already forgotten.

It was a wild ride on that pavement. The pursuing car did not seem to be gaining, but it did not appear to be losing, either. Obviously, the bandit's driver could not risk top speed. A skid and spill would mean capture.

There, they'd gone into a spin! Off the road and through the crust of snow on the shoulder. But their car was out in a moment or two, lumbering on to the road again and picking up speed.

The following car, however, had gained about 400 yards in that fraction of time. Already the policeman, grimly pleased, was firing from his window.

Suddenly the fugitive car slowed down, wabbling dangerously along the shoulder. The policeman fired again as the Canfield car streaked to close the wide gap, and there were flashes from the car ahead as once again it picked up speed.

And in the road was a hideout: a bundle that the headlights of the following car picked out as a man.

The chauffeur instinctively braked. The heavy car swung toward the edge. Valiantly he pulled the wheel in the direction of the skid, but just a bit short of enough. The car turned over as the slope of the ditch threw it into the field beyond.

Probably by the luck of the Irish, the policeman, by the open window, was thrown clear.

THE Osborn car could not match even the restrained speed of the two automobiles ahead on Shore Road, and Dorothy, her mother and McDougall came upon the wreck a full two minutes later. Dorothy pointed the car off the road, so that its headlights glared upon the giant scratch across the snow and the crushed machine at the end of it. McDougall was out before she stopped, and was running toward the other car.

One door in the twisted frame refused to open; he jerked at another and reached in, slowly, gently, pulling out a man. A man who was still.

Dorothy was beside him as he dragged out his overcoat and placed the man upon it, in the snow. She helped him as he reached again into the car, bringing out another man, and her own coat went down for him.

And yet again, and this time McDougall straightened up with Marcia in his arms and staggered, with white face, toward the Osborn car in the road.

At sight of the two cars, one wrecked and the other turned with its lights on the spot, another machine, racing from town, slowed up, but the policeman who had been tossed from the Canfield car was on his feet again and waved it ahead, with shouted directions. It was a police car, taking up the chase.

Other cars now were streaming along Shore Road, and it was a brief matter to flag two of them to carry Philip Canfield and the chauffeur back to town. Dorothy started her own car; McDougall, in the back seat, held Marcia in his arms.

The street lamps, flashing in, projected his image to Dorothy at intervals through the rear view mirror—not clearly, but well enough.

The old car heroically threshed its way.

The policeman had walked over to the bundle in the road and dragged it aside.

Carlo Stellici, with a bullet in his head, had paid for his error in planning, and for cravenly fearing disaster in greater speed along that ice-covered road toward freedom.

RETURNING from troubled dreams, Marcia Canfield's first confused thoughts were of hurtling down to crash in a field of white. For uncounted moments she went through again the experience of landing in an airplane on a snow-covered farm, and then she remembered the more recent experience of being tossed off a road in a careening automobile.

A stab of pain stimulated her into the present, and she saw, not the white of snow, but a room entirely white. A glaring room, which, before she could identify it, was lost again in a black mist.

experiment at the important center position.

"Our system of play, a with lots of ball handling, requires much practice for a careful timing. That's why all the recent T. C. U. teams have been slow starters."

Coach Meyer compared the 1935 Baylor Texas and Centenary games with the same three contests in 1936.

"We played and defeated these same three teams about the same time both years. We were more impressive in our victories this year. In 1935, for instance, we used our best boys practically all the time against Baylor. Against Texas, our regulars played three quarters. In the Centenary game we had to shout our best players back in when the Gents got tough."

"We won much easier this year. I am convinced that, had we played our regulars this year as long as we did in 1935, we would have run up much larger scores."

Local Rotarians Hear Californian

Herbert E. Harris of Whittier, Calif., professor of English in a California college and dean of the Floating University world cruise, was the main speaker at a meeting of Rotarians from Cisco, Ranger and Breckenridge at Eastland Monday.

His talk was the first of a series he will make in the 41st district of Rotary clubs until December 11.

The speaker divided the "infinite complexities" of modern life into four divisions. The divisions were "human relations," "business relations," and "international relations."

He applied the Rotary organization as one which aids in the understanding of all.

Harris, in 1929 and 1930 chairman of the international service committee of Rotary International, will also speak this week at Crowell, Quannah, Wichita Falls, Elects and Graham. He was introduced by Carl Springer of Eastland.

President I. E. Richardson of the Eastland club presided.

Winter be blown!...

OIL-PLATE YOUR ENGINE

This is exactly true: Oil-Plating supplies lubrication in LESS THAN NO TIME AT ALL!

Faster than "instantly"... faster than the fastest-flowing Winter oil might even begin to flow, Oil-Plating is ready to lubricate.

That's because a genuine Plating of Conoco Germ Processed oil is always left firmly bonded to every working part. Like any other real Plating, this Oil-Plating cannot run off. After hours or days of standing in the cold, Oil-Plating is still perfectly ready-to-go.

Now these days you read on every side, how poorly-oiled starting causes most engine wear, and how fast a Winter oil ought to flow. But you cannot have even a doubt of sure starting-lubrication, when it is always UP IN ADVANCE. That's Oil-Plating... a plain, straight, economic reason for changing to your correct free-flowing Winter grade of Conoco Germ Processed oil—patented. Costs no more than changing by hunch.
