FDR HURLS ATTACK AT HIS OPPONENTS

About Our Friends

By STEPHEN A. LONG

Alice Callarman Watkins, died last Saturday, was born in Kansas City, Mo., in 1880, she married to Mr. Watkins in 1911 in Dallas, Texas, and he died in Calif. in 1935. Mrs. Watkins was a very talented woman who brought us a beautiful which she wrote while in California since we do not print we cannot use it. A host of friends mourn her demise.

Such exhortation is hurled at the other hand the autoist has for which the pedestrian responsible. All of the blame automobile hits does not right-fall on the autoist. The pedestrian commits pieces of rank amnesia, also.

On other day I was riding with a car. We were going at an ordinary rate of speed. Ahead of us men were walking abreast on narrow road. They were hanging the curb. They had got out and were taking up about the side of the highway.

Friend scolded his horn to them when we were coming. I did not look around nor edge my nearer to the curb. They just give way as much as an truck would have done.

Our car swung out to pass behind them, a motorcycle dodged behind an approaching car came toward us at a speed of 30 miles an hour. In order to get from crowding the motorcycle into the ditch, my friend had all in close to the men walking. Instantly there was an angry "Get over there," yelled of the men, and as we went he shot a glance of hate and an.

Now just look at that, will you? My friend, "The careless, arrogant fellows are walking on the road put us in danger. If that chap next to us had had a foot toward the center

What's News Today

While strikes are hindering operations of big industries in the north and east, we in the Cisco country, are rejoicing over the fine rain and the prospects of a big crop for the year. Peace reigns and everybody working.

Some day industry will learn that raw materials abound in the south and labor conditions are conducive to cheap production. It would cost little to distribute from southern points to places of consumption. Plenty of cheap fuel, the best water, and prime living conditions, should make this a paradise for manufacturing.

Victory dinners all over the country contribute to wiping out the Democratic party financial deficit. Roosevelt, speaker at the Washington dinner, makes appeal for action on his court reform measure and says justices make congress powerless to attack the nation's various ills. He says the conservative wing allows its own economic beliefs to govern its judicial opinions. The judicial body should not try to make legislation but to interpret its constitutionality according to that document. They have no power to say whether it is good legislation or not and must leave that to the representatives and senators elected by the people and states of the nation.

More than 1,200 guests paid $100 each to eat that dinner, about $5 of which went for the dinner, and the other $95 to wipe out the party deficit.

Repeal of race betting came within one of the required 21 votes of passage in the senate Thursday afternoon when Sen. G. H. Nelson of Lubbock, by a surprise strategy, secured a vote of 20 to 8 for passage of his amendment. Governor Allred, who was on the senate floor during the morning session is pledged to repeal.

John L. Lewis and his CIO laborites are making strong drives for membership and with victories which they say they have won from steel and other big corporation, they seem to be leading with the band wagon on which many are anxious to climb. Meanwhile, William Green is heading an opposing organization which makes it possible they may dissipate their energies in fighting each other while the enemy

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—The bitterness of older men against the implied insults of a younger man, is a real factor in the supreme court struggle.

There are young men on both sides and old men on both sides, but the fight is one between old men and young men. If you average separately the ages of the outstanding protagonists and antagonists, you will find the disparity as great as that between the 75-year average age of the six justices over 70, and the age of Roosevelt, who is only 55.

Everyone who is here on the ground realizes that when Roosevelt, with a grin, asserted that judges over 70 often served beyond mental and physical capacity while unable to perceive their infirmities, he embittered many of the old-timers. They otherwise might have been able to take his proposal more calmly.

THE age line of demarcation in this fight seems to be about 60 years. Men over that age have been advised, in effect, by the president at a press conference, that he would appoint no ex-geriatrics to federal judgeships. That doesn't set well with some who had hoped to end their careers on the bench, or felt they might depend on a judgeship in case constituents voted them out of office. Also the supreme court retirement would permit justices to retire with full pay at 70, only if they had served 10 years.

Aside from the five conservative justices over 70, whom Roosevelt wants off the bench, most conspicuous figures in the opposition battalions include Senators William E. Borah, 71; Hiram Johnson, 70; Carter Glass, 79; George W.

Norris, 75; Frederick Van Nuys of Indiana, 62; Alva Adams of Colorado, 61; Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina, 72; William H. King of Utah, 72; Walter F. George of Georgia, 59; and Josiah Bailey of North Carolina, 63.

Outside the Senate one observes such opponents as Hatton Sumner, 61, chairman of the house judiciary committee, who might easily have expected to wage a judicial appointment. He has been distinctly lukewarm to the Roosevelt program. The Morgan lawyer, John W. Davis, also had reasons to hope he would wind up as supreme court justice, or perhaps even chief justice, under any conservative administration. He is now 64.

NOW as to the men who have thrown themselves conspicuously into this fight for Roosevelt. A reasonably complete list in the Senate would include Senators Bob La Follette of Wisconsin, 42; Hugo Black of Alabama, 50; Lew Schwelienbach of Washington, 42; Ed Johnson of Colorado, 53; Sherman Minton of Indiana, 46; Jimmy Byrnes of South Carolina, 57; and Bob Wagner of New York, 59.

The outstanding protagonist in the house is Congressman Maury Maverick of Texas, 41. And a list of those who helped Roosevelt work out the plan, or are now plugging for it, probably would include Assistant Attorney General Robert Jackson, 45; Solicitor General Stanley F. Reed, 52; Charles West, White House liaison man with Capitol Hill, 42; Jimmy Roosevelt, 29; Donald Richberg, 55; Ben Cohen, 39; and Thomas G. Corcoran, 37. These ages stand out in marked contrast against those of the six oldest justices.

OUT OUR WAY

strengthen their forces to regain whatever of morale they may have lost.

And as steel wages are increased, the price of steel is hiked from $3 to $8 to take up the slack and then some. Thus the public pays the fiddler in every instance. It is hard to beat big business and poor Jones will always pay the freight; the pity is the man who pays is often not the man who gains.

France is in trouble over her money price. Gold has been flowing toward the United States freely—too freely—and France has been worrying. At one time France had more gold than any other country. Then the U. S. got action and a flooded path cleared toward her coffers. Now we have most of the gold of the world and have arranged a strong burial ground for our hoard out in the wild Kentucky mountains and in rugged Colorado in the Rockies—and well guarded, too—safe from bombing planes of the enemy or dynamites in our own country.

So France has pegged the franc at 21.50 to the American dollar, hoping to stabilize her currency.

Connecticut's new electric chair is in use. While it seems satisfactory, those who have tried it have made no comment.

STORIES IN STAMPS

BY I. S. KLEIN

CAVALRY LEADER OF CIVIL WAR

FOR more than a year the Civil War had been going on, and little progress had been made on either side. In the northwest, a young officer, Philip Henry Sheridan, was buying horses for the Union army.

In May, 1862, when he was 31, "Little Phil" was made colonel of cavalry. Soon his brilliant fighting brought him to the attention of General Grant, and Sheridan was made head of cavalry of the Army of the Potomac. His raids into Confederate territory stamped him as the greatest cavalry leader of the war.

His horseback dash from Winchester to Cedar Creek, Va., where he rallied his retreating men to turn defeat into victory, is memorialized by the famous poem, "Sheridan's Ride," by Thomas Buchanan Read.

After the Civil War, Sheridan governed Louisiana and Texas. Later he went to Missouri, and, in 1883, he took command of the army and held that office until his death in 1888. His portrait appears on the right, with those of Grant and Sherman, on the new 3-cent army stamp.

Non-Zero This Winter Is $1,308 to Better

There is one man here who is pulling hard for the winter season to pass with-out the temperature going below zero. It means $1,308 to him if it does not. About Christmas-time he started betting with friends that the temperature during the winter would not go below zero. He got 10-1 odds for a while, but now the odds are down to 2-1 with few takers. He has bet $218 so far, at average odds of 6-1.

HER NAME IN LIGHTS

By MARIE BLIZARD. © 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY DAPHNE BRETT, charming young New York advertising executive, rents her deceased father's Connecticut estate to LARRY SMITH, attractive bachelor architect, and immediately finds herself liking him tremendously. Daphne has one sister, JENNIFER, just out of college and on her first job in New York for Larry.

Jennifer is a vivacious, somewhat selfish sister who resents Daphne's kindness and her first night in New York she dates DAPHNE. Then Daphne sees in Jennifer a challenge to herself—and she is NOT married. Jennifer, unaware of Daphne's liking for him, says she is going to set her cap for Larry.

The following Sunday Tuck Ainsley calls to take Jennifer out to Brett Hall where Larry lives and Larry, deciding to play the game himself, prepares to do so. It's a race between two sisters for the same man.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VIII DAPHNE came back to the living room ten minutes later. She wore her bright green tweed suit with a big collar of soft black fur. Her small green hat bore a tantalizing feather of pheasant thrust jauntily in its crown. The brightness of the green pointed up the white and black contrast of her skin and hair.

Tuck looked at her approvingly while she drew on her black gloves. Then his glance swung around to Jennifer—Jennifer looking very much like a magazine cover girl in her yellow wool coat, a shade deeper than her soft flaxen hair which flowed out from beneath a childish bonnet of brown velvet.

She sighed. "I wish I could make up my mind which of you two girls is the most beautiful. You're such perfect foils for each other. Ah me! A man has troubles." Jennifer avoided Daphne's eyes and was angry with herself for doing so. "Why try to make up your mind, Tuck? It isn't likely that Daphne and I would ever enter into any competition for a mere man. Would we, Daphne?"

She smiled but her eyes asked a question. They were cool, penetrating eyes and left no doubt of their meaning. Daphne laughed. "Don't be ridiculous, you two. Who ever thought of such an idea? Jennifer, don't ever take Tuck seriously. He never means anything he says."

"Suppose you let me make my own conclusions? I'm not really a child, you know," Jennifer's voice had a pettish note.

"You certainly are," Tuck said and pretended to shove her out the door. SHE is really a child, Daphne thought, noting the sullenness in Jennifer's face. Jennifer sat between Daphne and Tuck in the roadster. She kept her lovely eyes straight ahead and answered Tuck's cheerful attempts at conversation in monosyllables.

She is acting like a child and I'm a fool to be acting this way to her. Daphne's thoughts ran on, uncomfortably. But when they had turned off the Parkway and had driven through the familiar backwoods roads of Plantsport and were at last at Brett Hall, something within her told her that she was not a fool.

Something in Larry Smith's eyes, when he saw her told her, too, that she was not silly. She saw him before they got to the house. He was—as she had seen him first in riding clothes—on his knees putting burlap bags around the plants under the windows of the corner room, which he had looked through that first day.

"Hi, Squire!" Jennifer called from the car. Larry straightened, put his pipe in his pocket and came down toward the car. Then he saw Daphne. "HELLO," he said and there was great warmth in his voice but his eyes were for Daphne and it was to her that he held out his hand. "We've taken advantage of your invitation," she said. "This is my sister whom you've met and this is Tuck Ainsley, Mr. Smith."

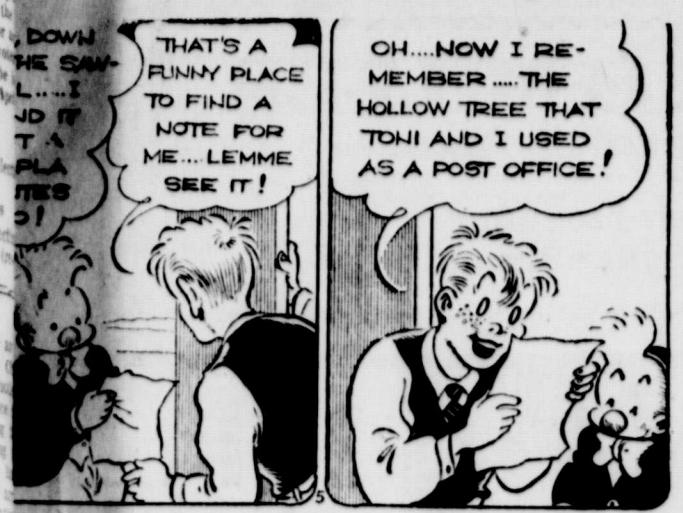

"Of course, I've met the little sister. Glad to see you all." He shook hands with Tuck. "It's been a divine drive, Mr. Smith. You're a lamb to ask us up."

Jennifer offered him an angelic smile and held out her small hand for him to help her out of the car. "A cold one," he said. "Let's get inside. I've been burning some of these fine hickory logs and I think there is something warmer than that."

They went indoors. "Mother," Larry was saying, "this is Daphne. This is the little girl in the portrait—the one with the black curls."

AND then they were all talking. There was so much to say

HERD RUSTLERS
CREATE PROBLEM FOR OKLAHOMA

OKLAHOMA CITY (U.P.)—Cattle rustling in Oklahoma has been increasing with the more up-to-date method of using a truck to haul the cattle away instead of a horse to drive them.

Col. Charles W. Daley, chief of the state crime bureau, said rustlers using trucks had stolen 1,000 head of cattle in the state during the past six months.

He explained that modern rustlers work at night in the thinly settled sections of the state. They concentrate on cattle found wandering along the highway.

"In some ways the problem is greater than in the old days," Daley said. "Then the rustlers drove off the cattle in big numbers. Vigilantes could follow their tracks and sometimes catch up with them."

"But now the trucks enable the rustlers to whisk their loot to market before the ranch owner discovers his herd has been reduced."

It is amazing to see the habitual indifference that many pedestrians maintain toward the automobile. They will hop from the curb and mosey across the street without glancing to right or left. One would think that there was not a vehicle of any shape, kind, size or description in the world to menace them.

They will stroll down roads on which automobiles are whizzing back and forth and look neither behind nor before them. If an autoist passes too close they get angry and yell at him as he goes by: "If you run over me you won't never run over nobody else, doggone ye!"

MOCKING BIRDS INCREASE
BERKELEY, Cal. (U.P.)—The University of California has established that while almost every other species of wild bird in the state is diminishing, the mocking bird is increasing. Amendment to Navy Bill Introduced

WASHINGTON, March 5 (U.P.)—An amendment to the navy appropriation bill which would place congress on record as requesting President Roosevelt to call an international disarmament conference was introduced in the house today by Rep. William Umstead, of North Carolina.

The proposal came as a surprise to state department officials, who have voiced private opinions that a conference in the future would be futile.

Under terms of the amendment, congress would authorize Mr. Roosevelt to invite leading nations of the world to the conference.

The proposal was defeated 81 to 66. Many members object to the manner in which it was submitted.
