Court Refuses Consideration Wagner Act

ACT PUZZLES OBSERVERS BY SIGNIFICANCE

WASHINGTON, March 15 (UP)—The supreme court refused today to consider seven new attacks on constitutionality of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, which is already before the court in other cases.

The actions were started in District of Columbia Supreme Court. This court granted a motion by the labor board to dismiss the request for injunction. The District of Columbia Court of Appeals affirmed this action.

Court observers were puzzled by the possible meaning of the action today.

On one hand it was said, it might mean the court has determined to uphold the Wagner Act, at least in part, and hence did not choose to rule again on a question already decided.

There were equal grounds for supposing the court may have decided the Wagner Act is unconstitutional and hence there was no need for further consideration of Wagner test cases.

Since the court today for the ninth successive time failed to present written opinions in any of the several important test cases, it was thought possible some of these decisions may be completed during the recess.

'My Story' Bride Now First Lady

"My own dress was heavy stiff satin with shirred tulle in the neck and long sleeves," wrote Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in her autobiography, "This is My Story." Here is a picture taken at the wedding day, March 17, 1905. Her Uncle Theodore, then president gave the bride away.

THIRD REICH LEAVES DOOR OPEN FOR SOVIET MUTUAL AID TREATY, FRENCH LEADERS ARE CONVINCED

By M. S. HANDLER
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, March 15 (UP)—The men who shape France's foreign policy have the firm conviction that Adolf Hitler's relentless drive against the Franco-Soviet Mutual Assistance pact is inspired by the secret desire to resume close military and economic co-operation with the Soviet Union.

The pro-Russian policy constituted the keystone of Germany's foreign relations until Hitler assumed power. An examination of Hitler's and Paul Joseph Goebbels' speeches indicate they favored this policy until the Franco-Soviet pact became a reality in 1934.

Germany's anti-Bolshevik crusade superseded the pro-Russian policy when the Franco-Soviet pact was completed by a similar treaty between the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia making Russia an important factor in Central European affairs.

The view that Germany has not yet abandoned hope of resuming close relations with the Soviets transcends almost every important official French speech on Franco-Soviet relations. While neither Premier Leon Blum nor Yvon Delbos is in a position to discuss this point as long as they occupy official positions, such men as Henry Beranger, president of the senate foreign relations committee, and one of the men whose opinions carry most weight in government councils, recently termed Hitler's demand that the Franco-Soviet pact be cancelled or revised as a preliminary condition to any new western agreement as sheer "impudence."

Beranger quoted on Paris in an important editorial published in the Agence Economique et Financiere. Beranger said this demand "was all the more misplaced as Germany has never denounced nor broken the German-Soviet Pact of Friendship and Assistance signed in Berlin in 1926, renewed in 1931 and ratified by Hitler in May, 1933. It is rare impudence to demand of others what you have not done yourself."

The senator's strong language is an expression of the conviction held by the majority of political opinion that Germany's anti-Bolshevik crusade is a flank attack on the pact with the Soviets and solely designed to get world opinion to oblige France to cancel its obligations of mutual assistance.

The French argue Hitler's soviet phobia is not to be taken seriously because the Fuehrer has succeeded in crushing Communism in his own country and so far as is known the Communist peril in Germany is non-existent.

The anti-Bolshevik crusade preached by Berlin is considered of the same substance as the pertinent campaign launched by the Comintern. Its purpose is other.

How Armed Cordon Isolates Spain

Shown on the above map is the military cordon set up by Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Portugal, effective March 13, to keep foreign troops and arms out of Spain, making the civil war strictly a Spanish revolution, and not a battleground of national powers. Coastline areas between the dotted lines show how the nations have divided up the blockade. Portuguese troops patrol the Portuguese-Spanish border under the supervision of 130 "international observers." France patrols her border.

KIN JAILED IN FIVE CHARGES OF FORGERY

DALLAS, March 15 (UP)—Police Inspector Will Fritz said today he looked for a "break" soon in solving the mysterious killing of Mrs. Mary Knox, 93, widow of a wealthy lumberman.

He renewed questioning of the aged woman's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lillian Knox, her son, Hiram Knox and Mrs. Lillian Knox's negro chauffeur, Barker T. Sloan, 19, regarding affairs of the murdered woman, who had lived alone since she became estranged from her husband in 1910.

Mrs. Lillian Knox surrendered yesterday on five indictments, charging her with forging her mother-in-law's name to checks totaling $1500 last October. Hiram Knox was arrested in an indictment warrant from Big Spring, charging him with forgery.

Investigators relied principally on fingerprints to identify the attacker who bludgeoned the aged woman to death last Thursday, strangled her with her own apron and ransacked her luxuriously furnished home.

Friends of Mrs. Knox had believed her worth more than $1,000,000, although her attorney estimated the value of her estate at $75,000 when it was entered for probate Saturday. The bulk of her estate was left to the Reynolds Presbyterian Orphanage at Dallas.

Recently Mrs. Lillian Knox had operated a rooming house in her large colonial style mansion. Her sons reached their sleeping quarters in the attic by climbing a large oak tree, to which clients had been nailed. Hiram Knox was arrested yesterday in the attic as he was packing his clothing.

Mrs. Mary Knox disinherited her daughter-in-law and six grandchildren before she was slain last Thursday, the widow's will revealed today.

FRUIT THOUGHT KILLED IN ALL OF WEST TEXAS

Cisco experienced a dash of winter Saturday night, Sunday and early Monday morning when the chilling blast brought sleet, snow and rain with it. Many old timers who rely on the moon for a great many things say this being the light of the moon the freeze would not kill fruit. And then they say the wet weather which accompanied the ice would protect from chilling. Others seemed to think that all fruit would be killed.

Pear blooms examined at noon today showed to be alive but some plum blooms showed dark, which means they are killed.

Snow in the Panhandle and on the south plains and freezing weather southward to central portion of the state, gave Texas a biting dash of late winter weather Monday.

Sleet and snow which covered the Panhandle Sunday edged southward to Abilene.

Amarillo had a minimum temperature of 18; Wichita Falls 28; El Paso 32; Dallas 29; San Antonio 32; Houston and Port Arthur 36.

Cloudiness prevailed over the southern portion of the state. Heavy rains reached north and south Texas Sunday.

East Texas had the prospect of continued colds and freezing weather is expected to continue tonight in West Texas.

CLYDE COX, FORMER 4-H BOY STARTS FATHER RAISING HOGS

The following story is written with regard to Clyde Cox, a former 4-H Club boy of Eastland county, who began in 1920 with one bred registered Poland China gilt, and since that time more than eight hundred head of registered Poland China hogs have been registered in the herd books started by his father in the registered hog business, since that time his father has been noted as one of the leading Poland China breeders of the United States, and has shipped hogs to almost every state in the union and to two foreign countries.

Clyde Cox, son of Rufus F. Cox, well known Eastland county citizen, whose home is between Rising Star and Okra, may be said to be the first 4-H Club boy in Eastland county to get his father started in the registered hog business. Senior Cox had always been a hog fancier, but he had only raised grade hogs, thinking perhaps that the cost of getting started in the registered hog business would prohibit him from doing so.

Clyde became interested in registered Poland China hogs after he joined the Okra Boys' 4-H Club in 1920. R. H. Bush, who is at the present time organization specialist of the extension service, was county agent of Eastland county at the time Clyde was a club member. Bush induced Clyde, among other 4-H club boys of Eastland county, to purchase a carload of bred registered Poland China gilts. Young Cox secured his pig and cared for it under the supervision and direction of county agent Bush, and his success was so marked that he progressed as a hog man. From this start Clyde developed quite a herd and his success was so marked that he attracted the attention of his father, Rufus Cox, who proposed a partnership.

Senior Cox had been raising cotton and grade hogs for a livelihood, but his bank account was mostly in the red, so he proposed to his son that he be taken in as a partner, and a merger was perfected, and a new business firm was established at Rising Star under the firm name of Clyde Cox and father.

In a recent interview with Senior Cox the following statements were made: "I was really mad when Clyde bought his first bred registered gilt, because of the high cost of the gilt. About the time I had finished paying for the gilt my banker informed me that a draft had arrived at the bank against my small bank account, involving a larger number of dollars for a man to pay for a breeding fee I paid the draft off but I wished Clyde would have never bought the gilt. Since that time I have regretted that I ever made that statement. I sincerely believe that 4-H Club work contributed a large

Mayor Berry Attends Abilene's Birthday

Mayor J. T. Berry left this afternoon for Abilene when he will attend a birthday party at the Hilton hotel. Abilene is celebrating its 56th birthday and will have a dinner for pioneers of 1881, the date of its beginning. Mr. Berry moved with his father's family from Belle's Plains in 1881 to the present site of Abilene and the elder Berry built the first general merchandise store in the little village and ten years later he built the present site of Abilene. It was only recently torn down to make way for progress. Mr. Berry's sister owned the first piano in the town and many gatherings of the younger people took place there to see and use the new piano.

COURT GRANTS TEXAS' RIGHT OF COMPLAINT

R. Green, son of the famous Hetty Green.

The petition acted on by the court today was filed Friday.

The new application, prepared by Texas Attorney General William McCraw an dhis assistant, Flewellyn B. Duke, after an inquiry at New York City and Boston, alleges that if all states in the federal government were to impose their tax, $44,000,000,000 would fall $2,000,000 short of tax requirements.

What's News Today!

The thermometer stood at 28 degrees this morning at 7 o'clock after a cold blast bringing sleet, a little fine snow, more rain which thoroughly soaked the ground and further aided farm conditions but which endangered fruit over all North and West Texas. A few accidents reported over the state from weather conditions does not swell the mortality unusually over the week-end.

France, England, Italy and Germany begin patrolling the Spanish coast at midnight Saturday to keep out war munitions and soldiers from aiding either side in the Spanish civil war struggle. Observers are also placed on the Spanish boundaries of Portugal and France. Meanwhile, a protest is being formed to be presented at the assembling of the neutrality committee headed by the Dutch, against the thousands of Italian soldiers now in Spain.

Our Struggles in America just now is confined to a war of words and diplomacy. The court reform bill in the senate is at a deadlock as advocates and enemies argue back and forth and make efforts to bring pressure to bear to break the deadlock. A compromise is apparent in order to proceed.

In the early morning papers, strange to say, no strike news was to be seen. It is indeed, a sit-down move.

But as the day advances, moves and counter-moves will take place in the game being seriously between employer and employees.

England blocks Japanese efforts to secure an air base landing near China by leading the Macao authorities the money they needed and which has been a temptation to accept the Japanese offer of a long rental at a good sum of money.

It is a constant struggle among nations to watch each other and check-mate moves that would be injurious to themselves and their trade interests. Great chess players, diplomats must be!

Down here in Austin, in our own state, our legislators are to begin anew today the struggle to raise revenues to provide state expenses. Sulphur, gas and franchise taxes will be considered seriously.

Race track betting is to begin its struggle again today. The senate and house have measures before them they are trying to put over, while enemies of repeal are working with might and main to stem the tide.

A few more days and Cisco will begin her townsite test to see just what is underlying the seven hills of our city. A new steel rig is just about completed and a few preliminaries to be ironed out before the drill starts on its journey to unearth a stream of gold—we hope.

OUT OUR WAY

HOT FOOTIN'

NATURE BLURS ISLAND SHRINE

PARIS, March 15 (AP)—Mont Saint Michel, one of the architectural wonders of the world is threatened with losing its picturesque insular character through the accumulation of sands around it.

The Historical Monuments commission is contemplating cutting the dike which, although it would give back to Mont Saint Michel its former insular picturesque character would prevent tourists from driving up to the foot of the island. This, it is feared, would considerably diminish her number for more than 4,000,000 tourists visited the Mont Saint Michel during the past year and most of them were motorists.

Furthermore, it would greatly inconvenience the 200 inhabitants of the small town situated under the monastery, who would have difficulty in receiving necessary supplies and finally it is estimated that the cost of cutting the dike would be heavy.

Disadvantages connected with the plan are causing much disagreement between art lovers and the municipalities of the surrounding towns. They first insist above all on preserving the Mont's insular character, and that towns fear heavy financial losses through the possible reduction of tourists.

The chief engineer of public works of the Manche department is completing his report, and it is hoped that it will settle the question about the dike. Ancient Druid Stronghold Legend has it that in 708 the Mont Saint Michel, then a Druid stronghold, was the scene of an apparition of Saint Michael. In 966 it became the seat of a great Benedictine monastery, half fortress, half church. The French revolution of 1792 saw it transformed into a prison which remained until 1863. Finally in 1874, it was declared a historical monument, and large sums were spent on restoring it. The building include a church, the first part of which was constructed in 1020, and portions were added until the middle of the 16th century, and "La Merveille" the monastery itself with its 13th century wall 246 long and 10 feet high. An interesting sight, which twice yearly attracts large numbers of tourists is the incoming tide at the equinox. The sea, which at low tide is several miles away, rises at the rate of a galloping horse over the large expanse of sand and within 15 minutes the Mont Saint Michel is standing in high water. The Mont also offers great attraction for acrobats who can enjoy omelets known as the best in the world, the "omelettes de la mere Poilard."

HER NAME IN LIGHTS

BEGIN HERE TODAY When DAPHNE BITT took her younger sister, JENNIFER, under her arm in an effort to launch her on a successful career in New York, difficulties immediately arose between the two. Jennifer resented the fact that she was being pushed into a life of show and she felt that she was being treated as a plaything.

She planned to elope with TUCKER MANLEY, wealthy playboy, and would have had no thought of the fact that Daphne would be heartbroken. Jennifer, however, had no such qualms. She was going to marry TUCKER MANLEY, and she was going to be rich. Daphne, sitting cross-legged on the floor, said, "No! A thousand times no! Look, Jennifer, you're only going to tell him that the boss has changed his mind about firing him. He isn't your lover! You aren't going to tell him he's been left a fortune and the word OK is not in the script. Take that transcendent light out of your eyes. Now come back to the right entrance and do it again!"

Jennifer looked dubious for a minute and then did as she was told. "Much better," Daphne pronounced. "And you're letter perfect in your lines. There's only one other little thing: when you get to the door, open it with your left hand. Don't make a complete turn with your back to the audience when you open the door."

Jennifer blew out her breath and slipped off her negligee. "Daphne, you're wonderful. Headley—Headley was the director of Apple Blossoms, the Herzberg production—asked me where I'd picked up that piece of business with the tea-cup yesterday." "It's fun, isn't it?" Daphne said wistfully. "Yes, Oh, say Daphne," Jennifer said behind a yawn, while her alert eyes measured her sister. "Tuck is back. I'm meeting him for cocktails tomorrow."

Daphne felt as though she had stepped through a hole in the ice. "I thought I laid down the law about cocktails?" "And about Tuck, too, didn't you?" Jennifer said with an unpleasant smile. "Sometimes I think I'll give up, but listen, Jennifer, I've more influence with Tuck than you have and I'm going to tell him that I don't want him seeing you."

"It wouldn't surprise me a bit if you did," her sister answered. "But if I were you I wouldn't try." Daphne set her mouth in a line as straight as Jennifer's. "Let's both go to bed. We're tired and this heat is getting on our nerves. You open in Philadelphia next Monday, don't you?"

DAPHNE stared into the hot silence of the night, long after Jennifer had gone to sleep, until she convinced herself that Jennifer had only meant to tease her when she had taunted her about Tuck. It was since she couldn't be sure that Jennifer really had gotten over Tuck, she was determined to appeal to Tuck once more not to see Jennifer. She'd do it even if she had to pretend that she herself was interested in him.

She made a note to telephone him and ask him to take her for cocktails the following afternoon. It slipped her mind that next day. Too many other things happened. "Sit down, Miss Brett," Mr. Johnstone, Advertising Agency, waved her into a chair that was much too big for her. He leaned across the big desk and regarded her thoughtfully. Daphne made herself sit still and wondered if her lipstick was a little too red. "Nice work you've done on the Georgian line." The Georgian line was the merchandise of a cosmetic house, one of the accounts that Daphne had developed. "Oh, thank you, Mr. Johnstone."

Clyde Cox—

made me a living for several years, and I hope to continue this work until I pass across "The Great Divide" because I enjoy raising hogs. Seven years ago Clyde withdrew from the partnership and became the manager of the Chrysler-Plymouth Corporation in Tyler, Texas. Clyde Cox recently stated "I use the things I learned in 4-H Club work every day in working with my farmer friends even though I am in the automobile business."

In making a brief summary of the activities of Clyde Cox, a former ambitious 4-H Club boy, and one registered Poland China gilt purchased in the early 1920's, the following thing may be said. "Clyde Cox started with one bred gilt in 1920 and since that time more than 800 head of hogs have been registered in the herd books. He got his father started in a business which he had always had an ambition to start, but thought the initial cost would be too high. Senior Cox is now recognized as one of the leading hog raisers of the United States, and his hogs have been shipped to almost every state in the union including two foreign countries, Argentina and Venezuela."

Clyde Cox showed his hogs at all the major shows during his 4-H Club career, winning the grand champions on his hogs before he was fifteen years old. According to Clyde, "Hogs were hogs and classes were larger at all of these shows."

So it was from the modest beginning that a splendid industry has been developed, which started in 1920 with one ambitious 4-H Club boy and one registered Poland China gilt, under the direction and supervision of R. H. Bush, a former county agent of Eastland county.

France Looks to East

The French, despite their dislike for Communism—that is general with the exception of the French Communists—place the following considerations in the forefront whenever Hitler invites them to conclude a separate peace to the exclusion of the Soviets.

Through their mutual assistance pact with Czechoslovakia the Soviet Union has become one of the principal military factors in Central Europe and principal barrier to German expansion at the expense of the successor states. The Soviet has assumed France's obligations for the protection of the Little Entente. The French further believe that Soviet military and industrial power have assumed such proportions that Germany will hesitate to attack France as long as it has the certainty Moscow would join in battle. The French never forget that the German general staff always has entertained friendly relations with the Soviet army.

In pointing out that Hitler never has canceled the treaty of friendship with the Soviets despite his oft repeated pledge never to sign another treaty with Moscow, Berthelot was allowing an exit for himself by permitting the treaty to subsist until the day when the Franco-Soviet pact would be no more. It generally is feared in France that Hitler is enjoining the Soviet to cancel the pact in order to consecrate France's isolation, remove the Soviets as a factor in Central Europe, and finally to prepare another realignment of German-Soviet forces such as existed under the Treaty of Rapallo.

Old Statement Recalled

The Vatican organ, the Osservatore Romano, recently recalled the attitude of the Nazis toward Bolshevism years before Hitler assumed power. The Vatican newspaper reproduced an article addressed to the Bolsheviks which Goebbels published in the Volkischer Beobachter on Nov. 14, 1925.

The article read in part:

"I am not at all thinking of associating with the chorus of liars and ignorant bourgeoisie. Russian Bolshevism isn't bearing disintegration... Certainly the Bolshevik must howl with the wolves in order to trouble the song of occidental Jewish capitalists. That is the reason for the wild hatred of the Occident against Soviet Russia. You and we are fighting without really being enemies. We are thus breaking our strength. Perhaps extreme necessity will unite us. Perhaps we are, you and I, the representatives of the new generations. Never forget that fact! Salute you."

GMC Presents Chapel Program

By TOMMY LA MORE
At the regular high school chapel period this morning a representative of the General Motors company had charge of the program and presented to the student body a show on the strength of certain metals used in large airplanes and automobiles, and also included in the program the correct safety signs used in driving a car. This program was sponsored by the local Chevrolet company, the A-G motor company under the supervision of Jack Anderson.

There were three parts to the show with all having much interest. It showed the construction of metal in the large airplanes, boats, and cars. Also the use of forest patrols and of automobiles in fighting forest fires. The last part part clearly illustrated the correct arm and hand signs that should be used by motorists when they are preparing to turn a corner, stop, and other acts that persons back of them will not know.

CO-OPS TO END SHARECROPPING URGED BY EDDY

By HENRY WOOD
United Press Staff Correspondent
SAN FRANCISCO, March 4 (U.S.)—Producers and consumers cooperatives constitute the surest economic salvation for poorer farmers and share-croppers throughout the United States, believes Sherwood Eddy, writer and organizer of a farm cooperative experiment in Mississippi.

He based his belief upon the successful 2,138 acre farm in Bolivar county, Miss., where evicted farmers and sharecroppers, negro and white, are on a solvent, anti-profit making basis.

Eddy, former secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Asia, was drawn into the fight to aid evicted farmers and sharecroppers of the south almost by accident. With a group of prominent men from Memphis, Eddy started in March, 1936, to investigate a score of white families who had been evicted from farms in Arkansas.

The first investigation led to the discovery of 19 negro families huddled in 10 little tents by a roadside.

Three States Surveyed
That led Eddy to start a search over three states for a suitable place for a producers and consumers cooperative for evicted farmers.

"We finally found the ideal spot in Bolivar county, Miss., which raises more cotton than any other county in the world," Eddy said. "We purchased this land with buildings, machinery and property on faith—and a shoestring. With Sam Franklin as director we organized a producers and consumers cooperative and soon had 30 evicted families on the land."

Eddy declared that at the end of the first year of experiment the trustees now hold a $30,000 farm free from debt. It is occupied only by the first original 30 families.

"The first year naturally was the hardest," Eddy said. "We got a late start on March 26 and faced one of the worst droughts in many years which burned up corn and vegetables and wilted some of the cotton, yet members of the cooperative made 152 bales of cotton just the same."

Own Lumber Sawn
"During the first year we purchased a steam sawmill and sold $4,000 worth of lumber and put $1,000 worth more from the cooperative's own forest into new houses and buildings built by its members including a fine community center and an auditorium seating several hundred persons, with educational and recreational facilities of which they are justly proud."

The co-operators have made an excellent beginning in a hog and poultry raising farm and are now
