If You But Knew

Former Capitalist By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

If I were to give advice to a young man starting out in life, I would say to him: "If you aim for a large broad-gauge success, do not begin your business career, whether you sell your labor or are an independent producer, with the idea of getting from the world by hook or crook all you can. In the choice of your profession or business employment, let your first thought be—where can I fit in so that I may be most effective in the work of the world?—Where can I lead a hand in a way most effectively to advance the general interest? Enter life in such a spirit. Choose your vocation in that way, and you have taken the first step on the highest road to a large success. The man will be most successful who confers the greatest service on the world. Commercial enterprises that are needed by the public will pay. Commercial enterprises that are not needed fail, and ought to fail. The penalty of a selfish attempt to make the world confer a living without contributing to the progress and happiness of mankind is generally a failure of the individual. The pity is that when he goes down he inflicts heartache and misery on other who are in no way responsible. My ideas of business are an old-fashioned but the fundamental principles do not change from generation to generation and sometimes I think there are quick-witted American business men whose spirit and energy are so splendid but do not always sufficiently study the real underlying foundations of business management. It is absolutely necessary to be frank and honest with oneself about one's own affairs. Many people assume that they can get away from the truth by avoiding thinking about it. The natural law is inevitable and the sooner it is recognized, the better.

To Make People Like You

Do you know six "strepit" ways to make people like you? Here is a summary of Dale Carnegie's rules from his best seller, "How to Win Friends and Influence People." 1. Become genuinely interested in other people. 2. Smile. 3. Remember that a man's name is to him the sweetest and most important sound in the English language. 4. Be a good listener. Encourage others to talk about themselves. 5. Talk in terms of the other man's interest. 6. Make the other person feel important—and do it sincerely.

Ten Rules for a Long Life

If you would live to a ripe old age, here are ten rules given by Hygeia on how to live 100 years. 1. Breathe fresh air, both day and night. 2. Exercise your larger muscles regularly every day. 3. Look on overfatigue as your enemy, and on rest as your friend. Take at least eight hours of sleep. (The voice of wisdom, says one should turn off the radio at 10.) 4. Drink plenty of water at meals and also between meals. 5. Eat temperately, partaking of vegetables and fruit for "roughage" and health's sake, and sparingly of meat and sugar. Avoid overweight. 6. Have regular bowel habits. 7. Avoid infection from both outside and inside sources. Make a thorough recovery from colds and sore throat. 8. Wash your hands before eating. (That the teeth are to be cleaned night and morning is taken for granted.) 9. Think wholesome thoughts. Face unpleasant situations frankly and sensibly, and don't worry. Keep your play spirit. 10. Have a health examination by your physician each year; ask his advice and follow it.

SHANGHAI SEEKS RADIUM MONTREAL 48P—The fame of Canadian radium has spread to China. Dr. J. Ernest Gendreau, director of the Radium Institute of Montreal, reveals that he just received a request for a substantial quantity of the precious substance from one of Shanghai's leading hospitals.

AGE MAY BAR DIVORCE BUFFALO, N. Y. 48P—When a couple live together for 55 years they are too old to separate. Supreme Court Justice John V. Mahoney believes. The judge ordered attorneys for Mrs. Carrie Kellogg and her husband, George A. Kellogg 71, to effect a reconciliation.

"Well," said her husband when he returned from business in the evening, "have you found out anything about the social standing of the new folks across the street?" "Not yet," was the reply. "They have no car." "No?" "Yes, and they have no Pomeranian dog, no radio and not even a grand piano. I can't imagine what they have got." "Humph," remarked her husband sardonically. "Perhaps they have a bank account."

"Oh, man," said his lawyer, "the jury has found you guilty." "Hay?" "The jury says you're guilty," he repeated loudly in his ear. "In what degree?" "There is no degree in a still case." "Guilty all over, then?" "Yes." "Hay?" "Yes," shouted the lawyer. "Well, that's what I told you in the first place but you said you could clear me. Wish now I'd got that judge to defend me. Get him next time."

CITIES ENLARGE OFFICE STAFFS, RAISE SALARIES

CHICAGO, May 24 (AP)—City governments the country over are responding to the employment upswing by increasing department appointees and salary scales, according to the Municipal Year Book. The report issued by the International City Managers' Association said there were 9.5 per cent more employees per 1,000 people in 1936 than in 1935. Greater employment opportunities in the service of larger cities, the report finds, where the ratio of new appointments to full-time employees jumped from 5.7 to 7.6 per cent last year. Average salary for about a half-number. She could phone them; that would save several hours' work. She rushed back to the newsstand again, and changed three one-dollar bills for nickels. The clerk looked at her in astonishment, and after she left, he tapped his head expressively. "Nuts!" he confided to the young man at the other end of the counter.

people looking for rooms in earnest and they complicated her mission and delayed her. One fact encouraged her. Evidently few rooms had been rented that day. And those women who had rented successfully were eager to boast of their good fortune. But none had rented to a slim, blond young lady. . . . At nine o'clock she was downtown again, to Columbus Circle, and she changed her course and went over east, to work uptown. At nine-thirty a woman informed her severely that it was too late to show the room that night; she had better come back in the morning. . . . "I'll try a few more," Dorothy persisted. "Just a few more, until it's ten o'clock. Not everybody goes to bed so early."

CHAPTER XXIX ARRIVING in Manhattan at 3 o'clock from Green Hills, Dorothy repeated to herself: "I am Joan Barrett. I am afraid of being accused of murder. Where shall I go? Where can I hide?" The first editions of the evening papers were already on the streets, and the mysterious death of John Ware Hendry headlined every front page. Dorothy bought a copy and went into the waiting room to read it. So far only the barest details had been made public. "Police are concerned," she read, "over the simultaneous disappearance of Miss Joan Barrett, secretary to the murdered man. As far as can be determined, Miss Barrett was the last person to see Mr. Hendry alive." That was all, there was no reference to Joan's past.

BY 5 o'clock she had spent 34 nickels and called 30 numbers. A dozen irate customers had glared at her for monopolizing the phone booth, and one man threatened to call an officer. But she kept on, despite them. She spoke to 40-odd different women—shrill women and soft-spoken women; suspicious women and curious women; reticent women and garrulous women. She heard every epithet that was ever applied in the glorification of the furnished room; she promised a dozen women that she and her sister would take the room without doubt on the morrow. But no woman admitted that a young lady, slim and blond, had taken her room that day. Her list of phone numbers was depleted; now she must visit the other rooms listed. She must work systematically and hurriedly, because the time was slipping by so quickly. Through the windows of the terminal she could see that darkness was already beginning to fall. . . . She wondered whether it would be better to start on the east side and work north, or go all the way up town on the west side and work south. She chose the latter route, since she might lose an hour or more going from east to west in the upper part of the city. She took the west side subway express to the last stop on the line. This was the location of the first room on her list. She told the landladies, as she met them, the same story she had used over the telephone, varying it to suit the occasion. Her facial muscles ached from smiling so continually and so convincingly; her head rang with the dull echo of her own voice.

"Yes, that's the one," Mrs. Griggs said immediately. "Your sister, eh?" "Yes, that's the one," Mrs. Griggs said immediately. "Your sister, eh?" "Yes, that's the one," Mrs. Griggs said immediately. "Your sister, eh?" "Yes, that's the one," Mrs. Griggs said immediately. "Your sister, eh?"

As she folded the paper together, her eye fell upon the classified advertisements on page 23. The words "Rooms to let" struck her forcefully. "Rooms to let," she repeated to herself. SHE stopped abruptly, a sudden idea occurring to her. This was the afternoon paper; Joan, arriving in town before dawn, would have bought an early morning edition. She left the paper on the seat and rushed to the newsstand.

"Have you a morning paper?" she demanded breathlessly. The clerk looked under the counter. "Just one left," he replied. "It's a little torn. . . ." "That's all right. I'll take it." The classified ads, she noticed were intact. That was enough. She hurried back to the waiting room and began to check off the advertised rooms in order of location. She worked desperately; there were so many ads—so many columns of ads—in the morning paper. She made another list of all those which gave the telephone

It was after seven o'clock now, closer to eight. She met other million employees in the 781 cities reported, was $1,765. Largest salary gains over the 1934 comparative period were made by cities over 500,000 and cities 30,000 to 100,000, which averaged $200 per employee. In cities between 200,000 and 500,000, however, the average decreased $64, the report said. The average number of municipal employees per 1000 people in 1936 was 9.9. The figures verify a tendency noted in previous years that the number of employees per thousand increases with the size of the city. Cities over 500,000, for example, hired 12.6 employees per thousand, and those from 200,000 to 500,000 over 10. Those from 100,000 to 200,000 employed 8.6; from 30,000 to 100,000 7.8; and from 10,000 to 30,000 6.6.

Humble to Repeat Hall of History

HOUSTON — Humble's Hall of Texas History, widely acclaimed as one of the most interesting and educational exhibits at the Central Centennial Exposition in Dallas last year, by popular request will be reopened and enlarged for the 1937 showing of the Greater Texas and Pan-American Exposition.

Announcement was made recently after much favorable comment and numerous requests for another showing had been received. At the same time it was agreed to expand the Hall and include more informative material about oil—the major industry of Texas.

The entire exhibit of last year historical dioramas and geologic maps and miniature models, will be retained intact and a wing of some 1,500 square feet will be added to accommodate a series of new material explaining the work of the geologist, paleontologist and physicist in their combined search for petroleum deposits. This is being done in answer to a multitude of requests during the 1936 showing for facts about the instruments and methods employed in the relentless probing for oil.

A seismograph sound truck, torsion balance instrument and magnetometer—all delicate recording instruments used in exploration work—will be shown. Accompanying these will be transparent photographs and explanatory graphs and charts to make clear to the layman and somewhat puzzling story of how oil is found underground.

For several weeks the geologic and geophysics departments of the Company have been engaged in special research, and at this time work is going ahead in Dallas with the construction and installation of materials for the addition to the exhibit.

Along with these improvements the entire exhibit will be re-decorated in keeping with the spirit of the Pan-American exposition. Typical Texas scenes which adorned the walls will be replaced by others reflecting the tone of Mexico and neighboring countries to the South.

T. C. U. Announces Twenty Lettermen

FORT WORTH, May 24—Twenty varsity letters, eight minor sports letters, and 24 freshman numerals were announced today by the committee on inter-collegiate athletics at Texas Christian University.

Seven men received their first varsity letter. They are: Paul Tankersley, Terrell, and Ben Dyess and Horace Carswell, both of Fort Worth—baseball; Sid Wieser, Hamilton, and Clin Jones, Jim Nicol and Lee Dunivant, all of Fort Worth—track.

A pair of golfers and one tennis player were awarded their first minor sports letter—Jim Young, Fort Worth, tennis; and Wayne Dunlap, Cameron, Mo., and Bob Jordan, Albany, golf.

The baseball award made the ninth "T" to be received by three of the Frog seniors, all of whom served as a captain this year. The "9-timers" are Capt. Walter Roach (football leader), Fort Worth; Capt. Will Walls (basketball), Little Rock, Ark.; and Capt. Sam Baugh (baseball), Sweetwater.

Pictures Taken of Cisco High Classes

By TOMMY LA MORE
The juniors, freshmen, and sophomore classes have had their pictures taken for the Year Book, and the seniors are to have theirs taken tomorrow afternoon while attired in their commencement caps and gowns.

The Lobo staff members have also received a portion of the annual book for their pictures and they will have them made this afternoon on the high school lawn.

These pictures play a large part in the Year Book, as the students enjoy having pictures of their former classmates.

Rules for Cisco Soft Ball League

1. No player may change teams after Friday, May 28, except with written permission from all six managers of teams.
2. No player may play with any team other than the one signed with unless given special permission by the manager of the opposing team. (This rule applies when one team fails to have enough men to start the game.)
3. No team may have more than 4 players on it that are selected for the all-star team. Any other players will be drafted to the club of lowest standing. The player to be drafted will be designated by his manager. The player most in demand goes to lowest club, second in demand to next lowest and so on.
4. No team may have more than three players under 21 years of age.
5. No player may change teams before Friday, May 28, without the written permission of his present manager.
6. All managers must have their roster complete and ready to be checked by Friday, May 28.
7. No roster may contain more than 15 names.
8. No names may be added to the roster after Friday, May 28 except with the permission of the majority of the managers.
9. No player will be eligible to compete on any team unless certified by the league.
10. Players violating any of the above rules are ineligible for further City League Competition and any team violating them forfeits the games played, and their rights to continue in the City League.
11. Managers and players agree to accept further rulings which may be made for the benefit of the league as a whole and as the need for them arises.

4-H Girls Clubs Protect Gardens

Members of 4-H girls' clubs are enlisting the aid of county home demonstration agents in combating insects, laying subirrigation tile, and carrying on other activities to improve the yields of their gardens.

Club girls of Eastland county have laid 1,575 feet of subirrigation tile in their gardens and have built 102 hot beds from which more than 65,000 tomatoes have been transplanted.

The best time to check insect infestations is before the insects appear in numbers. Lawona Bush, garden demonstrator of the Bedford 4-H club of Tarrant county, told the members of her club recently. She plans to keep on hand a supply of lead arsenate which she will use against chewing insects at the rate of two level teaspoonful to one gallon of water, and she will use nicotine sulphate at the rate recommended by the manufacturer to control sucking insects.

Minnie Lee Humphries of the Liberty Hill 4-H club in Williamson county protected some of her young tomato plants by shingles stuck in the soil and protected others by placing tin cans with the ends cut short around the plants. Plants protected by the cans wilted less, grew off more quickly and suffered less from cut worm damage.

Boyce House Tells—

a second car. House's companion—whose name the author does not recall—told the visitor about the great oil boom.

When House returned to Fort Worth, he began research into the subject and found that his informant's information not only was interesting but correct. To fill in the outline that the Mexico citizen had rapidly sketched in conversation, House put in a great deal of hard work.

Though he had no assurance that any magazine would be interested in the article after it was written, he made three trips to Mexico to get as accurate and complete information as possible. He contracted a severe cold as the result of almost an entire December Sunday spent in the chill vault of the Mexico Evening News where the old files are kept. Too cold even to sit down, he made notes for hour after hour with a gloved hand after blowing the dust from the yellowed pages.

House talked to many persons among them J. K. Hughes, the late J. E. Urshel, superintendent of Colonel Humphrey's company; former Postmaster Billie Simmons; W. K. Boyd, publisher of the Evening News; Stanford Smith; E. L. Smith; and the Major Harry Johnson, who was second in command during martial law. The writer also viewed the Golden Lane, "Little Juarez," the Henry Homestead and other spots; read everything on Mexico's history at the high school and public library, and examined the University of Texas Library material in Austin. There, too, he talked to Garland Adair, former editor of the Mexico Evening News and now editor of the Austin Dispatch. Adair was the close personal friend of Colonel Humphreys and was the only man to examine the manuscript before House sent it to the Saturday Evening Post.

House has a real oil field background as he was editor in Ranger Eastland and Cisco newspapers for 10 years. He wrote a book, "Were You in Ranger?", the history of that boom. He is the author of two other books—"I Give You Texas," a collection of "Rhythm," a work he has highest stories including the "bank robbery Rip" horror. At present, he is editing the "Frontier Blue Book," Starling Deane and other poetry has been his anthology "little" magazine "United States"

Lindbergh's 'Partners'

THE "Spirit of St. Louis," the other half of the team—"We"—will be visited by more than 25,000 all parts of the nation when they converge on Washington for their first National Jamboree, June 30 to July 9, on the tented city on both sides of the Potomac River.

The famous plane, in which Col. Lindbergh made his first solo flight from New York to Paris ten years ago May 21, is housed in a new building in Washington where Boy Scouts are helping to care for it. The St. Louis Jamboree Contingent will be on hand to see the plane.

SPRINT STAR. Arthur Lindgren swam to a new 200-meter freestyle record. "Camels give me a generous 'lift' in energy when I'm tired after swimming," says Art.

OLYMPIC STAR. Arthur Highland smashed records in the dash and middle-distance events. Arthur says: "Smoking Camels with my meals eases the strain after racing."

WHAT THESE ACE MERMAIDS SAY—Dorothy Poynton Hill speaking: "I prefer Camels for their mildness. They never jangle my nerves. I can enjoy smoking as often as I wish. I think that another advantage of smoking Camels is the invigorating 'lift' they give me when I'm tired after a strenuous workout."

Lenore Kight Wingard—one of the greatest can woman athletes of our times—adds this: "I get fun out of swimming. Hard work is no game. It's grand the way Camels help me. Food no matter how tired or strained I may be, I've found Camels do not irritate my throat."

MARGARET HUTTON—free-style and back-stroke champion and famous for her record-breaking performances as a pianist—has smoked Camels since 1935.

JANE FAUNTZ MANSKE—started smoking Camels 2 years ago. This Chicago girl's superb diving form won her National and Olympic honors.

GEORGIA COLEMAN—made Olympic history in her spectacular spring-board diving victory in 1932. She became a Camel smoker that same year.

DOROTHY POYNTON—perky, blonde beauty—the Queen of the form-diving—has been a fan over a year.
