The collection of fighting craft was called the greatest ever assembled. Breaking naval precedents by being accompanied by the Queen and Princess Elizabeth, King George VI garbed as an admiral of the fleet, took the salute from the Empires senior service amid cheers from a million people on shore and 50,000 others aboard sightseeing boats.

SENIORS HAVE GREAT TIME AT W.M.S. 'CANDYLAND' FEED

It was an unusually lovely program for the seniors at the banquet and "Candyland" program at the First Baptist church Tuesday night sponsored by the W. M. S. of the church. Decorations and favors added to the spice of the event at which Dr. Thomas Taylor, of Howard Payne college, was the principal speaker.

O. L. Stamey, principal of the high school, was toastmaster and he filled the position in his customary capable manner. Superintendent R. N. Cluck talked about the "Cracker Jack Seniors" while Mrs. Davis Fields gave the seniors hearty welcome for the Baptist sponsors. Mack McGowan, vice-president of the class responded in his fine way.

BREAKS RULE TO SPEAK ON LEGISLATION

WASHINGTON, May 26 (U.P.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt broke her own long-standing rule against commenting on pending legislation today to advocate two important measures, one of which her husband said he did not expect congress to consider at this session.

Mrs. Roosevelt's proposals were: 1. A clause in the new wage and hour bill to guarantee equal pay for equal work, a clause which would establish women's wages at the same scale as men's providing they do the same work.

2. Amendment of the Social Security Act to include protection for domestic servants and farm workers. Yesterday Mr. Roosevelt said no changes so far-reaching were to be expected at this session of congress.

FRANCES PERKINS FAVORS WAGE AND HOUR SCALE

WASHINGTON, May 26 (U.P.)—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins informed congress today that she favored specific wage and hour treatment for major industries as a part of the president's general wage and hour program.

At the same time, Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper expressed the opinion that "good business" would support the president's new proposal.

'STADIUM WORK PROGRESSING,' SAYS WILSON

"We have wet the grounds of the football stadium twice and will probably start erecting steel tomorrow if it doesn't rain, which we hope it will," said W. F. Wilson, superintendent of construction of the $13,000 football stadium project now in progress at Chesley Field.

After the steel has been placed, the concrete pillars to be set during this week for the north side. When the turf has had time to dry out sufficiently, the soil will be placed on the field and then the contouring will be done while the sections are being constructed. Blasting for the big light poles on the north side, which must be moved to give room for the track, has not yet been done. These holes for the four poles are on rock bottom and blasting will be necessary to get proper depth for their re-setting.

Twelve men have been signed on for work on the project bringing the total to about 64, said Time Keeper Cecil E. Prickett, today.

J. G. Gallena of Strawn, truck driver for Dr. Pepper Bottling company, is in the Graham hospital suffering injuries received when his truck failed to make the curve on the Cisco-Rising Star highway just south of Cisco early Tuesday morning, when he was coming into Cisco from Rising Star. The car overturned several times.

A few bruises, lacerations of the face and hands were said to be the only injuries received by Mr. Gallena who was brought to the hospital Tuesday afternoon, 3:20 for treatment. It is reported he will remain for a few days rest.

Mrs. Aaron Robinson of Rising Star was among the out of town visitors in Cisco Tuesday afternoon.

RICHMOND, Calif., May 26 (U.P.)—The local assembly plant of the Ford Motor company which employs 1,800 men was closed today by a dispute that maybe the opening skirmish in an attempt to force Henry Ford to recognize the United Automobile Workers of America.

The workers demanded national recognition of their union by the Ford Company. Frank Slaby, business representative of the UAW said it would not be a sitdown strike.

It was reported that about 25 workers said to be non-union employees sat outside the hall when the vote of the night crew was taken after they went off work early today. Union officials immediately assigned pickets around the plant and sent others to San Francisco to picket the Ford plant there.

The union was said to be preparing eight separate demands to be made. They included reinstatement to their former jobs of two men active in a sitdown strike at the plant on April 23.

The union charged these men had been "shuffled" around the plant and given disagreeable jobs until one of them was forced to quit.

A meeting of the Cisco Country Club members has been called for tonight at 7:30 at the Chamber of Commerce by President J. E. Caffrey.

JACK LAMB TO TELL YOU HOW TO GET FISH

When Jack Lamb, world famed fisherman, author and writer, puts on his exhibition in Fiesta Park at 5:30 p. m. today, the novice fishermen of this section will have an opportunity to take free lessons in casting from the outstanding angler of the 20th century.

Yesterday Lamb went to Lake Cisco and fished for a few hours. He caught about fifty bass, a great many of which were small, but he also had the thrill of seeing five large bass tear up his tackle. Lamb hung several of the old grandpa bass in the lake, but he was fishing with a nine-pound test line, and they snapped it like thread.

Jack had high praise for Lake Cisco. A few years ago when he was here, the lake had been highly publicized and great numbers of fishermen had depleted the fish.

HUESTIS BOYS TAKE LEAD ON NANCE MOTOR

Little Huestis Sinclairs won the ball game last night by 17 to 10. A game that started off with the Motor company leading in the first inning. Huestis men were unable to miss the ball in the Nance men failed to connect with the long hits that they sent their way.

Nance Motor started off with a lead last night by scoring 3 runs. Smitty's Sinclairs in the first of the first inning in a dueling game at the lighted field lead did not last long when Huestis boys came to bat and score was soon tied at 3 all.

The holding of Nance team was so and the outfielders just seem to get close to the Smitty Huestis must have been his boys a lot of battling practice was they slamming the bat to all four corners of the lot. Smitty's Sinclairs got a safe lead. Smitty began to get nervous and some heavy clouds and drops of rain, so he gave his instructions to make outs as they could to get the fifth out.

'Pupils Aren't Fireproof'

Mr. Fleming is an authority on this matter—formerly a clergyman, he happened to be present when the Collinswood school burned many years ago, and aided in the rescue. Thereafter he left the pulpit and gave his life to preaching the gospel of fire prevention.

Just how bad are our schools? They are unquestionably far worse than any parent imagines. Mr. Fleming has seen supposedly safe schools where the janitors thought fire extinguishers were insect sprays, and schools where students were notified ten minutes in advance of fire drills!

Maybe the school your children attend is safe—and maybe it is not. And here is a matter where guesswork isn't enough—public opinion should demand that competent disinterested engineers make a thorough inspection of every school plant, and that their recommendations be followed.

Things One Remembers

There are many simple things that could be done to reduce automobile accidents.

Recently, I saw a small trailer with lumber in it tear loose from the pleasure car that was towing it. It dashed out into the oncoming traffic, then slued around and ran into the bank on the side of the road where it broke loose.

The trailer had been fastened to the pleasure car bumper (which was never made to haul a trailer) with an insecure bolt that simply potted out. It was only a miracle that it did not cause serious or fatal accidents.

What excuse is there for laws or regulations governing automobiles, that permit such potential death-dealing contraptions on the highway? A traffic officer would immediately stop a driver without a license plate. Why should not laws be passed whereby a traffic officer would stop every car towing a trailer that did not have some form of identification attached showing that it complied with rigid regulations as to its safety, and arrest the driver?

This is merely one potential law to aid in automobile accident prevention, that could be as easily enforced as automobile licensing requirements.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON - The federal government in recent years had sought to follow the Biblical injunction to feed the hungry and clothe the naked. But it sometimes has to draw the line.

A letter came to the Forest Service the other day from a society with headquarters in New York, asking all possible information as to the planting and care of fig trees.

The request was turned over to the Bureau of Plant Industry, which replied that it wouldn't advise anyone to try raising fig trees and other tropical fruits in an area so far north.

FEDERAL Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald wrote a letter to H. E. Hoagland, member of the Federal Home Loan Board. A stenographic error caused the letter to be addressed to "Honorable H. E. Hoagland" and the recipient, who knows his phonetics, wrote back that "I am at a loss to understand what act or sets of mine have gained me the title you gave me in the enclosed letter."

Whereupon McDonald apologized in five carefully worded verses, of which a couple will give you the general idea: "Dear Sir: I have your letter, April the eighth just past; of his life on Texas streams and lakes. He knows fishing in the south like no other man knows it. His books are considered as text books on fishing in the south.

The noted angler says that anyone can catch fish with artificial bait if they only stop to consider the basic principles of what goes to make success in this sport. Most people think that if they have good tackle, they can catch fish, but that within itself will not get the job done, says Jack Lamb. They must know something of the habits of game fish, and where they stay during the different hours of the day.

Storms, wind, rain and all weather disturbances have a great effect upon the temperamental black bass. Likewise the moon, barometer, temperature, visibility and a host of other conditions must be taken into consideration.

AFRAID to LOVE

By MARION WHITE

JOAN opened her eyes in sudden fear. "Joan, darling . . . Joan!" Bob's voice! She turned quickly and saw him, seated beside her in her own room at Dorothy's.

CHAPTER XXXI "Joan, darling . . . Joan!" Bob's voice! She turned quickly and saw him, seated beside her in her own room at Dorothy's.

There were no words between them for several minutes. Finally she asked: "How did you find me, Bob?"

"I didn't find you, Joan," he replied, dropping his eyes with painful embarrassment. "I didn't find you, Dorothy did that. Oh, my dear, when I think of all we have to thank that girl for . . ."

"I know," Joan said. "I never knew a friend could be so true." "She walked up and down every street in Manhattan, Joan. She searched every furnished rooming house in the city. It was after 10 o'clock when she found you. She phoned me at the Inn, and I went over immediately . . . you had fallen across your bed in a dead faint of exhaustion. We brought you here where you've been resting since. Just now you were dreaming, living that all over again."

HER eyes filled with tears. "I'm sorry, Bob. I'll never forgive myself for running away. I was a coward. I've been a coward all along. But now—"

dear . . ." She sat down on the bed, and all the relief in her heart welled up within her and she cried with abandon. "I'm so happy, Joan," she sobbed. "So . . . happy we found you! Bob, will you let me go . . . downstairs? Kennedy w-wants . . . you. Right away."

Bob jumped up instantly, hope springing to his eyes. "I'd better see what he wants. He may have discovered something."

"Watch her, Dorothy," he suggested with a quick smile. "I hate to think of leaving her again."

"Don't cry, Dorothy," Joan begged, as he left the room. "I feel so ashamed now—"

"I want to cry," Dorothy insisted. "I wanted to cry all day yesterday and all last night, but I didn't. Now . . . now, I'm going to cry to my heart's content."

She stopped, however, in another minute or two. "There was a sudden rush of footsteps coming up the stairs, four steps at a time, and Bob burst into the room. 'They've got him!' he cried. 'They've got Norton!' 'Norton?' Joan echoed in bewilderment. 'They've got him?' Dorothy echoed in tremulous hope. 'The police picked him up this morning,' Bob told them, 'on a Spanish freighter bound for the Argentine. He was registered as Carlos Nogales, a ranch-owner. Kennedy got a confession—'

Bob looked after her fondly. "Kennedy would never have thought of Norton," he said, "if it hadn't been for Dorothy. Joan, if we live a thousand years, we can never repay her."

Joan smiled at him though her tears were wet. "She made every dream come true for me, Bob. I never knew I could be so happy as I am at this moment. To know you still loved me in spite of everything . . . and then, to find the proof, after 10 years, that clears my father's name! It's—it's more than I can stand, in one day."

BOB took her hand in his. "You couldn't stand anything else?" he asked, hesitatingly. "What else, dear?" He kissed her hand gently—her left hand, then lifted up the third finger.

"Joan, they tell me that it's never wise to postpone a wedding . . ."

"Joan's eyes lighted, and she sat up in bed with new vigor. 'We could still be married today,' she asked. 'If you feel strong enough. It's just a little after 10 o'clock. Dorothy's willing to have the ceremony here in the living room this afternoon, if you're willing.' 'Oh, Bob, it would make this the one perfect day of my life.' 'There's something I must tell you first—'

Joan smiled. "Have you a secret, too?" "You're a wealthy girl, Joan. One-third of Mr. Hendry's estate—and it is an exceptionally large one—goes to you." She stared at him, unbelieving. "What ever made him do that?" she asked. "I guess he loved you too, dear." He told her then of Mr. Hendry's special request concerning the little white house. "There's not much chance now," he added, "of it ever becoming a shrine of happiness . . ."

FOSSILS ENRICH TERTIARY DATA

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26 (AP)—Discovery by a wandering missionary of a rare fossil deposit in Shantung province in China has been revealed by Dr. Ralph Chaney, paleontologist of the Carnegie Institution and the University of California, who will study the fossil at the request of the Chinese government.

For more than 14 years samples of the deposit lay among the belongings of an obscure missionary worker. A party of Chinese geologists, when shown the "treasures," realized their significance and reported the discovery to the Chinese Geological Survey.

The specimens, which belong to the Tertiary Age of 40,000,000 years ago, are of scientific rarity, according to Dr. Chaney.

The Shantung discovery consists of fossil mammals and plants occurring together in the same formation, which is very unusual," he said. "They usually occur separately."

"The most significant thing so far," said Dr. Chaney, "is a fossil deer apparently related to a species which formerly inhabited the southeastern United States. Fossil plants occurring in the rock similar to those which grew in that region millions of years ago, also were found."

With a party of Chinese scientists, Dr. Chaney will go to the southern part of Shantung Province to study the lake deposits where a missionary picked up a strange looking "rock" nearly 15 years ago.

Scientists hope to learn from the new discovery whether conditions in North America paralleled those in Asia when the earth was in the "cooling off" stage. The similarity of plant and mammal life in the specimens, uncovered bears out this theory, Dr. Chaney said.

featured at the two periods of Camp Billy Gibbons this summer. Competent instructors have already been secured for these subjects as well as for the other camp projects, and will be ready to serve the large group of Scouts who will attend. We are anticipating the largest attendance in the history of the camp.

Mountain Lions
Camp Billy Gibbons is truly located in the hill country. Many Scouts see the first time wild turkey and deer while in camp. Last week a Mountain lion was killed in the county. It might not be too surprising to hear a Scout report during nature study hour at camp, that he had seen a mountain lion, while on a hike that day.

Dates of the camp are July 20 to 27—28 to August 4.

'Pupils Aren't Fireproof'

Mr. Fleming is an authority on this matter—formerly a clergyman, he happened to be present when the Collinswood school burned many years ago, and aided in the rescue. Thereafter he left the pulpit and gave his life to preaching the gospel of fire prevention. As a representative of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, he has inspected thousands of American schools, new and old, big and little—and he reports that two-thirds of them are fire traps. Every day, five school fires occur in this country—and only "dumb luck," to use Mr. Fleming's words, keeps them from becoming major tragedies.

Just how bad are our schools? They are unquestionably far worse than any parent imagines. Mr. Fleming has seen supposedly safe schools where the janitors thought fire extinguishers were insect sprays, and schools where students were notified ten minutes in advance of fire drills! He has gone through 40 schools in one city and found 200 inexcusable life hazards—such as the excessive storage of gasoline in the buildings, ineffective emergency doors, etc. As he says, "And after each new shock I thank God that we are so lucky."

Maybe the school your children attend is safe—and maybe it is not. And here is a matter where guesswork isn't enough—public opinion should demand that competent disinterested engineers make a thorough inspection of every school plant, and that their recommendations be followed. Pupils aren't fireproof!

Things One Remembers

There are many simple things that could be done to reduce automobile accidents.

Recently, I saw a small trailer with lumber in it tear loose from the pleasure car that was towing it. It dashed out into the oncoming traffic, then spun around and ran into the bank on the side of the road where it broke loose. It missed oncoming cars by a split second, and came just as near causing a wreck with the car that was following it.

The trailer had been fastened to the pleasure car bumper (which was never made to haul a trailer) with an insecure bolt that simply jotted out. It was only a miracle that it did not cause serious or fatal accidents. The owner of the trailer refastened it to the bumper with some baling wire and started out again.

What excuse is there for laws or regulations governing automobiles, that permit such potential death-dealing contraptions on the highway? A traffic officer would immediately stop a driver without a license plate. Why should not laws be passed whereby a traffic officer would stop every car towing a trailer that did not have some form of identification attached showing that it complied with rigid regulations as to its safety, and arrest the driver?

This is merely one potential law to aid in automobile accident prevention, that could be as easily enforced as automobile licensing requirements.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON - The federal government in recent years had sought to follow the Biblical injunction to feed the hungry and clothe the naked. But it sometimes has to draw the line.

A letter came to the Forest Service the other day from a society with headquarters in New York, asking all possible information as to the planting and care of fig trees.

Inquiry showed that the society was a nudist colony.

The request was turned over to the Bureau of Plant Industry, which replied that it wouldn't advise anyone to try raising fig trees and other tropical fruits in an area so far north.

An employee, who believes the incident should be noted in the Forest Service bulletin, has written it up with the caption "When a nudist camp writes in for information on raising fig trees, that's news."

FEDERAL Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald wrote a letter to H. E. Hoagland, member of the Federal Home Loan Board. A stenographic error caused the letter to be addressed to "Honorable H. E. Hoagland" and the recipient, who knows his phonetics, wrote back that "I am at a loss to understand what act or acts of mine have gained me the title you give me in the enclosed letter."

Whereupon McDonald apologized in five carefully worded lines, of which a couple will give the general idea.

"Dear Sir: I have your letter, of April the eighth just past;

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOAN BARRETT, heroine, secretary to John Hendry.
JOHN HENDRY, mining investment banker.
BOB ANDREWS, Hendry's junior partner and Joan's fiance.
WILLIE HENDRY, son of John Hendry's niece and Joan's rival in love.
PHILIP HENDRY, Bob's brother.
DOROTHY STARKE, Joan's childhood friend.
CHARLES NORTON, California mining promoter.

Yesterday, Bob is reunited with Joan. Police follow Dorothy's truck on Norton and find that he has shipped the city—long and baggage.

CHAPTER XXXI

JOAN opened her eyes in sudden fear.
"Joan, darling . . . Joan!"
Bob's voice! She turned quickly and saw him, seated beside her in her own room at Dorothy's.
"Bob!" she whispered, "Bob. . ."
There were tears in his eyes; he let them roll down his cheeks unashamed.

She sank back on the pillows wearily.
"You know about—about everything, Bob?" she asked quietly.
He reached over and stroked her forehead tenderly, brushing back the golden ringlets.
"There are no more secrets between us, dear," he whispered.
"I didn't want you ever to find out, Bob."
He bent down and kissed her.
"What would I have to live for—without you?" he asked.
There were no words between them for several minutes. Finally she asked: "How did you find me, Bob?"

"I didn't find you, Joan," he replied, dropping his eyes with painful embarrassment. "I didn't find you, Dorothy did that. Oh, my dear, when I think of all we have to thank that girl for . . ."
"I know," Joan said. "I never knew a friend could be so true."
She walked up and down every street in Manhattan, Joan. She searched every furnished rooming house in the city. It was after 10 o'clock when she found you. She phoned me at the Inn, and I went over immediately . . . you had fallen across your bed in a dead faint of exhaustion. We brought you here where you've been resting since. Just now you were dreaming, living that all over again."

HER eyes filled with tears.
"I'm sorry, Bob. I'll never forgive myself for running away. I was a coward. I've been a coward all along. But now—"
There was a light tap on the door, and Dorothy entered. Her eyes lighted as she saw Joan awake again.

"Joan!" she cried. "Oh, my poor dear . . ."

dear . . . She sat down on the bed, and all the relief in her heart welled up within her and she cried with abandon. "I'm so happy, Joan," she sobbed, "so . . . happy we found you! Bob, will you get me . . . downstairs? Kennedy wants . . . you. Right away."
Bob jumped up instantly, hope springing to his eyes. "I'd better see what he wants. He may have discovered something."

He bent down and kissed Joan. "Watch her, Dorothy," he suggested with a quick smile. "I hate to think of leaving her again."
"Don't cry, Dorothy," Joan begged, as he left the room. "I feel so ashamed now—"

"I want to cry," Dorothy insisted. "I wanted to cry all day yesterday and all last night, but I didn't. Now . . . now, I'm going to cry to my heart's content."
She stopped, however, in another minute or two.

THERE was a sudden rush of footsteps coming up the stairs, four steps at a time, and Bob burst into the room.
"They've got him!" he cried.
"They've got Norton!"
"Norton?" Joan echoed in bewilderment.
"They've got him?" Dorothy echoed in tremulous hope.
"The police picked him up this morning," Bob told them, "on a Spanish freighter bound for the Argentine. He was registered as Carlos Nogales, a ranch-owner. Kennedy got a confession—"

Joan regarded Bob with utter amazement.
"What did they arrest Mr. Norton for?" she asked stupidly.
"He killed Mr. Hendry!"
Joan gasped. "Bob! He couldn't have done it—"

"But he did. Kennedy got him dead to rights. A conductor on the 11:31 train from the city identified him. He had to confess."
"But he was Mr. Hendry's best friend . . ."
Bob nodded, and his eyes grew brighter. "Yes, he was his friend. A friend, who would knife a man in the back for $40,000 . . . Norton had another friend, too, Joan. His name was Jordan, and he was killed in San Francisco 10 years ago. An innocent man was hanged for it . . ."

Joan's eyes met his. "That was my father," she whispered.
"I know it, darling." He sat down beside her on the bed. "I know what you've been through. But you can be happy from now on in the memory of him."

Dorothy blew her nose with emphasis. "I'm going downstairs," she announced. "I'm going to kiss that man Kennedy before he gets too far . . ."

Bob looked after her fondly. "Kennedy would never have thought of Norton," he said, "if it hadn't been for Dorothy. Joan, if we live a thousand years, we can never repay her."

Joan smiled at him though her tears were wet. "She made every dream come true for me, Bob. I never knew I could be so happy as I am at this moment. To know you still loved me in spite of everything . . . and then, to find the proof, after 10 years, that clears my father's name! It's—it's more than I can stand, in one day."

BOB took her hand in his. "You couldn't stand anything else?" he asked, hesitatingly.
"What else, dear?"
He kissed her hand gently—her left hand, then lifted up the third finger.

"Joan, they tell me that it's never wise to postpone a wedding . . ."
"We could still be married today," she asked.
"If you feel strong enough. It's just a little after 10 o'clock. Dorothy's willing to have the ceremony here in the living room this afternoon, if you're willing."

"Oh, Bob, it would make this the one perfect day of my life."
"There's something I must tell you first—"
Joan smiled. "Have you a secret, too?"

"You're a wealthy girl, Joan. One-third of Mr. Hendry's estate—and it is an exceptionally large one—goes to you."
She stared at him, unbelieving. "What ever made him do that?" she asked.

"I guess he loved you too, dear." He told her then of Mr. Hendry's special request concerning the little white house. "There's not much chance now," he added, "of it ever becoming a shrine of happiness . . ."

Joan was thoughtful for a moment. Then she said: "Bob, do you suppose we could live there now—I mean until our own house on the hilltop is ready? Just you and I and old Abraham. . . Perhaps we could bring back the happiness, after a while."
Bob hugged her to him joyously. "Joan, my dearest girl! I prayed you might want to do that. We'll keep his shrine, Joan. We'll bring it greater happiness than it has ever known . . ."

A moment later, she suggested: "Don't you want to run along now and get your best suit pressed for an afternoon wedding?"

FOSSILS ENRICH TERTIARY DATA
 SAN FRANCISCO, May 26 (U.P.)—Discovery by a wandering missionary of a rare fossil deposit in Shantung province in China has been revealed by Dr. Ralph Chaney, paleontologist of the Carnegie Institution and the University of California who will study the fossil at the request of the Chinese government.
 For more than 14 years samples of the deposit lay among the belongings of an obscure mission worker. A party of Chinese geologists, when shown the "treasures," realized their significance and reported the discovery to the Chinese Geological Survey.
 The specimens, which belong to the Tertiary Age of 50,000,000 years ago, are of scientific rarity, according to Dr. Chaney.
 The Shantung discovery consists of fossil mammals and plants occurring together in the same formation, which is very unusual! he said. "They usually occur separately."
 "The most significant thing so far," said Dr. Chaney, "is a fossil deer apparently related to a species which formerly inhabited the southeastern United States. Fossil plants occurring in the rock similar to those which grew in that region millions of years ago, also were found."
 With a party of Chinese scientists, Dr. Chaney will go to the southern part of Shantung Province to study the lake deposits where a missionary picked up a strange looking "rock" nearly 15 years ago.
 Scientists hope to learn from the new discovery whether conditions in North America paralleled those in Asia when the earth was in the "cooling off" stage. The similarity of plant and mammal life in the specimens uncovered bears out this theory, Dr. Chaney said.

 Camp Billy Gibbons is truly located in the high country. Many Scout see it for the first time wild turkey and deer while in camp. Last week a Mountain lion was killed in the county. It might not be too surprising to hear a Scout report during nature study hour at camp that he had seen a mountain lion, while on a hike that day.
 Dates of the camp are July 29 to 27-28 to August 4.

CLINIC SET UP TO SAFEGUARD MARITAL BASE

By ROBERT LA BLONDE
United Press Staff Correspondent
DETROIT, May 26. (U.P.)—Prospective brides and grooms seeking information that will help solve marriage problems may turn to a clinic conducted by the Rev. Gilbert Appelhof, Jr., an Episcopalian minister.

Although his "clinic" will not be in full operation until next fall, the Rev. Appelhof already is counseling young couples and providing them with instruction preparatory to marriage.

Through a detailed questionnaire filled out by both parties, he is able to detect minor and sometimes major differences in a couple that would produce marriage failure if they were not corrected before the ceremony. The questionnaire is Appelhof's own handiwork, the result of several years' study on the subject of happy marriage.

"The major problem before the American people of today is laying the groundwork for a successful marriage," he said.

"Failure of marriage shows no discretion. It hits the well educated as well as the uncultured, the rich as well as the poor. But if we investigate the causes of unsuccessful marriage and remove them, the effect will disappear."

On the contrary that marriage needs a clinic just as much as health, the Rev. Appelhof, who is 38 years old and father of two children, decided upon an organized effort to provide instruction and advice to young people. As a foundation for his clinic he made a study of pre-marital conditions as well as causes for downfall after marriage. The results of his experience will be thrown into the hopper when his clinic opens.

The program of his clinic will be divided into three sections, lectures to the unmarried, lectures to the married, and lectures to

LOCAL OPTION WONT WORK IN RACING EVIL

AUSTIN, May 26. (U.P.)—Local option on horse racing with pari-mutuels was declared "out" by Governor Alfred today as he made a research of race history in Texas for his message to the special session of the legislature which he convened for tomorrow to repeal the pari-mutuel law.

"The evils accompanying racing cannot be wiped out by local option," Alfred said. "Bookies come to thrive after the return of race track betting. The local option plan was proposed and rejected in 1908, when race track betting was outlawed then."

Slayers Nabbed in Wild Auto Chase

AFTER an automobile dash that rivaled the melodrama of a typical motion picture bandit chase, two notorious gunmen were nabbed by Cass County, Nebraska, authorities as the climax of a nationwide man hunt. The arresting officers, Sheriff Homer Sylvester (left) and his brother, Deputy Cass Sylvester, of Plattsmouth, Nebr., attributed much of the success of the spectacular capture to their 1937 Ford V-8.

In Sheriff Sylvester's own words: "When my brother Cass wheeled my Ford V-8 out after those bandits that killed the G-man in Topeka, I knew we had them—because they didn't have a Ford V-8. They were hitting 60 or 65 when we picked them out by their Kansas license, but inside a mile and a half from a standing start we were right on their tail. Cass had the V-8 up to 85 right quick, while the other two guns and directed their fire at the V-8. You can't fool a V-8 when you're sure and fast—the only car for me. Expensive as it is, it couldn't do this V-8 of mine will do it. The $5 hp. Ford is a buy and the it's the best motor."

Pickets patrolled six plants of the Republic Steel Corporation here and a Massillon, Ohio, today after union workers voted a strike to protest alleged discrimination against members of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

The strike affected four Republic subsidiaries here employing 8,000 workers and two units at Massillon employing 5,000.

Two men were injured by flying glass when a stone was hurled through the windshield of an automobile in which they were trying to pass a picket line early today, police said.

OFFICERS OUT TO GET LOCAL GANG LEADER

LOGANSPORT, Ind., May 26. (U.P.)—Officers and volunteers, armed with shotguns, machine guns, radios and airplanes, patrolled highways of four states today to halt a gang whose leader boasted he would "out-Dillinger" John Dillinger.

Somewhere in Indiana back land, Alfred Brady, James Baiahoover and Clarence Shaffer were believed hiding with $2,500 they took at the Goodland, Ind. state bank yesterday. One of their guns put 51 slugs into a pursuing state police car, wounding State Policeman Paul Minneman critically and a deputy sheriff less seriously.

Indiana's 180 state police and 390 deputies assigned to the hunt were warned to "be sure you are armed."
