E. W. Freeze Talks On Repent and Obey

Subject of last night's service at the Church of Christ brought an old topic in a new way to the crowd that gathered to hear Evangelist E. W. Freeze of Abilene.

"Can a good man be saved outside the church?" was the question asked, and answered, Evangelist Freeze said: "No subject could be of more importance for except you repent ye shall all likewise perish." The question, is, what is repentance? Not mere conviction. One must be convicted, but repentance is not conviction. Not just being afraid to die. Many are that way who do not repent. Not just Godly sorrow, for Godly sorrow worketh repentance.

"Repentance is a change of the mind, or a determination to quit sinning and serve the Lord. Genuine repentance leads to obedience. One must repent before he obeys, but repentance does not do away with obedience."

CONFERENCES WITH UNIONS BEING HELD

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 11 (U.P.)—The federal government and three governors attempted today to hold in check the steel strike while unionists became increasingly bitter following the rout of their forces at Monroe.

The developments included: 1. Monroe, Michigan, where 300 special police smashed the picket line in a teargas battle was quiet. The threatened invasion of the city by thousands of CIO automobile workers averted by the plea of Auto Union President Homer Martin.

The Republic Steel plant in Monroe re-opened by workmen after yesterday's teargas battle claimed to be operating almost normally.

2. Governor Martin Davey of Ohio held the first joint conference since the strike began 16 days ago. Steel companies reiterated they would not sign the contract proposed by the striking CIO steel workers organizing committee.

3. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins sent Mediator James Dewey to Davey's conference.

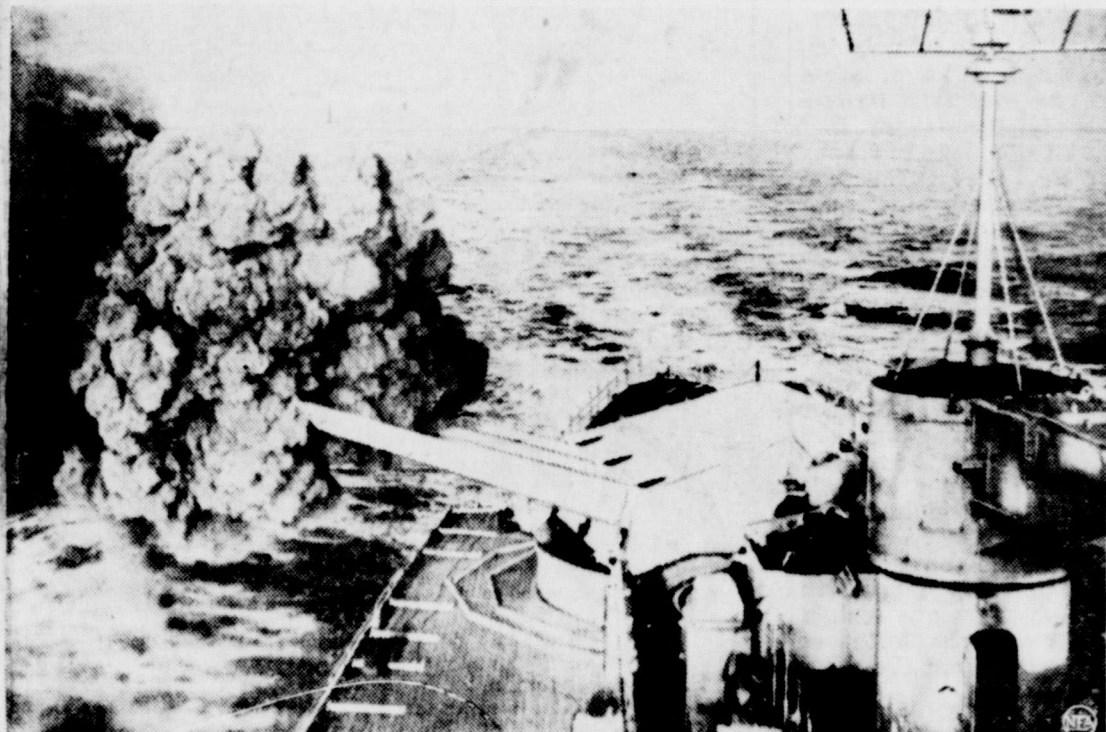

The strike situation elsewhere showed:

Washington: Senator Bridges of New Hampshire challenged the administration to meet the issue whether steel strikers have "censored" parcel post delivery of food to strike-closed Ohio steel plants.

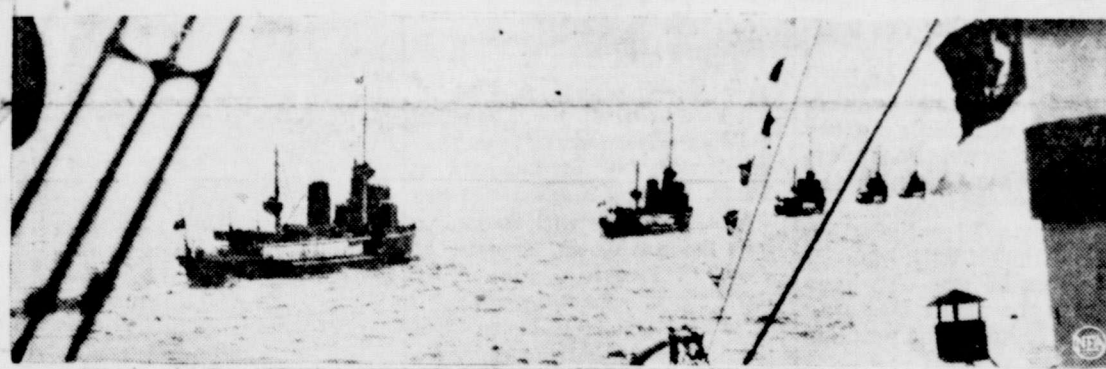

Johnston, Pa.: The Steel Workers Organizing Committee extended its strike to a fourth major producer, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Union officials said members would walk out of Bethlehem's Cambria plant employing 15,000 workers tonight.

Detroit: Strikes and parts shortages threw 43,450 men out of work in various General Motors plants.

Almeria Shelling Echoes Versailles Treaty Violation

In maneuvers, the huge Nazi naval guns above announced the rebirth of the German Navy and roared a defy of the Versailles treaty, which forbade their existence. At Almeria, Spain, devastating shells darted out of the smoke clouds that billow from the guns' muzzles and turned large areas of the unsuspecting city into a shambles in a tragic reprisal for the bombing of the battleship Deutschland. Below, through the shrouds of another vessel can be seen a section of a German parade of its naval might.—(Copyright, 1937, NEA Service, Inc. Printed in USA.)

Soft Ball Fun Game Played Here Tonight

The Cisco broken down business men will play soft ball tonight. The contest is to see who can make the most errors. Anybody making a good play will be taken from the game. Nick Miller and Butch Miller will pitch against each other, and the pitcher letting in the most runs will be the winner.

The rivalry is hot and heavy, and several fair-sized bets are being laid on the outcome. The two Millers declare themselves the Carl Hubbell and Dizzy Dean of soft ball, and say they are going to settle the issue tonight of which is the worst.

The bill prohibits dentists from advertising their skill or method of practice through newspapers, circulars, radio, motion pictures or other advertising agencies or devices.

Prominent newspapermen had appealed to Allred to veto the bill on the ground that it violated the freedom of press and speech.

AUSTIN, June 11 (U.P.)—Governor Allred today vetoed the soil conservation bill passed by the regular session of the 45th legislature.

The veto proclamation included a copy of a letter from U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace concluding that from a hurried analysis, there was considerable doubt if the Texas bill "provides an adequate basis for federal cooperation. Objections noted were the adoption of districts bounded by county lines rather than the watershed districts proposed in a model act and the right of any land owner to..."

Safety for Creeping Babies

There is one thing that more doctors should firmly impress on young parents. This is that as soon as an infant is old enough and strong enough to creep he must be protected from various dangers. A sturdy, lively baby that can get about on the floor should not be left alone in a baby carriage or high chair or lying on a table. Sure as shooting, he'll fall off sooner or later and sometimes such falls result in death or at least physical injuries. Also, a healthy, normal infant will investigate anything on the floor within his reach. He cannot discriminate between safe things and harmful things. A tragic incident in New York recently was the drowning of a creeping infant in a bowl of steaming soup. The mother had placed on the floor a crockery bowl about one foot in diameter and six inches deep. It was filled with hot soup which she wanted to cool. She left the room for a brief errand, but in that few minutes the creeping baby got to the bowl and fell in. It was dead before the mother got back to the room. Year after year there are tragic stories of infants scalded to death or drowned in just such unforeseen but inexcusable accidents. There is no need to go in a continual panic. Babies seem to have charmed lives or true guardian angels most of the time. They survive many tumbles and misadventures. But there are certain precautions which should never, under any circumstances be neglected if the baby is to be protected from the occasional strange accident.

Country Things Grayson Loves

David Grayson, writer of "Adventures in Contentment" and "The Countryman's Year," contributes this characteristic reply to the question: "What country things do you love most?"
"One thing I know of a certainty—I like to see things grow, especially things I have myself planted or bred or tended. I like to go out on an evening after the day's work is over and I am tired and walk about my garden and orchard or down into my field. I like to see the young corn pushing up through the brown earth and the grassland coming green with clover and redtop. I like to watch the young bees playing in front of the hives and the blossoms thick on the apple trees.
"Nothing, I think, gives a man more solid satisfaction than to climb into a fruit tree which he himself with his own hands set out, a frail sapling, a few years before. To have watched a tree grow through the years, to prune it, spray it, and finally to gather the fruit of it, is to know the peculiar joy of creation.
"Even the risks and the failures add zest to one's devotion. If things go wrong I can go to the rescue; I can feed or fertilize, I can cultivate or irrigate, I can dip or spray

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CORAL CRANDALL, heroine and senior at Elton College.
DAVID ARMSTRONG, Elton chemistry professor and Coral's husband.
DONNA ALLEN, Coral's sorority roommate.
HOYT MARQUIS, Coral's one-time fiance.

CHAPTER II
AS Coral walked across the campus from the Chemistry building to her sorority house, her mind was full of thoughts of David. She had been married two weeks. Sometimes it seemed a long time; at others, a matter of days. "I love him more every day," she thought to herself.

How splendid he had been when she told him about the boy from Wheatland, her home town . . . Hoyt Marquis, whom her parents had always assumed she would marry, to whom most of the students at Elton thought she was engaged. She had related the whole story to David, explaining why she had fallen in with the plans of both the Marquis family and her own, despite the fact that she did not love Hoyt. She had told him of the money her father owed Hoyt Marquis, Sr., who was Wheatland's richest banker. She had been afraid that David would be resentful, hurt that she had not confided in him before, or jealous of this other man. He had been perfect, though, thoroughly understanding, even laughing a little at her concern.

SHE turned up the walk leading to the dormitory and waved merrily to a pair of girls who were sitting precariously on the window sill of their room enjoying the spring sunshine. She envied them a little, for they were friends as she and Marge had been. Try as she might, it was impossible to establish the same happy, carefree relationship with Donna Allen, who thought everything at Elton a bore, who antagonized everyone who attempted to draw her into the inner circle of the sorority.

She let herself into the sorority house and stopped at the library table in the broad hall. She thumbed through the letters lying upon it. Yes, there was one for her with a Wheatland postmark. The typewritten address meant that it was from her father. She opened it eagerly, but as she read her expectant look compressed into a little frown. They were expecting her home for spring vacation in a week. Many of the other young people would be home and there would be a number of parties. Hoyt had called and asked when she was arriving, and had seemed very eager to see her.

She turned up the walk leading to the dormitory and waved merrily.

have written him before, but if she told him the truth, that she was married to David, then he'd be sure to tell her parents. If she told him that she was interested in someone else and wanted to make sure there was no definite understanding between them, he would promptly raise the roof, complain to her parents and his, and, perhaps, even insist that his father call in Mr. Crandall's loan. She shrugged. There was no help for it. Hoyt would have to be told when everyone else was, and not before. But it was annoying to have to consider him and what he would do. She had never loved him, he did not really love her, but because it was to their particular advantage they had been thrown together for so long that the companionship had become habitual.

HER brows still knitted in frowning concentration, Coral climbed the stairs to the second floor and opened the door of her room. Donna was sitting on the window seat, clad in over-elaborate green lounging pajamas, a box of chocolates at her elbow, a novel with a garishly printed dust jacket in her hand. As Coral entered, she looked up from her book. "Hi, there. It's late. I suppose you've been in the lab, nobly doing the work for tomorrow."

Coral nodded absently. She had not noticed the quizzical, slightly mocking tone of Donna's voice, or the curious, watchful look on her face. "What have you been doing?" she asked.

"Nothing. That is nothing constructive. I've been waiting here for the last two hours for you to come and translate 80 lines of Greek for me."
"I'll help you with it, of course. But I can't simply translate it for you and let you hand it in. I had the course last year and Dr. Shire would recognize it in a minute." Coral was looking over the volumes in the case. "Where's the book?"
Donna sat up on the edge of the window seat, her eyes snapping. "Coral, for heaven's sake don't be so . . . so prissy. You know quite well that I can't begin to translate that into any kind of sense. You've done it all once, it'll be no work for you. Besides, old 'Owl-Eyes' won't know the difference."
Coral laughed in spite of herself. "You shouldn't make fun of Professor Shire, Donna. At any rate, I'll come home single," she mocked. "You can do my physics problems while you're waiting to let me in." She chuckled again and reopened her novel, coldly ignoring the brimming tears in Coral's eyes.

for you. That's cheating. It wouldn't be right."

DONNA sprang to her feet. "Coral, you make me sick. All your talk about what's right and what isn't. You're a fine one to talk. I know a lot more about you than you think I do. You can't pull your sweet, innocent act with me any more."

"Donna, what are you talking about?" Coral paled a little. "You must be crazy!"
"Crazy, am I?" Donna fairly screamed. "I'm not so crazy as to hope with a cheap chemistry professor who makes nothing a year, MRS. DAVID ARMSTRONG!"
For a few moments there was a dead silence in the room. At last Coral spoke. "What do you mean?" Her voice was strained, held in control by terrific exertion of her will.
"You know what I mean," Donna said sulkily, frightened by Coral's voice, and her drawn, white face. "I couldn't find a handkerchief when I came in and I opened your drawer to borrow one of yours. The license was under the pile of handkerchiefs. Anyone might have found it."
"Donna, you're lying," said Coral. "That marriage license was locked in the drawer of my desk. The key was under the handkerchiefs."

"What difference does it make, as long as I found it?" Donna inquired insolently. "I'll be the campus sensation with this juicy little tid-bit of gossip to recount. You'll be expelled and your handsome David will lose his job."
Coral was aghast. "Donna, you're not going to tell anyone? You mustn't!"
Donna sat down on the window seat again. "Why not?"
"You know perfectly well why not. It must be kept a secret until June."

DONNA selected a chocolate from the box and munched it pensively. "I might be persuaded to keep your pretty little secret if you made it worth my while. If you translated my Greek, for instance, and seemed willing to do a few other odd jobs for me."
Without a word, Coral rummaged through the bookcase until she found the Greek textbook, and sat down at the desk, paper and pencil beside her. "There seems to be nothing else for me to do. I ought to have this finished before dinner." She worked silently for a while, then without looking up, said, "I hope you realize that this is a peculiarly low form of blackmail, Donna?"
Donna grinned. "Call it blackmail if it makes you feel any better, sweetheart. It's darned convenient for me. And by the way, I have a date with Lefty Welsh tonight and I don't intend to be in until long after I'm supposed to be. I'll expect you to go downstairs and open the door for me between half-past 3 and 4 o'clock."

An involuntary spasm of distaste crossed Coral's face, and it did not escape Donna. "At any rate, I'll come home single," she mocked. "You can do my physics problems while you're waiting to let me in." She chuckled again and reopened her novel, coldly ignoring the brimming tears in Coral's eyes.

Suggests Label Showing Taxes

NEW YORK—Labels on merchandise to show what part of the purchase price represents taxes has been suggested by Representative Fred A. Hartley, Jr., of New Jersey. This, he believes, will arouse public consciousness to the fact that the tax bill today is the largest bill paid by the American people. "Strange as it may seem," he said at a meeting here, "the great masses of our people show a marked difference toward the cost of government or how the bills are paid." The tax bill, he said, exceeds the amount spent for food or rent, is double the expenditure for clothing and six times as much as the light and power bill. When the costs of local and state governments are added "it becomes evident that you are paying nearly 25 cents of every dollar you earn for the cost of government," he added. The personal income tax, Mr. Hartley pointed out, provides less than one-third of the government's revenue and covers only 7 per cent of government spending.
