SAY CHINESE ARE LACKING IN SINCERITY

TOKYO, July 21 (AP)—The Japanese cabinet decided in an emergency session today that Japan is compelled to take adequate self defense measures in North China. The decision is based on the cabinet's belief that the Chinese apparently are lacking in sincerity in observing the truce agreement around Peiping. The war office asserted that the Japanese were compelled to return Chinese fire at Peiping.

Road Criticizer Got Broken Nose

PCOTTEVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Motorists driving through Pine Grove Borough, near here, perhaps had better keep quiet about the condition of the roads. One man drove up to a highway worker and began to criticize the job. The highway worker, a husky youth, didn't like the criticism. An argument ensued, and led to a fist fight. After the melee was over, the young laborer had a broken hand, but the motorist had a broken nose.

Twenty Boy Scouts left today for Camp Billy Gibbons, in charge of Thomas Wilson and Evald Horn. A big truck belonging to Reynolds Transfer Company took the boys and their luggage which included four tents, Ernest Hittson, Scoutmaster for Troop 101, will probably drop in on the boys later. Sickness kept some of the boys at home who had their hearts set on the outing and it is very regrettable that any Scout should miss this trip. The training and association for such events are of the best that could surround a boy. Those in the party were: Troop 101: Robert Christie, Junior Balderice, Billy Butts, Wright J. B. Duff, Billy Huffman, W. R. Miller, Jr., J. V. Heyser, Gail Jones

Jimmy Gorman, A. C. Cannon, Wilbur Ghorntley, Billy Collins. Troop 49: Roy Lee McAllister, Clifford Thomas, Billy Ray Swingle, Roy Lee Brock. Troop 4: Phil McCanlies, Robert Donovan, Lee Smith.

Mrs. W. E. Chaney of Eastland was a Cisco visitor Monday.

ROME, Italy, July 20 (AP)—Giulio Marconi, 63, whose genius gave wireless communication to the world, died today of heart disease. Radio, which he developed and helped to perfect, carried to the corners of the earth and to ships at sea the news of the death of one of the great men of this age. Because of him, continents were brought within seconds of one another and a man's voice circles the earth with the speed of light. Five hours after his death Premier Mussolini arrived alone at the Marconi palace, in the heart of Rome, signed the visitors' book and went to the death chamber where he prayed for 15 minutes. The Vatican transmitted the news to Pope Pius at his summer palace. His holiness was at mass. He immediately dedicated the services to the repose of Marconi's soul. Religious ceremonies will be held in Rome at 6 p. m. tomorrow, and a national funeral at Bologna later.

Economic Highlights of Congress

The present Congress has been in session more than six months. In that time, it has passed a large number of bills—more than 90 per cent of all measures are approved by a unanimous vote, as they are of only local importance and do not inspire arguments and debate.

The original Supreme Court bill is definitely dead. Administration floor leaders didn't even bring it to a vote—the mounting opposition to it in Democratic ranks plus the stinging criticism it received from the Senate Judiciary Committee, sealed its doom.

Business Week thinks that the PWA is dying, and recent events would indicate that is true. PWA activities have been greatly curtailed, and in a number of states no new projects are being undertaken.

There will be nothing new in taxation this session, with the possible exception of laws to plug up loopholes in existing tax legislation. Senator La Follette's proposal to widen the tax base (that is, reduce exemption as well as increase higher bracket rates) did not pass, but it received a surprisingly large vote.

It is doubtful if laws dealing with strikes will be passed. There seems to have been a change, according to most Washington observers, in the Administration's attitude toward labor and its leaders. They think the president is becoming less sympathetic with Mr. Lewis, that the CIO is gradually losing White House support, and that the Administration will take more of a middle ground.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The White House press conference today was an institution unique in the world. At least, no other foreign capital do correspondents stand up twice a week and fire questions at Mussolini, Hitler, Stalin, the King or Prime Minister of England or whoever else the top dog shot may be.

The new style press conference—its four years old now—is Roosevelt's own. Coolidge and Hoover used to have a system whereby you wrote your questions and slipped them to the secretary. The President picked out the ones he felt like answering and ignored the rest.

Sometimes Roosevelt says he doesn't want to or isn't ready to answer a question, that he doesn't know the answer, that he hasn't read the statement, report or newspaper story to which the questioner refers, that the question is an "if question," or that the question is best answered by another question which he thereupon propounds.

BUT most important questions get asked sooner or later—embarrassing or not—and so it was with the question whether he would accept a third term nomination if it were offered. Back in 1927 newsmen kept slipping written questions to Coolidge asking if he were a candidate for renomination. Coolidge ignored them consistently. Then one day the fellows ganged up and each individually wrote the same question and saw to it there wasn't another in the pile.

Coolidge turned them over, one after another, until he reached the end of them. And then he began a 15-minute rambling disquisition on the subject—unless this writer's memory fails—of telephonic rates in the District of Columbia. The correspondents were glad to get away from there when foreign capital do correspondents stand up twice a week and fire questions at Mussolini, Hitler, Stalin, the King or Prime Minister of England or whoever else the top dog shot may be.

dicating especially that agriculture is strongly against the Lewis movement, fearing that he may try to unionize farm hands and establish wage levels that the average farmer cannot meet.

Before Congress adjourns (best guesses place that date as Labor Day) there will be a good deal of verbal fireworks, but it is very doubtful if any major bill of a revolutionary nature, with the possible exception of the Court compromise, will pass.

Boy's Spanish War Met Its Waterloo

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y. (AP)—The Spanish Civil War was fought in Thrall Park here by boy armies with firecrackers for ammunition.

Before either faction could claim victory, however, a forced "armistice" was imposed by city police. The 12 warriors—six loyalists and six rebels—were taken before Police Chief Percival Bennett, who lectured them on the evils of warfare.

Jail Cat Disappears Instead of Pet Mouse

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP)—Trusty, the dark gray mouse that was mascot of the Kalamazoo county sheriff's force, has found its way from the old jail to the new one, but Jailor, the sandy-colored cat, is still missing.

For several months after the new jail was put into use, Trusty was missing, but he squeaked his "Hello" to one of the deputies the other night. Sheriff's officers are still wondering what became of Jailor.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, July 20 (AP)—It's a pretty dead profession now but at one time the boys who wrote the titles for the silent movies practiced a rather lively art.

There was a chance for real originality. There was one unnamed hero who wrote a 15-word prelude to a saga of dashing cowboys and treacherous Indians.

"Down in Texas, where it is 110 in the shade—and there ain't no shade," he wrote.

If that entrepreneur of phraseology were here today, he could see that his words were not so far from the truth—that it is 110 in the shade and there just isn't any shade—but it isn't the sun that sends the mercury soaring down here where the West supposedly begins—It's politics.

Politics have a way of cooling off after an election, then grow hotter and hotter until an explosive day in August every other year. Just a vicious cycle.

A full year lies between these days and the July of a campaign year, yet under the dome, there is no political shade.

Lieutenant Governor Walter Woodul blew cold on the rumor that he would be a candidate for the governor's chair in 1938.

His friends have been blowing hot, then blowing cold on the idea—a political phrase indicating indecision.

At the same time, however, the big Houston lawyer announced that "in line with my chosen profession, the law, I will announce for and be in the race for the office of attorney general."

And then, just to cinch things and not leave any minds in doubt, Woodul punctuated his statement with a climatic "This is definite."

Attorney General William McCraw is toeing the starting line in the race for the governorship but his entry papers in the hands of the judges haven't even been signed.

McCraw is holding back any announcement until he finds out what his friend Gov. James V. Alford is going to do. And Jimmy won't say.

"Oh, fellows, it's too early to discuss politics," he told newsmen early this week when they asked him if it were time to announce his candidacy for a third term. If such were going to be announced.

Meanwhile, McCraw continues to listen for the pop of the starting pistol. He's building a starting block of publicity to aid him in the get-a-way.

International or otherwise, this week his publicity burst into first class form.

"Novelty of the method used by Attorney General William McCraw in attempting to win for Texas inheritance taxes of some $5,000,000 ($1 million from the estate of the late Col. E. H. Green today had won the attention of eastern legal academicians," a press release revealed early this week.

It goes on to say that "copies were received here of a comprehensive discussion of the case—termed 'a method hitherto untried'—by the Yale Law Journal, one of the nation's outstanding law magazines devoted to reviews of novel and abstract points of law."

A very nice feather for the brilliant young lawyer's cap.

Maybe it is such as this that furnishes the fuel that lights the fire sending the political thermometer soaring.

CAST OF CHARACTERS JOY—Heroine, hostess in smart Maine resort. BOBBER—Joy's fiance; rising young designer. NERVO—Joy's rival in love. DIK—Wealthy young playboy, Roger's rival in love.

Yesterday, Joy learns that a serious illness appears to be happening at the summer resort in Maine. This character "Jigger" for instance, proves mysterious.

CHAPTER V WEDNESDAY Wonder if there's anything to what Peter told me last night when I tucked him into bed. Thought at the time he was just imagining things. Told him he mustn't make up stories.

"They're not stories, Joy," he insisted, sitting up in bed. "I really did find a haunted house in the woods today."

"Nonsense, Peter. There aren't any haunted houses nowadays," I declared.

"Well, there's one, the one I found today. It's way off in the woods. I walked all round it first, for I didn't see anyone around. Then I climbed up on some rocks and looked in at the windows."

"Why, Peter, that wasn't a very nice thing to do. . . what would the people who live in it think?" "I didn't see anybody. . . least not at first. . . only dishes on the table and guns."

"Now, Peter, you're making up a fairy story. You're too big for that sort of thing. Better go to sleep," I said, and I started towards the door.

"Wait, wait, there was a man," Peter begged, and a dog. I must tell you about that first. Somebody opened the door, and a great big hound dog came lickity split after me. I looked back, and the fat ugly man cried, 'Hey, Jigger, call your dog. If Nero bites that kid—'

"Oh, Peter, you must be careful. Sometimes strange dogs don't like little boys."

"HE liked me all right. I told him I wasn't afraid. I patted his dog. Then the one they called Jigger—he had queer dark eyes—said 'Live around here, sonny?' 'Sure,' I answered, 'down at the teahouse.' Then better get home to your folks.' But I told him I'd like to come and play with Nero some other day."

"You must never go and play with anybody unless it's with someone we know. If anything happened I wouldn't know where to find you." I said, started at hearing the name of Jigger.

"Well, I guess I don't get a chance to play with Nero. The fat little man sounded pretty mad when he said, 'Nothing doing, kid, you stay where you belong.' "That's just what I say. You stay at home and maybe Cal will find you some nice playmate." "I'm going to get a dog. The Jigger fellow came after me and told me if I'd stay at home he'd get me a nice pup all for myself." "Well, well, well, I'll have to see about that," I said, and switching off the light, I left the room.

Now, as I sit at my desk, I'm beginning to wonder if there is something queer going on in the woods. Surely if Peter was making up that story he'd never have used the name of Jigger. . . I wonder if that's the same man who gave me such a fright that night. Must sound out Cal again. Maybe he'll tell me what he knows.

THAT reminds me, he does like to bring us news. When he appeared this morning (he drives up in a car of uncertain age) he said, "Well, girls, Miss Pegler's opened her cottage again, and, by gosh, she's brought a handsome young man with her." "Who is he?" Tess demanded. She's always interested in new young men, likes to measure them against her devoted Jimmy to see if she's got the best marriage mart has to offer her.

"The gardener says he's her nephew. . . ain't been here since he was a kid. . . been at college. . . abroad. . . and reckon he's old enough to have had a job too." "Don't believe he needs a job, Cal," Tess declared. "Miss Pegler's terribly rich."

"Every man should have a job. . . this chap too. . . even if he's expecting to get her money when she goes. You bet you'd never find me waiting for dead men's shoes, or women's either. . . specially women's. You can't tell what they'll do. . . leave all their fortune to the heathen or marry some old flame."

"Gee, Cal, you're encouraging." Tess cried. "Guess I'll have to bring him around pronto, and if he's to be here all summer. . . You keep your hands off him." Big Kate said. Guess there's no love lost between the head waitress and the cook.

Cal's found a playmate for Peter. His name's Tad Coyne. . . his father's looking after the landscaping of a resort known as Serene Shores.

Got a sidelight from Big Kate on Peter's haunted house. . . says it used to be a bootleggers' hang-out in prohibition days, but hints that Cal could tell me something more about it if he cured to. So Peter's story was no make-believe. Wish I'd more time to be a Sherlock Holmes. Thought it queer when Cal said earlier in the day: "Peter's safer along the shore than in the woods."

VET it was only yesterday that he informed me there were no poisonous snakes in the state, which was quite a relief for I must confess I'm not on friendly terms with rattlers and puff adders! Can't agree with the old fellow. I'd advocate the woods for Peter any time, for the boats are anchored along the shore and how my small brother loves them!

When Tad and he appeared at the teahouse this afternoon just when I'd settled down to read (I get an hour off about 4 unless we're swamped with customers) they insisted I go for a walk with them, so we headed for the woods.

"Let's take this path," Peter said. "Cal told me there is an old cabin which the men used when they were logging, and maybe Tad and I could make a fortress out of it."

"Well, if it's not too far away that may be a jolly playhouse." My thoughts turned to rainy days and Mrs. Fenwick's dislike of having small boys around, so we walked gaily along.

"Gee," cried Peter, stopping beside a tree which had a fresh gash in its bark, then glancing at the grass which was laid flat, "I bet there's been a truck in here."

"Nonsense," I cried. "I don't believe this road goes anywhere. It's little more than a path."

"But look, Sis, some heavy thing must have done this," and he pointed to a rut where the dark soil showed.

"Oh, perhaps some picnickers tried to get through, but come on, and let's find that camp for I'll have to get back to the teahouse before long."

Suddenly the boys stopped. . . Peter held up a warning hand. . . then, still peering through the dark branches of a hemlock tree, said:

"We're close to the haunted house. . . we can't go any farther. . . if Jigger sees me, he won't give me the puppy," and, turning around, the boys headed for their fortress.

I looked in the direction Peter had looked. . . saw the shabby farmhouse. . . the door stood ajar. . . it looked deserted, but a heavy rhythmic drone filled the air. That was no country sound. Where had I heard it before?

LAGUNA HOTEL THURSDAY, JULY 22 FROM 4 TO 7 P. M.

BLAME PLACED ON PUBLIC FOR FOREST FIRES

WASHINGTON, July 20 (U.P.)—F. A. Silcox, chief of the U. S. Forest Service, has appealed to vacationists to be more careful of fires they build in the nation's forests.

Ninety per cent of all forest fires are man-caused, Silcox said. The nation suffers an annual billion dollar loss from forest fires which sweep over 40,000,000 acres.

Silcox praised a painting by James Montgomery Flagg showing Uncle Sam in the uniform of a Forest Ranger pointing toward a burning forest and the words "Your Forest—Your Fault—Your Loss."

The painting, officially accepted by President Roosevelt, will be used extensively by the Forest Service in fire prevention work. Through the aid of co-operating agencies, poster copies of the painting are to be distributed throughout the country.

"Human Element Stressed"

"Mr. Flagg has gone straight to the essential point in the problem of fire control—the human element," Silcox said. "His title tells the whole story in rapid-fire style."

"America's forests are literally 'Your Forests.' Forests, no matter where they are, under private, state or federal ownership, influence the daily lives of millions of people directly dependent for a livelihood on forest products and additional millions who use the forests for hunting, fishing, camping and other forms of recreation.

"Green forests protect watersheds and exert a powerful control on the sources of floods."

Blame Fairly Placed

"The second part of Flagg's title—'Your Fault'—means just this: 90 per cent of all the forest fires in the nation are man-caused. Because they are caused by man, they are preventable.

"Due to the close interrelationship between the forests and our everyday life, the phrase 'Your Loss' becomes equally true. It may reasonably be said that when a forest burns, everybody loses.

"Flagg has made a valuable contribution in the fight against forest fires which burn annually over an area almost as large as the entire state of Washington," Silcox said.

Jaycees Trim Nance In Hard-Fought Game

The highly improved Nance and Jaycees softball teams hooked up in a real game last night on the local softball field with Jaycees coming out the winner by a score of 8 to 11. The score was tied 3 to 3 for the first five innings but the Jaycees sluggers started connecting and drove in enough runs to get a nice lead.

Carter Belew for the Jaycees had a big night getting four hits out of four times to bat two of the hits being triples. Bell led the Nance attack getting two hits out of three times at bat. The withdrawal of the Leach team just about evened all the teams in the league and assures the fans of a good ball game every night.

THERE ARE MORE good roll-your-owners in this town than you can shake a stick at. They roll 'em fast, firm, and handsome. But they don't take all the credit for themselves. They praise Prince Albert's "crimp cut" for easy, neat rolling. Lays right—doesn't spill out. Draws right. And that P. A. "no-bite" process routs harshness—lets the rich taste come through. (P. A. means new joy in pipes too!)

JUST THE IDEA of a Prince Albert "makin's" cigarette gets Harold Steed (above) feelin' good. He's frank to say: "I'm thankful for Prince Albert. It's got what I want in a 'makin's' tobacco—real body and taste with mellow mildness."

Grover Adams (extreme right) checks: "For fifteen years," says he, "P. A. has given me real smoking joy—rich taste without 'bite'!"

Children Eat Best Selecting Own Food

AMES, Ia., July 20 (U.P.)—Mrs. Mary Ella Snyder, a graduate student at Iowa State College, wondered if children, given the privilege would select proper foods found in an approved dietary. So she began an experiment with her three children.

In her experiments, Mrs. Snyder attempted to compare the advantages of what she termed the "free choice method" with the conventional method used by most mothers in presenting their children food they believed most nourishing.

For laboratory subjects she chose her three children, 9-year-old Edward, Ralph, 7, and Mary, 5.

At each meal she placed before the children 13 dishes of simple foods such as eggs, meat, potatoes, apricots, apples, and a pitcher of milk. No elaborate foods were served and each child was permitted to eat as much of any one food as he wished. She repeated the experiment at each meal for 20 days.

Mrs. Snyder discovered that all of her children preferred fruits even to the exclusion of milk and cereals. The diets of all three were adequate except in the case of Edward. During the "free choice" period he fell slightly below his calcium and protein standard.

On certain days Edward would eat as many as 24 oranges. Mrs. Snyder concluded that the conventional type of feeding was best for him.

Ralph increased his total calories almost 20 per cent during the research period and also improved his protein and iron content. His mother decided that the "free choice" method was advantageous in his case.

For Mary, a pre-school child with no well established food dislikes, the novel plan offered no particular advantages. Unlike her two brothers, Mary selected a wide variety of foods which met present diet requirements.
