FUTURE COURT ACTION RESTS ON CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, July 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt was represented in authoritative quarters today as believing that despite the death of his original court plan, he has made progress in his campaign to liberalize the judiciary.

This statement came as leaders of the fight against the original court plan prepared to draft a bill to alter lower court procedure without supreme court changes. One of these leaders, Senator Edward Burke of Nebraska, conferred at the White House today with Mr. Roosevelt. The appointment was made at the instance of Vice-President Garner, who has assumed the task of conciliating conflicting views on the court bill. The lower court procedural bill will be drafted by a sub-committee of eight Senate Judiciary Committee members, headed by Senator Pat McCharran of Nevada.

Other gains the President was said to see in the court fight were that the country has become "court minded" and has learned to feel that the constitution was not intended to block social and economic reform.

The President's attitude, it was said, could be summed up "we are getting somewhere, but we have a long way to go." The President was said to feel that he has recommended a legislative program to congress which he believes essential to the country's future, and that the question of action rests directly upon congress. The cornerstones of this program are: minimum wages and maximum hours; federal aid legislation; low-cost housing and government reorganization.

Davis was pointed out as "brains of the racket."

County Agent Elmo V. Cook was in Cisco today negotiating with Jonah Donovan concerning the running of some tank lines. While here, Mr. Cook mentioned the farmers trip he is sponsoring for A & M at College Station for August 16, 17, 18, and 19. He expects to take a bus load of about 20 farmers to the course and camp and arrangements have already been made he said, for lights, water, and wood. The course is divided so that farmers may get all courses that might interest them without conflict of schedule, he stated. The trip will cost about $10 each, Mr. Cook said. If agreeable with the group a side trip will be taken on Friday to Galveston returning Saturday, August 21. Those desiring to take the trip to A & M should communicate with Mr. Cook at once.

The Mexican father is 22.

Catalina Gets New Glass Bottom Craft

AVALON, Santa Catalina Island, Cal. (AP)—Forty-two years of progress in the building of glass-bottomed boats for the marine gardens off Santa Catalina island are represented in the new Torqua, a stream-lined craft resembling a speedy cabin cruiser.

Instead of the familiar side-paddle glass-bottom boat, the Torqua is propelled by twin screw motors of 550 horsepower capable of 19 knots. The ship carries 85 passengers around its "sea windows." The new craft is constructed with 240 cubic feet of cork to make it un-sinkable.

Perhaps the first glass-bottom boat used to inspect the famous submarine gardens was a small tin boat in 1895. It was propelled from the stern with bicycle pedals by a man seated astride an elevated bicycle seat.

As the beauty of the underwater plants became heralded, more visitors required the building of a larger boat. It was built in the form of a catamaran, with twin hulls or two half boats put together with a glass welt between and the top canopied with black cloth and dark curtains on the side. This craft was propelled by oars.

Next came the glass-bottom side-wheel power boats of which three are still operated at the island the Cleopatra, the Princess and the Phoenix, the latter built recently. The addition of the Torqua to the fleet will permit it to be used both for a glass bottom boat and for a fast excursion cruiser.

VOICE AIDS IN SOLVING BANK VAULT ROBBERY

PALO PINTO, July 23 (AP)—A voice that a bank cashier heard in the dark aided in the conviction today of Jack Rayburn, Jack Allen, 28, of Dallas, in the $682,000 robbery of the Mingo bank on October 28, 1932.

Rayburn was sentenced to five years imprisonment. He was arrested in Houston three weeks ago. Walter Carraway, cashier, now of Strawn, who was bound by the robber band, then forced to open the bank vault, said the voice he heard was that of Rayburn.

When investigators went to the home, they found the bodies of her four children. In the downstairs bedroom were Denny, 10, and Phoebe, 2. The bodies of Jackie, 5, and Rose, Marie, 8 were found in their beds upstairs.

Denny's nostrils had been taped with adhesives. Nostrils of the others had been plugged with cotton. Each had been stabbed twice over the heart apparently with an icepick. A doctor had been treating Mrs. Walkup for an intestinal ailment. One note addressed to her husband, James Walkup, 35, read: "Jim, I'm a failure at disciplining the children, and this is the best way out."

Hijacking the Consumer

President Roosevelt deserves commendation for side-tracking the Miller-Tydings bill, which would have made price maintenance agreements binding in interstate commerce...

Instances of what legalized price fixing does to the consumer's pocketbook are on record. For example, the head of one of the nation's leading department stores says that since the passage of a price-fixing law in his state, he has been forced to increase the retail price of 1,497 trade-marked items an average of 21 per cent.

Legalized price fixing is just one of the several kinds of legislation now in the limelight which directly penalize the consumer. Laws which unfairly restrict certain kinds of merchandisers are equally costly.

President Roosevelt's disapproval of the Miller-Tydings bill has temporarily eliminated the threat of national price-fixing legislation. States should follow that example, and refuse to enact any law which interferes with the healthful processes of honest competition in manufacturing and retailing.

Double Crossing the Consumer

One chain system alone will be forced to pay in the neighborhood of $60,000 annually in additional taxes (special class taxes) to the state of Louisiana as a result of the chain store tax recently established in that state.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The names of various tax evaders and avoiders have been paraded by the Treasury Department before the joint congressional committee, and it now remains for Congress to plug up some loopholes in order to make the job of some 45,000 private tax lawyers that arduous.

But it would be a mistake to say that the Treasury had not lost a few tail feathers in the process. It ought to be said for the Treasury that its primary motive in putting on this show was to rouse Congress to the point of some remedial legislation, thereby increasing revenues.

A CERTAIN amount of odor has been stirred up by Congressman Hamilton Fish's charges that President Roosevelt himself has been guilty of tax avoidance or evasion. There would be more general interest in this, however, if the charges came from anyone but Ham Fish.

Somehow between the Treasury and Department of Justice stands responsibility for the $76,000 tax suit against Mayor Daniel Shields of Johnstown, Pa., who has led the anti-union movement in the steel strike there.

Shields was convicted, retried, reconvicted and sentenced after a prohibition raid on a Johnstown brewery. Shields finally was pardoned by Roosevelt on recommendation of Senator Guffey.

QUEERER still was the fact that the Treasury, long acquainted with the personal holding company method of tax avoidance, was now foaming at the mouth again. The next step will be a class tax for "organized" independents. Carefully compiled statistics based on an investigation by a large insurance company show conclusively that the $18-a-week laborer or clerk, who owns no taxable real or personal property, already pays on the average of $116 a year in hidden taxes.

Conservationists Get Hands-Off Policy

SUPERIOR, Wis. (AP)—A hands-off policy has been voted by the Douglas County Fish and Game League in its relations to the Wisconsin state conservation department.

In voting to let the department follow its own course, the league said "many of us, with the best intentions but knowing little about the actual conditions of conservation, have a tendency to greatly handicap and burden not only the legislature but the conservation department as well.

The hands-off move was made to allow the department to devote its entire time during the coming years to actual conservation work without the drain on its men caused by hearings and protests and recommendation from amateur conservationists.

CAST OF CHARACTERS JOY—Heroine, hostess in smart Maine resort. ROGER—Joy's fiancee, rising young designer. ANGELA—Joy's rival in love. DICK—Wealthy young playboy, Roger's rival in love.

Yesterday, Dick proposes to Joy. Then she learns through Peter that some mysterious relationship exists between Jigger and Dick.

CHAPTER VIII

TUESDAY: Days fly like the wind here... too busy to make a note of all the thrilling things that are happening at The Golden Anchor and in its environs.

For a moment my heart rebelled, then as though the future spread out before me and I saw Roger going farther and farther away from me, I said:

"Guess you're right, Dick, about the money. It's terribly necessary."

"Well, how about helping me spend mine?"

"Of course it's not, darling, for I'm wild about you... there isn't a thing I won't do for you, if you'll only promise to marry me."

"I know I should have said, 'No!' for I don't love Dick, but even as I said, 'Yes,' I felt this might truly be my answer if I saw an announcement of Roger's wedding to Angela. So now I'm engaged... Dick wants me to marry him right away... tells me we'll start at once on a year's honeymoon around the world... I told him I'd have to stay here till September. 'If that's all you're worrying about, I'll fix that,' he declared...

engagement to Roger will be announced. "Is that so?" I said, rather fatuously. "Wonder if we'll get invitations to the wedding?" I know it sounded silly, but I did not want Dick to know how desperately I felt. He twitted me more than once about Roger being his rival.

"EVERYONE knows it's Angela's money that's the drawing card there," he said in a smug tone. "He's made up his mind to get ahead and I guess he realizes you can't go far in New York—or anywhere else for that matter—unless you've lots of cash behind you. Isn't that so?"

"Well, there's one thing that's always looked kind of queer to me—he moved all his stuff in the middle of the night!"

"He did?"

"Yes, the folks that live about a quarter of a mile down the road from the trail that leads up to his place told me. Old John was sick, and his wife was up looking after him... went to the window after she gave him his heart medicine... saw a big truck parked near the bend... heard swearing and arguing... then saw the truck turn into the old road... ain't much more than a path nowadays."

"Good gracious, Cal, I think we'd better call it the Mystery House. Aren't there any policemen around here?"

"Yes, we've a constable in the village, but he's mighty busy looking after the traffic when the summer folks are around... besides, he always says he ain't going poking his head into places where he's not wanted so long as folks mind their own affairs."

Tad declares you can see for miles from their tower... can even see the teahouse. When I spoke to Cal about Jigger, he said he'd done some work for the man, when he first came up here... tidied up the garden or rather cleared away some of the brush that was growing right near the door... he'd promised him some more work, but when Cal asked him about it one day when he met him in the village he pretended he'd never seen him before, informed him he didn't want fellows like him prowling around his place.

"Yes, that's what he said, Miss Joy, and I can't understand it, unless there's something not just straight going on up at the old farmhouse."

"Do you think there is, Cal? Did you ever see anything when you worked up there that was a bit off?"

"Well, there's one thing that's always looked kind of queer to me—he moved all his stuff in the middle of the night!"

"He did?"

"Yes, the folks that live about a quarter of a mile down the road from the trail that leads up to his place told me. Old John was sick, and his wife was up looking after him... went to the window after she gave him his heart medicine... saw a big truck parked near the bend... heard swearing and arguing... then saw the truck turn into the old road... ain't much more than a path nowadays."

"Don't know about that. That old woman I spoke about was gathering kindling in the woods one day... told me she saw new tracks on the old road... says cars often turn in there, but always at night!"

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By WALTER CRONKITE United Press Staff Correspondent AUSTIN, July 23 (AP)—That peculiar quirk in the law concerning the prohibition situation of Houston Heights has again begun to tickle capital city barristers.

Notice of the situation came about when the Supreme Court of Texas decided to grant a writ of error on a Galveston court of civil appeals ruling.

Back in 1912 Houston was far from the sprawling metropolis that is now the largest city in the largest state. Already, though, symptoms of greatness were beginning to pop out like pimples on an adolescent.

Such a pimple—not at all unsightly but nonetheless evident—was Houston Heights. The Heights represented an obstreperous child itself, and for a time threatened to be a husky rival to Due-To-Be-Big-Houston.

The meeting and merger was inevitable. In 1912, however, six years before the merger came about, citizens of Houston Heights voted a prohibition ticket and a local option election revealed the town very dry indeed.

Big Houston, however, felt no qualms about allowing a few bars to dot its business area so long as the boys kept the choruses low. When the absorption of the Heights by Houston finally came, Houston was still wet, the Heights still dry. Not much later Congressman Volstead evolved a plan that put into effect the national prohibition act. Houston, following the Heights by nearly a decade, became dry.

Little more than a dozen years later prohibition was gone and a local option election restored Houston to its classification. Things ran smoothly for a while. Taverns and restaurants sold beer in the Heights and package stores sold liquor just as was done in other sections of Houston.

But a noisy crowd in a Heights tavern one night caused an objecting citizen to go to City Hall and legal authorities to see if there wasn't something that could be done about the situation.

An investigation revealed: The dry election in Houston Heights in 1912 had never been superseded by a wet election. With its incorporation with Houston, the Heights lost its entity as a municipality and could not legally hold another election.

Therefore, a conclusion was reached that Houston Heights must forever remain as dry as the proverbial bone while the rest of Houston legally drinks its fill.

The conclusion, though, is a moot question. In fact it is what will be ruled on by the Supreme Court. The court of civil appeals at Galveston refused to uphold the state's contention that Heights is dry. That court said the 1912 election wiped out the boundaries of Houston Heights and with them the dry election.

A definite date for hearing the case in the Supreme Court has yet to be set.

Everett L. Looney will not run for governor of Texas next year—he admitted it himself.

Looney is an Austin lawyer and a good one. He has defended organized labor upon occasion without being unjust and creating enmity among capital. Among his other qualities, Looney is a keen wit.

Last week Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul issued a statement to the press that despite the fact there had been rumors to the effect that he would run for Governor and no matter what happened during the next year, he most emphatically was not going to be a candidate for the Governorship but would run for the attorney-generalship. This was more or less generally conceded. This week Looney issued a statement that ran almost parallel to Woodul's and said: "I too, wish to make emphatic denial that I am a candidate for governor. The competition in that race is too tough. "My heart is set, as it has been for some time, upon another great office. Regardless of what may be said to the contrary or what might happen between now and the time when the sap begins to rise, I will not be a candidate in 1938 for any office except attorney general. "This is final."

Truck Made Circles In Roadway Test

LONDON (U.P.)—A driverless lorry which runs for 16 hours a day at 40 m. p. h., is showing British government scientists how to build safe roadways. At the laboratory of the Road Research Board, a 12-ton lorry has been fitted up as a practical test bench for new road surfaces. Driven electrically round a circular 345-foot track, it tries to wear out road surfaces. In three years' work the board has been able to help engineers to such an extent that "hit and miss" ideas of road-building are being killed by the scientific facts that can now be supplied. Road failures—quite common in England—are due largely to the tremendously heavy loads roads are called upon to carry, with the result that the foundations give away. "This," the Board's annual report says, "is not surprising when the evolution of many of the roads in this country is considered. They started first as cart-tracks, were converted to water-bound macadam and then treated with repeated surface dressings of tar or bitumen or covered with tar macadam or concrete." A light-colored road which does not become slippery and has a continuity of surface and no bumps is the ideal they are seeking. The difficulty is to get all the factors of the ideal down to an economic basis.

FARM WOODLOTS PROTECTED ST. PAUL (U.P.)—Farm woodlots are getting constantly accelerated attention from soil conservationists in Minnesota, with the result that 16,000 acres have recently been fenced to keep out destructive cattle.

"LITTLE SKITS"—What CORNELIA SKINNER calls her comic monologues which she will present to guests appearing at the Zella Summer network, Sunday, July 13, at 7:30 p.m. New York. Here she is shown at a broadcast from the Rockefeller Center gardens checking their Guen curvex time with aulp time, apparently with satisfactory results.

"SAFARI TRUCK"—These microbe hunters of the African frontier are now deep in the jungle, making paterfamilial blood tests among native tribes to establish the truth about man's earliest history. Dr. Elsdon Lew (left) and J. de Bruine are shown here starting out on a 6-months expedition from the South African Institute for Medical Research with their Plymouth "safari truck"—better known as the Westchester model, or station wagon.
