The New Railway Retirement Act

"Final passage of the Railway Retirement Act writes finis to another chapter in the outstanding record of organized labor in the American railway industry.

"The new retirement act is an effective compromise between differences of opinion among various groups. On the whole it seems to have the approval of every level of the railroad industry. It appears to be a fair reward all around for intelligent and tolerant dealings between all concerned."

The act constitutes the most comprehensive plan in existence in any industry for the retirement of employees because of age or disability. It affects 1,500,000 workers, and was evolved by joint negotiations between representatives of railway managements and the 21 standard railroad unions.

Under the terms of the act, any employe of a railroad is eligible to retire at the age of 55, or at 60 if he has completed 30 years of service. Employees may retire at any age after 30 years of service because of mental or physical disability. The act is financed by taxes on both employes and employers. Amount of the retirement pay is dependent upon years of service and compensation received. Benefits are extremely liberal.

The act is important in that it marks a milestone in assuring future security to the workers of our largest single industry. It is equally important in that it represents an amicable and fair settlement of differences between social minded management and reputable, long-established unions. These unions didn't resort to violence and disorder to attain their ends—they sat down with the employers, and discussed and solved their problems. The result is that railroad labor—always highly paid—can look forward with equanimity to the future. The act is a towering monument to wise industrial relations, and sincere, honest dealings on the part of all concerned.

Capital for the Relaxing Years

Life insurance business is of greatest service, not to the beneficiaries of dead policyholders, but "to those who live to enjoy the fruits of their foresight in preparing for the proverbial 'rainy day'."

Last year, the companies disbursed about $2,400,000,000. Close to two thirds of that, $1,460,000,000, went to living policyholders. The remainder, $940,000,000, went to beneficiaries.

Here is the best "sales talk" life insurance can have. The time is long past when we purchased insurance solely as a means of protecting dependents. We still do that, and in addition we purchase it for ourselves as well—with it we attain planned, earned old-age security. It provides the capital for the relaxing years, when the working years are over.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Now that the court plan is no longer a bitter partisan issue, the active Washingtonian may be permitted to speak his piece about "the pests of the summer heat to members of Congress." The weather has been used as a large argument in favor of prompt adjournment.

There are 625,000 residents here in addition to the 531 members of Congress. The natives have no vote and all they do is beef. Most of them regard the Capitol Hill gentry as members of the elect who are paid $10,000 a year to sit in air-cooled chambers and listen to other members talk, while the natives, poor simple creatures, bear the brunt of the heat. But it is cool Congress that does the meaning.

Old Doc Copeland, the senator and former Tammany health commissioner from New York, gave grave public warnings about the danger of staying on the job just as the $25,000 must do, at a time after Joe Robinson's death when such talk was good propaganda for the anti-court plan groups.

The Doc went around in the cloakrooms, buttonholing senators and beginning his dire warnings invariably with: "I told Joe Robinson three days before his death."

All this helped to encompass the merciful death of the court plan, but it soured the District of Columbians, who dwell in a constant state of sourness at Congress anyway.

LATELY Congress has been trying to decide between an income tax on the District citizenry—which would be additional to the federal income tax paid by all federal employes and others except Supreme Court and other justices—and a real estate tax which past experience indicates would be

Buckingham Palace Marks Centennial

LONDON (AP)—Buckingham Palace, the focal point of the empire is celebrating its centennial.

It was 100 years ago that Queen Victoria, three weeks after she became queen, drove from Kensington Palace to her new 'Palace of Fulham.' A few weeks after it became Buckingham Palace, the official residence of the monarch.

Buckingham Palace has had a romantic history. It owes its existence to George IV, who, on finding the royal residences of his time too small and inconvenient, decided to create a home fitting the dignity of a British sovereign.

Several sites were suggested, but he insisted that the most suitable was Buckingham House and its grounds, then a mulberry tree garden founded by James I in the hopes of creating a flourishing silk industry in England. James' scheme was a failure and the house was leased by Goring and called 'Goring House.'

It was leased by the Earl of Arlington from the crown in 1672. The house was destroyed by fire and 'Arlington House' was built. This became the property of the Earl of Grafton and eventually passed to the Duke of Buckingham, who added wings which exist to a large extent today.

George III and Queen Charlotte lived at Buckingham House as it then was, forming the nucleus of the art pieces which Queen Mary has done so much to preserve.

When the property came to George IV alterations and improvements were begun, and the king frequently was at odds with his exchequer over funds. At the time of his death $3,250,000 had been spent, and during the reign of William IV another $500,000 was necessary to improve the building. William died before the work on the house was completed and so Queen Victoria became the first sovereign to live at the palace on its new phase as state residence.

Odd Story Told by An El Paso Barber

EL PASO (AP)—Arch Watkins, El Paso barber, doesn't get tired standing all day at a barber chair.

Watkins gets tired when he has to sit around waiting for customers.

"The most tiresome part of Watkins' work, he said, is cutting hair. 'A lot of men get nervous when a barber cuts their hair,' he said. 'Well, it's harder on the barber. You've got to keep your eyes hard on the hair, and there's a thousand ends you must nip and nip.'

What Watkins likes best of his work is to put hair tonic on hair. 'It is nice to work with,' he said. 'And it smells nice. I could put hair tonic on all day and have a good time.'

Best-Dressed Woman

BY HELEN WELSHIMER COPYRIGHT, 1937, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDITH IRVING, heroine, America's best dressed woman.
PHILIP IRVING, Judith's estranged husband.
MARTHA ROGERS, Judith's rival.
BRUCE KNIGHT, author, Judith's old classmate.
WILFRED BAYNE, Bruce's protégé.

CHAPTER XI

JUDITH nodded and spoke. Martha who had so patiently come to the couturier's to gage against any privacy that she might possibly share with Phil at lunch time. She realized that Martha was not subtle, not diplomatic. She thrust herself on Phil at time when her absence would have pleaded her case far more eloquently.

The attendants were hurrying with new designs, new models and Judith surrendered herself to their allurements. She ordered recklessly, lavishly. Hardly had she finished, when an attendant rapped on the door. In response to Judith's "Come in," she opened it to admit a tall figure in gray tweeds.

"Phil!" Judith said. It was idiotic for her heart to bounce like a rubber ball. She tried to quiet it by saying, in a low voice: "You're looking well."

He wasn't looking well. His face was thinner, tired, and his eyes were baffled.

"You're—gorgeous!" he said. He did not look at the dress, though. "Oh, Judy, it's good to have you back." For a moment he had forgotten that their meetings, now, were only transient affairs, Judith realized. "Ready?" He smiled down at her. "Where shall we lunch?"

JUDITH named a favorite luncheon place, one where they had gone many times in the past. She wondered how Phil had evaded Martha. Perhaps he had begun to realize the futility of any lasting happiness with Martha. His next words banished the entire idea.

"Mind if Martha goes, too?" I asked her last night. She's outside."

defeated in some purpose which she sought.

The next days were crowded, and finally came the night of the style show. Mark Price had not woman's voice, and her eyes flickered, ever so briefly, in the direction of the sound. The words came from a woman who had been a clothes rival last year.

She wondered if Martha had come. And Phil. She mustn't think. Walk to music, she commanded herself. This is your job. Down the ramp, down, down, turn, open the jacket, slip it off, slowly.

The show was over at last. Photographers were everywhere. She was asked to pose in this and that. She was asked if she had done the job for charity. There was a supposition that she had. Mark Price's eyes were incredulous.

"How in this world did I keep from recognizing you?" he asked. "You didn't know?" she gasped. "No. Once or twice, lately, I've thought you knew clothes."

"My picture—the papers..." "I haven't read a thing since I returned—only glanced at the headlines." "I feel very honored and I thank you. Will you forgive me for being so presumptuous as to think you might work with me in the salon I'm opening?" To voice it now looks as though I want to capitalize on your reputation. I'm sorry."

steadily. "Let's talk about it later. I'm going away day after tomorrow for a while. My other trip was interrupted by the airplane catastrophe. This time I must see it through. When I come back—"

"I'll be waiting," he answered.

LATE the next afternoon, she returned from a fitting and tea with Anne. Because they day was warm she was wearing a simple two-piece frock of blue linen with a natural linen bolero, wide hat, and sandals and gloves of the same material.

"There are callers," her maid, who had now returned to her, told her.

"Yes?" she asked. "Who are they?"

The maid shook her head slightly. Because she had been with Judith so long, she ventured: "Mrs. Rogers—THAT Mrs. Rogers—and Mr. Irving."

Judith walked into the hotel sitting room, greeted Martha and Philip.

Marta's dress was black linen and her jacket, beret, slippers, gloves and bag were as pure white as country snow. She looked young, sweet, eager, and a little frightened. Only a woman could find the hardness in her eyes.

A storm was coming. Jagged flashes of lightning ran down the sky, across the park, disappeared far over the distant river. Judith remembered that it had stormed in such a manner the day that she had been frightened, first, about Martha. It thundered and Martha shrank closer to Phil.

"Will you lower the shades and draw the curtains?" Judith asked him. "It shuts away the storm."

"Judith, we came to ask you if you would accommodate our plans to ours a little," he said. "I'm going to China this autumn and I'd like to take Martha. I can combine a world cruise with the business end of the venture."

OLD CAFE STOVE GLOWS 61 YEARS

NEW ORLEANS, August 10. (AP)—If William Maylie could cash in his restaurateur's licenses he could live well on the proceeds the rest of his life. Not that he can't retire anyway, but Bill Maylie proudly displays what he calls the largest collection of restaurant licenses in the United States.

"These are $50,000 worth of city licenses and that doesn't include internal revenue," he said tossing out time-yellowed documents.

Maylie's place had a humble origin 61 years ago, yet through its doors have walked such connoisseurs as Otis Skinner, Theodore Roosevelt, Gifford Pinchot, Will Rogers, Richard Mansfield, Mary Cobb and hosts of others. The fire in the cook stove has never been extinguished.

In the late 70s back on the crowded Canal street side of the Poydras market lived the Maylie and Esparbe families. Mme. Esparbe was famous for her informal dinners.

Catered to Butchers Butchers in the Poydras market wanted a good mid-day meal when the old bronze market bell rang the surf for cessation of activities. Mme. Esparbe agreed to prepare it.

Only men were allowed in the new restaurant. There were only the butchers first. But word spread of the sumptuous food served for only a few cents and soon business men, actors and politicians had crowded out the butchers.

The restaurant expanded to include the adjoining Maylie home but Mme. Esparbe refused to have the century-old wisteria vine growing between the two homes cut down. It was a bond of friendship, she said. The buildings were joined together but the vine remains, growing through a hole in the 30-foot ceiling. The partnership of the families has never been dissolved.

Vine Still Flourishes Mme. Esparbe is dead, but back in a crowded, truck-jammed wholesale district, the vine produces a burst of green over the roof and wrought iron balconies of the buildings. In the summer its lavender blossoms cover the buildings. Its 30-inch trunk a phenomenon for so delicate a specie of vine, is watered with wine left over from the tables and a bucket of water each day.

Until the coming of prohibition Maylie's was for men only. Two women were known, however, to have crashed the gate. One was Ruth Law, aviatrix, who with a mannish haircut had almost completed a meal before a blonde lock had been seen hanging from beneath her helmet. She was permitted to remain. The other was Amelia Bingham, British actress, smuggled in by Maylie himself.

Famous for Bouille Though now renowned for its cuisine Maylie's gained its fame through "bouille" or boiled beef. No seasoning is used in cooking this delicacy. The beef is brisket, boiled to tenderness and served guests as a special course. The guest does his own seasoning from a maze of condiments placed before him.

Patrons take what they are served at Maylie's and like it. There is no ordering. After nine courses a polite waiter in a black alpaca coat presents the bill. As the patron leaves he stops at the bar for coffee and cognac "on the house" with the proprietor.

William Maylie, who with his brother, John, and son, Louis, operate the establishment, denies he is a chef.

"I never tried an egg in my life," he said, "but I know good food. I plan the meals and the guests eat what I give them just like the butcher's did."

"People come here because everything is 'comme il faut'."

"See the wood stove in the kitchen? Mme. Esparbe lit that more than 60 years ago. It's never gone out."

From the report "certified female heads of families to the number of 12,723 have children under 14 years of age to the number of 28,293."

An occasional report, like this one has a very distinct purpose. Here is the conclusion of the report just quoted:

"Estimated number of children probably eligible for aid as dependent children, if the (constitutional) amendment submitted in August passes, is therefore 28,293."

Speaking of reports and surveys here is one that proves rather conclusively that the people of Texas went "just hog wild" during July.

As a result, the state treasury was able to announce an all-time record in the sale of cigarettes, beer and liquor stamps during the month.

From the three-cent cigarette tax the state collected $622,228.24; from the tab on beer, $218,885.98, and from the tax on liquor and wines, $206,909.18.

Minerals Displayed Flag of Kalakua
At Science Academy Found in Honolulu

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—Mineral specimens from all parts of the world are on display at the newly opened Mineral Hall in the Academy of Natural Sciences here.

Charles M. B. Calwader, president of the academy announced use of new methods of display in the exposition, evolved after seven years' experimentation.

The specimens are displayed in glass cases, suspended by invisible strings against a black background and illuminated by subtle lighting effects.

Among the 1,500 specimens is a stibnite crystal from Japan, which resembles a miniature modern skyscraper, and a calcite crystal containing what is believed the oldest fluid in the world. A former staff member preserved the latter one cold night by taking it to bed with him to prevent it from freezing or cracking.

The specimens are grouped in 36 cases and classified by X-ray.

HONOLULU (UP)—The flag of the first monarch ever to encircle the globe has been found here.

It is the ensign of Kalakua, the last king of Hawaii before the islands were annexed by the United States.

Kalakua, known as the "Merry Monarch"—which also included a great fondness for the American game of poker—ruled over the islands from 1874 until his death in San Francisco in 1891. Although he loved fun, his voyage around the world was undertaken in an effort to acquire the knowledge necessary to bring his kingdom up to modern standards.

As a consequence, he was the first monarch ever to visit the United States and the first one ever to make a complete tour of the world. The ensign which has been found accompanied him on all his trip, and flew from the masthead of every ship that carried him.

It has been turned over to the government archives.

PATROLMEN TRAINED FOR SEVEN WEEKS

AUSTIN (UP)—The seven-weeks training school for Texas highway patrolmen at Camp Mabry includes everything from table manners to the art of making an apprehended speed law violator smile.

The 135 successful applicants for highway patrol jobs recently created by the state legislature, begin their day at 6 a. m. They are free to do what they want after 10 p. m.

Capt. Homer Garrison, Jr., assistant director of public safety, who is training the rookies, said that traffic regulation and highway safety was the theme of the training course.

The embryo patrolmen, however, spend the day in classes that include corrective calisthenics, highway and other traffic laws, public speaking, military drill, table etiquette, sharpshooting, motorcycle riding and repairing, gymnastics, criminal laws, safety work and first aid.

Two major riot gas distributing companies have announced that they will give demonstrations to the students in the use of tear producing gases.

When the seven weeks of school are completed, the officers will be stationed over the state in districts already manned by patrolmen. After six months of probation, the students will become full fledged patrolmen.

LONDON, England, August 10 (AP)—Great Britain presented Spanish Nationalist authorities today with a formal demand that they release, at once, British merchantmen ships which they hold.

First Chauffeur in

Dallas is Dead

DALLAS (AP)—Jesse Illingworth, 57, who in the early years of this century zipped through the streets of Dallas as the city's first chauffeur, died recently in Spokane.

A native of Dallas, Illingworth was hired as a chauffeur short after 1900 by the late Col. E. H. R. Green, then living in Dallas. Illingworth was still in his early teens when he met Green's car at the railway station and drove it through Dallas streets while most of the populace looked on. He drove the car to the Green home next door to the present city hall.

He was in Green's employ many years, driving racing cars for him. He raced extensively at the old fair park at Miami, Fla., where he was later badly hurt and forced to retire from the racing game.

Returning to Dallas, he entered the automobile business and later the loan business. Illingworth recently testified at the hearing in Dallas in which Texas attempted to establish its right to an inheritance tax on the fabulous Green estate.

GENERALS JAM

HATS INTO 1940

MEXICAN RING

By WILLIAM H. LANDER
United Press Staff Correspondent
MEXICO, D. F., August 10 (AP)—Politicians—most of them generals—are busy maneuvering for positions in connection with the next presidential election.

The voting will take place in July, 1940, and the new term of office starts Dec. 1, 1940. However, to obtain a first following and the eventual designation by the official government party—the Partido Nacional Revolucionario (National Revolutionary Party)—much groundwork must be laid down far in advance.

As things now stand, Brig-Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, acting secretary of war, seems to be the foremost candidate. He was undersecretary of war for several years, and has been acting secretary since the death of the secretary, Gen. Andres Figueroa on Oct. 17, 1935.

Avila Camacho is exceedingly popular with the army which, after all, is the bulwark of the government. Under his administration salaries have been increased and better barracks and hospitals have been built. The army has modern equipment to replace the old rifles and cannons sold to Spain.

Cardenas Acts Shrewdly

When Figueroa died, everybody with presidential aspirations secretly aspired to be made secretary of war. The fact that President Lazaro Cardenas has left the post vacant, but with Avila Camacho as de facto secretary of war, has aided him. In leaving the post vacant, Cardenas acted shrewdly, for he thus avoids committing himself to designate the man who is to occupy the strongest position under the president.

Another potential candidate whose strength has increased recently is Gen. Gildardo Magana, governor of Cardenas's home state—Michoacan. Magana has a strong following among the members of the new Chamber of Deputies, which meets in September for a three-year term. Magana, an old warrior who fought under the great bandit-hero of the South, Emiliano Zapata, is well-known in California, as he was governor of the Northern Territory of Lower California. He is a close friend of Cardenas.

The stock of Francisco Castillo Najera, medical-general, and ambassador to the United States, has risen considerably recently. His trip to Mexico to accompany Cardenas on the trip to the Southeast, increased his prestige.

Leftist Not Eliminated

Three cabinet members who were most prominently mentioned up until recently are not, however, entirely out of the picture. Strongest of these is Brig-Gen. Francisco J. Mugica, secretary of communications and an avowed leftist. He is often accused of being a Communist. Brig. Gen. Rafael Sanchez Tapia, secretary of National Economy, a moderate, also has presidential ambitions. The third cabinet officer is the colorful Indian, General of Division Saturniano Cedillo, secretary of agriculture. Cedillo is a conservative.

All the foregoing are military men. Tradition in Mexico is very strong about having a soldier for president. Except for Benito Juarez and Francisco Madero, all the other civilian presidents have held office only as provisional presidents, and none of them had much success at it.

There are, however, two civilians who must be taken into consideration in any list of possibilities. They are:

Rodriguez in Limelight

Luis I. Rodriguez, governor of Guanajuato, whose inauguration this spring was one of the great political events of the year. Several special trains carried virtually the entire cabinet and diplomatic corps to attend, and Ambassador Josephus Daniels made a highly eulogistic speech at the time.

Rodriguez previously was private secretary to President Cardenas, and was dubbed the vice president. He is a great orator. His middle name is Ignacio, but he does not use it any more, because of its religious derivation. Rodriguez in July issued an astounding decree: that whenever a peasant is murdered, the land on which the murder occurred will be immediately taken from its owner and given to an agrarian community. The law was much criticized, but Rodriguez got busy, came to Mexico, and persuaded President Cardenas on July 22 to issue an order telling the governors of all the other states to do likewise.

Heads Press Bureau

Augustin Arroyo Ch. is the other strong civilian potentiality. He was governor of Guanajuato, then undersecretary of interior. When Cardenas decided to create a strong, centralized propaganda bureau, he appointed Arroyo Ch. to head it. It is the DAPP—Departmental Autonomo de Prensa y Publicidad (Autonomous Department of Press and Publicity). It is so powerful that even cabinet members are afraid to talk to newspapermen unless it is through the DAPP. He controls printing office and tourist advertising.

This is the situation as it now exists. It was different a year ago, just before ex-President Emilio Portes Gil ceased being president of the PNR. He was then reported to be grooming his protege, Marte Go-

Bells Collected

Landsdowne W

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—"I hear the sound of bells! Oh, say what can that mean? 'Tis but a woman's daughter; a sight that to see."

That's what they're doing in Landsdowne way, for Mrs. E. Musser as one of the hobbies of all—the rare bells. She gets church steeples, temple churches monasteries, even hered and everywhere the ringing of bells is a rare message.

In every corner of are bells. They come from the teaus of Tibet, from the the African jungle, and decks of storm-washed sea.

One bell came from a temple dating back more years to the Ming dynasty other is from the battles while a third is an altar the Virgin Islands.

Canada Buys More

Coal From Germany

OTTAWA, Ont. (AP)—Germany is threatening Great Britain's supremacy of the Canadian hard coal market, trade figures here show.

Despite the preferential advantage enjoyed by British anthracite, Canadian imports of the coal from Britain are declining and imports from Germany are correspondingly increasing.

Between 1928 and 1933 imports of anthracite from Britain mounted from 526,000 to 1,600,000 tons, but the following year they declined by 150,000 tons, and last year fell off another 120,000 tons.

During the same period imports of German coal increased to 350,000 tons. Smaller quantities were also imported from Russia, Indo-China and other countries.

A "bargain" is sometimes a bargain—

A good many people look on August as their lucky month—and we don't mean those who spend it lying on the sand and taking in salt air.

We mean those people who have formed the habit of buying things when other people aren't... porch rugs and luggage and towels and lamps and all sorts of things, for use now and for use next season.

Of course they have learned that "bargains" are not always bargains. They know how to recognize quality and styles and worth, how to find the strong points and how to avoid weaknesses. And much of their knowledge comes from the advertisements in this newspaper.

All of us follow advertising, but some people study it so thoroughly that they know exactly what they want and where to get it. They are the ones who find the real bargains. Their money buys more things and better things—in August and all through the year.
