UNDER THE GOME AT JUSTIN

By GORDO NK. SHEARER
Justin, Aug. 18 (AP)—Three Tex. officials, all close to Gov. James B. Hargis, will trek to Indiana early next month to study that state's income tax.
The three are John Redditt, Lufkin, chairman of the senate finance committee; Secretary of State Ed. D. C. Carpenter. How the governor relies on Carpenter's investigation and judgment has been demonstrated repeatedly. Those who have been designated to study the Indiana plan is a modified tax plan. The buyer gets the cash and the seller is paid by the seller and passed on to him in the form of a tax on salaries or other income.

NOT TO TAKE SEAT UNTIL MEMBERS RULE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (AP)—Albert Levitt, former assistant to Attorney General Homer Cummings today filed a petition in the supreme court demanding that Hugo L. Black "show cause" that he is eligible to become an associate justice of the high bench before being seated.
Levitt, who resigned his official position recently filed his petition as an attorney. It recited most of the arguments in the senate in opposition to confirmation of Black.
Chief of these reasons outlined in the petition was, that the retirement act of March 1, 1937, increased the emoluments of the position on the court and that Black as a member of congress when the act was passed was therefore ineligible to be seated.
Levitt's action was said to be almost without precedent and left court attaches bewildered as to what course the court would take. It was said that in view of the petition Black might not seek to take his place on the court next October until the present eight members have had an opportunity to rule on Levitt's petition.
Elevation of Black to the court bolstered prospects for validation of vital new legislation. It also started a senate move to end the dispute over the legal status of retired members of the court.
Black, confirmed by a senate vote of 64 to 16 may play a decisive role in the closely divided court.
Questions involving the administration, power policy utility legislation, and other matters are expected to be before the court.

When Doris Major disappeared from the night club in Washington, D. C., where she had been a cigarette girl, alarm over her safety was felt. But the fears were needless, for she was just having a circus all the time. And here she is in her new role—that of an equestrienne with a circus in Virginia.

RADIUM WORK CONTINUES AS FINISH NEARS

The south side of Cisco's new $13-million stadium has just been covered the first coat of paint. W. F. M. contractor, said that the job would be completed by today. A crew is also putting up some temporary interior fences.

GUNMAN HOLDS UP PILOT AND TAXI DRIVER

HOUSTON, Aug. 18 (AP)—A lone gunman today kidnaped an aviator at an airport on the outskirts of Houston and forced him at gun point to take him aloft.
A short time before the aviator was kidnaped the gunman forced a taxi driver to take him near the airport. The taxi driver was put out and the bandit then drove to the airport.
The plane flew westward for a short distance, almost went into a spin and then headed east. It had enough gasoline for about an hour and a half of flying, airport attendants said.

SINO OFFICER FINDS MARINE HARD TO BLUFF

SHANGHAI, Aug. 18 (AP)—A Chinese officer tried to bluff a United States marine Wednesday, but failed.
The Chinese officer saw a marine of the Fourth Regiment stop a Chinese ambulance from crossing a bridge connecting Chapei, the Chinese quarter, and the international settlement. Marines are guarding the bridges joining Chapei and the northern international zone.
The Chinese officer walked across from Chapei and with a precise English accent, told the marine commander:
"I'll give you people 10 minutes to go or I'll blow up the bridge."
The commander answered:
"I'll give you 10 seconds to go or I'll blow hell out of you."
The Chinese officer went, hurriedly.

PRESIDENT CHARGES OPPONENTS DO NOT BELIEVE IN DEMOCRACY

MANHATTAN, Roanoke Island, N. C., August 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt attacked opponents of the new deal today as seeking to serve their own interests above the general welfare and charged they do not believe in democracy.
The President listed the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Liberty League and the National Association of Manufacturers as opposed to his social economic aims, then he said:
"They seek to substitute their own will for that of the majority. They reject the principle of the greater good for the greater number which is the cornerstone of democratic government."
"I think no change in the form of American government. Majority rule must be preserved as a safe-

Backbone of Credit

The stock exchange insurance industry was established has been maintained on the principle that adequate profits must be made in order to protect the policyholder—and that, at the same time, the cost of insurance to the public must be progressively reduced.

These two purposes may seem at odds, but the industry has shown that they can be achieved. The financial position of the companies has been strengthened and the cost of stock fire insurance is today 40 per cent less, on the average, than it was in 1900.

In other words, the industry has found ways and means of reducing the cost of doing business and it has invariably shared these savings with its policyholders. For three-quarters of a century, the industry has fought on behalf of fire prevention and fire protection, and success has followed. The entire country has been included in an elaborate system whereby cities, towns and villages are inspected and graded in the light of hazards. The industry has established a bureau for testing the fire resistance of electrical equipment, building materials and other products—a work which is of major importance in conserving life and property from destruction by fire. The cumulative effect of these activities has been to save the country billions of dollars—in reduced insurance premiums, lower fire loss, and other indirect costs that are an inescapable part of fire waste.

Fire insurance is the backbone of the nation's credit—without it, no man could take the risks involved in building and operating a business. The fire insurance industry has made a magnificent contribution to the progress and maintenance of our modern civilization.

Every Fourth Work Day

"Americans must work nearly one full year out of every eight—or about six weeks out of every year—just to pay the cost of the Federal government," says the United States News.

"When the local and state government costs are added to the expenditures of the national government, the average American must work two years out of every eight to pay the cost of government."

The tax collector gets a cut in every pay check. His unseen hand reaches in and takes part of all the money you spend—for food, amusement, clothing, train fare, power service. And his percentage is today greater than it ever was in peace time in this country.

The Twentieth Century Fund estimates that total government costs have swelled to $17,900,000,000 a year. That is approximately 25 per cent of the national income in good times. When you work four weeks, the public treasuries take your earnings for one of the weeks.

During the next year or so we are going to "make or break" so far as the tax problem is concerned. Every branch of government spending must be checked, from the national capitol to the city hall. We will have a let-up in tax booting when, and only when, the voice of the people demands it.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—There is no more assurance as to when Congress will adjourn than there was two or three months ago.

As against a strong general desire to get away, especially reinforced by southern members who want no wage-hour legislation, various new developments which may keep the House and Senate here until the middle of September—or allow them a brief vacation and bring them back by October.

Perhaps the most important factors are the recent drop in the price of cotton, which put the administration's southern opposition in something of a hole, and a secret coalition of northern senators with farm state senators to get behind both wage-hour and crop control legislation.

The development in cotton caused a prompt appeal by the White House from most of the southern contingent which had been insisting rather disdainfully that there was no need of further legislation this session. To the request of southerners for a federal loan of 12 cents a pound Roosevelt replied there would be no renewal of crop loans unless Congress passed crop control legislation such as he had vainly requested. This appeared to give the President, with his veto power, something in the nature of a temporary whiplash.

The Senate's vote of 56 to 28 for the wage-hour bill has pepped up drooping spirits and defeatist attitudes among administration congressional forces.

Both labor and the White House now hope probably in vain for a stronger measure than the Senate bill permitting a federal board to set minimum wages at not more than 40 cents an hour and 40 hours work weeks of not less than 40 hours. They received an unexpected sock in the jaw when Congresswoman Mary Norton's House Labor committee, supposedly under control, voted overwhelmingly to accept the Senate bill. The south appears to have lost its fight against any wage-hour legislation whatever. Meanwhile a "prairie bloc" has been formed with the idea of trading with northern members on the basis of votes for a stronger wage-hour bill and votes for a far-reaching farm bill.

THREATS of tax loop-hole legislation which would be retroactive are to be heard and certainly would cause terrific commotion if the administration got behind it. The best bet is that the administration won't dare. Roosevelt has just tossed in another likely cause of delayed adjournment by notifying House sugar bloc leaders that he would veto any sugar legislation which retained present restrictions on Hawaiian and Puerto Rican sugar refining operations.

Roosevelt may decide to veto the District of Columbia appropriation bill because the Tydings-Miller retail price-fixing bill has been attached to it as a rider. So more time would be consumed. He is expected to hold up appointment of Supreme Court Justice Van Devanter's successor until the very end of the session—as a matter of strategy.

Meanwhile the prevalent notion here is that Congress will get away between the 21st and 28th of August. But even though Congress can act with lightning speed at times, that notion is approaching absurdity.

OUT OUR WAY

week on this problem. So far it has been the sanction of Gov. James V. Allred. He is not expected to get enthusiastic about the plan, however, until it becomes apparent that it will not develop into a neat cut de sac into which to shift the tax-raising efforts.

If other tax plans fail, the administration may make the best of the situation and advocate a selective sales tax Governor Allred has carefully avoided any declaration against all sales taxes in his opposition to a general sales tax.

Some house member of influence may be added to the delegation that visits Indiana. Tax bills must originate in the house of representatives. Senator Redditt cannot offer one. The senate, however, has a say on taxes after the house decides on a bill and sends it to the senate. Many people believe the senate must agree on any measure that becomes a law. In practice, most of the important bills are the work of carefully selected conference committees with equal house and senate membership.

Taxation always causes sharp divisions in the legislature. As one experienced legislator described it, taxation presents no great moral issue. Members seek to represent the best interests of their districts. As these interests are widely divergent, the tax views of members vary greatly.

A district with a leading industry opposes taxes on that industry—at least any tax considered out of proportion to the tax on other industries. Different areas have different views on taxes even to increased oil taxation comes from the old oil fields in north and central West Texas which lack the advantage of the East Texas and Gulf areas in nearness of tidewater.

Operators in those districts say they do not have the transportation rate advantage over producers in other states that is possessed by Texas fields close to the gulf, so that a tax some areas might pay without losing markets would be ruinous in other parts of the state.

Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul, declining last week to offer a murder reward, stated his belief that the $1,000,000 state safety department and the other paid officers had sufficient incentive to do their best to capture outlaws without a reward offered for private aid.

A farewell barbecue for Gibb Gilchrist, retiring state highway engineer, is being planned for the end of the week. Gilchrist who will become dean of engineering at A. & M. college will not sever his highway department connections until Sept. 30, but he will be away on outside duties during much of September, so the farewell banquet is to be held this month.

Among the bits of erroneous information that are heard about the state capitol, newsmen this week pounced on one that announced that

CAST OF CHARACTERS KATHLEEN O'BRIEN—become, winner of a million card game. BOB McTAVISH—hero, detective story writer. PAT—the janitor who played cupid. THE DUCHESS—patron of surrealist art. PROFESSOR BRACEY—Egyptologist.

CHAPTER VI BOB had occasion to ask himself this question about the professor more than once during the afternoon. The tall Egyptianist had immediately sought out Kathleen and the rest of the time he proceeded to monopolize her so that no one else had a chance to say anything to her.

Several times Bob saw her glance his way as though she hoped he would rescue her, but there was no way for him to escape the Duchess, who kept him persistently at her side, hanging on his arm and laughing up at him in the most provocative manner. She lavished caresses on the unresponsive Schmatz and chattered about art and Bob's writing and how much she was going to enjoy having him for a neighbor, until her head swam trying to keep up with her.

"I can see how you can write red-blooded, he-man tales," she said, dropping down on the couch Pat had moved so regularly. "You're so virile and so romantic-looking yourself. Do sit down and tell me about yourself."

Bob looked down at her hair with a little laugh, smothering a desire to tweak the straying locks. "It's because I like to eat, lady," he told her, edging away a little. "There isn't anything but the desire to live that would make me slay as many men as I do—if you get what I mean." He tried to turn it off jestingly, but found it hard to disregard the look in the woman's long-lashed eyes. A dangerous woman, he decided. One he'd hate to have on his trail.

BUT if the Duchess was conscious of his uneasiness, the Duchess did not show it. She only took his hand in both her slender ones and sighed, "You can't think how lonely I really am. That's why I'm always reaching out for friendship, for someone I can trust and in whom I can confide. That's why I liked you the minute I saw you. You seemed so honest and different somehow."

"I'm all of that, lady," he laughed. "And now I must be taking my pup out for his afternoon run. If I don't he'll be tearing around so, the janitor'll probably request us to move. Thanks for asking us to your party."

He put the dog down and started for the door. Then he paused. He'd hunt up Kathleen first and tell her he would see her later, and make his escape. He wouldn't be snagged into such a mess again. If necessary he'd hang out a smallpox sign to warn off the Duchess. The less he saw of her the better. Pat had had her number all right when he said such a frowny head likely topped a lot of mischief.

But it was one thing to wish to talk to Kathleen and another to do it. The professor had her shut off in a small corner that he intended for only two. She, too, had been having rather a difficult time of it. At first she was flattered by the preference of the older man, especially as she was still feeling squeaked by the calm way the Duchess had captured Bob and borne him off, and irritated at Bob for letting her do it. But there was something about the smooth-spoken professor with his flashing black eyes and insinuating smile that sent a little ripple of fear across her mind. Who was this mysterious person who talked so glibly of famous people and places, who seemed to have crowded so much into his lifetime?

"ARE you pleased to make my acquaintance or not, my dear?" the professor was asking her, leaning closer. "Well—oh, yes, of course." She smiled up at him. "You see that's partly why I wanted to come to the city. In Gloversville we didn't have a chance to meet many interesting people. It was all very narrow and conventional, you know." Her eyes strayed to where the Duchess and Bob had been sitting. The professor's eyes followed her glance and he asked, "You know the young man the Duchess seems so interested in? Perhaps he came from your home town, too?" "Oh no," answered Kathleen. "I never saw Mr. McTavish until he rented a studio here. He's very nice and his dog has such a cute, yearning look."

ness of his master. Dogs often reflect their owners, you know. But then the Duchess seems to like him well enough already."

KATHLEEN straightened up. "I don't know why you're telling me all this," she said coldly. "I hardly know either our hostess or Mr. McTavish, and of course it wouldn't mean a thing to me if they did become interested in each other." In spite of herself her lips quivered a little as she said it, and the lonely feeling came back with a rush.

It had been so different since that day Bob's battered desk had been carried up the stairs, and she had grown to listen for Schmatz's scampering feet. But of course this rich, fascinating woman would be more interesting than herself. At any rate the worldly wise professor didn't seem to mind it. She turned to him with her best smile.

"At least, Professor Bracey, I feel you're my friend, aren't you?" "Yes," he lifted her hand and touched his lips to the soft palm. Just then Bob came upon them.

"Say, I'm sorry," he said in some embarrassment. "I—I seem to be making it a crowd. I just wanted to say goodbye, Kathleen. I've been trying to get a word with you—"

"We noticed how hard you were trying, McTavish," Professor Bracey turned and looked at him with a sarcastic smile. "We were just remarking on it in fact, you and the Duchess—"

U. S. DEFLATES VANITY-BAITED 'SUCKER' TRAPS

By C. L. SULZBERGER United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON, August 18 (UP)—You can't learn to croon in 10 days, live forever, or "puck a 16-inch arm in your sleeve." The benevolent Federal Trade Commission says so.

The commission has been quietly moving in to combat improper advertising and the various forms of shell games built on P. T. Barnum's assumption that "There's a sucker born every minute." These are some of the results.

The commission has obtained an agreement from a Florida dentist to cease representing that artificial teeth purchased from him by mail order are better than any others or are the only means to obtain "your real individuality."

It received a promise from a Philadelphia firm to stop advertising its muscle builder as "the greatest exercise made; the choice of champions and the emblem of power; it quickly stimulates muscular growth by its use one can pack a 12-inch arm in his sleeve and duplicate the chainbreaking or iron-bending feats of Brietbart, Marx Sandow, Moerkel, Travis and Nordquist."

Wisdom of East is Out And it got assurance from a Los Angeles concern that it would no longer represent that its founder was taught by masters of the Far East in Tibet, and is today an authoritative interpreter of the ancient wisdom offering "a secret method of the actual technique of rejuvenation because old age is only a chemical change which the concern is able to instruct its students to overcome."

The commission is charged with guarding honesty—in its strictest sense—in all business practices. Under its regulatory powers it is thus able to crack down on what it considers false or misleading advertising.

Officials of the body recalled today that among the innumerable acts taken by it during the present year, to enforce "honest representations," were to present:

A New York author from selling a book designated "The Grape Cure" and describing it as "a competent treatment or an effective remedy for cancer, diabetes, paralysis, pneumonia, heart trouble and other ailments."

A Chicago promoter from advertising a booklet which "will enable one to learn to sing or croon and to have a trained singing voice or become an accomplished singer or crooner in 10 easy home lessons."

A Washington manufacturer from telling his public that he has a device which prevents snoring and eliminates asthma, catarrh, hay fever and insomnia.

A Worcester, Mass., oil company from guaranteeing that its fuel powers Gar Wood's and Sir Malcolm Campbell's engines and runs the Graf Zeppelin.

A Los Angeles syndicate from assuring people that its "press card" is an open sesame for gaining admission to places otherwise closed to the public.

Veteran Listed as Dead Wins $7,000 BUFFALO, N. Y. (UP)—Michael J. Slovick, Batavia war veteran who possesses a death certificate to prove the government listed him among those "killed in action," has won a 12-year-fight for payment of his war risk insurance on the basis of his total and permanent disability.

N. S. Attorney George L. Grobe of Buffalo notified Slovick, holder of the Purple Heart decoration, that the government was sending him a check for $7,000 in full payment of his policy.

Slovick was shot in a heavy engagement on Nov. 1, 1918. For three days he lay in a shell hole, his body and right thigh full of shrapnel.

His company commander reported him killed and a death certificate was issued.

Later, stretcher bearers found him. An emergency operation saved his life.

Upon his return home he sought compensation from the veterans' bureau, but was refused and told to apply for vocational training.

During the 12 years he fought for the compensation he tried various jobs, but found that because of his injuries, he was unable to work more than two hours a day.

Expectancy Reaches High for Insured NEW YORK (UP)—The life expectancy of some 17,500,000 industrial policy holders reached an all-time high record of 60.31 years in 1936, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has revealed.

The company said that in the last 25 years there has been a gain of 13.68 years in the average length of life among industrial policy holders. It was added that in the 1912 period the expectation of life at birth was only 46.63.

The increase in life expectancy was attributed principally to improvement in "personal hygiene and the trend to higher standards of public health."

LEGEND GROWS WITH MARCONI AS SUPERMAN
By RALPH E. FORTE
United Press Staff Correspondent
ROME, Aug. 18 (AP)—The death of Guglielmo Marconi has robbed the Italian people of a hero whose acts and thoughts they unanimously considered mystical.

He was, they argued, a man in whose head God had placed an idea which He did not give to anyone else or ever will. It was clearly understood that Marconi did not invent the Hertzian waves which belonged to that official science which stubbornly considered "il nostro uomo" as an "amateur."
