School Apportionment Again Set at $22

INJUNCTION AT DALLAS TO BE DISMISSED

AUSTIN, Aug. 20 (U.P.)—The State Board of Education today reconsidered the 1937-38 school apportionment and again set the amount at $22 per scholastic by unanimous vote. An injunction against certification of that amount at Dallas will be dismissed. The settlement means that the school will pay school districts $22 for each child of scholastic age. Total state enrollment is more than 1,500,000. The unanimous action came as a surprise. The Board had a bitter division over the apportionment and was reported to stand 5 to 4 for reduction. Testimony of State Comptroller George Sheppard at a trial in San Antonio was considered. Sheppard testified that there were funds to meet a $22 apportionment under existing conditions. The State Tax Board had reduced the state advanced school tax from 26 cents to 7 cents on $100 valuation.

After two years of fruitless searching for heirs, Mrs. Wright was located through a radio broadcast which her daughter heard. Five brothers and sisters were included in the will.

Present plans call for making the 1938 celebration an all-winter sports program, for the entire city instead of a week of mad-cap "arrival". Tentative plans include a 400-mile dog derby, a 165-mile ski race, a 12-mile snow shoe sweepstakes, a national skating tourney, hockey games, basketball contests, ice-curling races, an international curling bonspiel, the world's greatest ice show, ice-hokey racing, skiing exhibitions, toboggan riding, and other pastimes of the winter months in the Northwest.

U. S. SAILOR KILLED; 18 ARE WOUNDED

SHANGHAI, Aug. 20 (U.P.)—A shell apparently from Japanese guns struck the United States cruiser Augusta today and killed a sailor, and wounded 18 others. The Augusta is flag ship of the U. S. Asiatic squadron. The big cruiser was only slightly damaged. The incident happened about 9 p. m. during a furious battle between a score of Japanese warships and attacking Chinese land and air forces.

The sailor killed was Frederick Falgout, 21, of Louisiana. First official word of the shelling received by navy headquarters in Washington indicated that none of the 18 injured was in a serious condition. The accident imperiled international relations; international law permits free passage of U. S. warships on the river. At Washington there was immediate demand from Senator Bennett Clark and Gerald Nye that the U. S. government evacuate the battle area and invoke the neutrality act. President Roosevelt said that for the present, American authorities on the spot would handle the situation. American residents of Shanghai were concerned about the reaction in Washington. They feared it would intensify demands that the U. S.

Along the Hard Road Toward Neutrality

As the Chinese-Japanese conflict dangerously approaches actual large-scale warfare, it is none too soon to begin thinking about neutrality.

Already factors are beginning to pile up, before there is any formal war, which will make the neutral course hard.

In London, a vast $100,000,000 loan is already being negotiated for China. The Morgans are believed to be interested, and part of the loan may be raised in the United States from individual subscribers. Every such subscriber immediately acquires a stake in Chinese victory, and will find it hard to be neutral.

The danger to Americans now in China has not yet been averted. A statement by one missionary organization that Japanese victory would nullify the effort and money spent in China by American churches for many years, is already an example of the pressure that will be brought against complete neutrality. Enterprises undertaken by private individuals or by private associations in China must not be permitted to influence our policy as a nation.

Word comes from the west coast that American flyers are being recruited to fly for China, and American planes are being sold to the Chinese. American individuals leaving the United States to fight for China or any other foreign power forfeit any protection they might expect from this country. We can not prevent free American individuals from doing anything they like, but we can make it clear that, once enlisted in a foreign cause, they forfeit American protection.

The constant pressure on the American State Department to change its policy toward Spain is a good example of pressure that will multiply a hundred times if there is a war in the far east. Radicals continue to insist that the U. S. policy of refusing to ship arms to either side in Spain is all wrong. Because Portugal, Italy and Germany are shipping arms to Franco, and only Russia is shipping them to the legal Valencia government, radicals argue that the U. S. ought to even things up by shipping arms to Valencia.

That, of course, is not neutrality. Neutrality means not getting into a war, and treating equally those who are in it. If the contestants are unequally matched, or find themselves in a spot where equal treatment helps one, hinders another, that is their hard luck, and they ought to think about that before going into the war.

The conception of neutrality that argues that we are somehow bound to see that contestants are evenly matched and to back the weaker, is hard to understand.

Should China and Japan fight, it seems likely that American neutrality would be harder on China than Japan, which has control of the seas, money and armament.

Quite regardless of any sympathy one may have for China, neutrality means equal treatment for both, even if China gets the short end. Any other kind of neutrality, which would change policy with the wind to see that the odds were somehow evened, is not neutrality.

Steel production rose 35 per cent; automobile production 12 per cent; residential construction 54 per cent; lumber production 8 per cent; electric power output 13 per cent; factory payrolls 29 per cent and factory employment 13 per cent.

TRENCH SILOS FORGED INTO WEST TEXAS

AUSTIN, August 26 (AP)—Long heralded as salvation for the feeding situation in dry years, the trench silo is being forged into use by West Texas counties.

Necessarily, the size of the silo depends on the amount of livestock to be fed. The long trenches in which green feed is preserved indefinitely range from those for the herd supplying the needs of the small farmer, to those for large dairies and stock farms.

Farmers, in figuring the cross section of the trench, multiply the number of animals to be fed by the pounds of ensilage to be fed each day. If 12 cattle are to be fed 30 pounds of ensilage per day, then 360 pounds will be needed each day.

Experts state that ensilage will weigh in the neighborhood of 30 pounds per cubic foot. On this basis, the farmer would need 12 cubic feet of green stuff each day. Assuming that a cross section four inches thick will be fed each day, the farmer then constructs a trench with a depth and width measurement of 36 square feet.

The trench silo has long been studied by county agents and vocational agriculture teachers as the safest method of assuring green feed the year around.

The trench method is a cheap way of storing feed, keeps it indefinitely, increases the food value, and makes it possible to preserve feed that otherwise would hardly be worth harvesting, farmers claim.

Corn is generally considered in this area as the most desirable crop for ensilage from the quality standpoint; the grain sorghums, such as kaffir, milo, fetteris and hegar, are almost as much in favor as is corn.

Sweet sorghums are good especially for dairy cattle and stock cattle but not so good for other livestock.

Because ensilage is a succulent, bulky, palatable and cheap feed and is the best known substitute for green pasture, it is particularly desirable in a ration for dairy cattle.

In beef cattle, fattening rations, silage has proved to be very satisfactory as a roughage. If of good quality, it is safe feed for horses and mules.

Four to five pounds of silage for grown sheep has been fed with good results. Lambs can be fattened on a ration using ensilage as a roughage, farmers report.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
KATHLEEN O'SHEA—Redhead, writer of greeting card verse.
HOPE McTAVISH—hero, detective story.
PAT—The janitor who played cupid.
THE DUCHESS—patron of surrealist art.
PROFESSOR BRACEY—Ergonomist.

Yesterday Pat makes a head in the romance of Bob and Kathleen, learns that Kathleen leans toward the professor. He determines to do something about this.

CHAPTER VIII

QUICKLY completing the repair job, Pat put away his hammer and tacks and marched up to Bob's room. As the young man opened the door, the janitor put his stubby finger mysteriously to his lips and, coming in, closed the door carefully behind him.

"It's meself would like a little private conversation with ye, McTavish," he said.

Bob looked surprised. "What's up? The police on my trail or something?"

Pat grinned. "Not a-tall, a-tall, though before long maybe they will be comin' after some others 'round here."

"You heard about what happened then at the party?"

"Miss Kathy was tiffin' me something about it," was the Irishman's guarded reply. "But gurls don't always git things straight now."

"I'll say they don't," Bob frowned darkly and walked over to his desk for a match. "That slippery guy sure seemed to pull the wool over her eyes. She probably didn't tell you how he got me in bad, did she?"

"No," Pat was careful not to seem too interested.

Bob related in detail just what had happened, ending with, "And I don't believe he's what he's posing as being. Probably after something is the reason he hangs around the Duchess and her bunch."

"That's what I come up to say now," Pat replied. "Miss Kathy ain't no business to be traillin' with the kind of folks the Duchess runs with. She ain't their kind, and it's her that's kind of lookin' out for her, her bein' the sweet little thing she is, without anybody to be talkin' her part now."

"She apparently doesn't want the rest of us to butt in," answered Bob bitterly. "You saw her give me the cold shoulder. No knowing what that guy told her after I left the party. I've been expecting them to prefer charges against me for damage just any time."

seen it before. Then he shook his head soberly. "It ain't that a-tall, McTavish. It's because she's hurt thinkin' ye passed her up for that fuzzy-headed Duchess. Ye didn't do much talkin' to her, now did ye?"

"No," Bob's tone showed his exasperation. "The Duchess cornered me as soon as I got there, and I couldn't break away without walking over her. You know how some women are."

"Beggorrah I do, me boy," Pat assured him gravely. "But not Miss Kathy's kind now. She'd never run after no man."

"She doesn't have to. Bracey will jolly well see to that. He hardly let her out of his sight all afternoon."

"And ye think that pleased her now? It did not. She was likely hopin' ye'd be sparin' her some o' yer time. We got to be talkin' steps to put that feller where he belongs—where he can't be forcin' himself on Miss Kathy, see."

"If it can be done," answered Bob slowly. "You know I believe I've seen him some place before. Thought so the first time I ever clapped eyes on him, but couldn't be sure. You know how you get that feeling about people some times. Even the dog doesn't care for him. He'd like nothing better than to take a slash at him."

Crowded first thing when he saw him again at the party."

Pat nodded. "And it's dogs know more than the folks around here. That feller is after something, Mark me word. And I'm thinkin' it's something the Duchess has. That's why he made a play for Miss Kathy to draw ye off, if the liher dame was givin' ye a lot of blamey, see."

A GLEAM showed in Bob's eyes. "You think so, Pat? I wonder—"

"Ye don't need to," the Irishman assured him. "Miss Kathy's hurt to think ye can't see her for that wealthy gurl across the hall. If ye could find some way to prove Bracey ain't a professor a-tall, but maybe something else not so polite, ye'd be doin' Miss Kathy a favor, and it's Patrick that's tiffin' ye."

"He surely isn't hankering for any of the Duchess's pictures," Bob said thoughtfully. "If he so much liked, he'd want one, she'd likely give him a dozen or two, she'd be so tickled. It's very evident she has plenty of cash. Maybe that's what he's got his eye on."

Pat grinned. "It won't do him a mite o' good. There've been other fellers figured they'd git money from her, but it's no go."

He knows her way about and don't ye be forgittin' it. Aint none o' them can outsmart her."

"She wears some pretty classy jewelry."

"And she'll wear bigger and better stones when she throws the fancy dress ball she's been plannin' for months. It's goin' to tear the place wide open, what with electricians and decorators, and caterers, and such. The Duchess spends money like water when she sets out to do anything."

"Well, that's okay by me," Bob shrugged. "After smashing up her picture, she'll not be apt to invite me again. I certainly wouldn't go if she did. Once is plenty enough for me."

Pat leaned forward. "Not if ye thought ye'd be doin' Miss Kathy a favor now? I got a job helpin' the electrician so I can keep an eye on what's goin' on. And Bracey's bound to see Miss Kathy's invited. It's to be an artists' ball, which means all sorts of cut-ups. The Duchess is goin' to wear her emerald. They say it's big as a hen's egg and worth so much it'd give ye a pain in the head a thinkin' o' it."

"Let her wear it for all me," Bob replied. "I've got entirely too many things to do to take any more time out for her fool parties."

"Like ivery other honest man," Pat said. "But better remember all the men what come to this house may not be so honest, and we got to watch out fer Miss Kathy."

BOB did not answer, so Pat took his departure hoping fervently he had given Bob something to think about. If he could have seen the young man's worried frown after the door closed, he would have felt confident he had succeeded. The thought that Kathleen cared how he felt about the Duchess sent a warm glow over Bob. She must have said something to give the little old Irishman such a notion, though Bob suspected that Pat's commonplace exterior concealed a very sentimental heart. He had seen him privately bringing tid-bits for Schmatz, all the time assuming a studied indifference toward the dog, which only the terrier's eloquent tail disproved.

But this Bracey fellow, and that persistent feeling that he had seen him before—Bob stared out of the window thoughtfully.

Suddenly he snatched his cap and, Schmatz at his heels, went down the stairway two steps at a time. He had remembered where he had first seen Professor Bracey. (To Be Continued)

SOVIET PURGES ROUSE CZARIST RUSSIANS' HOPE

By ROBERT H. BERKOV
United Press Staff Correspondent
SHANGHAI, Aug. 19 (AP)—Recent purges in the ranks of high officials of the Soviet Union again have stirred the hopes of irremediable "white" Russians in the Far East.

Although a majority of the "whites" long ago concluded that the old order would never return to Russia, and either settled down to permanent exile in China or sought readmission to the Fatherland as Soviet citizens, a small group of die-hards never abandoned hope that a new Czar would some day sit on the throne of Holy Russia.

These die-hards, including hundreds who served as high officers in the Czar's army and navy, regard the large-scale executions of Soviet officials as a sign of the imminent breakup of the Communist regime in the U. S. S. R. They again foresee the day when they will march back to Moscow and once more serve a Romanoff.

Strive for United Front
Stimulated by the new hope, White Russian exiles in Shanghai, Peiping, Tientsin and other China cities have busied themselves in an attempt to form a united front.

The purpose is to eliminate cleavage of opinion and personal differences among the whites in order to take advantage of the anticipated opportunity to overthrow the Reds.

Chinese are suspicious of the White Russians' new stirrings. They believe that Japanese agents are at work with a view to creating disturbances in China. The Chinese press has openly accused the Japanese concession authorities at Tientsin of aiding the Russians financially and of maintaining headquarters for the whites in that city.

Chinese Start Roundup
Chinese authorities have retorted with a campaign to round up suspicious White Russians and have enlisted the aid of foreign officials in North China.

In Shanghai, however, with a population of 35,000 Russians, 98 per cent of whom are "whites," it is more difficult to keep tabs on the emigre organizations. The flag of the Czars still lies over the Russian club and the Russian Ex-Officers club and a half-dozen other gathering places of the "legitimists." Some precautionary measures have been taken, and regulations affecting registration and movement of White Russians have recently been stiffened by the Nanking government.

Life In Arctic Much Warmer

Prof. V. Vize, an Arctic scientist and geologist, has completed a study of the change of climate in the Arctic region.

According to his studies, the annual temperature in the Arctic region is rising by 2 degrees in the last 17 years. During the winter months the rise of temperature is up to 5 degrees. On the other hand the temperature in the summer months has risen by 7 degrees.

The recession of the glaciers in the Arctic islands and the increase in the quantities of water together with the warming of the atmosphere is taking place in Spitzbergen.

The change of climate had its origin in the Arctic latitudes as they are becoming warmer with relatively warm winds of animals which were found there hitherto. The change in climate occurred in the Arctic region.

Hoboes Found Eager to Work

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The American hobo is on the uplift, according to John M. Kennedy, social service expert, who has just completed a hobo tour of 42 states.

The change which has taken place in the type of American hobo in the past few years, Kennedy found, is that virtually every man on the road at the present time is willing and eager to work if possible. The old time type, who sought only a handout and an easy existence, he said, virtually has disappeared.

Kennedy found that Southern California "bum blockade" is still as effective as the Maginot line of France. He tried to pass six times as a hobo, and finally in order to get back into the state and back to the starting point, was obliged to confess to officers who he was and what he was doing.

"Nevertheless," Kennedy said, "all over the country, from Maine to Florida and all through the industrial states where strikes and industrial troubles have thrown thousands out of work, there are other thousands idle employment and most of them are heading for California where they expect to find work in the ever succeeding seasonal employment that is offered by the different fruit and agricultural crops. They are not attracted by the climate, but by the conviction that California offers the best chance to get at least a little temporary seasonal work.

"Although the men on the road know how difficult it is to enter Southern California, they insist on trying, each one convinced he will

Breath Tester Shows Alcohol

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—Call it a "balloon test," "drunkometer," or breath tester, but results obtained from the device were admitted in evidence in Municipal Court here recently, despite vigorous protests.

The device, said by Dr. Rollo N. Harger, state toxicologist, to determine accurately the amount of alcohol in the body, was used to test the breath of two persons following an automobile accident in which both were injured and charged with driving while intoxicated.

It was the first time the invention had been used here, although it is understood to have been admitted in evidence in many other countries.

Dr. Harger testified that the breath of each was blown into a separate toy balloon. Then it was expelled into the "drunkometer," which contained a purple fluid. The fluid turned blue, which, the toxicologist said, was evidence that they had been drinking.

accused asserted the device was nothing more than a "balloon test," that the medical world does not recognize it as a competent test of intoxication.

Dr. Harger countered that it had the approval of a committee of members of the American Medical Association, that his research in several thousand tests had shown the apparatus to be accurate.

The doctor then offered to test Shaw, who readily accepted.

The attorney blew into the balloon, his breath was expelled into the "drunkometer" and the purple fluid remained the same. Shaw smiled and told Judge Floyd R. Mannon that he had three drinks of cognac and a glass of beer for lunch.

Dr. Harger said that may have been true but that a person's body burns two ounces of alcohol every three hours and the test thus was negative.

Beth Fined $5
Judge Mannon dismissed charges of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicants against the defendant, but he fined each $5 on the charge of drunkenness.

Nine "drunkometers" are in use in Indiana, according to Dr. Harger. He said that he has received requests to supply them to authorities outside the state. One of the breath testers was sent to the chief of police at Berkeley, Calif.

All patents on the device have been assigned to the Indiana University Foundation, he said.

Dr. Harger recommends that where the drunkometer shows that the person tested has one and one-half parts per 1,000 of alcohol or from 6 to 7 ounces of the liquid in his system, the person should be charged with drunkenness.

Doctor Outlines Diet for Red Nose

VIENNA (AP)—Sufferers from a red nose, don't despair! If your nose is not chinked or has acquired its high color by hard drinking — which latter, doctors say, is a rather rare case—you may be cured, according to Dr. Juvenal, writing in "Der Tag," by observing the following diet:

For two months concentrate on vegetables and fruit consuming only a minimum of fats and albumin.

During the following two months you may add milk and, perhaps, a little curd.

Thereafter, and this is your permanent diet, you may also eat lightly of meat and two eggs weekly. It is imperative that you abstain from animal fats, kitchen salt, smoked and preserved meats, pork, mutton coffee and tea. To quench your thirst use milk and fresh fruit juices.

DESDEMONA

By MRS. W. C. BEDFORD

Hen. Ed T. Cox of Eastland was among the hundreds who came Saturday to the Home-Coming celebration. In the afternoon he made an interesting address on pioneer days in Eastland county and also gave some statistics as to crops in early days and at the present time showing the effect of lack of soil conservation. On account of the large crowd and the fact that old friends were meeting old friends whom they had not seen for a long time, it was difficult for the speaker to make himself heard but he gave a splendid address.

Rushing who had gone there, with his mother came home with Mrs. Williams and after visiting with friends and relatives Saturday, he left that evening for his work at Lake Charles, Louisiana. Rev. and Mrs. Z. L. Howell and daughter, Miss Lois Howell, of Gordon, were among the large number who came to the Home-Coming Saturday. Rev. Howell was pastor of the Methodist church here from Nov. 1902 until Nov. 1934 and he and his family will always be welcome visitors here.

working at Freer the past few months spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Malby. Carl Robert came with Glenn and visited the Malby family and other friends. Not only their school-mates but their friends among the older people were delighted to see the two boys.

was voted to help buy an oil mop for the church. It was also stated that a new supply of Betty Brites had been received and were ready for sale.

A "bargain" is sometimes a bargain --

A good many people look on August as their lucky month --and we don't mean those who spend it lying on the sand and taking in salt air.

We mean those people who have formed the habit of buying things when other people aren't ... porch rugs and luggage and towels and lamps and all sorts of things, for use now and for use next season.

Of course they have learned that "bargains" are not always bargains. They know how to recognize quality and styles and worth, how to find the strong points and how to avoid weaknesses. And much of their knowledge has come from the advertisements in this newspaper.

All of us follow advertising, but some people study it so thoroughly that they know exactly what they want and where to get it. They are the ones who find the real bargains. Their money buys more things and better things—in August and all through the year.
