featured speaker. Members of the Chamber and the general public are encouraged to call the Chamber office, 442-2537, and make reservations. There will be no tickets sold at the door the night of the banquet.

EMMETT RICH

Emmett Rich Refiles For Cisco I.S.D. Board

Emmett L. Rich, incumbent school trustee, has filed for re-election to Place 7 on the Cisco Independent School District Board of Trustees. Mr. Rich is a lifelong resident of the school district. He and his wife, Martha, reside at 1012 West 16th Street, where they own and operate their own business.

Mr. and Mrs. Rich are the parents of two children, Mrs. Mary Bates of Cisco and Treca Rich, 7th grade student at Cisco Junior High School.

A formal statement will be issued by Mr. Rich at a later date.

Free Measles Immunization Shot Clinic To Be Thurs. A.M.

A free measles immunization shot clinic will be held at the Cisco High School Library Thursday morning beginning at 9:30. This clinic is sponsored by the Texas Department of Health with the cooperation of the Cisco Independent School District. It will be under the supervision of Dr. Rita Schlager, Cisco City Health Officer.

A nation wide epidemic of measles occurred in 1977 and 1978. There is evidence that another Texas measles epidemic may have begun. There are known epidemics in eight other states at this time. Many measles cases are occurring in the Junior High and High Schools of East Texas. Positive and vigorous steps should be taken to prevent a resurgence of measles in the state. The Texas Department of Health recommends immunization be received by the following:

(A) All who have not been immunized with live virus measles vaccine or cannot provide certification by a physician that they have been adequately immunized prior to that time.

(B) Those who were immunized against measles prior to the month which included their first birthday.

(C) In epidemic situation, it may be prudent to reimmunize any child originally immunized before 1970. All persons who cannot readily provide a documented history of measles or of vaccination with live measles virus vaccine when more than 12 months of age should be vaccinated.

Two-Car Accident Sends One Person To Abilene Hospital

A two car head-on accident occurred Thursday evening around 3:15 p.m. on Highway 380, north of Cisco, near the turn-off to Lake Bernie. At least one, and possibly two persons were hospitalized as a result of the accident, according to a spokesman for the Cisco Police Department.

John Thackerson formerly of Cisco, now living in Richmond, was the driver of the south-bound vehicle. James Pence of Cisco, was a passenger in Thackerson's car. According to Police Department spokesman, Thackerson was sent to an Abilene hospital (Wendrick Medical Center) where his condition was unknown Friday afternoon. The spokesman stated that the police report indicated that Pence may have also been hurt in the accident.

Tommy Smith of Cisco, was the driver of the north-bound vehicle and he suffered minor cuts and bruises.

The police spokesman said the reason for the wreck was unknown at the present time, but is still under investigation.

Local officers who worked the accident were Dennis Edwards and Mark Nichols.

Kenneth Payne Returns Home From 955 Square Miles Of County Patrol

By Mrs. Viola Payne (No Kin)

It is a crisp fall night in central Texas. Kenneth Payne, State Game Warden, has returned to his home in Eastland after a long patrol over some of his 955 square miles of Eastland County territory. The top-sided moon rising in the east shows that it is past midnight. Payne, dark-haired and personable, has an office in Eastland with the County Sheriff. But obviously that is only Home Base for his work- and his hours are far from regular. It is almost time for deer season to begin, and there are usually a few hunters who want to slip in ahead. A minority, of course, but a destructive minority, and it is Payne's job to control them.

As he relaxes at home and tries to get a little sleep, a pickup inches along a remote dirt road some miles away. Two men sit inside with loaded rifles, each finishing another can of beer. Suddenly one of them flips on an intense light, which probes into a grove of liveoaks where deer are resting. For these men are "Spotlighters", people who play the dangerous and illegal game of shooting animals from public roads. Fortunately a rancher happens to be up late, and sees the steady beam of light on a hill beyond the river. He, like most landowners, has a particular dislike for "Spotlighters", who occasionally shoot cows and horses. He runs to the telephone and calls the Eastland County Law Enforcement Dispatch, which crackles the message to Payne. Kenneth rouses-he can do on less sleep, people remark, than anyone they ever saw-and is soon back in his car. There is a chance he can catch the "Spotlighters", or at least get their license number. The element of surprise-that is what he has going for him. There ought to be a way, he reflects, to stop acts leading to such a confrontation. The landowners cooperate with him almost One Hundred Percent. But other people-some local, and some from as far away as Ft. Worth or Dallas or Midland-seem to think there is nothing criminal about breaking Game Laws. Who does it hurt, they say, if you kill a few extra deer or quail out of season? They think it is a sport to outwit the Game Warden and dodge that fine, which can run as high as two hundred dollars. They hardly stop to consider that the Warden has the same authority as a Sheriff or Highway Patrolman, and can arrest anyone in Texas for breaking the law. Most people, Payne reflects, who are careless about Game Laws have grown up around that same kind of attitude-that it is alright to destroy or disregard nature all you want to. So maybe the answer is to educate young people into a different set of ideas-into proper management and conservation of wild life. For management and conservation are very important parts of his job. But for now he has to get to a certain spot!

From such rides, and more leisurely ones where he gets to observe wild life instead of humans, Kenneth Payne has probably learned as much about the natural terrain of Eastland County as any living person. "I always liked the outdoors, even as a boy," he says. "I was born in Houston, but my family moved to Sanger, a small town north of Denton, when I was young. My father, Buck Payne, took me out hunting and fishing whenever he could."

After finishing High School, Kenneth decided to attend Texas A&M University and take a special course leading to Wildlife Management and the position of Game Warden. He was first stationed in Wichita Falls, but came to Eastland County in 1968 to replace Game Warden Maurice Dry, who retired. "We really have a good area here," he remarks. "It's attractive, and there's lots of variety. We have ranches, farms, and of course the rivers and creeks and hills. Unfortunately we don't have the live water on the rivers, which they do a little further south and east, but there's plenty of cover and food for animals if we get normal rainfall and the area is properly cared for."

Warden Payne arrested about 60 Game Law violators in Eastland County last year, most of them for deer hunting at night. But he also spent a lot of time on game Management, Conservation, observation and reporting on Wildlife, and watching for pollution which might endanger lakes and rivers. He was in charge of fishing and water safety at Eastland County lakes, and dealt with any problems involving wild life. (Such as when deer converge on peanut fields in dry weather, eating young plants.) He spoke to Clubs and school, informing people about Conservation.

The deer hunting season, which closed recently, was a "fair" one, according to Payne. In an average year 1200 to 1500 deer are killed in Eastland County, with many turkeys, quail, and dove. Coon, fox and bobcat furs are bringing such a high price that these animals are being killed rapidly. If bobcats continue to be killed at the current rate, Payne is afraid they may go on the "endangered species" list. "Bobcats do not reproduce as rapidly as some other animals," he says.

The Warden explains that during the past few years all game in this area has had to survive situations of more stress than usual. The weather has been drier than normal, leading to less food and cover. Oil development has accelerated, causing more roads and traffic. And the quota of hunters has increased at an alarming rate, overcrowding some of the leases. "This type of country, on the average, can never carry more than one hunter per 100 acres," Payne explains. "When you crowd a bunch of hunters in one given spot, they kill the animals down to where they cannot survive. There are more coyotes around now, and coyotes can kill fawns. So the deer are threatened from many ways."

And right now I am concerned about the doves, which are a rather fragile type of bird. We are having this split hunting season on them. They can't eat when their food is covered with ice, and they can't last over two or three days without anything to eat."

Payne is concerned about other matters, and it all adds up to something of a far-reaching scope, like the delicate balance between men and nature. "Some people seem to think only of today-how much money they can make and how they can spend it. But we are going to have to think of the future, if there is going to be any future, where wildlife is concerned. That's why I am on call 24 hours per day, and I urge anyone who wishes to report a Game Law violation to contact me through the Dispatch at any time."

I like to watch the animals to learn their habits. There was a lot in the books at A and M-but I have learned plenty from the rural people of Eastland County, and from observing. Someday there may be nothing of this kind to enjoy-if we don't take care of what we have."

Payne probably reflects on this most when he is out enjoying the "fringe benefits" of his job-out on the lonely roads in all sorts of weather. "Fringe benefits" like seeing a doe leap across a clearing, with her twin fawns gliding beside her, or a big covey of quail nestled in the brush. Moonlight and sunrise, rainstorm and sandstorm. He speaks of one of those times. "It was the opening of deer season in 1976. I started out that night, planning to check the roads until morning. A big snow storm blew in, and thinned the hunters out toward home-which might have been a good thing! By morning the snow piled up to six or eight inches. It was still, and quiet-and the prettiest I ever saw!"

Few of us get to enjoy such unusual moments of outdoor beauty. But all of us can help the Warden protect the natural resources we have left.

City Crews Work

On Major Water Leak

City water crews were busy north of Cisco Friday night on Highway 380 repairing a major water leak in one of the city's main 16-inch lines. The leak occurred near the turn-off to Country Club Ridge.

City crews had to dig a hole about 16-feet deep in the north-bound lane of the highway to reach the leaking pipe.

They began working on the situation early Friday afternoon and were still working at midnight.

will be no problem at all in registering anytime between now and January 26. Students should, however, register as soon as possible so that they will miss a minimum of class time.

Students may register at the main campus at Cisco, at the Clyde Educational Center, or at the Community College Center of Abilene at anytime during regular office hours of 8 a.m.-4 p.m. Also, students may register for classes in any of the locations at any of the three offices-Cisco, Clyde or Abilene.

More information may be obtained by contacting Odum at Cisco Jr. College at 817-442-2567.

Battle College Costs

Nearly every family budget today is stretched by college costs. The fact is the college finance picture is changing. It's true that most financial aid is now geared to those who can prove genuine need. But the rules are becoming more realistic about what actual need is and that means the middle income family will get a fairer shake.

Nevertheless, it takes solid information plus planning to assure a good college education with out wiping out the family savings. It is wise to do some sound planning about college funds well in advance.

Most colleges offer a wide variety of financial aid programs including various scholarships which have been made possible by friends and supporters of the University. For a list of this type scholarship consult the catalogue of the college or University you are most interested in.

Offered at most schools are the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant, and the Supplementary Educational Opportunity Grants. The Basic Educational Opportunity Grant is a Federal Grant program available to students who began their post high school education after April 1, 1973, and who are, or will be, enrolled on a fulltime basis. The eligibility of a student to receive a grant and the size of the grant are based upon the student's determined financial need. Applications are available from either the high school counselor or the financial aid office of the college you are considering.

Two programs of part-time student employment are available. The Federal Work Study Program is financed through the Higher Education Act of 1965, and provides financial assistance for qualified students who can demonstrate their need for employment. The College Work Duty program provides work opportunities for qualified students.

Under either of the programs, students are paid in accordance with current minimum wage laws. Employment is available in College offices, library, household department, maintenance, dormitories and dining room.

College financial aid directors say that where there is a will there is a way to finance a college education.

Library News

By Norma Duncan
This week the library received twenty-four paperback books, donated by Mrs. Buelah Simpson. A few of these books are The Changing Years, The Storm Within, and The Spanish Inheritance.

Also, Mrs. Cleveland donated fifteen books to the library. These include Chaucers Major Poetry, Literature of England, Alice In Wonderland, Shakespears Complete Works, and The American Red Cross First Aid Textbook. The library wishes to express its gratitude to these ladies for the new books.

Students should return all books checked out during the holidays. No fines were charged for books due from December 22 until January 12. Students were allowed extra days to return books with no fines assessed due to the school being closed because of weather.

The Dietz Entertain

Friday, January 5, Cisco High School was honored to have the Dietz Brothers and Don Wallace, a singing duo to present an all school program. The Dietz Brothers are from Amarillo and have been singing since they were eight years old. Don Wallace, piano accompanist is from Phoenix, Arizona and he also performed solos. The Dietz Brothers sang a variety of songs including "Annie's Song", and "Give Them All".

The Dietz brothers came to Cisco for the purpose of entertaining at the First Baptist Church retreat. They also performed a concert there Sunday night.

If we treat people too long with that pretended liking called politeness, we shall find it hard not to like them in the end.

People who fly into a rage always make a bad landing.

Before you flare up at anyone's faults, take time to count ten of your own.

Red Cross is counting on you -to help.

The Now Washbasket By Steffie Miller

Homemade bread, antique furniture, home-grown vegetables. These are some of the elements that make up the current nostalgia craze. The use of natural fibers also plays an important role in this trend and for the coming holidays many dining tables will be decorated with heirloom china and as a final touch - a linen tablecloth.

Linen is one of the oldest fibers of the western world. Its texture, strength and slow-to-soil characteristics make it an ideal fiber for tablecloths. Linen responds best to laundering in hot water and detergent. However, experts advise against the use of chlorine bleach because it can weaken the fibers - thus shortening the useful life of the cloth. Instead they recommend using a bleach substitute like Borateem Plus. It brightens and whitens washable fabrics and helps remove stains without harming colors, fibers or finishes. Package directions say to add 1 cup of Borateem Plus along with detergent to each washload. Stains should be pre-treated by rubbing a paste of the product into the stain, waiting 10 minutes and then laundering. There is a free booklet that tells more about this product and you can get one by writing to: Borateem Laundry Booklet, P.O. Box 75128, Sanford Station, Los Angeles, CA 90075

Texas Arbor Day To Be Jan. 19

Texas Arbor Day, the day traditionally set aside to plant trees, will be observed this year on Jan. 19.

"What better way to aid in preserving our environment than by planting a tree adapted to our area of this great state," emphasizes Everett Janne, landscape horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Arbor Day was once a special event in the lives of

Hints For The Aged

By Patricia Galbreath
Dear Pat-I have always been interested in writing and would like to do it for profit. Because I am disabled and spend most of my time at home with nothing but the T.V. for company, I think I could do a good job.

Can you give me some writing tips and how to sell what I write?—M.V. Florida
Dear Mr. V.—One of the best sources of information for beginning writers is the Writer's Digest Guide. This is a monthly publication and is sold in local bookstores (most libraries will also carry it). It contains information on where and how beginning writers can sell their material. Its annual directory, the "Writer's Market" lists over 4,000 places to sell articles, stories, books, plays, poetry, photographs, jokes, etc. Both are well worth the inexpensive purchase price.

Writing can be fun and profitable—but slow. When beginning you will probably receive more rejection slips than acceptances but don't be discouraged. Bone up a little more on the art of writing. If you can't afford a correspondence course in writing or are unable to attend college classes, I suggest learning what you can at the library. There are a number of good books that have been written about the art of writing.

Check your local bookstores for writing instruction and information such as "Writing and selling nonfiction", "Writing the Magazine Article," etc. Today as much as 75 percent of a magazine is devoted to feature articles and you have hundreds of markets from which to choose. Subjects can range from pottery making to automobile repair. So lean back, think awhile, and start writing.

A writer has the advantage of working when he wants to, as much as he wants to, and where he wants to. As long as he doesn't have a deadline, and only wants or needs to work occasionally. However, to be a successful, full-time and well-paid writer, you have to put forth time, effort, and concentration.

A beginner should first realize that "pulling a story from thin air" will only generate enough rejection slips to paper your walls. A basic requirement is that you be familiar with the subject about which you are writing. This can be through your own personal background or through sound research.

The unusual is what the editors want. Something new and exciting, a new way to do something, a new place to go, a new way to build something. "How to" articles are very good sellers. If you have the skill, had the skill, or can research the skill, editors will probably be interested if it is well written.

Good points to keep in mind: a good black and white photo helps illustrate your story; after receiving a rejection slip, read over your story and if you are still satisfied, send it to another source use good quality paper, double space, type, be neat, use wide margins, a dark ribbon, title every page, make a carbon copy, mail your article unfolded, enclose another self-addressed, stamped envelope in which your material can be returned if it is not accepted.

Now, while you are waiting to hear the results, spend your time wisely. Go on to other things, keep busy, and start on another story. After all, that's what writers do.—PAT many Texas citizens. In many communities, the trees that are so admired today are the direct result of the labor and attention given so readily by children and interested adults of by-gone generations, notes Janne.

"In recent years, much has been written about the value of trees for purposes other than to provide lumber and shade. Research reports indicate that tree barriers can reduce noise levels as much as 50 percent. They also serve as giant air cleaners filtering out the dust as well as using the carbon dioxide in the air to produce the lumber and shade we need," says Janne.

Good Seedbed Critical When Planting Coastal

A good seedbed is most critical when planting Coastal. Seedbeds covered with debris such as limbs, roots, and stumps make it hard to plant the sprigs properly. Generally, this material accumulates on the machines sweeps, disks, and drag. When this happens the sprigs are not covered correctly and dry-out quickly.

The process of brush control and grass seeding is simplified if a landowner wishes to maintain the land in a rangeland condition (no fertilizer or weed control) rather than pastureland. Following brush removal rangeland can be plowed with a Hiway tandem pulled by a dozer. Grass seed can be blown onto the rough cloddy seedbed during the plowing operation.

Grasses normally seeded on rangeland include mixtures of K.R. Bluestem, Sideoats grama, Indiangrass, Little bluestem, and Kleingrass.

These grasses can be planted starting in December. Covering the seed is no problem. Nature will take care of that with the first heavy rain.

The above picture shows dense oak being controlled on a deep sand site on the Skeet Walker ranch located about 5 mi. west of Union Center. The area is to be planted to Coastal and Lovegrass this spring.

before grass planting begins. An early start is most important on land to be planted to improve pasture grasses such as Coastal, Kleingrass, or Lovegrass. On this type land the seedbed must be clean, smooth, and firm. This takes time and therefore should be started far in advance of grass planting.

GORDON SPOT
by DeMarquis Gordon

The ice storm and freezing weather caused damage to some trees in Eastland County last week. With careful pruning and good cultural practices, damaged plants will generally recover.

The first step in caring for ice damaged trees is to survey the damage and plan corrective pruning. Remove damaged limbs at the point of origin or just above a good side branch. Do not allow stubs to remain unless absolutely necessary.

When extremely severe damage makes it necessary to stub back a branch or main trunk, paint the wound with good tree wound dressing available at any nursery. Orange shellac makes a good temporary dressing. Continual pruning and attention will be necessary to keep down sucker growth at the end of the stub.

If a truck or main branch has split due to ice accumulation, remove the Ranger Junior College has announced the Spring, 1979, registration schedule of classes. Registration for day and evening courses can be completed on campus during the day from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Monday, January 15, 1979. Classes begin at 8:00 a.m. Tuesday, January 16, 1979. A special registration for evening courses at Ranger Junior College has been set for Monday and Tuesday nights, January 15, and 16, 1979, from 7:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. For further information concerning the courses to be offered, please contact the registrar at 817-647-3234.

portion of the trunk that has broken away. Cables and bolts may be used to pull the damaged trunk together. This sometimes requires a professional tree man for satisfactory results.

When a broken limb has pulled loose along the side of a trunk, smooth the torn area with a sharp knife or chisel and paint all exposed cuts with tree wound dressing.

We hope we do not any more ice on sidewalks, streets and driveways. But, if we do, use extreme caution when applying common salt to melt the ice.

The salt may injure nearby trees, shrubs and other growing plants. As ice and snow melts, the water may drain into the lawn area, carrying the salt into the root zone of nearby plants. Visible effects of the salt injury may not appear until early summer as hot dry weather approaches. Tree damage may vary from marginal burning of the leaves, complete browning and death of the leaves, or, in extreme cases, loss of a prize tree or shrub.

One material that you might consider using is ammonium nitrate, especially where drainage moves the water into lawn and shrub borders. This will fertilize the plants as well as melt the ice. If ammonium nitrate isn't available, any commercial fertilizer high in nitrogen and potassium may be used. Use only enough material to melt the ice since continued use over a long period can also damage plants.

Sand can be used on icy walks and drives to provide better traction.

So, before using salt on drives and walkways, check the drainage pattern to make sure its use will not damage valuable plants. A little caution at the time of application can prevent damage to valuable landscape trees.

C.T.O. Family Planning Clinic will be held on the 18th of January from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Money Market CD's Offer Boost To Consumers In '79

The new six-month Money Market Certificates are expected to continue to be offered at rates anticipated to be higher than 10 percent for a good portion of 1979," according to D. D. McClatchy, President and Chief Executive Officer of Olney Savings Association.

This exciting news offers the Olney Savings customer the highest savings rates ever. And, at the same time helps prevent a repeat of the 1974-75 slump in housing starts when savings and loan associations had little money to finance mortgages," he explained.

Olney Savings began offering the Money Market Certificates in late 1978. "Since that time, we, savings and loans, have offered a higher yield of 1/4 of a percent point above the 26 week Treasury Bills."

He continued, "For the

Consumers Can Reduce Home Energy Consumption

Consumers can reduce home energy consumption according to a new letter series on saving home energy being offered not to Eastland County residents by the County Extension service and the Eastland Family Living Committee.

"As much as 30-50 percent utility reduction can be realized by carrying out a complete project on a poorly or partially weatherized home -- and this letter series tells how," Mrs. Janet Thomas, Eastland County Extension Agent, said.

"This letter series discussed the energy situation, insulation, ventilation and moisture control, caulking and weatherstripping, treatment of windows and other glass areas and heating and cooling," she said.

The series, Save Home Energy, is available from Mrs. Thomas by writing P.O. Box 189, Eastland or phoning 629-2222.

"The letters -- mailed weekly -- will discuss selection, installation and maintenance of each topic and features products that will reduce utility consumption while increasing personal comfort," the agent added. The letter series will begin the week of January 29th.

consumer interested in high-yield short-term investments, the Money Market Certificate has definite advantages. It's easy to obtain, minimum $10,000. You know the rate of return on your investment in advance. (Rates on the Money Market Certificates are based upon weekly U. S. Treasury Bill Auctions in Washington, D. C.) And your money is insured up to $40,000 by an agency of the U. S. Government."

Olney Savings certificates pay from date of deposit to date of maturity and require a reduction in interest to withdraw before maturity.

Olney Savings is a $158 million dollar savings and loan with branch offices in Seymour, Jacksboro, Bridgeport, Nocona, Weatherford and Azle. Also, Ranger Savings in Ranger, Eastland Savings in Eastland and Electra Savings in Electra, all divisions of Olney Savings.

Keeping Well

By I. Care, M.D.

ANEMIA
Anemia is a condition in which the patient either has too few red blood cells circulating in his blood or has a decrease in the iron pigment (hemoglobin) of the red blood cells. Anemia can cause many symptoms such as weakness, dizziness, roaring in the ears, drowsiness, fainting spells, and easy fatigability. People often joke about "tired blood", but nothing can make a person feel more tired and exhausted than anemia. A red blood cell has a life span of approximately one hundred and twenty days in our bodies. Old red cells are destroyed daily and new red cells must be formed in the bone marrow to maintain a normal red cell count. The most common type of anemia is that caused by rapid blood loss such as an injury to a major blood vessel, a severe nose bleed, a bleeding peptic ulcer, hemorrhage following a miscarriage, or a ruptured aneurysm. Faintness, thirst, sweating, a weak, rapid pulse and a falling blood pressure are dramatic symptoms of this sudden anemia. The cause of this blood loss must be stopped and the blood replaced by transfusion to treat this anemia.

Less dramatic but just as important is the anemia caused by a slow, chronic loss of red blood cells. This can develop over a period of weeks or months due to an ulcer that bleeds slowly, due to heavy menstrual flow month after month or even due to hemorrhoids that bleed some each day. The anemia of these conditions can be cured by stopping the excess blood loss and giving blood or if the anemia is not severe by giving iron preparations to help the body rebuild its red blood cell supply.

Some anemias are due to blood destruction either by toxic chemicals or by some unusual condition in the body (hypersplenism, RH sensitization, snake bites, and hereditary disorders). Pernicious anemia is caused by some deficient factor in gastric juice and is treated by vitamin B12 injections. Other anemias can be caused by chronic infections in the body, by kidney failure, by cancer or certain diseases that crowd out the bone marrow which normally makes the red blood cells. Since anemia can be caused by so many different things, it is especially important to let your doctor diagnose the type of anemia and to prescribe the correct treatment. Most cases of anemia can be successfully treated.

Inflation: How to Live With It How to Solve It

An interview with DuPont's chief
Economist,
Dr. Charles B. Reeder

...What's the outlook for inflation into the 1980's?

No one can be certain, but I can't see the inflation rate falling much below 6 percent a year about as far ahead as you can reasonably forecast. There are a lot of built-in cost and price raising forces at work, and there's also reluctance in Washington to deal with the fundamental cause of inflation, large Federal deficits. So it appears we're going to have to live with a lot more inflation than we used to think was normal or acceptable.

Because of the pressures at work, the underlying inflation rate could gradually escalate in the 80's, but I don't anticipate double-digit or runaway inflation.

Can we live with a 6 percent rate of inflation?

We may have no choice, at least for a while. But there's a terrible cost associated with inflation. It creates inequities and antagonisms in society—some groups are squeezed severely while others enjoy windfall gains. Inflation discourages saving and encourages borrowing; speculation increases while investment lags; economic growth slows down; unemployment is higher; the role and size of government expand and so on.

Still, other countries manage to live with even higher inflation rates. Institutions can adjust. Economic activity doesn't stop altogether because of inflation.

How do we adjust to inflation? Are you referring to some form of indexing?

Yes, this is one way to adjust, although not a very satisfactory way. There is no system of indexing that could be fair to all groups, and complete indexing probably would tend to perpetuate inflation—if everyone felt protected from inflation, no one would be concerned about the basic causes.

However, one area where indexing could help is the relationship between taxpayers and the government. As it is now, with inflation, the Federal income tax structure shifts income from the private sector to the public sector because of the higher tax rates that apply to inflated incomes. In effect, this is an unlegislated tax increase. Indexing personal tax rates, capital gains and depreciation would maintain a better balance between the private and public sectors—would leave more income in the private sector for spending or saving.

To what extent have energy prices been a factor in inflation, and what's the outlook now?

The quantum price jump in 1974 certainly was a major factor in the speedup of inflation that followed, but that price rise had to be accommodated by domestic monetary policies or it could not have persisted. Now there's a glut in the world oil supply which is likely to be around for a long time. This suggests to me that world-wide oil prices will not be going up as much as many have expected—if they rise at all.

U.S. Oil prices are below world prices because of controls, so they are likely to rise further, under either existing or new legislation. This will add a little something to our inflation rate over the next several years, but I don't see it as a major factor.

What hope, if any, do you see for the value of the dollar abroad?

One reason the external value of the dollar is down is that we have been running large trade deficits, partly due to oil imports but also because we have been growing faster than other countries. As a result, other countries have accumulated more dollars than they need, and as they have shifted some of these dollars into other currencies, the value of the dollar has dropped.

When the dollar falls, it adds to our internal inflation rate by boosting the price of imported goods and also prices of competing U.S.

goods. However, a cheaper dollar also means lower prices for U.S. goods in other markets. These price shifts could lead to a smaller trade deficit next year, which could cause the dollar to strengthen.

But these are short-term swings. We need to follow sound domestic economic policies to keep the dollar strong over the longer term.

You said the fundamental cause of our inflation is Federal deficits. It's not really that simple, is it?

The process is not simple, but the facts are true. Inflation results from having too much money in the system in relation to the amount of goods. This reduces the value of money, which is another way of saying that prices must rise.

The "excess" money comes into existence primarily when the government spends more than it is taking in. The government doesn't literally print the new money, but the equivalent takes place as credit is expanded by the banking system, under the control of the Federal Reserve Board. When money is created to finance government deficits, it usually is not matched by increased production of goods or services. This is the key to inflation. We are trying to take more out of the economy than is being put in.

There are other factors that can push up prices—wage rates that outstrip productivity growth, government regulations that add to manufacturing costs, crop failures, etc. Whenever cost and price raising factors such as these are "validated" by the creation of more money, they keep the inflation spiral going.

Can the Federal deficits be reduced?

If we ever expect to control inflation, they must be reduced. There's really no alternative. There are several ways to accomplish this: cut spending, raise taxes, or hold down the growth of spending and let the faster growth of revenues reduce the deficit.

For far too many years Congress and the Administration have been reluctant to hold down spending or to increase taxes, other than by fostering inflation. Inflation cannot be licked without somebody giving up something. The present sentiment for tax cuts without a cut in spending doesn't involve a sacrifice for anyone. It will simply add to inflation.

What about wage and price controls as a solution to inflation?

There is no way they can be effective because they only deal with the superficial evidence of inflation. They don't touch the basic cause. Inflationary pressures continue to build up even with controls, and have to be accommodated eventually. It's incredible that controls should even be considered after the disastrous experience of only a few years ago—two freezes, Phases 1, 2, 3 and 4, a Price Commission, a Pay Board, a Committee on Interest and Dividends, rollbacks, ceilings and in the end, shortages and double-digit inflation.

What's the solution?

There obviously is no quick or easy answer to such a deep-seated problem. A major part of the answer has just got to be to trim the growth of government spending. As long as the Federal government incurs annual deficits of $40 billion to $50 billion, there's little chance of bringing the inflation rate down. In this case, we know what to do but have not yet demonstrated the will to do it.

Some might argue that reduced deficits would mean slower economic growth, but this may not be a serious problem. Our basic rate of economic growth reflects underlying labor force and productivity trends, and these will yield annual growth in real terms of only around 3 percent in the 1980's. There simply is no way we can achieve a permanently higher growth rate, regardless of what people may want.

Will the public accept slower growth?

If, over the longer term, the system can produce only 3 percent real growth, that is what we will have to accept. The question is, how can we best adjust to a 3 percent rate of growth? It would be far better, in my judgment, to grow steadily at a more moderate rate than to have periodic bursts of rapid growth followed by inflation and recessions.

A goal of slower growth may not seem to be politically popular, but there's lots of wisdom and common sense among the American people. I think they recognize that maybe we can't grow indefinitely at faster and faster rates, that maybe we don't have unlimited resources, and that maybe we should live within our income and have less inflation.

I think the American people understand these realities better than some politicians. I would like to see such an appeal made.

Arsonists Beware: Arson Now On FBI Crime Reporting List

"Arson is a crime that costs an estimated $2 billion annually in property losses, plus 1,000 lives and 10,000 injuries," said Senator John Glenn (D., Ohio).

Recently the Federal Government took a major step toward combating arson when President Carter signed a bill on October 10 classifying arson as a major crime.

"Senators John Glenn and Charles Percy (R., Ill.) should be commended on their nearly two year effort to have arson reclassified," said Ralph Jackson, Allstate Insurance Company loss prevention manager.

The bill moving arson to major crime status means several things. The FBI will now list arson as a major crime for the purpose of the FBI Uniform Crime Reporting Statistics that are released quarterly. Prior to the passage of this bill, arson was classified as a crime against property — or a Part II crime rather than the violent Part I crime it is. "Formerly, it was ranked somewhere between vandalism and shoplifting. Consequently, the reporting and investigation of arson got low priority. That classification also inhibited investigation, prosecution and funding for training personnel to combat arson," said Jackson.

Adding arson to the FBI's serious crime reporting list will focus national attention on the problem giving it higher priority for police and fire departments. It also means more reliable and uniform statistics will be available, thus revealing the true scope of the crime in the United States.

However, more needs to be done according to Jackson.

"Reclassifying arson is an important step, but just one of many that must be taken to combat this crime. Another area of concern is the historical debate between fire and police officials about responsibility for arson investigation. Fire fighters are seldom trained in law enforcement work. On the other hand, police departments often lack experience in arson detection and are overloaded with other crime investigations," he said. "As a result, police are reluctant to touch a crime where evidence is so difficult to obtain and where only about nine out of every 100 cases result in an arrest. Only two of these nine are convicted and less than one percent of these ever spend

By Five To One, People Believe The Health System Give More Emphasis To Preventive Than To Curative Medicine

As people get caught up in the given-and-take of the health care debate, their views about doctors, hospitals, drug companies and disease itself will undergo subtle changes.

time in prison.

"Now that the new arson bill has been signed into law, police and fire departments need to upgrade the arson training of their employees as well as cooperate in building better communication with each other."

Insurance companies, too, are looking at ways to control arson. Studies estimate that insurance losses due to arson exceed $2 billion annually. An increasing number of insurance companies are successfully refusing to pay suspicious fire claims, regardless of the expense and vulnerability to punitive damage. These companies are convinced that a major factor in reducing arson losses is to get tougher with suspicious claims and show that insurance fraud is no longer a low-risk money maker.

In order to successfully remove arson expenses from insurance costs, some companies, such as Allstate, have formed cooperative relationships with a growing number of individuals and agencies concerned with arson. Anti-arson committees composed of fire fighters, police, prosecutors, state fire marshalls and insurance industry representatives have formed in 22 states. These groups seek to share information on arson and to develop solutions to the problem.

"Only cooperation among these groups, along with increased training of fire and police departments and local legislation can effectively combat this rapidly spreading crime," concluded Jackson.

Already, there has been a shift in perception about the nature of health and illness. By five to one, people believe that the health system should give more emphasis to preventive than to curative medicine.

It is also clear that increasing numbers of Americans are taking the responsibility for maintaining their health into their own hands. What often seems like a series of fads—jogging, natural foods, yoga—may really signal a fundamental shift in how the public thinks about health. The effect of this on public policy will be profound.

Race Relations

One hesitates to say anything about the prospects for blacks and other minorities in the 1980's for fear of sounding either provocative or complacent. It can be argued that the forces which have been put into play are strong and steady enough to move minorities into the mainstream of American life and to satisfy their passion for equality and progress within a reasonable span of time.

Perhaps. The statistics on housing, jobs, income and education point every which way, depending on one's point of view. Yet there are good reasons to believe that the country will have to make another very special effort to help minorities during the next decade. This may be triggered by another surge of black protest, or by a political judgement about the importance of minority votes, or by the simple understanding that it is just not tolerable to have a situation in which so many Americans feel so profoundly alienated from the society about them.

In a recent study, people were asked if they tend to have the feeling that "You're left out of things going on around you." Sixty-nine percent of whites say no; 59 percent of blacks say yes.

The Experience Of Vietnam Has Left The Country With An Acute Sense Of The Limits Of Its Power

Business and the Public The 1970's saw a precipitous drop in the public's confidence in major American corporations. It also saw a comparable decline in public confidence in almost every other institution—the White House, Congress and labor included.

The target of the public spleen was not business in general, and certainly not the American economic system. It was big business and many of its characteristics. People were disturbed by what they conceive as the bigness, secrecy, power and self-interest of some major companies, and they saw much of this as a kind of corporate arrogance. More particularly, they were dismayed by the revelations about bribes and payoffs abroad and shocked by illegal political contributions by business at home. To this day, the public remains categorically moral in its disapproval of so-called dubious corporate practices.

There is reason to believe that the phase of acute public displeasure with big business has run its course, although an improvement in the confidence rating of major corporations probably will have to wait for an improvement in the confidence rating of govern-public, without any great hope that this will change any views. What the public wants from business is some sense that it is accountable for the great power it wields. That, plus products and services that are good value for the money.

This notion of value may turn out to be a major theme in the 1980's. It is at the heart of the consumer movement, which is anti-business, anti-government and anti-labor all together. It is at the heart of people's distrust of the vast government bureaucracies which they see mushrooming around them and which seem to deliver insufficient value for the tax dollars that support them. It was at the heart of Proposition 13, which was a brutal message to big government to make its services more effective.

American's Role World

The experience of Vietnam has left the country with an acute sense of the limits of its power. In the few years since the end of the war this feeling has been reinforced in many different ways; by a growing awareness that Russia may have achieved strategic military parity with the U.S.; by the decline in the value of the dollar and a chronically unfavorable balance of trade; by the complexity of the Middle East situation which, despite the breakthrough in the Camp David summit, is far from being resolved. Domestically, the problem has been compounded by the increasing strength of Congress as a factor in main foreign policy.

In many ways the thinking of the American people reflects the contradictions that have been generated by this new phase in American's foreign relations. For example, though highly critical of Russia's treatment of its dissidents and of its involvement in Africa, the public is still deeply committed to the idea of detente and the constipation of SALT.

Comparable contradictions can be found in almost every sphere. Some may argue that this shows the confusion of the public on these matters. But a more encouraging view is that it is the sign of a new realism, of an awareness of how knotty and complex is the texture of foreign relations. Whether this will remain a pertinent strain in the public's thinking remains to be seen. Attitudes toward the world, as toward most of the other issues discussed here, can be changed abruptly by domestic politics, and the next presidential election is only two years off.

But here the signs are really cloudy, and I don't think even Sir Alec would hazard a prediction.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK
By Armo Chambers

An amusing example of changing times is seen in the PARTIAL guide line of requirements and restrictions for teachers in Franklin, Massachusetts in 1870.

Men teachers may take one night each week for courting purposes or two evenings a week if they go to church regularly. After school, the teacher must spend the time until supper reading the Bible and other good books. Women teachers who marry or engage in unseemly conduct will be discharged. Every teacher should lay aside from each month's pay a goodly sum, for his benefit during his declining years so that he will not become a burden on society. Any teacher who smokes, uses liquor in any form, frequents pool halls, or gets shaved in a barber shop, will give good reason to suspect his worth, integrity and honesty. The teacher who performs his duties regularly and faithfully, and without fault for five years, will be given an increase of 25 cents a week in his pay, providing the Board of Education approves.

(P.S.-There was no shortage of teachers!)

IT'S OFFICIAL that Cisco has a new eye doctor. He is Dr. Grover Stewart Cleveland, 27-year old nephew of Dr. C.M. Cleveland, and he is associated with his uncle at the C&B Clinic, 602 Avenue E. As soon as a new office is completed and equipment is installed there'll be a formal announcement.

Young Dr. Cleveland is the son of Grover Cleveland retired Naval Aviator who lives in Florida. He is a graduate of Texas A&M University and of Southern College of Optometry, Memphis, Tenn. He came here last spring after graduation and spent a few months working with Dr. C.M.C. Then, young Dr. Cleveland looked in Florida and East Texas and around and decided Cisco would be a good place to live and work.

The young doctor will be married on January 27th to a young lady who lives over in Mississippi. Our society department will see about a picture of the young lady and full details.

Young Dr. Cleveland's dad grew up here, as you know, and they've been frequent visitors over the years.

GUESS THERE'S nothing like a home fire to cause you to lose things that money couldn't replace. Recently, the Lamar Elton family home at 401 Front St. was destroyed by a blaze that broke out around 4 a.m. on an icy night.

Understand the family, including two of the three Elton children, were visiting over in the Big D country. Their son was awakened by the noise of breaking glass. He grabbed his shotgun and opened the door of his room to be greeted by smoke and fire.

Firemen think the blaze started in the area of a central air and heating unit in the ceiling. Firemen were delayed in hooking up to fight the fire by frozen hydrants. It was about 10 degrees that night.

The Eltons lived at Jammie's Motel for a time after the blaze. Understand they're now in a mobile home. Mr. Elton heads up Sharton, Inc., an oil service company, and is also connected with Search Drilling Company here. He is a former pro football player.

THE CITY OF Cisco has a new meter maid -- the first woman member of the police department. She is Mrs. Caffie Abbe, and she and her husband, who works for Russell-Newman Co., have three sons. They came here recently from San Angelo.

Mrs. Abbe's job is to patrol streets and see about cars parked at meters with red flags. This is her first job as a traffic control worker. She thinks she'll like it better when the weather gets a big warmer and streets less icy.

THE J.C. Fletchers got home Tuesday night after a Christmas holiday season vacation in California with their daughter and family, the Bob Lloyds. They were sorry to miss a lot of cold and icy weather, he told us with tongue in cheek...Karen and Keith Bailey have purchased the home of Mrs. Jay Warren at 704 West 5th Street, reports Realtor Carl Gorr.

What is more, they've moved in. Mr. B works for the Comanche County REA in this area and his wife is a teller at the First National Bank...Mail Man V.B. It was a nice trip and very interesting and educational, they report...The Ralph Glens saw plenty of ice and snow and temperatures below zero during a holiday season visit with relatives up in Idaho...

Understand the family, including two of the three Elton children, were visiting over in the Big D country. Their son was awakened by the noise of breaking glass. He grabbed his shotgun and opened the door of his room to be greeted by smoke and fire.

Firemen think the blaze started in the area of a central air and heating unit in the ceiling. Firemen were delayed in hooking up to fight the fire by frozen hydrants. It was about 10 degrees that night.

The Eltons lived at Jammie's Motel for a time

Cisco Rotarians cancelled their weekly luncheon last Thursday noon. Guess it was too icy.

Under each of these there will be sub-committees assigned specific projects.

Each of the four goals was discussed at length. A motion was made by Roy Dennis and seconded by Gerald Winnett that the four goals be approved as the program of work for 1979 passed unanimously.

Senior Citizens Nutrition Menu

One Senior Citizens said "It was just like getting out of jail by getting to come down to the center, Friday." The individual had reference to having to stay indoors due to the bad weather, and as he continued to say, "I missed seeing all of my friends."

The weather since January 1 has been very bad for older people to be outside. But the past week the Senior Citizens Center was open twice and those who came enjoyed themselves.

The Center is nearing completion and the kitchen is now being used. Several minor things are to be done and the program will be able to give more attention to other activities.

Mrs. Ruth Cartee, director, has announced the weeks menus:

Monday: Luncheon steak, potatoes au gratin, spinach, peach cobbler, bread and drink.

Wednesday: Meat loaf with cheese, creamed potatoes, green beans, fruit pudding, bread and drink.

Friday: chicken and dressing, french style beans, pears, cake squares, bread and drink.

Winnett, Joe Wheatley, Eddie McMillan, Roy Dennis, Elaine Dixon, Billy Wright Jr., Dean Madison and manager Gene Abbott.
