Help Cisco Look Great For '88

"Cisco, Looking Great For '88" is the theme of the Cisco Chamber of Commerce for 1988, and Don Shepard, CofC manager, has urged citizens to help make Cisco look great for '88.
The Cisco Folklife Festival, with its many out of town visitors, will be held later this month, and Mr. Shepard urged residents and local businessmen to clean up and fix up. "We want the downtown area to stand out during this time. We encourage businesses downtown to decorate windows or have decorative paintings on windows for the festival."

Shepard said, "The City of Cisco just completed the annual Spring Clean-Up campaign and we are pleased with the cooperation received from the citizens. Now we must clean sidewalks, streets and alleys downtown to prepare for the parade and Folklife Festival."

Cisco Blood Drive To Be Held At Hospital April 12

The chance to restore health to a neighbor or even save a life is being offered to Cisconians during the Graham Memorial Hospital blood drive April 12.
Those wishing to donate blood may do so by calling for an appointment on that day. The hospital's number is 442-3951.

Bill Musser, lab and x-ray director at the hospital, said the blood donations make it possible for the hospital not to charge its patients for blood they receive while confined there.
Blood donated by Cisconians is used to replace blood from the blood bank so Graham's patients do not pay for blood they receive. At present, Cisco owes the blood bank about 60 units. Part of this shortage stems from not having been able to hold a drive last fall because of scheduling problems, Musser said.

Scholarship Applications Being Accepted

Cisco Service Club is now accepting applications for its annual Sue Witzsche Memorial Scholarship to Cisco Junior College.
Application forms may be obtained at Cisco High School, Cisco Junior College and Dean Drug. Deadline for applications is Saturday, April 30.
Any young lady who lives in Cisco and who has been a resident for one year or longer is eligible to apply for the scholarship.

need not fear transmission of diseases such as AIDS because these are not passed on to donors. A donor's blood is screened, however, to rule out the possibility of transmitting disease to those who require transfusions.
It is his custom, Musser said, to "be the first one on the list" whenever he oversees a blood drive. He encouraged others to add their name to the list and join him in this worthwhile cause.

He indicated he would very much like to see Cisco's donations rise to a number that would allow credit to be issued to Cisconians who must use out-of-town hospitals in Abilene or Fort Worth. This would save these citizens a lot of money, he said.
However, for now the hospital must concentrate on making up the deficit and providing enough blood for the benefit of its own patients.
The total donation time should not exceed 45 minutes, he said. Donors

Parents For Teens is sponsoring a prom following the Junior Senior Banquet on Saturday, April 9, at the Country Club. Cisco Literary Festival Called "The Best"

The world of writing and publishing beat a path to Cisco's door March 24-25 when the Texas Circuit brought a Literary Festival to the Hilton Center.
Dr. Monte Lewis, General Editor of the "Cross Timbers Review", hosted the event. He was assisted by others from Cisco Junior College - Dr. Ken Hammes, Fiction Editor of the "Cross Timbers", Dr. Cleatus Rattan, Poetry Editor, Judy Callerman, English Instructor, and members of Phi Theta Cappa. The Cisco Writer's Club also helped with various parts of the meeting.
During the Festival Peter Mortimer, British publisher and author, described it this way: "Cisco is the smallest town we have been to, yet here we have the best attendance, the warmest people, and the best sales of anywhere!"
Mortimer, like others of the Austin-based Texas Circuit, was involved in a series of programs across the state. The purpose of each Festival was for publishers and writers to exchange information, study material, and learn of current needs in publishing.
Other notables with Mortimer at Cisco were Elmer Keaton of San Angelo, author of 27 books about the west, Dr. Paul Ruffin, poet and Editor of the "Texas Review", Ertha Coalsen, Austin poet Loris Essary, Austin publisher and author, C.A. Wiles, Austin Editor and Chairman of the Texas Circuit Board, and representatives of the Fort Concho Museum Press, San Angelo.

These included Dr. Terry Dalrymple, English professor, author, and Editor of the "Concho River Review", Wayne Daniel, Librarian/Archivist of the Fort Concho Museum, and Cora Pugmire, Assistant Director of the Museum.
Lela Latch Lloyd registered guests, assisted by Brenda Black. More than 50 came out for the Friday afternoon program and barbeque dinner. Seventy attended the readings that evening, with about the same number out for the Book Fair and program Saturday morning.
At 1 p.m. Friday Dr. Monte Lewis welcomed the crowd, and introduced C.A. Wiles, Moderator of the programs. Wiles encouraged writers to try the avant garde (experimental) forms of writing. He pointed out some of this material on a display table, and also told about books and other material displayed by the Texas Circuit members. One of the tables contained books by Eastland County authors.
Loris Essary, author and publisher of "Interstate" said that he was looking for fresh ideas. He described the type of material he uses, and invited authors to discuss it with him. Essary gives workshops and gives readings all across the country.
Peter Mortimer came to the podium with a quick step and a rapid-fire British accent. He told his "Iron Press", and of various publications printed. He mentioned that he had made two trips to Russia, and had given a number of readings in the British Isles and the United States. This was his first trip to West Texas.

Dr. Dalrymple spoke for the Fort Concho Press, explained that this group was looking for good, well-researched southwestern material. The prose pieces need to be about Texas, but poetry may be on any subject.
Dr. Monte Lewis told of the beginning of the CJC magazine "Cross Timbers Review" and of the encouragement from Dr. Norman Wallace, then President of the College. He thanked members of the Texas Circuit for their interest in this literary magazine, and for deciding to hold the Festival where it was published.
At 3 p.m. local writers read some original material. Mary... of the... spontaneous applause interrupted him at...
Ruffin followed with readings, bringing poetry and prose. His material was arresting - a story called "The Watermelon," and poetry about the sea and rural life.
The audience agreed with Dr. Cleatus Rattan, who said that "Future students will be studying his (Ruffin's) work." Ruffin's perceptive

Cisco, and David McKelvin of Eastland.
After this there was time available for informal visiting and discussions - an enjoyable part of this Festival. By 7 p.m., however, the crowd was ready to line up for a good barbeque dinner catered by the Oscar Weeks Restaurant.
This was the first time the visitors had eaten Oscar's barbeque, and they really did it justice. The CJC cafeteria sent delicious apple pie for dessert.
The Elmer Kelton and Dr. Paul Ruffin readings which followed were highlights of the meeting. Kelton had just come in from winning another Silver Spur Award for his western writing - someone mentioned that this made four Silver Spur Awards and three Western Heritage Awards.
He read excerpts from several books, captivating the audience with his authentic descriptions and gripping plots. Spontaneous applause interrupted him at...

Scenes From The Canterbury Villa Easter Egg Hunt

W.K. BOYCE, M.M.F.T. The Family Matters

The young mother of three small children sat in my office and described the physical and emotional abuse she had received as a child. She was struggling with the horrified thought of abusing her young children in the same way her parents had abused her. Desperately seeking ways to avoid this, she had tearfully revealed those unshareable family secrets hidden for twenty years. Could she choose to treat her children differently? Was she condemned to abusing her children, teaching them how to abuse her future grandchildren? Or could she somehow break the vicious and destructive cycle of violence and abuse within her family?

Through the course of counseling this young woman identified three fundamental feelings within herself that were unanswered from her own childhood; and which she struggles to answer as an adult. Those feelings of belongingness, worthiness and competence were somehow all wrapped together, yet were confused and fighting within her. Her feeling of belongingness expressed itself in a question of "Do I feel wanted and needed?" Her feeling of worthiness was question by "Do I count? Do I matter?" And her feeling of competence was questioned by "Can I accomplish anything? Am I already a total failure?"

In the course of time and by conscious determination to break out of the destructive cycle of negativism and abuse, this young woman began restructuring her own behavior as she learned the pathways of getting stronger. Several irrational beliefs which many of us hold must be cast aside in order to become stronger. Beliefs such as dangerous and fearsome, things must be dwelled on, or it's easier to avoid certain responsibilities and problems than to face them, or past experience must determine today who I am, must be discarded as we too walk the pathway.

In the pathways to getting stronger we must:

1. Learn to give and receive love more effectively than we are doing.
2. Gain more self-respect and self-worth.
3. Develop a humor within and about ourselves.
4. Learn the satisfaction of self-discipline.
5. Engage in a hard but satisfying work.
6. Learn and develop a meaningful worship by discerning the will of God, doing what He says, and maintaining the actions long enough that these actions provide opportunity to make a difference for us, and opportunity for God to make a difference in us.
7. Know good memories tomorrow begin today: these are created in behavior, experienced through the senses and treasured in our hearts.

Our family needs us to be a force of positive growth. It doesn't matter our age, or color, or whether our parents loved us or not (maybe they wanted to but couldn't). Let that go. It belongs to the past. We belong to the NOW. Now we can grow. It is NOW that the family matters.

CLIFFORD BURAL
WHAT DO YOU SAY TO A GRIEVING WIDOW?
Because it is so difficult to know how the bereaved really feels, we advise that you not say, "I know how you must feel." It is not necessary to force a conversation, nor to extoll the virtues of the deceased to the grieving family.
Silent expressions of emotion and compassion (like a firm gripping of the hand) and a simple, "I'm sorry," are frequently more eloquent than talkative attempts at eulogies.
Listening and just "being there" show that you care. Your presence is indication of your desire to be sympathetic and comforting.
Above all, don't try to jolt a grieving widow out of her grief. Time will do it for her gradually. She must first accept the loss, then begin to live with it and pass through several emotional stages before the natural healing effects of time take hold.
We welcome your questions and comments on this and other subjects-- privately or publicly, through this column.

"Moonstruck" To Show At Majestic Theatre

Cher stars as Loretta, a widow with a good heart and a long run of bad luck. As the story opens, she has agreed to marry Johnny (Danay Aiello), a sweet and bumbling hunk of a man who, although a real charmer, is completely wrong for her. Johnny is on his way to Italy to tend to his dying mother, and his parting request of Loretta is that she call Ronny (Nicolas Cage), Johnny's brother. Johnny and Ronny haven't seen each other for years due to some horrible falling out, but Johnny is determined to have Ronny at his wedding.

Loretta meets Ronny, and they immediately take a dislike of each other. Ronny, a sullen and extremely angry young man, lost his hand in a meat carver five years ago and he blames Johnny for the accident. Loretta is determined to smooth things over between the brothers but as things happen in screwball comedies, these two completely mismatched souls end up in bed together. In the kind of loopy logic that permeates the film, Loretta figures that if she sleeps with her fiance's brother, the brother will have his revenge, the score will be settled, and the brother will come to the wedding, which is what the fiance wants more than anything. By the time that Johnny gets back from Italy, Loretta is determined to marry Ronny, which is okay with Johnny because his mother has made a remarkable recovery from near-death and vows to live on - so long as Johnny doesn't marry Loretta.

While Loretta's plight forms the heart of the story, there is much more to "Moonstruck." Loretta's family is a richly-drawn Italian-American brood, and they all have delightful opinions on (and problems with) love. The most touching character is Rose (Olympia Dukakis), Loretta's mother, who knows that her husband is cheating on her and is unable to understand why. At one point she asks Johnny, Loretta's oafish fiance, why men chase women. Johnny reminds Rose that, according to the Bible, woman was made by taking a rib from man. Maybe, Johnny figures, man is just trying to get his rib back, because it's left a soft spot over his heart. In this wise and sweet observation, "Moonstruck's" whole mood and message is captured.
