Appraisal Crews At Work In Cisco

The various appraisal crews of McMorries and Company have been busy for the last several days in the Cisco area. Work is being done in both the city and the rural areas, and is expected to take several months.

The work is being done in compliance with State Tax Laws requiring equalization of property by 1982 in each county in the state. The work being done will not effect the values to be used for the 1981 statements this fall.

This same type of appraisal work has already been done in Rising Star and Carbon. Following the work in Cisco, the areas of Eastland, Gorman, and Ranger will also have to be done.

The crews are taking measurements of property and putting all of the property into the proper classifications. They will visit each property owner within the county if possible. The property is required to be put on the tax rolls for 1982 and the cooperation of the property owner is asked. This will help insure that the correct measurements and classifications are made.

If anyone has any questions concerning the appraisal work please contact the local school tax office.

AARP Chapter Holds Meeting

The AARP Chapter 2447 of Cisco met at the Corral Room for their regular monthly meeting and covered dish meal Thursday, June 18, at 6 p.m.

Neal Moore returned thanks for the meal.

Ten guests were introduced. One later became a new member.

Lela Lloyd then introduced Wyley Peebles and Steven Zell, both from Cisco Junior College staff, who brought a special musical program which they had worked up for the centennial celebration and was titled "The History of Cisco." This was especially enjoyed by everyone present.

Since Sunday was Father's Day, the decorating committee recognized the oldest father, O.O. Mobley; runner-up, Rev. O.T. Killion; the youngest father, Steven Zell and the father of the most children, Jack Robertson. They adjourned at 7:45 p.m.

Caucuses of the individual states and countries were held previous to the election of New International Lions Club officers.

Mr. Chamness was a voting delegate representing the Cisco Lions Club.

On the night preceding the election, a barbecue was given for all the Texas delegates and their wives.

Music was provided by the Texas band from the local district 2-E1. Director of this band was Alvin Young, new band director of Cisco High School. Among those of this district comprising the band were two Cisco High School band members, Greg Swindle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Swindle, and Tracy Owens, son of Mr. and Mrs.

George Owens.

During a parade of Lions Clubs International, which was two and one-half hours long, this barrel won a first place from bands from American clubs. Plans are already underway for even a bigger and better band for next year when the Convention meets in Atlanta, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. Chamness felt great pride in the appearance and behavior of this group.

extra sightseeing but one part of the planned entertainment was an evening at Rawhide, Arizona. A replica of an old western town, complete with an old country store, restaurants, old ice cream parlors, outdoor cooking and even a rodeo ground (a rodeo was held this evening), and several shops around the street. It was much fun for those present.

An excellent fashion show was held for the ladies on Friday morning. Mrs. Chamness says it was one of the finest she has ever attended. It was sponsored by the Merchants of Fifth Avenue Shops of Scottsdale, Arizona, just out of Phoenix.

The Chamnesses met and became friends with a group of East Texans. They are already planning future get-togethers. Adding to the excitement of the trip was the fact that the air conditioning broke down in the motel where they were all staying. Mr. Chamness came to the rescue and helped in getting things in repair at about 3:00 a.m. While he was busy, others of the group cooled off in the swimming pool. Temperatures were from 109-113 during the week.

Even with this inconvenience a great time was had by all and Mr. Chamness is hoping more members can attend the convention in Atlanta, Ga., next year.

Another activity of interest taking place at the convention of Lions International is the pin swap. Each district can be represented by a pin designed for it. Then members swap for pins from each other. Many super collections are in evidence and Mr. Chamness has one of great interest. Just ask him and he'll be proud to show it. The pins are attached and pinned on his Lions Club jacket of which he is especially proud.

Archie Chamness is a past president of the Cisco Club and is currently a Zone Chairman of District 2-E1.

New president of the Cisco Club is Jack Farleigh.

THE MANY COLORS OF ZINNIAS
By Ted Brice

Though coming in last in the Alphabetical list of annuals the Zinnia is first in preference of many gardeners.

The Zinnia is a native to Mexico. The Zinnia that we know today have come a long way in development and improvement from its ancestry of Mexican Wild Flower.

The Zinnia is very showy when planted in masses and blooms all summer and into fall. There are shades of red, salmon, yellow, lavender, creamy white, and there is one flower arrangers find intriguing - "Envy" - a chartreuse green. All Zinnias need full sun except the green one which need semi-shade.

The giant double dahlia flower types along with giant cactus with twisted petals are the most popular cultivars. Some of these cultivars will have seven to eight (7-8") inch blooms on strong wiry stems with narrow leaves. The California giant Zinnia falls into these two cultivars mentioned above. Thanks to the hybridizer we now have multicolors and stripped varieties. There are small cultivars and singles. There is a small pom-pom cultivars, these sometimes are referred to the Tumpnellia variety. Mass plantings, along walks and edges of beds as well as around a good compost to your bed before planting will be rewarding when the blooms are produced in the summer. You will have some larger bloom specimens and a much richer and deeper color. A feeding of a well-balanced fertilizer will also be beneficial to your Zinnia.

There are many Zinnias in bloom now in this area. If you do not have any Zinnias, pick out the colors and cultivars that you like and plan on planting them there is still time this year.

IWU Reflections in Perspective

By: I. W. Ussery

One of the principal reasons for the very high value of old Persian carpets as compared to the relatively lower prices paid (or asked) for those made in recent years is the dyes. Old carpets were coloured with all-vegetable dyes prepared from roots, herbs, and stones. They were indeed "fast colours." No fading nor running when washed. And there are few things which have the bedraggled appearance of a fine carpet with the various colours all mixed and blended into a series of unsightly blurs. Modern chemical dyes, according to the experts simply cannot match the old...and expensive...vegetable dyes.

And the Persian has a thing about ways and means of cleaning a carpet. It is not unusual to drive along a busy street and to observe here and there an almost priceless carpet which has been spread right out in the traffic lane. We couldn't understand it, but came to accept it. According to the Persians, that served a dual purpose. Firstly, it loosened the ground-in dirt and it contributed to the "aging" process of the carpet.

And then, after a carpet has been beaten, trampled upon, shaken...and even driven over by countless automobiles the actual cleaning procedure is to be remembered.

Near the holy city of Rey, not far outside of Teheran there is a huge spring which flows right out of the boulders at the foot of the mountain. At a rate of hundreds of gallons per minute the pure, clear water rolls and tumbles out into a basin and is carried off through a ditch. This spring is a favourite spot for washing carpets and throughout the spring and summer one can observe the washing going on. Having washed their carpets in the cold, clear water of the spring, they spread the carpets over the boulders for hundreds of feet around. It is a very colourful scene, with the vivid shades of the carpets and their variety of patterns contrasting with the browns and grays of the stones and the barren mountainside.

Of course, if one cannot make the journey to Rey with his carpets, he makes do with whatever facilities are at hand. Returning home from the office early one afternoon, I came upon quite a beehive of activity in the courtyard (paved) at the back of our house. It was the season just before the Iranian New Year (March 21), and the servants felt a native compulsion to clean the carpets for the occasion. At first glance, I thought they were taking some sort of spite on us by attempting to totally destroy the beauty of the almost priceless carpets which the landlord had left for us in the house.

Spread out on the tiles of the courtyard was the carpet from the dining room. An expert had told me that it was at least 100, maybe 150 years old and was a "Tabrizi," or from the area of Tabriz. The basic colour of the carpet was something of an apricot shade. Approximately 12' X 15', the center medallion was the figure of a fish. There were ducks and deer artfully woven into the pattern of the border and in the corners and spaced here and there in the "field" of the carpet. The authority found it difficult to believe that Mr. Bashti had left it in the house, as it was literally priceless.

But the servants had decided that it was time to clean the carpets, and they would begin with the Tabrizi. Another thing; one rarely refers to carpets as such, one who is in the know demonstrates his knowledge of patterns and origins by referring to the carpet by the name of its source. So; the carpet in the dining room was always referred to as "The Tabrizi." There were two "Kashans" of about equal size in the somewhat spacious living room.

But back to the bathing of the Tabrizi. According to My Lovely Wife the servants had spent most of the morning beating and thrashing on the carpet with every club and flail they could lay hands to as the helpless work of art hung from the overhang on the carport. The gardener was pressed into duty to stand on the carpet on the roof of the carport to keep it from falling to the ground. He didn't mind that chore.

But the actual cleaning. Having thoroughly beaten the Tabrizi, it was spread on the tiles and water was applied from the garden hose. plenty of water. They saw that it was thoroughly soaked by swishing the water to and fro with their bare feet.

Having satisfied themselves that it was wet enough, they sprinkled it lavishly with plain, ordinary laundry detergent. The most popular in Teheran was the one with the American name of "Tide," which was made by a branch of the U.S. company in Teheran. Just plain Tide for a priceless Tabrizi? What else. Soap is soap. And the powdered cleanser was easily applied. The sprinkling was followed by still more foot-work, tramping, swishing, rubbing, and just generally making a monumental mess of dirty suds.

Then more water. Rinse, flush and rinse some more...and still more footwork. They must have spent at least two hours in the actual cleaning process. Only they referred to it by its real name... "Washing."

Another light application of soap, and then the final act of washing. That consisted of scaping the suds off with cookie sheets and the lids of pots. A final rinsing, and with the soft colours literally glowing with clarity the Tabrizi was ready to be hung once more from the roof of the carport to dry in the sun. I suspected that one of the servants slept in the carport that night to keep away "robbers," which name they applied to all thieves.

Came the morning of the following day and the priceless piece of floor covering had been restored to its original pristine purity of beauty. Back into the dining room with the carpet, and the process was repeated on practically all of the carpets in the house. Took at least a week, but the servants were once again proud of "their house." At least the carpets were clean, and the principal ritual of the coming of Spring had been performed.

SEEDS FROM THE SOWER

By Michael A. Guido, Metter, Georgia

The minister, visiting newcomers, admired a pretty parakeet that perched silently in its cage. "What a beautiful bird," he exclaimed. "Does it talk?"

"No, sir," answered the lady, "but it thinks a great deal."

For you who stop to think, St. Paul urges in Philippians 4:8, "Whatever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

There is an old saying that declares, "You can't prevent a bird from flying over your head, but you can prevent it from making a nest in your hair." So it is with wrong thoughts.

It is not wrong if they come; it is only wrong if you harbor them after they come.

If a policeman saw a person unlawfully entering a building, he would arrest him. When an unlawful thought seeks to enter your mind, arrest it. Put it away, and think on these things.

You are what you think — whether you think so or not!

'After The Honeymoon' Realities In Marriage Plans

COLLEGE STATION — Are you planning a Cinderella marriage or a realistic one?

Many Texas couples tend to believe that the Cinderella myth of living happily ever after will "just happen" — rather than understanding that they must resolve major conflicts and issues before marriage, says a family life education specialist.

Because of this unrealistic syndrome, young (and older) couples find it difficult to discuss — and cope — real and often painful issues that will confront them during marriage, says Dorothy Taylor.

Mature, wise couples, on the other hand, plan beyond the wedding day, she says.

Ms. Taylor is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

12 'CONFLICT' ISSUES

There are 12 primary areas of conflict that couples need to discuss and, hopefully, resolve before marriage, the specialist advises.

QUESTIONS TO ASK

Here are the questions:
1) How do you feel about my family?
How much do you think they should be involved with us?
Where will we spend holidays?
Have you discussed this with your parents? Do you feel you need to?
2) Who will decide how money is spent in our home?
3) What will we do about church — now and, if there are children, later?
4) When someone in the family or one of us dies, what should we expect of ourselves?
If there is an inheritance, how would you feel about my getting money or property?
What happens when one of our parents is widowed?
How important is "being you" to you?
5) How important is love to our marriage?
How do you feel about extra-marital affairs for personal or business reasons?
6) How do you feel about work — hours to be put in to get a job done for either of us, dual-career family, shared household tasks and the relationship between home life and work?
7) How strongly do you feel about children?
How will they affect our relationship?
How will they affect our careers and life goals?
How will we affect their lives?
8) There are certain things that are really important to me — new or expensive car, home in a particular part of town, clothes, savings, eating out or attractive appearance. How do you feel about these?
9) How do you feel about my friends?
Will you expect me to accept and/or associate with — or drop any particular friends of yours or mine?
10) How do you resolve quarrels?

How did your parents resolve disagreements?
How do you feel about fighting or striking another person — adult or child?
A GLANCE BACK
All of the categories listed above are difficult to answer.
Looking back over the questions, remember that they do require deep, serious thought, Ms. Taylor reminds.
"Avoiding a response may be an indication of the pain or seriousness of the issue to you or your partner personally," she stresses.
"Talking about these issues before they become problems is one way to ensure newlyweds they can live happily ever after if they work at their marriage," she says.

Canning Tips

With gardens flourishing, many consumers are attempting food preservation at home to save on food costs. While home canning may look simple, every detail requires careful attention.

If you do choose to can some vegetables, the Food Quality and Safety Committee of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, offers these important points:

- Before starting, contact your local county Extension office for the latest information.
- Use only high quality produce for best results.
- Be sure to have the pressure gauge on your pressure canner checked. Your local county Extension office usually has the equipment to provide this service.
- Also check gaskets and seals on your pressure canner.
- Follow directions to every detail; do not use your own times or pressures.
- All low-acid foods such as green beans, corn and potatoes must be processed in a pressure canner. Water bath methods are not adequate for proper preservation of low-acid foods. Firm, fresh tomatoes which are not overripe may be processed in a water bath.
- Use only approved canning techniques; processing in a microwave oven or conventional oven is not an approved method.
- Use only standard canning jars with lids and rings; old mayonnaise or peanut butter jars are not designed for home canning.
- Do not reuse lids.
- Do not use jars that are chipped or cracked.
- Do not overfill jars as this can cause a faulty seal.
- Be sure tops of jars are wiped clean before sealing.
- Avoid sudden pressure drops; wait until the pressure gauge is at zero before opening the lid.
- Be sure to allow for processing adjustments for those elevations over 1000 feet; charts are available in canning guides.
- Avoid placing jars direct from the pressure canner on to cool surfaces; it's best to cool jars by placing them on a rack.
- Be sure to check all lids for a depression which indicates a good seal; products in jars without a good seal may be eaten immediately but should not be stored for later use.

Watching Washington

If you work as a truck driver, you know all about a Department of Transportation form called the "Driver's Daily Log." On it, a driver must record the amount of time he spends on the job. If you wonder why DOT needs this, you're not the only one—the General Accounting Office also would like to know.

Recently the GAO examined the paperwork burden imposed on the trucking industry by DOT and the Interstate Commerce Commission. Its report is one of a series of paperwork studies prepared at my request for the Joint Economic Committee.

In the report, GAO pointed out that DOT supposedly uses the information collected from the Logs to help enforce trucking safety regulations. Transportation inspectors must ferret out cases involving fatigued drivers and then take action against their particular company.

But when GAO looked into the matter, they found that DOT doesn't bother to show the Logs to its inspectors, who instead rely on their memory of earlier incidents to track down carriers in need of safety checks.

The Transportation Department rule requiring the Log has stayed on the books virtually unchanged for the past 40 years. Meanwhile, American truck drivers continue to spend about 32 million hours annually completing these forms. And each year they use 1.2 billion sheets of paper in the process.

In other cases, the GAO found that the ICC had illegally required trucking firms to complete certain forms which the Office of Management and Budget had not approved. (The Federal Reports Act requires OMB to clear all government forms before the various agencies and departments can issue them.)

The trucking industry devoted some 362,000 hours and $5.4 million to complete these "bootleg" forms. On top of that, the accounting office learned that the data gathered in two instances was totally useless.

According to GAO investigations, the ICC isn't the only federal agency dodging the Federal Reports Act. In another study commissioned at my request for the Joint Economic Committee, the GAO revealed that the Environmental Protection Agency ignored the act when setting 126 business reporting requirements.

Like their colleagues at Transportation and the Commerce Commission, EPA officials don't seem to mind printing one form after another, whether they're repetitive or superfluous. The officials have grossly misjudged how much time a firm must take to fill out EPA forms. The GAO found that large firms devote as much as five hours to one form which EPA insists is only a 10-minute chore.

Granted, much of the information which federal agencies gather is crucial for the welfare of both American workers and industry. But the American people have every right to be fed up with the cavalier methods employed by regulatory agencies to accomplish their ends.

In the 97th Congress I again have introduced legislation that would further clamp down on excessive government paperwork.

Excessive government paperwork and excessive government regulation demand too many scarce resources that could be put to far better uses by our economy.

Congressman

Charles W.
Stenholm

Congressional Comment

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Pogo said, "We have met the enemy and he is us."

The finger of blame for big government spending, if we must find one, is pointed toward every citizen who depended on Uncle Sam to solve a problem that could better have been solved at the local level. It points to every American who has demanded, for good cause or bad, action by the federal government; programs by the federal government; assistance from the federal government.

I don't know of any Congressman who begins his day by thinking up deliberate ways to waste government money. Legislation is almost always initiated to redress some wrong and the demand for such action almost invariably comes from you, the people. The mistake that Congress has made in the past is listening to a small segment of society and judging that voice to express the will and the needs of the people.

Some of the aims and objectives have been honest ones, but expensive nonetheless.

There were good reasons to establish the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, the Department of Education and the Department of Energy: We, the people, asked for them.

Energy prices are top high, the American public complained; so an obliging government established the Department of Energy to regulate energy prices. We need cleaner water and cleaner air, the public cried out. The Environmental Protection Agency soon followed.

The same is true with problem after problem — agency after agency. The more often we look to Washington to take care of a problem that might best be handled on the local level, the more problems we ultimately seem to create.

All of those "good ideas," (and I have long questioned just how good the majority of them actually were) cost money, however. Now the tide has turned and the cry heard most often along the Potomac is "cut spending," or, more accurately, "cut his spending program, not mine."

The difficult decisions of which areas of federal spending to cut are now being made through the budget reconciliation process in the House. I have often said the vote I cast to cut the budget was the easiest vote I will make this year: The hard ones are coming up in every committee on the Hill right now.

I am aware of the danger of being labeled a "barnburner." That's a farmer who would burn his barn to get rid of the rats. We must use caution to prevent throwing out the good with the bad and use reason and good judgement to spread the projected $695.44 billion we have been allotted to spend in such a way to provide the most good for the most people. But at the same time, we must not lose sight of the main objective, the return of fiscal responsibility to our federal government.

Social Security Administrative Costs Down

Social security pays just 1.5 percent of the total social security taxes collected to administer the program of retirement, survivors, and disability benefits, Glyn Hammons social security district manager in Abilene, said recently.

This information was contained in a report recently published by social security's Office of the Actuary.

The report also shows that administrative costs, which include salaries, rent for property and equipment, building operating expenses, and supplies, have been decreasing over the years both as a percentage of taxes collected and of benefits paid. Administrative expenses amounted to just 1.4 percent of benefits paid in 1979.

In 1957, for example, administrative expenses amounted to 2.2 percent of taxes paid. This was the first year that disability benefits were paid.

Administrative expenses have increased more slowly than either tax income or benefits paid in spite of the fact that the programs have grown greatly in size and complexity over the years, Hammons said. Of course, actual dollar expenditures have increased each year even though the ratios have decreased.

The decreasing proportion of administrative expenses to income shows that administrative productivity has increased. This favorable trend is expected to continue into the future as the program matures Hammons said.

The report shows that the services provided by social security to the public have been getting cheaper relative to the costs of other services, based on the consumer price index. Since 1960 this relative cost has decreased by about 10 percent.

More information about social security benefits can be obtained at the Abilene social security office, located 142 S Pioneer. The telephone number is 698-1360. For those living outside of Abilene, the toll free number is 1-800-392-1603.

AN INVITATION.....

To See And Experience A Giant, Beautiful Oil Painting Done By Two Local Artists.
 You & Your Family Are Invited To View This Most Remarkable Work Of Art
 Now On Display At Arrington-Edwards Funeral Home, Eastland

OPEN HOUSE MONDAY THROUGH FRIDAY

CHRIST IN THE GARDEN

Last summer, Muriel Duncan of Eastland and her daughter, Dixie Hull of Cisco, were commissioned to do an oil painting of Christ in the Garden for Arrington-Edwards Funeral Home of Eastland.

After their canvas was stretched, it measured 216 by 51 inches for the painting was to cover more than half of one wall in the funeral home. The canvas was mounted on three big easels, reaching almost from the floor to the ceiling.

It stretched onto the frame by the ladies' husbands, Edward Duncan and Harvey Hull. They also made the easels.

It took six days to complete the painting, which Dixie and Muriel say is absolutely their greatest achievement in painting.

After the painting was finished and hung in the funeral home, Mrs. Pearline Beil of Beil's Draperies was called upon to add the drapes.

After much careful consideration, beautiful drapes were hung that accent the painting.

Dramatic lighting adds to the overall effect.

Putnam News
By Mrs. R.B. Taylor

My calendar tells me that this is the first day of summer and the longest day of the year. I think the weather is marvelous. We have only had one or two days of 100 degree weather. Have had plenty of rain and a good breeze. The wheat farmers have been busy this week and I'm sure have most of the grain harvested. Those who have gardens are busy freezing and canning. There is a lot of fruit so all in all this has been a wonderful spring.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. Foy (Bobbie) Jobe is entering West Texas Medical Center at Abilene today and will undergo surgery Tuesday. We wish the best of luck to you, Bobbie and our thoughts and prayers go with you.

A cousin of I.G. Mobeys was buried at Cisco Thursday Mrs. Winnie Tichenor, 79, of Austin. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall of Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gray and daughter, Marlon of Alvin and Steve Gray of Alvin, Mr. and Mrs. Wilburn Carrico of Baird and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fry of Cisco were guests of the Mobeys Wednesday night and Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Petty spent Wednesday and Thursday at Brownwood seeing to the renovation of their home they have bought in Brownwood. Mr. George (G.P.) Jobe is back at Putnam after a trip to Washington State to visit his children there.

Mr. Billy Blakley of Bisbee, Arizona, visited his aunt, Mrs. R.B. Taylor Thursday.

The church painting class met at the Community Center Friday. Mrs. Myrtle George of Ranger is the instructor. Anyone wishing to paint china or oils is welcome to attend. Mrs. Mary King has a very nice supply of unpainted china and supplies at her home north of town.

The senior citizens met at the Community Center Friday for their monthly luncheon and an evening of games.

The former Patty Williams of Lubbock and her daughter-in-law visited Mrs. Ollie Burnam Saturday. Patty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Williams and was reared at Putnam.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin King honored their son, Ronald Grem with a birthday party Saturday evening. Several of Ronald's friends and family members enjoyed cake and homemade ice cream.

Burette Ramsey also celebrated a birthday Saturday. His daughter, Mrs. Stella Hughes of Rankin and his sister, Mrs. Faye Woods of Cisco helped him enjoy the occasion.

Mr. Hall Green of Alaska is spending several days with his folks, the I.G. Mobeys and attending business at Abilene.

Mrs. Fred Heyser, Mrs. Maggie Cook of Baird, Mrs. Annie Merle McGowan of Pecos and Mrs. R.B. Taylor went for a drive Sunday afternoon. We went to Cross Plains through the Burnt Branch Community to the Belle Plain Cemetery across to Admiral. I have never seen Callahan County so pretty and green this time of year and there are lots of wild flowers yet. It does a person good just to drive around and appreciate nature.
