HALL OF REMARKS

BY HERREL HALLMARK

IF YOU HURRY, you might still be able to make some of the Retail Trade Day sales in Cisco since this paper is delivered on Saturday (instead of Sunday, as the dateline says.) Cisco merchants were busy Saturday with sidewalk sales being held for the Chamber of Commerce sponsored Retail Trade Day.

The day was being sponsored by the CofC's Retail Trade Committee.

One of the highlights was to be the "Little Mr. Cisco" contest at 2 p.m. in front of the First National Bank building.

A good number of persons were expected to attend, especially since advertisements were printed in Thursday's editions of The Cisco Press, Eastland Telegram, Ranger Times and The Rising Star, as well as area radio stations broadcasting about the event.

FOOTBALL FANS who are interested in helping to show their support to this year's football teams in Cisco are urged to contact the Press office before 10 a.m. Tuesday morning, August 30. We are in the process of composing our annual football page which will be printed in every Thursday's edition of the Press during the season.

Show your support of the local teams and place your business name on this page. If you are not contacted about the page, be sure and call our office before 10 Tuesday. Let's all help back our local teams to championship ranks this year.

A GOOD GROUP of citizens turned out here Friday night to listen to The Glory-Heirs, a gospel singing group from Abilene. The underneath the pavillion in Cisco City Park.

The Glory-Heirs are a very talented and God-loving group who have performed numerous times in local churches. They also performed at the past Folk-Life Festival held in Cisco.

Last Jurors To Be Picked; Testimony Due Next Week

The beginning of the Loyal Lundstrom murder trial was in prospect for Monday as jury selection continued Friday after four days of questioning by state and defense attorneys had produced rine jurors. The Cisco business man is charged with murder in the March 3rd shotgun death of his wife.

Selected to serve on the jury throughout Thursday were Stewart Mack Farguhar, retired Ciscoan; Jack Lindsey, Eastland; Kay Lynn Lasater, Eastland housewife; Jamie Boswell

At mid-afternoon Friday, two more jurors were needed. Two had been picked earlier Friday: Bruce Stovall of Cisco and Belva Sublett of Eastland. Debra Drake of Ranger who had been selected Thursday was released from service, by permission.

Defense Attorney Bill Hart told this newspaper Friday that no decision has been made as to whether Lundstrom will take the stand during his trial.

District Attorney Emory Walton reported that the state would present some 15 witnesses.

Most of the prospective jurors questioned so far have been excused "for cause". Both defense and prosecution have ten strikes each with which they can reject a juror without stating a reason. This affords both defense and prosecution the opportunity to exclude jurors who they feel might not be sympathetic to their jurors, Mr. Walton indicated that testimony would not require more than two or three days. Attorney Hart inquired of several potential jurors whether they thought it would matter to a jury if Lundstrom did not testify.

Lundstrom, free on $200,000 property bond, has appeared daily with his attorney in the courtroom. He sits quietly, paying strict attention to jury questioning. He is always neatly dressed.

The Lundstroms owned and operated the Cisco Motel and a monument business in Cisco for some 10 years. Both were active in church and community affairs and appeared frequently in public with their five children.

Mrs. Lundstrom's body was found in the bedroom of their motel apartment on March 5. An autopsy indicated that she had died of a shotgun blast 36 or more hours earlier. Lundstrom had disappeared and gave himself up 13 days later.

State Officials Will File Suit Against City Of Cisco

State officials discussed details of a suit to force compliance with waste water regulations that will be filed next week in 91st District Court at a meeting with City of Cisco authorities at City Hall here last Tuesday after-

Purpose of the meeting was for state officials to go into details of the litigation and for city officials to explain their position and efforts to remedy the problem, according to City Manager Mike Moore.

Attending the conference were Nancy Lynch of Austin, assistant Texas Attorney General. Environmental Protection Division; Rod Bolton of Austin, Enforcement Division of the Texas Department of Water Resources; Wilson Snyder of Waco, Texas Department of Water Resources: Eris Ritchie, mayor of Cisco; Brad Kimbrough and Bobby Ingram, city councilmen; Billy Wright, city attorney; Bill Jacob, city engineer; and the city manager.

The city was informed that the court suit will allege that Cisco has violated state waste water disposal regulations at the sewage disposal plant a total of 120 times since 1976, Mr. Moore said. The city was also informed that the state would seek civil damages that could run as high as $1,000 per day.

Mayor Ritchie and other Cisco officials, including Engineer Jacob, told the state authorities that plans are in the final stages for a new sewage disposal plant to serve the community. They went into details of the pro-

State officials noted that Cisco city councils had been warned of their plant's problems for many years and that action had been promised from time to time without results. It was indicated that the state expects a timetable for compliance with regulations in addition to civil damages. "We assured the state that we have come up with the most cost effective plan and system for a new waste water disposal plant," Mr. Moore said. "We also gave assurance that we have been and are working hard to bring our disposal plant into compliance with all regulations.

Attorney Lynch told interviewers in Austin Wednesday that "the suit is going to be filed, but once it's filed there is a strong possibility we will be able to work out an agreed resolution."

The city spent $175,000 last fall for a new sewer out-fall line that has relieved the amount of fluid that goes to collection lines. The city's plans for a $1,500,000 improvement program for the water system is now being finalized.

A new sewer plant is the third phase of a bond issue approved by Cisco voters last year, and steps have been taken for a new sewage waste water disposal plant.

the cause of the drop. City Manager Moore reported that oil and gas income for July was $7,141 to bring the year's total to $40,219. Since August 1, he added, the city has received some $12,000 from a gas well where royalty payments had been held up pending title clarification.

General fund collections for July amounted to $61,729 while the fund had expenses of $93,585. The utility fund had income of $31,691 and expenses of $60,331. Present were Mayor Eris

7:20 p.m. The building, which was originally the railroad depot at Carbon, was pretty well gutted, Fire Chief C.W. Guthrie reported. The wall sheetrock, floors and roof also had damage, although the building framework appeared to be in fair condition, he said. Mr. Guthrie said damages could run as high as $12,000.

There was extensive damage to the building's contents, including a piano, work tables and equipment and supplies, Mr. Guthrie said. There had been no meetings in the building

For those of you who are nimble with neither needle nor hammer, there are plenty of ways to make Christmas memorable without Neiman-Marcus catalog--even without a Sears catalog.

The bakers are about as far out in front now as the wood-workers are with less consumable craft products. The family magazines are full of timely tips for foods that tease the tongue.

With freezers it's easy to bake and store-or giveahead of time, especially if the person favored is no longer so brisk about baking.

Countywide Senior Citizen

Bazaar Set

The 1983 Countywide Senior Citizen Bazaar will be on November 3 and 4 in Eastland.

The committee met this week to plan the Bazaar. Attending the planning meeting were Mrs. Alberta Sims and Mrs. Ruth Cartee, both of Cisco; Mrs. Dorothy Underwood, of Morton Valley; and Mrs. Arleta Shirey, Mrs. Edith Wilson and Mrs. Ruth Kendrick, all of Eastland.

Special plans were made to include a Golden Reception honoring couples married 50 years or longer which will be on November 3rd. Also in conjunction with the Bazaar will be a Pioneer Day on November 4th which will feature a fashion parade of old hats and bonnets along with yesterday's fashions.

This year's Bazaar promises to be bigger and better than ever. Complete Bazaar rules will be published in the near future announces Mrs. Janet Thomas, County Extension Agent.

All senior citizens in the county who would like to exhibit and sale their handmade articles are encouraged to come.

The theme for the annual event is "Holiday Bazaar" and this will be an occasion for the public to shop for some Christmas gifts at resonable prices.

County Fair Home Craft Sets Meeting

There will be a meeting on Friday, Septemer 2 at 10 a.m. in the Eastland Naional Bank Community Room for all volunteer workers in the County Fair Home Craft division.

The Home Craft division includes the following divisions: clothing, baked goods, preserved foods, handcrafts, ceramics, and horticulture. Mrs. Dorothy Underwood, of Morton Valley, will be the overall chairman.

The Home Craft division is still in need of some more volunteer workers states Mrs. Underwood. Anyone interested in volunteering to help with these booths are urged to attend the Friday, September 2 meeting or call Mrs. Underwood at 647-1903, or Janet Thomas, County Extension Agent, 629-2222.

The Eastland County Fair dates are September 29, 30, and October 1.

She or he might appreciate an early fruit cake for preholiday snacks

In fact, with all the stores so very beforehand with "Christmas gift" sales, you might begin your own giving as soon as you have cleared away the damages from Thanksgiving.

By all means feaure your fancies, tastiest superlatives in the receipe lines, but cook them in give-away pans and deliver in the same kind of dishes if you transfer from baking pans to serving

It used to be safe enough to use a nice plate and tape your name to the bottom of it. The dish often returned filled with another special goodie. This could still be an intention of your giftee, but these are dishwasher days, and tape no longer is quite the answer. Even if the dishpan or sink still serves. it is possible someone else will be doing dishes, and there goes your identification on your plate.

Anyway, stick a red bow on a saran-wrapped, aluminum foil pan of munchies and there's your gift, wrap, and no dish to be returned-or forgotten.

There are so many holiday-decorated paper plates that there is no need to risk losing a "Good 'un." Maybe I think more about this because I collect plates, and I can't bear to part with even a scroungey one. That is going to change this very

I have promised myself to begin to part with some plates and other things this Christmas...not scroungey stuff, either. It is time to distribute some of the family pieces collected over years and years and years of pack-ratting.

I never expect him to use it, but I will box and store my grandfather's shaving stand for Darrell, his first greatgreat-grandson. My grandmother's sewing basket goes to her first great-greatgranddaugher--on my branch of the family tree. It is true that these things may gladden the heart of some future garage-sale shopper, but I will have provided a chance for family continuity with one small bit. Most of us have a sentimental streak that responds to the idea of being a link in a family chain of relationships. You may be an orphan and know nothing about your family. Begin a chain with yourself.

Relative to the beginning of your own chain: one of my favorite pieces of furniture is a roll-top desk we bought over at Moody about twenty-five years ago. In discussing which of our young'uns might want the old things we have, I remarked that the desk was "old, but not a family piece." David hopped on that at once. "Mom, it is in my family." Yep, he gets it...but not yet. After his rebuke, I dusted off my perspective to see that it doesn't do to confine yourself to one viewpoint. Those pink glasses I dug out of oatmeal boxes when I was Mandi's age are not just 'premiums" any longer. They are "depression glass", and you can buy a lot of oatmeal for what they'll cost vou.

holidays. Offer to run errands for those who no longer drive...or take them with you. Mail letters-even write letters if you know there is a vision problem or fingers are stiff with arthritis. Swap books, take a trip to the library, or drive around town to see what's building, selling, torn down, or who's moved.

This next is not a jolly suggestion, but what some of the eldest citizens really would like is a visit to the cemetery to check on the graves of the dear departed. I admit to mixed emotions about such expenditions, but I know enough people who dote on 'em to give the idea a mention here. It definitely would be an unusual Christmas

Use your imagination and I'll use mine for a more personal gift-giving this Christmas...and start soon.

Mandi tells me that Christmas gifts, like birthday presents, are "posed to be hidden." Better put a lock on the closet, too!

An article in an area newspaper recently printed a story about "teacher burnout". A former teacher from Lufkin, Texas, who taught school for 16 years. ended his career and had to stay in the hospital for five months. He was quoted as saying, "Teaching has definitely changed in the last six years. The classroom is a war zone

What about our public shools? Are they considered "war zones"? In an interview with Mr. Mike Turner, principal of Cisco High School, we found out what his reaction was to this statement.

"No! They are definitely not a war zone. I want kids to have a climate to learn and have fun, but mainly to learn. The teachers are here to teach, but if a problem arises then we will visit with the student and try to work things out."

He said that a lot of the problem in Lufkin is the size of the school. They have around 2,000 students in high schools there. Here in Cisco, the teachers and administrators know the students as individuals. And in a lot of cases they know the parents. Values are different in a small town and a lot of the students live on farms. Small town ideas are different from larger cities.

"Communication between parents, students and teachers play a big part in our school system," Mr. Turner said. "When I lived in Mesquite, I never saw anyone I knew in the grocery store. Here in Cisco, it is different. This is a closer community."

He said that teaching has definitely changed over the last few years. "There is more interference in school programs now from the

I asked Mr. Turner if he ever knew of any teacher that had "teacher burnout". He said, "I've never had a teacher tell me that. Teachers are a special breed willing to put up with the good days when they get along with students and the bad days when they do not.

"I've always said that when a teacher reaches the 'Pearly Gates', the angels will say 'Come on in.'

"Teaching is a helping profession. They have to have four years of college and a lot of teachers have Master Degrees. They play a big role in our lives, although a lot of people don't realize it until they're older. Students want guidance and direction and a teacher has to be able to give them this."

When asked if parents are more, or less, involved with their children's school activities, he said, "There is a little more involvement in the elementary schools than in the high school. When children get older they become more independent. This is normal. It is an embarrassment to older kids for parents to be too involv-

He continued, "The best discipline is for a parent to go to school and attend each class with their child. Most kids don't want this and they will behave better, if they think this will happen

Police Investigate Two Offenses & 9 Incidents

Cisco police officers investigated two offenses and nine incidents here during the past week, according to Police Chief Billy Rains.

The offenses were two thefts, one at 1500 Bullard on August 19th and the other at 1603 Primrose Lane on August 20th. The first theft involved a tool box and tools taken from Robert Leroy Wilson's vehicle. It was valued at $500. In the second theft report, Gerald Parks advised police that someone had removed the battery from his vehicle.

I've never really taken it seriously as an art form. Indeed, how can something that requires the wearing of flimsy paper or plastic glasses to be seen be taken seriously as anything?

At least, that's how I felt until recently. What changed my mind? A 15-minute film currently playing in a 600seat theater in Orlando, Florida.

I like three-dimensional photography. I think it's cute.

I'm talking about a delightful little film showing in the Magic Eye Theater of the Journey Into Imagination pavilion at Epcot Center, the newest dimension of Walt Disney World. Yes, it's 3-D; and, yes, you have to wear flimsy plastic glasses to see it. But it's a film of major consequence, and I predict that within a very short time, more people will have seen and enjoyed it than have seen Star Wars, E.T., and The Empire Strikes Back

The film, entitled Magic Journeys, was created by Walt Disney Productions in cooperation with Eastman Kodak research scientists. It was written and directed by academy award-winner, Murray Lerner, and scored by Richard and Robert Sherman, who also scored the movie, Mary Poppins, and 26 additional Disney films.

To create the film, Kodak scientists conducted extensive psycho-physical research to develop criteria for multi-dimensional projection synchronization. Using side-by-side projection with overlap, the fast-paced program is shown on a 30 x 58-foot screen. The movie opens with a bird's-eye view of blossoming apple trees, followed by a boy picking a dandelion puff and blowing the spores, which appear to dust the audience and have viewers reaching out to "catch" them.

As the child's imagination takes the audience around the world to circuses, sphinxes, and exotic landscapes, objects seem to leap from the screen. In one Halloween scene, bolts of lightning appear to flash out into the thea-

The three-dimensional effect is created by filming with two cameras whose lenses are optically positioned at approximately 21/2 inches apart (the average space between human eyes). Two projectors are used in the theater, and the dual images are projected on top of each other

The neutral polarizing lenses in glasses worn by the audience combine the two images into a single visual impression with dramatic depth and realism. The images appear to be floating in the air between the screen and the viewer and give such a deep dimensional feel-specially designed and constructed "rigs" which allows pairs of cameras to be moved closer togther or farther apart while both remaining aimed at the same point. Several unique rigs for different filming situations, including one for helicopter use, were specially built by

Magic Journeys establishes several firsts: the first combination of computer-generated animation with live action in 3-D; the first use of matte shots in 3-D; and the first use of blue screen in 3-D. Filming took place throughout the U.S. and underwater in Grand Cayman, and the total film production took more than a year. In some scenes, an extraordinary amount of lighting was needed - up to 30 times the normal photographic requirement — in order to take advantage of the extra dimension of depth in 3-D.

It's a cinch that Magic Journeys will never play in a theater near you. But it's a film that's bound to entertain, delight, and stimulate you. It may, in fact, change your entire perspective . . . not only of 3-D photography, but of life in general. If there's any way whatsoever you can get to see it, do so.

As real estate values climb, so does the tax bite on property sold. Many sellers experience more gain on their property than they anticipated and are shocked by the taxes on it.

One solution to the problem is a tax-deferred exchange of property, called a "1031" by the real estate industry because it is Section 1031 of the federal tax code that allows for it. The law permits tax-deferred exchanges of real estate properties as long as they are of "like kind."

Such an exchange lets you the property owner apply the appreciation in one parcel of real estate to the price of a new one. The owner pays taxes on the gain only to the extent that other kinds of property are received in the transaction--such as securities, notes or cash. Be sure to discuss a 1031 swap with your tax adviser before you sell your next piece of property.

SAVE ENERGY WITH FLUORESCENT LIGHT

Here's a tip to help you save home energy costs. You can cut the cost of lighting your home up to 75 percent simply by choosing and using efficient lighting systems.

Fluorescent lighting is nearly four times as efficient as incandescent lighting.

Although fluorescent tubes generally cost more to install, they last as much as 12 times as long as incandescent bulbs, and they use less electricity-about 25 to 35

So, learn the facts of light and reduce your electricity bill by using wise lighting practices in your home.

BUY A HOUSE FOR COL-LEGE

A growing number of parents are combining investment in their children's college education with in-

AVERAGE HOME SIZE IS SHRINKING

The nation's houses have started to shrink.

According to data from the 1980 census, the median size of a house built in the United States last year was just less than 1,600 square feet. That is a drop of 50 square feet from the 1979 median size, and it reverses a trend of increasingly larger houses

Despite the reduction in size and amenities, the cost of a house was still high. The average price nationwide was $76,300. Although prices were high, the proportion of owner-occupied units now stands at an all-time high of more than 65 percent.

Homemaking Hints County Extension Agent

Janet Thomas

Today's family is an unrecognized ecomomic giant. Households control 38 prcent of the national wealth while corporations control 31 percent, government 22 percent and agriculture 9 percent. Families also have the major influence on the physical, intellectual and social development of our human resources.

Since 1914, the Texas Agricultural Extension home economics program has worked closely with Texas families to teach them how to apply research tested practices for household management and family development.

The Family Living Committees in each county serve as an advisory committee to Extension agents in recommending and developing educational programs that will meet the needs and interests of families in the County.

Extension home economics programs develop and strengthen the ability of families and individuals to extend their incomes, improve their health through preventive care and nutrition, and increase their well-being during economic and social change and uncer-

The Eastland County Family Living Committee members met this week. The committee discussed and identified some of the major needs and concerns of

The committee identified the program area of health and nutrition for educational in depth programming starting in 1984.

Health care costs are continuing to rise at an alarming rate. To avoid the high cost of health care, Texans are encouraged to prevent illness. Nutrition affects health. Inadequate nutrition has been identified as a possible contributor to coronary disease, cancer, high blood pressure, diabetes, dental caries, and liver disease. Along with diet life style choices also influence health such as stress, limited amount of exercise and smoking.

Educational home economics programs will be available to the public which will address these concerns.

The Family Living Committee members which were present at this week's meeting include: Marie Duncan, Dorothy Underwood, Margaret Corbell, Debbie Corlee, Mattie rose, Edna Bint, Ruthie Keyes, Lois Crenwelge, Genevieve Jones, Alice Brooks, Jane Stark and Janet Thomas, County Extension Agent.

Rotary Governor Visits Local Club

Arlington, District Governor of Rotary Clubs in this region, attended an assemble of the Cisco Rotary Club Wednesday night and paid his official visit to the club at their regular weekly meeting Thursday noon at the Colony Restaurant.

Rev. Risinger, an Arlington minister for some 15 years, told Ciscoans that he was impressed with their club and its possibilities and opportunities for community service.

"Rotary is more than 78 years of age and it is still basically local," the district governor said. "Rotary International has nearly 1,000,000 members in 57 countries with 20,000 clubs." The clubs operate with two slogans: (1) Service above self; and (2) He accomplishes most who serves best," he added.

The club with good and active committees are strong clubs, Rev. Risinger said. He recommended that the Cisco club assign a director to head club service activities, another to urge vocational service, and a third to emphasize community service. The district leader pointed to Rotary's activites on an international level as evidence of the growing value as a service organization. He said that more than 13,000 young people, including over 1,200 last year, have participated in the Rotary Scholarship Program "as our contribution to the leaders of tomorrow."

Allen Masters, president of the Cisco club, introduced the speaker. Guest included Mrs. Risinger and Mrs. Masters along with Cliff Deckard of Coleman.

The district governor inspected club records and discussed the local club's program at the Wednesday night meeting. Rotarian Dell Crockett will be in charge of next week's program.

We never think about, we never plan for, the worst. At least I don't. While that may be an optimistic approach to life, it sometimes presents some problems

There was the time I spent several hours in sub-freezing weather shooting skiers breaking off a headwall on the slopes in northern Wisconsin. Everything went perfectly ... except the film-advance system on the camera, which rather ignominiously chose that day to malfunction. The counter worked, and I ran off half a dozen rolls before realizing later that night something had gone

Well, I learned my lesson. At least I thought so. So when the outfitters running Algonquin Photo Experience in Ontario, Canada, arranged for me to attend a moose shoot, I decided nothing would go wrong.

I began the trip by packing all my photo gear in a single bag which I could carry on the plane with me. I removed all the unexposed film cartridges from the boxes and slipped them into a large plastic bag. As I passed through the airline X-ray inspection station, I removed the bag and asked that it be hand checked to avoid possible X-ray damage. No problem.

When I arrived at Algonquin National Park some 200 miles north of Toronto, I double-checked all my gear to make sure everything was in working order. All lenses were safely packaed in crush-proof lens cases, and the camera bodies, flash, and other accessories were wrapped in impact-absorbing foam. The motorized launch took us from the dock to the base camp, where I carefully unpacked all my equipment and made ready for that afternoon's canoe expedition up river in search of moose. Organizers Richard Sharp and Dave Frame swore that, in two years of running the northwoods workshops, they'd never failed to see big game. I was getting a bit antsy by then, anxious but I was careful not to be slipshod. When the time to set out arrived, everything was stowed properly in the canoe. I'd brought along plenty of plastic bags to keep the equipment dry. Nothing was going to go wrong.

Nothing. Ahh, the optimism, again. We'd been paddling for just a couple of hours when I realized there were a few bugs in the plans. It seemed that every few hundred feet or so, I took the camera out for a photo. I quickly grew tired of zipping and unzipping the camera bag and finally left the bag open with the covered lens peeking out. Each time I pulled my paddle in to grab the camera - and while changing sides from left to right - a light spray of water accompanied it, and I had to make a conscious effort to keep the gear dry.

After another hour or so, I noticed something else I hadn't planned on. The water from the paddles had accumulated in the bottom of the canoe, run back to my position, and pooled around the camera bag, which was water repellent, but not resistant. Then, as evening drew near and the temperature of the water dropped, the dampness in the bag condensed on the lenses as I brought them out. Each time I went to shoot, I had to wait a few second until the lenses cleared.

Finally, after nearly 41/2 hours of paddling, we met success in the form of a cow, her two yearlings, and an amorous bull moose with a rack so large, he could have used it as a sail in a C-Class race. As we beached the canoes and climbed ashore to take the shots we'd waited for, I couldn't help but think how lucky we'd been. The equipment was still in relatively good shape. We got our photos. And we returned intact.

Ahh, but back at base camp, the news wasn't quite so good. The second group that set out ran into rougher canoeing. One daring duo hung their canoe up on a submerged log and, in an effort to free it, nearly swamped themselves. They didn't actually tip it, but they did manage to take on water - which swooshed through one of the photographer's bags, leaving his four lenses and two Canon bodies swamped. The results: all his equipment was useless, and repairs would run several hundred dollars.

He should have had a waterproof bag, of course and kept it closed whenever he wasn't rummaging around for his equipment. It could never have happened to me, of course. Nor will it happen to you. But still, I can't help but wonder

When you go to the store and find canned goods on sale you are inclined to buy more than you need. Then if you are prone to forgetting foods in the larder or tucking away something special for some emergency that never seems to come, try dating each label when you first unpack the groceries. As you put foods away, move older cans and packages to the front.

When you reach for an ingredient take a second to check that you are following good nutrient accounting practices by using the Fifo method....first in, first out.

If necessary, plan at least one meal a month specifically to use aging products. And if you stare at the can or package regularly with no incentive or interest in using it, give it to someone who Storage time and temperatures are significant factors in assessing the nutritional life expectancy of any foods. This is especially true of processed and packaged products. Even the seemingly durable grocery items, like powdered milk, an item we rarely think of as "going bad" are affected.

Next week, we will talk about temperatures and how it affects your canned goods.

The programs for the past week included: Janet Thomas of the Extension office presented a nutrition talk entitled "Centsible Meals"; Eastland came to Cisco for game day; and Dr. M.A. Treadwell presented several musical numbers using his "Musical Saw" accompanied by Mrs. Treadwell at the piano.

Award Presented Stamey

O.L. Stamey, retired educator and long-time Cisco church and civic leader, was presented a Presidential Citation for Outstanding Contributions in Lionism in ceremonies Wednesday noon at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Cisco Lions Club.

The presentation was made by Dr. Bill Auvenshine of Ranger, a past Lions district governor, who read a letter that accompanied the handsome medal from E.J. (Ebb) Grindstaff, of Ballinger, immediate past president of Lions International who conferred the honor on Mr. Stamey

Mr. Stamey, a past president of Cisco Lions and past district governor in 2E-1, has been a Lion for 47 years and has a perfect attendance record for that period of time.

In making the presentation, Dr. Auvenshine noted that "O.L. Stamey is a Lion who always wanted to be remembered as an outstanding past district governor' rather than as a 'good district governor'. And he has the reputation throughout the district as a past district governor who is over the years. Dr. Auvenshine said that only 200 presidential citations for outstanding Lions are presented in a year in the United States. This award, he noted, is the second highest in Lionism - second to the coveted Ambassador of Good Will for Lionism, he added. In his early 80s, Mr. Stamey remains active in church and community affairs and never misses a Lions Club meeting. He is a frequent speaker to Lions clubs in the area. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stamey are retired educators and their only son is Dr. Joe Stamey, professor at McMurry College in Abilene. He was a guest at

IN TEXAS SCHOOLS TSTA Tips For Parents

The Texas State Teachers Association wants to become partners with parents in advancing quality education in our Texas public schools. The following is the first in an eight part series to assist parents in helping children learn at home, as well as in school. The first series focuses on "reading."

Developing Good Readers, Part I

Read to your child often. Make a pleasant experience of the event, making sure the session is relaxed and unhurried. Let your child choose a favorite story and explain pictures and answer questions about it. As time goes by you can stop in the middle of a familiar story and ask what happens next. This encourages memory skills and reinforces the material in the text.

Begin talking to your child from infancy. Make sounds, call attention to sounds and connect and explain activities as you perform them. Listen and encourage conversation with you.

Answer questions patiently and as promptly as possible. Play listening games with your child. A good bedtime game is to listen quietly and identify as many sounds as possible-heartbeats, breathing, traffic. Listening attentively is essential in learning

When your child is learning to read, try "labeling" household objects with the child's name printed in bold letter on masking tape. Encourage the reading of signs, posters-everything!

Besides regular children's materials, read aloud from ordinary books, magazines, newspapers, advertisements. Your child will begin to recognize the is a part of everyday life that conveys useful, interesting and amusing

Gordon Spot

Farm Irrigation Costs Can Be Cut

DeMarquis Gordon

The Honeydew aphids on pecan trees are causing a lot of concern around the county. As the yellow aphid feeds on the underside of leaves, "honeydew" or sugar water is excreted by the pest. This sticky liquid falls down through the tree and is deposited on the upper leaf surface of leaves over which the aphid feeds.

The honeydew aphid does not do a great amount of damage to the trees unless the infestation is severe. If the infested trees are in your yard or near the driveway the greatest problem is the honeydew that falls on walks and cars. In this case, most people want to control the aphids.

There are several ways to control the honeydew problem. If the trees are not too large the aphids can be washed off with the use of a water hose provided you have good water pressure. Another method is to spray the trees with Malathion or Zolone or Guthion. Sevin will not kill the aphid. If you spray your trees for weevils this week and you have a honeydew problem you should mix one of the aphid insecticides with Sevin.

We are seeing more and more oak trees with drought injury. The first sign is browning of the leaf margins with the dead area progressing into the leaf and causing dessication of leaf tissue between the veins toward the mid-rib. These leaves begin to fall and in some cases the trees die. This happens even in lawns where the lawn grass is regularly watered. The oak tree roots are very deep and due to our drought for the past several years the root zone area has dried out. The drought of 1980 was especially hard on trees. The results of drought is still showing up.

These symptoms can also be man-made. An accumulation of salt in the soil will cause drought symptoms. Salt accumulation can develop from using irrigation water containing salts

> ii.....iii AGRICULTURE HEARTHEAT,

or by the use of excessive rates of inorganic fertilizer. High salt concentration simply reduces the root absorption by the root hairs and may finally result in death of the roots. This salt injury, which is a form of man-made injury, is usually more severe in dry weather than in times with adequate rainfall

Other man-made drought injury to oak trees may be caused by soil compaction, new construction near the trees, disturbance of the soil such as plowing or adding soil, gas leaks or misuse of herbicides.

Plant Extension Pathologist Dr. Chip Lee, told us oak trees are showing these symptoms, throughout Central and West Texas

Valuable yard trees showing these drought symptoms may be helped by slow, deep soaking with good quality water. Do not over fertilize these trees as this might add to a salt problem.

Be on the look out for the Pecan weevil on pecan trees. They may not be a problem until we get a general rain. Some areas have had showers while some have not. Those who have some soil moisture under the trees should look for the weevils and spray when they see one or two of these insects. If pecan shuck worms have been a problem in the past, now is the time to control them for this year.

COLLEGE STATION --Irrigation fuel bills may have many farmers thinking about ways to cut pumping

Some producers with center-pivot and linearmove systems are changing from high or moderate pressure sprinklers to lowpressure sprinklers or spray nozzles as a means of reducing irrigation pumping costs.

Wayne Keese, an agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, says lower pressure does lower the power requirement and the amount of fuel needed to pump the same quantity of water. He estimates the fuel reduction to be in proportion to the reduction in total pump operating head or pressure.

Switching to low-pressure sprinklers or spray nozzles also has other advantages and disadvantages, Keese

Application efficiency may be improved in some cases. That is, less water has to be pumped to get the required amount into the soil if the soil can absorb the water at the rate it's applied.

Runoff occurs when some soils do not absorb water fast enough. Runoff does not have to leave the field to be detrimental, notes Keese. Water may simply run from high spots to low spots so that under-irrigation and over-irrigation occur within the field.

Micro-basins or furrow dikes are being used by some producers to hold the water in place under low-pressure systems

Changing the system's operating pressure will also affect the pump, says the engineer. Lower pressure usually means the pump will produce more water unless its speed is reduced. Although this sounds good, the pumping rate may exceed the well's capacity. Speed can easily be adjusted on pumps driven by engines, but speed reduction is not possible when the pump is driven by a direct-connected electric motor.

Keese recommends investigating proposed changes carefully. While farmers may benefit from reduced pumping costs and higher application efficiency by changing to low-pressure change may also require management practices.

House, which was damaged in a fire last Tuesday night, might well be considered for a Christmas in May project by the community. That's an idea that Fire Chief C.W. Guthrie submits.

The building loss was partly covered by insurance. If a lot of folks rolled up their sleeves, took their hammers and saws and went to work the building could probably be restored with the money from the insurance buying materials, Mr. CWG says.

The loss included a piano. Let's all think about Mr. CWG's idea and tell the Chamber of Commerce what we think of it.
