

Guerrillas Step Up Efforts

By United Press International
Rebel Afghan tribesmen in a sensitive eastern area of Afghanistan have intensified their guerrilla activities despite the presence of Soviet troops, a Western diplomat in Pakistan said today.

The guerrillas, loyal to the Yunis Khalis faction of the Hizbi Islamic group, operate in the area surrounding Jalalabad, a provincial capital 60 miles from the Pakistani border.

There's been an intensification of their activity — ambushes, sabotage and the like. Viet Cong kind of things," the diplomat said. "They are beginning to do the kind of things I've thought they would have to do."

There was no immediate response in Afghanistan to President Carter's grim attack on Soviet intervention in his State of the Union message Wednesday night, but a few hours before the speech Afghan President Babrak Karmal expressed "deep gratitude" for the Russians' military aid.

Vowing to bolster defense ties with Afghanistan's neighbors, President Carter put the Soviet Union on notice that it must pay a "concrete price" for the Red Army invasion of the Central Asian nation.

In his address to the Congress and the nation, Carter said the United States would use military force if necessary to protect strategic, oil-producing Persian Gulf countries from "outside forces."

The implications of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan could pose the most serious threat to world peace since the Second World War," Carter said.

The president said verbal condemnation of the Soviet action "is not enough."

"The Soviet Union must pay a concrete price for their aggression," Carter said. "While the invasion continues, we and other countries cannot continue business as usual with the Soviet Union."

A summit of Islamic nations called by Saudi Arabia to discuss the Soviet invasion of Moslem Afghanistan is set to open Saturday and Carter made it clear the United States was willing to work with them to counter the Kremlin.

"In the weeks ahead we will further strengthen political and military ties with other nations in the region," he said, adding, "there are no irreconcilable differences between us and any Islamic people."

His remarks apparently were also directed at easing tensions between the United States and Iran, which borders Afghanistan.

Man Describes Murder Scene

By KAY BELL

Only hours before his death, Texas Tech University graduate student Claude Ventry Bridges had appeared confident he was well on his way to completing his doctorate and reaching his goal of becoming a university professor, the slain student's advisor testified this morning.

A shaken, but controlled, Paul Dixon was the first witness called by prosecutors this morning as the state opened its murder case against Maurice Eugene Dancy, 19, who lived only a block from Bridges, is accused of beating and stomping to death the 31-year-old Bridges. Dixon, who said he knew the graduate student "very well" and was chairman of Bridges' doctoral committee, discovered Bridges' body about noon Aug. 21, 1979, at the student's 2824 23rd St. home.

Speaking slowly and softly, Dixon told the 99th District Court jury he first met Bridges in the fall of 1977 when Bridges came to Texas Tech to work on his doctorate in education.

"He was investigating the philosophical ideas around the field of higher education and was hoping to find ways to improve university settings," Dixon said. "He had hoped one day to be a professor at a university," added Dixon, himself an associate professor of education at Texas Tech.

The bearded professor said he had last seen Bridges alive about 2 p.m. Aug. 20, after the graduate student had completed the first four hours of doctoral qualifying exams.

"Upon completion of the exam, we talked," Dixon said. "He seemed confident. The exams are a difficult process and there is an amount of anxiety."

"I believed he was doing excellent. He thought so also. He appeared confident and calm," Dixon said, glancing down at his lap.

Dixon told the jury, which was seated Wednesday afternoon after a full day of questioning by the attorneys, that Bridges was to return to the campus the morning of Aug. 21 for the last four-hour examination sequence.

Dixon said he was a few moments late to work that morning and did not see Bridges.

"I waited for some length of time for him to come in (to my office), thinking perhaps I had missed him somewhere," Dixon said.

"About lunch, another graduate student and I were talking," he said. "We decided to go over there (to Bridges' house) because we had become concerned."

Upon pulling into the driveway of the Bridges' home, Dixon said, he noticed the student's car was missing and the front door of the house was open. He said he and the other student went to the door and entered.

"I saw the body of Claude Bridges lying between the couch and fireplace," Dixon said haltingly. "The body was face down, its head facing toward the north."

Russians Attack New U.S. Policy

By The Associated Press
The Soviet news agency Tass today described as absurd President Carter's claim in his State of the Union message that the Persian Gulf area is a sphere of vital interest to the United States.

In a Washington-dated dispatch, the news agency said Carter emphasized "the claims of the U.S. administration to the 'right' to interfere in the internal affairs of other states which possess raw materials or lie on oil-supply routes."

Tass said Carter "arbitrarily" proclaimed the Persian Gulf area as a sphere of vital interest. He made no secret, the news agency said, that "at the basis of the false thesis of the 'vital interests' of the U.S. in the Persian Gulf lies a desire to keep the dominant position of American monopolies in the region."

"Carter alleged that there exists some 'threat' to the 'free movement of Middle East oil,' a threat allegedly coming from the Soviet Union," Tass said.

"The absurdity of Washington claims that the Persian Gulf area is a sphere of U.S. 'vital interests' is an axiom which needs no proof and which is especially obvious to the peoples of the region or countries lying in immediate proximity to it," the Soviet news agency added.

Tass went on: "Equally groundless is the president's assertion concerning mythical threats to the movement of Middle East oil from any side, if not to mention the United States, of course."

In Washington, Congress appears ready to back President Carter's tough new doctrine aimed at containing the Soviet thrust toward the oil lifelines of the Middle East. But reaction to reviving peacetime draft registration is decidedly mixed.

Carter used the annual State of the Union address to reverse much of the foreign and military policy established in the first three years of his administration. He drew support from many Republicans as well as from leaders of his own party.

But some long-time advocates of bolstering the nation's military defenses were openly skeptical about the president's determination to fully develop his new approach.

Many Republicans claimed Carter is exploiting the foreign policy challenge posed by the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan to quell criticism of what they said are the overall failures of his administration.

The president's speech Wednesday night before a joint session of Congress was interrupted repeatedly by applause.

The loudest and most sustained ovation came when Carter said neither he nor the American people will support sending an Olympic team to Moscow while Soviet occupation troops remain in Afghanistan.

The president also confirmed that the Soviet action in Afghanistan has caused him to shift his strategy in the continuing effort to persuade Iran to release 50 American hostages held in Tehran since Nov. 4.

He said the United States now will attempt to convince Iranian leaders "that the real danger to their nation lies to the north from Soviet troops in Afghanistan and that the unwarranted Iranian quarrel

Deposits Set Record Here

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With most of a bumper cotton crop in and the non-appearance of a predicted recession, Lubbock is in much better shape going into 1980 than its economic indicators portended six months ago.

Reporting record deposits of some $1.2 billion, bankers attribute the improvement mostly to the cotton crop, which was planted late but was aided by generous rains through the summer and matured quickly through a hot, dry September.

Deposits at year-end were up about 10 percent over the $1.1 billion total at the end of 1978. However, inflation running at about 13 percent during the year makes the picture slightly less glowing.

David Collier, executive vice president of Lubbock National Bank, said most retail stores in Lubbock "had one of their best months in history" in December.

"The recession has not materialized, and the consumer was a strong purchaser," Collier said.

"We feel the economy in '79 finished very strongly, especially the retail business. We're very optimistic in the 1980s both for business and agriculture."

Lubbock National finished the year with almost $330 million in deposits and pulled to within about $12.5 million of the First National Bank, which has been the biggest bank in town throughout Lubbock history. Lubbock National was second by about $23 million at the end of 1978.

Douglas Boren, president of Security National Bank, said Lubbock residents "have been earning good incomes and have been spending the money."

"The attitude of people for the coming year that I see coming into the bank is very optimistic," Boren said.

Mostly because of the increased popularity of certificates of deposit, he said, total savings at Security National are up by about $2 million over a year ago.

"People are looking for ways they can keep their money working, and having it in a savings-type instrument is the thing to do," he said.

Security National increased its deposits from $27.4 million in December 1978 to $30.7 million last month.

The importance of cotton to the Lubbock and South Plains economy is evident in deposits through the fourth quarter, when most of the crop came in.

Lubbock National was typical with $284.6 million on Sept. 30 and $329.9 million on Dec. 31 — a gain of about $45 million in just three months.

The new Southwest Lubbock National Bank, an independent affiliate of LNB, gained in deposits from $1.5 million a year ago to $9.8 million in December.

First National gained about $30 million — from $312 million to $342 million — through the last quarter of the year. FNB lost about $18 million in deposits, president Howard Yandell said, after the

Cable Firm May Owe Back Taxes

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The possibility that Lubbock Cable TV may owe the city additional tax money because of the firm's failure to pay franchise taxes on its Home Box Office business emerged at a City Council meeting this morning.

The question about the franchise taxes came up while members of the City Council were considering a merger request by Lubbock Cable TV Manager Jim Brown.

The proposed merger would be between Cox Communications, Inc., which owns the local cable service, and General Electric. Because the cable service has a franchise with the city to operate here, the council must approve any merger affecting ownership of the company.

Council members agreed that the question about the franchise taxes must be settled before they will consider the merger request.

Councilman Alan Henry led today's questioning of Brown about the cable company's service here. And Henry was the one who zeroed in on the possibility that the cable service owes the city more tax money.

Brown told the council that his firm had not been paying franchise taxes on its HBO receipts. But he said that issue would have to be taken up with the corporate representatives of Cox Communications.

City Attorney John Ross advised the council that he believes the cable company should be paying franchise taxes on a

Stone's Attorney Pushes Challenge To Evidence

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PLAINVIEW — The battle over the admissibility of evidence in the murder trial of self-professed witch Loy Stone remained a stalemate this morning.

Stone and his wife, Louise, are accused of the Halloween 1977 murder of 15-year-old Roxanne Casas, a Dimmitt schoolgirl who died that night after being struck by a shotgun blast as she rode in a pickup near the Stones' rural Castro County residence. No trial date for Mrs. Stone has been set.

Prosecutor Jimmy Davis produced four witnesses, among them former Dimmitt Chief of Police Joe Ben Mitchell and Castro County Sheriff Granville Martin, in his attempts to show the chain of custody of a shotgun and some shells allegedly taken from the Stones' residence after the shooting.

Castro County sheriff's deputy Lonny Rhynes testified that he could identify two empty shotgun shells he found at the Stones' place by two notches he had carved into each of them. But under sharp cross-examination by defense attorney Travis Shelton, Martin could not positively identify a shotgun produced in court as the one Stone handed over that night.

"Did you record the serial number of the shotgun you got from the Stones?" asked Shelton.

"I don't remember for sure whether I did or not," Martin said. "It looks like it."

"You haven't seen this evidence in 26 months since you turned it over," Shelton said. "How many guns like that would there be in Castro County?"

"Lots of them," the sheriff replied.

Mitchell, who had been police chief less than a month at the time of the shooting, also was unable to say for sure whether the evidence in question was the same as he had seen after the shooting.

The morning's proceedings were conducted outside the presence of the jury, which has been in the courtroom only briefly since Tuesday. The seven women and five men hearing the case are not expected back until at least mid-afternoon, after the questions surrounding the evidence have been resolved.

Jobless Picture Bright In City

Unemployment reached its lowest level in six years last month in Lubbock as total employment in the city rose to an all-time high.

Only 2.4 percent of the labor force, or 2,560 persons, were unemployed in mid-December. Figures released by the Texas Employment Commission show the unemployment rate had not been lower since 1974.

The rate was substantially lower than the 3.1 percent unemployment recorded in November and the 3.9 percent rate for December 1978.

Total employment during the month reached an all-time high of 102,490 and the civilian labor force climbed above 105,000 for the first time since December 1978.

However, the 105,050 persons in the labor force fell short of the previous all-time high of 105,420.

TEC officials attributed the record employment level to an increase in agricultural employment during the month as cotton harvest and ginning activity peaked during December. Also, both wholesale and retail trade added about 840 extra jobs during December to cope with Christmas shoppers.

However, a 4 percent unemployment figure is expected in March because of seasonal decreases in almost all nonagricultural categories and a lull in agricultural activity.

During the first quarter of the year, TEC officials predict 2,180 workers will be "pared from the mid-December level," with nearly two of three of those coming from the retail trade segment.

The opening of a new large retail store during the first quarter could do much to reabsorb many of those workers into the labor force, says TEC.

Vandals Take High Toll In City

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Rolling up windows and locking doors won't stop it. Dishing out harsher penalties would do little good because the guilty are seldom caught.

The crime does not result in death or bodily injury. But it has not given way to an increased Lubbock police force, and inflation has made it a more serious offense.

Vandals — usually fleet of foot and armed with no more than a rock, ice pick or can of paint — cost Lubbockites more than a half-million dollars in 1979. More specifically, $679,689, compared to an estimated loss of $350,906 in property during 1977.

Shattering car windows appears to be their favorite hobby, with tire slashing running a close second. Other vandalism reports in the city last year varied from throwing a head of cabbage through a house window to banging up a trash dumpster.

Arrests were few. Of the 3,539 cases reported in 1979, only 262 were cleared, according to Lubbock Police Department records.

Criminal mischief is seldom an act of retaliation against another person, Lubbock police Sgt. Doyle Nelson said. This means a suspect can't be tracked down by simply finding out who has a grudge against the property owner.

Police suspect the majority of vandals are juveniles running in small crowds who have been doing "a little drinking and (marijuana) smoking" and are in the mood for some "hell-raising."

If that is the case, there was a lot of "hell-raising" going on Dec. 31 when more than 20 Lubbockites told police they had fallen victim to vandals. Most of the complainants were beginning the new year shopping for new windows for their damaged vehicles.

That morning, a city-owned trailer containing several small sailboats was discovered dumped in Maxey Swimming Pool at 4007 30th St. An estimated

DR. LAMB

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — Since being advised to stick to a high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet to help maintain a more even blood sugar level, I discovered dry roasted unsalted peanuts were a handy emergency food. Now not only am I dependent on them but I'm very fond of them. I substitute peanuts for at least one of the small frequent meals I must eat daily. I'd like to know how peanuts compare to other protein foods. Are there any other nuts comparable, such as blanched almonds? Is there any reason to limit my intake of peanuts other than the calorie count?

DEAR READER — Peanuts do have lots of calories. You can get an idea of what your dry roasted peanuts contain by looking at the values for raw peanuts. Three-and-a-half ounces contain 564 calories. Your roasted peanuts, because of loss of moisture, will have more calories per gram. Raw peanuts by weight are nearly half fat and over 70 percent of their calories is fat. Approximately 15 percent of their calories is saturated fat. Now, like all other plant substances, they contain no cholesterol but they must be considered a high-fat food. The high-fat content and the consequent high-calorie intake really are the chief disadvantages. They do contain a reasonable amount of protein of reasonably good quality, although it could not be classed as a source of complete protein.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 39, Hypoglycemia, Low Blood Sugar, to give you a better understanding of the relationship of diet to low blood sugar problems. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Now it's perfectly true that peanuts and other nuts would be a fairly good food for such a diet other than the enormous number of calories that they contain. After all, they're not particularly high in carbohydrates and what they have takes a while to digest. Since the nuts are eaten in solid form, it takes a while for them to be emptied out of the stomach and for the nutrients to be absorbed into the bloodstream. Therefore, they won't run your blood sugar up and cause rebound low blood sugar.

There are some animal studies that show that animals eating large amounts of peanuts are more prone to developing fatty-cholesterol deposits. However, there was also a lot of cholesterol in the diet. So if you are eating lots of nuts, you might need to be particularly careful to limit your source of cholesterol intake.

Almonds and most of the nut family have similar problems in that 70 to 80 percent of the total calories is from fat. That may not be good from a circulation point of view but for a person who has low blood sugar, the fat content delays emptying of the stomach and may be helpful if you really do have low blood sugar.

The nuts that have the least amount of saturated fat are: walnuts, pecans, almonds, hazel nuts and hickory nuts. About 80 percent of the fat in coconuts is saturated fat and the same applies to coconut oil.

Pamphlet Called Offensive

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Bowing to pressure from state lawmakers, Rhode Island health officials have stopped distributing copies of a pamphlet about venereal disease that includes street language and drawings of scantily clad women.

Health officials used federal funds to buy copies of the pamphlet, called "Clap-trap" and modeled after underground comic books. Copies were available at the Health Department office in Providence but were not distributed elsewhere.

Sen. William C. O'Neill, D-Narragansett, said this week health officials removed copies of the offending pamphlet after he and other lawmakers objected.

O'Neill said he was not against distributing information about venereal disease, but called the pamphlet in question "offensive." He said a Health Department official to whom he complained was "shocked" by it.

Another lawmaker who objected was Rep. Kevin Horan, D-Pawtucket.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Iowa Just The Beginning

WHAT ACTUALLY took place in the much-touted Iowa caucuses this week is a far cry from the winner-take-all preference vote which stories generated by The Big Three television networks suggested.

All that happened at each party's 2,531 caucuses was the choosing of delegates to its 99 county conventions next spring.

At those 99 county conventions, delegates will be selected for their party's state convention in early summer.

At the state convention, delegates will be chosen either to the Republican national convention in Detroit or the Democratic national convention in New York City.

The not-so-important nature of this media Big Event aside, it was interesting if not instructive to watch the caucuses work.

THE PRECINCT-level caucuses differed slightly between the two parties.

In the Republican Party, each person attending got to vote for whoever he or she wanted. The delegates then were apportioned according to the percentage of the vote each presidential candidate got at each caucus.

Candidate organizations then selected the delegates to the county conventions.

The Democrats did it differently. Once it was determined by a show of hands how many of those attending each caucus were for a given candidate (uncommitted was a possibility), the total delegation to the county convention was divided proportionately among the contenders.

The exact number of votes for each candidate, Republican or Democrat, was then totaled statewide and reported as a straw vote.

Historically, only a small percentage of the state's voters turn out for the caucuses.

FOUR YEARS AGO, for example, 619,000 Iowans cast their votes for Jimmy Carter in the general election. But only 38,000 bothered to vote in the Demo caucuses that year.

Thus, the Iowa caucuses stand not so much as a popular preference vote but as an organizational test of which candidate can deliver the most supporters to each of the 2,531 meetings. The candidate who best translates popularity into warm bodies on caucus night emerges as the "winner."

All that candidate really wins, of course, is some great publicity. But that's what counts as far as presidential hopefuls are concerned.

By the time Iowa does select its convention delegates next summer, each hopeful is hoping he'll be the front-runner far and away in his party and nothing that happens at the Iowa state conventions will matter much to him anymore, anyway.

John D. Lofton:

CIA Secrecy Not Undemocratic

WASHINGTON—Morton Halperin, considered to be perhaps "the most important" Capitol Hill lobbyist regarding intelligence matters, is against all CIA covert activities because, he says, they are anti-democratic in that their secrecy denies the American people the right to know what their government is doing.

As the law is now written, proposed CIA covert actions are made known to numerous important Americans, including the President and 163 members of Congress and their staffs, representing eight congressional committees.

But, putting this aside, Halperin's statement deserves a response.

Secrecy per se is not undemocratic at all. For centuries, unauthorized visitors were not allowed in the British House of Commons. In our own country, all of the early Revolutionary colonial assemblies were secret, as were the proceedings of the First Continental Congress.

IN 1787, THE Constitutional Convention was conducted entirely in secret.

On May 28-29, at the prompting of Pierce Butler of South Carolina to guard "against licentious publications of their proceedings," the convention voted that no copy of the journal could be made without permission; that delegates only could inspect the journal; and that nothing spoken within the convention could be published, printed or communicated unless authorized.

At the time, a delegate from Virginia, George Mason, called the secrecy rule a "necessary precaution to prevent misrepresentations or mistakes."

In later years, James Madison insisted that "no constitution would ever have been adopted by the convention if the debates had been public." Historian Clinton Rossiter writing in his book, "1787: The Great Convention," says:

"The remarkable thing about the secrecy rule is not that it was so readily adopted, but that it was so rigidly observed by the delegates and so uncompromisingly accepted by the press and public..."

It is a fact of huge consequence that the spirit and customs of the age encouraged the men of 1787 to produce "an open covenant, secretly arrived at."

"INDEED, IT MAY be argued plausibly that only by being somewhat less than fully democratic in two crucial aspects—the process of selection that left the anti-nationalists at home, and the decision for secrecy that left them quite in the dark—was the convention able to write a charter on which a stable democracy could arise and flourish."

So careful was George Washington concerning the convention's procedure that he decided to record nothing in his diary.

So careful was Madison in writing to a cousin, the president of William and Mary College, that the exasperated cousin wrote Madison: "If you cannot tell us what you are doing, you might at least give us some information of what you are not doing."

ONE MAN'S OPINION Kenneth May The Burning Bush

MY NEIGHBOR Twice Removed says it was neat the way the football season and the political season dovetailed this week, with Iowans picking Presidential preferences Monday.

From the Super Bowl to the Bloopers Bowl without missing a beat.

Four years ago, Iowa voters gave the nation Jimmy Who. This year, it was Jimmy Boo-Hoo.

A person using a low-quality sneeze tissue is practicing Achoo-puncture.

John Connally campaigned for 36 straight hours in Iowa to prove he has more stamina than aging Ronald Reagan, only to find himself Bushed and Reagan ambushed.

GETTING "BIG MO" on his side in Iowa, just as Jimmy Carter did four years ago, is enough to convince George Bush he is "going all the way to the White House."

The former Midland oilman brought himself out of the 10-man pack and punctured the widely held belief that Reagan had the Republican Presidential nomination all but wrapped up.

A Bush confidant here told me Monday that the Texan would exceed his own public predictions of a second-place finish and surprise everyone by winning the Iowa straw vote that night.

After the count, the Reagan forces naturally tried to play down Iowa, saying it was not a true test but was mostly a victory of organization.

They're right, but the fact remains that the

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

We Have Hitler's Word On It

WASHINGTON—Poor Hitler. What a pity that a man so widely emulated should be so little honored. But then, history has a way of spurning her great preceptors. All good Machiavellians denounce Machiavelli.

Hitler gave our century its characteristic form of government: national socialism.

The combination of nationalism and socialism underlies most modern states, despite differences of ideology and terminology.

"Only a planned economy can make intelligent use of all a people's strength." The words are Hitler's, but Lenin, Stalin and Brezhnev would have agreed.

SO WOULD MANY American liberals. Few people, especially among the "educated," see anything wrong with the state assuming sovereignty over a population's resources and destinies. We take for granted that the state is boss.

This is the national socialist creed. Because most liberals share it they are blind to its darker possibilities. This is true even though the dark possibilities are realized far more often than the good ones.

The Communists have been skillful at exploiting this blindness. Since 1932 the Soviets have banned the term "national socialist" for the obvious reason that it fits the Soviet system as snugly as it fits Hitler's.

Yet Communism is nothing more than a variant of the great national socialist principle: that the state has the right to control the people and their resources as it sees fit.

IN A SOFTER form, the same principle underlies the sapping taxation that has begun to undermine our federal system and our personal freedom.

We have forgotten both the rationale and the limits of government power, and among other evils this makes it hard for us to see what's wrong with national socialism abroad.

Western liberals still perceive Communism as essentially Marxist, welfare, reformist. They think of its militarism and secret police as aberrations and excesses, things it could dispense with profitably. This assumes that a big GNP, complete with creature comforts, is the raison d'etre of any modern state.

But the Soviet system isn't geared to the production of wealth for wealth's sake. It is geared to the accumulation of power. This is a matter not of its rulers' subjective intentions but of its entire structure, organization and even culture.

The Soviet mission is imperial. Of course it prefers indirect means whenever possible: even in Iowa results always get blown out of proportion and are therefore extremely beneficial to a "nobody" like Carter in 1976 or Bush in 1980.

Bush, who beat Reagan handily, could point to the unusually heavy turnout and boast that putting together a good organization and motivating people are, after all, good tests of Presidential skills and leadership ability.

He will, as a result of the Iowa victory, get more campaign money than you can shake a Bush at. And if he follows up with a good showing in New Hampshire—he is a Yankee by birth—Bush will become a leading contender.

Just as I predicted several months back, harumph.

JOHN CONNALLY'S poorer-than-expected showing in Iowa will tend to confirm doubts that his personal charisma is enough to get him the GOP nomination.

Not that Connally had been expected to win in Iowa. He and Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, who finished third, had been expected to trail Reagan and Bush.

But Connally himself had hoped for 13 to 18 percent of the straw vote and wound up with only about 10. It was not a death knell but the former Texas governor really needed to finish a strong third to keep his image from fading.

CONNALLY IS NOT out of it, though. Reagan's vulnerability having been exposed, those who begin hedging their bets or jumping off the Reagan ship will not swarm automatically to Bush.

Baker and Connally, with the Southern primaries coming up in March, still are well-positioned to capture the prize. Their challenge at this point is to keep the faith of their followers and chip away at the Reagan defectors.

If Bush is but a flash in the Iowa pan, Connally at this point would appear to be the beneficiary of the Iowa upset. The Texas primary in May could be the ultimate showdown.

As Bush says, Iowa put Big Mo (Big Momentum) on his side. Now he becomes not only the No. 1 challenger to Reagan but also the No. 1 target if Reagan, bloodied and stunned, continues to falter.

The test of Presidential credentials includes not only organizational and leadership skills but staying power. If Bush can come out of Detroit in July with the GOP nomination—and that remains a big "if"—he will be a strong candidate.

CARTER, MEANWHILE, dealt Sen. Ted Kennedy a devastating defeat in the Iowa Democratic caucus.

Kennedy, for some strange reason, began plummeting in the public opinion polls the moment he came down from On High and announced formally as a candidate.

Suddenly humanized, he can recover with a win over Carter in New Hampshire but then he faces those Florida, Alabama and Georgia primaries in the President's stomping grounds.

It's hard to imagine any other Democrat depriving Carter of the nomination at the New York convention in August if the Kennedy magic fails.

Carter and Bush in November? Too early to call.

Afghanistan it insisted it was "invited" to conquer. But this is a matter of means, not ends.

The ends aren't mysterious.

Despite mass education with a stress on technology, the Soviets have produced no new consumer goods: their inventions are confined to weaponry.

Not until 1978 was a public performance of "The Messiah" permitted in the Soviet Union: culture, athletics, chess are subordinated to the national purpose: power.

Do the Soviets want war? No. Neither did Hitler. But Hitler, in pursuit of world power, was ready for war, and so are they.

Nothing could be more reckless than for us to keep removing obstacles to Soviet expansion and then to scramble to set up new obstacles when the Soviet machine is already rolling.

Yet how could one more succinctly describe current American foreign policy?

Sylvia Porter:

Credit Roof Caving In On New Home-Buyer

WASHINGTON—Illness. Job cutbacks. Unexpected but essential heavy home repairs.

This is merely a sampling of the problems that can emerge in 1980 to confront you, a homeowner burdened with debt, and can force you to face a possible default on your mortgage payments.

If the possibility seems even remotely a threat to you now, don't delay.

As the inflation spiral worsened in 1979, the housing cost crisis made the headlines with frightening regularity.

And as the Federal Reserve Board tightened the screws on credit, it further complicated the financial woes of millions of Americans.

IN ADDITION, THE strain on many of you who recently bought your homes has been compounded by a new phenomenon—specifically, you have turned the purchase into a speculation by skimming the profit off one inflated resale after another as a way to move into ever more expensive housing.

For the elderly living on fixed incomes, there has been the threat of being compelled to flee long-established homes because the monthly housing bills piled on top of planned mortgage payments are exceeding their projected ability to pay.

Even two-paycheck families, who are rising into higher income brackets where the tax advantages of owning a home are clear, are discovering the serious economic pitfalls of mortgage payments.

"DELINQUENT PAYMENT," "default," "late charge" and worse—"foreclosure"—are new in the vocabulary of this generation.

But if any of these critical developments is looming in your household, don't try to shrug it off.

Go immediately to the company that loaned you the money to buy your home—and if the company is not nearby, phone! Spell out your problem.

Following are some of the questions you'll be asked. The Department of Housing and Urban Development suggests you have notes before you to help you answer them. For instance:

* WHY DID YOU fall behind in your payments? Be ready to provide facts about the circumstances that resulted in your problem: layoffs, soaring utility costs, rising property taxes, hefty maintenance, whatever.

* What are your current resources?

Total all your current monthly income, including in addition to wages, such sources as: union or disability payments; VA benefits; Social Security; savings accounts; spouse's income; children's income; insurance policies or other assets against which you temporarily may borrow money.

* What are your plans to make and keep your mortgage payments current? Itemize choices that are available to you. Tally your debts and your monthly payments for obligations exclusive of your mortgage.

Switchboard Cuts Energy Use

ATLANTA (AP) — There's no yellow pages listing yet, but the telephone company has developed something that could be called "Dual-An-Energy-Saver," according to an energy industry publication.

What was described as the nation's first energy control system operating through a telephone switchboard has been installed at a 656-room Atlanta hotel. The system is expected to result in an annual 15 percent reduction in energy consumption, Energy User News reports.

Staff engineers at the hotel have been trained to work with the central switchboard and video display terminal, which gives readings on the hotel's electrical loads.

The staff can give "instructions" to the system, changing or substituting directions to all of the units to account for individual load requirements.

The control unit also can send instructions to the system for whatever load cycling may be required, the publication noted.

It added that the system includes consoles, software and other units which mesh with utility meters marking the hotel's heating, ventilating and air-conditioning apparatus in the lobby, restaurant and public rooms.

The program, called the AT&T Energy Communications System, is in the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

NEW YORK (AP) — She is tiny with the delicate features of a polished porcelain figurine. Hardly the image of a revolutionary.

But Nadine Gordimer is a thorn in the side of the South African government. A rather prickly one at that.

As a writer, her novels have stirred the foes of apartheid with words that slash at the system. Three of her books have been banned in South Africa, for periods of up to 12 years.

The ban on her latest work, "Burger's Daughter," was lifted recently on the advice of literary and security experts in South Africa. It originally was outlawed last July, three weeks after its appearance in that country.

The international bestseller tells the story of Rosa Burger, daughter of an Afrikaner communist doctor who dies in jail because of his fight for black liberation. Rosa tries to escape from the commitment she has known all her life. She cannot.

"I'm not politically active in the direct sense," Miss Gordimer said. "But I do take risks. One doesn't talk about them because you blow them, so to speak. They are carefully calculated and if one day the calculation goes wrong, well, there it is."

The South African government does not consider her a political enemy, she said, and she is not under a ban herself and has not had her passport confiscated.

"They regard me as a very disloyal South African," she said. "They probably consider me a pain in the neck. I regard them as the ones who are betraying what real values ought to be there."

"Burger's Daughter" was difficult to document because information on South African communists was virtually nonexistent in that country, Miss Gordimer said. So she had to rely on "trusted friends" who gave her hidden books and documents.

"Most of my writing doesn't need research," she said. "My daily life is a form of research because I'm in contact with what's going on. "I always start with people. If people weren't affected by politics, then there'd be no politics in my novels."

Miss Gordimer was born 56 years ago in a small mining town near Johannesburg. Her mother was British. Her father came from a village in Lithuania.

"I was born into the usual situation of the white colonial," she said. "And when you're born into that situation as a little child, what do you do? You accept it. It seems like something God has ordained."

She was about 12 when she read Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle." This work about Chicago's working class changed Nadine Gordimer.

"I drew the analogy between class and color," she said. "I didn't have to read about the poor working in the stockyards in Chicago. I had them around me — the black mine workers down the road."

Although she supports black majority rule for her country and black liberation, she said she does not sufficiently live what she believes in. "In order to do so, one should live the life of a revolutionary. I often feel I'm not brave enough. "I know I'm not to live the life perhaps I should live. But that would also involve giving up the only thing I can do, and that's writing."

Her position as friend of the blacks and foe of the white regime, presents a nagging dilemma for Miss Gordimer should a violent revolution occur in South Africa. But she said she will not flee her country.

"I have a tremendous amount of trust and admiration for black South Africans," she said. "There are such tremendous people among them who have received so sane in spite of everything that has happened there. I just don't think there are any people like them in the world."

Ultrasound Helps Doctors Spot Potential Pregnancy Problems

By ROBERT G. WAX
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Frank Lieberman knew his wife was pregnant, that there was another life growing inside her. But the reality really hit home when he actually saw a picture of the living, moving fetus still inside the womb.

Doctors, using a sonar-type technique called ultrasound, can now peer inside the uterus to check, without the risks inherent in X-rays, on the progress of the unborn child.

Ultrasound bounces sound waves, too high in frequency to be heard by the human ear, through the body to create a map of whatever is inside.

"It was fascinating, mind-boggling to see the baby in the womb," said Lieberman, proudly showing off pictures of his unborn child. "It was just wonderful to see the life that was there."

Besides obstetric uses, ultrasound has been helpful in diagnosing such things as ovarian masses, pregnancies outside the uterus, gallbladder and liver diseases, gallstones, aortic aneurisms and arterial obstructions.

Dr. Richard Ledner of Cedars-Sinai Medical Center said that with ultrasound, "you don't have to enter the patient's body. There are no needles or instruments put into the body. There is no evidence that ultrasound, in the power and frequency it is being used, has any ill effects on the mother or fetus. It enables us to get large amounts of information not previously available without danger."

The biggest danger anyone can determine right now, he said, would be in long-term fetal monitoring with ultrasound. That might be akin to having your ear against a pinball machine for several hours.

Ultrasound has not replaced the X-ray, Ledner said. There are still some tests in which X-rays can give more information. Ultrasound does not work well on fat persons, for example, because the sound waves do not penetrate deep enough.

Ultrasound is helpful, he said, in preventing problems in delivery. For example, doctors can now tell beforehand if the baby or the placenta is in a position that would necessitate a Caesarean section.

Cost of the test ranges from about $80 to $125. Prospective parents also get their first baby pictures — actually a picture of the screen on which the fetus is shown.

Although the equipment is generally found only in hospitals, more and more doctors, especially gynecologists, are using the machines in their offices.

"We use it for a screening tool," said nurse Diane Blomquist, who runs the ultrasound test as a routine procedure in one San Fernando Valley obstetrician's office.

"We look for any complications of pregnancy, such as multiple births, or baby is due. We check the position of the fetus. It is also valuable for repeat Caesareans."

Some fetal abnormalities, such as hydrocephaly (enlarged head) and neurotube defects can be found with ultrasound, she said.

Karen Lieberman said she was a bit apprehensive about the safety of the test, believing the real effects of ultrasound will not be known for several years.

Realtor Does Not Foresee Drop In Home Prices

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — The real estate industry is changing: The commission structure is being reshaped, franchising is becoming popular, national firms are competing with local outlets, housing concepts are evolving.
 But one change that Ralph W. Pritchard doesn't foresee is a very sharp deflation in single-family home prices.
 "No way in the world," Pritchard said the other day. "Too much of a demand, too much of a shortage."
 Pritchard is this year's president of the National Association of Realtors, which claims 750,000 members and describes itself as the country's largest professional trade organization.
 What does worry Pritchard is what he sees as an insidious growth, one that has the potential of being cancerous a decade from now. It is the erosion of property rights, hidden by seemingly praiseworthy devices.
 Among them he lists zoning devices, overly restrictive building codes, rent control and unrealistic environmental laws.
 "Government bodies at all levels have been slipping regulations into the market bit by bit," Pritchard observes. "The effect has been a gradual smothering of privileges upon which our democratic system is based."

 It may sound preposterous now, he states, but in 1990 a family might have to apply to a government agency for a license to sell its property. He even has a name for it: The Property Selling Bureau.
 It does sound preposterous, a listener commented.
 Pritchard, who heads a 31-office, metropolitan Chicago concern, Thorsen Realtors, part of the Coldwell Banker chain, was equal to the challenge. Realtor presidents generally are well prepared.
 In Washington, D.C., said Pritchard, a seller must first offer his building to the tenants. The tenants have 30 days in which to form an association and another 90 days in which to buy. During this four-month period, the owner may not sell to any other party.
 A new bill would add to the limitations, he continued. It would, he said, restrain the owner from selling to the tenants for more than 10 percent above appraised value, regardless of other, higher offers.
 "The City Weatherization Program in Portland, Ore., is another example," he said. "Bills recently were passed which give single-family homeowners five years to weatherize their homes. If they don't meet requirements, they will not be allowed to sell."

 In Columbus, Ohio, he continued, a bill would permit the city to declare any property "historic," and from then on the property could not be altered by the owner without a special permit.
 While these might be isolated examples, Pritchard sees them as dangers to be dealt with. Isolated examples, he fears, have a tendency to become the generality. He cites "infringements" that have become so.
 —Zoning devices, such as minimum lot size requirements that boost home prices and bar certain economic classes from buying in a neighborhood.
 —Unnecessary or extreme building codes, such as those that require the installation of burglar alarms or dictate the size of bedroom window sills.

 —Rent control, "which hastens the deterioration of housing stock and eventually causes a disproportionate shift of the tax burden to single-family homeowners."
 —Impractical environmental laws that fail to recognize the pressing needs for adequate, affordable housing for a growing population.
 "It is not the motivation that is disturbing," he said, "but rather the usurpation of property rights without just compensation for the owner."
 Laudatory as the motives are, in his opinion they are no more so than the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, a copy of which he had among the many research papers provided him by the national association.
 "No person shall be ... deprived of life, liberty, or property without the due process of law," it states, "nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation."
Scientists Release Brain Wave Study
 LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — A person emits a negative brain wave when something doesn't make sense to him, according to findings by two neuroscientists at the University of California at San Diego.
 Drs. Steven A. Hillyard and Marta Kutas say they tested more than 100 people over 18 months and said the negative wave shows up only when a person does a mental "double take."

Cathedral Begun In 1892 Nearing Completion

NEW YORK (AP) — Tour buses line Amsterdam Avenue at W. 110th Street on Manhattan's Upper West Side. Their passengers mill about a huge stone staircase taking snapshots of one another and the structure.

Few notice the sign welcoming visitors to the "Stoneyard" of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, where they would find the revitalization of an ancient and nearly extinct art — stone masonry.

Five young apprentices work their blocks of limestone toward finished ash-lars for storage off to the side.

Numbered and recorded in a book, the stones will be fitted into place for two 150-foot towers above the facade of the superstructure sometime in the early 1980s. The workers are chipping away toward completion of the cathedral, in progress for nearly 90 years.

The cornerstone for the cathedral at the edge of Harlem was laid on St. John's Day, Dec. 27, 1892. Construction continued uninterrupted until 1916 and World War I.

EQUINOXES EXPLAINED

The points at which the sun crosses the equator are the equinoxes, when day and night are most equal. The points at which the sun is at a maximum distance from the equator are the solstices.

Work resumed after the war but was halted in 1941 with the outbreak of World War II.

Though the structure was nearly completed, the finishing touches could not be added due to lack of money and other community needs. Church leaders felt the pressures from the impoverished community to raise the local standard of living instead of stone towers. In 1967, the scaffolding for the towers was torn down and it looked as though the cathedral would remain two-thirds finished forever.

But in 1971, the Very Rev. James Morton arrived on the scene as the new dean of St. John's. He set to work reviving interest in completion of the monument, challenging the opposition to spending $20 million on the church instead of putting money into the community.

Morton saw the cathedral as a center for the area, symbolically representing the very soul of the neighborhood. He also pointed to the number of local jobs that would be created by a renewal of construction.

On July 21, 1979, the stoneyard officially opened, marking the beginning of a new and, he hopes, final phase in the construction of the Gothic masterpiece.

Two days later, five apprentices, four men and one woman, reported for work and a new experience. A very old craft, but new to them — stone masonry — was being brought into their lives by Master Mason Christopher Hannaway and Master Builder James Bainbridge.

Hannaway was invited by Bainbridge to head the project, since the two had worked together for many years on the Liverpool Cathedral in England. Hannaway started as an apprentice in England in 1932 and has traveled the world working on stone structures.

Hannaway figures completion of the cathedral will take nearly 20 years. Stones will be cut for the two 150-foot towers over the next two years and then raised one by one and set into place.

After that, work will begin on finishing the bare blocks around the doorways and window sills and finishing the two side chapels making the church a completed cross in the Gothic design.

When completed, St. John's will be the largest Gothic structure in the world.

Of the five apprentices, only Tim Smith, 34, of Bellows Falls, Vt., has worked in stone masonry before, restoring stone foundations of old New England buildings. Others include Jose Tapia, James Jamerson, Manuel Alvarado and the one woman, Linda Peer.

A sculptor with a master's degree in fine arts, she worked in social services for a time.

"I enjoy this work because it's related to my sculpture, plus I can earn a living doing something I enjoy," she said. "You have to work with patience, attention to detail and be mentally alert."

Tapia, born in Puerto Rico and raised on Manhattan's Upper East Side, had to drop out of high school to help support the family when his mother died. He worked as a brick mason for more than three years.

"Laying the stone should be the same as brick work, but stone cutting is something completely different," he said. "I wanted to pick up a trade I could depend on for the future."

Jamerson, who has lived in Harlem all his life, says he always dreamed of finding a trade where he could also find success.

"I wanted the job to earn more money, but especially to learn a new trade," said Jamerson, who worked in refrigerator and air conditioning repair for nearly four years. "In case one industry collapses I'll have more than one trade behind me."

Alvarado previously was employed at St. John's under the CETA Program, mounting and hanging exhibitions, answering telephones and guiding tours through the church.

"The idea of developing a new trade, a new skill, really excites me," he says. "I wanted to be a museum curator, but now that I'm into this I feel it might be nice to pass the tradition to others as it is being passed to us."

Lubbock Jury Deciding Fate Of Lawrence McLin

By KAY BELL

Avalanche-Journal Staff
Calling the shooting death of Billy Joe Scott "a matter of pride," prosecutors this morning asked a 140th District Court jury to convict Lawrence V. McLin Jr. of murder for Scott's death.

The three-man, nine-woman panel was deliberating this morning whether McLin was the man who fired a pistol at Scott the early morning of Aug. 25, 1979, wounding the Fort Sill, Okla., soldier once in the chest.

Scott, 23, died about 6½ hours later at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Defense counsel Mike Brown argued this morning that although McLin had fired a .38-caliber pistol the morning Scott was wounded outside of Chilly's club, 1701 Parkway Drive, there were several other shots fired and the possibility of McLin's bullet wounding the soldier was slight.

Wednesday afternoon, the 32-year-old defendant said he had taken his gun from his car and fired it once in the air to "warn off" a barrage of gunfire that had erupted during a scuffle outside the club. McLin said he fired the gun only to "get some protection for the people I was riding with."

"I definitely saw (another man) shooting from the doorway," McLin continued, adding that the other man pointed his gun — also a .38-caliber revolver — in the general direction of the parking lot where Scott was when he was wounded.

Brown characterized the events of that fall morning as "just plain confused" and told the jurors that "things were happening in the twinkling of an eye and all feared for their lives." Under those circumstances, Brown argued, anyone might have fired the fatal shot and testimony from prosecution witnesses identifying McLin as Scott's killer might simply be "assimilated assumptions."

Brown also blasted the police department's investigation of the shooting, pointing out that officers confiscated only McLin's gun for ballistics testing. He added that McLin had offered to turn the weapon over to police after his arrest the evening of Aug. 25.

Lead prosecutor Travis Ware, however, told the panel the police had no reason to pursue the investigation after McLin's arrest because the defendant was the only person matching witness descriptions of the killer.

"What is important is that somebody out there (at Chilly's) knew him," Ware said, pointing at the defendant.

"This killing was a matter of pride,"

Ware continued. "This big man gets thrown to the ground by someone else in front of his peers and what does he do but go get a gun from his car and shoot that man."

Ware also argued that all witnesses, state and defense, had inconsistencies in their testimony and that, "No one can say positively how many shots this man (McLin) fired except him, and think what he's got to lose."

Co-prosecutor Marvin Williams also asked the panel to examine the possible motive behind McLin's testimony and denounced what he termed defense efforts to shift the blame for the shooting.

Williams told the panel a person's actions relay more than testimony, and reminded jurors that it was McLin who sped from the club after the shooting and never reported what he knew about the incident to police until after his arrest.

Testimony in the trial ended Wednesday afternoon, with McLin the last defense witness called to the stand.

He told the jury he did fire a gun that morning, but said he did not point the weapon at anyone.

However, he said, "I definitely saw (another man) shooting from the doorway (of an East Lubbock nightspot). It looked like he was pointing it to the north (parking lot)."

McLin, of 2605 E. Bates St., said he was involved in a scuffle with Scott, Scott's younger brother and some other men outside of Chilly's just before the shooting.

He said he had been thrown to the ground during the scuffle just outside the pool hall's back door and that two men were on top of him when he heard a shot.

"It seemed like it was pretty close by, from the direction of the building," McLin told the three-man, nine-woman panel.

When the shot sounded, he said, the men released him from the ground and he "walked hurriedly, stooped over" to his car at the west end of the back parking lot.

"I reached in my car and got my pistol and stooped down between my and (another man's similar-make) car," McLin told his attorney.

"I shot the gun in the air once," McLin said, demonstrating his action that night by taking his .38-caliber revolver from the courtroom exhibit table, pointing it at the ceiling and pulling the trigger.

"I definitely saw (another man) shooting from the doorway," McLin continued, adding that the other man pointed his gun — also a .38-caliber revolver — in the general direction of the parking lot where Scott was when he was wounded.

McLin said that when he fired his pistol in the air he was trying to "warn off" a barrage of gunfire he said was coming from the club and trying to "get some protection for the people I was riding with."

He added that when he and his two companions, one of whom also had a pistol and fired it that night, left the club, he did not know anyone had been wounded.

On cross-examination McLin told Ware he bought the pistol at a Lubbock pawn shop "for the protection of my house," but routinely carried the weapon in his car, although he knew it was illegal.

Police recovered the weapon Aug. 25 at the East Lubbock home of one of McLin's companions the morning Scott was wounded. McLin had been arrested at that friend's house the previous evening after police were called there in response to a shooting.

McLin returned to the friend's residence with officers and told the occupant to retrieve the gun, which McLin said he had placed under some mattresses in one of the structure's bedrooms.

"Why did you stash your gun at (your friend's) house?" Ware asked the defendant. "Because there was a shooting out there that night, sir," McLin said.

"But why did you hide it?" the prosecutor persisted.

"I just put it away under some mattresses," the defendant answered.

Utility Annexation Expenses Examined

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Lubbock Power and Light Co. engineer told the Public Utility Commission today costs of existing and planned facilities needed to serve recently annexed areas of Southwest Lubbock total more than $1.69 million.

Barney Quillian testified that LP&L has $671,659 worth of existing facilities which would be dedicated to serving the area.

Quillian also said costs of needed future facilities total $1,023,946.

Those figures include $1,206,092 in existing and proposed facilities for the Meadows-Lakeridge area alone.

The other costs would be divided between the Bicentennial and High Country areas. Quillian said LP&L estimates there are more than 5,000 lots in the three areas, including residential, commercial and apartments.

Lubbock Power and Light is seeking certification to provide electric service to the recently annexed areas. South Plains Electric Cooperative, which already serves the area, is opposing the application.

Asked if he thought the co-op was incapable of providing adequate service in the contested area, Quillian said he thought the cooperative could provide adequate service.

LP&L officials said they are not seeking to replace South Plains but are seeking dual certification with the cooperative in the recently annexed area.

LP&L was hoping to finish presentation of its case today but the hearing is expected to continue through the rest of the week.

More Evidence Sought In Right-To-Die Case

BOSTON (AP) — A state Supreme Court judge ordered today that life-sustaining kidney dialysis treatments continue indefinitely for Earle Spring while the judge decides whether to seek more medical evidence about the 78-year-old man's mental condition.

Mark Berson, Spring's court-appointed guardian, asked Judge Francis Quirico to appoint a psychiatrist to determine whether the patient is able to decide for himself whether he wants to live or die.

Earlier, at the request of Spring's family, dialysis was stopped because of their assumption that the retired pharmacist would not have chosen to live in his poor mental condition.

However, the guardian said, "There appears to be recognizable utterances from Mr. Spring expressing a desire to live."

The case, which has gone through months of appeals, has become a rallying point for right-to-life advocates and has taken on political overtones. Affidavits have been provided by Lyndon LaRouche, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Spring was taken Wednesday night from the Holyoke Geriatric Center to the Western Massachusetts Kidney Center in Springfield and given the five-hour dialysis treatment, according to Dr. LeRoy Shear, who has treated Spring at the kidney center in the past.

"If Earle Spring dies tonight for any reason at all, my name is going to be on the front page of the Boston Globe as a murderer," Shear told the Springfield Union.

Spring has incurable kidney disease and must have thrice weekly dialysis treatments to live. Without the treatments, doctors say, he will die in a month.

Doctors Testify In Pinto Trial

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — Two pathologists say a pair of teen-age sisters killed in a fiery Pinto car crash would be alive today if not for the burns they sustained when their car exploded in flames.

Dr. Robert J. Stein, a Cook County, Ill., medical examiner, and Dr. James A. Benz, chief of pathology at Indianapolis Wishard Hospital, testified Wednesday in the trial of Ford Motor Co. that Judy Ulrich, 18, and Lynn Ulrich, 16, suffered only minor injuries when their 1973 Pinto sedan was struck from behind.

No autopsy was performed on the third victim, Donna Ulrich, 18, the sisters' cousin.

Ford is charged with reckless homicide in connection with the August 1978 crash. Prosecution attorneys have been trying to establish through medical testimony that the force of the crash was insufficient to cause traumatic injuries, and therefore it was the car's fuel system that caused the auto to explode.

Teen-Ager Dies From Injuries

Stein said Judy Ulrich, who lived for eight hours after the crash, suffered burns over 95 percent of her body but had no evidence of any external or internal injuries.

Isabel Gonzales, 16, of Lamesa died at 8:30 a.m. today at Methodist Hospital from injuries suffered Jan. 16 in a two-vehicle collision in Lamesa.

Miss Gonzales was transferred to the Lubbock hospital from Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa.

Lamesa police said the teen-ager was a passenger in a car which collided with a dump truck at an intersection about 1:30 p.m. Jan. 16.

The driver of the car, Lioneres Uries, 19, of Lamesa and his 17-year-old wife, Rosie, were treated and released at Medical Arts Hospital.

The driver of the truck was not injured, according to police.

Two Hurt In Crash Southeast Of City

Two persons were injured in a two-car crash at the intersection of FM 1729 and FM 835 southeast of the city about noon today.

Identities and conditions of the injured were not known at 1 p.m. when police and EMS attendants were still on the scene.

The accident reportedly involved a car driven by a woman traveling south on 1729 and an auto driven by a man going east on 835.

The man was trapped in the wreckage of his car for about half an hour before emergency workers could free him.

Popular Driver Returns To Job

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frank Dunn, a nice-guy bus driver suspended for helping riders confused by exact fare regulations, is back on his bus route today.

Transit Authority officials also said Wednesday they would try to solve the problem that Frank Dunn was suspended for trying to circumvent.

Dunn, 44, had been cited numerous times for his exemplary work driving a bus on the city's "culture loop" bus route. His running commentary on the sights along the way had brought him media attention and he received a distinguished service certificate in November.

Dunn, with 13 years on the job, ran afoul of undercover TA inspectors who said he violated the rules by taking dollar bills from passengers who thought one of those and a quarter met the $1.25 exact fare for the tour.

Doctor Keeps Working Despite Wheelchair

MILLERSBURG, Ky. (AP) — Dr. Wayne Linville was too stubborn to give up when cancer placed him in a wheelchair in 1974.

He had graduated from medical school, completed his internship and returned to Millersburg to practice in his hometown.

"One day I noticed lumps on my neck, but dismissed them as part of a viral infection," he recalled. "The lumps refused to go away, and I had exploratory surgery."

The diagnosis: cancer of the lymphatic system.

Linville was stunned but philosophical.

"If you gotta have cancer," he said, "this is the best kind. The survival rate runs between 90 and 95 percent."

During the next eight months, he lost 40 pounds while undergoing 42 radiation treatments. The spinal cord was damaged and he became paralyzed from mid-chest down.

"Depression overwhelmed me," he said. "I had a family to feed and a lot of unpaid bills. The future looked bleak."

He realized he was the only physician in Millersburg and one of four in Bourbon County. He also realized "you don't need legs to deliver babies or assist in surgery. I decided to plunge ahead."

Every morning he's at Bourbon County Hospital, checking on anywhere from 12 to 20 patients. If the need arises, he assists in surgery.

"All they do is lower the operating table a little bit for me," he said. His rounds completed, Linville heads back to his office nine miles away, driving a van with a wheelchair lift. "The place is always crowded," he said. "On a busy day, we may have 50 to 60 people. It gets rough, but I have excellent nurses helping me."

Although some specialists are moving into rural areas, Linville wishes there were more.

"You can look around and find cities overrun with doctors," he said. "Trying to lure them into the countryside is a tough job."

Linville attributes part of the problem to physicians' wives, "who believe they won't be happy in a small town. They think there's no social life."

Linville's wife and two children are his hobby.

"We take two or three short trips a year and we get in a lot of swimming, which is about my only exercise," he said.

Linville, 33, takes chemotherapy to keep the cancer under control.

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: I'm in the process of getting a divorce. I owe money on several charge accounts, and I want to know whether my divorce will affect these accounts. Can the stores close these accounts and call the balance due?

A: Your divorce cannot affect your charge accounts unless there is some evidence to indicate you will not be able to pay your bills. The new Equal Credit Opportunity Act prohibits a merchant, or, for that matter, any other lender, from closing an account or requiring people to reapply for new accounts just because there is a change in their marital status.

Q: My husband's company is transferring us from Texas to Oklahoma. If my son attends a Texas college, will he be charged out-of-state tuition? I understand Texas schools participate in an agreement with some other states where the tuition is not charged if the student had prior residence in that state.

A: If your son has been attending a state university, he could enroll on a resident basis as long as he attends continuously. There are, in addition, other provisions which may provide tuition adjustments. The registrar's office at his state university will supply the tuition policy information you need.

Q: Last August, my husband sold our car to an acquaintance. This man still owes us $300 and agreed to pay within two months. We have a statement acknowledging the debt signed by his wife. He has moved to Iowa and we have not seen any part of our money. What recourse do we have now and what chance of collecting?

A: You have the alternative of either filing suit in this state, then obtaining the services of an attorney in Iowa and filing suit there or filing suit initially in Iowa. To collect, you would need a judgment in your favor in the state of Iowa.

Collection of the judgment, however, would depend exclusively upon the laws of the state of Iowa. You would need to discuss this matter further with an attorney in that state to determine whether or not it would be worth your expenses to try to collect.

Q: My question concerns the so-called "Blue Laws." I read in an article recently that certain business establishments were being sued for selling items in violation of these laws. One of the items, according to the article, was a jar of peanuts. Correct me if I'm wrong, but I thought that peanuts were considered a food item and therefore could be sold. Is this true?

A: Yes. What you refer to as the "Blue Laws" prohibit the sale of certain items on the two consecutive days of Saturday and Sunday. Included are: clothing, furniture, appliances, hardware, jewelry, luggage, drapes, blinds and curtains. This law does not prohibit the sale of any food items.

Q: Is it legal for a person, that is a tourist or even a resident, to carry a pistol in his automobile? I know a guy who has one in his glove compartment.

A: It is illegal to carry a handgun "on or about one's person" unless the person is a peace officer or security, although anyone may possess a handgun on his own premises, while traveling, or engaging in lawful hunting or sporting activity.

The "traveler" exception is narrowly defined, but an out-of-state tourist would probably come within this exception. However, a pistol within ready reach, such as under the seat or in the glove box, has been held to be a violation of the law.

A person may not carry a weapon idly, habitually, or for some unlawful purpose. In Texas there is no provision for a "gun permit" to excuse an individual from the law.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; personal answers not possible.

Defiant Sakharov Urges Support Of Boycott Plan

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei Sakharov today defied the Kremlin's attempt to gag him by asking "sportsmen and lovers of sports" to demand the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. It was seen as an effort to win support for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

Dissident sources said Sakharov telephoned Maria Podyapolskaya, a friend in Moscow, from his banishment in Gorky to expand on a declaration condemning the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

The original declaration, signed by Sakharov and several other Soviet dissidents earlier this week, was addressed to the Soviet and world public, workers, businessmen and religious believers. In his phone call today, the sources said Sakharov asked that "sportsmen and lovers of sport" be added.

In his first message from exile on Wednesday, Sakharov said, "Everything all right." But the government accused the leader in the fight for human rights in the Soviet Union of spilling state secrets to Westerners.

Relatives of the 58-year-old nuclear physicist and his wife received two telegrams Wednesday from Gorky, the industrial city 250 miles east of Moscow to which he was banished on Tuesday.

"Everything all right. Warm but cold on the street. Just unfamiliar. Feel well," said one message. The other said, "Frost, sun, taking walks."

The relatives said they believed the messages were authentic because they were signed "Lyusya," Mrs. Sakharov's nickname.

Sakharov, one of the developers of the Soviet hydrogen bomb and the winner of the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize because of his fight for human rights, had escaped arrest for more than 13 years of dissident activity. But on Tuesday he was taken into custody, stripped of his official honors and exiled from Moscow to the Volga River city of Gorky, which is off limits to foreign reporters.

Sakharov's wife, Yelena, was allowed to accompany him.

The Danish Communist Party newspaper's Moscow correspondent reported that Sakharov was given a choice between deportation to Vienna and the West or exile within the Soviet Union. He chose Gorky because he felt he was "needed in the Soviet Union and not in the West," the paper said.

The government newspaper Ivestia charged that Sakharov "stepped onto the path of direct betrayal of the interests of our motherland." It said he "blurted out things that any government guards as an important secret" and was used "as a channel for intelligence services of imperialist powers to worm out important state secrets of the Soviet Union."

It became impossible to tolerate further sabotage by the renegade and apostate," said the commentary.

Ivestia's charges raised the possibility that Sakharov would be brought to trial and sentenced to prison, as Anatoly Shcharansky was two years ago, or expelled from the Soviet Union.

Although Sakharov had for years freely attacked the Soviet government in interviews with Western reporters, Soviet officials speculated privately that the government finally took action to muzzle him because of an American TV interview with him last week.

Solons Back Olympic Shift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by a White House request for quick action, the House voted 386-12 today to support President Carter's stand on this summer's Moscow Olympics.

But Carter's hope for final approval in Congress before next week ended when Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, delayed action by his Senate Foreign Relations Committee until next week.

The House resolution urges the U.S. Olympic Committee to propose transfer of the games from Moscow or cancellation of the summer Games because of the lack of Soviet-language programming and the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan.

If that fails, the resolution calls on the U.S. committee to boycott the Moscow Games.

The House Foreign Affairs approved the resolution by voice vote on Wednesday.

An identical resolution was approved by the Senate Commerce Committee, but the Senate Foreign Relations Committee must also act before the full Senate can.

White House officials requested that Congress act before this weekend's meeting of the U.S. Olympic Committee. But an aide to Church said the senator would summon members of the Olympic panel to testify at hearings next Monday and Tuesday before a final Senate vote is taken.

The resolution backs Carter's proposal that the Games be moved, canceled or boycotted by U.S. athletes unless Soviet troops withdraw from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

Approval by the Foreign Affairs Committee came after USOC President Robert Kane told the panel Carter's boycott proposal was ill-advised, unpopular with other nations and would leave America "out there alone, swaying in the wind."

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said his nation would back the U.S. stand, however, and several other nations have affirmed the need for some action against the Soviets.

Carter said Sunday that the Moscow Games, scheduled to begin in July, should be moved to another nation or canceled unless Russia pulls back its 85,000-man Afghan occupation force by Feb. 20.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, restating the administration's position before the Foreign Affairs Committee, said Americans don't want "to see our athletes participating in games in Moscow at the same time the Soviet soldiers are crushing the independence of a free nation."

As a last resort, Carter has said, U.S. athletes should boycott the Games. In his State of the Union speech Wednesday, Carter made only a passing reference to his proposal, but it drew one of the longest bursts of applause of the evening.

The proposed resolution urges the USOC to accede to Carter's proposal.

"The Soviet invasion endangers independent countries neighboring Afghanistan and endangers access to a major source of the world's oil supplies," it says. "So, the security of the United States, of the region encompassing Afghanistan and of the entire world is threatened."

Neither the House nor the president can legally order the U.S. committee to boycott the Games.

Heavy Quake Hits Northern California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A powerful earthquake shook much of Northern California on Thursday, setting buildings swaying from Monterey about 150 miles south of San Francisco to Santa Rosa, 50 miles to the north. There were reports of minor damage and injuries from several cities.

The Berkeley Seismographic Station said the quake, which occurred at 11 a.m. PST and lasted about 20 seconds, registered 5.8 on the Richter scale and was centered 30 miles southeast of Berkeley near Livermore.

property, Potts theorizes. An idle juvenile population in Lubbock also is a major contributor, he said.

Fueled by inflation, replacement costs now for a broken windshield alone can run from $200 to $500.

Lee Coil, employee and past president of McWhorter's, Inc., said he sees between six and 30 tires a week which have been purposely destroyed.

"They either ice pick them or slash them with a knife," Coil said. "It's getting worse all the time and there's nothing the police can do to stop it because they can't be everywhere at once."

He said he saw the problem begin to skyrocket about five years ago. "It's keeping up with inflation."

About 40 cars parked within a two-block radius were vandalized in one day last year, according to Coil.

Asked if the insurance companies have been affected by the rise in criminal mischief, Karen Lee, claims adjuster for Employers Insurance of Texas, said, "We definitely have. I've noticed a big difference even from last year (1978)."

She said most of the claims are for damaged vehicles.

Police Lt. Bill Rutherford said one prank is to place a hooked-up garden hose through a house window and turn on the faucet.

"Why does a person do that?" Rutherford asked. "It doesn't make any sense. If it did, maybe we could stop it."

Nelson said most vandals are proud of the damage they have done, and some have been found carrying a newspaper article on a criminal mischief incident they apparently were responsible for.

Vandalism may be worse in Lubbock than records indicate. "There's a lot of criminal mischief that's never reported to the police department," Rutherford said.

with us hampers their response to this far greater danger."

The core of what amounts to a Carter Doctrine on the Middle East was delivered in these words:

"Let our position be absolutely clear. An attempt by any outside force to gain control of the Persian Gulf region will be regarded as an assault on the vital interests of the United States of America. And such an assault will be repelled by any means necessary, including military force."

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia told reporters today that Carter hit exactly the right note.

"The Soviets ought to be put on notice that any intrusion by an outside force will be repelled by force if necessary," he said.

"I think the president laid it out succinctly enough," Byrd continued. "One doesn't write the details out in sand. It is very unwise to delineate and draw lines."

"I think what the president needs is bipartisan support for this policy. And if the Soviets are left with the impression that there is division in this country, they could miscalculate."

Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on the Middle East, said Carter outlined "a clear containment doctrine and if it means what it implies, it is the strongest statement that any president in recent years has ever made."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a vocal and influential advocate of strengthened U.S. military defenses, said the president clearly drew the lines and defined the sphere of vital American security interests in the Persian Gulf region.

But Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the acting Senate Republican leader, saw dangers lurking beneath the surface of the president's words.

Stevens said the president had, perhaps unwisely, committed the United States to defend "every inch of the Persian Gulf."

"If the Carter Doctrine had been in effect before Afghanistan, we'd be at war with the Soviet Union now," Stevens said. "We're attempting to speak strongly while carrying a short stick."

The sharpest divisions in initial reactions to the speech came over the president's proposal that the Selective Service System be revitalized and that peacetime draft registration be revived.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the step is essential and will properly lead to renewal of the draft itself.

Nunn, a member of the Stennis committee, said reviving registration will enhance national security, permit the nation to mobilize rapidly in case of emergency and "demonstrate a degree of will that has been lacking in this country since the Vietnam war."

But the proposal drew much criticism, particularly from congressmen who opposed U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Record Set By Bank Deposits

Texas Tech University Board of Regents decided in August to take bids from other banks for Tech deposits instead of keeping them all at the Lubbock bank.

The bank is one of five banks in El Paso, Midland, Houston and Dallas now holding Tech funds.

Yandell said the change did not affect its ability to serve customers, because the law prohibits the use of public funds deposits for making loans.

Tommy Stevens, president of Texas Commerce Bank, said the cotton crop was especially beneficial because dryland farmers had an exceptional year and dryland cotton has a larger profit margin than cotton from irrigated land.

"Historically, a dryland farmer only has to have a good year out of every three or four to make money," Stevens said.

He noted that an estimated 750,000 to one million bales remain to be marketed from the total 2.7-to-2.9-million-bale South Plains crop.

Stevens said the Lubbock area also has been helped lately by new oil wells being brought in north and east of the city.

"It's more economical to drill a smaller well than it used to be," he said, noting that some producers have gotten $37.50 per barrel recently.

Most area oil production has been in the areas of Sundown and Denver City, he noted, but new wells are being drilled east of Lubbock in Crosby County and to the north around Abernathy.

Cable Television Firm May Owe City Taxes

percentage of its gross receipts, including the HBO sales. However, Ross said the firm would have to present data showing its gross receipts.

Brown said those figures would be provided to the city within a week. Henry and other council members also quizzed Brown about complaints they had received regarding the firm's service to customers. Much of the questioning centered on service problems experienced by customers on weekends and at night.

Jerry Buchanan, chief engineer for Lubbock Cable TV, said the firm receives between 600 and 900 services calls per month. He said that approximately 90 percent of those calls receive a response within three hours and that 99 percent of the calls are responded to within 24 hours.

According to Buchanan, the company has added four technicians since September 1979 and plans to hire more technicians in the future. A question also was raised by a representative from State Rep. Froy Salinas' office regarding the lack of Spanish-language programming on cable television here, although it is available in nearby rural areas.

Brown said that Spanish programming probably would be available sometime in the future. He noted that the firm has been looking at the Spanish International Network, but the company probably would not furnish the Spanish programming until it expands to 20 channels.

The council decided to hold the merger request until its next meeting. Henry said he wanted more answers about the franchise tax money, Spanish language programming and service complaints.

In other business this morning, the council passed on second reading an ordinance annexing property around the Idalou Highway area despite the objections of property owners.

The property was brought up for annexation consideration because of water problems being experienced by the Lubbock Children's Home.

However, attorney David Langston appeared before the council today, representing several property owners who would be affected by the annexation. According to Langston, many of the property owners say they do not need the water and sewer service available through the city and are not concerned about additional fire and police protection.

Langston said the annexation would create an additional tax burden for the property owners and that additional taxes might force some businesses in that area to shut down.

Langston noted the shape of the area to be annexed along either side of the Idalou Highway would give the city a rather "unusual" city limits in that area.

City Planning Director Jim Bertram noted that state law allows cities to have ribbon annexation in order to protect the corridors leading into municipalities.

He noted that commercial development along the Idalou Highway has left a question about the desirability of residential development for land beyond.

Council members agreed with Bertram and approved the annexation. The annexation still must be approved by the U.S. Justice Department.

During a work session this afternoon council members are expected to meet with Joe Horkey, chairman of the Lubbock County Tax Appraisal District Board to discuss the possibility of the city tax office providing a countywide appraisal service.

Khomeini Airs Voting Appeal

By The Associated Press

Avatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was admitted to the intensive care unit of a Tehran hospital early this morning for heart trouble, but the 79-year-old revolutionary leader later went on national radio to reassure the Iranian people he is not seriously ill.

"As far as my condition is concerned, I am — praise be to God — not bad," he said, though he sounded frail and weak.

Political observers in the Iranian capital said the broadcast appeared aimed at calming national anxiety over the health of Khomeini, who was rushed from his home in Qom, 100 miles south of Tehran, and arrived at the hospital at 1 a.m.

His sudden hospitalization came on the eve of Iran's presidential election, and in his broadcast the clergyman-revolutionary called for a full and peaceful turnout Friday.

All revolutionary committees throughout Iran have been placed on alert to guard against violence during the voting. Anti-Khomeini factions have called for a boycott of the voting, as they did during the recent constitutional referendum, when political violence flared in several areas.

A crowd gathered today outside the hospital, and politicians and religious leaders were seen coming and going.

The events were relayed reported by Western journalists in the Iranian capital, where some 50 American hostages were spending their 82nd day of captivity at the U.S. Embassy.

Tehran Radio, monitored in London, reported that Khomeini's team of doctors said they hoped he could be moved from the intensive-care unit and to the regular heart-treatment unit later today or Friday.

Vandals Blamed For $679,689 In Damage To Property Here

A glass door had been shattered at the George Woods Community Center at North 29th Avenue and East Erskine Street. Edith M. Kirby of 3002 20th St. told police vandals had driven over her lawn sprinkler system.

Wilma Johnson of 2632 E. Cornell St. woke up about 4 a.m. on Dec. 31 to a loud crashing sound. She said she thought it was a nearby traffic accident and did not investigate.

Later, she received an anonymous phone call and was asked, "Do you know what I've done?" After the call, Mrs. Johnson discovered a windshield had been broken out of a car she had been keeping for a friend.

Most of the vehicles found vandalized Dec. 31 were parked between 20th Street and 40th Street, and between the 2000 and 3000 blocks. However, Nelson said property is damaged by vandals "all over town."

Tires were slashed on at least six vehicles parked at the Gulf Service Station at Fourth Street and Avenue Q between 10:30 p.m. Jan. 10 and 1 a.m. Jan. 11. And station owner Rufus Carrillo told police he discovered a rock had been thrown through a window at his business.

Carrillo said he had no idea who did it or why his business was struck. "I wish I knew. I guess it was just vandals looking for trouble."

He said he hopes it never happens again. "I can't afford to pay for another window."

Two nights earlier, five vehicles parked in the 2400-block of Fourth Street, not far from Carrillo's station, had their tires slashed.

Michael W. Connolly of 2001 Ninth

St., Apt. 18, said "I blew my top" when he recently walked out of a University Avenue club and discovered the windshield on his pickup truck had been shattered by a beer bottle, the doors and front end of the truck had been kicked in and the windshield wipers and radio antennae had been torn off.

Connolly's vehicle was the only one damaged on the lot. "I'm still asking people if they know anything about it. But a lot of good that's going to do. You can hardly press charges on hearsay," he said.

Police said vandals turned on a young boy Jan. 12 after he saw them throwing heads of cabbage through windows at a vacant house in the 3000-block of East Third Street.

Reports state the witness' face was "bruised and scratched badly," but that the boy's father did not wish to file assault charges because he feared the suspects would seek revenge.

"There's definitely been an increase in the number of cars that have been vandalized," said Rick Potts, co-owner of West Texas Auto Glass at 1016 E. 34th St. He added that his business had increased with the growing number of victims.

"Since 1976, it has doubled, maybe tripled," Potts said.

The repairman is told the vehicles usually are damaged while parked on dark residential streets, or in front of a club or other nightspot.

Potts, who is contacted "two or three times a week" by victims of vandals, said, "It seems to be getting worse all the time. We get more phone calls now than ever before from people saying someone broke out all the windows in their car."

"It never seems to let up."

Jury Hears Testimony

There was no clothing on the body. "Did you recognize the body?" asked lead prosecutor Jim Bob Darnell.

"Yes, I did," Dixon answered, his eyes again dropping to his lap.

I hate to do this to you, Dr. Dixon, but could you tell me if you can identify these?" Darnell asked Dixon, handing him three photographs.

"Yes, I can. That is how he looked when we went in," Dixon said, averting his eyes toward the courtroom ceiling.

Despite defense counsel objections to the "prejudicial" photographs, Judge Thomas L. Clinton allowed the pictures to be entered into evidence so that the jurors also may view them.

"I touched the right wrist," Dixon said, continuing the story of discovering Bridges' body. Shaking his head, the professor added, "I suppose it was to ascertain if he was alive. It was, it was just an action... just something. I don't know why."

The graduate student who accompanied Dixon to the Bridges' home that day, and who said he had taken Bridges' wife Lou to the airport Sunday night so she could catch a plane to a workshop in Wisconsin, related a similar story.

Bill Danley, however, added that Bridges' body was bruised and that "He obviously had been badly beaten."

And Danley said, a green felt tip pen was protruding from the rectum of Bridges' nude body.

A fourth photograph of Bridges' body, again over the strenuous objections of defense attorneys Tom Cannon and Mary Anne Wiley, was identified by Danley and also admitted into evidence.

Danley, who had gone outside to check the exact address of the Bridges' home, was the first to notice a red high school letter jacket lying beneath a broken window on the east side of the house.

He said after the ambulance and police had been called, he and Dixon looked around the outside of the residence, then made a brief tour of the house in an effort to "try and figure out what had happened" before sitting on the porch to await the authorities' arrival.

It was on their search outside, Danley said, he noticed the jacket. He said he saw that a storm window was missing and the inner pane broken, but that he saw no glass outside.

Dixon and Danley are two of a possible 37 witnesses the state may call during the trial, which is expected to last through most of next week.

Testimony in the 19-year-old Dancy's trial was delayed until today by a change of venue hearing and a full day of jury selection.

Hedy Lamarr Files Libel Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A story and accompanying photograph of a two-headed goat named Hedy Lamarr has resulted in a $10 million libel suit against the San Francisco Chronicle and others by actress Hedy Lamarr.

The 65-year-old actress filed suit Wednesday against the newspaper, its publisher, Richard Thieriot; reporter Michael Grieg; the late goat's owners, Robert and Patricia Costa; and commercial photographer John O'Hara.

Miss Lamarr alleged the defendants "maliciously" intended to destroy her reputation and her "image as the very personification, essence and epitome of beauty" by associating her with "a two-headed freak and creature of ugliness, thereby slandering her and libeling her."

Court Reverses Slander Suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A state appeals court has reversed a $45,000 slander judgment in a suit against atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair.

The 3rd Court of Civil Appeals remanded the lawsuit to a trial court in Austin district court for a new trial.

Susan Strobel, who had worked at the American Atheist Center here, won the original verdict, contending Mrs. O'Hair and her Society of Separationists Inc. slandered her by filing a police complaint alleging Miss Strobel had stolen two computer tapes from company offices.

The appeals court on Wednesday reversed the verdict, claiming State District Judge Hume Cofer failed to have a different judge consider Mrs. O'Hair's motion to remove him as judge in the case. He had denied the motion.

Alf Landon In Hospital

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — At 92, Alf M. Landon says he's "drilled too many dry holes" to be concerned about a little dizziness.

The 1936 Republican presidential nominee was admitted to Stormont-Vail Regional Medical Center Wednesday after experiencing dizziness when he awoke, but a hospital spokesman said his condition was "nothing to be alarmed about."

A family spokesman said Landon's physician suspected a problem in the inner ear was affecting his equilibrium.

McCartney Held 'Incommunicado'

NEW YORK (AP) — Entertainer Paul McCartney, jailed in Tokyo Jan. 16, is being held "incommunicado" and only his wife and brother-in-law can see him briefly each day, says the ex-Beatle's father-in-law.

Manhattan lawyer Lee Eastman told the New York Daily News McCartney's incarceration for allegedly bringing 7.7 ounces of marijuana into the country has created a "highly tense situation."

"You know things are different there," said Eastman. "He has no charges against him so he can't be released on bail. Linda (McCartney's wife) and their four children are being very courageous..."

File This Under 'C'

LAKE OSWEGO, Ore. (AP) — The Lakeridge High School library contains the usual books, tables, and for a while, a Chevrolet Monza.

In what Principal Jim Schell called a prank, five students moved the car from the school's mechanical shop into the main building, up a ramp and into the second-floor library before classes Wednesday.

"We gave them minimum suspensions of two to three days because we like to keep in mind the difference between pranks and vandalism," Schell said.

He said some door frames were removed and replaced, and the car apparently was tilted onto two wheels as it was maneuvered through the building. Little damage was done to the school.

Schell said the prank will cost about $200 dollars, which the pupils will pay. That includes the cost of staff time spent getting the car back into the shop.

Police Search For Man Terrorizing Wichita Woman

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Police call him The Poet. He mails rambling verses, including death threats, to Ruth Finley. He has kidnapped her and stabbed her — and he knows of the time 34 years ago when she was branded on both thighs with flatirons.

Police Capt. Mike Hill says The Poet is "a virtual psychopath," adding "we think he's locked into playing this game of harassment of the victim."

The first hand-printed letter arrived at Mrs. Finley's home two years ago. Since then, more than two dozen have found their way into the department's inch-thick file on the case.

The unsigned letters arrived infrequently until last month but are now coming almost weekly, and police say the investigation has been stepped up. Hill declined to comment on how Mrs. Finley is being protected but says the case is his top priority.

Friends say Mrs. Finley, 49, is frightened. The Finleys refuse to talk about the threats for fear of jeopardizing the investigation.

Officials believe the threats and attacks can be traced to Fort Scott, where in 1946, when she was 16, the woman was branded in what a newspaper called "one of the worst instances of sadism to occur here in years."

The then-Miss Smock was in her apartment when the lights were turned out and a bottle was pushed under her nose, the newspaper account said. She awoke on the kitchen floor, blood oozing from her leg.

No one was arrested, but police don't believe The Poet was involved.

Teen Eats Constantly Because Of Disorder

JACKSON, N.J. (AP) — Eighteen-year-old Amy Brown eats a dozen eggs for breakfast and two steaks for lunch to keep her weight up to 90 pounds. And doctors say there is little she can do about her metabolic disorder — except keeping eating.

The teen-ager suffers from malabsorption, an unusual syndrome that requires her to eat almost hourly to replace lost potassium in her body. Her food bills take $170 a week out of her father's $13,000 annual salary.

Her mother, Lois Brown, 48, says only help from friends and civic groups keeps the family afloat.

"Aside from the food bills, we have to pay gas and electricity. We have two refrigerators downstairs for Amy," she said in a recent interview. "We don't like accepting charity, but we never know what tomorrow may bring."

Doctors say malabsorption, which usually afflicts younger children, can strike a range of fats or vitamins needed to keep the body's system in balance. A faulty valve in Miss Brown's kidney is releasing almost all the potassium in her system, and the doctors say there is little Miss Brown can do except take potassium supplements and eat.

Miss Brown is weak unless she eats constantly. She has difficulty lifting herself out of a bathtub.

"I've been in and out of all the hospitals," said Miss Brown, who cannot work and is tutored at home.

Meanwhile, her meals equal those of four adults. For breakfast, she consumes a dozen eggs, fried potatoes and often a whole can of Spam. Lunch is the equivalent of two steaks, two vegetables, potatoes and at least two glasses of soda.

It is not the life she had as an energetic 13-year-old.

"I was healthy then," she said. "I did everything — playing tennis, wrestling, beating up the boys. I was a tomboy."

The illness struck at 14, when she suddenly slumped over her desk in school. At 15, her appetite increased dramatically, but her weight dropped from 132 pounds to about 100 pounds.

Her father, Albert Brown, 50, is a township public works employee. His salary is too high to qualify for food stamps, and welfare officials reject the claim that his daughter's food is a medical expense.

Illinois Businessman Believes Modern Society Runs On Paper

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's fashionable to complain about the enormous sea of paperwork that burdens modern society, but there is another side to the story.

"The paperwork explosion is far from being altogether unnecessary or evil," says Ted Dimitriou, chairman of Wallace Business Forms, Inc., of Hillsdale, Ill., one of the country's eight large producers of forms.

The 1960's dream of the 'paperless office' and the 'cashless society' soon proved to have limitations," Dimitriou said. "It's literally true that modern society runs on paper. Even the marvelous electronic computer can't get along without paper."

Dimitriou said Wallace, which led the industry in the shift to business computer customers, has 3,500 products in its line, including custom forms for computerized billing by such large customers as American Telephone and Telegraph.

Even small hand-held minicomputers, vastly useful to business people on the move, need paper forms, Dimitriou said. The smallest portable video display terminal connected to a computer is no good in an airplane or riding in a car or even in a motel room.

Big computers — those in which consumers participate such as around-the-clock automated bank service for customers — require the use of many paper input and record forms and encoded plastic cards for customer access, he said.

"Nearly everything useful the computer does ultimately requires paper readouts. Carefully planned forms help get the readouts swiftly and in the most desirable way," Dimitriou said.

Paper forms also are necessary for legal reasons, he said.

Dimitriou said the popularity of the small business computer, which is expected to rise from a base of 85,000 installations in 1978 to 300,000 by 1983, will greatly increase the demand for forms.

Wallace, which ranks seventh among the eight largest firms in the $3.18 billion a year industry, is a 71-year-old company with sales of $100 million in 1979.

Moore Corp. of Toronto is the giant with sales of about $1.3 billion. Other big firms are City Investing's UARCO division, Standard Register, Reynolds & Reynolds, American Business Products, Duplex Products and Ennis Business Forms.

Wallace's sales are nearly all commercial and about 80 percent of its revenue comes from the sale of continuous computer forms.

Although government is notorious for generating paperwork, Dimitriou said Wallace hadn't tried very hard to get into this phase of the business.

Most government orders result from letting contracts on the basis of bids.

Dimitriou said the industry's biggest challenge is to offset the inevitable decline in forms usage by the use of non-impact printers and computer-output microfilm devices.

Texas Solon Says Tax Cut Unlikely

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Grant Jones, head of the Senate Finance Committee, says it is more likely the 1981 Legislature will be looking for new taxes instead of refunding up to $800 million as Gov. Bill Clements wants.

"A tax cut is not realistic," the Democrat from Abilene told a news conference Wednesday.

He also accused Clements of "off-the-cuff scattershooting" in demanding a 5 percent across-the-board decrease in state employees.

Jones, who was "seconded" at the news conference by Lt. Bill Hobby, said he saw no emergency in any of the three issues Clements says will be the subject of a special legislative session in August or September. Clements has said he will ask the 30-day special session to consider initiative and referendum, wiretapping in drug cases, and for tax relief of up to $800 million.

"I just hope we can get through the 1981 session without a tax bill," said Jones who helped write the 1980-81 state spending bill and expects to have a similar part in the 1982-83 appropriations debate. "I think there is a greater prospect for needing new income than there is for reduction of the income we have now."

Jones said Clements' personnel reduction plan "bears about as much resemblance to statecraft as sitting backward on a runaway horse. The seat is elevated, but there is no sense of direction, no real control, no insight into the power one rides."

Jones' criticism Wednesday followed a warning Tuesday from the Texas Public Employees Association that Clements' "random layoffs" would endanger state government.

Chairman Hilmar Moore of the Department of Human Resources Commission said the three-member Public Welfare Commission probably will ignore the mandate when it meets today in El Paso.

Earlier, Chairman John Poerner of the Texas Railroad Commission said the three-member body probably would "do nothing" about Clements' order.

The Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation said it could not comply with the 5 percent cut because the accreditation of its mental hospitals would be jeopardized if 5 percent of their staffs were cut.

The Department of Corrections voted last week to tell the governor it already is understaffed and could not meet the reduction.

The Texas Aeronautics Commission adopted resolutions praising Clements' economy efforts but declined to make any commitment for employee reductions.

The Texas Historical Commission also refused to take immediate action, telling its director to make a study of commission personnel to seek out any duplication or overlapping of effort.

SOLAR POWER TESTED — Testing began this week on the Crosbyton Solar Power Project, an experiment being conducted by Texas Tech University and funded through the Department of Energy. If successful, 10 more mirrored dishes like the one here could provide 28 percent of the town's electricity. (Staff Photo by Bill Jansch)

Solar Power Project At Crosbyton Tested

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff
CROSBYTON — The first blast of steam was produced this week at the Crosbyton Solar Power Project, a step which may lead someday to providing this town of 2,500 residents with 28 percent of its electricity needs by solar power.

More than 100 scientists and solar researchers from across the nation witnessed a repeat performance of the feat Wednesday.

The field trip to the site was part of a three-day solar seminar in Lubbock sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory of Pasadena, Calif., Sandia Laboratories of Albuquerque, N.M., and Texas Tech University, which is developing the Crosbyton project.

The current project on the outskirts of the small town 35 miles east of Lubbock is a scaled down model of the final planned project. Testing of the Analog Design Verification System, as the test project is called, is being controlled by two computers, one used primarily open and close valves and monitoring other factors, and the other used to collect data on the system.

The test project consists of a 65-foot diameter mirrored dish, resembling a giant shiny cereal bowl, and a receiver, suspended above the dish, which tracks the sun and acts as a boiler to power a steam turbine.

If testing proves successful and if funding by the DOE continues, the completed project would consist of 10 mirrored dishes, each 200 feet in diameter.

The project began in 1974 after Crosbyton residents asked Texas Tech to help them find solutions to rising energy costs.

The estimated cost of the project, if it is carried through completion, is between $20 and $25 million. Project members explained that one unit is not cost effective, but that the knowledge gained at Crosbyton might lead to mass production techniques allowing other cities to build similar solar power systems.

Although the earliest estimated date for completion of the project is 1982 — some eight years after townspeople sought relief from the rising cost of conventional energy — Reichert noted that it still would put Crosbyton well ahead of any town its size attempting to harness solar power to cut energy bills.

Davis Willing To Take Polygraph Examination

FORT WORTH (AP) — Oilman Cullen Davis, who once rejected the idea of a lie detector test during his murder-solicitation trial, now says he would be willing to take one to further prove his innocence.

Davis spent three years and millions of dollars defending himself from murder and murder-solicitation charges, and was acquitted on all counts.

He made the lie detector statement after appearing on a Wednesday television program, "The Charlie Rose Show," on KXAS-TV. A member of the studio audience asked Davis if he would submit to a polygraph exam.

"Sure would," he replied, then challenged his accusers to do the same.

Davis' ex-wife, Priscilla, said Davis was responsible for a 1976 shooting incident that killed two people and injured two more at the Davis mansion.

Former Davis employee David McCrory claimed Davis tried to hire the murders of several people during the summer of 1978. Juries in Amarillo and Fort Worth cleared Davis of both charges.

UNEASY LIES THE HEAD THAT WEARS A WIG TO BED

Wednesday, Davis said the test "would prove that I was telling the truth and David McCrory and Priscilla were lying. We've already proved our case ... with evidence. Ninety percent of the people believe us already."

Davis now wants to convince "the remaining 10 percent" of his innocence.

Tech's Medical School Shows Gratitude For Donated Bodies

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff
An Ohio woman, angered when she was told by a medical college that she'd have to pay them a fee before she could donate her body to the school, would find quite the opposite treatment at the Texas Tech School of Medicine.

"We're happy to have bodies donated," said Claude Lobstein, in charge of the school's body donor program. In fact, the Tech medical school will take any body it can.

Not only is there no fee, he said, but the school will pay the cost of shipping the body from within a 360-mile radius. "All the family needs to do is contact us and we'll take care of everything," Lobstein said.

Tech medical school officials aren't the only ones grateful for donated bodies. This year's freshman class of medical students will hold a memorial service Wednesday in appreciation of the 22 persons who donated their bodies for the first-year students to study.

The service will be conducted by the Rev. Bob Nicholson, chaplain at Health Sciences Center Hospital. The families of the donors have been invited.

In a news story Wednesday, an Ohio woman said she was "furious" when her request to donate her body to the Medical College of Toledo was met with a letter asking for a $60 fee and arrangements made to have the body shipped to the school.

Unlike the Ohio school, Texas Tech will transport bodies of those who died in Lubbock, or will pay to have a body shipped to the school from out of town.

If the person dies in Lubbock, the family just has to call the medical school and "we'll take care of everything," Lobstein said.

For out-of-town donors, the medical school will pay for the body first to be embalmed at a funeral home, and then will pay to have the body transported to Lubbock.

"We get many donors from El Paso and we pay the air freight to have the body flown here," Lobstein said.

About 50 bodies are donated annually to the medical school. The bodies primarily are used for teaching anatomy and surgical techniques. Lobstein noted, however, that the number of donations has been increasing each year as more persons become familiar with the school.

"In the past, people here (who wanted to donate their bodies to medical science) had to go to Baylor or UT-Houston. Now, we get a lot of bodies from El Paso, Amarillo and Abilene," he said.

The only bodies that are refused are those unfit for teaching purposes because of mutilation, decomposition or having undergone an autopsy, or from persons who died of a contagious disease that could endanger the students, Lobstein said.

Senator E. L. Short will be featured speaker for the Lubbock Humane Society's annual membership meeting at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. He will discuss humane legislation which is expected to be introduced during the next session of the Texas Legislature. Sen. Short will also present tips on effective lobbying techniques to the organization's members.

The March of Dimes Cake-A-Thon held Jan. 19 in Morton broke all previous records for cakes and contributions. The annual Cochran County event was broadcast live and promoted on KRAN Radio in Morton. This event which was started 18 years ago, raised $3,008.73 this year for the March of Dimes.

Mrs. J.R. (Zoda) Boatman was honored with an 85th birthday celebration January 13. Attending were her six children: Ora Bone of Albuquerque, N.M.; Mary Clough of Dinuba, Ca.; Lola Follis of Beeville; Arthur Boatman of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Amy Underwood and Grace Wooten, both of Lubbock. Mrs. Boatman has lived in Lubbock since 1967.

Members of the Lubbock County 4-H Dog Obedience class recently held graduation for those completing the course. First place winner of the most improved dog was Joe Thomas. Second place was Jim Adams. Other members completing the course were Jim Burton, Clay Enger, Sue Parrigin, James Berry, Camie Enger and John Berry. Sandra Harbin was instructor and Dorothy McDowell acted as judge for the graduation ceremony.

WE ARE PLEASED TO ANNOUNCE THAT NETHA EVANS HAS JOINED OUR GROUP OF PROFESSIONALS. PLEASE CALL NETHA FOR ANY OF YOUR REAL ESTATE NEEDS.

Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: Every year my husband and I send over 200 Christmas cards. I spend a lot of time selecting an appropriate card that comes with our names printed in gold letters. These cards are not cheap. They cost 40 cents each, plus 15 cents postage, and I personally address each envelope by hand.

Yesterday I received the following note from a couple who live out of town and send us one of those boring, bragging, four-page mimeographed newsletter every Christmas:

"Dear Eunice and Norbert, We appreciate being remembered at Christmas, your card was decorative, but very cold and impersonal. If you can't take a minute to add a personal word or two, or sign it yourselves, please take our names off your list.

"Emily and Harold"
Abby, would you care to comment?
SHOCKED IN UPSTATE N.Y.

DEAR SHOCKED: There's a lot to be said for airing one's grievances, but Emily and Harold are about as subtle as a klop in the chops. Take their names off your list. Congratulations, you have just saved 55 cents!

DEAR ABBY: I am extremely fond of a young woman and am considering marriage but something bothers me. Having a meal — just the two of us — in the privacy of her apartment is something of an ordeal because she is terribly strict about table manners. Elbows off the table, knife and fork properly placed on the plate when not in use. Chew food well, absolutely no talking with food in mouth. No resting the arms or hands on the table while eating, etc., etc.

I would like to dine in a relaxed, comfortable manner without worrying about the rules of etiquette constantly. Be assured, I do not eat like a hog, and my manners wouldn't offend even the fussiest lady. But what would marriage with such a woman be like?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Like being 9 years old again, and being married to your mother.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my parents were divorced. Dad promptly married the woman he had been seeing for three years before that. This is a small town, so everybody knew about it. My brother and I (then in high school), my mother and even my father and the other woman suffered from the talk.

Now that I am older and (I hope) wiser, I look back on the ordeal as a valuable, if painful, learning experience. My brother and I have spent a lot of time with my father and his new wife, and although we were prepared to hate her, we cannot hate a woman who has made our father so happy. I can't recall that Mom ever made Dad smile or laugh. She picked at him, criticized and put him down constantly. He could never do anything to please her.

Dad's present wife treats him with such respect, consideration and love, that he has never known such happiness. He glows in her presence.

I still love my mother and while I do not condone what my father did to her, I can now understand why he did it.

STILL LEARNING IN STILLWATER

DEAR STILL: I hope you remember that valuable "learning experience" in the event that you choose marriage — or marriage chooses you.

...

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are not up on all the social graces, and we want to know what is proper:

When a man and woman are seated and an elderly lady approaches them and introduces herself, are both the man and woman supposed to stand? Or just the man? What if the elderly person were a man?

NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: When an elderly person of either sex approaches a younger couple, both the man and the woman should stand — out of respect to age, not sex.

Are you ready for some new and different recipes — hope so!
Grace Davis, Lubbock, submitted this "super" recipe.

ORANGE JELLO
Part 1: one 15 1/2 oz. can crushed pineapple
one 11-oz. can mandarin oranges
Drain and reserve 1/2 cup of juice from each.
Part 2: Dissolve one 3 oz. pkg. of jello as directed on package, using excess juice for cold water. Let set in refrigerator until mixture is a thin jell.
Part 3: Mix 1/2 cup of sugar with 3 tbsps. flour; 2 tbsps. oleomargarine, 1 beaten egg and the reserved juice. Cook on low heat until thick. Cool. Mix with jello mixture and oranges and pineapple. Gently fold in about 1 cup of whipped cream or whipped cream topping. Two cups of miniature marshmallows is optional. Top with grated cheese, if desired.
Wow! — does that sound good!
Mrs. Floyd Prentice of Olton sent greetings of "Happy Eating!" to all readers. And thank you very much. Here is her special recipe.

ORANGE DREAM SALAD
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 tsp. flour
1/3 cup sugar
one No. 2 can crushed pineapple
one 11-oz. can mandarin oranges
one 3-oz. pkg. orange jello
1 1/2 cups miniature marshmallows
1/2 pt. whipping cream
Drain juices from pineapple and oranges into saucepan. Add flour, egg yolks and sugar. Cook until thickened. Add dry jello and stir until dissolved. Cool to room temperature. Add oranges, pineapple and marshmallows. Gently fold in the whipped cream, pour into dish and chill.

Complete with the recipe and tips, here is Lorene Dinwiddie's "Chicken Kiev".

CHICKEN KIEV
1/2 cup butter
1 clove garlic, chopped
2 tps. chives

2 tps. parsley
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. rosemary
1/8 tsp. pepper
1 egg, beaten
1 tsp. water
Salad oil for frying
1/4 cup flour
About 4 lbs. chicken breasts
Mix seasonings with butter. In bowl, blend egg and water. Pound chicken breasts until 1/4-in. thick.
Lay pat of butter mixture on each piece breast and roll up tight. Secure with string. Melt oil in skillet to 370 degrees.
Dip chicken in flour, then in egg mixture, then in flour. Fry 15 minutes or longer in oil. Drain on towel.

Lorene also sent the following tips:
"To bone chicken, hack against the bone with a knife until you get it started; then using a pair of kitchen scissors, snip until the meat is off the bone. To flatten chicken breasts: put breasts on floured board and pound away with a mallet. Turn pieces and beat on both sides. Now for a secret — if you will put the meat in milk and soak it overnight, the meat will be more tender."
And, thanks, Lorene, for the other recipes — we'll use them soon.

Lana Lemons of Seminole wrote, "Here is a recipe for 'Tea Cakes' that my mom used to make for her four children.

These are excellent either iced or plain."

TEA CAKES
1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
2/3 cup sugar
1/2 cup shortening
1 egg
2 tbsps. milk
1 tsp. vanilla
Sift dry ingredients. Cut in shortening, until mixture resembles coarse meal. Stir in egg, milk and vanilla. Roll onto floured board and cut out with cookie cutters. Place on greased pan. Cook at 350 degrees for approximately 6-8 minutes. This recipe can be doubled also.

range on greased baking sheet. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Bake at 375 degrees for 10-12 minutes. For tea cake effect, use as drop cookies or roll thicker.

Winnie Bartley, Tulia, submitted the following.
OLD-FASHIONED TEA CAKES
1 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
2 1/2 cups flour
Mix well (dough will be stiff). Roll to desired thickness on floured board, cut out and place on greased cookie sheet. Bake in 400 degree oven until slightly brown.

Winnie would like a recipe for "French Lemon Pie," like that served in Furr's Cafeteria.

The Larry Smiths of Lubbock wrote that they have a terrible time getting their seven-year-old son to eat any vegetables. Any suggestions, any recipes?

Here's another request for recipes to make vegetables more exciting fare — Carrie Lee requests a recipe for spinach souffle. Have a recipe to make carrots interesting?

Alma Studer, Lubbock, enclosed still another unique gelatin recipe.

MANDARIN ORANGE GELATIN SALAD
23-oz. pkgs. orange gelatin (the sweetened kind)
1 of the smallest cans of frozen orange juice, undiluted
2 cups hot water
2 11-oz. cans of mandarin oranges
Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add orange juice and oranges. Pour in mold and chill.

We've been unable to secure a corrected recipe published recently for "Tea Cakes" (amount of flour not given), so please use one of the following instead.

Mrs. J.F. Dickinson of McAdoo wrote, "Here is a recipe that makes a cookie like mother used to make and called 'Tea Cakes'. It is not her recipe, because I don't have it, but the result tastes the same to me."

SUGAR COOKIES
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup melted shortening or oil
2 eggs, beaten
1 tsp. vanilla extract
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tsp. cream of tartar
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. salt
Blend sugar with shortening. Stir in eggs and vanilla. Sift dry ingredients. Add to mixture gradually, mixing well. Chill until easy to handle. Turn out onto lightly floured board and roll to 1/8-inch thickness and cut with cookie cutter. Ar-

Opening lead: Ten of ♥

Declarer rode home a long shot on today's hand with the assistance of a partial count of the opponents' distribution.

His plethora of aces and kings makes South's hand a whit too strong for a one no trump opening bid, but we would have preferred a one club opening to allow partner an easy response. That would simply have meant that North would have ended up declaring the same contract. The ten of hearts was covered by the jack and king and won by the ace. Declarer must lose a club and a heart trick, so he must hold his diamond losers to one if he is to make his contract. That could be accomplished if one defender started with specifically A-x in the suit, and declarer can work out (or guess) which.

Declarer set about finding out as much as possible about his opponents' holdings. He cashed the ace of clubs and continued with a low club to the queen. East won the king and reverted to hearts, and West won the nine. He exited with the jack of clubs, ruffed in dummy. Declarer crossed to his hand with the ace of trumps and ruffed his last club as West discarded a heart.

Declarer led the ten of spades from dummy and paused to reconstruct the hands after West showed out. East was known to have started with seven cards in the black suits as against four by West. The hearts did not seem to be behaving too freakishly. Therefore, West surely held more diamonds, than East.

Declarer decided to make his diamond play through East. He led a diamond to his king, which held. After drawing East's last trump, declarer led a low diamond from his hand and ducked in dummy. East was forced to win with the ace, and the queen of diamonds became the fulfilling trick.

To purists, declarer's play is known as the "coup en blanc."

Trustees Announce School Board Election Date

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Lubbock public school trustees today officially set an April 5 school board election date, clearing the way for candidates to begin filing for three places on the school election ballot.

Candidates have until midnight March 5 to file at the school district Administration Building, 1628 19th St. Voters this spring will cast their votes for candidates in Place 3, currently held by Deaton Rigby; Place 4, held by Jose Ramirez; and Place 5, held by Harold Harriger.

Rigby and Ramirez appear likely to run for re-election but have not officially announced their intentions. However, Harriger, who has served on the board since 1974, will not seek another term. Already, realtor Med Hunt has indicated he will run for the spot being vacated by Harriger. The school board election will be conducted jointly with the city council election, allowing the two units to share expenses for operations.

The board today also reviewed revised plans for a school bus maintenance facility to be located on the grounds of the transportation operations. Architect Joe McKay of BGR Architect-Engineers told trustees that the size of the facility has been expanded from the original estimate of 11,500 square feet to 11,600 to accommodate more extensive wash and and tire and oil change areas.

McKay said the cost for the facility will probably reach about $275,000 compared to the earlier estimate of $234,000. The maintenance building is scheduled for completion by Sept. 1. Trustees approved preliminary plans for summer school programs this year and approved a $5 hike in tuition for several of the programs. Superintendent Ed Irons said that the cost of operations for summer school has gone up along with other programs, adding that the tuition fee has not been raised in at least four years.

Although not included in the agenda, board members began early consideration of items they would like included in the school district's 1980-81 budget. Board president Monte Hasie noted that Monterey and Coronado high schools and Hutchinson Junior High all need facility maintenance, with trustee Brad Crawford adding that a survey should be conducted to determine the upkeep needs of all campuses in the district. Crawford noted that the district's maintenance schedule should be arranged to "meet the worst problems first."

Officials Prepare For Population Count

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff
The countdown to the big count has begun. Census officials in Lubbock are gearing up for the once-a-decade tally of residents — set to begin April 1 — and for the first time they will be cooperating with Lubbock city government to make sure the count is accurate.

Formally known as the 20th Decennial Census of Population and Housing, the count has become increasingly important over its 200-year history as federal funds and representation to the federal government are assigned according to its findings. Although city officials had no quarrel with census findings in 1970, they will join some 39,000 communities nationwide taking part in the new Local Review Program this time around, according to City Planning Director Jim Bertram.

The program was designed to allow input from local governments before the count becomes final, says Census Community Services Specialist Leo A. Quirino. City officials will receive a total after the initial count, which they can check against a computerized file of data records, said Bertram.

"We'll go over the records very carefully and report any discrepancies to the City Council," he said. "Because Lubbock County tax records 'keep track of property not people,' and the bulk of the county's population lives inside city limits, the county will not participate in the review program, said County Judge Rodrick Shaw. "We just don't have the staff any way," he added.

Some 700 full-time census workers will be needed to fill field and office positions in the 30 counties surrounding Lubbock, according to Quirino. He said he will space hiring of census workers over the duration of the count, which is expected to wrap up in August. Quirino currently is contacting local organizations to support the census effort, and recruit workers.

Reversing the usual door-to-door census approach, some 90 percent of the census forms will be mailed to residences this year, and respondents will be asked to return them through the postal system, too. Census workers will note and visit households that do not reply by mail, said Quirino. Only 10 percent of the questionnaires nationwide will be distributed through the traditional door-to-door approach, according to Quirino. Texans living in the Pecos area will receive theirs by that method.

Though Texas is expected to gain two seats in the House of Representatives as a result of growth in the past 10 years, they probably will be assigned to coastal regions where population gains have been the most marked, Quirino said. He urged every household to respond to the census questionnaires, noting that "if we aren't counted, we're only short-changing ourselves."

Furr's Ordered To Renew Union Talks

Almost five years after the original conflict, Furr's Cafeterias has been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to renew relations with a union group working in its Quality Control Kitchens.

The union eventually filed charges of unfair labor practices against Furr's, alleging that the cafeteria company coerced employees in the exercise of the right to peaceful picketing. The charge was filed after a picketing employee's car was towed away from in front of a cafeteria.

During the years between the strike and the eventual order by the NLRB, Furr's requested proof of their "refusal to bargain collectively" and "unfair labor practices." The company received delays in the NLRB hearing until the union furnished Furr's with the requested information.

In finding Furr's guilty of engaging in unfair labor practices, the NLRB has instructed the company to reinstate those employees who were allegedly fired because of union involvement. The NLRB says that if those jobs which the employees held prior to their termination are not available now, the people currently holding those jobs should be let go or transferred.

A Furr's spokesman said the company may appeal the NLRB decision on the point that employees should not be removed from their jobs to make room for those who were fired five years ago. However, Furr's has not yet made a decision to appeal the ruling.

There is no fine attached to the NLRB ruling.

Panel Says More N-Mishaps Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators hired by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission warned today that nuclear accidents like the one last year at Three Mile Island "could have happened in a lot of places."

Moreover, there's nothing to keep similar accidents from occurring elsewhere in the future, the panel said, adding that new nuclear plants should be at least 10 miles from cities to reduce the small but worrisome risk of accidental radiation exposure.

The Three Mile Island plant came within 30 to 60 minutes of a "meltdown" of its radioactive fuel, an event that would have required "at least the precautionary evacuation of thousands" of residents from the surrounding area near Harrisburg, Pa., the "Special Inquiry Group" said after its seven-month investigation of the accident.

The special inquiry was headed by private attorney Mitchell Rogovin. Although his law firm was hired by the NRC, it delivered the same unwelcome advice President Carter's "Kemeny Commission" had submitted earlier. Abolish the five-member NRC and replace it with a single administrator.

Both Carter and the NRC have previously rejected that idea, claiming the existing commission structure can be made more effective. But the Rogovin report said a five-member commission is incapable of managing a comprehensive nuclear safety program.

"If ever an argument is needed to convince someone of the lack of management in the NRC," it said, "one need only attend one of these commission meetings. ... It appears that the structural problems in the NRC's management persist in the wake of TMI."

Nevada Citizens Oppose Missile Site In State

WASHINGTON (AP) — A majority of residents of Nevada either oppose or have serious doubts about installing the bulk of a big new missile system in their state, Nevada's lone congressman said today.

Rep. James Santini, D-Nev., said this represents a shift in opinion in the last year, caused largely by the government's inability to answer questions about the system's effects on the environment and economy.

"The fact is that we must have hard answers to questions about water, land use, energy, boom-bust economics and the impact on local governments before we welcome this system in Nevada," Santini said.

"It is simply not enough for the Air Force to say, 'If you've got a problem we'll solve it,'" Santini testified before the House Interior subcommittee on public lands.

The subcommittee is reviewing the impact of the $3.8 billion MX mobile missile system which the Defense Department plans to install over 8,000 square miles in Nevada and Utah.

Construction of the system will require more workers than were employed on the Alaska oil pipeline.

Italian Leader Visits President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, seeking support for U.S. policies toward the Soviet Union and Iran, welcomed Italian Prime Minister Francesco Cossiga to the White House today as a "true friend."

Carter said international terrorism has brought "pressure for friends to stand together."

At a colorful outdoor ceremony in sub-freezing temperatures, complete with red carpet, 19-gun salute and anthems by the U.S. Army Band, Carter greeted Cossiga on the White House South Lawn at the start of the prime minister's official state visit.

Noting Cossiga's home region of Sardinia, the president quoted an old Sardinian saying in Italian, which he translated into English: "One comes to know a true friend in times of adversity," Carter said. "I am very grateful to welcome a true friend of the United States."

Cossiga responded in Italian, "Well, I am here to confirm this."

Saying he came "at a moment in which the American nation is in anguish," the prime minister promised "solidarity" from his government.

Pope John Paul II May Visit Refugee Camps In Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Pope John Paul II may join the parade of international luminaries visiting Cambodian refugee camps soon.

The Roman Catholic episcopate has invited the pontiff to stop in Thailand on his way to the Philippines, and the Vatican promised that he "will do his best to visit" when the trip is officially scheduled. John Paul often has expressed concern for Cambodian refugees and church sources say such a trip "cannot be ruled out."

Some 150 personalities, including actress Liv Ullmann, civil rights activist Coretta King and singer Joan Baez are staging a "truck vigil" at the Thai-Cambodian border Feb. 2 to pressure the Vietnamese to allow overland food distribution. The group is pledged to sit in trucks at the border until the barricades are removed.

Chinese View Olympics

PEKING (UPI) — China is reluctant to join a boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics, the first games since China was readmitted to the International Olympic movement last year.

Athletes of the All China Sports Federation have been training furiously for the event and figure China can make a respectable, if not sensational, showing. Their best chances for gold medals would be in such events as shooting and weight lifting, where Chinese athletes set records last year.

Lure Mainland Students

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — The Nationalist Chinese government is quietly trying to lure students from the communist mainland to visit Taiwan.

Invitations are being extended through Taiwan's students abroad with the promise that all expenses will be paid by Taiwanese civic organizations. The campaign has produced no results so far but the government is confident some communist students eventually will come.

The nationalists want the communists to see the sharp difference of life between the two Chinas and spread the word when they return home.

Indonesia Eyes Link

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Indonesia is cautiously studying the possibility of joining in Pacific Basin cooperation, recently discussed in Canberra by Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira of Japan and Malcolm Fraser of Australia. The concept matches Indonesia's ambition to be a bridge between Asia and the Pacific, according to informed sources.

But Indonesia also has strong reservations regarding its role in the cooperation, which would include the United States.

Indonesia, leader of the Jakarta-based Association of Southeast Asian Nations, would have limited influence in the new grouping and might be forced to deviate from its nonaligned policy if the cooperation turns out to be more political than economic, the sources say.

Puppets Might Like To Try Silly Rhyme

By SHARI LEWIS

What do puppets want to talk about? I dunno. It depends upon the puppet.

When Lamb Chop can't think of anything else to say, she turns to poetry.

On my belly, there's a button she'll say.

And it really looks like nuttin'. Still I'm always bright and chipper.

At least it's not a belly zipper! Your puppet might like to try a silly rhyme, too. You'll find lots of funny poems in books on limericks. Ogden Nash wrote very good "read-out-loud poems" about animals. If you have an animal puppet, get a record of "Carnival of the Animals" or a book of Carnival of the Animals poetry from the library. You might find a short poem that your animal puppet might enjoy telling about itself. For example, about the elephant Mr. Nash wrote:

Elephants are useful friends. Equipped with handles at both ends.

They have a wrinkled moth-proof hide. Their teeth are upside down.

outside. If you think the elephant preposterous. You've probably never seen a rhinoceros!

Try to make up your own comedy rhymes. Start with a joke or funny idea and work backwards. For example, someone once asked Lamb Chop if she was made of a synthetic fabric or if she was 100 percent pure wool — so now she recites:

"Farmers shear their other sheep But me they never pester. Cause I'm a fuzzy little lamb. That's made of polyester."

Yesterday's Brain Twister: Can you figure out what familiar phrase is hidden in this arrangement of letters: Symphon:

Answer: Unfinished Symphony.

Today's Brain Twister: Who is the father of corn?

Stock Mart Pays Off For Student

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — At the end of each class, David Lipscomb College student Dennis Hendrix rushes to a pay phone like a bookie after a horse race.

He's not checking bets on nags. He's checking the stock market. It's earned the senior accounting major $75,000 this year.

During his first year of playing the market, Hendrix, 24, has turned $7,000 in loans and $1,000 in savings into assets of $400,000 in stocks and $300,000 in real estate, he said in a recent interview.

Hendrix calls his brokers at least a dozen times daily from a pay phone on the campus to trade stocks during 10-minute class breaks.

"My teachers don't understand why I may come to class a few minutes late because I may have found out something's blown up in Iran and have to figure out how it will affect a company I hold stock in," Hendrix said.

Hendrix, who credits God and his wife Jeane with his success, said he turned to the stock market out of hardship.

After working a 10 p.m. to 8 a.m. shift at Meharry Medical College during his first three years in college, Hendrix said, "I got to where I couldn't sleep, and I wasn't making good grades and I hardly had enough to pay tuition." So he dropped out of school temporarily about a year and a half ago.

In September 1978, he married Jeane, "and after a couple of months, we said, 'Let's go for it.'"

He said being out of work five months with a broken ankle and then a kidney stone operation forced him "to take chances I never would have taken otherwise" and gave him the impetus to try the market.

"We took out all the money we could on all of our credit cards, took a second mortgage on our house and borrowed against our two car titles," Hendrix said he invested $8,000 in McDowell Enterprises at $9 per share. About eight months later he sold the stock at $18 per share.

Hendrix said few people know about his investments other than an accounting professor, who is his accountant. "Some people have found out and it's changed our relationship," he said.

"With some people, they find out and I can immediately see in their eyes, 'How do I get some of it?'"

Kennedy Campaign Encounters Financial Woes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some aides on Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's presidential campaign are being asked to skip next week's paychecks to conserve badly needed cash, according to one Kennedy campaign official.

"There is a squeeze, obviously," the official, who asked not to be identified, said late Wednesday. "I think people who can afford to (skip a bi-weekly check) have been asked to do so."

It was not clear how many members of Kennedy's campaign staff had been asked to forego pay. Tom Southwick, press secretary to the Massachusetts senator, could not be reached for comment.

Kennedy, seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, suffered an overwhelming defeat Monday at the hands of President Carter in the Iowa caucuses. "Every campaign that loses something comes up flat broke," one campaign worker said.

The official said Kennedy intends to leave next week on a cross-country fundraising trip and hopes to raise $1 million. The money would be used to keep his campaign afloat through the Feb. 26 New Hampshire primary.

"I assume if he wins (in) New Hampshire, the spigot (of money) will turn on again," the aide said.

In the wake of his landslide defeat in Iowa, Kennedy said Tuesday he must beat Carter in their next two encounters — the Feb. 10 Maine caucuses and the New Hampshire primary — if he is to keep alive his White House campaign.

Morris Dees, Kennedy's chief fundraiser, said earlier in the week the defeat would make it more difficult to raise money. He said he would turn first to about 15,000 people who have contributed previously to the Kennedy campaign. Most of those haven't yet given Kennedy the full $1,000 allowed under federal law, Dees said, and therefore presumably are able to give more.

Dees said Kennedy has raised about $3 million since announcing his candidacy and has received an additional $1 million from the federal government in matching funds.

The move to trim payroll costs came on the heels of a decision to cancel the Kennedy campaign's long-term lease on a chartered jet that carried the senator and his entourage around the country on campaign trips. Southwick said the decision will save the campaign $125,000 through the New Hampshire primary.

As a result of the economy move, when Kennedy departs Washington Friday on a four-day trip to New England, he will be aboard a commercial aircraft.

In other campaign developments Wednesday:

—Ronald Reagan told a Chicago news conference he doesn't plan to change strategy in New Hampshire, despite his upset by George Bush in the Iowa caucuses.

—Bush, campaigning in New Hampshire, said he is against establishing permanent U.S. military bases in the Midwest. He predicted the Soviets "will launch a peace offensive this summer."

Inquiry Of Carter Aides Appears Unlikely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backers of Sen. Edward Kennedy apparently will not force a Justice Department criminal inquiry into charges that White House aides are illegally using federal power to buy President Carter's re-election. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti considers it "very doubtful" the charges meet the standards of the new Ethics in Government law mandating a preliminary investigation of criminal allegations against top government officials, a Justice Department spokesman said Wednesday.

The allegations are contained in a civil lawsuit filed by seven Kennedy backers, who contend that cabinet members have promised or withheld jobs and funding to cities on the basis of whether the city's mayor supports Carter.

They also charge that administration officials have used federal funds to cover travel expenses for campaign-related trips.

The ethics law requires that the department conduct a preliminary investigation into most criminal allegations that are made against 100 high administration officials.

The law requires that once a preliminary inquiry is opened, if the charges are not disproved within 90 days, the attorney general is to seek appointment of a special prosecutor for the case.

For example, Civiletti recently requested appointment of an outside prosecutor to pursue charges that White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan used cocaine at a New York discotheque.

But Justice Department spokesman Robert Smith said Civiletti doubts the charges by the Kennedy forces, which are based mainly on newspaper accounts and public documents, meet requirements for forcing a preliminary FBI inquiry.

To open an inquiry, he said, "you must have a specific allegation that gives rise to a probable violation of criminal law by a person covered by the act."

Smith said that after a three-week review of the charges by top department lawyers, Civiletti has concluded "at this point ... that it is very doubtful the allegations contained in the civil suit trigger the Ethics in Government law."

John Silard, a lawyer for the Kennedy backers who filed the suit, denied they ever hoped to force a Justice Department investigation.

Bush's Margin Dips As Vote Count Ends

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The final tally of votes cast in Monday's Republican straw poll trimmed George Bush's margin of victory over Ronald Reagan, but a Bush supporter says the new numbers don't detract from the victory.

"It's still one of the greatest upsets in Republican politics," said Rich Bond, director of the effort for the former U.N. ambassador who is seeking the Republican presidential nomination. "A win is a win is a win."

The final figures, announced late Wednesday night by State GOP Chairman Stephen Roberts, showed Bush with 33,530 votes and Reagan with 31,348. Bush captured 31.5 percent of the straw vote to 29.4 percent for the former California governor.

The count stopped early Tuesday when a computer malfunctioned and was resumed by hand later. When the counting stopped, Bush led Reagan 33.7 percent to 27.2 percent.

Reagan had been considered the front-runner for the GOP nomination going into the straw vote at Iowa precinct caucuses, the first test of candidate strength in the nation. He spent little time in Iowa while Bush campaigned hard and built a strong organization.

Roberts agreed the new figures did little to diminish Bush's victory.

"It was generally conceded that if he ran close to Reagan it would be nearly a victory. He still beat him. That's the significant thing," said Roberts.

He said 2,389 of the state's 2,531 precincts, or 94.4 percent, were included in the totals announced Wednesday.

"We don't expect to get the rest. They just never called in. We may get some in the mail later," he said.

The finishing order for the other presidential hopefuls in the poll did not change. Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker was third with 16,773 or 15.7 percent of the votes, followed by former Texas Gov. John Connally, 9,861 or 9.3 percent; Illinois Rep. Philip Crane, 7,135 or 6.7 percent; Illinois Rep. John Anderson, 4,585 or 4.3 percent; and Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, 1,576 or 1.5 percent.

California Election Slated On Oil Tax

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California voters will rule on two major tax proposals when they go to the polls on June 3 — a tax increase for big oil, and a cut for themselves.

The proposed oil profits surtax was certified Wednesday for a place on the presidential primary ballot next to the Jarvis II income tax cut initiative.

But another initiative backed by opponents of Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan appeared doomed, at least for the June ballot, due to insufficient signatures. That proposal would change the rules for the state's winner-take-all Republican primary.

Ford Blasts President's Policies

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford, still insisting he won't seek the Republican presidential nomination, has for the first time criticized President Carter's handling of the Iran and Afghanistan crises.

Carter's foreign policy "slides from crisis to crisis," the former president told a news conference here Wednesday.

Aides said it was the first time Ford had criticized Carter's foreign policies since the Iranian crisis began Nov. 4.

Earlier Wednesday, Ford again said he won't seek the nomination but would accept a draft.

He went on to say in a published interview that "I believe there's a great reservoir of support out there (for me) that would get organized fairly quickly, although I have not sat down and tried to put it on paper."

At his news conference, Ford said he may make up his mind by mid-March on whether to run, the first tentative deadline he has admitted in public.

Ford added he would reassess his position "if unforeseen circumstances develop."

George Bush's upset victory over Ronald Reagan in this week's Iowa precinct caucuses doesn't fit into that category, he said, adding, "I said all along that George Bush would win or come close."

Kabul Airport Experiences Boom

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The Afghan capital's airport once stirred from its lethargy to handle one flight a day, provided it wasn't foggy or snowing. Today the field is booming, with at least three dozen Soviet military transports flying in and out each day to support the estimated 70,000-80,000 Russian troops in Afghanistan.

Western sources said the Soviet transports were touching down at a rate of one every 10 minutes last weekend.

The last time the airport saw such activity was in December 1979, when Britain mounted what was perhaps the world's first airlift to evacuate 586 foreigners to safety in small planes during a civil war.

"Engines were constantly icing up and several planes landed on remote hilltops," wrote Nancy Hatch Dupree and Ahmed Ali Kohzad in their Kabul guidebook. "One pilot who smashed the tail of his plane ... simply enlisted the aid of a carpenter and flew off safely a day or so later."

Today the airport, nestled beneath the towering snow-covered peaks that ring Kabul, combines the exotica of central Asia with revolutionary slogans on red banners.

The arriving passenger is greeted by the proclamation: "Workers of the World, Unite."

Waiting for his passport to be stamped, he can contemplate more slogans promising bread, work and homes for the masses.

After signing a pledge not to be a burden on the People's Democratic Republic of Afghanistan, he will have all his magazines seized by customs officials.

U.S. Seeks Argentina Support

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Carter sent the chief of the U.S. military academy at West Point to try to persuade Argentina's ruling military junta not to take up the slack in grain sales to the Soviet Union left by the U.S. grain embargo.

The junta, angered by Carter's embargo on military aid imposed to protest its alleged human rights violations, has threatened to open its grain silos to the Soviets for sales that could undercut the U.S. grain cut-off.

Lt. Gen. Andrew Goodpaster arrived in Buenos Aires on Wednesday and met for four hours with Foreign Minister Carlos Pastor and Economy Minister Jose Martinez de Hoz. Sources said Goodpaster would see President Jorge Videla, a retired army general, today at Videla's summer home in the resort city of Mar del Plata.

WORLD

Foreign Ministry sources said Goodpaster's talks Wednesday focused on "the Afghanistan crisis, the resulting problem of restriction of grain sales by the United States" and bilateral issues between Washington and Buenos Aires.

Argentina is one of the countries best able to make up the 17 million tons of U.S. corn, sorghum and soybeans the Soviets had been expected to buy before Carter cut off sales earlier this month to protest the Kremlin's intervention in Afghanistan.

At a meeting in Washington on Jan. 12, Argentina joined other grain exporting nations in pledging not to "take advantage" of the U.S. embargo.

Farmers Accuse Union Of Illegal Boycott

HOUSTON (AP) — The Kansas Farm Bureau has filed charges of unfair labor practices against the International Longshoremen's Association for refusing to load grain to the Soviet Union.

The charges were filed Tuesday with the National Labor Relations Board in Houston in a joint action by the KFB, the Texas Farm Bureau and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

AFBF spokesman Patrick Batts said the charges allege the ILA is involved in a secondary boycott, which is an illegal union action against parties not directly involved in a labor dispute.

"In other words, when the ILA refuses to load ships, farmers become the victims because they cannot do the loading, yet their livelihoods are contingent on those ships being loaded," Batts said.

The longshoremen's union ordered its members to stop handling Soviet ships and Soviet cargo imports from Maine to Texas soon after President Carter announced Jan. 4 that he had placed an embargo against the shipment of 17 million tons of grain to the Soviet Union.

After the embargo was announced, it was determined that a previous bilateral trade agreement between the U.S. and the Soviets, calling for the export of eight million tons of grain this year, should be fulfilled.

According to Batts, about 5.5 million tons had been shipped under the bilateral agreement before the longshoremen's action, which union leaders called a patriotic gesture.

Tito Allegedly Recovering At Quick Pace

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslavia's state-controlled news media today released pictures of a smiling President Josip Broz Tito, and there were indications the 87-year-old leader was recovering rapidly four days after the amputation of his left leg.

A highly placed Yugoslav official told Western reporters that Tito was recovering so rapidly he might be able to resume some of his official duties in "a couple of weeks."

The official, who asked not to be identified, added: "If everything goes on, in a couple of weeks, we shall again be solving problems with him."

Yugoslav television and all major newspapers today carried pictures of Tito meeting with his sons, Zarko and Miso, in the intensive care ward of a Ljubljana hospital where the operation was performed Sunday.

Tito, smiling, was shown sitting in a wheelchair. He was dressed in a white hospital gown and wearing a pair of dark glasses.

The pictures were the first of the Yugoslav president since doctors operated because of a blockage in Tito's left leg. The official Tanjug news agency said the operation was performed because the condition "jeopardized" Tito's life.

During Tito's illness, operation of the government and Communist Party has been in the hands of a collective leadership group that is to assume responsibility when Tito dies. The senior official said Tito's illness had demonstrated that the collective leadership functions effectively.

The official added that Tito's illness would not diminish Yugoslavia's role in the non-aligned movement, under pressure from Cuban President Fidel Castro to move closer to the Soviet bloc. Tito has urged the group not to align itself with any superpower.

Violence Erupts In San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The three-month-old junta deployed troops in armored vehicles in San Salvador's streets and around the national university, where thousands of anti-junta demonstrators were holed up.

Before dawn Wednesday, 25 leftists firing rifles and pistols attacked a police station just outside the capital. Police said three guerrillas were killed during a 30-minute battle.

The others fled to the nearby University of San Salvador campus, where they took refuge with an estimated 3,000 persons who fled there Tuesday after an anti-government march exploded into a gun battle.

Casualty reports from Tuesday's shootout ranged from 14 to 20 dead. Authorities said at least 80 others were wounded.

The leftists blamed the government for starting the shooting but the junta said the fighting began when leftists fired on national guard troops at the national palace.

Leftist forces here have unified against the junta that has ruled since ousting right-wing President Carlos Humberto Romero in a coup Oct. 15. The leftists say the government has not fulfilled its promises of reform.

Boost In Oil Prices Predicted

Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Mana Saeed Oteiba, oil minister of this oil-rich Arab federation, declared today that oil prices will "increase automatically" by the middle of this year.

The instability and imbalance in the oil market will exert great pressure on prices and this will force all oil producers, irrespective of whether they are members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries or not, to raise their prices," Oteiba said in an interview with the newspaper Al-Fajr.

He predicted this increase would vary from one producer to another as well as during different periods.

Oteiba said his government will try to convince OPEC members to hold an emergency meeting at the end of March to adopt a common oil price and end the current confusion.

"The gradual and continuous rise of the price of oil will force consumer nations to develop other sources of energy more quickly," he said.

Inflation Has Big Impact On Local Governments

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Woolco store shut its doors in Niles, Ill., village officials took the hint and laid plans to improve their downtown, hoping to make it more attractive to shoppers and store owners.

But the plan is being strangled by inflation.

Double-digit inflation, the economic disease that assaults the budget of American families, is also exacting a heavy toll on local government. Across the nation, officials say the declining power of the dollar is forcing them to delay work on roads, dams and bridges and to postpone improvements to water and sewer facilities.

The National League of Cities estimates that the federal aid dollar of 1972 is worth only 62 cents today; revenue raised locally — through property taxes, for example — has also shrunk in value.

Thus, many local officials are forced to practice a version of fiscal triage, choosing between a summer youth program or water project, a mental health clinic or new street curbs.

"For the first time, we have to set up priorities and decide which ones to give money to — from mosquito control to motor vehicles," says Patrick O'Connor, a Dade County, Fla., administrator.

In Niles, a suburb of Chicago, the downtown "facelift" was to have cost $3.4 million, the money earmarked for street and curb repair, new gutters and sidewalks, planting trees and adding parking spaces. But already the cost has jumped to nearly $6 million.

"The cost has nearly doubled, and we aren't even talking about putting up new facades on our stores," says village manager Kenneth Scheel, adding: "Unless we can find the money to improve Milwaukee Avenue, we'll lose more merchants. If the stores are empty, we'll lose more revenue and be further behind."

Niles is far from alone in bearing the brunt of inflation.

Dade County, where Miami is located, was recently hit by an 80 percent increase in health insurance premiums. County workers also must pay four-fifths more if they wish to cover family members, that boost alone exceeds their recent cost-of-living raise.

Police in Shawnee, Okla., are parking their squad cars more and cruising less. With diesel fuel rising 75 cents per gallon in four years, the small community has also cut back its road maintenance.

Throughout the nation — from the tiniest village to the largest city — double-digit inflation is eroding the ability of governments to maintain parks and libraries, or to build roads, sewers and bridges.

While many local officials say they have managed to stay one step ahead of the inflation rate, they fear time may have run out.

They cite arrival of the economic slowdown — recession — that is expected to reduce 1980 government revenues from sales and income taxes. At the same time, counties and states will have to spend more on unemployment and social welfare programs.

Meanwhile, raising property taxes to keep up with inflation is becoming increasingly difficult as the taxpayer revolt matures.

And direct federal aid has been on a downslide. Some grant programs have been cut in size or abandoned and the dollar value of those that remain is being blunted by inflation.

Revenue sharing, an important source of funds for many localities, has been hit hard. The $6.85 billion spent last year was worth only $4.23 billion in 1972 dollars.

Ominously, the inflation rate — currently running at more than 13 percent — is not expected to subside in the near future.

"Our budget is up 3 percent without social services, and 9 percent with them," says Westchester County (N.Y.) executive Alfred Dei Bello. "Either way, it's below the inflation rate and that means we're swallowing an awful lot of expenses."

"That can go on only so long. We're almost down to the bare bones, so pretty soon, inflation will hit us full blast."

Dade County is trying desperately to hold off its replacement of bulldozers, tractors and heavy highway equipment. It is also deferring all but one bridge project.

"Machinery can't complain when it's cut back," says O'Connor, a county administrator who adds that Dade's cutbacks eventually will lead to deteriorating highways and roads.

Many communities, not just the large cities, are letting their roads deteriorate at a frightening pace, says Bernard Hillenbrand, executive director of the National Association of Counties.

Many localities depend heavily on money from gasoline taxes and highway user fees to maintain their roads and bridges. But as gasoline prices skyrocket, people are driving less — dealing another setback to government money managers.

The cost of public works — diesel fuel, asphalt, patching material, cement, reinforced steel and labor — are way up, says Hillenbrand. Contracts are rising 1.5 percent a month on public works jobs, he adds.

Galloping building costs and interest rates combine to paint a gloomy picture for public construction this year. In 1980, governments will spend an estimated $47.5 billion on construction, but the money will buy less than 60 percent of what it did just 12 years ago, according to the Commerce Department.

Localities are expected to spend one-sixth less in real dollars for sewer projects this year than in 1979. Water supply projects will fare as badly, according to Commerce. Commerce officials say that many communities are unwilling to underwrite sewer and water construction costs even with federal grants because they can't find the money locally to handle daily operating expenses.

This retrenchment goes far beyond big-ticket public works projects. Hillenbrand predicts that within two years no community will collect trash twice a week. "They'll be lucky to collect it once every two weeks," he says.

Roy Bahl, a Syracuse University economics professor, says many cities have warded off financial crisis not only by deferring construction projects but also by delaying salary and wage boosts for employees.

For example, between 1977 and 1978, annual wages and salaries of state and local workers rose 5.9 percent, while those in the private industry went up 7.4 percent.

Bahl sees pressures mounting for new wage boosts to make up for past deferrals, a view shared by some of President Carter's anti-inflation advisers.

Since property taxes remain the prime source of revenue for most municipalities, local officials find themselves squeezed as never before.

As the inflation rate rises, so do the number of Proposition 13-like movements across the country.

According to the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations in Washington, 14 states imposed various restraints on local property tax authorities between 1970 and 1977.

In the first eight months of last year, 16 states took similar action.

Moreover, six states imposed spending limits on local governments. "In a period of double-digit price increases, these limitations can be expected to actually reduce the size of the local public sector rather than simply restrain real growth," says ACIR's John Shannon.

Giraffe Births Set Mark At

Colorado Zoo

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Bill Aragon, curator of the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo, says it would be fine if he never heard another giraffe joke.

"Most of them are unprintable, anyway," he said during a tour at Cheyenne Mountain where more giraffes — 115 in all — have been born than at any other zoo in the world.

It seems an unlikely place for such a record, but the zoo — located on a hillside outside Colorado Springs — has an elevation of about 6,000 feet, just a little higher than Africa's Serengethi Plains, explained zoo director Don G. Davis.

"There are a lot of things harder to breed than giraffes," Davis added. "But, yes, we have done well with the giraffes — mainly because no one else was doing it when we started."

"Years ago, zoos tended toward 'postage stamp' collections — a given species would be a pair," Davis said Wednesday. "If there were offspring, they were considered surplus."

Of the 15 giraffes now in residence at Cheyenne Mountain, four are considered surplus and will be shipped elsewhere later this year. The rest will remain as the Cheyenne Mountain herd.

Whether you love them or not, giraffes now sell for between $10,000 and $15,000 a pair. The zoo has a $1 million budget next year, and the big beasts provide ready capital for maintenance and other acquisitions.

A flip of the coin started it all back in 1954, when the Cheyenne Mountain and St. Louis zoos ordered their first pairs of giraffes. One of the males died, and the shipper suggested that one zoo take the remaining three.

Cheyenne Mountain won and was on its way to giraffedom fame.

Public Officials See Beneficial Side Effects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local officials curse double-digit inflation, but many believe it has some beneficial side effects.

The shock of galloping prices has forced government officials to clamp a tight lid on burgeoning budgets after more than a decade of sometimes wild growth.

"Inflation is demanding tight management. Public officials finally have to become businessmen," says George Slye, a Massachusetts-based municipal consultant.

Dade County stopped using expensive security men to guard trash dumps. Fort Worth is building its new jail next to Tarrant County's complex to share some facilities. Warrensburg, Mo., is studying the possibility of combining police and fire forces.

"Local governments are becoming more and more the careful consumer," says John Shannon of the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations.

"They're telling themselves, 'Maybe we don't need two policemen in the squad car or such a large adult education program,'" he adds.

Cost-cutting plans, cited by numerous local officials, run the gamut from using smaller police cars to consolidating municipal services, from creating productivity teams to imposing new fees for parks, museums, pools, tennis courts and other public facilities.

"It'll be like at a service station," says Bernard Hillenbrand, executive director of the National Association of Counties, of future city services. "You aren't getting those free road maps anymore, and you sometimes must pay extra to get your windshield cleaned or oil changed."

Adds Hillenbrand: "A lot of services really aren't necessary. Even within the areas of health, education and welfare, there are frills."

"Local governments grew too much, too fast, partly because they were goaded by federal grants offered up since the Great Society."

In 1960, local governments received 42 cents in federal and state grants for every one dollar they raised themselves.

By 1978, they received 76 cents in aid for each dollar brought in by local property taxes and user fees, says economist John Peterson of the Municipal Finance Officers Association.

"The feds have been our bail-out system, but that money is drying up," says Hillenbrand. "We see little evidence that Congress is disposed to increase the overall money it appropriates to cities and states."

President Proposes Draft Registration Renewal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reversing direction, President Carter is moving to revive peacetime draft registration of America's young men — and possibly to register young women for the first time.

Carter also proposed to Congress Wednesday night that the nation's draft machinery, including 1,800 local boards, be rebuilt. It was dismantled only four years ago.

"I hope that it will not become necessary to re-impose the draft," Carter said. "However, we must be prepared for that possibility."

Carter announced his draft registration and Selective Service System "revitalization" in a State of the Union speech in which he somberly warned the Soviet Union that any attempt to control the Persian Gulf region "will be repelled by use of any means necessary, including military force."

The president has legal authority to order a resumption of draft registration, but would need legislation to authorize registering women and to induct young people into the armed services.

Administration officials said many details of the renewed draft registration and Selective Service System overhaul have yet to be worked out.

They said it is "an open question" whether young women will be subject to registration. But there will be no physical examinations or classification for a possible draft, they said, and procedures for deciding who would be exempt from a possible draft are "down the line."

The current intention is to register young men between age 18 and 26, but administration officials said it is not certain all youths in this bracket will have to register. The size of the registration, and possibly the age of those required to register, could be determined by the number of potential draftees military planners might want to line up. According to administration planners, if the draft machinery is fully geared and

Texas GOP Congressmen Voice Objections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas congressional delegation, generally lining up behind President Carter's tough-talking State of the Union stand on Persian Gulf defense, has not reined in all its objections to his domestic and foreign programs.

For some — notably the minority of Republicans in the 26-member delegation — Carter's words Wednesday that intervention in the oil-rich Persian Gulf area would not be tolerated represented a case of too little, too late.

"The chickens of three years of neglecting our defenses have come home to roost and no amount of knee-jerk rationput into operation in an emergency, about 100,000 youths might be called up in a two-month period and a total of up to 650,000 over six months after the outbreak of a war crisis.

Defense officials, who asked not to be named, acknowledged there is political risk in reviving draft registration in a presidential election year.

alization and band-aid relief will remove his (Carter's) responsibility," Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, a Republican from Hunt, echoed the senator's comments by calling Carter's State of the Union address "a frank admission that to date we have been drifting and reacting rather than initiating and securing control of our destiny."

Loeffler said the president had conducted foreign policy "by the seat of his pants" and applauded what he saw as Carter's first recognition of a need to beef up military capacity.

Rep. Jim Mattox of Dallas was not alone among the Democrats in calling the president's speech a strong one.

"What he said in effect was a real hard declaration," Mattox said.

"I think the foreign policy of the last seven to eight years is coming home to roost," Rep. Kent Hance, a Democrat from Lubbock, observed. "I can certainly be somewhat critical of the Carter foreign policy, but if you look at what got us into that position it was (former Secretary of State) Henry Kissinger's detente."

Hance like most Texas congressmen, supported Carter's call for a reinstated selective service registration and a strengthened Central Intelligence Agency.

"The problem we have today was caused by a lack of good intelligence," Hance said. "Our CIA and FBI have been gutted over the past six years, and you

Child Slips Into Inner Sanctum

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fact that it was her father's big moment didn't get Amy Carter out of the bleacher seats — but 7-year-old Robert A. Young V sat smack in the middle of the House during President Carter's State of the Union address.

The House doorkeepers, known for preserving their sanctum's decorum even if it means tossing a congressman out on his ear, insisted it wasn't so.

"Kid?" said one, later to demand anonymity. "Ain't no kid on the floor. No way. Not for a State of the Union address. We can barely get the Cabinet and the diplomatic corps in here."

But while the doorkeepers may have checked adult pretenders to privileges of the floor, little Robert V calmly strolled in somewhere around knee-level with his grandfather, Rep. Robert A. Young III, D-Mo.

Robert V apparently wasn't all that impressed. He promptly fell asleep.

State Of Union At-A-Glance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, are the highlights of President Carter's State of the Union address:

Persian Gulf pledge: "An attempt by any outside force to gain control of the Persian Gulf region will be regarded as an assault on the vital interests of the United States of America. And such an assault will be repelled by any means necessary, including military force."

Selective Service: "I hope that it will not become necessary to impose the draft. However, we must be prepared for that possibility. For this reason, I have determined that the Selective Service System must now be revitalized. I will send legislation and budget proposals to the Congress next month so that we can begin registration and then meet future mobilization needs rapidly if they arise."

Oil imports: To increase energy conservation, Carter set a 1980 oil import ceiling of 8.2 million barrels a day enforced by import fees "if necessary." The U.S. imported 8.1 million barrels a day last year.

Standby gasoline rationing: "If we have a serious shortage, I will not hesitate to impose mandatory gasoline rationing immediately."

Hostages in Iran: "If the American hostages are harmed, a severe price will be paid. We will never rest until every one of the American hostages are released."

Iranian relations: The United States will try to "persuade the Iranian leaders that the real danger to their nation lies to the north — in the Soviet Union and from Soviet troops now in Afghanistan — and that the unwarranted Iranian quarrel with the United States hampers their response to this far greater danger to them."

Presidential Hopefuls Critical Of Address

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ted Kennedy was unimpressed with President Carter's State of the Union address. Republican Phil Crane dismissed it as "words,

Carter Doctrine Warns Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has declared the Persian Gulf region off-limits to the Soviet Union, saying he might use American troops to repel any Soviet push beyond Afghanistan.

The warning in the State of the Union address Wednesday night is likely to become known as the Carter Doctrine for establishing a policy of containment for the 1980s.

It is in sharp contrast to last year's plea to the Soviets to cooperate in a quest for peace and keynotes a new buildup of U.S. military might.

Carter was directly responding to the Soviet move into Afghanistan and bidding for the friendship of all Moslem countries, including Iran where some 50 Americans are held hostage.

Carter called for "steady nerves" at home and told the American people that resisting Soviet expansion is a long-haul effort.

The president took a hard line, but most of the other prospective candidates probably will say he was not tough enough.

For one thing, Carter made no mention of stationing American ground troops in the Gulf region. And he did not propose a military alliance along the lines of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

1980 Oil Import Limits Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has set a firm ceiling on 1980 oil imports of 8.2 million barrels a day, the same as last year, and says he will enforce it with import fees if necessary.

The limit means Americans should have access to about the same amount of oil this year as they did in 1979, barring any serious cutback in foreign production.

But Carter said in his State of the Union address Wednesday night that in the event of a serious oil shortage, "I will not hesitate to impose mandatory gasoline rationing."

Carter said the crises in Afghanistan and Iran have dramatized "a clear and words, words." And former Texas Gov. John Connally branded the speech "empty rhetoric."

The 1980 presidential hopefuls, Republicans and Democrats alike, predictably found faults in the president's prescription for a get-tough policy with the Soviet Union and his proposal to revive peacetime draft registration.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said he has never been a supporter of draft registration in peacetime.

"Obviously it was an attempt by the president to indicate he is taking a tough stance," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan. "But I just suggest that one of the reasons we have all the problems is three years of Carter leadership... I think he put emphasis on foreign affairs to cover up his weaknesses at home."

"The president essentially reflected Republican policy as put forward by our party for the past three years," Dole said. "I'm sorry it took him so long to see the light. Apparently he has learned more about the Soviet Union in the past few weeks than in all of his previous months in office."

Rep. John R. Anderson, R-Ill., said Carter's address "was lacking any bold new prescriptions."

Anderson called the draft registration proposal "purely symbolic" and said it would have no effect on whether the Soviet Union pulls out of Afghanistan.

Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., said "It was a lot of good rhetoric. But it was words, words, words."

And Connally said in San Juan, Puerto Rico, that Carter's message was a "mere repetition of what he has said in the past. There is hardly anything new or different in it."

present danger to our national security" stemming from U.S. dependence on imported oil. The nation imported about 44 percent of its oil needs last year, or about 8 million barrels a day, which was below the 1979 ceiling.

Carter said he expects actual imports during 1980 also will be below the ceiling. And he offered to negotiate even lower import limits with the nation's allies.

"I am prepared to lower our imports still further if other oil consuming countries will join us in a fair and mutual reduction," he said. Carter is expected to make new proposals for joint efforts to reduce oil imports at the seven-nation economic summit conference in Italy in June.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be a giver, not a taker, tomorrow even if you feel there is something that you really need from another. Make do with what you have.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Challenges are character-builders and they should not be avoided tomorrow. Overcoming obstacles will enhance your pride and give you a sense of achievement.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Conditions will be favorable tomorrow regarding something you've been hoping for. However, your opportunities may be only partially realized if you put things off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Where your finances are concerned tomorrow, you may run the full gamut between prudence and extravagance. Balance your budget, don't bust it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Treat youngsters in your care with consideration and compassion tomorrow, but don't overindulge them. Pampering may lead them to believe the world owes them something it doesn't.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Avoid taking unwarranted bows tomorrow regarding something accomplished in tandem especially if the other person did more than you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 2) Friends will find your company extremely enjoyable tomorrow. They'll appreciate you for what you are, not for what you have to offer. Grabbing checks is not necessary.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will have the talent to accomplish what you set out to do tomorrow, but you must be realistic regarding the size of reward you expect.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your charm, personality and warmth will make you a delightful addition to any social gathering tomorrow. Enjoy yourself and others without overindulging.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Matters which could mean something to you materially and to your associates should be given priority tomorrow. Don't play until you've made your pay.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In order to get your views across tomorrow, use a creative approach. Let others think the ideas originated with them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be willing to share any good fortune that comes to you tomorrow with persons who have been kind to you in the past. Your generosity will yield a future harvest.

Council Praises Impact Of GEDs

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

The GED is for you if you missed out on a high school diploma.

Take the American Council on Education's word on that. GED is the council's oldest program. It gives people a chance to earn a high school equivalency credential through its General Educational Development testing program.

Mrs. Mildred B. Herman of Littleton, Colo., recently became the oldest to get a high school "credential" that way.

Mrs. Herman was one of 700,000 who took the GED test last year at some 2,700 testing centers nationwide. Sixty percent taking the six-hour test earned high school equivalency credentials.

The exam covers reading, writing, math, social studies and science.

Mrs. Herman was given the High School Equivalency Certificate three days before she turned 90. When she grew up in Denver, she said, "a girl wasn't thought to need a high school education."

Henry A. Spille, director of the GED Testing Program, estimates between 15 and 18 million have taken the exam over the past 30 years.

"It's extremely important," he said, "that we provide individuals with an alternative means of demonstrating high school graduation competencies."

J.L. Peltason, president of the council composed of more than 1,600 higher education institutions and national and regional education associations, said:

"I think it's fair to say that no single test has had more impact on the lives of a larger number of adult Americans than the GED test.

"Without great fanfare or recognition, it has helped to fulfill the aspirations of millions."

GED testing centers are in high schools, community colleges and technical institutes.

Departments of education in various states appoint statewide administrators who operate the program under council policies and standards. The average age of those taking the exam is 30. The average number of years of formal schooling of examinees is 9.9 years. About 10 percent of those taking GED exams are 40 or older. Most, 31.5 percent of test takers, are 20-24.

Ralph Nader's just-out report on the Educational Testing Service — the $94 million a year testing giant and major domo of the controversial Scholastic Aptitude Test — drew praise from two Harvard Medical School teachers, authors of an upcoming Harvard Education Review report also critical of the SATs.

Nader's National Public Interest Research Group claims that 90 percent of the time tests such as the SAT taken by more than a million high school students "predict first-year grades (in college) no better than a random process such as a roll of the dice."

Dr. Douglas Porter, principle associate in medicine (psychology) at Harvard, said the Nader report is bound to stimulate change in the testing industry.

"I have never shared the myth that only some individuals have the intellectual equipment to make a go of college or become doctors or lawyers or whatever they wish.

"Given the opportunity and the schooling, almost everyone can attain their educational goals."

Porter thinks it is remarkable that the SAT, "with such poor predictive validity," continues to play an important role in college admissions.

"Our finding that scores on the SAT can be raised substantially by coaching is contrary to the long-held position of the Educational Testing Service and suggests that the test is unfair to students who don't have access to special preparation," Porter said.

"Differences in high school curricula, as well as unequal access to coaching, make the SAT a measure of educational opportunity rather than a test of intellectual ability."

Dr. Warner V. Slack, Porter's co-author of the pending report and an associate professor of medicine, said the report from Nader and colleagues "will be of lasting value to American children of the future."

"I have long been skeptical of the claim that anyone could, with validity or fairness, characterize the intellectual potential of children by means of a three-digit number."

"The SATs do not measure capacity to learn, any more than they measure creativity, motivation or a sense of humor."

The three digits range from 200 to 800 in the SAT scoring system. The 200 is lowest and the 800 highest on the two SATs — one verbal, one math.

Slack said the SATs simply measure the extent to which students have learned how to answer SAT-like questions — mastering skills of test-taking, memorizing little-used vocabulary and practicing tricky algebra problems.

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign... even if your name is John Hancock.

Soap Opera 'Love Of Life' Finishes 29-Year-Run

NEW YORK (AP) — "Love of Life" is dead at the age of 29, victim of television's most common disease — low ratings.

"It really hasn't died a natural death," said Larry Auerbach, the first and only director of one of TV's longest-running daytime serials. "It was murdered."

"Love of Life" was stricken last April 23, said Auerbach, when CBS shifted the program from its 11:30 a.m. time slot to 4 in the afternoon.

It was business as usual Wednesday in Studio 41 at CBS' Broadcast Center, as the cast and technicians gathered to tape episode No. 7315, the next-to-last in a series that began midmorning Sept. 24, 1951.

"That was my last scene," said one actor, passing through the control room. "I'm kind of down."

"It's a wrench," agreed Kenneth Roberts, the announcer for "Love of Life" from the first episode.

The last installment will air the afternoon of Feb. 1, and most of the story's loose ends will be left hanging.

"I'm really kind of torn apart," Auerbach said in an interview Wednesday afternoon, before rehearsal for the last show. "I'm not just losing a job, and these days that's bad enough, but I'm losing a whole family of people I've lived with so long."

"I worked with two of these performers, Audrey Peters and Ron Tomme, for more than 20 years. And some of the technicians have been here as long as I have. I've seen their kids grow up, and they've watched my son since he was a baby."

"It's been a very familiar situation. The kinds of conditions we work under held people together."

"Love of Life," set in the fictional community of Rosehill, chronicled the lives of Bruce Sterling, played by Tomme, and his wife, Vanessa, played by Miss Peters.

The cast, over the years, included several actors and actresses who would go on to greater recognition: Warren Beatty, Peter Falk, Marsha Mason, Anne Jackson, Roy Scheider, Bert Convy and Richard Coogan.

At its demise, the show had 24 contract players.

The program ran 15 minutes a day at the start, broadcast live, and was expanded to its present format on April 14, 1958.

"Love of Life" was the last of the soaps produced by CBS. Three others on the network's daytime schedule, "Search for Tomorrow," by three weeks the oldest on television, "As the World Turns" and "The Guiding Light," are produced by Procter & Gamble Co., and a fourth, "The Young and the Restless," is from Columbia Pictures Television.

Ratings for "Love of Life" had, in fact, been on the decline for some time. The program peaked in the 1964-65 season with 42 percent of the audience, but that share had been cut to about 25 percent just before the switch to 4 p.m.

tracting mid-December of last year, "Love of Life" was attracting 11 percent of the audience.

"When we went to 4 o'clock," Auerbach said, "we were told there would be a schedule change that would give us a serial lead-in. It never happened, and now they'll change the schedule after we leave the air."

"Obviously, some people at CBS felt they could get more mileage out of another program in that time, and certainly they can. Historically, 4 o'clock has been a death trap for serials."

CBS will replace "Love of Life" with reruns of the popular prime-time situation comedy, "One Day at a Time," now seen 3:30-4. "The Young and the Restless" expands to an hour Feb. 4, and "As the World Turns" and "The Guiding Light" each move ahead a half-hour to clear the space.

"People frequently say to me, 'Oh, that stuff you put on never happens,'" Auerbach said. "Well, some of the things we talk about that happen in our personal lives, people would never believe."

"That stuff we put on that we often make fun of, it doesn't begin to reach the things that have happened to some of us."

"I've always felt the serial kind of picked up on what was happening in the more sophisticated parts of the country, and carried them to the less sophisticated," the director said. "And in that sense, we were an educational show, though I'm not sure everyone would approve of that idea."

bean futures prices closed Wednesday with sharp gains on the Chicago Board of Trade after commercial firms bought up the limited supplies available.

Traders said anticipation that President Carter's address to the nation later Wednesday would signal an increase in international tensions caused some traders to try to even up their buy and sell positions before the close.

Soybeans, which gained as much as 13 cents in nearby months, also picked up some support when news of European interest in beans circulated on the trading floor.

Most of the grains and beans also ran into buy stops as prices rose, that is, orders to buy when prices reached a certain price in anticipation that they would continue to rise.

Suspects Sought In Organ Theft

Lubbock police today said they were looking for an organ and the burglars who stole it from the Church of God in Christ at 1602 Quirt Ave. about 7:20 p.m. Wednesday.

The church's pastor, Bishop J.E. Alexander, said the $3,000 organ and a speaker, valued at $2,000, was missing.

A man and his girlfriend told police they were driving past shortly after 7 p.m. and saw two black men park a late model white van next to the south entrance of the church.

The men then drove off, leaving the church door open, the witnesses said. The witnesses saw the van circle the block several times and then go west on East Broadway from Quirt Avenue.

The property was discovered missing when the pastor arrived on the scene.

In other activity, a 20-year-old woman accused a Lubbock policeman of improperly frisking her during her arrest about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the South Plains Mall, 6002 Slide Road.

The officer, in his report, stated he did not realize the suspect was a female until her husband, also arrested at the scene, yelled at him to stop touching his wife.

The 22-year-old Midland man and his wife were taken into custody by two city policemen for alleged public intoxication, unlawfully carrying a weapon, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

The officers confronted the couple after several persons at the mall said they saw the male suspect waving a knife. The policemen, as well as several witnesses, said they at first thought the female suspect was a man.

While being searched for weapons, the man lunged at one of the officers and, among other things, yelled, "I'm going to kick your — for touching my wife," according to reports. The officer said he quit frisking the woman after realizing she was a female.

However, the man had to be handcuffed and held on the floor until assisting officers arrived and the woman threatened to sue her arresting officer for assault, according to reports.

In a separate incident at the mall, Susan Corinne Serna, 22, assistant manager of Susie's Casuals, told police she was slammed against a wall about 10:30 a.m. Wednesday by a man who then fled the scene after stealing several papers from the store.

The employee, who was not seriously injured in the incident, said the man told her the papers concerned his ex-wife, who used to work at the store.

Police today were looking for two Mexican-American men who reportedly insisted on giving an 8-year-old girl a ride to her school.

The Overton Elementary School student said the men picked her up at 30th Street and Nashville Avenue about 7:55 a.m. Wednesday. She said the men insisted she get into their van.

The men, who police say may be suspects for false imprisonment, drove her to school without harming her, according to reports. However, one of the subjects reportedly told her he would drive her to school another time if she would go to his house.

A 15-year-old boy was treated at Methodist Hospital for minor wounds about 1:15 p.m. Wednesday after he reportedly was cut in a fight at Estacado High School at 1504 E. Itasca St.

The youth, a student at Estacado, said his assailant displayed a box cutter during the altercation and slashed him in the throat and behind the right ear. Neither wound was serious, according to police.

The young suspect is a 14-year-old boy in the ninth grade at Estacado, police were told.

Charlie Cohen Jones of 2307 46th St. said he and his wife returned home from church about 9 p.m. Wednesday and found their residence in shambles. Jones estimated stolen property and damage to the house and its contents would total more than a $7,000 loss.

An antique pocket watch and about 30 silver dollars and half-dollars were taken in the break-in, reports indicate. Food and milk had been poured over furniture, the walls and carpet and a telephone had been jerked off the kitchen wall, police said.

An employee at a discount store in the 5800-block of 19th Street was arrested shortly after 9 p.m. Wednesday after the store manager reportedly saw the 17-year-old youth take $20 out of the register.

The manager said he had been watching his employees closely because in the past several weeks about $300 had turned up missing from the business.

Reports indicate the teen-ager pleaded with the manager not to have him arrested, offered to pay back the cash and, "for what it's worth," said he was sorry he had stolen the money.

Laurie Andrews Walker of 2608 43rd

St. said she discovered her house burglarized about 2 p.m. Wednesday and $3,350 in property stolen, including jewelry and a rifle.

A television set, stereo equipment and $10 in change was the apparent loot for whoever broke into Arthur Albert Preisinger's 5226 17th St. residence between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Ruth Novelli, a graduate student at Texas Tech University, said her wallet, containing about $800 in travelers checks, was stolen from Room 401-C in the Home Economics Building between noon and 1:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The victim, from Uruguay, also reported her passport and other papers were taken in the theft.

Various items valued at more than $1,000 were stolen from a beauty shop at 1519 E. Second St. early Wednesday, according to Lubbock police.

Thelma Lee Erwin, owner of the shop, told police the burglary occurred between 7:20 and 11:30 a.m. Items taken included a black-and-white television, an electronic calculator, a clock radio, three pairs of electric clippers and assorted hairdressing supplies, reports indicate.

In other activity, household goods valued at about $900 were taken from the home of Eva Sue Conner, 501 51st St., between 5 p.m. Tuesday and 12:45 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

The woman told police she arrived home after midnight and noticed someone had turned on several lights in her house. She then drove to a relative's home and notified police, reports indicate.

Entry was gained through a window, which had been broken, police said. The burglar apparently injured himself when climbing through the window, because blood was found inside and outside the residence, police said.

Items taken in the break-in included a color television, a microwave oven, a vacuum cleaner, a sewing machine and other household appliances, reports indicate.

A 1969 Ford pickup was stolen from the driveway of a South Lubbock residence Wednesday morning after the owner started the vehicle and went back into the house, police said.

Randel Howard Crosby of 1806-B 66th St. told police he started the pickup about 8 a.m. and went back inside his home. When he came back out at 8:15 a.m., the vehicle, valued at $550, was gone, reports indicate.

Officers Believe Arrest Will End Obscene Calls

AMARILLO (UPI) — The arrest of a 32-year-old man last week may have ended a 15-year string of obscene telephone calls, police say.

Johnny Lane Nepper of Amarillo turned himself in to a police detective a week ago and was charged with telephone harassment, a class B misdemeanor. Conviction carries a maximum punishment of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Nepper has been freed on a $500 bond.

LT. Marvin Richardson said Wednesday police records indicated 53 obscene calls "with the exact method of operation" were made between 1964 and late 1979 by a man who identified himself as either "John Aldridge" or "Mary White."

Richardson said although the first complaint was received in 1964, seven years elapsed before police received another.

"But it got progressively worse" in recent years, he said, with the latest complaint made in December.

Authorities said a man usually would call a young girl and say he worked for "Sears Modeling Agency," a nonexistent firm.

For several years, police said, the caller would ask women and girls to return his calls, leaving with them the number of an elderly Amarillo couple. The bewildered couple, who received irate phone calls from the victims, died last year, police said, but the obscene caller continued to use their number.

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is due for part of the East extending from central New Hampshire and to western New York State for Friday, according to the National Weather Service. Snow is also expected for portions of the upper Rockies, the upper Plains, extending into Canada, and for northern Texas, extending into the lower Rockies. (AP Laserphoto)

Group Criticizes Move To Force Gas Sharing

AUSTIN (AP) — Trying to force natural gas companies to share gas in times of shortage would be a waste of time and money, company spokesmen told the Texas Railroad Commission on Wednesday.

A "spirit of cooperation" among utilities has served the public well, said company lawyers and executives.

Temporary gas shortages can best be overcome by voluntarily sharing surplus gas, they said, but no plan — mandatory or voluntary — works perfectly during the bitter bite of a prolonged winter.

"It is not realistic to expect any proposal, or plan, either voluntary or mandatory, to eliminate gas curtailments" in Texas, said Vice President Pat Burnett of United Texas Transmission Co.

"Extremely cold weather over any sustained period of time will stretch the limits of any pipeline system to meet all of its firm requirements," he said.

Search Begins For Forgerers

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The arrest of an Iranian student has led the FBI and local police on a search for one or more persons in Houston who are possibly behind a forgery scheme.

"It will be a while before we can come up with anything, a matter of weeks," Brownsville Police Detective Tony Hess said Wednesday.

Gholam Reza Pakyari, a 23-year-old student at Texas Southmost College, told police that several persons in Houston appealed to him in the name of Islam to deposit forged checks and transfer the funds out of a Brownsville bank.

Pakyari was arrested Monday and charged with trying to deposit a forged check in a drive-in window of the Pan American Bank. The questionable check was a forged draft of the National Bank of Kuwait.

Previous bank drafts had been returned to the Brownsville bank by a Houston clearing house after Kuwaiti bank officials described the papers as "forged."

Hess said investigators will be trying to track down similar instances of forged bank drafts involving Houston or Brownsville banks.

City Firemen Probing Blaze

The Lubbock Fire Department this morning was attempting to determine the cause of a fire which caused extensive damage to a Fifth Street residence and claimed the life of a dog.

William H. Bevans' 2323 Fifth St. house was totally engulfed in flames when firemen arrived about 1:30 a.m., a fire department spokesman said.

Bevans was not home at the time, but a pet dog trapped in the burning structure was killed.

The spokesman said the house sustained extensive damage, but a monetary

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance will be in Lubbock Friday morning to speak about the effects of the Russian agricultural embargo on the South Plains area.

Sponsored by the South Plains chapter of the Texas Association of Business, Hance will speak from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. in room 107 of the Memorial Civic Center. A question and answer session will follow if time permits, a spokesman said.

There is no admission charge for the Hance program.

Iranian Testifies In Contract Suit

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas-based computer firm used sophisticated equipment to modify an existing national health care program in Iran and failed to fulfill its part of a $41 million contract, contends an Iranian government witness.

Defense attorneys are attempting to use the testimony of Morteza Ansari, programming director of Iran's Social Security Organization, to prove Electronic Data Systems' contract with the Middle Eastern nation is invalid.

Nasira, a former IBM employee in Tehran, is the second Iranian to testify on behalf of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary government.

Hance To Discuss Embargo's Effects

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance will be in Lubbock Friday morning to speak about the effects of the Russian agricultural embargo on the South Plains area.

Sponsored by the South Plains chapter of the Texas Association of Business, Hance will speak from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. in room 107 of the Memorial Civic Center. A question and answer session will follow if time permits, a spokesman said.

There is no admission charge for the Hance program.

Ancient Ways Used In Fleece Fabrics

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Like the ancients, she begins with the fleece straight from the sheep or goat with all the trash the animal gleans from the countryside while growing its annual coat.

Then, in the time-honored way of turning fleece into fabric, Tomijann Nabors-Pearson separates, cleans, cards, spins, dyes and weaves in a modern renaissance of an old hand craft that has carried her name to craft shows over much of the nation.

Her creations trend toward the exotic — "art you can take from the wall and wear" — but her methods date from antiquity, when they were the only method of creating textiles.

Machinery turns fleece to fabric today, using the same process — separating, cleaning, carding, spinning, dyeing and weaving.

Ancient and modern ways of turning the raw fleece into finished fabrics will be part of the Sheep and Goat, Wool and Mohair exhibit to be dedicated Feb. 7 at the Food and Fiber National Institute.

In the new hall, an extension of the institute, which is housed in The Museum at Texas Tech, one panel will contrast the mechanized way with what a person had to go through to make textiles using hand methods.

A machine does in minutes what once took hours by hand. A 10-minute yard on the modern loom sometimes took 10 hours with hand operated looms.

But, for craft-oriented individuals like Mrs. Nabors-Pearson, the hours are chosen for creative effect not possible on the machinery, plus self-satisfaction. Her own fascination with fiber art began when a roommate at the University of Texas attended a craft school and brought the knowledge back to Austin.

Weaving on an old loom long stored in an Austin garage came first. "Then, I bought a drop spindle and a set of cards. A man at the Dripping Springs wool warehouse saved special fleeces for me," Mrs. Nabors-Pearson explained.

It wasn't long until the weaving and spinning led to excursions to gather dyestuffs from the countryside — oak galls, cottonwood trees, cochineal insects from cactus, madder root and anything else colorful enough for experimenting. To aid in obtaining supplies, she helped found a craft cooperative for Texas hobbyists.

In New Mexico, where her husband, Anthony, was making molds for a bronze foundry, she watched Navajo women spinning and weaving. She added that art to her own pursuits, but failed to perfect the Navajo method of dyeing with prickly pear fruit.

Her way with fiber was featured in New Mexico Magazine and was displayed in Santa Fe galleries. With the growth of the weaving trade, her work soon was in demand at shows throughout the country.

Coming to Lubbock, she brought techniques to an area just arousing to the handicrafts yesterday. At The Museum, she passed her knowledge on to classes and visitors gearing up for the bicentennial celebration.

When she began, handicrafts were not included with fine arts, a thing now changed. "There was a renaissance and growing interest and now it is taking its place as an official art form. At first it was only allowed in arts and crafts shows, but now crafts are accepted as fine arts."

Sometimes, Mrs. Nabors-Pearson works from an idea, spinning yarns for a specific purpose and pattern. Mostly, she lets the fiber tell her what the project will be.

"The fibers are so interesting and wonderful, I like to see how they develop before I plan what they will be." So far, she has used only animal fibers, usually beginning with the fleece itself, but now is involved with cotton fibers to see how they may be spun.

Most South Plains cotton is too short, she said, to hand spin. By starting with the boll and hand separating the fiber from the seed, she skips the carding step and can spin some of the longer-fibered varieties.

Her dream is to raise her own sheep. With shearing a part of that venture, she will be among those closely watching the hand-shearing segment of the special film to be part of the new sheep and goat exhibit at the institute after Feb. 7.

The immediate future for creating will be designs for a 1981 show at the Smithsonian Institution, the latest in a long line of honors for her handmade, from scratch, art forms.

Bell Slates Courtesy Campaign

Courtesy to the customer is the slogan of the day at Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., where operators handling long distance calls will try to be more pleasant in keeping with a special campaign kicked off today.

"Customers should notice a positive difference in the way their calls are handled. Long distance operators will be concentrating their efforts on being courteous to their customers," Lubbock manager of operator services Dorothy Hudgins said.

The campaign will be highlighted today with special activities, including visits from telephone executives and a proclamation by Mayor Dirk West designating today as Operator Day in Lubbock.

"The need for efficient, rapid handling of calls as well as increased automation has impacted to some extent on courtesy. Our customers have told us this and we are listening. That's why we're giving renewed emphasis to courtesy," Hudgins said.

Animal Lovers Rap Station

LAWTON, Okla. (UPI) — By way of promotion, radio station KSWO satirically suggested listeners attire cats in KSWO bumper stickers, then rip them off; point being: to make the cats howl.

Howling was heard. Cats, no. Animal lovers, yes. "We've gotten a few calls from cat owners who are protesting," disc jockey Randy Jordan said Wednesday. "Just because it (the promotion) says to do it I can't believe people really would."

"I guess if someone saw a bumper sticker that said 'go jump in the lake' some crazy person would do that, too," he said.

KSWO's Don Kriste, who thought up the promotion idea, said the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals asked the station to stop airing the satirical tape because of irate telephone calls from pet owners.

KSWO declined the ASPCA's request but did compromise.

U.S. Athletes Disapprove Of Boycott, Poll Says

By The Associated Press
It isn't easy for American amateur athletes today. Caught between sports and politics, they are torn between their dual identities as sportsmen and citizens. If they boycott the Summer Olympics in Moscow, they're throwing away years of practice and dedication. If they don't, are they being unpatriotic? Either way, will the Russians be listening anyway? Andy Toro is one of the athletes in the middle of this brutal game of tug of war. He says he would support sending a U.S. Olympic team to Moscow. But "Being an athlete I would say yes. As a citizen I would probably say no," he said.

Darrell Pace, an archer who is a sergeant in the Air Force, faces a similar dilemma. "As an athlete I want to go but I have to wait and see what happens. I'm undecided. It depends on what the president wants since I'm a member of the military. I'm required to do what the president says."

Although Toro and Pace are undecided, many of their fellow sportsmen on the U.S. Olympic Committee's Athletes Advisory Council have made up their minds. Sentiment on this council, which is being polled as part of USOC deliberations on the question of boycotting the 1980 Games, is running strongly in favor of sending a U.S. team to Moscow, according to a check by The Associated Press.

An AP telephone survey on Tuesday and Wednesday reached 32 of the 47 members of the council and found that most of them favored U.S. participation.

The AP asked the athletes the identical question being posed by the council's leadership:

"If the IOC refuses to move the Games from Moscow to an alternate site or multiple sites — or postpone or cancel the Games — and, if the Soviets do not withdraw from Afghanistan within a month, would you support the sending of a U.S. team to the Moscow Olympics?"

The AP responses were as follows:
—20 answered yes, they would be in favor of sending a team.

—6 responded no, they would not want a team sent.

—4 were undecided.

—2 refused comment because the council was conducting its own poll.

Council chairman Ed Williams, who is conducting its poll, was one of the two.

According to its membership booklet, the council's purpose "is to broaden communications between the U.S. Olymp-pic Committee and currently active athletes and to serve as a source of opinion and advice with regard to both current and contemplated policies of the USOC."

The council's views will be presented to a USOC executive committee meeting this weekend in Colorado Springs, Colo. The committee is to discuss President Carter's statement that the Summer Olympics should be cancelled, postponed or moved if the Soviet Union didn't pull out of Afghanistan within a month.

The overriding feeling of the members of the Athletes Advisory Council conflicts with the opinion of American citizens surveyed by an Associated Press-NBC News poll last week. That survey, taken before President Carter's statement, had 49 percent in favor of boycott, 41 percent against it and 10 percent of the 1,595 adults interviewed across the country undecided.

Several athletes felt that boycotting the Games would not be effective.

"Carter has picked the wrong issue. It's like throwing bean bags at the Russians," said fencer Jim Melcher.

"Unless our athletes are actually threatened, I would send them," said swimmer Rick Colella. "I don't think using the Olympics would cause the Russians to pull out their troops."

"I don't think withdrawing the team would accomplish much," said Suna Murray, a figure skater. "I feel bad about all those people working so hard to get to the Olympics. I can't relate to those Afghans at all."

But weightlifter Sam Bigler can. He would support a boycott.

"I have a friend who's Afghan and he says they really are looking to us for help," Bigler said. "Larger countries have to help the smaller ones."

Several athletes wondered why they were being made the sacrificial lambs.

"I would gladly not go if everyone else were doing their two cents worth," said Peter Schnugg, a water polo competitor. "I'm an athlete second and an American first, but I don't want to be the first one to make the sacrifice."

"We should go unless the United States cuts off relations completely," said Francisco Noodt, a field hockey competitor. "But there's still trade going on so there's no reason athletes should bear the brunt of a boycott."

"Our government does not support our athletes, like some other countries, and I don't believe it should run our athletes," said Kathy Kretschmer, a synchronized swimmer.

A minority of the athletes polled said that any tool to stop the Soviets must be utilized, including a boycott.

Title IX Pushes NCAA To Court

DENVER (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association has asked the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to allow it to sue the federal government over proposed guidelines for women's intercollegiate sports.

The association, based in Kansas City, wants the appellate court to overturn a lower-court decision prohibiting it from filing the suit.

The NCAA contends that the Title IX guidelines banning sex discrimination in college athletic programs usurp the authority of the colleges and would create economic and administrative hardships for some schools, and for the NCAA.

U.S. District Judge Earl O'Connor of Kansas City ruled two years ago that the NCAA has no legal standing to sue the government over the Title IX issue.

The three-judge appellate court said after a hearing Tuesday that it could not predict when it might rule in the case.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has been developing guidelines for Title IX since it became law in 1972.

Government attorneys at Tuesday's hearing said the association has not been harmed by the guidelines so far and that such harm must be proved in order to bring suit.

Both sides say the guidelines stress "equivalency" for men's and women's sports — not dollar-for-dollar spending.

Eben Crawford, a Cleveland lawyer representing the NCAA, said the association has the right to bring suit because:

—The NCAA's purpose is to "promote and maintain the vitality of men's intercollegiate athletics" and Title IX guidelines have an adverse impact on those programs.

—The guidelines "make it difficult for us to act as the governing agency" for college athletics.

—The NCAA faces the possible loss of members now affiliated with both the NCAA and the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women. The two now have different rules for men and women, and the NCAA contends Title IX would make that illegal.

Paultz, Gervin Excel In NBA Victories

By The Associated Press
The Houston Rockets had to go into two overtimes before beating San Diego 111-110 in a National Basketball Association game Wednesday night and lost Coach Del Harris with two technicals.

But in the process, they found a tenacious defense and a potent backup center in Billy Paultz, obtained last week in a trade with the San Antonio Spurs.

Paultz, who occasionally remained in the lineup with starting center Moses Malone, scored 10 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in support of Malone, who had 31 points and 12 rebounds.

Harris was ejected with 3:45 to go in the second overtime when he questioned a call under the Rockets' basket by official Jake O'Donnell. O'Donnell earlier flagged Harris when he protested a three second violation with 22 seconds showing on the 24-second clock.

But Harris was much more interested in talking about the Rockets' defensive play.

"This is the best defensive game we've played all year and we really needed it," Harris said. "We have nine of our next 11 games at home and we really needed this one to get a good start."

Paultz said he was pleased with his progress since joining the Rockets but expects to get better.

"I think Mo and I can communicate on the court," Paultz said. "We are not competing for a position. He can move and I can move and I think when we're both in there, we can be an awesome front line."

The Rockets broke from a 48-48 halftime deadlock and took a 73-67 lead early in the fourth quarter. They led until Lloyd Free, who led the Clippers with 33 points, hit a 25-foot jumper with 56 seconds to go that forced the first overtime.

Houston took a 102-97 lead in the first overtime but a three-point basket by Bobby Smith with 55 seconds to go and two free throws by Brian Taylor with four seconds left, pushed the game to the second overtime.

Calvin Murphy, who scored nine of his 15 points in the two overtime periods, hit Houston's two final baskets for a 111-106 lead. Freeman Williams and Free hit the final two shots by the Clippers.

"This was really a tough loss for us," San Diego coach Gene Shue said. "We've had two real tough games this trip. Our team has played real well but we didn't make the shots tonight when we needed them."

Spurs 144, Pacers 130
"I had a lot of lucky rolls tonight," said George Gervin, who scored a season-high 55 points as San Antonio outslugged Indiana 144-130.

The 6-foot-8 guard, said, "I just got it going from the start. I just went out and did my job. We've been playing good defense. I think that's the key. I think Silas and I are the two hardest guards in the league to match up against."

James Silas added 32 points as the Spurs, playing without their No. 2 scorer Larry Kenon, shot 59 percent from the field. Kenon is out with a back injury.

"Gervin was simply amazing," Spurs coach Doug Moe said. "Anytime you can shoot 21 of 32, you've had a hell of a night. He's been shooting 54 percent throughout most of the year."

San Antonio opened a 21-point lead, 66-45, with two minutes remaining in the second quarter. Indiana scored the last 10 points of the quarter to close within 10 at the half, 66-56. The Pacers cut the margin to eight, 70-62, on a basket by Mickey Johnson with 10:21 to go in the third quarter.

But the Spurs outscored the Pacers 19-6, taking an 89-68 lead with 5:48 left in the period.

Alex English led Indiana with 26 points.

Moe said, "We really had a good game tonight. We've been playing well in the last two weeks, even with our injuries. But I think these last three games we've got our confidence back. Our defense was simply great tonight. Our defense was simply great tonight. Our defense was simply great tonight."

Henry Bibby came off the bench in the second quarter to spark a 34-13 burst that powered Philadelphia over Denver. The Nuggets, who trailed by 13 midway in the first quarter, took a 32-31 lead early in the second period but the 76ers ran off the next nine points and opened a 65-45 halftime advantage. The 76ers were led by Julius Erving and Steve Mix with 24 points apiece. Bibby collected 14 of his 15 during the second-quarter flurry.

Celtics 131, Pistons 104
Rick Robey, starting his first game of the season, scored 24 points and grabbed 19 rebounds as the Celtics remained one-half game behind Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division. After a 54-54 halftime standoff, Boston outscored the Pistons 29-10 in the first eight minutes of the third quarter behind Larry Bird's 10 points and eight by former Piston M.L. Carr. Both finished with 21.

SuperSonics 98, Hawks 96
Gus Williams capped a 35-point game with a 28-foot, three-point field goal with six seconds left as Seattle won its eighth game in a row and handed Atlanta its fifth consecutive setback. The Hawks managed only five field goals in the final 18½ minutes. It was Seattle's 15th triumph in their last 20 road games.

Knicks 119, Suns 109
Bill Cartwright scored 30 points and Michael Ray Richardson added 22 as New York broke a seven-game losing streak by building up a 20-point lead and then holding off a Phoenix rally. The Suns had their five-game winning streak ended and suffered their first loss at home in 13 games. They pulled within three points with 5:38 left but Richardson hit a three-point basket. Paul Westphal, who had 27 points, cut the margin to two with 3:40 left but the Knicks reeled off 10 straight points.

McEnroe Wins At U.S. Indoor
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Second-seeded John McEnroe easily defeated Buster Mottram of Great Britain Wednesday to advance to the third round of the U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis championship.

"I was hitting pretty well from back court and I was forcing him by hitting deep shots," said McEnroe, who eliminated his English opponent 6-2, 6-2. "I tried to keep him off balance."

McEnroe, who led the U.S. Davis Cup team to victory in 1979, said he had a poor start this year, finishing third to Bjorn Borg in the Masters tournament, but is trying to put forth his best effort at the Pro Indoor.

McEnroe won all his service games and served 11 aces. He won his first 11 points on service and Mottram carried only one of McEnroe's service games to deuce in the match.

McEnroe built leads of 4-1 in each set. He came from 0-40 to take Mottram's service in the eighth game to win the first set using a backhand volley.

He also broke through Mottram's service in the eighth game of the second set to take the match, winning on a second match point as Mottram backhanded a volley out of court.

In other action, Billy Martin eliminated eighth-seeded Peter Fleming 6-4, 6-3; Wojtek Fibac of Poland repelled Geoff Masters of Australia 7-6, 7-5; Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland beat Gilles Moretton of France 6-3, 6-3, 11th-seeded Brian Gottfried ousted Mark Edmondson of Australia 6-3, 6-0; and Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, No. 10 seed, beat Eliot Teltscher 3-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Also, fifth-seeded Harold Solomon defeated George Hardie 6-4, 7-6; 13th-seeded Stan Smith downed Hank Pfister 7-6, 6-1; Tim Gullikson stood off Robert Trogolo of South Africa 7-6, 6-2; seventh-seeded Gene Mayer beat Rick Meyer 7-6, 6-1; and Bill Scanlon defeated Chris Lewis of New Zealand 6-1, 6-1.

Celtics Taken Aback By Maravich Signing

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Boston's acquisition of Pete Maravich took the Celtics by surprise, but the players agree that the veteran guard will be a positive influence on the team.

"It was a bombshell dropped on the team," Boston guard Chris Ford said Wednesday night. "I wouldn't be surprised, now, if we got Kareem Abdul-Jabbar."

Ford said the acquisition of Maravich, 31, shocked the Celtics because the team has been doing so well in the National Basketball Association this season. Boston is 36-12 following the Celtics' 131-104 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Boston coach Bill Fitch said that Maravich will add more versatile playmaking to the team's backcourt.

"We're not a power team, we have to rely on finesse, quickness and smarts," Fitch said. "Pete lends himself well to that type of game."

Fitch said Maravich, who has a reputation for long-range shooting, will not become the Celtics' top gunner, but will be relied upon for penetration and running the fast break.

He said Ford, who leads the NBA in three-point field goals, will remain the team's designated three-point man.

Maravich has still got to make the team," Fitch said. "He's not in shape. He has an injury. But I've seen (Dave) Cowens and (Nate) Archibald come back from similar injuries with rehabilitation and I think Pete can come back the same way. There's no urgency to get him into our lineup."

Fitch said Boston's strategy was to acquire the rights to Maravich, who was released last week by the Utah Jazz, and then to allow him to play himself into shape.

"He'll be a great addition to our team," said Archibald, the Celtics' floor leader and starter on the East All-Star team. "Everybody was a little surprised, but he handles the ball well and can shoot it in the basket."

"I think management was looking to the future and the playoffs to give us more depth in certain situations. I think that's why they picked Pete."

Boston rookie forward Larry Bird agreed Maravich would help the Celtics and said he would try to make Maravich "feel at home" in Boston.

"We want to let him know he's wanted in Boston," Bird said. "I'm sure he'll come in with a passing attitude."

Chaps Host Greyhounds

The Lubbock Christian College basketball team has a chance to finish at 500 or better for the first time since 1971 and the Chaps host Eastern New Mexico University at 7:30 tonight in the field-house.

LCC has won its last three games, defeating Wayland Baptist College, Tarleton State and Trinity, and stands at 11-12 on the season. The ENMU Greyhounds are 4-9.

The last time the Chaps finished over the 500 mark was in 1971, the end of their first season, when they finished with 16 wins and 14 losses.

The Hounds are led by 6-5 forward Al Massenburg and his 23.5 points per game.

Other ENMU starters are forwards Austin Henderson, 6-6 and 11.1 ppg., and Art Abreu, 6-4 and 6.9; and guards Royce Blackshear, 6-2 and 11.8, and Doug Gibson, 6-3 and 4.0.

Lubbock Christian will start its usual lineup of 6-4 forward Keith Gardner, the team's leading scorer at 16.3; guards Bill McGee, 9.9; Bruce Carver, 15.3; and Marshall Smith, 8.1; and center Kevin Wharton, 14.8 points and 10.0 rebounds.

In the latest Dunkel ratings, LCC finds itself ranked sixth in District 8. After tonight's game with ENMU, the Chaps take to the road for a meeting with Texas Intercollegiate powerhouse McMurry Saturday. LCC is 2-1 in the conference.

Hunter's 'Dominance' Clues Mizzou

By The Associated Press

JoJo Hunter scored all of his team's points in the first half Wednesday night, an achievement to be proud of. Except that the Colorado Buffaloes scored only four points during those 20 minutes.

In the meantime, 10th-ranked Missouri reeled off 29 points to take an embarrassing 29-4 lead at intermission. The final — 78-45 — wasn't any closer.

"The slowdown decision was made before the game," said Colorado coach Bill Blair. "We just kept missing shots."

"At halftime, I told them I thought we ought to score more points. Looking back on it, the slowdown hurt us. But yes, I'd do it again."

The Big Eight Conference game set records for both schools: least points made by an opponent for Missouri and the fewest scored in a half for the Buffs. Colorado's 2-for-15 shooting helped even more.

Missouri, 15-2, grabbed a quick 4-0 advantage before Colorado, 12-5, went into a stall. Hunter hit a 15-foot jumper at 9:15 and scored the other Colorado points a minute later. The Tigers then blitzed to 18 consecutive points while Colorado went scoreless the final 9½ minutes of the half.

Ricky Frazier led a balanced Missouri attack with 17 points. Elsewhere on a busy night that saw 10 ranked teams play, No. 3 Duke was upset by No. 17 Virginia 90-84; fifth-ranked Kentucky downed Mississippi State 89-67; No. 8 Notre Dame eased by Canisius 84-63; No. 11 Louisiana State beat Mississippi State 73-61; 15th-ranked Maryland took North Carolina State 66-62 to remain atop the Atlantic Coast Conference, and No. 19 Tennessee was upended by Georgia 55-54.

Duke might be ranked third in the nation but it's only fourth in the ACC with a 4-3 mark. Overall, the Blue Devils are at 15-3, same as Virginia, which used its Big Three to win at Durham. Jeff Lamp had 27 points, Ralph Sampson scored 23 and Lee Raker 19.

"I knew he was a good shooter," said Duke center Mike Gminski, who scored 20 but saw the 7-foot-4 Sampson hit 11 of 17 shots and grab 13 rebounds, "but I never saw him have a shooting night like that before."

Lamp hit on half of his 22 shots from the floor in what he called "as much a must-win for us as anything we've played this year."

Kyle Macy had 20 points as Kentucky routed Mississippi State, which reportedly has been split by dissension recently. The Bulldogs' problems hardly would have mattered as the Wildcats, 15-2, played what Coach Joe Hall called "our top performance this year."

"We played better as a team, we moved the ball better, we spotted the open man. That's the best we've run the offense," noted Hall.

LSU coach Dale Brown was thrilled with his team's defense, specifically by Willie Sims, who came off the bench to score 10 points in the second half.

"Sims was the difference — his defense created a lot of turnovers," said Brown. "His defense sparked us."

Notre Dame didn't need much spark to beat outmanned Canisius. Tracy Jackson had 18 points in a game the Irish led from the start.

John "Moose" Campbell, one of the country's most improved players, devastated Furman almost singlehandedly with 26 points, nine rebounds and five blocked shots. The 6-10 center hit on 10 of 11 floor shots for the 13-3 Tigers. Furman is 15-3.

North Carolina didn't miss freshman sensation James Worthy, who is out for the season with a broken ankle. Al Wood started in his stead and scored 26 points.

Maryland, the surprise leader of the ACC, got a key block from backup center Taylor Baldwin and 16 points by both Albert King and Greg Manning to nip N.C. State.

"He went 1-on-1 with me," said the 6-10 Baldwin of State's Sidney Lowe. "and tried to throw up a reverse layup. I kind of had the advantage, being a foot taller than he is."

Freshman Lamar Heard followed a missed shot with a layup with two seconds left to secure Georgia's victory. Despite the loss, Tennessee remained atop the SEC by a half-game over Kentucky.

The state of Florida was the site of some high-scoring individual efforts. Jacksonville's James Ray set a Sunbelt Conference scoring record with 45 points as the Dolphins overwhelmed South Florida 91-75. Ray, who had 30 points in the first half, hit 16 of 25 shots from the field and 13 of 17 free throws. He also grabbed 11 rebounds.

Bo Clark of Division II Central Florida, the leading scorer in the nation last year, connected for 49 points in his club's 130-83 annihilation of Florida Tech.

South Carolina journeyed to the Sunshine State only to be upset by Florida Southern 70-62. Florida Southern, 13-3 and ranked third in Division II, scored 14 of its last 16 points at the free throw line.

In another SEC game, Alabama outlasted Auburn 50-46 in overtime. In other Big Eight contests, Kansas beat Oklahoma 72-67 behind Darnell Valentine's 18 points; Nebraska edged Oklahoma State 74-73 in overtime on Mike Naderer's bucket with 35 seconds to go, and Kansas State remained tied for the conference lead with Missouri by taking a 73-63 decision from Iowa State.

Elsewhere, Georgetown routed U.S. International 107-79 behind Craig Shelton's 23 points and 10 rebounds; West Virginia edged American 71-69 in overtime as Phil Collins had five straight points in the extra session; Cleveland State surprised Pittsburgh 69-66 as Frank Edwards hit for 26 points; Corney Thompson scored 27 to boost Connecticut over Providence 74-63; Texas-El Paso outscored New Mexico 90-70; San Francisco took San Diego 90-76; LaSalle topped Drexel 65-61 as Michael Brooks had 21 points in the opener of a Palestra doubleheader, with Luke Griffin hitting two free throws with 16 seconds left in the third overtime to give St. Joseph's a 60-56 victory over Pennsylvania in the second game.

MHS' Clardy Views Big Games As 'No Big Deal'

By JIM FERGUSON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Trav Clardy didn't seem the least bit impressed with his performance against Hereford Tuesday night.

Pass the ketchup, please.

"I guess it'll do," shrugged Clardy.

It was just NBD (no big deal), he said.

Clardy took complete charge of the Monterey offense and defense during MHS's 58-49 District 4-AAAA win over the Herd. First, he scored 33 points. Second, the 6-6 postman pulled down 13 rebounds. Then, he rested.

There was added pressure on Clardy, too. For the first time in 24 games, he was not teamed up with Monterey's

"other" man, Ian Hyslop. Hyslop injured his ankle in Monterey's win over Lubbock High and thus sat out the engagement with Hereford. That meant, of course, Clardy was forced into double duty under the boards. And on top of that, Greg Thomason, a starting guard for the Plainsmen, was at home with a thermometer in his mouth, nursing a case of the chicken pox.

Clardy shrugged the extra chores off, likewise.

"It hurt not having Hyslop," commented Clardy. "But I didn't feel any added pressure."

NBD.

About the only thing that seemed to rouse Clardy at all was the mention of HHS center Darrel 'Spiderman' Polk. In the opening seconds of the contest, Polk knocked away one of Clardy's shots. Depending who the source is, Polk's slapaway was either a great block or goalden-ing. Clardy and MHS head coach Joe Michalka, slapped with a technical foul after arguing the call with an official, both agree it was goaldening all the way.

"That got me a little flustered," said Clardy. "But I shook it off."

Clardy, who has scored over 30 points "just" three times this year, has never played on a Monterey team that has lost a district ball game. As a sophomore, the Plainsmen were 8-0, as a junior MHS again went 8-0, and is 2-0 so far this season.

But those numbers haven't impressed Clardy, either.

"We still need to improve," said Clardy.

Phillips, Miss Fortenberry Star

By RUSS PARSONS

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It's kind of hard for Dwight Phillips to take anybody by surprise.

When you stand 6-8 in your tennis shoes and earn your district's sophomore-of-the-year honors, you tend to stand out in a crowd.

That might be why, after 15 regular season games, he was only averaging 15 points and 12 rebounds a game. But he showed he has no intention of shrinking from the spotlight, as in his first two district games, he has turned in back-to-back 21-point performances.

Phillips was named The Avalanche-Journal's Class AAA player of the week.

The first came Friday night against District 1-AAA favorite Berger. Despite his points, Phillips and the Levelland Loboes fell 66-58 to the tall Bulldogs. Then Tuesday night against Dunbar, his points paid off with a 76-69 win.

Early in the game, Phillips connected on a smooth-move layup for Levelland's first two points, then followed that with a pretty turnaround jumper from the foul line as the Lobes went up 4-2.

That was just the start. He scored 9 points in the first quarter then added another six in the second as Levelland roared to a 28-28 halftime margin.

When you're 20-1 on the season, there has to be a reason. And for the Dumas girls, you don't need to look much past Trish Fortenberry.

The 5-9 forward poured in 22 points in a 70-56 win over Estacado Friday night, then turned around with a 21-point game in a 73-41 victory over Berger.

In that Berger game, she outdueled Bulldog Donna Coffey. Miss Coffey scored 18 in that loss but connected for 30 in a 85-64 defeat at the hands of Levelland Friday night.

And speaking of Levelland, Karen Kennison combined for 42 points over the week, getting 28 in that win over Berger and 14 in Tuesday night's 76-66 loss to Dunbar.

Other outstanding boys' games were turned in by Canyon's Kendall Walling, who scored 23 in a 58-55 win over Dunbar, then 20 in a 59-57 loss to Estacado; Andrews' Brian Templeton, 25 points and 12 boards in an 87-69 win over Pecos, 16 points in an 87-57 win over Monahans; and Berger's Brett Smith, 19 points in a 66-58 win over Levelland and 18 more in a 74-50 win over Dumas.

Another outstanding girls' performance was turned in by Lisa Cavieil of Dunbar, who had 26 points in a 72-66 win over Levelland. That, matched with her 14 points in a 70-52 loss to Canyon, gave her 40 on the week.

Olympic Travelers May Lose Investments

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than 10,000 people who paid a New York travel agency in advance for trips to the Moscow Olympics may not be able to get their money back, state officials say.

Trips by Americans to the Olympics have been jeopardized by President Carter's call for the summer games to be boycotted or moved from Moscow unless Soviet troops evacuate Afghanistan by mid-February.

The customers may fail to get refunds, a spokesman for the state attorney general's office explained, because the Soviets may not make refunds.

Olympic packages offered by the agency include a 15-day trip for $1,550 and a 2-day deal for $1,850. Added to the prices were tickets to various events, with prices ranging from $3 to $40 each.

A Los Angeles couple filed suit Wednesday in a New York state court demanding a refund from RTB Olympic travel, which has collected $14 million from people around the country for trips to the Moscow Olympics.

Marshall and Marlene Grossman demanded that RTB explain why it refused a refund of more than $3,000 they paid for a trip to the games.

A spokesman for the attorney general's office said, however, it will allow the company to freeze refunds because the firm has already paid the Soviet Union $7 million and does not know if it can get the money back.

Spokesman Tim Gilles said 10,700 people have already paid RTB about $14 million for accommodations, airline tickets and tickets to the games.

Gilles said half the money has already gone to the Soviet government, and travel company officials do not know if they can get that back. Consequently, they're not giving any money back in this country.

"They have imposed this temporary freeze on refunds now, and we agree with this," Gilles said.

"There's no indication of fraud or illegality here," he said, adding that RTB has operated for 10 years — specializing in travel to the Soviet Union — without serious complaints from customers.

The company is the sole agent designated by the U.S. Olympic Committee to handle tickets for Moscow.

Spokesmen for RTB were not immediately available for comment.

In court papers, the Grossmans claim RTB was to have given them the name of the place where they would stay and their air travel schedule by Dec. 31 but had not done so.

Gilles said an RTB representative, Wallace Lawrence, planned to go to Moscow within 10 days to see if he can get back any of the $7 million.

About 1,000 people have so far asked for refunds, Gilles said, but the company has written to all those who bought travel packages, explaining the situation.

ABC Hones Winter Coverage

By The Associated Press

With the controversy over the Summer Olympics heating up, ABC is going full speed ahead with its plans to televise 51 hours of the Winter Games from Lake Placid next month.

Many of those hours — live and taped — will be devoted to figure skating, so it was interesting to see how ABC outfitted itself for the dress rehearsal coverage of the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Atlanta last week.

Broadcast of the event was split between last weekend's "Wide World of Sports" and this Saturday's show. Because of the massive coverage of the Winter Olympics, the skating segments don't include ABC's usual approach of featuring coverage with a lot of "up close and personals."

"The most important thing is to document the championships, to tell who's going to the Games. Then we can dazzle them at Lake Placid," said Dennis Lewin, normally the coordinating producer of "Wide World" who was producing the national skating segments from Atlanta.

The producer's work began after ABC crews went twice to the Omni in Atlanta to survey the arena and ice conditions. Although ice hockey is regularly covered by local TV in Atlanta, camera placements and announcers' positions are radically different for figure skating. The ice-level shot that would be a tangle of sticks and legs in hockey works fine for the figure skaters.

ABC announcers Jim McKay and Dick Button need to be near the ice, so they can better differentiate lutes from loops and also catch the athletes for interviews immediately after their performances. ABC had to buy a section of seats so the announce booth could be in the right spot.

The lighting, which was good enough for local TV's hockey and basketball broadcasts, wasn't good enough for ABC's figure skating coverage. Again, the ABC checkbook came out and paid for additional lighting at the Omni.

ABC didn't have to tamper with the ice, which had already been dyed a bright blue — sort of like sunglasses — to avoid glaring the local TV viewer. But Lewin said Lake Placid may be a bit of a problem. Figure skaters, who are into aesthetics, like blue ice, but the hockey players prefer more natural tones. They see black pucks better on white ice, they say.

The technical folks came down on Sunday, three days before the championships started, to hang the cameras and focus the lights. They had to work midnight shifts because the skaters were practicing during the normal hours. They also had to fix up the mobile truck that houses all the editing, taping and sound equipment. That truck was borrowed from Ted Turner's station WTBS because all of ABC's equipment was sitting in Lake Placid getting a sunbath.

On Wednesday, the production crew arrived in Atlanta. These are the first names to roll after a broadcast. They decide which stories will be covered and how. The decision was made to tape the top three novice ladies, even though they wouldn't appear on the show.

"It's good practice and, besides, in 4-8 years, they're going to be our next Dorothy Hamill, Peggy Fleming and Linda Fratianne," said Lewin. "I just hope I remember we have them in four years."

On Thursday, Lewin met with Chet Forte, the director, McKay and Button. Behind these closed doors is where the coverage plans really take place. Each man is an expert in his field and has an expert opinion. Sometimes things get sticky.

"I want to draw from these people," said Lewin, a warm man who seems to work well with his associates. "But ultimately I make the decisions."

One of the major discussions involved time considerations, since the figure skating would be sharing the "Wide World" programs with several other events. "I decided not to show the judges holding up the marks," Lewin said. "If we had Jim report the scores during the next skater, we would save five minutes. That's two more skaters. The others understood: nobody likes it."

The cameras recorded the skating action each night, then Lewin and his engineering staff spent the week hours of the morning chipping it and slicing it into a show that would include interviews, slow motion replays and artsy freeze frames.

When the pairs and ladies skating segments were ready early Saturday morning for last week's show, they were fed to the ABC studios in New York. This is where the commercials are inserted and decisions like — "We've got to lose 10 minutes" — are made.

It's times like these that Lewin, the producer in the field, wishes he were back in New York wearing his coordinating producer's cap.

Namath's Movie Career Advances Slowly, Surely

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The publicity sheet read: "Former football superstar turned actor Joe Namath and acclaimed performers Judd Hirsch and Jack Albertson star in the riotous two-hour movie, 'Marriage is Alive and Well...'"

One supposes, when one watches Joe Willie Namath act, that Namath will forever be a "former football superstar-turned-actor." The "acclaimed performer" stuff is saved for the guys who waited on tables while waiting for the big break, guys who practiced Hamlet in dingy hotel rooms under the glare of naked light bulbs.

Joe Willie did his acting apprenticeship with an amusing troupe called the New York Jets. His "Boffo" performance came against the Baltimore Colts in Super Bowl III. His only memorable soliloquy came before the game, when he predicted his underdogs would beat the mighty Colts.

"I guarantee it," said Joe Willie. He was outrageous and hip in a time when most jocks were flat-topped and low-profiled. He hung out in nightclubs ... owned one, for awhile. He never did summer stock; he was Broadway Joe.

Somewhere along the way, Joe Willie Namath became a bona fide "personality," which qualified him to go on talk shows and make biker movies with Ann-Margret (remember the drive-in special, "C.C. & Co.?)."

And being a personality, Joe Willie was assured of at least one chance at a TV series. So he came to Hollywood, retired from football after one season, and hit the air with "The Waverly Wonders" at NBC.

The series made "C.C. and Co." look classic. It vanished, mercifully, after a few painful weeks.

Now, a year later, here comes Joe Willie again, this time in an NBC-TV comedy about marriage. You get the feeling that Namath didn't spend the intervening months in a dingy hotel room practicing "Hamlet."

"The acting is going well, I think," he says. "I'm going at it at a comfortable pace, and I think I'm growing. I know I could learn a lot more if I studied more, if I stayed up days and nights studying, but I'm also sure that would change my personality. And I don't want to do that. I'm very comfortable with the way things are."

Of the "Waverly Wonders" disaster, Namath says: "Having gone through a whole lot of ups and downs in football, I was prepared for the show not to make it. So, when I was told that it was canceled, I didn't have that feeling of sickness in the pit of the stomach that you usually feel when you've been humiliated."

"I felt it later, but it was easier than other letdowns I've felt in my life. I wasn't totally satisfied with the job I did, but it was a great learning experience, a positive experience." He cheerfully performs his promotion duties for "Marriage is Alive and Well" (which airs Friday on NBC), but next week, Namath will be back home in Fort Lauderdale, where, presumably, he won't be spending his days and nights studying the histrionic art.

Come to think of it, maybe "former football superstar-turned actor" isn't so bad.

APPRENTICESHIP — Fourteen-year-old Andrea Jaeger returns the shot of Kathy Jordan during the second round of a $200,000 women's tennis tournament Wednesday in Chicago's Amphitheatre. Miss Jaeger lost 6-2, 6-1. (AP Laserphoto) ended up and ran off seven consecutive games to go from 2-2 in the opening set to win the set 6-2 and open a 3-0 lead in the second. She faces Mrs. Lloyd on Friday.

Teenage Tennis Player Loses

CHICAGO (AP) — Andrea Jaeger's 14-match winning streak came to an end in the second round of the $200,000 Women's Professional Tennis Tournament, but the 14-year-old beginner wasn't discouraged.

Eighth-seeded Kathy Jordan advanced to the tournament quarterfinals with a convincing 6-2, 6-1 victory Wednesday night over the high school freshman from suburban Lincolnshire.

"Kathy's a little older, stronger and more experienced than I am," Miss Jaeger said. "It's only my second major professional tournament, and I'll have plenty of time to learn."

Miss Jordan, 20, of King of Prussia, Pa., now faces No. 2 seed Chris Evert Lloyd, who was a 6-3, 6-2 second-round winner over Bettina Bunge.

Miss Jordan, who said she was a little "tight" at the start of the match, loosened up and ran off seven consecutive games to go from 2-2 in the opening set to win the set 6-2 and open a 3-0 lead in the second. She faces Mrs. Lloyd on Friday.

Mrs. Lloyd had a tougher time with the 16-year-old Miss Bunge. In the first set, decided by a single service break, Miss Bunge attacked at every opportunity.

MSU's Weaver Anxious To Begin

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — For Douglas Weaver, returning to the Michigan State campus is a little like a dream come true.

"It's not possible ... to explain the elation I feel," Weaver said Wednesday as he was presented as MSU's new athletic director.

The 49-year-old Weaver, a Michigan State grad and assistant coach in 1966, was introduced by MSU president Cecil Mackey as "a true Spartan ... who still bleeds green and white." And Weaver

Fresno Banned From Tourney

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Fresno State University has been barred from the Pacific Coast Athletic Association's basketball tournament because it already will have played all the regular-season games it is allowed.

League and National Collegiate Athletic Association rules limit regular season competition to 27 games, including league tourneys which count as one game.

Fresno State had scheduled 26 plus the league tourney which selects the PCAA representative to the NCAA tournament.

However, league officials ruled Wednesday that a pre-season scrimmage against Merced College counts as an official game.

"In essence the decision not requiring Fresno State to play in the tournament is an action designed to help the university," PCAA commissioner Lewis A. Cryer stated. "It will prevent the school's basketball team from becoming in violation of NCAA and PCAA rules."

JABBAR GETS RAISE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — First Los Angeles Lakers owner made his star center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar a happy man this season by importing power forwards Spencer Haywood and Jim Chones to help shoulder the rebounding duties. Now Buss has pleased Abdul-Jabbar once more, renegotiating his contract to give the five-time National Basketball Association most valuable player a reported $1 million-plus a year.

Coach Penalized For Alleged Kick

BOSTON (AP) — Basketball coach Paul Fitzpatrick of Boston State College has been replaced after allegations that he kicked an opposing team's player during a game in North Adams last Saturday.

Athletic Director Mary Barrett issued a statement that said Fitzpatrick "has resigned as head basketball coach and has been reassigned as a consultant to the athletic department for the remainder of the year."

Fitzpatrick, 30, had compiled a 61-29 record during four years as Boston State coach.

He was accused of attacking Peter Stopera, a North Adams State College player, as Stopera lay on the floor after fouling a Boston State player.

Fitzpatrick denied the accusation, saying he was trying to protect his player and himself.

Boston State acted Wednesday after looking at written reports submitted by North Adams players, game officials and North Adams coach Frank Zoltek.

Miss Barrett said Fitzpatrick has been replaced by his assistant, Kevin Dowd.

"This undoubtedly hurt my reputation," said Fitzpatrick. "But I'll be back as a basketball coach. It's my whole life. By assigning me to the position of consultant for athletics, they've shown they respect me."

Weaver said he isn't ruling out any type of coach — professional or college, current head coach or assistant, MSU alumnus or newcomer. But he declared the man "has to be a real team player ... what we don't want at Michigan State is fieldoms."

Weaver, who left the job of athletic director at Georgia Tech to return to his alma mater, played center and linebacker on the MSU football teams of 1950, 1951 and 1952, which won 26 of 27 games. Since graduating, the Goshen, Ind., native has coached at Kansas State and Southern Illinois and served as athletic director at Southern Illinois and Georgia Tech.

He's replacing Joseph Kearney who, with football Coach Darryl Rogers and all but one assistant coach, moved to Arizona State last week.

Weaver refused to criticize either for leaving, but declared: "I feel strongly about honoring commitments. I honored mine." He said he had a year-to-year agreement at Georgia Tech that came due each May. He was at Tech for 3 1/2 years.

His appointment must be ratified by the MSU Board of Trustees, which meets Friday. He said his contract terms had not been set yet.

Weaver rejected the idea that MSU sports is disorganized because of the departure of Kearney and Rogers. "This is a great institution — we're not in a state of disarray at all," he said. "I don't think morale and enthusiasm will be a problem."

Asked how long he expected to be at MSU — a sore point following last week's tandem abandonment — Weaver said: "Probably as long as I'm good."

Landry Enjoys Pro Bowl Scene

HONOLULU (AP) — He spent a year aiming for the Super Bowl and landed two victories and 2,500 miles off target. But the Pro Bowl is still a football game and that's what keeps Tom Landry's juices flowing.

"I enjoy coaching and being with outstanding athletes. That's really a treat for a coach — going out and watching the best there is in professional football, getting to know them better, having a better understanding of each player," Landry said. "It's really an enjoyable time."

Landry's Dallas Cowboys were almost everyone's pick to return to last Sunday's Super Bowl as the National Conference champions. But they were shot down by Los Angeles in their first playoff game and Landry was detoured from Pasadena, Calif., to Hawaii.

"Well, if you have to do something after losing out on the Super Bowl, this is just about as good a thing to do as anything," Landry said Wednesday before putting the NFC stars through another light workout for Sunday's game against the American Conference.

Preparing for this game is vastly different than preparing for any Cowboys game, of course. No flex defense. No multiple-set offense. Nothing fancy.

"Basically, you have to make it fairly simple because you have less than a week together and you work only an hour or two on the field each day," Landry said.

"The most difficult thing is eliminating the numbers so you don't have confusion among players from different teams. You do everything with basic descriptions. You know, 'Anderson run right,' or 'screen pass left,' so everybody won't get mixed up by numbers.

"What it comes down to is I'm just out there to direct traffic, not much else," added the Cowboys' tactical genius.

The Anderson he referred to is Otis Anderson, the sensational rookie running back of the St. Louis Cardinals who rolled up huge chunks of yardage in each of his games against the Cowboys in 1979. Being able to coach him once, Landry said, won't help him to slow down Anderson next season.

"I don't think you can defend that much talent," Landry said. "Besides, I already know how good he is, but knowing it and doing something about it are two different things.

"The nice thing is finding out what kind of a person he is. All year you go by a player's number, by the way he looks in a uniform. I wouldn't even recognize most of these guys if I met them on the street. Until this week I didn't know what most of them looked like. So it's nice to have a little more personal relationship with them for a change."

It's Landry's fifth Pro Bowl and his first since 1974. His counterpart with the AFC, Don Coryell of the San Diego Chargers, is making his Pro Bowl coaching debut.

Landry was a winner in his first one, before the American Football League became (along with Baltimore, Cleveland and Pittsburgh) the American Conference. Prior to 1971 it was East vs. West in the NFL and, in 1967, Landry's Eastern stars defeated George Allen's team 20-10. Two years later Allen reversed the outcome as the West beat Landry's squad 10-7.

In 1973 Chuck Noll of Pittsburgh coached the AFC past Landry's NFC team 33-28 and the next year Landry was a loser again, this time 15-13 to John Madden, then the Oakland Raiders' coach.

"It would be nice to win one of these things for a change," Landry commented. Then he offered an opinion that told you his mind was still on the Super Bowl, namely next year's.

"These Pro Bowl games are nice and all that and I'm sure next year's, wherever it is, is going to be a lot of fun. But next year I plan to be somewhere else."

Where?
"New Orleans."

Massengale Finds Swing, Payday

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A small correction in his swing has given Rik Massengale a new lease on his golfing life.

"I'm loving it," said Massengale, once one of the game's more promising young players but a stricken, struggling scrambler for 2½ years.

"I haven't hit a duck hook in two weeks," Massengale said before teeing off today in the first round of the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open golf tournament. He smiled and repeated a golfing axiom:

"It's a lot easier to play out of the fairways than over there on the wrong side of the (gallery control) ropes."

Starting in 1975, Massengale won one tournament a season and averaged better than $100,000 a year for three consecutive seasons.

Then it all went bad.

In the last two years he won a total of $29,000. The quiet, pleasant Massengale, who never made a complaint, drifted back into the ranks of the Monday morning qualifiers.

His game was in tatters and his career in jeopardy. Last year he won only $13,000. His stroke average was a high 73.7. He made money in only 11 of 31 starts.

"I put the clubs away for five weeks (at the end of last season)," Massengale said, and then, starting the 1980 campaign, got a little tip from teaching pro Ernie Vossler.

"I had the clubface closed at the top of the backswing," Massengale said. "I was pull-hooking or duck-hooking everything."

"Now, I'm just trying to concentrate on keeping it open at the top, and I haven't hit a hook in two weeks."

"I'm absolutely thrilled with the way I'm hitting the ball. It's fun again."

He made the change only two weeks back.

"I'd played bad for 2½ years," Massengale said. "Now I'm starting to hit the ball real well. I'm hitting the ball better than I have in two years — probably as good as I've ever hit it."

His rebound swing and building confidence — bolstered by a second-place finish last week in Phoenix that produced a $32,000 check, more than he'd made in the two previous years — made him one of the leading candidates for the $45,000 first prize in this, the third tournament of the season.

Dowhower Leaves College Ranks

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Just a year after becoming head coach of one of college football's most exciting teams, Red Dowhower is gone from Stanford University.

Dowhower shocked the Cardinal faithful Wednesday when he turned in his resignation to become offensive coordinator for the Denver Broncos.

"Surprise is the adjective to describe my emotions," said athletic director Andy Geiger, who must now find the school's fourth coach since 1976.

"It is an unusual situation," the 37-year-old Dowhower admitted. "If it hadn't been the Denver Broncos, I wouldn't have even considered leaving."

Dowhower, an often-grim, taciturn leader, would not elaborate on his reasons for leaving, although it was obvious last season that he was not as comfortable in his job as his predecessor, Bill Walsh, who left Stanford to become head coach of the San Francisco 49ers.

Dowhower's team was the only one to tie Southern Cal last season, but it also was the only one to lose to Oregon State and finished with a disappointing 5-5-1 record.

However, with highly-regarded freshman quarterback John Elway, All-American receiver Ken Margerum and injured star Darrin Nelson returning for another season, the Cardinal outlook for 1980 was bright.

"I'm on the athletic board and we just finished a meeting this weekend and he (Dowhower) talked about the team, recruiting and the upcoming season and looked like he was rating to go," said Gordon Banks, another returning receiver.

Dowhower's resignation comes in the middle of the high school recruiting season and Geiger named former recruiting coordinator Doug Single, who is now associate athletic director, to be interim coach.

However, Geiger said that Single would not be a candidate for the fulltime job and that a search for a successor to Dowhower would begin immediately.

Lions, Gary Danielson Disagree On Contract

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Lions and Gary Danielson are miles apart on a contract and his agent says the club's No. 1 quarterback will become a free agent Feb. 1 unless an agreement is reached.

Marvin Demoff, a Beverly Hills, Calif., attorney who represents Danielson, says the Lions have not budged from their initial offer five months ago to the 29-year-old quarterback.

"It's not close to what Gary would sign for," Demoff said.

Demoff said he was sure he and Russ Thomas, the Lions' general manager, would talk in the next eight days before the National Football League's free agent deadline.

"But I don't think there will be any change in his position," Demoff said. "I think he knows where he wants to be on Feb. 1, just as Gary knows where he wants to be."

"I would be very surprised if Russ — after telling how sincere he is in his offer and how he decided on the offer — would suddenly change his position just because the date changed."

Danielson, a former Purdue star who prepped at Dearborn Divine Child, was expected to lead the Lions to a Central Division title last season. Instead, he was knocked out for the season with an injured knee in Detroit's final exhibition game and the club finished a dismal 2-14.

Danielson is free to listen to offers from other NFL clubs once he becomes a free agent. Because of the NFL's tough compensation rule, however, his chances of making a deal with another team are slim.

Any team bidding for Danielson would have to be prepared to repay the Lions in draft choices — up to two first round picks if Danielson was signed for $200,000 a year.

"As I told Russ, I have a gut feeling there will be interest, but the compensation makes it tough," Demoff conceded in an interview published in today's Detroit Free Press.

Any contract offer Danielson receives must be put in writing to the Lions who, then, can retain him by merely matching the offer. If, by March 15, he has received no written offers, Danielson is subject to Detroit's last written offer. He either can accept that or a 110 percent increase over his current annual pay.

Danielson's only other choices are to retire from football or play in the Canadian Football League.

"I'm not really that interested, unless I get an earth-shaking offer," Danielson said recently. "I really don't want to play in Canada unless I have to."

Demoff said, however, he will listen to any offer, especially in view of the fact that Danielson's knee troubles now mean a very large question mark.

"If Gary would have played for the Lions and had a great year, obviously our bargaining position would have been bet-

Oakland Officials Make Headway With Raiders

OAKLAND (AP) — A final decision on whether the Oakland Raiders will stay here is expected by the first week in February, and the latest offer looks promising for Oakland, negotiators say.

Speaking at a news conference alongside Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson, Cornell Maier, president of Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp., said Wednesday that he believes the negotiators' latest offer may persuade Al Davis to sign a new lease with the Oakland Coliseum.

Although he declined to release details of the offer, Maier said, "We believe it does meet the requirements of the Raiders."

"The Raiders need a modern facility — a facility suitable to the 1980s with appropriate boxes, locker rooms, sound systems and so forth... All these things are covered in the package."

Maier confirmed that his company has pledged $2 million as part of the offer and announced that the Clorox Company has offered $500,000. The total package is estimated at around $8 million, including a $4 million loan for the construction of luxury boxes which the Raiders would not have to guarantee.

Davis, Raiders' managing general partner, has also been negotiating with representatives of the Los Angeles Coliseum and has reportedly been offered a $17 million package to move the team there.

Wilson, who joined Maier in negotiating with Davis in Los Angeles last Saturday and Tuesday, said that after the second meeting, he came away "feeling very good. I felt then that we had a good shot at keeping the team."

The mayor announced that the city council is prepared to float a revenue bond for coliseum improvements, and that "the bond will pay for itself."

NHL Sources React Negatively To Lawsuit

NEW YORK (AP) — A National Hockey League official says the filing of a $7 million damage complaint against the NHL, the Boston Bruins, nine of their players and a host of others is not expected to affect any prospective discipline of the players by the league itself.

"I don't believe anything the league does is admissible in court if the issue is whether someone attacked someone else," said Gil Stein, NHL vice president and legal counsel.

NHL president John Ziegler is expected to announce Friday the results of the league's investigation of the Dec. 23 incident during which Bruins' players went into the Madison Square Garden stands to grapple with four fans after a 4-3 victory over the New York Rangers.

The spectators, claiming "severe mental and physical distress" and attacks "without provocation" by Boston players, filed their suit in District Court Tuesday. They held a news conference Wednesday, complete with press releases and biographical information on the complainants, evoking a strong reaction from Bruins' president Paul Mooney — yet another of the 23 defendants.

Mooney issued a statement that said in part:

"Anything said now will only hurt other boys' chances in fighting. There have been deaths recently in the state in boys' football.

"But because this is boxing ... the press has beat this to death. They've beat this thing to death. I think they should wait until the (Mingo County) prosecutor determines the real cause of death."

Around the country since November, three professional boxers have died of injuries sustained in the ring.

Elliott Maynard, Mingo County prosecuting attorney, said Wednesday he will conduct "a full investigation" into Hoosier's death and will report his findings to an April grand jury.

"I am very concerned about this incident and exactly what did or did not occur," said Maynard. "My office will conduct a full investigation and will report to

"A suit of this nature is totally frivolous. The plaintiffs have sued everyone from the players to the president of the league.

"It is apparent to me the entire exercise is nothing more than a publicity stunt. Prior to today, I have never heard of a publicity release being handed out on legal stationery at a press conference announcing a suit.

"Unfortunately, any time an incident reaches such a proportion that a lawsuit is filed, we have to take it seriously. We have our legal staff handling the case as of this moment," the statement said.

James Kaptain of Clark, N.J., claimed he was attempting to leave the Garden by a walkway adjacent to the playing surface when "a fight erupted. The players were fighting. I was viewing the fight and I was hit by a stick.

"As a reflex action, I grabbed the stick. The next thing I knew, I was being assaulted by the Bruins."

John Kaptain, James' brother, said, "I didn't see any swings," although Boston players claimed someone had leaned over from the walkway and punched Bruins' left wing Stan Jonathan. That, they claimed, sparked a charge by the Boston players — led by right wing Terry O'Reilly — over the low retainer that separates the playing surface from the walkway.

Boxing Official Up In Arms Over Criticisms Following Teen Death

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — The state boxing commissioner doesn't think the death of a 13-year-old fighter during a recent tournament in Lenore will have an adverse effect on the sport in West Virginia.

Allen Tackett said that any time there is contact involved in a sport, injury can result, a fact that participants are fully aware of before they begin competition.

"I personally don't think this will have a great effect (on boxing in the state)," he said. "You seldom see anyone hurt in amateur boxing. In any combative sport, there is a risk involved. Anyone who deals with boxing knows there is some calculated risk.

"The boy's dead. There's not much else you can say," he said, referring to the death of Harlan Hoosier, a Beauty, Ky., amateur fighter who died of brain damage following a tournament two weeks ago.

Dutcher, Minnesota Gophers Take Lack Of Recognition In Stride

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It wasn't long ago that critics had picked the University of Minnesota basketball team to finish somewhere between eighth and tenth place in the rugged Big Ten this season.

Now, some of those same critics have joined Gopher players in wondering why Minnesota hasn't been able to crack the weekly wire service Top 20 polls.

"If we can play Ohio State the way we did, we know where we stand," said center Gary Holmes. "I think we belong in the top 20 somewhere."

Last Thursday Minnesota took Ohio State, then ranked No. 2 in the nation, into overtime before losing by five points. The Gophers rebounded on Saturday, however, to defeat another ranked team, Purdue, by six.

This week Ohio State is No. 4 and Purdue is No. 14.

Minnesota is nowhere to be found.

"All they do is re-shuffle the list," noted Minnesota coach Jim Dutcher, who admits that he likes the polls, even though some of his teams have had trouble gaining national exposure.

"It's tough to break in if you haven't been included before. Some teams lost twice last week and only dropped a couple spots.

"But I'm in favor of wire service polls because they create interest. You can question their accuracy at times, but they do serve a purpose."

The Gophers have two more chances to break into the coveted Top 20 this week. Tonight they entertain No. 16 Indiana at Williams Arena and on Saturday travel to Iowa, which for most of the season had been listed among the top teams in the country before guard Ronnie Lester was injured.

A pair of triumphs would give Minnesota a 13-4 record (currently the Gophers are tied with both Purdue and Indiana at 11-4 overall and 4-2 in the Big Ten) and theoretically another shot at the voters.

"You can't count on anything, though," Dutcher points out. "And I'm not so sure we deserve to be in there. I really haven't analyzed it."

Dutcher pointed out, though, that not being rated isn't the end of the world.

"From a personal standpoint, I don't mind it," he said of the Gophers' absence. "It's nice to be rated in late February because that helps determine who goes to the NCAA tournament.

"But ratings are much more important in football because in basketball we determine our own national champions with a playoff. In football they don't."

So Minnesota goes about its business, trying to break into the national elite, but not complaining when they don't.

"The players are conscious of it, but we don't post the ratings on our bulletin board each week. Right now we just have to worry about Indiana. The rankings are a fact of life and will take care of themselves."

Going to the air ...

It looks like college football is flying higher. It's turning more to pro-style offenses. Since 1976, the percentage of passing has increased.

Bailey Benefits As Sonic Back-Up

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — What a difference a year makes. Last year at this time, Jammin' James Bailey was under incredible pressure as the main cog in the Rutgers University basketball team. Now, Bailey is learning the tricks of the pro basketball trade as a highly-skillful bench warmer for the National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics.

"This is a unique situation and one I like very much," says the SuperSonics' rookie forward, the sixth player picked in the 1979 draft. "I don't know what would have happened if someone else had drafted me and I had to start and carry the load right away. But I would it could have worked out any better than this are working out now."

Bailey suffered through a disappointing senior year with most teams employing collapsing zones to neutralize him. Some say his market value decreased with each passing game but not too many players had to beat three men to get to the hoop. Bailey never lost confidence though he went through a trying, pressure-filled season.

With Seattle, the defending NBA champs, Bailey is going through a learning process. There's virtually no pressure and after last season, that's a welcome relief.

Writer Describes Pitfalls In Selling Gold, Silver

By CHET CURRIER
 NEW YORK (AP) — Goodbye, old ugly jewelry that I never wore anyway! Hello, bright shiny new side-by-side refrigerator with an ice cube dispenser in the door!

Jury Indicts Woman On Assault Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a woman accused of bursting into the reception room of Sen. Edward Kennedy's Capitol Hill office brandishing a six-inch hunting knife.

Suzanne Osgood was charged this week with assaulting a federal officer while armed, a violation that could bring a maximum 10-year prison term. Government lawyers said the woman slightly injured Secret Service agent Joseph Meusberger during the Nov. 28 incident. Meusberger received a minor cut while he struggled with Miss Osgood for the knife. Since the incident, Miss Osgood has been held without bond at the federally-owned St. Elizabeth's mental institution here.

diesticks, and other such items have changed hands in recent weeks as people watched gold prices soar past $800 an ounce and silver close to $50 an ounce at their highs a few days ago.

There are many potential pitfalls in this process, of course — so many that this column will skip quickly over the most obvious ones.

Let's assume, for example, that you deal only with reputable dealers, not some no-name operation passing quickly through town.

Let's also assume that, by the time you accept a cash offer for some old heirloom, you've had it appraised or done enough research to know that you're getting about what it should be worth.

Several other important issues remain in deciding whether to join the stampede — including the basic question of why so many dealers would be so eager to accommodate you.

When you bid goodbye to that old jewelry or silver, you are parting with a commodity that has appreciated in value over the last several years and has a chance to rise further in the future.

The cash you get in return, by contrast, is certain to depreciate until inflation stops, which isn't likely to be any time soon.

If you don't keep the cash, but exchange it immediately for a refrigerator, you have merely switched to another depreciating asset, which loses a big chunk of its original worth the minute you take possession of it.

If an individual money manager's primary goal is to stay ahead of inflation in the future, that doesn't look like a very promising strategy for achieving it.

The argument here is not, however, that selling precious-metals assets is a bad idea for everybody in every kind of situation. One notable exception might be individuals who depend on their savings and investments for income to live on, such as retirees.

Thanks to the surge in gold and silver prices, these people now can consider converting, at much higher prices than before, unwanted precious-metals possessions into other investments that pay interest or dividends.

The risk they take in doing so is missing out on the benefits of any further rise in gold and silver prices. But that risk always exists, whenever anyone sells any kind of asset.

The alternative, hanging on to gold and silver items, likewise carries a risk — as demonstrated by the sudden sharp drop in gold and silver prices earlier this week.

For those who have no immediate plans to sell whatever precious-metals items they possess, today's highest prices still have financial benefits — increased net worth, potential use of the items as collateral for a loan, a cushion against future emergencies.

Their higher value also may mean a need for extra steps to safeguard them. Many home and renters' insurance policies now being sold have limits of, say, $500 or $1,000 on theft coverage for silverware, just as they commonly do on jewelry and furs.

To get coverage up to their appraised value in those cases, you can buy a "scheduled property floater" which covers specified items. For substantial silver collections, insurance experts say you might check into the costs of a separate policy, as well as those of a floater on your basic property insurance.

Joe Namath Appears In Comedy About Marriage

By PETER J. BOYER
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The publicity sheet read:
"Former football superstar-turned-actor Joe Namath and acclaimed performers Judd Hirsch and Jack Albertson star in the riotous two-hour movie, 'Marriage is Alive and Well'."
One supposes, when one watches Joe Willie Namath act, that Namath will forever be a "former football superstar-turned-actor." The "acclaimed performer" stuff is saved for the guys who waited on tables while waiting for the big break, guys who practiced Hamlet in dingy hotel rooms under the glare of naked light bulbs.
Joe Willie did his acting apprenticeship with an amusing troupe called the New York Jets. His "Bofo" performance came against the Baltimore Colts in Super Bowl III. His only memorable soliloquy came before the game, when he predicted his underdogs would beat the mighty Colts.

"I guarantee it," said Joe Willie. "Socko!" said the critics.
He was outrageous and hip in a time when most jocks were flat-topped and low-profiled. He hung out in nightclubs... owned one, for awhile. He never did summerstock; he was Broadway Joe.
Somewhere along the way, Joe Willie Namath became a bona-fide "personality," which qualified him to go on talk shows and make biker movies with Ann-Margret (remember the drive-in special, "C.C. & Co.")
And being a personality, Joe Willie was assured of at least one chance at a TV series. So, he came to the Hollywood Rams, retired after one season, and hit the air with "The Waverly Wonders" at NBC.
The series made "C.C. and Co." look classic. It vanished, mercifully, after a few painful weeks.

Now, a year later, here comes Joe Willie again, this time in an NBC-TV comedy about marriage. You get the feeling that Namath didn't spend the intervening months in a dingy hotel room practicing "Hamlet."
"The acting is going well, I think," he says. "I'm going at it at a comfortable pace, and I think I'm growing."
"I know I could learn a lot more if I studied more, if I stayed up days and nights studying, but I'm also sure that would change my personality. And I don't want to do that. I'm very comfortable with the way things are."
Of the "Waverly Wonders" disaster, Namath says:
"Having gone through a whole lot of ups and downs in football, I was prepared for the show not to make it. So, when I was told that it was canceled, I didn't have that feeling of sickness in the pit of the stomach that you usually feel when you've been humiliated."

"I felt it later, but it was easier than other letdowns I've felt in my life. I wasn't totally satisfied with the job I did, but it was a great learning experience, a positive experience."
A positive experience, perhaps, but Namath says he isn't eager to try another series. "I wouldn't want to make that kind of commitment to anyone or anything right now."
Excommunication Request Granted
LAKEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — The Mormon Church has granted the request of a 27-year-old woman that she be excommunicated because of her objection to the church's stand against the Equal Rights Amendment.
Leanne Boyd said Tuesday a church official delivered her notice of excommunication to her home. She had said her request was a way of protesting the excommunication of Sonia Johnson of Sterling, Va. Mrs. Johnson says she was ousted for her support of the ERA, which the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints officially opposes. Church officials say she was ousted for teaching false doctrine.
The ERA would outlaw discrimination on the basis of sex.

He cheerfully performs his promotion duties for "Marriage is Alive and Well" (which airs Friday on NBC), but next week, Namath will be back home in Ft. Lauderdale, where, presumably, he won't be spending his days and nights studying the histrionic art.

LIBEL RULING
John Peter Zenger, a New York printer, was tried for libel in 1735 after publishing attacks on the governor of the colony in a weekly newspaper. Following the law of the day, the judge ordered the jury merely to establish if Zenger had printed the statements. But Andrew Hamilton, the defense attorney, urged the jury to also decide whether the statements were libelous. Zenger was acquitted.

LANGDON'S LAW: PRIVACY SHOULD NEVER BE SPELLED PRINA-SEE...

Four Alaskan Villages On Verge Of Running Out Of Heating Fuel

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Though Alaska exports 1 million barrels of oil a day, four remote native villages are on the verge of running out of heating oil and 30 other communities don't expect supplies to last through the bitterly cold winter, state officials say.

"I only got 15 gallons left," said Henry Evon, president of the Kwigillingok Village Council. He spoke from the only telephone in the remote community of 210 people on the icy Bering Sea nearly 500 miles west of Anchorage.

"I know of one family that's planning to move in with another if they can't purchase fuel," said James Atti, who works for the Village Council. "And I know of one family that's living with another family because their house is cold."

Facing rising petroleum and transportation costs that have brought fuel to $2 a gallon in remote areas, and lulled by two mild winters, many natives ordered less fuel when they made their annual purchases last spring.

But this winter wasn't another mild one. Fuel consumption climbed sharply as the temperature hung at 40 degrees below zero in northern areas for more than three weeks.

The cold season lasts six months in northern Alaska, and many rural Alaskans are now near running out of fuel for the small stoves they use to heat their modest, mostly wooden dwellings.

The Alaska Legislature, which convened this month amid debate over how to spend an estimated $3 billion that oil production will provide within the next year, has been asked to consider a $1.5 million emergency appropriation.

House and Senate finance committee members this week approved the appropriation and it is expected to win final legislative passage later this week.

The measure would lend village councils money to purchase fuel in bulk and subsidize the high cost of delivering it.

Evon said his community borrowed 5,000 gallons of fuel from the Bureau of Indian Affairs school as an emergency measure, but it is quickly running out even though it is being rationed.

Fuel is also running out in Kongiganek and Kasigouk, smaller villages in western Alaska, and Nulato, only 100 miles south of the Arctic Circle.

The Alaska Pipeline, bringing its unrefined crude from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez, passes about 300 miles east of Nulato, the closest of the four villages to the pipeline.

Villagers order their yearly fuel supply in the spring. It is shipped by barge to coastal communities for distribution by airplane to the roadless tundra towns.

An estimated 445,000 gallons of heating fuel is needed along with 155,000 gallons of gas, according to a survey by the Rural Alaska Community Action Program, an agency that serves rural communities.

Program director Philip J. Smith said the emergency appropriation is needed immediately to "avert considerable human suffering during this harsh winter."

Smith said the problem in rural Alaska is two-fold: There is a lack of supply to last the winter, and residents cannot afford to pay for heat and light, regardless of availability.

Stations Drop Series In Dispute Over Ads

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A Mobil Oil Corp. spokesman Wednesday said he was "shocked" that three television stations canceled a six-part TV series because they objected to Mobil commercials.

"That's censorship," said Herbert Schmetz, Mobil's vice president for public affairs. "That smacks of thought control."

WFSB-TV, a CBS affiliate owned by Post-Newsweek Stations, Inc., announced this week it had cancelled the scheduled broadcasts of the six-part series "Edward and Mrs. Simpson." It cited a company policy of its parent corporation prohibiting advertisements containing "advocacy of positions on matters of public importance or concern."

The Mobil advertisements, the station said, contained messages supporting deregulation of big business and opposing such measures as the "windfall-profits" tax.

Bell said Mobil's advertising firm contacted WVIT just after it learned of the WFSB decision. WVIT quickly picked up the series, which has received extensive critical acclaim, he said.

The series was produced for the Mobil Showcase Network by Thames Television and originally was aired in England, where the content of the series itself prompted controversy. It re-examines the 1936 decision of King Edward VIII to renounce the British crown and marry Wallis Simpson, an American divorcee.

Three Post-Newsweek stations — WFSB, WDIV in Detroit and WJXT in Jacksonville, originally planned to broadcast the series but have dropped it, WFSB spokeswoman Kay Greaser said.

"We've been working for a week to try to resolve the situations," she said. An effort was made to convince Mobil to use different commercials for the three Post-Newsweek stations.

She said one of Post-Newsweek's fears was that running the Mobil advertisements would require equal time for responses from organizations with opposing viewpoints.

WFSB Program Director David Uhrich first raised the issue of conflict with company policy after screening the commercials, Miss Greaser said. She said he contacted the other two Post-Newsweek stations.

WFSB previously had aired "Edward the King," another series sponsored by the Mobil Showcase Network.

Post-Newsweek stations in Detroit and Jacksonville, Fla., also cancelled the series, WFSB said. But a rival to WFSB, WVIT-Channel 30, with studios in West Hartford announced plans the same day to air the series.

"Not only do we see nothing wrong with it (the content of the commercials), 47 other stations have accepted them," Schmetz said in a telephone interview from New York City. "I cannot believe that a dialogue on the issues can have anything wrong with it. That's what the First Amendment is all about."

"It's curious to me that the Washington Post, which owns WFSB, has run the ads in print," he added. "It's acceptable to one subsidiary of Post-Newsweek but not another subsidiary."

WFSB made the decision to drop the series late Tuesday afternoon, slightly more than 24 hours before the first episode was to have been aired. WVIT aired the episode Wednesday.

"We do not have a policy as strong or as stringent," said Jeff Bell, spokesman for WVIT, an NBC affiliate owned by Viacom Broadcasting Inc.

Robbins' Ballet Premieres In New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — Choreographer Jerome Robbins has taken the men's dances from his ballet "The Dybbuk Variations" and made a three-scene, 15-minute work of them.

The result, called "Suite of Dances," had its premiere recently by the New York City Ballet.

It is obvious, although "Suite of Dances" is plotless, that the 10 men dancing are involved in a ritual, usually tense, probably Jewish, which involves bowing down and looking up to God.

This is a worthy dance, not a stunner, however, and applause was respectful and moderate. It is a good dance for shaping a contrasting program. Its premiere came between the swirling gray net over purple skirts of the women in George Balanchine's "La Valse" and his fleet pas de deux "Valse — Fantaisie." The evening ended with Robbins' funny "The Concert."

PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSION — A special camera angle makes visitors to the Mount Rushmore National Memorial appear to be the same size as the gigantic sculpture. Open throughout the year, Mount Rushmore, 23 miles southwest of Rapid City, S.D., has no admission or parking fees.

Mount Rushmore Presents Awesome Sight

MOUNT RUSHMORE, S.D. (Special) — When sculptor Gutzon Borglum announced plans some 50 years ago to carve a massive monument from a mountain high in the Black Hills of South Dakota, some South Dakotans didn't take too kindly to the notion.

However, to critics' surprise, Borglum's ambitious tribute to four American presidents became one of the nation's most beloved National Memorials.

The Mount Rushmore National Memorial, located 23 miles southwest of Rapid City, S.D., is awesome and impressive. The granite faces of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt, and Abraham Lincoln tower 6,000 feet above sea level and are scaled to men who would stand 465 feet tall. Their faces appear mobile and fluid as they catch both the morning and afternoon sun, as Borglum so brilliantly planned.

Yet the story of Mount Rushmore's creation is almost as dramatic and inspiring as the sculpture itself. Borglum and his supporters fought long and hard for Mount Rushmore's existence.

Today visitors to Mount Rushmore can learn all this and more. Personnel at the Memorial, recognizing the significance of the mountain's story, have created an excellent interpretive program that effectively outlines the history, original designs, and artistic merits of Borglum's carving.

At the Visitor's Center, for example, a dramatic closed-circuit television presentation runs continuously from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. The 12-minute program includes a biography of the four presidents' lives, a history of their presidential administrations, and a discussion of their significance to Borglum. Outside on the primary viewing terrace, Rushmore personnel mingle with tourists and answer questions ranging from "How much did Mount Rushmore cost?" ($989,992.32) to "How long did Borglum work on the Memorial?" (14 years — from 1927 until his death in 1941).

The Sculptor's Studio, constructed in 1939, displays Borglum's original models of the four presidents, scaled on a one to 12 ratio (one model inch equals 12 feet on the mountain). Visitors also will find winches, jackhammers, and pneumatic drills dating from construction days at the Memorial. Rushmore personnel give visitors impromptu presentations from 9 a.m. until 8 p.m. daily, and outline such topics as the original location of the Jefferson face, and the movement to place Susan B. Anthony on Mount Rushmore.

But the most spectacular program at Mount Rushmore is the evening lighting ceremony, held during the summer months. A Mount Rushmore ranger first outlines important events in the Memorial's colorful history and introduces a 20-minute movie on Borglum and his mountain. Then, with strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the background, visitors watch as huge spotlights dramatically reveal the four presidential faces, vivid against a dark Black Hills sky. Mount Rushmore remains lighted until 10:15 p.m.

COSTLY COLOR

In ancient Rome emperor Nero claimed that only he could wear a purple fabric colored with extracts from murex shellfish. Seafaring Phoenician merchants made the regal dye and grew rich selling purple wool for the equivalent of $150 a pound.

is open all year and there are no parking or admission fees. The Visitors Center is open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. during fall and winter months, and from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m. from late spring through the
