Bush Claims GOP's Front-Runner Spot

Reagan Scoffs At Iowa Straw Vote

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — George Bush, a face in the Republican crowd no longer, said Tuesday that a keynote victory over Ronald Reagan gave him momentum that will set the rest of the GOP presidential pack "howling and yowling at his heels."

While Reagan, suddenly vulnerable, scoffed at Iowa's ranking of the Republican presidential field as a straw vote that doesn't necessarily reflect GOP opinion, Bush turned his campaigning to New Hampshire and said he will do even better there.

He held a 5,644-vote lead over Reagan with 22 percent of the precincts yet to be counted. Iowa Republicans, plagued by computer problems, said they would tally the rest of the ballots by hand, but didn't know when the count would be complete.

"Glad It Wasn't Primary" Reagan said in Los Angeles. "If I had to lose one, I'm glad it was a straw vote and not a primary." The former California governor said he will still in New Hampshire.

He also charged that if Iowa had a primary election instead of voting in precinct caucuses, "I would win it." The upset trend was with Bush all over Iowa Monday night, in balloting at neighborhood political meetings that were the first test of the 1980 presidential field.

Carter Buries Kennedy President Carter buried Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in a landslide at Democratic precinct caucuses and the senator from Massachusetts said the next two contests, in his native New England, are must-win situations for his campaign.

"It's a long road," Kennedy said in Washington. "It's a 15-inning fight, and maybe it's the first round."

But he acknowledged that he cannot afford to lose the second round, at caucuses in Maine on Feb. 10, and the presidential primary election in New Hampshire on Feb. 26.

Does he have to win them? "Yes," Kennedy replied.

Making No Predictions White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said in Des Moines that he would not speculate about Kennedy's campaign future should he lose in New England.

Asked whether Kennedy would have to quit the campaign if he didn't win Maine and New Hampshire, Powell replied:

"I think it would be presumptuous of me to be making judgments like that right now."

Powell also said it will be tough for Carter to win in Kennedy's back yard, but just as tough for Kennedy in the Deep South.

After primaries in Massachusetts and Vermont on March 4, the competition moves to Florida, Georgia and Alabama on March 11. Powell said the Carter target is to do better in New England than Kennedy does in the South.

The margin of Carter's victory, 59 percent to Kennedy's 31, was one Iowa surprise. The Bush upset was another: "I didn't know I was going to win," he said. A third was the massive turnout of Iowa voters to register their preferences at caucuses in each of the state's 2,531 precincts.

Republicans said more than 100,000 people came to their meetings, nearly five times as many as in the last presidential campaign. The Democratic cau-

Sanctions Postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and its Western European allies have decided to postpone temporarily the imposition of additional economic sanctions against Iran, officials said Tuesday.

But the officials, who asked that they not be identified, insisted that the United States still wants to increase economic pressure on the Tehran government in an effort to win the release of American hostages held in Iran.

The officials predicted that the United States and European countries will take further steps to apply pressure to Iran in the near future.

But the United States now plans to wait until the Iranian presidential election on Friday before announcing its next steps, officials said.

Western European countries want to wait at least until the summit meeting of Islamic nations in Pakistan next week, the officials added.

Exactly what steps will be taken has not yet been decided.

Weatherman Says Snow Difficult To Predict

By TRAVIS BROWN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ALTHOUGH some of the effects of Tuesday's unexpected snow storm may still linger today, the weather service is predicting no more white surprises through Saturday.

But South Plains residents probably should be somewhat wary of any forecast that doesn't call for snow, if they can tell anything about the future by looking at the past.

This winter in Lubbock, snow has fallen twice in measurable amounts. Both of these snowfalls were unpredicted.

When 10 inches of the frosty white stuff fell in Lubbock on Dec. 13, the day's forecast called for only a slight chance of rain.

Predicted Snow Falter
The one time that the weather service did predict snow for Lubbock — in late December — it didn't happen.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service in Lubbock explained why his office has been so unsuccessful recently in predicting snow.

"It's very difficult to predict exactly where and when snow will fall," the meteorologist said. "Only a few degrees difference in temperature on the earth's surface or at a higher elevation can mean the difference in whether or not it snows."

He added that snow can fall during a wide range of temperature readings, from minus 25 to 40 degrees.

"Although any snow that falls while it is 40 degrees won't be around very long," he said, snow can fall at temperatures above freezing when it falls from a colder high altitude and hits the ground before melting.

However, Tuesday's missed prediction was not the result of minor temperature differences, the weather expert said.

Tricky Air Flows
"We simply had not fully assessed the potential of the upper level air disturbance moving to the northeast out of southwest Texas," he explained.

Although much of the 4 to 6 inches of snow that fell in Lubbock Tuesday was melted by a late afternoon sun, enough will remain today to make city streets and area highways dangerous for motorists.

A traveler's advisory cautioning motorists to drive carefully on icy streets this morning has been issued by the National Weather Service.

City and state road crews will be working to clear roads that could be hazardous. But Mel Pope, district maintenance engineer with the Texas Highway Department noted, "All major roads in the area will be passable Tuesday morning, but many still will be hazardous because of freezing temperatures."

The forecast for today calls for partly cloudy skies through Thursday. The high should be in the upper 40s and the low tonight near 20. Winds will be from the northeast at 5 to 10 mph.

Phillips Blast To Cut Fuel Supplies Here

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE EXPLOSION near Borger that shut down Phillips Petroleum Company's second-largest refinery will mean a temporary reduction in gasoline supplies at local Phillips stations and Lubbock's private airports may be without aviation fuel by next week.

Company officials announced Tuesday that the shutdown of the refinery will cause a temporary reduction in fuel allocations and a halt in aviation fuel deliveries to distributors in 33 states.

As cleanup crews hauled smoldering debris from the site of the Sunday explosion, distributors were notified that beginning Feb. 1 they would receive as little as 50 percent of the motor and turbine fuel they were allocated two years ago and there would be no deliveries of aviation fuel.

Phillips officials did not know when the Panhandle refinery, which processes an average of 97,000 barrels of crude oil daily, will be back in operation, but a spokesman said he expected the reduced allocation plan to be in effect from 30 to 45 days.

Because Department of Energy regulations specify that distributors must supply 100 percent of allocation to what have been termed "first priority" users — including agriculture, mail and cargo — farmers probably will not be affected by the reduction. But Phillips retailers and private airplane enthusiasts requiring high-octane aviation fuel may face "critical" shortages.

Although the major airlines serving the South Plains area will not experience See PHILLIPS Page 14

Pakistanis Want Aid In Billions

By The Associated Press
PAKISTAN, unable to obtain from China the kind of massive assistance it wants, called Tuesday for "durable, credible" aid from the United States to build up its armed forces in the face of the Soviet move into neighboring Afghanistan.

Official sources in Islamabad, the Pakistani capital, said the government of President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq needs several billion dollars in aid to modernize its defenses. Gen. Zia last week dismissed as "peanuts" President Carter's offer of $200 million in military aid and $200 million in economic aid.

The Carter aid package was withdrawn from congressional consideration and U.S. and Pakistani officials continue negotiations.

Troops Being Airlifted

There were no new reports on the war in Afghanistan, where fresh Soviet combat troops were reported being airlifted in to bolster the Soviet force, estimated at 80,000 men, that has been helping Afghan government troops put down a rebellion by anti-communist Moslem tribesmen.

While most of the fighting has been reported in northwestern Afghanistan, China's official Xinhua news agency said Tuesday that Soviet units also are strengthening their grip in the southeast.

It said Soviet tanks and other armored vehicles moved out of Kandahar to within 35 miles of the Pakistani frontier and were establishing control units at Shoravak, about 150 miles east of the border with Iran and 150 miles northwest of the Pakistani border.

Government Troops Replaced
Xinhua said Afghan government troops at outposts near the Pakistani frontier southeast of Kandahar were being replaced by Soviet soldiers.

In another development, a former commander of the presidential palace in Kabul, the Afghan capital, said in a Kabul Radio broadcast that Afghan revolutionary leader Nur Mohammed Taraki See PAKISTAN Page 14

Testimony Continues In Shotgun Slaying

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PLAINVIEW — Castro County Sheriff Granville Martin testified Tuesday that Loy Stone admitted firing a shotgun to frighten some teen-agers Halloween night 1977, but that none of six law officers involved in a subsequent investigation that night ever advised Stone of his constitutional rights or told him a girl had been killed.

Stone, 50, and his wife, Louise, 49, both self-professed witches, are accused of the murder of 15-year-old Roxanne Casas, then a sophomore at Dimmitt High School who died that night after being struck in the head by a shotgun blast while she was riding in a pickup near the Stones rural Castro County residence.

The only witness to testify before the jury Tuesday, Martin said he drove into the Stones driveway in response to a shooting call, and encountered Stone, who was wearing dark clothes and carrying a shotgun.

"I asked him what was going on, and he said he had fired once straight up to scare off some kids," Martin said of his meeting with Stone that night. "Louise came up real excited, and she was pointing at two cars and a pickup back on the road, and said they were the ones causing all the trouble."

In a special hearing without the jury Tuesday morning, two of Martin's deputies and a Department of Public Safety Trooper testified that a half-dozen law enforcement officers — all the officers in the county except the city police — "sat, drank coffee and enjoyed conversation with the Stones" for more than an hour after the shooting. Martin said he had confiscated Stone's shotgun and three unused shells and returned to Dimmitt with them, leaving the deputies and other officers at the Stone's residence.

Cross-Examination
"Neither you or Mr. Gummels (DPS trooper Jackie Gummels) or any other law enforcement officer of Castro County ever told Stone about the Miranda warning or any other warning, did you?" defense attorney Travis Shelton asked Martin during intensive cross-examination.

"No, sir," Martin said. "I did later."

"But you didn't the first or second time you talked to Stone that night, did you?" See STONE TRIAL Page 14

Clovis City Funds Snarl Investigated

A-J Correspondent

CLOVIS — An indication of possible misuse of city funds for which the city is being investigated by state auditors surfaced in October 1979, when discrepancies on monthly sewer bills were brought before the city commission.

The matter apparently was dropped after commissioners received assurances from a former city employee that the discrepancies were due to problems with the city's computer which had been ironed out.

Background Cited

City records now are being investigated for possible misappropriation or misuse of public funds by representatives of the New Mexico state auditor's office and the Ninth Judicial district attorney.

Mayor Charles "Chick" Taylor Jr. has said the city's financial problems seem to have started during the 18 months that the former city employee was in office.

The employee was fired in October for conduct unbecoming a city official after he reportedly provided bond money for three employees of Clovis's only massage parlor after police raided the establishment Oct. 9.

Irregularities Noted

Prior to the employee's firing, commissioners discussed several discrepancies on some monthly sewer bills at an October meeting. Commissioners were told that one person was billed several See STATE PROBING Page 14

Body Donor Riled By Dun For Fees

LAKESIDE, Ohio (AP) — Mary Ellen Wolfe offered her arthritic body to science, but officials of a medical school said that wasn't enough. They also wanted $80, plus shipping.

"I was furious," Miss Wolfe said. "I thought, 'Gee, I ought to be a good one to study.'"

The 62-year-old woman's fingers are bent and misshapen, she has trouble walking and her voice has been affected by rheumatoid arthritis.

She had decided to offer her body upon death to the Medical College of Ohio in Toledo, because her medical records are in Toledo. She had worked as a reporter for the Toledo Blade until her voice was affected.

Miss Wolfe retired in 1974 and now lives with her sister.

MARY ELLEN WOLFE
No Longer A Donor

Jim Richard, a spokesman for the college, said charging a donor fee had been the policy of the school since it opened in 1969. He said the school, which serves about 450 students, had no shortage of cadavers.

The response that angered Miss Wolfe came from Liberto J.A. DiDio, professor and chairman of the college's Department of Anatomy.

He wrote that the school was grateful for her interest in the body donation program and enclosed an authorization form in triplicate.

He added: "Though the donation of one's body to medical education is an act of selfless concern for the advancement of science, budgetary stringencies oblige the college to request a modest $60 fee of each donor... Please enclose a check or money order with the completed forms, payable to the Department of Anatomy — Medical College of Ohio, in this amount.

"Donors should, further, make provision for transportation to the Medical College of Ohio."

The letter contained a self-addressed envelope with no stamp.

Such payments from donors are not required at all colleges. Case Western Reserve and Ohio State universities both said they require no fee and provide for transportation of the body.

Nevertheless, the experience has caused Miss Wolfe to rethink her plans.

"When I go, I'm going six feet under," she said.

Ordinance Would Ban Cars From Park Grass

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Parks and Recreation Board members have endorsed a new ordinance that would replace an old city law containing a loophole big enough to drive a car through.

Responding to a recommendation made last September, the board approved a new ordinance which would prohibit driving or parking cars on city-owned "grassed and landscaped areas and areas served by underground irrigation sprinklers."

If passed by the city council, the ordinance will replace one specifying bicycles, motorcycles and motorscooters but saying nothing about four-wheeled vehicles.

The new ordinance also would allow illegally parked vehicles to be towed away and tack on a $200 per day fine for violators.

The problem was pointed out last year when visitors to an apartment complex near Leftwich Park were driving across the park and leaving their cars on it when they visited residents.

"When we asked the police department to ticket and tow the cars, they told us the ordinance wouldn't allow it," city parks director John Alford recalled.

In other business, city golf professional Jay McClure told the board the newest nine holes at Meadowbrook Golf Course will open Feb. 2 after two years of construction.

The expansion will raise to 36 the number of holes available at Meadowbrook. McClure also said he soon will close the original nine holes for much-needed renovation.

"It's awfully hard to grow grass while people are standing on it," he said.

The board also okayed a subcommittee recommendation that the city not hire an architect to remodel what now is the Goedeke Branch Library. The building will be used as a senior citizens center when the library moves into new quarters late this year.

Jurors Commence Hearing Testimony In Murder Trial

Jurors will be seated this morning to hear evidence in Maurice Eugene Dancy's murder trial.

Tuesday afternoon, 99th District Court Judge Thomas L. Clinton denied the change of venue being sought by Dancy's attorneys Tom Cannon and Mary Anne Wiley.

Defense counsel had argued that the amount of publicity given the slaying of Texas Tech University graduate student Claude Ventry Bridges and Dancy's subsequent arrest for the alleged murder would prevent the empaneling of 12 objective Lubbock County jurors.

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford and his first assistant, Jim Bob Darnell, had opposed the venue change. The prosecutors concluded their presentation of testimony in the venue hearing Tuesday morning.

However, because defense attorneys were waiting for additional evidence from a local television station, Clinton delayed ruling on the motion until Tuesday afternoon.

During the wait, the judge heard a second defense motion to suppress evidence gathered at Dancy's 2822 24th St. residence the night of his arrest Aug. 22, a day after Bridges' body was found.

Cannon and Miss Wiley had argued that the search warrant used to gather the evidence was faulty.

Clinton also denied the defense's suppression of evidence motion.

Postal Service Land Deal Approved

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff
An agreement to sell two parcels of property in the downtown Memorial Center Addition to the U.S. Post Office was approved Tuesday by members of the Urban Renewal Agency's board of commissioners.

Commission members voted unanimously to sell property the agency owns at the southeast corner of Avenue L and Fourth Street for $39,125, and a smaller parcel of land just south of that property for $77,010.

The agreement, however, must also be approved Thursday by the City Council, said Urban Renewal Agency assistant director Robert Stack.

The agreement, which probably won't be finalized for "at least 30 days," he said, will depend on whether the postal service is able to meet building requirements for construction of a new main office.

The Postal Service is negotiating to buy a two-block tract of land on that corner, including the Urban Renewal property and land where a garage and tamale factory now are located.

Postal officials have been searching about a year for a site for a facility to house retail operations currently being handled at the Post Office at 1515 Avenue G. Administrative offices and mail handling operations will remain at the Avenue G office.

All land sale agreements also are pending a decision by the City Council to close two streets and an alley within the tract of land, while retaining utility easements.

The council already has approved on first reading closing Avenue K between Fourth and Sixth Streets, and Fifth Street between Avenues K and L.

The land owned by the Urban Renewal Agency was purchased after the May 1970 tornado as part of the Memorial Center Addition, which is bounded roughly by Fourth Street, Avenue Q, 10th Street and Avenue K.

The two parcels of land the post office wants to purchase are among six other pieces of property Urban Renewal still owns since the 1970 purchase. Two others, however, also are tentatively under contract for development.

The two pieces of property tentatively being sold to the U.S. Postal Service had been considered practically unmarketable because of their sizes and shapes.

Defective Fireplace Blamed In Fire

A Monday night fire caused extensive damage to a 32nd Street residence and kept 20 Lubbock firefighters busy for about 20 minutes.

Damage to the home of Lance Horne, 2006-B 32nd St., was estimated at more than $1,000. The fire broke out shortly before 10 p.m., according to a Lubbock

Fire Department spokesman. No injuries were reported.

Plan Of Allocating Federal Criminal Justice Funds Offered

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche Journal Staff

The city of Lubbock could be the winner, with Lubbock County the big loser, under a new plan of allocating federal criminal justice funds.

In previous years, cities and counties in the 15-county South Plains Association of Governments competed for funds earmarked for the region based on population, crime rate and criminal justice expenditures.

However, federal legislation signed into law Dec. 27 would permit cities and counties with populations of more than 100,000 to apply directly for funding to the federal government.

The city of Lubbock could receive about $80,000 next year under the allocation plan, but funds for the remaining cities and counties in SPAG could be cut by two-thirds.

The Lubbock City Council will have to decide by March 1 whether to become an entitlement jurisdiction to seek the funds directly from the federal government, but past difficulties in getting any criminal justice funds should strongly influence the council's verdict.

This year, the Criminal Justice Advisory Committee and the SPAG board of directors recommended no city of Lubbock projects be funded.

During eight prior years, SPAG received $4.9 million in criminal justice funds for distribution among member governments. However, only about 9 percent of that amount has been allocated to the city of Lubbock.

City officials questioned the inequities last year, noting 67 percent of the monies came to the SPAG region because of Lubbock's population and crime rate.

If the city becomes an entitlement jurisdiction, it "won't have to go through the hassles of trying to compete" for the funds, said Riek Childers, administrative assistant to the city manager.

Already there is discussion of what the city will do with the additional money, if the council decides to apply for it directly, he said.

The top project would be continuation of a crime prevention program funded from unbudgeted criminal justice funds this year, Childers said.

Additionally, he said, the funds would be used to "try to address problems in the criminal justice system," like a lack of minorities on the police force, strained relations between the police department and the minority community and computerizing police records.

A disadvantage to the city seeking funds directly from the federal government, Childers said, is the required assurances which would have to be given that programs begun with the criminal justice funds will be continued.

However, he said, "This could be the opportunity to do things we've wanted to do."

While no city of Lubbock projects received funding through SPAG last year, Lubbock County walked away with the bulk of the nearly $390,000 allocation.

Of the $235,000 earmarked for county projects, $150,000 was approved for first-year operation of the county's juvenile detention center.

Lloyd Watts, chief of Lubbock County's juvenile probation office, said he planned to seek even more funding for the second year of the center's operation, but doesn't expect disaster if criminal justice funds aren't available.

The center, scheduled to open in September, will be used by all 15 South Plains counties.

Watts said he has prepared applications totaling $175,000 for second-year operations of the center and an application for $50,000 for fifth-year operation of Project Intercept.

"I think the center has the backing and we're going to go," he said. "The question is, how?"

"This is not going to stop us," he said. However, Watts said, he is investigating three possible funding sources "just in case" the criminal justice funds are not available.

The Lubbock County district attorney's office also received funding this year which may not be continued. Four additional investigators were hired with $56,000 in criminal justice funds.

Jim Hart, SPAG criminal justice coordinator, said the association "probably is going to take a fairly large cut in funds," if the city opts to become an entitlement jurisdiction.

The amount the region will receive, he said, depends on the number of cities and counties that decide to seek funds directly from the federal government.

"The bottom line, if everyone goes entitlement, would leave SPAG in the neighborhood of $100,000," he said. But, he emphasized, that is the "very bottom line."

The maximum the region would receive, if Lubbock does not become an entitlement jurisdiction, is nearly $300,000, Hart said.

Because funds for entitlement jurisdictions will be allocated on a different formula than for the rest of the state, Hart said SPAG's loss is not necessarily the city's gain.

"Just because we get less, doesn't mean they get more," he said.

If SPAG receives only $100,000 next year, the association's regional law enforcement training program could eat up half that allocation. The program was funded at more than $50,000 this year.

But SPAG, city and county officials emphasized they will know more where they stand in regard to the new legislation following a Jan. 30 meeting in Austin organized by the state criminal justice division.

Mayor's Husband Begins Job

CHICAGO (AP) — Jay McMullen promised to "bloody some noses" when he became press secretary for his wife, Mayor Jane Byrne.

The former real estate reporter for the Chicago Sun-Times, started swinging Monday when he made his first appearance as press secretary.

Mrs. Byrne, urged on by McMullen who passed notes to her during an exchange at a City Hall news conference, criticized radio and television for what she called "erroneous" reports about the school financial crisis.

When a reporter asked Mrs. Byrne if she was happy with a press release McMullen had written as his first official act, McMullen interjected:

"I wrote it lying right next to her. If she didn't like it, she could have changed it."

Mrs. Byrne's reaction was to smile and roll her eyes up.

Personal Touch Questioned

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Some national magazines are using personalized subscription offers to make you think the appeal is direct instead of computerized.

But authenticity of the personal touch can be questioned if there's a mix-up.

Pennsylvania Welfare Secretary Helen O'Bannon, for example, recently intercepted an offer from Newsweek that was addressed to Department O. Welfare instead of the impersonal "occupant."

And the letter from the publisher, inviting the agency to enjoy a 26-week subscription at just 62½ cents per copy, began:

"Dear Department Welfare:

"I've got a bet for you, Department Welfare, and I'm backing it with the unusual special offer that you'll find enclosed with this letter."

The offer went on to cite helpful information that Newsweek provides to its readers, asking Department O. Welfare: "Could any of the Welfares be endangering their health with fad diets?"

Sinatra Arrives In Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — After decades of unfulfilled promises by local show business promoters, Frank Sinatra has finally come to Brazil.

The singer, who arrived Monday, will stay for a week, performing before millionaires in an exclusive Rio beachfront hotel night club and then for ordinary fans in Maracana Stadium, the world's largest soccer field, with a seating capacity of 200,000.

Sinatra is staying at a $550-a-day hotel suite overlooking Copacabana Beach.

The press here has been writing about Sinatra for weeks. TV stations have been running all his old movies as well as tapes of his concert performances in the United States. Radio stations have been playing Sinatra records for hours on end.

Researchers Claim Loud Snoring May Signal Disorders

DENVER (UPI)—Persons who snore loudly may be prone to a dangerous disorder that could lead to mental depression, intellectual deterioration and impotence, researchers warned Tuesday.

Dr. David W. Hudge of the sleep laboratory at National Jewish Hospital in Denver said his research showed loud snoring could indicate a person was suffering from "sleep apnea."

The sleeping disorder, said Hudge and Dr. David Shucard, can lead to mental depression, intellectual deterioration, high blood pressure, impotence, overpowering daytime drowsiness, insomnia, irregular heartbeats and unexplained behavioral changes.

"Typically, victims of sleep apnea are overweight, older men whose wives complain about their loud snoring," Shucard said. "Patients and physicians often fail to recognize the importance of loud snoring as symptoms of a serious sleep disorder."

Shucard said brief apnea was common when persons go to sleep initially and during dreams. "But severe apnea, with breathing lapses up to a minute long, can interrupt restful sleep with potentially catastrophic consequences," he said.

The two estimate as many as 100,000 Americans, 95 percent of them men, suffered from severe sleep apnea.

Hudge said additional research is necessary to determine why men are more susceptible to apnea than women.

"Testosterone, the primary male hormone, may be a respiratory depressant since progesterone, a female hormone, is known to be a respiratory stimulant," he said.

He said research indicated apnea can cause oxygen levels in the blood to fall to very low levels, even as low as those of mountain climbers at altitudes of 20,000 feet.

This decline in blood oxygen can cause the heart to beat irregularly and lead to high blood pressure, Hudge said.

The lack of sleep can cause mental depression and other behavioral changes, they said.

Captain Kidd received his English commission as a privateer in 1685.

Chrysler Receives Cards

DETROIT (AP) — Like many other invalids, Chrysler Corp. receives "get well" letters.

"The problem with people is they're just too panicky," wrote Rusty, a 10-year-old from Missouri. "But I have faith in Chrysler and I plan to buy a Chrysler in the near future."

A student in Highland Park, the suburb where the financially ailing auto company has its headquarters, wrote: "I pray that you will not close. My father works at Ford."

Among the hundreds of letters reaching Chairman Lee A. Iacocca were offers of prayer, from a group of Carmelite nuns and a "Christian Public Relations Man" in Los Angeles; a complicated inventory-reduction scheme, judged unworkable, from a 14-year-old car buff in Boonton, N.J.; contributions and offers of testimonials.

A 91-year-old retired man in Indianapolis who last drove a Chrysler product in 1948 sent $1 as a "friendly gift."

A 10-year-old boy did the same, with a note saying: "I hope you stay in business. I love your cars. My grandmother is looking for a car made by Chrysler."

The contributions are returned — including one in the form of a check for $100,000 from the head of a trucking company, not identified by Iacocca, who said he had made "a fortune" hauling Chrysler products.

Minister Warns Of Armageddon

NEW YORK (AP) — In the face of the upheavals in Southeast Asia and the new strains between the superpowers, Evangelist Billy Graham says, "we're standing right on the edge of Armageddon."

"It's going to take a lot of prayer, diplomacy and restraint to get us through this thing," he said. "We live in a very, very critical world situation."

Graham made his comments in a telephone interview from his home at Montreat, N.C. He departs this week for 19 days of lectures and discussions in England's Oxford and Cambridge universities.

Good Ol' Boys Rob Cabbie

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A cab driver says some good ol' boys robbed him at knifepoint, but not before they held him on Distillery Road for an hour and shared their bottle of whisky with him.

Cabbie Rick Jones said he picked up two men who called themselves "Bo" and "Mike" outside a Nashville nightclub early Sunday morning.

"I didn't know how to get there, so I went by their directions," the 19-year-old cabbie said. "They were real nice, friendly, just good ol' country boys on the way up there."

"But I had a feeling something was wrong when we kept driving on those darks country roads. I knew I was in a robbery before it happened."

Jones said he stopped on Distillery Road about four miles from White House for Bo to go to the bathroom. Then Mike pulled a knife on him.

"They said, 'We're going to sit here for a while and drink some whiskey.' They had a bottle with them and whenever they passed it to me, I took a drink."

"I think they probably just meant not to pay their fare, but the liquor got to them," Jones said.

"YOU MUST HAVE USED TRICK LENSES AND MIKES TO KEEP THE AMERICAN PEOPLE FROM KNOWING HOW NICE WE ARE"

GEORGE WILL:

Loathe Thy Neighbor

WASHINGTON—Suddenly, it is 1947. Jimmy Carter is planning a doctrine similar to (or so 'tis said) the Truman Doctrine. When Truman saw that Britain could not resist the communist challenge to Turkey and Greece, he declared that the United States would "help free peoples maintain their national integrity against totalitarianism."

Also, Truman was fortunate to have men like Dean Acheson to implement containment. In 1980, along Russia's southern border, there are no similar lines, lines between Russian forces and cohesive nations with which the United States has bonds of shared culture.

AN EDITORIAL: Lesson From Lincoln On Iran

IT IS THEIR own tough luck that Iran's revolutionary authorities aren't better students of American history. If so, they might have been forewarned by Abraham Lincoln who delivered a trenchant observation on fooling people.

THE EXPULSION of correspondents (not only Americans but any affiliated with American news organizations) comes a bit late for Iranian purposes, however. The story already is out, and there is nothing that even total silence can do now to change the negative image the revolution has acquired abroad.

AN EDITORIAL: The Voice Of Dissent Is Stilled

ALTHOUGH HE sometimes carried his Magnificent Obsession to extremes, former Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas correctly perceived his job as one of "keeping the government off the backs of the people." Douglas, who died over the weekend at age 81, was obsessed with the idea that "the purpose of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, unlike more recent models promoting a welfare state, was to take the government off the backs of the people."

FIRST APPOINTED by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1939, Douglas served longer than any other justice before retiring after a stroke in 1975. He so angered many conservatives of both parties over the years that cries for his impeachment often were raised, to no avail.

M. STANTON EVANS: Olympic Boycott Would Injure Soviet Prestige

WASHINGTON—The suggestion that the 1980 Moscow Olympic games be transferred to another site or boycotted by the Western nations is a good one, and shouldn't be deterred by spurious pleas that such a move would "politicize" the world of sport.

REFUSING TO confer such legitimacy on the Soviets in wake of the Afghanistan aggression would seem to be minimal sort of retaliation on our part—necessary, if not sufficient. Equally to the point, the act of removing the Olympics from the USSR, or boycotting the games in the alternative, would be a significant way of communicating to the world that the Soviet Union is viewed by us for what it is—a global pariah.

PREDICTABLY, THE Kremlin takes a similar "non-political" view of the matter. A Soviet Olympic spokesman says: "The Olympics and a boycott are incompatible. Any such boycott and the Olympics would cease to exist. The Olympic charter excludes such discrimination, or any connection between the games and political purposes."

ANDREW TULLY: Life On The Hill

WASHINGTON—Every time I pass the elegant British Embassy I am reminded of a remark by the late Winston Churchill during one of his many post-war visits here: "It is quite possible to be comfortable in this city," said Churchill. "Thornton's ghost must be most envious of my accommodations."

WHEN MARSHALL complained, Pichon solved the problem by having his valet play the flute whenever he was giving Madame Pichon her companions.

BUT HE admitted that even the "masses" spoke better English than many people in his native land. He admitted he heard nothing as bad as the Suffolk whine or the guttural of Newcastle.

Thornton and other diplomats and government officials performed their morning ablutions at the pumps stationed in every backyard.

L.M. BOYD: Pass It On:

Q. WHO WAS the first person ever to order the purchase of an automobile? A. Czar Alexander II of Russia. In 1864, a Belgian named Etienne Lenoir built a one-and-a-half horsepower vehicle in which he toiled around Paris at four miles per hour. Word spread.

Color tests in primate centers indicate that monkeys are particularly fond of blue, but those tests don't explain why. Why?

JAY HARRIS: More Of Same...

AS THE MAIN event of the Presidential campaign got underway this week, in some ways it all seemed like something we had heard and seen before. Especially is this so as regards President Carter and his dealing with the Soviet Union.

THE PRESIDENT came up with some of his classic "double talk" in his Sunday session. While making a good case for peaceful solution of the American hostage deadlock and calling for a "boycott" of the Olympic Games in Moscow, Mr. Carter also gave a case history of why the U.S. is having to worry about such things at this point.

THE PRESIDENT then cited bolstering of NATO, the moves into the Indian Ocean, the search for peace in the Mideast "and so forth..." The point here is that Mr. Carter ignored the question and then used an ambiguous and not entirely objective answer to explain. The moves he cited were reactions after the fact. If his "long-range" view of Moscow was so perceptive, how did he think they were going to achieve it?

MR. CARTER'S response was that: "Well, the Soviets have seriously misjudged our own nation's strength, resolve and unity, and determination and the condemnation that has accrued to them by the world community because of their invasion of Afghanistan."

SO, ONE WOULD think that Mr. Carter has learned his lesson. Well, read on. In his State of the Union message, the President told the nation that the United States has "no basic quarrel" with Iran where American hostages have been held for more than 2 1/2 months.

THE IRANIANS will be glad to get that bit of news. They also will be glad to know that Mr. Carter all but said there would be no retribution for Khomeini's thugs' act of war, not to mention the fact the President, who a few days ago said that there was no viable government in the country, now offers to deal with one which doesn't exist.

IF that sounds like a litany of past mistakes, then you are reading it correctly. We haven't built our strength, we haven't punished aggressors, human rights, Carter style, is a shambles and SALT II is a farce. Any questions?

Dispute With Air Controllers Suggested As Iran Crash Cause

By United Press International
A bitter dispute between air traffic controllers and the Islamic regime may have contributed to the crash of an Iran Air jetliner that killed 128 people, radio and press reports from Tehran said Tuesday.

But Tehran radio was silent on President Carter's dramatic offer to work with Iran in countering the Soviet threat in Afghanistan.

In his annual State of the Union message to Congress Monday, Carter said the United States has "no basic quarrel with Iran" once the 50 American hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for 79 days are freed.

"We are prepared to work with the government of Iran to develop a new and mutually beneficial relationship" after the hostages are released, Carter said.

But there was no response from Iran to the president's statements. In the mountains north of Tehran, rescuers wading through two feet of snow recovered the bodies of all but eight of the 128 people aboard the Iran Air Boeing 727 that crashed Monday night.

The remaining victims of Iran Air's first fatal crash were believed buried under drifts.

Iran Air said only two foreigners, described as Soviet technicians, were aboard the ill-fated craft.

An Iran Air spokesman said the South African-born captain of the jetliner, Edwards Bennets, reported blinding snowstorms obscured his view of Tehran as he attempted to land, the reports from Tehran said.

"I can see the lights of the city," Bennets said. The radio then went dead. But there were indications weather may not have been the only factor in the crash. Several reports pointed to the dispute between the Islamic regime and air traffic controllers at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport.

The controllers had conducted a work slowdown for several days before the crash, but Iran's official Pars news agency said the job action ended 12 hours before the crash.

But the Italian news agency ANSA, in a dispatch from Tehran, reported Iran Air suspended 11 flights Tuesday because of the strike and said some employees were conducting a sit-in on one of the main runways of the airport. ANSA also said witnesses reported hearing the plane circle the airport for a long time before it crashed on the slopes of 7,884-foot Mount Brachin in what once was a private game preserve for the royal family of deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Iranian Takes Stand In Dallas Lawsuit

DALLAS (AP) — An employee of the Iranian government testified Tuesday that Electronic Data Systems failed to live up to its obligations under a $41 million contract with Iran's former minister of health and social welfare.

EDS is suing to collect the $22 million on the balance of the contract. Madjid Morzeyemi, manager of operations for the social security fund told U.S. District Judge Robert Porter that EDS had agreed to print several health booklets but failed to complete its obligations. He also said the contract was vague and caused problems when trying to define the scope of projects outlined in it.

Security was tight outside the courtroom, where Porter is hearing the case without a jury.

Morzeyemi was one of three Iranians scheduled to testify in the lawsuit filed by EDS against Iran in February 1979.

The Dallas-based company, founded by multi-millionaire H. Ross Perot, claimed Iran breached the contract by not paying for EDS' services for six months in 1978.

EDS contracted with the Iranian government in September 1976 to provide a data processing system for Iran's national health insurance, social welfare and banking services.

The company claims it lost $13.5 million in unpaid contract fees, $440,000 in unpaid expenses, $1.5 million for re-locating employees, $22.8 million in "lost profits for the remaining period of the contract," and $250,000 for lost and damaged property.

Defense attorneys entered portions of several depositions into the court record which centered around at least 10 meetings between Iranian government officials and EDS representatives from the summer of 1974 through May 1977. The depositions mentioned four loans totaling more than $340,000 paid by EDS to Iranian technical consultants.

Morzeyemi said he was transferred in 1975 to serve as data processing manager for Iran's health services organization. His job was to implement a data processing system to identify and keep records of insured persons — mostly government employees and their families.

He said he was aware that a contract existed but knew none of the detailed contents.

"And by the time EDS had left, there still had been no definite or practical plan to implement a direct national health care program," he said.

Defendant's lawyer Donald L. Case of Dallas claims the contact between EDS and Iran was invalid and unenforceable.

Case cited three reasons: Iran's social security organization was a separate entity from the government, no bids were accepted for the contract and that the Iranian government now is different from the one that existed when the contract was signed.

The Iranians have admitted that they have not paid the balance but maintain the contract is void, claiming it was illegally secured through promises of kickbacks to the now deposed shah of Iran.

Three EDS employees working on the contract were arrested and imprisoned in Iran in late 1978. The men were rescued in February of 1979 by a commando team of EDS employees, funded by Perot. More than 11,000 prisoners were released from the prison when a mob stormed its walls.

Iran Student Accused In Check Scheme

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — An Iranian student has been charged with trying to deposit a forged check in what police say could be a far-reaching scheme with state or national proportions.

Gholam Reza Pakyari, a 23-year-old student at Texas Southmost College, was arrested Monday while trying to deposit an allegedly forged check at the Pan American bank.

He was arraigned Tuesday and held in jail in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Brownsville police Det. Tony Hess said that since December Pakyari had deposited checks totaling $13,000 drawn on an account of the National Bank of Kuwait at the Irving Bank and Trust Co. of New York.

Most of the funds then were transferred by check to other accounts. The checks were made out to Jake Makly. Hess said Pakyari had a set of identification papers with the name "Jake Makly."

Pan American bank officials called police after learning through a bank clearing house that checks deposited in December and earlier this month were forgeries.

During questioning by police, Pakyari said he had been asked to open the bank account and deposit the checks by persons in Houston, Hess said.

"He said they told him it was going to be for the cause and for the ayatollah," Hess quoted the student as saying in an apparent reference to Iran's leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Also found in Pakyari's possession were bank papers from the First City Bank of Houston and the First National Bank of Brownsville and a passbook from United Savings of Brownsville.

"I think we just got the tip of the iceberg right now," Hess said. Hess said police discovered a hand-written note among the student's papers that apparently told him how to deal with banks by phone, the policeman said.

The instructions said to tell the bank, "I would like to verify a check" and "give her the account number and the number of the check," Hess said.

FBI agent Bob Nixon of Brownsville said Pakyari will be investigated and probably prosecuted on federal charges involving stolen property being transferred across state lines in bank transactions.

Defense Spending Could Keep Interest Rates High

WASHINGTON (AP) — Short-term interest rates could remain very steep if international tensions push U.S. defense spending higher than now planned by President Carter, the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Tuesday.

Jay Janis said a big spur in defense spending would produce a "more robust economy" than expected, and the nation "would probably escape" the long-predicted recession.

But, it also could aggravate double-digit inflation and force the Federal Reserve Board to continue its tight money policies longer than he had hoped, Janis told the National Savings and Loan League.

While such spending "may well be in the best interests of the country," it would indirectly damage the earnings of thrift institutions, said Janis, who regulates federally chartered savings and loan associations.

Historically, thrift institutions are the key source of mortgage money, and thus are crucial to the health of the housing industry, which is currently in a downslide.

Since the Federal Reserve Board's Oct. 5 thrust to tighten credit and the money supply, short-term interest rates have exceeded 15 percent and mortgage rates have risen above 13 percent in some parts of the country.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker on Tuesday vowed to continue the board's tight money policies as double-digit inflation persists. "We are dedicated to doing that job," he told the American Association of Retired Persons.

Although a recession has been expected for months, the U.S. economy continues to show signs of growth, expanding at an annual rate of 1.4 percent from October through December, while inflation continues at more than 13 percent a year.

Even before the Afghanistan crisis, President Carter proposed a 5 percent increase in real defense spending for fiscal 1981.

Janis, in making his interest rate prediction, did not cite an exact defense spending level, but an aide later said the chairman was referring only to a boost beyond Carter's proposed 5 percent increase.

"Keeping short-term rates high is very serious in terms of an earnings squeeze" for thrift institutions, Janis told the league.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am 74. My wife is 69. We have quite a bit of our money in municipal bonds which pay tax-free interest averaging a little less than 6 percent. Because we are retired and in a federal tax bracket of between 25 and 30 percent, the tax angle is not all that attractive.

A. If you are in a tax bracket of 25 percent or higher, you should consider switching from municipal bonds to corporate bonds. Corporate bonds pay higher yields. We are thinking about switching from the municipals to such a fund. If we sell the municipals, however, we will take quite a loss. What do you think we should do?

A. If by selling your municipals and putting the money in a corporate bond fund, individual corporate bonds or some other solid investment you would end up with more after-tax dollars, I say do it.

You'll have to get out your calculator to get a more answer. But, as a general rule of thumb, you get more "keeping money" — after taxes from the higher yields on corporate bonds than you do from the tax-free yields on municipal bonds — unless you are in a tax bracket of 32 percent or higher.

You're probably just about on the borderline. If you put a bundle into a corporate bond fund, the taxable income you receive from the fund just might kick you into a 33 percent or higher tax bracket.

But don't let the fact that you will realize a loss by selling your municipals deter you from making what could be a good financial move. You should compare your municipals' current yield — interest divided by market value — with the yield you can get by selling your municipals and putting the money you would receive to work at higher yields elsewhere.

Q. We have looked into annuities for retirement income. But it seems to us that the income they provide is low, compared to what we can get in bonds, savings certificates and other things. Also, we don't like the idea of tying up our money forever. What are your feelings on this?

A. We're in agreement.

To begin with, the payout from an annuity is not all "income." Part of it is income — the money earned on the money you have deposited with the insurance company or other organization with which you have the annuity contract.

The other part of the payout is a return of principal — your own money being returned to you in installments.

In any really long-term period of level or declining interest rates, an annuity could be a good deal — if you pinned the annuity-writing outfit down to a high payout during a previous period when interest rates were way up.

There's been no such truly long-term span in my adult lifetime.

Add to these facts the high charges or many annuities and they don't come out as any bargain for retirement purposes.

Q. Our insurance salesman keeps telling us that if we sign up for an annuity with his company part of the check we will receive each month after we retire will be "tax free." This sounds almost too good to be true. Is it?

A. Sure. The part of the check that would be tax free would be the portion of the monthly payout that represents the money you originally put in being returned to you.

You don't pay tax on your money when it's sent back to you. You would, however, pay tax on the income your money earned — the other part of the monthly annuity check.

These and sundry other facts learned in recent years of space exploration are displayed on a new wall chart of the planets prepared by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Questions On Military Spending Raised

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter, in the wake of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, has vowed to "pay whatever price is required" to assure U.S. strength around the world.

Here are some questions and answers about implications of stepped-up defense spending.

Q. What did the President say is necessary?

A. He has said in the past that defense spending must be increased by more than 20 percent over the rate of inflation over the next five years. This week, he promised to work for a "strong, unsurpassed defense capability" so the United States can "remain the strongest nation in the world."

Q. Will that mean a military spending surge?

A. Economists Walter W. Heller and George L. Perry, in a forecast prepared for the National City Bank of Minneapolis, see "substantial increases in defense outlays" this year, but say the spending will not have "the pervasive impact on the economy that a major mobilization would entail."

But at the Wall Street broker Becho Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., analyst Richard B. Hoey believes "an arms race lasting for at least the next half-decade is increasingly probable." He thinks "the coming arms race should have minimal impact on the economy in 1980, but a major impact on 1981-1985."

Q. What's the cost going to be?

A. Economists William N. Griggs and Leonard J. Santow of the J. Henry Schroder Bank & Trust Co. predict that military spending — including "international security assistance" — will total $121 billion in the current fiscal year ending Sept. 30, up 11.5 percent from 1979-1980's $115 billion.

In fiscal 1980-1981, the economists say, defense spending will jump 14.5 percent over the previous year's outlay and total $150 billion.

Q. How will the military spending gains affect jobs and economic growth?

A. The Schroder bank economists say the "long time between the decision to expand defense spending and the actual payments" will mean the spending gains won't start showing up on budgets for a year.

But the "stimulative effects of this military spending increase on the economy do not show nearly so long a lag" because "contracts are let to private firms (which are in turn subcontracted) well ahead of any outlays. Thus, the effect on employment and industrial activity should be apparent well before the government spending increases show up."

Q. Will the fight against inflation suffer as a result of higher military spending?

A. Hoey says because of the time needed to put the defense industry into high gear, a widely-expected recession still will set in, cutting today's 12 percent-a-year inflation to "3 percent to 7 percent in early 1981."

But "the arms race reduces the probability of any permanent slowing of the basic 8.5 percent (annual) long-term rate of inflation over the next five to 10 years," he says.

Wage, Price Curbs Said Doubtful Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Monetary wage and price controls will not work in the long run to end inflation, two of the nation's top financial advisers said Tuesday.

"I really do not think they are helpful in the situation we have now or hereafter," said Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

"We don't have the authority," said Alfred Kahn, President Carter's chief anti-inflation adviser. "They don't really solve the problem."

The question was raised at a meeting of the American Association of Business Persons and the National Retail Teachers Association.

Both Volcker and Kahn argued in separate speeches that mandatory controls tend to become a substitute for budgetary restraint and tight money policy, which are critical to keeping prices stable.

And both said controls tend to "create distortions" in the free-market system. Kahn, however, said he was not willing to rule out selective consumer controls.

He suggested that U.S. tax policy allowing "unlimited deduction of interest on consumer loans" had spurred spending and, thus, put some pressure on prices.

Asked to clarify the comments after his speech, Kahn said that over time the time to reverse the tax policy because "consumer spending is already going down" and the more could be done purchasing at a time when sales are weak nationwide.

"I was thinking of it as a long-range policy option," he concluded.

Consumers last year increased their mortgage debt by $20 billion, he said. They increased installment debt by another $20 billion, he added.

Kahn is chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which supports the 11-month-old voluntary wage-price program.

Rising Crude Oil Prices Cited As Cause Of Gasoline Price Increases

NEW YORK (AP) — The winter's third wave of 1-to 3-cent-a-gallon gasoline price increases is spreading through the oil industry, with rising world crude oil prices again being cited as the cause.

Industry spokesmen widely credit the fuel-price increases, along with improvements in auto mileage, as probable reasons for a recent decline in gasoline consumption of 7 percent to 10 percent from last year's levels.

Before the most recent round of increases, the average U.S. retail price of a gallon of gasoline was $1.064, up from about $1.06 in December and up by about 60 percent over the past year, the industry publication Lundberg Letter estimates.

The president of Shell Oil Co., John

F. Bookout, said last week that it was possible retail gasoline prices would hit $2 a gallon by late 1980 or early 1981.

But a spokesman for Standard Oil Company of Indiana said Tuesday that "we don't think that's likely, barring some major catastrophe."

The spokesman, Carl Meyerdirk, said Indiana Standard — the nation's second-largest gasoline marketer more commonly known by its Amoco brand name — raised gasoline prices by 4 cents a gallon late last week.

But he said the company believed gasoline "prices should begin to level off" as December and January crude-oil price increases by Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries members finish working their way through the industry.

Rather than a $1-a-gallon increase, Amoco sees closer to a 15-to 25-cent-a-gallon price increase for all of 1980, he said.

Among major oil companies announcing increases, Exxon Corp., the nation's largest gasoline marketer, said Monday it raised wholesale gasoline prices by 5 cents a gallon in its third boost since Dec. 18.

Standard Oil Co. of California said Tuesday it is raising the price of all grades of gasoline by four cents a gallon.

The move raised Exxon's average wholesale price for regular leaded gasoline to 81.6 cents a gallon, up 14 cents since mid-December.

The latest round of price increases was begun by third-ranked Shell Oil Co., which last week announced its second nickel-a-gallon boost of the month. Shell raised its price 3 cents on Dec. 21. Sixth-ranked Mobil Oil Corp. posted a 3-cent-a-gallon boost last week after raising prices by 3 cents 10 days earlier. Mobil says its wholesale price for gasoline in the New York City area now is $3.9 cents a gallon for leaded regular.

Budget Restraints, Public's Help Urged For Inflation Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve's tight-money policy must be accompanied by federal budget restraint and public cooperation if inflation is to be conquered, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker said Tuesday.

What is necessary for price stability, he said, is that "government and private policies pull together as a team."

He added that "I feel encouraged" about the fight against inflation in good part because "a change in attitude has affected the political climate" of the country.

Volcker made the remarks at a meeting of members of the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers Association.

They came on the eve of President Carter's annual State of the Union address to Congress. And they followed by one day release of Carter's written State of the Union message.

In that message, the president outlined a modest list of legislative proposals for the fiscal year starting in October and said there would be no tax cut. The budget for fiscal 1981 is expected to total $615 billion, up from last year's $547.5 billion, with much of the increase going to higher defense spending.

"Restraining inflation remains my highest domestic priority," Carter said in his message, adding that he expected that "inflation will slow this year" from its pocketbook-wrenching pace of 13 percent in 1979.

Volcker said the nation needed to be "very cautious about when and if taxes should be reduced" because deficit spending by the federal government could aggravate inflation.

The Federal Reserve intends to do its part, he added. "If we are going to deal with this problem (of inflation), that growth of money and credit has to be reigned in. ... We are dedicated to doing that job."

Both Volcker and Treasury Secretary G. William Miller were asked about gold prices, which dropped sharply on international markets on Tuesday.

Button-holed by reporters before a closed meeting of members of the Democratic National Committee, Miller said the situation was the result of "a very volatile market and apt to be showing wide ranges of movement."

Volcker said the "single most important thing is international political uncertainty" in the wake of unrest in Iran and Afghanistan.

He added that occasional sales of U.S. government gold holdings tended to help strengthen the dollar and contribute to price stability.

And although he declined comment on an earlier Miller statement that "at the moment it doesn't seem to us an appropriate time to sell our gold," Volcker pointed out that Miller "did not rule this out indefinitely."

Alfred Kahn, President Carter's chief anti-inflation adviser, told the retired persons' groups that during the 1980s, the nation will have to balance its need for social programs with the cost of providing them.

"The decade of the '80s is one in which we are going to have to come to terms with the conflicts that have been set up over the last 50 years," said Kahn. The big question, he said, was "how to be both efficient and humane."

To do this, he said, Americans will have to learn that taking care of the elderly or cleaning up the environment has a cost. And the only way to cover that cost without aggravating inflation is to show restraint in other areas, he said.

Conferees Put Finishing Touches On Oil Windfall Tax Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate and House conferees Tuesday put all but the finishing touches on a $227.3 billion "windfall" tax on the oil industry and then began trying to decide what kind of national energy program the money should buy.

The Senate version of the tax bill would spend more than $25 billion in incentives for home and business conservation and use of non-oil fuels over the decade. The House bill contains no spending at all.

"This is a major achievement in moving toward a sound energy policy," Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House conferees, said of the compromise tax.

Senate conferees accepted the compromise unanimously. Only Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, dissented when the House delegates agreed. Archer said the tax would make it more difficult for the United States to increase oil production and thus reduce reliance on imported petroleum.

The two biggest problems in writing a tax acceptable to both delegations was deciding the share of the tax burden to be borne by independents and the rate of tax on oil that is yet to be found.

The conferees agreed on $22.5 billion as the independents' share of the $227.3 billion and set a reduced tax on future discoveries which, by the end of the decade, will account for nearly half of U.S. production.

President Carter proposed a "windfall" tax after deciding to phase out federal price controls on U.S.-produced crude oil in an effort to spur production and thus cut reliance on imported oil.

Decontrol will cost consumers nearly $1 trillion in the 1980s as U.S. oil prices climb to world levels. The compromise tax, which is not as stiff as the president wanted, would when combined with existing state and federal taxes take about 70 percent of that "windfall."

House conferees insisted that the tax on future oil finds should not exceed 30 percent. Senate delegates concurred, but they knew that because the committee already had agreed the tax should produce $227.3 billion over the decade the lower the tax on future discoveries, the less a tax break could be allowed for the independents.

The independents are 12,000 individuals and companies large and small that generally engage only in the search for and production of oil. They don't own refineries or service stations, but they drill virtually all the nation's exploratory wells.

The Senate had voted to exempt from the new tax the first 1,000 barrels of oil produced daily by an independent.

The compromise rejected such an outright exemption, but would allow a much-reduced tax rate on an independent's first 1,000 barrels daily.

The "windfall" tax would take for the government 30 to 70 percent, depending on where, when and by whom the oil was discovered, of price increases above present levels.

Here are major elements of the tax:
MAJOR COMPANIES: The tax would take 70 percent of any price increase above $13 a barrel for oil discovered before 1973. Stripper oil, which is from wells producing 10 barrels daily or less, would face a 60 percent tax.

Future discoveries would be taxed at 30 percent above the $16.55 level. The same tax would apply to "heavy" hard-to-pump oil found mainly in California, and any oil recovered by "tertiary" means, such as secondary recovery.

Chrysler Refund Offer Boosts Sales, Restores Confidence

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A trial program in Utah offering 30-day money-back guarantees to purchasers of new Chrysler cars hasn't cornered the local market, but is boosting sales and restoring the confidence of disillusioned salesmen.

"It doesn't have 40 people standing at the door waiting to buy a car every morning," said Bly Wilkinson, president of Salt Lake's Cottonwood Chrysler dealership. "But it has removed the sales resistance that we have been experiencing in recent months."

Chrysler implemented the experimental program last week at 21 Utah dealerships in the Salt Lake City area. If a buyer drives the car for one month or 1,000 miles and is not satisfied, he may return the vehicle to his dealer and get a full refund of the purchase price plus loan interest charges, taxes, license and preparation fees and the cash value of any trade-in made at the time of the purchase.

So far, no cars have been returned to any of the dealerships. But the program is only two weeks old.

Most dealers reported a significant increase in sales during the first week of the experimental program. Wilkinson said his dealership sold 10 new cars compared to only three cars — including 1978s and demonstrators — during the same week one year ago. Another dealer reported a 25 percent hike in new-car sales.

Wilkinson said he already been contacted by a local Cadillac dealer and the owner of a Lincoln-Mercury franchise

Pakistan Asks Billions For Arms Buildup

 was strangled by three army men last Oct. 8 on the order of Hafizullah Amin and in his presence.
 Amin had ousted Taraki from power just a few days earlier. It had been announced in October that Taraki died after a lengthy illness.
 Amin himself was toppled in a Soviet-backed coup Dec. 27 and replaced by Tarbak Karmal, and it was announced Amin was executed. All three Afghan rulers since the April 1978 revolution have been members of one faction or another of the country's Marxist party.
 Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua, who met with Pakistani officials earlier this week in Islamabad, held a news conference in the southern city of Karachi as he prepared to return to China on Wednesday.

 He said the United States, Europe and Japan have not realized the seriousness of the Soviet-Afghan crisis. He repeated China's claim that the Soviets plan a later thrust to the Persian Gulf or Gulf of Oman that would give them control of Arab oil shipments and cripple Western economies.

United Approach Urged
 Huang made no mention of Chinese aid to Pakistan, but called for a united approach to make Afghanistan "the vanguard of the struggle against Soviet designs," with the conflict not carried beyond Afghanistan.

Zia's foreign policy adviser, Aga Shahi, told reporters the amount of future Chinese aid had not been discussed with Huang.

"The Chinese ability to supply arms to Pakistan is limited," Shahi said.

Many of Pakistan's warplanes and tanks are obsolescent Chinese-produced versions of Soviet models, many from the 1950s.

Shahi made clear that Pakistan was depending on the United States to modernize its armed forces.

American assistance "must be commensurate with the size of the threat," he said.

In the negotiations with Washington, he said, Pakistan is seeking "credible U.S. military and economic assistance which should be durable and serve to strengthen its security vis-a-vis the threat developing on its western frontier."

Shahi also said, however, that the Soviets had indicated a readiness for dialogue with Pakistan. He did not elaborate.

Australia Backs Boycott
 Elsewhere, Australia gave official backing to President Carter's call for a boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow if the Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan within a month.

It was the first major world government to support Carter on the question of a boycott, although British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on Tuesday endorsed an alternative Carter proposal — that the Games be moved. Mrs. Thatcher said she would ask British Olympic authorities to seek another site for the competition.

Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira said his government has no desire to "punish or retaliate" against the Soviets for the Afghan intervention. He said he believes Moscow's foreign policy remains "defensive and cautious," but that the Japanese do wish to "show our displeasure" over the Afghan operation.

In Iran, Governor-General Hassan Ghafoori of eastern Khorasan Province barred all Western reporters from the province to prevent them from crossing into Afghanistan. He told Iran's official Pars news agency it was "quite likely" U.S. spies acting as reporters were attempting to observe Soviet troop movements in Afghanistan.

He ordered "an immediate and strict ban on Western spies entering" Afghanistan from Iran and said Western correspondents found in Khorasan would be arrested.

Iran's revolutionary Moslem government closed down all U.S. news operations in Iran last week and told U.S. reporters to leave the country.

Carter Votes Swamp Ted

 cuses also drew about 100,000, a record for that party.

Bush said the turnout enhanced his showing. "It negates the position that the caucuses were just a small, isolated event."

That is what Reagan suggested. "I understand he's saying that, but you look at the totals," said Bush. "Your totals are going to exceed 100,000 and ... that is bigger than some of the primaries."

But even that startling turnout represented only about 15 percent of Iowa's 1.5 million registered voters.

"I have said that there was no way to predict this," said Reagan, consistently favored in national polls of Republican presidential preferences. "We are talking about a straw vote that does not necessarily represent, because you are talking about a small group of people of those half-million Republican voters in Iowa who go to those meetings. It was just a case of who could get the people out there."

Reagan's organization tried, although his personal campaigning was limited to eight stops.

Bush said his organization made the difference. "But that's politics, getting people out is a part of the campaign," he said.

He did it with an intensive telephone and door-to-door canvass that buttressed nearly a month of personal vote-hunting.

The former United Nations ambassador, CIA director, Republican Party chairman, envoy to China and congressman from Houston said Iowa had transformed him from an asterisk on the list of candidates to a leading contender for the nomination.

Bush said the Republican primary in New Hampshire will cut the field in half, and only two contenders will be left after the March 18 primary in Illinois. Bush has said all along that he and Reagan would be the finalists.

He said Reagan "was hurt badly" in Iowa, and faces erosion of his support. "But I don't write him off," Bush said. "You go to a national poll and he undoubtedly will be ahead of me and the others."

Bush said the former California governor could play down Iowa all he wanted. "He's entitled to his opinions, and I'm entitled to the results I got ..."

Bush "Out Of The Pack"

"I suppose I am out of the pack, but they will be after me, howling and yowling at my heels," Bush said. "What we will have is momentum. We will look forward to Big Mo being on our side, as they say in athletics."

He said his Iowa showing will raise expectations and make the hurdles ahead a little higher. "But the good side is the momentum that takes off with me today to New Hampshire."

The Republican caucus results were, as Reagan said, a straw vote. The caucuses elected precinct delegates to represent them at later conventions, but they were not committed to any candidates.

The popular vote stood this way with 1,985 precincts counted:

Bush 30,436 or 32.8 percent.

Reagan 24,792 or 26.7 percent.

Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee 12,908 or 13.9 percent.

Former Gov. John B. Connally of Texas 9,024 or 9.7 percent.

Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois 6,578 or 7.1 percent.

Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois 3,806 or 4.1 percent.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas 2,478 or 2.7 percent.

The rest were scattered or marked uncommitted.

Baker said his third place finish was "pretty much what I predicted." He said Bush and Reagan now are the front-runners, but "New Hampshire has a pleasant habit of devouring front-runners, and I hope it continues that."

The Democratic caucuses did fix ratios of support that will apply all the way to the national convention.

Carter Victory

With 2,422 precincts counted, Carter had won 59 percent of the precinct level delegates, Kennedy 31 percent, and 10 percent were uncommitted.

Translated into projected Iowa votes for the Democratic presidential nomination, that meant 29 delegates for Carter, 15 for Kennedy, 5 uncommitted and 1 yet to be awarded. Final computations could alter those figures slightly.

midnight Monday and continued intermittently through 11:30 a.m. Tuesday. The heaviest snowfall occurred in a triangle with points in Lubbock, Brownfield and Lamesa. Very little snow was recorded north of Plainview, and no precipitation fell in Amarillo.

Some Schools Close

Although several local private schools closed Tuesday because of the snow storm, the Lubbock public schools remained open.

Reese Air Force Base suspended operations Tuesday, but Lubbock International Airport and the bus terminal did not alter operations because of the snow.

The Carter victory capped a comeback from the days when there was speculation that Kennedy would knock him out of the race quickly. But it was only the first installment of a campaign that will match candidates in 36 presidential primary elections.

State Probing Clovis City Record Snarl hundred dollars, another got five bills to the same account and another received two bills with zero balance owed to the city.

At that meeting, the employee told the commissioners that there were some problems with the computer but that the problems had been solved.

The mayor recently said the city's computer records are "in such a mess that there is no place for the auditor to start or to obtain a balance."

Leaves Granted

"Without those records, we have no idea how much money is missing, if any, or what has happened to it," the mayor said.

The city manager and his assistant both have been granted a leave of absence during the state's investigation and commissioners reportedly will discuss in study session today whether the two should be paid during their absence.

City commissioners Monday accepted a leave of absence for City Manager Darrel Kreighbaum and Assistant City Manager Cleve Teague.

Responsibility Noted

Kreighbaum said Tuesday that his leave of absence came about after the state department of finance and administration told city officials that they were coming to Clovis to review the city's financial operation.

"State officials told me that as city manager I'm responsible for all activities of the city, and because of this they felt that I should not be in my position when they were doing this review. I took the leave of absence to give them time to do their review," Kreighbaum said.

Teague could not be reached for comment late Tuesday.

The commissioners reportedly will decide the issue at Thursday's regular meeting.

Comment Declined

The state auditor's office requested Ninth Judicial District Attorney Bill Bonem to initiate the investigation of Clovis financial records in mid-December.

"At this point, it is premature to discuss any details of the investigation. Once we feel we have information we are qualified to give out, we will do so," Bonem said Tuesday.

Clovis Certified Public Accountant Darwin Sprouls, who has been auditing the city's records since August, told city commissioners in December that he was having difficulty in obtaining balances from city computer records.

Efforts Unavailing

Commissioners approved Sprouls's request to hire a computer expert from Hobbs to help him, but the expert also was unsuccessful in untangling the computer records.

Jim Macias, from the state's department of finance and administration, is assisting acting city manager Bob Bright and clerk-treasurer Donald Clifton in seeing where the city stands financially.

Macias added that his department does not have the complete city financial report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1979.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The State Bar of California on Tuesday said it has accepted the resignation of John D. Ehrlichman, former chief aide to President Nixon and convicted Watergate conspirator. Ehrlichman, who had been suspended from law practice in the state since 1973, submitted his resignation as a bar member last Aug. 11, with bar disciplinary charges still pending against him.

Phillips Plant Blast To Cut Fuel Supplies

a shortage because they are supplied locally by Texaco, the operation of small, private aircraft may be severely hampered by the cutback.

"We will have to find fuel somewhere else and we're waiting on Phillips to tell us where," said Vernon Wright of Avtech Aviation. "If we don't get any more fuel, our current supply only will last until Monday," Wright said.

Although the private aviation center has the capacity to store 10,000 gallons of aviation fuel, Wright said, their supplies were low when Phillips officials notified him of the cutoff. "We use about 2,000 to 3,000 gallons of the (aviation) fuel a day and if we don't get some soon, we're liable to be completely out of it and only have jet fuel to offer our customers."

Officials at Wes-Tex use Phillips aviation fuel, but said they had not been notified Tuesday of the cutoff. Town and County Airpark uses Mobil products.

Area retailers said they would be uncomfortably squeezed by the allocation cutback and a few were looking to the U.S. Department of Energy and the state of Texas for relief.

Nelson Hall of Benton Oil Co. in Lubbock said he had contacted the Dallas office of the DOE about an alternative supplier, but had not heard from officials late Tuesday.

Myrie Bradley, manager of Plainview Oil and Butane, which uses about 100,000 gallons of Phillips fuel each month, said he didn't realize what effect the explosion would have on his supply.

"I have considered applying for fuel from the state set-aside program, but haven't considered contacting an alternative supplier yet," Bradley said.

Phillips spokesman Brooks Garner said most of the Oklahoma-based oil company's aviation fuel came from the Berger plant and that delivery of the fuel would resume at a reduced allocation once the stockpile of products at the company's four other refineries had been inventoried.

U.S., Allies Delaying New Iran Moves

U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized on Nov. 4, the administration has cut off most trade with Iran and has frozen Iranian government assets in the United States. U.S. officials acknowledged that the next steps available to the administration likely would have only a marginal impact on the Iranian economy.

Invasion Alters Attitude

In addition, officials said, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan has altered the Carter administration's hard-line attitude on Iran. Because Iran borders both Afghanistan and the Soviet Union, the administration and European allies are reluctant to tighten the screws on the Tehran regime too hard, fearing that could give the Soviets a new opportunity for expansion.

"We do not want to put so much pressure on that it would lead to a disintegration of the country or to a permanent alienation between Iran and the United States," one official said.

Russians Take Afghan Posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of Soviet bureaucrats have moved into Afghanistan to run the government and East German intelligence agents are helping to operate the security system, administration sources disclosed Tuesday.

Afghan administrators are being dismissed and, in some cases, executed, as the Soviets attempt to tighten their hold on the pro-Moscow government of Babrak Karmal, the sources said.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said, meanwhile, that the Soviets were airlifting more troops into the country now that Kabul airport had reopened after a severe snowfall. He said there were now some 85,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the Soviets have taken over direction of the foreign ministry and security, with East German intelligence agents assuming the role they also play in South Yemen and Angola.

Stone Trial Testimony Continues

you?" Shelton persisted.

"No, sir," Martin said.

"In other words, you already had the gun and a statement from Stone but had never told him of any rights or warnings," Shelton said.

"He wasn't under arrest," Martin answered.

Martin later testified he returned to Dimmitt with the gun, dropped his wife off at home, stopped at the hospital and "personally observed that Miss Casas was dead," and went to the courthouse, where he obtained a consent to search agreement and a search warrant from county officials.

"In your affidavit for the warrant, you wrote that you believed Loy or Mrs. L.E. Stone (Stone's elderly mother who lived in a house across the driveway from the Stones) to have fired the fatal shot," Shelton said. "Which is Mrs. L.E. Stone?"

Stones Sign Consent

"I don't know by the initials," Martin answered, adding that he never used the search warrant because the Stones signed the consent to search agreement.

"Before you searched, did you ever give them any warning?" Shelton asked.

"No, sir, I don't think so," Martin replied.

Under cross-examination from Shelton, Gunnels said he "knew there was a girl dead, but didn't tell the Stones."

When Shelton asked why not, Gunnels replied, "I felt it wasn't my place to do so."

During the proceedings, Martin produced police call sheets that indicated the Stones had complained of drag racing on their road at least twice during October, but that there were no official records of any calls to the Stones residence, not even on the shooting, for Halloween night 1977.

"There had been a bunch of calls" to the Stones during the weeks prior to Halloween, Martin said. "If (the shooting call) should have been written down someplace."

Martin also said that one of his deputies previously had arrested some area teen-agers in the vicinity of the Stones' residence, and that he had stopped a carload of teen-agers from Hereford who were returning from the Stone's earlier that night. "I told them to get on back where they belonged," he said.

Testimony is expected to continue this morning in the three-delayed trial which was moved from Dimmitt to Plainview because of the Stone's religious background and racial tensions stirred up by the shooting.

Registration Plan Studied By President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is considering a proposal that he ask Congress to authorize a peacetime registration of draft-age youths, administration sources said Tuesday.

The sources said they were uncertain who made the proposal but added that they believed it came from within the White House staff.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, also said they were uncertain whether Carter would accept the proposal and whether he would include such a request to Congress in his State of the Union address Wednesday night.

If he does so, Carter will be changing his administration's position on the question of a peacetime registration.

White House spokesmen declined to comment on the issue Tuesday night.

Last summer Defense Secretary Harold Brown told Congress, "We don't propose to go to registration, let alone the draft, until we are convinced that other methods won't do the job."

In July, the White House said, "The administration is opposed to registration" and that "it is not necessary to impose this burden on our nation and its youth."

But senior military officers, particularly Army generals, have called peacetime registration necessary to assure that there would be enough military manpower available to fill out regular forces in an emergency.

These officers, noting that the Army National Guard and Reserve are below strength

Price Of Gold Plummets As Traders Take Profits

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gold, which soared as high as $875 a troy ounce the day before, tumbled below $700 Tuesday in late New York trading. The dollar strengthened against all major European currencies.

Dealers on both sides of the Atlantic said speculators, who rode the wave as bullion prices were bid higher and higher in the past several days by investors dumping currencies, decided to sell and take their profits.

In London, gold closed at $705 an ounce, 16 percent lower than Monday's closing price of $838.50. In Zurich, bullion plummeted to $733 from its all-time high there of $850 Monday.

The price kept falling after European markets closed. The price of gold to be delivered this month fell to $696.50 on New York's Commodity Exchange, then rebounded to $713, still down $112.50 for the day.

At New York's Republic National Bank, the price fell as low as $690 before rising back to $700, down from $820 on Monday.

"They've made a great deal of money since Christmas," said Peter Gignoux, precious metals expert for the London brokers Bache and Co. "At some stage, since gold does not produce a dividend, people have to reap their benefits."

The European prices fell sharply from the historic high of $875 set in New York on Monday, but remained staggeringly high compared with levels of less than a month ago.

Tuesday's closing prices were well above the $630 level of 1980's first trading day, and more than $250 above the prices of a month before that.

Gold is the traditional haven against monetary and political uncertainty. The growing international tensions in Iran and Afghanistan has pushed vast quantities of Middle Eastern money out of currencies and into bullion, traders said.

Gignoux said trading was nervous Monday, but not as panicky as when the metal shot up through $300, $400 and $500 in the past two months.

"People have gotten used to a crisis mentality," he said. "It's very hard to pick a bottom to the gold market right now, but I'd say we're coming within reasonable distance of it."

The gold plunge began early Tuesday when London's five major bullion houses "fixed" the price for morning trading at $763, well below New York's top prices.

In Zurich, dealers described the market as "very nervous," with a profit-taking wave triggered by higher margin requirements for trading in gold futures and almost a hold down in silver trading in New York.

"Then the others went along, liquidating large positions," one dealer commented.

The market also lacked fresh impulses from Iran and Afghanistan.

Tragic Residential Accident Kills Slumbering Couple, Infant

By TRAVIS BROWN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A cold wind snaked through cracks in the small wood-frame house in southeast Odessa Monday night.

But 5-month-old Yalina Salas kept warm by snuggling in bed between her parents, Jose Ramiro and Maria Salas, both 27.

The family slept together until about 2:30 a.m. Tuesday, when a car ran a stop sign outside the house and then crashed through the Salas' bedroom wall. Mother, father and baby were crushed to death.

After the accident, the three victims lay tangled in tattered bedsheets and a mattress, pinned under the front wheels of the car.

Although the accident occurred sometime between 2:30 and 3 a.m., it was not reported until 5 a.m.—even though there were two other persons in the house at the time.

The driver of the wayward auto fled the scene. But late Tuesday afternoon, Odessa police arrested a 19-year-old Odessa man in connection with the accident.

Police said the suspect did not have a driver's license and may not have known how to drive.

"When he came to the intersection (outside the Salas' house), he hit the gas pedal instead of the brakes," Police Lt. James Hallman said.

Police also were puzzled as to why neither of the two persons in the Salas' living room nor their neighbors heard the car crash through the house.

"It's kind of hard to figure out," Hallman said.

Consuelo Serrano, 18, and her 5-year-old daughter, Veronica were sleeping in the living room when the accident occurred. Miss Serrano told police she heard a noise between 2:30 and 3 a.m., but went back to sleep.

"She said she heard glass breaking, but didn't think anything about it," Hallman said.

After the accident was discovered, firefighters were called to the scene and used special equipment to free the bodies of the three victims.

The Salas' house is located about 50-feet behind a stop sign at a T-shaped intersection. Police said they found no skid marks at the intersection.

"The car just went straight into the house," Hallman said.

Police detectives tracked down the license tag on the car, a 1969 Chevrolet Nova, to an Odessa address, where they found the car's driver. The owner of the car is in Mexico, police said.

Francisco Agado Andrade, 19, of Odessa was charged with one count of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the accident. Lt. Hallman said. He said he expected two other counts of the same charge would be filed against the suspect today.

Andrade is being held in the Odessa city jail on $15,000 bond.

Autopsies for the victims were ordered by Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee, who ruled the deaths accidental.

Late Tuesday, Lumpee said an autopsy completed on Jose Salas showed he died of a crushed chest. Lumpee said preliminary reports indicated both his wife and daughter suffered head injuries.

In an unrelated incident Monday, Amarillo police said a derailed locomotive struck a house but caused no injuries. The home's owner, Sam Hodge, 67, said he was jolted awake when a Burlington Northern switcher engine jumped the tracks and topped onto the corner of his house.

Funeral arrangements for the Salas' family are pending with Easterling Funeral Home of Odessa.

Lubbock Police Investigate Attempted Burglary, Theft Incidents

A Lubbock man apparently frightened away a would-be burglar early Tuesday after he was awakened by the sound of breaking glass, police said.

Soledad Salaz of 518 E. 36th St. told police he was awakened about 2 a.m. by the noise. When he turned on the lights in his house, he discovered the glass had been broken out of the storm door at the front of the residence, reports indicate.

Police said the burglar or burglars apparently had attempted to pry open the door before breaking the glass. The culprit apparently fled when Salaz turned on the lights. Damage to the door was estimated at $100, police said.

A custom exhaust system valued at $600 was stolen from a truck parked at 301 E. 64th St. between Saturday and 8 a.m. Tuesday, police said.

David Standee, owner of the truck, said the system included a chrome exhaust stack, a muffler, a shield, a grab handle and mounting brackets.

A 1970 Buick four-door was stolen from 1906 Fourth St. between 10 a.m. Sunday and 9 a.m. Monday, police said. The car is valued at $800. Owner Jack Merritt of 5602 38th St. told police he did not realize it had been stolen until Tuesday.

Jimmy Darrel Duncan of 3306 91st St. reported tools valued at $325 had been taken from the rear of his pickup between 10 a.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

A tool box containing assorted hand tools had been removed from a larger tool box in the bed of the truck, Duncan told police. The vehicle was parked in the driveway of his home at the time of the theft, police said.

A 40-year-old unemployed man was booked into county jail Monday on felony drunk driving charges in connection with a reported hit-and-run accident in the 3400-block of Quirt Avenue.

Reports indicate police were called to the 6200-block of Quirt Avenue at about 5 p.m. by a special agent for Santa Fe Railway, who reportedly witnessed the accident and pursued the subject's vehicle before taking the man into custody.

The agent told police the vehicle, a 1970 Plymouth Sport Fury, left the roadway out of control and was swerving back and forth when the car returned to the roadway.

Reports show the agent saw the man's car barely miss one vehicle before striking a 1972 brown Ford LTD driven by Vanessa Bates of Lubbock. She was not injured in the mishap.

The agent reportedly pursued the subject's car for 27 blocks before finding the vehicle stopped in the 6200-block of Quirt Avenue.

The man was taken to the police department, given a breathalyzer test and then transported to county jail where he was booked on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, failure to give information at the scene of an accident, failure to report an accident, no driver's license and failure to yield right of way.

In other activity Monday night, a local disc jockey told police someone broke into his 1610-A 23rd St. apartment sometime between 7 p.m. and midnight Monday, ransacked all the rooms and made off with about $2,000 worth of appliances and tools.

Brad Lee Moran told police he returned home Monday night to find his apartment in disarray, drawers pulled out and clothes lying on the floor. Among the reported missing items include a radar range, a Sony color television set, a diamond engagement ring, a set of cutting knives and a Craftsman tool set.

Reports show entry was gained by removing a screen and prying a living room window. Reports also indicated the duplex is surrounded by a 6-foot fence, which police believe made it easier for the intruders to leave with the missing items.

A local insurance salesman told police someone stole his wallet while he was playing tennis Monday afternoon at the Racquet Club at 9000 Memphis Drive.

Reports show the wallet contained a pilot's license, a pilot's medical certificate, Mobile, Shell, Texaco and Exxon credit cards, a Mastercharge card, a Rocky Mountain Visa credit card, $12 to $14 in cash and an expense check from his insurance company.

Post Office Locked Out By Landlady

MONTREAL, Wis. (AP) — Greta Lou Neice, who padlocked the post office in a rent dispute with the government, unlocked the doors Tuesday just long enough for postal officials to move the mail out to temporary quarters at City Hall.

Monday Mrs. Neice, 43, padlocked her two-story downtown building where the Postal Service has rented space since 1971.

Mrs. Neice said she had gone $7,780 in debt because the government would not let her raise the $90 monthly rent for the post office in this northern Wisconsin town. She is asking $495 a month, retroactive to July 1.

After Mrs. Neice locked the door, Postmaster Tessie Giackino was unable to sort mail, and none of the 200 post office box customers in this former mining town of 800 people could get in to pick up letters or packages.

Tuesday, though, Mrs. Neice allowed Robert Michaels, area manager for the Postal Service, to enter the building to remove the mail. He then set up a makeshift office in the City Hall, using tables and chairs in the council chambers and spare postal boxes shipped in from nearby towns.

Then Mrs. Neice locked the door again, saying she would hold the rest of the post office property in the wood-frame building until the Postal Service gave in to her demand.

"I am prepared to go to jail if necessary," she said.

Government officials "told me I am breaking a federal law," Mrs. Neice said. "I said locking my own building doesn't break any federal law."

Michaels said he had no idea how long the post office would operate out of city hall. The real estate division of the postal service's St. Paul, Minn., office is handling the lease dispute, he said.

Mrs. Neice sent an eviction letter to postal authorities last November in which she claimed she was owed back rent of more than $2,000 and $1,000 for a damage deposit.

She said her cost of heating the building had quadrupled and water rates had tripled since the post office moved in. But last July 1 she said she was required to honor the government's option to continue the contract at the same rate until 1982.

Ex-Car Dealer Wins $4.5 Million Award

DETROIT (AP) — A former Flint Buick dealer who claimed General Motors Corp. forced him to lose his business by breaking a promise has been awarded $4.5 million by a Wayne County Circuit Court jury.

Jerome A. Davidson, 54, said in his lawsuit that the automaker told him in 1965 he would lose his business if he didn't close his successful Clio dealership and relocate in northwestern Flint.

Davidson's suit claimed that GM had said in marketing literature that, in exchange, it would close one of its factory sales outlets in Flint and sell the other one to a private dealership.

The auto dealer closed its downtown Flint factory outlet, but failed to sell the other outlet and increased business there by adding another shift, Davidson's lawyers told the jury.

According to testimony, Davidson opened his new dealership in 1967 and went out of business two years later.

"There's no way he (Davidson) could compete with GM," said his attorney, Harvey van Benschoten. "They wiped him out completely by breaking the contract."

Wrong Readings On Gas Meter Dashes Dreams For Retirement

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — A 66-year-old laundry owner's dreams of retirement might be down the drain because of a $40,000 billing error by his local utility.

Irven Berendes, owner of Coachlight Quickwash in Baraboo, was shocked when Wisconsin Power & Light Co. slapped him with a $40,291.88 bill saying he'd been undercharged for the past six years.

Under Wisconsin law, underbilled commercial customers are liable for up to six years of utility bills.

Berendes, who had been thinking of selling his business and retiring, took the matter to the state Public Service Commission, which mediates such disputes.

The laundry owner told the commission that the meter reader who was assigned to his business over the past six years consistently had misread the old-style gas meter.

William G. Swanson, accounting supervisor for Wisconsin Power's Northwest division in Baraboo, said the problem surfaced when a substitute meter reader was assigned to the coin-operated laundry last year.

"He caught it right away," Swanson said.

The regular meter reader was "reprimanded" for the mistake, he said.

School Trustee Ending Term; Open Spot Eyed

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock public schools trustee Harold Harriger will give up his Place 4 spot on the school board when his term expires this spring, and a local real estate dealer has set his sights on capturing that open seat.

Med Hunt, owner of a southwest Lubbock real estate firm, told The Avalanche-Journal Tuesday he will announce his candidacy this week for the spot being vacated by Harriger.

Harriger, an attorney who has served six years on the board, told The Avalanche-Journal Tuesday that he will not run for re-election.

Trustees Jose Ramirez and Deatong

Rigsby said they will wait until after the election is set to announce their plans.

However, restaurateur-owner Ramirez said he thinks he probably will run. He added he will "make up my mind sometime next month."

Insurance agent Rigsby, appointed this summer to fill the spot vacated when Charles Waters died, said he is "very seriously considering" running for re-election.

Trustees will officially open the election at their monthly board meeting Thursday.

Harriger said he has decided to retire from public office because "three of four of my children are out of public school. I have enjoyed the last six years on the board and that's enough for me."

The attorney praised the school district, saying, "I'm pretty much of a fan of the system. It's good school system."

He added that he believes the board has been fiscally responsible "while at the same time putting together a decent education in the process."

Harriger said the personalities of trustees have caused little friction. "They're not a fractious bunch."

He praised several projects implemented by the board in recent years, but recalled his disagreement with trustees over a board decision made in 1978.

"I think Ela lies (magnet school) was an outstanding project," said Harriger. "I think the electronics program at Dunbar-Struggs was an outstanding program, and I hope LEAP (exemplary academic program at Lubbock High School) will be, too. It's too early to tell yet."

He said he still wishes that boundary lines had been redrawn to bring more students into Lubbock High — an alternative to LEAP that was considered by the board. "I thought that approach should have been taken to provide for future growth in that area."

Harriger said he regrets that school construction south of Loop 289 has stalled and said he "wishes the plans (for desegregation) had been laid to rest."

But he said the board is "going to live with the integration problem however it turns out, and it may be a tough one."

He added the board in future years also will have to "face the money crunch" combined with the need to build new schools and to provide "a reasonable pay scale for personnel."

Harriger described himself as a conservative both in financial and academic matters. "My disposition is not to be terribly innovative. I'm kind of a back-to-basics guy." He added he thinks the administration has done a good job of stressing the basics in education.

Harriger said he will devote the next few years to "getting three kids through college," and added he is "through with public office" for the foreseeable future.

Candidate Med Hunt also praised the work that has been done by the school board, saying he chose to run "to continue the great job that has been done. I have no axes to grind."

academically, athletically and extra-curricularly."

He said that a student involved in extra-curricular programs "is the kind of kid that comes out with a good attitude."

Hunt said he is "delighted the school system offers so many programs." He

Turner Raps Chamber's City Tax Support

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A former Lubbock mayor has criticized the Chamber of Commerce for not taking a public stand in the recent special election on pay raises and collective bargaining rights for firemen.

M.W. "Moe" Turner says the reason the chamber did not get involved in the campaign is because it is partially supported by city tax money.

"That's not good," he said.

Turner was referring to the dedicated portion of the city's tax rate that funds the Board of City Development, which operates under the chamber. Board funding this year amounts to approximately $689,000.

According to Turner, he organized a special committee of former mayors and city councilmen to oppose the pay raise and bargaining rights measures because no one else in the business community had taken a stand.

"Of course, the chamber would have been the logical place for this to have been organized," Turner said.

In Turner's opinion, passage of the pay raise and collective bargaining propositions would have "greatly affected" Lubbock's business community. He said that the chamber represents the business community here and "should have gotten involved first in the campaign."

Turner charged that the chamber could more actively support issues for business here if it didn't receive tax funds. "Our chamber is one of the few in the U.S. that is tax-supported," he said, noting that most chambers of commerce are supported by contributions from the business community.

"I think we would have a more active chamber if it weren't on public sugar," Turner added.

Local chamber officials said the possibility of taking a public stand in the special election was discussed by the organization's executive committee. "It was our decision that we should not take a public position," explained chamber board president B.C. "Peck" McMinn.

According to McMinn, the chamber doesn't normally take stands in political campaigns, partly because it does receive tax funds. "We also felt that we represent the entire community, not just one segment," he said.

Turner said he believes the chamber board should consider breaking off its involvement with funding from the city.

However, chamber vice president Joe Horkey said he doesn't see any reason to end the tax funding. "The money from the tax funds has been put to good use," Horkey said. "And it's been used for the good of all people in the city."

According to both Horkey and McMinn, the Board of City Development has played an important role in attracting industry to Lubbock. McMinn noted that promoting the growth of the city benefits all citizens.

Funding for the board was set in the city charter during the mid-1920s. At that time, the board tax was set at 5 cents on $100 valuation.

"The only way to change this would be through a charter amendment election," Horkey said.

In 1967, city voters turned down a proposition to eliminate the funding for the Board of City Development in a special charter amendment election. Chamber officials said that vote expressed the wishes of local residents.

McMinn questioned whether Turner has a better way of promoting development than that offered by the board. "If he does, I'm sure the city would be happy to hear it," McMinn said.

The real estate agent, who has three children in grades ranging from elementary to senior high, said he was born and raised in Lubbock and went through Lubbock public schools. He called himself a "product" of the school system, saying, "If people like me aren't willing to serve on the school board, who will?"

Hunt said he favors a "well-rounded" school program, noting "It's the job of the Lubbock Independent School District...to turn out well-rounded students cited the LEAP and magnet programs as model projects.

Asked about the cost of providing such diversified programs, Hunt said, "I am a businessman and I know what it takes to run a business. You can only spend the money that you've got." He said the goal of board members is "to spend the money that's going to give the greatest benefit to the most people."

He said the "biggest waste of money is the busing of kids." Although he favors the neighborhood school concept, Hunt said he does not oppose the actual transporting of students but the use of tax money to fund the busing. "It can be

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Sheriff's deputies, armed with a bedpan, maintained a 24-hour vigil Tuesday in the cell of two robbery suspects, one of whom may have swallowed a $100,000 diamond ring.

Medical School Schedules Workshop

When a parkinsonism patient suffers from a headache, a trembling hand, or muscular tension, even the simplest of daily activities can become difficult.

"Activities of Daily Living" will be the topic of the fourth workshop in a series of informative programs for patients with Parkinson's disease, a neurological disorder. The programs are sponsored by the Tarbox Clinic for Parkinson's Disease at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC).

Parkinsonism patients and their friends will meet Thursday from 10:30-11:30 a.m. at TTUHSC, located on 4th Street near Indiana Avenue. Registration begins at 10 a.m. in Room 4A100. There will be no charge for participation.

Camie Ward, occupational therapist at the HSC Hospital, will share tips with the participants on how to improve dressing and eating skills.

When a headache causes difficulty in bending, tools such as "long reachers" and "long shoe horns" help to retrieve fallen stockings and step into shoes comfortably. These and other pieces of adaptive equipment will be demonstrated at the workshop.

The participants will be introduced to swiveling spoons and forks that simplify the eating process, regardless of a patient's degree of muscular tremor or rigidity. Participants will be taught how to gain access to all equipment seen at the workshop.

Ward will also demonstrate exercises that help improve patient's posture and manual coordination.

Friends and family members are welcome to accompany patients to the workshop or to come in place of patients who are unable to attend.

To obtain copies of notes from past Tarbox workshops, address your request c/o Rubynelle Powe, RN, BSN, head nurse, Tarbox Clinic for Parkinson's Disease, Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, Lubbock, Texas, 79430.

During the December 1979 workshop Paul G. Meyer, M.D., medical director of the Tarbox Clinic, addressed the audience's questions about parkinsonism.

Is the disease inherited? According to Meyer, "The answer appears to be 'no,' for the classic form of parkinsonism."

Neither is the disease contagious, said Meyer, for studies of spouses and twins indicate no rise in the incidence of parkinsonism among those people living with patients.

Drug prescription for parkinsonism is quite a delicate process. Meyer compared drug dosage to an intricate cooking exercise, in which you must carefully balance exact amounts of ingredients.

Parkinson's disease progresses at an unpredictable rate for each patient. As a result, the process must be closely monitored. A physician must have accurate reports from his patients in order to monitor their status effectively.

As yet, no medication provides a cure for parkinsonism. However, considerable progress has been made recently toward developing more effective medications.

Through the Parkinson's Disease Institute at Texas Tech, research, educational and clinical programs are conducted in Parkinson's disease and related neurological disorders. The Tarbox Clinic is the only program of its type in West Texas. The Tarbox Institute was named for Elmer Tarbox of Lubbock, former representative to the state Legislature and a victim of the disease.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

When the cornerstone of our civilization is laid, my personal entry for inclusion will be the 1040-A form put out by the Internal Revenue Service.

Not only is it the only piece of mail to be sent third class but without a stamp that gets to your home in mint condition — within three hours after it is sent — but it is written in Texese for an English-speaking population.

Every year someone says they are going to write it in English so that the average person can understand it and make out his own form, but this never happens.

I don't pretend to speak Texese, but I'll try to translate some of the simpler terms for you.

Spouse: This is a married person, for which you get one exemption, providing your spouse is neither blind nor over 65. If the spouse is either blind or over 65, take two exemptions. However, if the spouse is both blind and 65 or over, then you take three exemptions. This term has made "fooling around" very popular.

Gains: An obscene word you do not use in front of the children.

Gross income: A term borrowed from kids, previously used to describe their allowance.

Abandoned Spouses: Married persons who live apart can file separate returns. "Abandoned" does not include couples separated by NFL, AFL, NBA, ABA, NHL, Olympic Games, or Wide World of Sports.

Death: This is no excuse for not filing a 1040-A form. If it has not been filed, a personal representative or heir must do so. Remember, you don't get a refund unless you file.

"If Line 13 is larger than line 15, the difference will be refunded to you." This is the IRS's attempt at humor...like the old line where someone calls you and asks if the street light is burning and when you go out to check, they say, "Then try to blow it out." Actually, it's a funny line. I personally have never known anyone whose line 13 was larger than line 15.

Paid Preparer: This is someone who helps you prepare your return. Some of them will go with you to your IRS agent when you are summoned. None of them will remember who you are.

Privacy Act: This is a comforting act passed in 1974, assuring you that your return will be kept secret and shared only by the U.S. Treasury, the Dept. of Justice, all federal agencies, all states including the District of Columbia, the U.S. commonwealths and possessions and all foreign governments who have tax treaties with the U.S.

Have fun filing.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 14-year-old girl with an acne problem, mostly on my forehead. I know a girl who went to a doctor, and he gave her pills, and they helped her get rid of it. Now she doesn't have it. What are these pills? How do they help? Would they still help me if I inherited acne from one of my parents? I would really appreciate a straight answer. — S.H.

My dear, would I give you anything but a straight answer? Pills for acne usually contain one of the tetracycline antibiotics. If acne is only on the forehead, there are many cleansing soaps and drying agents that can be used. Your druggist can suggest one. Tetracycline is used only for severe cases.

Puberty aggravates acne, and in time the problem subsides for most. A new treatment uses a drug that is similar to vitamin A, and it shows promise for severe cases. Unfortunately it is not yet on the market. I will watch this to report to readers like yourself. Acne is not inherited.

Another thought. Acne can be aggravated by physical contact. For example, if your's is limited to your forehead, keep your hair back and away from the forehead. Many young girls do just the opposite for obvious disguise reasons. This worsens such acne. For a discussion of specific acne treatments, see the booklet, "Controlling Acne, Blackheads and Pimples." For a copy send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What do you recommend for infected pierced ears? I have had them for three years and I have tried gold earrings and a special disinfectant, too. Help. I'm 14 years old. — N.G.

This may not be what you want to hear, but I suggest you not use earrings at all. You are apparently one of the people who are sensitive to gold or to alloys used in jewelry. Secondly, you should have your ear examined. Continued tinkering may have produced a real infection, which disinfectants will not help.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

to return to his hand to draw the remaining trumps. The ace of hearts would be ruffed by East and the ace of spades was obviously in the West hand. East's weak jump overcall could hardly include the spade ace. South knew all of this before he played to trick three.

He ruffed a diamond trick three and ran five rounds of trumps. The position with declarer needing four of the last five tricks was:

North: S - J 5; H - A J 6; D - C -;
West: S - A 10; H - 10 9 8; D - C -;
East: S - Q 4; H - -; D - Q 10 9; C - -;
South: S - K 6; H - 7; D - J - C - K.

On the lead of the last trump West was squeezed. If he pitched a heart, dummy's three hearts would be winners so he had to blank his spade ace. South pitched the worthless heart six from the dummy and led a small spade from his hand, forcing West's ace. The spade king was now declarer's game-fulfilling trick.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am the grateful husband of a recovering alcoholic. Through Alcoholics Anonymous my wife has been sober for nearly five years. My problem is an unusual one. When she was drunk, she was home all the time. Now, I hardly see her anymore. When I come home from work she is getting ready to go to an AA meeting. She rarely returns before midnight. I'm sure she isn't cheating on me. I have been to several AA meetings with her, and although she gets a lot of attention from the men, she is not the type to go beyond friendly conversation.

Please don't suggest Al-Anon. I have been there and was told that I must accept the situation. The philosophy behind Al-Anon is that the spouse of an alcoholic has no right to tell the alcoholic what to do.

I would appreciate any suggestions you might have, Ann. — No Name, No Town

Dear N.N., N.T.: You say when your wife was drunk she was home all the time. Well, what kind of shape was she in? Would you trade those days for these?

I suggest you go back to Al-Anon and get with the program. You need to absorb what they have to offer.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son, an only child, will be getting married in a few months. He announced last week that he is changing his name, legally, to that of his fiancée.

Our name is not peculiar or difficult to pronounce. We are respected people in this community. No one ever has been in prison, nor has anyone received bad publicity. My husband and I are terribly hurt. We are also stunned. Is this a new fad, or what?

My in-laws and my husband's sisters have told us they will not come to the wedding if our son goes through with his plans. They claim if he changes his name he is no longer a member of our family.

I am caught in the middle and don't know what to do. Have you ever heard of such a thing? Please advise. — Sad And Humiliated in Minot, N.D.

Dear Sad: Yes, I have heard of such a thing — in instances where the bride's father has no sons and is willing to pay a price to have his name perpetuated.

I can understand your feelings of sadness and humiliation, but if the boy's mind is made up, there is nothing you can do. Even if other members of the family disown him, I hope you and your husband will not.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to the woman with the hearing problem was inadequate. You missed an opportunity to perform a service when you failed to mention the importance of seeking the advice of an otologist and, possibly, a licensed clinical audiologist. These persons are trained to help reduce the effects of hearing loss and to counsel family members about ways to improve communication.

If a reader needs information about hearing disorders, the American Speech and Hearing Assn., 10801 Rockville, Md. 20852, provides timely, professional advice. — C.B.S. Speech Pathologist And Audiologist, Concord, N.C.

Dear C.B.S.: Thanks for picking up the ball when I dropped it. I have checked out your recommendation, and it is excellent.

Dear Ann: Ten dollars is riding on your answer. Who should go up the stairs first, the man or woman? How about down? I say, "Ladies first — always." — Tokyo

Dear Tokyo: You're half right. The woman goes up first, but the man leads on the way down. If she should stumble going down, he can break her fall.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Now that winter weather is upon us, we need to think about feeding the birds. I'd like to share my ideas on this with you and your readers.

I save all of the trimmings from raw vegetables, whatever they might be, every day. I throw them into a big kettle, just as if I were making vegetable soup, and cook about 10 minutes — that's all that's needed to take away the rawness.

I place the vegetables in a pan in the yard. The birds love it, and need it.

Every day I have enough scraps to keep a large flock of birds from starving. Why throw out scraps with the garbage? No one benefits from that.

I have many different species of birds in my yard every day and it is such a joy to watch them.

'Nuf said — M.E. Taylor

Know what you mean about bird watching being a joy. We have a lot of birds outside the office that we feed. It seems that every day one more is added to our flock. They sure are entertaining to watch.

We checked our local Audubon Society and they told us you're on the right track with vegetable scraps but that you could add some fresh fruit to the diet of your fine feathered friends. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When I bake a layer cake, I want the rounded top upright, so here's what I do: After the cake cools a little, I lay a piece of nylon net over the cake and pan.

City Attorney Notes Defect In Housing Code

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
City inspectors may be doing little more than politely asking slumlords to repair or demolish substandard structures until a defect in the city's housing code can be corrected.

City attorney John Ross said he became aware Tuesday a portion of the housing code conflicts with a recently enacted state law.

The law, which became effective June 6, 1979, requires Texas cities to provide a public hearing for every owner who receives notice of a violation of the code.

Currently the owners are notified their property is in violation of the code and informed the property must either be demolished or repaired.

However, the property owners can appeal that decision to the Housing Standards Commission and receive a public hearing.

Zoning administrator Jerrel Northcutt predicted it will take at least two months to complete a rewrite of the housing code and have it adopted by the City Council.

However, Ross decided late Tuesday to ask the City Council to adopt an emergency amendment to the housing code, which could be in force in about 30 days.

Meanwhile, Northcutt said the inspectors "just won't be doing anything with the housing code."

Ross said the defect in the code doesn't invalidate all the housing standards and said its discovery "is not that big a break in the dam."

"This is not a major situation," he said. "We're going to move to get it corrected in a minuscule period of time."

The code still can be enforced, Ross said, adding "I don't think this keeps Jerrel from going out and telling a guy he's got a problem."

Ross said inspectors could point out violations and "suggest compliance."

As for those property owners notified of violations since the new state law became effective, Ross said he's not sure whether they have sufficient grounds to challenge their notices.

"We'll have to look at each case," he said.

Northcutt said it's not the city or property owners, but the occupants of substandard housing who will suffer because the housing code cannot be enforced.

"I know of some houses I'd like to write up right now that I'd hate to see somebody living in," he said.

However, the city must correct its code to comply with the current state law, and a new housing code "is not something you can just snap your fingers to get the council to accept," he said.

During the interim, Northcutt said, inspectors will continue to do everything short of notifying an owner for a violation so when the new code is adopted the city can enforce it immediately.

The housing inspectors can average notices against 35 structures each month, he said, but following the hiatus that number may jump to 75.

The housing code under consideration is the 1979 national uniform housing code which will be modified to conform with the state law.

However, the housing code refers to the 1979 building code, which is being studied by a city committee.

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2 — Month of birth. Find the corresponding numbers for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Budget's Printing Costs Said Higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposed 1981 fiscal budget that President Carter will present to Congress Monday will cost more to print than the 1980 budget document.
 It will be 640 pages long, up from 604 pages last year, and will cost $5, up from $4.25. About 30,000 copies of the document will be printed.
 Budget director James T. McIntyre, watching the proposed 1981 fiscal budget roll off the presses Tuesday, said that the budget will meet the nation's needs while contributing to the fight against inflation.

Defense Witness Discusses Shooting

By KAY BELL
 Avalanche-Journal Staff
 A defense witness in Lawrence V. McLin Jr.'s murder trial testified Tuesday afternoon that McLin fired a gun the night Billy Joe Scott was fatally wounded, but that he pointed the weapon in the air.

But on rigorous cross-examination, Eddie Walker told the 140th District Court jury he didn't actually see gunfire outside Chilly's club the early morning of Aug. 25, 1979.

Walker told prosecutor Travis Ware that he heard several shots that morning, although he saw only McLin wielding a pistol, and that he saw McLin's arm in an upraised position.

The 18-year-old witness also acknowledged that he did not wait for police to arrive after the gunfire erupted and never gave a statement to investigating detectives.

Walker's testimony ended the second day of the 32-year-old McLin's trial. McLin, of 2805 E. Bates St., is accused of shooting Scott outside of 1701 Parkway Drive pool hall last fall. Scott, 23, who was stationed with the Army at Fort Sill, Okla., died about 6 1/2 hours later at Health Sciences Center Hospital. He suffered a single .38-caliber bullet wound to the chest.

On direct questioning by defense attorney Mike Brown, Walker told the jury that McLin had been involved in a fight moments before the shooting. However, Walker said, he did not see who else was involved in the scuffle.

Walker said McLin grabbed a man from behind and then was thrown to the ground. McLin got up, Walker said, walked to his car parked in Chilly's parking lot and the fight appeared to be over.

Meanwhile, Walker told the three-man, nine-woman panel, Billy Scott was trying to get his younger brother, Lynn, into their car when gunfire erupted.

Walker said the shots sounded as if they were coming from different guns and were being fired from the building into the parking lot.

Walker told Brown he saw McLin get a gun from his car and fire it once into the air. But he hedged on that testimony under questioning by Ware, and said he did not see the shot, only the position of McLin's arm.

Walker also said the clean-shaven defendant did not have a beard the morning Scott was wounded. When Ware produced a photograph of a bearded McLin, taken the day after the incident and entered into trial evidence, and asked Walker, "Do you think he grew this beard overnight?" the witness laughed slightly and answered, "No, sir, I guess not."

Also testifying Tuesday afternoon was a Department of Public Safety ballistics expert, who said the bullet taken from Scott's body did not have enough firing grooves to determine if it was shot from the gun McLin gave police and said he had taken to the club the morning Scott was killed.

Tuesday morning, a third Lubbock teen-ager identified McLin as the man who fatally wounded Scott.

The 16-year-old girl, however, said McLin had attacked Scott's younger brother that morning. Earlier, two teen-agers said McLin jumped the shooting victim during the scuffle preceding the gunfire.

The O.L. Slaton Junior High student said that after McLin scuffled with 18-year-old Lynn Scott, he and another man ran to a car in the club's parking lot. Both men removed guns from the car, she said, but McLin fired first. After McLin fired five shots, one of them striking Scott, the other man fired his weapon, the ninth grade testified.

At least two more defense witnesses, including McLin, as well as several rebuttal witnesses called by the state, are expected to testify this morning before the case goes to the jury for consideration.

Testimony Heard In Utility Certification Case

A. J. Austin Bureau
 AUSTIN — The chairman of a citizens committee studying the electric utility system in Lubbock has told a Public Utility Commission hearing examiner that it supports the maintenance of competition between utility companies there.

Arnold Maeker, chairman of the committee and a Lubbock engineer, testified Tuesday that the citizens of Lubbock have benefited because of the competition between the electric utilities.

Maeker who testified in favor of an application by Lubbock Power & Light to be certified to serve a newly-annexed area in southwest Lubbock, said the system of competition has resulted in lower electric bills and gives the consumer a choice as to which electric company, LP&L or Southwestern Public Service Co., he wants to do business with.

"The committee decided following an eight-month study that the best interest of the citizens of Lubbock would be served by supporting the continued growth and health of both Southwestern and LP&L," Maeker said.

Attorneys for South Plains Electric Cooperative, which is certified to serve the recently-annexed area, have said dual certification in the area fort itself and LP&L would result in duplication of services.

Maeker said there is very little duplication between LP&L and Southwestern. Some duplication does exist in transformers and service lines, but not in transmission or feeder lines, he said.

"That part of the system that is duplicated is a very small fraction of the electric power for which the citizens pay," Maeker said. He added that the money saved by cooperation between the city and the city-owned LP&L makes up that difference.

Lubbock residents pay about $60 million each year in electric bills, Maeker said. About $6 million is taxes is saved the city and LP&L sharing costs for meter readers and other personnel and expenses.

Testimony in the certified case will continue today. LP&L is expected to present testimony from two economists and two engineers.

An LP&L spokesman said he does not expect LP&L to conclude its case until Thursday.

Metals Drop Curbs Mart

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market lapsed into a broad decline Tuesday as a bubble of speculation burst in the metals markets, sending gold and silver prices to a severe slide.

Gold's collapse from $835 an ounce in early dealings in Hong Kong to $848 at the end of the business day in New York left all the major precious-metals stocks with multi-point losses.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial dropped 6.57 to 868.21, its largest loss since it fell 1.07 on Jan. 2.

New York Stock Exchange volume reached 50.63 million shares, up from 48.64 million Monday.

The downdraft in gold drove the price of the metal down more than 18 percent in a single day's trading, reversing a runaway rise in recent weeks. Silver suffered a similar shakeout, tumbling into the mid $30s from well above $40 an ounce.

For purposes of comparison, an 18 percent decline in the Dow Jones industrial average at its present levels would mean a drop of more than 140 points.

Among the leading gold issues, ASA fell 3 1/4 to 463 1/8 as of the 4 p.m. close in New York; Homestake Mining was down 4 1/2 at 55 3/4; Dome Mines fell 3/8 to 54 1/2; and Handy & Harman tumbled 4 3/4 to 43 3/4.

New York (AP)—Tuesday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues at NYSE close. Prices and volume of common securities also traded on other markets.

Reese Commander Nominated To Rank Of Brigadier General

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A snowstorm grounded planes Tuesday at Reese Air Force Base, but its commander needed no jet to become airborne.

"I'm floating, simply floating," Col. Richard A. Ingram said shortly after word came of his nomination by President Carter to the rank of brigadier general.

Official notification came from Gen. Bennie L. Davis, commander of the Air Training Command. Confirmation of the promotion by the United States Senate is expected soon.

"The sad thing is, they never have a general here, and, if they do as they have in the past, I won't be here much longer."

Being wing commander of the 64th Flying Training Wing at Reese has been the "most favorite" assignment since the West Texas native joined the Air Force as a private in 1950.

"Wing commander at Reese is the top job anyone will ever have."

As important as leaving the job, Ingram added, is the thought of leaving the area and the people he has grown to love.

"It's exciting, and it's great working with the folks downtown. They have been good and gracious to me, to my family and to everybody in blue suits."

Reminiscing a moment, Ingram noted that his immediate goal in the Air Force had been to survive his four years and soon after, he started looking for stripes.

There have been a lot of "super" jobs for the McLean native who saw Lubbock first as a high school football player working a summer wheat harvest job to satisfy a coach's desire for specific muscle buildup.

The most satisfactory job along the way also came at Reese as commander of the 54th Flying Training Squadron.

"Succeeding in that job meant as much to me as any job, working with great guys and gals."

None of the jobs have been easy, but the Reese boss added that work wouldn't amount to much if it was easy.

"It's a demanding business, not for everybody. It is tough and the rewards are as big as the investment you have to make in it."

The latest in a long line of rewards came Tuesday with the star of another rank.

Ingram assumed command of Reese Feb. 24, 1979, coming from Randolph Air Force Base where he was director of information for the Air Training Command.

At ATC headquarters he operated the buffer zone between worldwide press demands and the training of the Iranian crown prince at Reese. During his first months at Reese, he supervised an accelerated program to put pilot's wings on the prince before the international situation could make it impossible.

Ingram came to Reese in August 1972, serving as 54th commander, base commander and deputy commander for operations.

He was responsible for the acquisition and installation of the Eclipse windmill at Reese to show student pilots from the nation and the world the heritage of the area. It was dedicated as the centerpiece of Founders Park, a tribute to Reese-community relations, during bicentennial ceremonies October 1976, a few weeks after Ingram left to assume command of Shemya

AFB, Alaska.

On Shemya, he was 70 miles from tomorrow, next door to Russia, on a treeless, tundra-covered island two miles wide by four miles long.

His duties included tracking space objects and providing a happy community life for 1,500 to 3,000 inhabitants closed in against the world long months of the year.

Other high spots of his 30-year career include duty as operations officer for the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations at ATC and assistant for colonel assignments for Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel at USAF headquarters in Washington, D.C.

After working up through enlisted ranks Ingram entered Officer Candidate School in 1958 and earned his Air Force wings at Vance AFB, Okla.

He logged 503 flying hours in 280 combat missions flying the A1E in Vietnam. He is a command pilot with 5,000 hours.

His decorations include the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit with oak leaf cluster, the Distinguished Flying Cross with two clusters, the Air Medal with 15 clusters, the Air Force Commendation Medal, Presidential Unit Citation, Vietnam Service Star, Korean Service Medal with star, Vietnam Service Medal with three battle stars, Republic of Vietnam Gallantry Cross with palm and Republic of Vietnam Campaign Medal.

He holds a bachelor's degree in economics from Park College in Missouri and a master's degree in psychology from Troy State University in Alabama. He is a graduate of the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va., and the Air War College at Maxwell AFB, Ala.

At Reese, the wing commander is responsible for the total training and support activities of more than 3,300 military and civilian personnel providing the Air Force with about 450 new pilots each year.

Ingram is married to the former Phyllis June Toyne of Glidden, Iowa. They have two daughters, Lori and Jorjan, and two sons, Scott and Tod.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. O.O. Ingram, live in Fritch.

Man With Pendant For Lawsuits Asked Why

MIAMI (AP) — George C. Matthews, who has a pendant for filing lawsuits against public officials, has been ordered to explain why he won't quit.

U.S. District Judge Sidney M. Aronovitz on Monday told the 60-year-old resident of Naples, Fla., to appear Feb. 1 and explain why he should not be cited for contempt.

Matthews, who says he has a home-study law degree from LaSalle University, he has filed more than 30 suits against public officials over the last decade.

ANTI-BREECHES
Trousers became popular in America after the War of 1812 as a reaction against the silk breeches-and-hose syndrome that smacked too much of things British. The Duke of Wellington actually helped popularize trousers in England by wearing them to state functions. Early trousers were simply something to protect the fancy breeches when riding — similar to chaps worn by cowboys out West.

Poll Showing Renewed Support For Expenditures On Defense

NEW YORK (AP) — Faced with American hostages in Iran and Soviet troops marching into Afghanistan, public support for spending more on U.S. defense and the military has jumped dramatically to the highest level in a decade, the Associated Press-NBC News Poll says.

The objective of more defense spending is to gain military superiority over the Soviet Union, the public says.

The flipside of the American opinion is fear, fear of war. Two out of every five Americans think a war involving the United States is very likely in the next three years — the highest level of fear found by the AP-NBC News polls in the past three years since the question was first asked.

The strong support for a bigger military budget is a historic change in American opinion. From the early 1970s and the Vietnam war until a month ago, there has been a consistent sentiment for cutting defense spending. That sentiment has now been decisively reversed.

Sixty-three percent of those questioned Thursday and Friday said they back increasing the U.S. defense budget. Twenty-one percent advocated keeping defense spending at its current level and only 8 percent called for a decrease. Another 8 percent of the 1,595 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone were not sure.

These findings show an acceleration of a trend that was first discovered a month ago.

In the AP-NBC News poll in mid-December — after the Iran crisis began but before the Russian intervention in Afghanistan — 51 percent backed higher defense spending; 31 percent called for no change; 9 percent supported a decrease and another 9 percent were not sure.

As recently as September 1979, sentiment was split between increasing the defense budget and keeping it at its current level. In that AP-NBC News poll, 38 percent favored an increase; 36 percent, no change; 16 percent, a decrease; and 10 percent were not sure.

In the December 1978 AP-NBC News poll, public sentiment was on the side of no change in military spending. Forty-seven percent wanted to maintain current spending levels; 24 percent called for an increase; 22 percent for a decrease; and 7 percent were not sure.

In 1971 — as the Vietnam War raged — a Louis Harris poll found 49 percent in favor of cutting military spending, 40 percent in favor of the status quo and 11 percent in favor of an increase.

By 1976, the Harris survey found 38 percent backing a decrease, 42 percent supporting no change and 20 percent calling for an increase.

The strong support for increased military spending has at least one clear objective for the public — military superiority over the Soviet Union.

Two-thirds — 67 percent — now say the United States should be militarily stronger than the Soviets. Twenty-nine percent favor parity with the U.S.S.R. Two percent said the United States should be weaker and another 2 percent were not sure.

This finding of support for superiority is 10 points higher than the April 1979 AP-NBC News poll, when 57 percent favored superiority and 38 percent backed parity.

In June 1978, the AP-NBC News poll found 52 percent supported superiority and 39 percent favored parity.

But what has not changed since mid-1978 is the public judgment of the relative military strengths of the two countries.

In the June 1978 survey, 17 percent said the United States is stronger; 37 percent said the U.S.S.R. is stronger; and 35 percent said the two countries' military might are about equal. Eleven percent were not sure.

In this latest AP-NBC News poll, 15 percent said the United States is stronger; 40 percent said the U.S.S.R. is stronger; and 38 percent saw little difference in military power. Seven percent were not sure.

Behind the support for more military spending is fear of war.

Thirty-nine percent of the public said a war involving the United States is "very likely" in the next three years. That is the highest level of fear since the question was first asked in 1977.

Forty-two percent said war is somewhat likely and 16 percent said it was not likely. Three percent were not sure.

As recently as April 1979, only 7 percent said war is very likely. Twenty-two percent said war is somewhat likely and 68 percent said war was not likely. The remainder were not sure.

As with every sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary.

Questions On Defense Poll Listed

Here are some of the questions asked on the AP-NBC News poll and the results:

1. Do you think that the defense budget for next year should be increased, decreased or should it be kept the same as it is now?
 - Increased — 63 percent
 - Decreased — 8 percent
 - Kept the same — 21 percent
 - Not sure — 8 percent
2. How likely is it that the United States will become involved in a war during the next three years? Would you say that it is very likely, somewhat likely or not likely at all?
 - Very likely — 39 percent
 - Somewhat likely — 42 percent
 - Not likely — 16 percent
 - Not sure — 3 percent
3. As of now, do you think the United States is stronger militarily than Russia, do you think Russia is stronger than the United States or are both countries about equal in military strength?
 - U.S. is stronger — 15 percent
 - U.S.S.R. is stronger — 40 percent
 - About equal — 38 percent
 - Not sure — 7 percent
4. Do you think the United States should be stronger militarily than Russia, about equal in military strength or not as strong?
 - U.S. should be stronger — 67 percent
 - U.S. should be weaker — 2 percent
 - Should be about equal — 9 percent
 - Not Sure — 2 percent from the opinions of all those with telephones across the country because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,595 interviews, the results should vary no more than three percentage points either way simply because of sample error. That is, if one could talk to all adults in the country with telephones, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the findings of this poll by more than three percentage points.

Of course, these results can differ from other polls for a number of other reasons. Differences in the exact wording of the questions, the exact dates the interviews were conducted and whether the interviews were conducted by telephone or in respondents' homes also could cause variations.

ANTI-MONOPOLY INVENTOR — Ralph Anspach, the economics professor who invented the game Anti-Monopoly, is the winner in the latest turn of the judicial wheel and vows the game will be back in production in a few days.

Anti-Monopoly Inventor Wins Ruling; Vows Game's Return

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The man who invented Anti-Monopoly, the parlor parody legally and literally crushed two years ago by the makers of Monopoly, is the winner in the latest turn of the judicial dice.

And Ralph Anspach vows the game will be back in production soon.

"We'll be in New York with Anti-Monopoly in time for the Toy Fair in February," said the bearded, 53-year-old economics professor.

To make sure Parker Brothers, the makers of Monopoly, know he is back, Anspach said he will dig up 40,000 Anti-Monopoly games from a dump near Mankato, Minn., today, General Mills, owner of Parker Brothers, buried them after a federal court here decided the game infringed on the Monopoly trademark.

The games — which Anspach was ordered to surrender after the ruling — have been moldering underground for some 2½ years, so Anspach does not expect to salvage much. He said the dig was "symbolic," adding that Parker Brothers would be billed $75,000 for the buried games.

Attorneys for Parker Brothers declined comment on the case.

The 1977 trademark decision and subsequent injunction against production of Anti-Monopoly was reversed last month by the 9th U.S. Court of Appeals, which ordered the suit back to federal court for a new ruling.

The appellate panel said the lower court had ignored a doctrine of law that says the trademark is lost and invalid if consumers use the term Monopoly to denote primarily the product rather than the producer.

The appellate court said the issue was whether Parker Brothers succeeded in efforts to keep the Monopoly name from falling into the public domain. The final determination will be made by U.S. District Judge Spencer Williams, whose decision was reversed.

A jubilant Anspach said that in his opinion, the appellate court all but ordered the lower court to find him the ultimate winner in the trademark battle, so he feels he is legally justified in resuming production of Anti-Monopoly.

"There is no more injunction," said Anspach. "We're going to dig up the 40,000 Anti-Monopoly games buried after the first decision."

In an interview in his rambling, game-filled home in the hills above the University of California, Anspach said he expected big things from his game. He said that 419,000 Anti-Monopoly sets were sold before production was ordered halted.

In Monopoly, an immensely popular board game that has sold 80 million sets worldwide since 1935, the point is to corner the market on properties by buying and selling real estate.

Anti-Monopoly parodies that game. Its players are "trustbusters" who win points by breaking up monopolies. Anspach credits his wife, Ruth, and two sons with helping him invent the game in 1971.

Anspach said he was no more eager today to sell out to Parker Brothers than he was some four years ago when, he said, they offered him $500,000 for his brainchild.

"Ethics and principle" are involved, he said firmly.

Anspach started marketing Anti-Monopoly in December 1973. When General Mills began talking about a lawsuit, Anspach said, he took the initiative and filed suit in San Francisco, charging Parker Brothers with monopolistic practices.

After a trial in which the Anti-Monopoly forces accused the Monopoly people of having stolen a game invented at least 20 years before, Williams found for the defendants. Anspach could no longer use the Anti-Monopoly tag, the judge said, because that was an infringement of the Monopoly trademark.

The reversal starts by agreeing with Anspach that "the game of 'Monopoly' was first played from 1920 to 1932 on various college campuses."

The record describes how Charles Darrow received a handmade board, rules and equipment to play the game. According to Anspach, Darrow received the game from friends Charles Todd and Ruth Raiford in the early 1930s.

Darrow started producing and selling commercial versions of the game and applied for a patent, which was issued in 1935. It was immediately assigned to Parker Brothers.

Final Funeral Set For Centenarian

BURLINGTON, Colo. (AP) — Nearly 30 years ago, Jim Gernhart staged his own "funeral" and got national publicity with his proclamation that he "wouldn't be caught dead in Burlington."

But he did die in Burlington on Sunday, at age 103. His last graveside funeral will be today in Goodland, Kan.

Twenty-nine years ago, the retired storekeeper-farmer staged his first funeral, a $15,000 bash that drew 1,200 people to the Burlington Armory.

It was generally considered the best of the 23 funerals Gernhart was to hold for himself before he died.

At the first, in 1951, townspeople complained that the notion was too irreverent. The school board turned down his request to use the school gym and the county tax assessor tried to levy a $3,150 assessment on the handsome copper casket Gernhart bought for himself.

"They got it in for me," said Gernhart at the time. "I am the first one who's held his funeral while he was alive."

He said he got the idea after attending his sister's funeral and seeing what he thought was poor attendance and what he called "money-hungry relatives."

The first funeral had unexpected repercussions. For one thing, Gernhart received scores of letters from all over the world, mostly from widows offering to ease his loneliness.

"I'd never trade my electric blanket for one of those widows," Gernhart once said. "The blanket keeps me warm, and I can turn it off."

Gernhart's stunt also got a spread for Burlington in Life magazine.

Gernhart will be buried in the same copper casket he bought for himself in 1951, with one minor alteration — there will be a new lining.

It seems that Gernhart wore out the original lining climbing in and out of the casket.

Something Not Making Sense?

Negative Brain Wave Likely

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Two neuroscientists at the University of California at San Diego say they have found a negative brain wave which a person emits when something doesn't make sense to him.

Drs. Steven A. Hillyard and Marta Kutas tested more than 100 people over 18 months and said the negative wave shows up only when a person does a mental "double take," as with an inappropriate or incongruous thought. It also appears when a sentence ends with a thought different from that with which it begins. Among examples given the students: "He took a sip from a waterfall." "I take coffee with cream and dog."

Hillyard and Kutas call their wave N400, for negative and because it peaks 400 milliseconds after stimulus. That sort of wave is different from the continuous rhythms of the brain as seen in electroencephalograms, Kutas said in an interview Tuesday.

When the experiments started, Kutas said they expected to see P300 waves, or positively charged sensory-evoked "potentials" that peak 300 milliseconds after stimulus. That is the familiar brain wave that typically follows unexpected or surprising stimuli.

The subjects were asked to press a button at the end of each sentence, depending on whether it made sense or not.

Hillyard said the N400 seems to reflect the "second look" given when someone tries to extract meaning from senseless sentences.

He said the negative wave "can tell us where in a sentence a person pauses to reflect and assimilate or consider its meaning."

Medical Team Separates

Girls Joined At Chest

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A medical team has successfully separated twin girls who had been joined from their lower chests to their abdomens, according to a spokesman at Children's Hospital.

The five-hour operation was performed Monday on Heather and Holly Bandy, daughters of Daniel and Penny Bandy of Columbus. The twins shared a single liver and diaphragm.

The twins were part of a set of triplets born to Mrs. Bandy on Aug. 29. The complicated surgical procedure was delayed 4½ months until the girls were strong enough to undergo the operation.

College Rolls To Decrease 5-15 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — College enrollment will shrink 5 to 15 percent during the next two decades, producing a "Golden Age" for students as colleges scramble to attract them and tailor courses to their tastes, the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education predicted Tuesday.

While faculty and administrators struggle to cope with the "demographic depression" of the youths of traditional college age, students "will seldom if ever have had it so good on campus," the council said. "The difficulties of others can only redound to their advantage. This may well become their Golden Age."

The council said it was "quite likely that the nation's 3,000 colleges and universities would suffer a downward drift in quality, balance, integrity, dynamism, diversity, private initiative and research capability."

But the panel said that was not inevitable and it discounted the fears of some educators that the 1980s and 1990s will be "a dark age" for higher education.

"Becoming somewhat smaller is, we believe, compatible with becoming somewhat better," said the council in its final report entitled "Three Thousand Futures: The Next Twenty Years in Higher Education."

"No demographic disease of epidemic proportions will sweep over all higher education during the next 20 years," said the report. The disease "will be selective: some institutions will die from it; nearly all will be affected by it...and all will need to take some precautions."

The council, chaired by Clark Kerr, is winding up its business after issuing more than 100 reports on higher education since 1967 under its aegis and through a predecessor group, the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education. Its work will be continued by a related group, the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Census Bureau figures show the number of 18-to-24-year-olds will fall 23 percent by 1997. But the council forecast that drop will be cushioned by increasing college enrollment of adults, women and minorities, and a lowering of the 40 percent college dropout rate.

It said college enrollment actually is likely to grow 10 percent in the Southwest and West and 5 percent in the South, while falling 10 percent in the East and Midwest.

Students will be "more nearly the center of attention on campus during the next 20 years than in the past 10," it said.

"They will be recruited more actively, admitted more readily, retained more assiduously, counseled more attentively, graded more conscientiously, financed more adequately, taught more conscientiously, placed in jobs more insistently, and the curriculum will be more tailored to their tastes."

By the year 2000, the council said, there will be more women than men, as many people over 21 as 21 and under, nearly as many part-time as full-time attendees and one-quarter of all students will be minorities.

The job crunch for college faculty members will continue for a decade or more until current tenured faculty reach retirement age, it said.

Superstition Said Problem For Chinese

PEKING (AP) — A man who thought his wife's mental illness resulted from evil spirits in the foundation of his house killed himself accidentally when he tried to drive them out with hand grenades, a letter to the People's Daily reported Tuesday.

A "witch" fatally strangled another mental disease sufferer in an effort to drive out a "water monkey" supposedly put in her stomach by evil spirits, said another letter in a half-page display denouncing superstition.

The paper's own commentary blamed the Communist Party's radicals for ruining efforts to propagate atheism. It said some ignorant people were left to believe in "witches, sorcerers and geomancers" who have been cheating them out of their money, or causing greater harm.

The hand grenade case involved a responsible member of a commune construction team in Shantung province, told by a "witch" that his foundation was haunted.

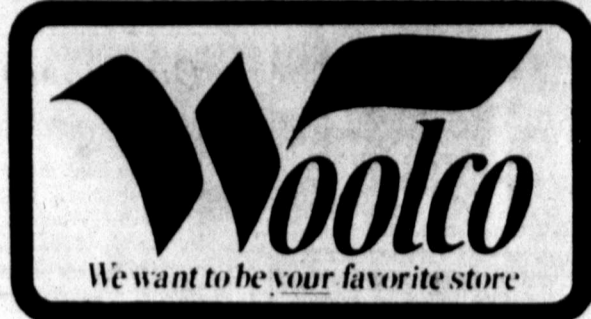

When he found a new foundation and built a five-room house on it, the firecrackers at a sacrifice offering ceremony for the new house failed to go off because of dampness, the letter said.

Taking that as a bad omen, he took three grenades from a construction team and threw them in quick succession, the letter said. It said the third went off too close to him.

Another letter said Wu Cunling, whom it described as a "witch" from a commune in Kiangsu province, had been arrested after the death of Wang Su-lin last Nov. 30.

When Miss Wang, short of breath from being held down and gagged, struggled desperately, Miss Wu ordered those holding her: "Don't let her toss. The water monkey is about to come out," the account said.

NO SNOW CURTAILS JOBS
CADILLAC, Mich. (AP) — A shortage of snow has resulted in the layoffs of four of Cadillac's 14 road crew workers until things whiten up. City engineer Michael Wiesner said Monday the 10 who will remain on the job will patch streets and cut trees. The layoffs were scheduled to take place two weeks ago, but a heavy snowfall gave the workers more time on the job.

New Governor Pledging To Unite People

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — William Forrest Winter, attorney, intellectual and governmental expert, became Mississippi's 58th governor on Tuesday with a pledge to unite the people in "a commitment to greatness."

The 56-year-old Democrat, an amateur historian who twice lost gubernatorial bids after foes labeled him a liberal, looked both backward and forward as he became the first governor since 1900 to take office at the Old Capitol.

After sketching the state's history through hard periods following the Civil War, Winter pledged:

"There will be no place in this administration for any person who is not completely dedicated to serving the public interest. There will be no place in this administration for any person who is not willing to work. There will be no place in this administration for any person who is not utterly and impeccably trustworthy."

He also pledged to avoid "bias or prejudice based on sectionalism or class or race or religion or anything else."

Winter, a Presbyterian, had included blacks in his inauguration activities. He cut across the lines of religion with an ecumenical service at Galloway Memorial United Methodist Church, packed despite rain that forced him to cancel his walk from the Governor's Mansion to the church.

Leaving details of his program to a future appearance before the Legislature, Winter used bold strokes to picture his approach to the office he sought unsuccessfully in 1967 and 1975.

"It will be my purpose to work closely with you, to advise with you on a day-to-day basis and contribute as much as I can to a harmonious and effective relationship between us," he said, without mentioning the frictions that had surfaced between his predecessor, Gov. Cliff Finch, and lawmakers.

He asked all citizens "to join with me on this day in an undertaking worthy of our traditions to re-establish and to reassert the principles not only on which political institutions must rest but on which human character and human life itself must depend."

Winter defeated Republican businessman Gil Carmichael in the November general election. Finch was barred by the state constitution from seeking a second consecutive four-year term.

Accurate Clock Developed At John Hopkins

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — A clock that can measure time to a trillionth of a second and remain accurate to a millionth of a second over three years has been developed by scientists here, it was announced Tuesday.

The clock takes the form of a hydrogen maser, a device that measures time from energy emitted by stimulated hydrogen atoms.

It was developed by researchers at the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory for use in field support experiments for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Space Flight Center, the laboratory said.

Time accuracies in trillionths of a second are considered extremely helpful in deep-space navigation, precision measurements over thousands of miles and developing laboratory instruments.

Maser is an acronym for Microwave Amplification by Stimulated Electromagnetic Radiation, according to Lauren J. Rueger, who headed the engineering team which came up with the clock.

Used as a clock, the maser is triggered by a radio signal which excites hydrogen gas in a glass bottle, Rueger said. The gas molecules are broken down into atoms and beamed into a Teflon-coated quartz jar inside a resonant cavity, he continued.

The atoms rebound freely from the Teflon surface and release excess energy at a constant rate, setting up a very stable, synchronized tone which can be used to run a counter, time standard or atomic clock, Rueger explained.

"The hydrogen maser is so accurate it can be used to measure the performance of many other types of precision oscillators and atomic clocks," he said. "As a matter of fact, two hydrogen masers put side by side would not differ by more than one millionth of a second in three years."

The clock's accuracy to a trillionth of a second over a 1,000-second period "opens new applications for time standard use and testing both in development laboratories and in remote field operations," he added.

Pope's Celibacy Stand Supported

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Two Dutch bishops attending a special synod said Tuesday that the Dutch church hierarchy fully supported Pope John Paul II's stand on priestly celibacy.

Bishop Hubertus Ernst of Brno and Bishop Johannes B. Moeller of Groningen, both considered progressive members of the Dutch episcopate, appeared at the first news conference since the synod opened last week.

"After the clear stand of Pope John Paul II on priestly celibacy, Bishop Moeller said, "all Dutch bishops are fully behind the decision of the Holy Father."

The two prelates said the pope has been attending the synod daily but has not participated personally in the debates. "He eagerly listens to the speakers and takes notes of what is being said," Bishop Ernst said.

Administration Says Russians To Suffer More Than Farmers

By JAMES RUBIN
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration on Tuesday defended its partial embargo of grain to the Soviet Union, contending the Russians would suffer more from the action than American farmers.

President Carter said the embargo will cause "a significant reduction in USSR meat production," and Commerce Secretary Philip M. Klutznick said the government would take "appropriate measures" against nations that try to sell extra grain to the Soviets.

"The restrictions can reasonably be expected to bring home to the Soviet leaders that they cannot act as they have in Afghanistan without paying a significant price," Carter said in a report to Congress.

"He said the embargo of 17 million metric tons of wheat and corn would bring about 'a major reduction in the availability of livestock feed' in the USSR and that this in turn would lead to the cut in Soviet meat supplies.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, testifying before the Senate Agriculture Committee, predicted the Russians would experience shortages of chicken by the spring and pork by the summer.

He also said that the cost to Americans would be less than $14 per person over a two-year period to pay for government programs that are designed to save farmers from hardship.

Klutznick made his statements before a Senate subcommittee hearing in which chairman Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., attacked the grain embargo as hastily imposed. Using Klutznick's own description of the situation, he said "it is extremely complex, perhaps more so than some people in this administration realized."

Stevenson said the only way to stop increased sales to the Soviets would be additional embargoes against nations that stepped up trade with the USSR. He suggested that would lead to further dislocation in the American economy.

Klutznick maintained that with even without full cooperation of other nations, the Russians will feel the pinch because no one else can make up for the lost U.S. shipments.

"We do not expect to be able to prevent all transshipment of agricultural supplies through other countries" to the USSR, Klutznick said.

"However," he added, "we will be watching exports to and from other countries very closely to ensure that they are commensurate in volume with past shipments.

"If we detect any circumvention," he said, "we will take appropriate measures, including enforcement actions under the Export Administration Act."

He declined to provide specifics about enforcement actions but said: "Our ingenuity hasn't been exhausted. We're studying it intelligently."

In his report, Carter said negotiations seeking allied support for the grain embargo "have been fruitful."

Klutznick also said the administration will take action against countries that step up high-technology exports to the Soviets but is planning to remove restrictions on some such products that were placed under the administration's embargo. He didn't name the products.

The administration received backing from Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who noted President Carter's 2-1 defeat of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., in Monday's Democratic Party caucus in the major farm state of Iowa.

"The president won a smashing victory, even bigger than expected," he said to Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., who testified against the embargo.

"Farmers tend to rally around the president in an international crisis," McGovern said in an effort to explain Carter's victory.

McGovern said, "The U.S. domestic blow to the agricultural community can reasonably be concluded to be greater than the one we are delivering" to the Soviet Union.

But Dale E. Hathaway, undersecretary of agriculture, said the prices of wheat and corn have held up well despite the embargo.

"We are convinced that they will return to levels at least as high as they would have been had we not taken the suspension action," he said. "We have pulled out all the stops to make sure that the suspension does not alter supply-demand fundamentals."

Carter announced on Jan. 4 the embargo of 17 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat that the Soviets were to get this year. But he allowed a shipment of 8 million tons under a 1975 agreement.

Congress has 30 days to exercise a veto over presidential export controls. But there was practically no mention of that idea before Stevenson's subcommittee. Critics of the embargo said they wanted to make sure instead that farmers don't suffer and the impact on the Russians is not wiped out by added exports from other nations.

The administration has already taken steps to ease the impact on farmers. The president last weekend ordered the Agriculture Department to buy grain that dockworkers are refusing to load for ships bound for the Soviet Union.

It is expected to cost taxpayers more than $3 billion to buy up the grain intended for the Soviet Union and hold it in reserve and take other steps to protect the farmers.

Undersecretary of Agriculture Hathaway said that increased sales to Eastern Europe, China and developing countries could make up for the drop in sales to the Russians.

He also said the impact in the Soviet Union will be "sharply reduced the availability" of grain for livestock feed this year. "Soviet meat production in 1980 could be down significantly from 1979 output," Hathaway said.

Hathaway emphasized that despite the embargo the United States expects fiscal 1980 to set new records for American agricultural exports, including wheat and other grains.

He said that the Agriculture Department is now projecting export tonnage to move up from 137.5 million metric tons this past year to 146 million tons "and perhaps higher as other countries move to buy the grain that is now available."

Values also will be higher, Hathaway said, despite impressions to the contrary which he said are being voiced by critics of the embargo.

Meats Production Increase Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department predicts that production of poultry and red meat will be up 3 to 5 percent in the first half of this year.

The leader will be pork production with a large increase anticipated, officials said.

Beef prices, as usual, will continue to climb, according to the experts, but they predicted pork and poultry prices well below last year's levels.

Beef production will be down 2 to 4 percent, according to the department.

But broiler production is likely to be up 2 to 4 percent, and turkey production is expected to jump as much as 20 to 25 percent.

FIRST RELIEF

The first practical air conditioner to control temperature and humidity was installed in a Brooklyn printing plant in 1902. Air conditioners are now used in hen houses to boost egg production; barns where hogs fatten faster and cows give more milk; and sugar refineries to keep granules from lumping together.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

PARTICULAR ATTENTION WILL BE PAID TO congested regions when the U.S. Department of Agriculture begins determining from which country elevators it will accept corn bids in an effort to alleviate overcrowding in the U.S. grain marketing system.

Although a final decision has not been made, it is more than likely that the USDA will offer to purchase corn from country elevators rather than from individual farmers, said Howard Hjort, the department's chief economist.

"We will store the grain we purchase at a point as close as possible to where the grain was purchased to prevent storage and transportation congestion," he said.

If the USDA buys grain from an elevator where no transactions are taking place at the posted price, he said, the department will base the purchase price on that of a nearby market where transactions are occurring.

The USDA will not take grain at a distressed price that results because no grain is changing hands at a particular elevator, he said.

LOCAL ELEVATORS SHOULD RECEIVE purchase offers from the government's Commodity Credit Corp. by the end of this week, Hjort said, but the CCC probably will not be able to act on these bids until Feb. 8.

Hjort said the CCC would base its purchase price for grain from local elevators on the price at which transactions were prevailing in the local market on the day the bids were received.

If the International Longshoremen's Association had yielded to the administration's request to load the remainder of the 8 million metric tons of grain still intended for shipment to the U.S.S.R., he said, the problem of port congestion would have been largely eliminated by the end of February.

This would have allowed the USDA to have alleviated some of the market congestion problem through contract assumption agreements with exporters for grain not already at export locations.

Because of the ILA's refusal to load Soviet-bound ships, Hjort said, an estimated 2.5 million metric tons of U.S. grain still owed the U.S.S.R. under the fourth year of the grains supply agreement

Mexican Official Meets With Governor Clements

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements welcomed Gov. Alfonso Martinez Dominguez of Nuevo Leon, Mexico, on Tuesday, saying he hoped the meeting would show Washington how to treat foreign neighbors as equals.

Martinez Dominguez responded by stating he would never forget that Clements had stood by Mexico during the outcry over the Mexican oil spill that flowed onto Texas beaches.

Clements proclaimed Tuesday as "Texas-Nuevo Leon Friendship Day," and Martinez Dominguez said he would promote friendship between the two states every day of the year.

A 19-gun salute and standing ovation from some 500 spectators greeted the arrival of Martinez Dominguez in the Senate chamber. It was the first state visit of a Nuevo Leon governor to Texas.

Young children waved small Mexican flags from the balcony, and the Mexican governor waved back.

Onlookers included Austin Mayor Carole McClellan, President Peter Flawn of the University of Texas at Austin and several legislators.

The two governors toured the Capitol: Lyndon B. Johnson Library at UT-Austin with Lady Bird Johnson; and the Lorenzo de Zavala State Archives and Library Building, which is named for a signer of the Texas Declaration of Independence from Mexico in 1836.

They scheduled a private one-hour meeting and dined on the UT campus. "I am hopeful that these meetings and discussions between the people of Texas and the people of Mexico will serve as an example to our leadership in Washington of the need and benefits of dealing with our neighbors in a setting of respect and equality," said Clements in a 14-minute speech that was translated into Spanish.

"Our two great nations have shared a border for many years, but that is no longer enough in this turbulent world of ours," said Clements. "We must also share a respect for each other as equals and we must work to strengthen each other and to strengthen our bonds, for such bonds will serve both nations well and provide both with a brighter future."

In a speech that was translated into English, Martinez Dominguez said Clements' August visit to Nuevo Leon was of "great importance" in developing the "cordial spirit" and "solid foundation" between Texas and Nuevo Leon.

Martinez Dominguez said Mexico "has recovered from the economic crisis we went through some years ago" and will try to double its industrial capacity within the next decade. Nuevo Leon will reach that goal within six years, he said.

The Mexican governor said he would "never forget" that when "many voices condemned our country" because of the Bay of Campeche oil spill "the voice of Governor Clements arose and was heard and stated his friendship."

He invited Clements to visit Nuevo Leon again in 1980.

Soviets Draw Worldwide Condemnation For Exile

By The Associated Press
The Soviet Union drew worldwide condemnation Tuesday for stripping dissident leader and Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei D. Sakharov of his state awards and sending him into internal exile. Some observers expressed belief the action reflects a tougher climate against dissidents and a power strife within the Kremlin.

Per Waestberg, chairman of the international PEN club said in a radio interview in Stockholm. "Sakharov's line of worldwide cooperation and understanding has lost its supporters in the Kremlin. Sakharov has hitherto been protected from arrest, but not from harassments, because of his very strong support among Russian scientists."

Waestberg, who visited Sakharov in his home last year, said the latest move against him "reflects a generally hardening attitude in the Soviet leadership."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Sakharov's well being is of "grave concern" to the United States. Asked whether the administration believes the Soviet action against Sakharov is linked to the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, the spokesman said he did not know.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., a staunch human rights advocate, said, "Andrei Sakharov is one of this century's most courageous champions of individual freedom, decency and the human values. The Kremlin's attempts to dishonor and incarcerate Sakharov will outrage freedom-loving peoples throughout the world. All who cherish basic human rights must now speak out and focus world attention on his plight."

The International League for Human Rights said it had cabled Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev to express grave concern and demanded his immediate release.

The league, with headquarters in New York, said in a statement. "In the last decade Mr. Sakharov has become a symbol of the struggle for human rights in the Soviet Union. His arrest today constitutes a stark denial of the right of free expression in the Soviet Union as guaranteed by international law."

The International League for Human Rights has 40 affiliates in 30 countries, including the Moscow Human Rights Committee of which Sakharov is chairman. Sakharov is an honorary vice president of the league and a member of its board of directors.

Russian Premier's Ally Said Relieved Of Duties

MOSCOW (AP) — Vladimir A. Kirillin, chairman of the powerful state Committee of Science and Technology and a political ally of ailing Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, was relieved of his duties "at his request," the official Tass news agency reported Tuesday.

Western diplomats said, however, that they believe Kirillin, who is 67, was stripped of his title because his committee had not been quick enough to plug new technology into the Soviet industrial and scientific machinery.

At the November meeting of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee, President Leonid I. Brezhnev took the unusual step of publicly naming government ministers whose organizations had failed to meet the goals set down by the ruling Politburo.

Kirillin was not named, but the science and technology committee was. Diplomats put that fact together with a newspaper article Kirillin wrote last Sept. 15 for their speculation he was fired. In the account in the newspaper Socialist Industry, Kirillin was critical of the work of his organization.

There was no official Soviet explanation for Kirillin's departure from power. He is most closely allied with Kosygin, who dropped from public view four months ago and reportedly has been severely ill.

Kosygin's son-in-law, Dzermen M. Gvishiani, works at the committee as Kirillin's deputy. Western diplomats directors. The league urged its affiliates around the world to protest.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons that her Conservative Party government was considering a protest to the Soviet Union.

British Communist Party spokesman Ian MacKay said "we are opposed to such methods of dealing with political disagreement."

Zhores Medvedev, a Soviet biochemist and exiled dissident, said he thought Sakharov's arrest was inevitable. He said now that the Soviet Union is under worldwide criticism for Afghanistan, its leaders seem to be taking the attitude that things can hardly get worse, and the Soviet secret police is taking the opportunity to crack down on all dissidents.

France's Socialist Party issued a statement calling Sakharov "the best-known representative of those in the U.S.S.R. struggling for freedom of opinion and expression." In taking action against him, the statement said, "the Soviet leadership is showing that 62 years after the October Revolution, in a country that publicly advocates socialism, they have not managed to accept the expression of opinions and different expressions, based on a real democratic policy which for us is the fundamental element of what socialism really is."

Danish Foreign Minister Kjeld Olesen said he was "dismayed" by the Soviet treatment of Sakharov. In an interview with the Danish radio, the Social Democratic minister said he could not tell what the Soviet Union was doing, but said there appeared to be so many pieces fitting into a major pattern. He said he was not just referring to the military intervention in Afghanistan, he said there were other aspects affecting Nordic integrity.

Lorenzo Natali, vice-president of the European Common Market Commission, strongly condemned the Soviet moves against Sakharov. Addressing the political committee of the European Parliament in Brussels, Belgium, Natali expressed on behalf of the European Commission its solidarity "for this defender of individual freedoms."

Giovanni Spadolini, secretary of Italy's moderate Republican Party, said, "As Democrats and free men we express our immediate and total condemnation for the intolerance that strikes one of the leading voices of culture and freedom in the Soviet Union."

Kirillin's chairmanship of the science and technology committee made him responsible for decisions that affected a number of key areas of the Soviet economy.

The economy has been lagging and many observers suggest the sluggish industrial sector was faltering for the lack of technical innovations.

Kirillin was directly responsible for overseeing and coordinating scientific research and approving budgets for scientific projects.

The committee also was in charge of assessing the technical level of Soviet products and the production process.

Brezhnev's criticism of the industrial sector at the November Central Committee meeting centered on inefficient use of Soviet resources. The aging Soviet leader said, for instance, that the economy had gone to great lengths to complete a fertilizer production plant but that the state output of fertilizer was still below plan.

"Now it turns out," Brezhnev said, "that there aren't enough raw materials and natural gas (for fertilizer production). What were people thinking about beforehand? Why did they give out money to build the factories if they weren't sure they would be able to function."

HEARTLINE: My father passed away last September. It took us over two months to gather up important papers and documents. Many, we still have not found.

We know there was a particular insurance policy, but we cannot find it and Mother does not remember the name of the company. We can't find the latest will that he was supposed to have drawn up.

Custody papers which gave my father custody of my nephew are also missing and now my mother is worried sick because my good-for-nothing sister is trying to get custody of my nephew again, because he inherited a great deal of money and property from my father.

I read your column regularly and I thought it might be a good idea for you to alert others to this potential problem. — T.R.

ANSWER: The need for people to organize important documents and inform their families where such documents are kept cannot be over-emphasized.

Safeguarding discharge papers, marriage certificates, or child custody evidence from fire, theft or loss could be one of the most important legacies a person can leave his or her survivors.

Other documents which should be protected and filed where family members can easily locate them are government and commercial life insurance policies, will, deeds, titles, contracts, governmental papers and numbers, such as Social Security and V.A. numbers, naturalization papers, birth certificates, and any other papers or documents that you deem important to your family.

It is also wise to sit down and explain to your family any benefits that will be entitled to upon your death. A few minutes spent organizing documents and informing your family can do much to avoid anguish during times of emotional stress.

HEARTLINE: I am an 18 year old high school student doing a report on aging in our country. I have gathered a lot of material from the library, but my mother and grandmother suggested that I write to Heartline.

One of my assignments is to obtain different conceptions of today's elderly people. I was surprised to find so many conceptions of our elderly from most of the people I have interviewed. Can you tell me in two paragraphs or less what your conception of our elderly is? — H.C.

ANSWER: Elderly Americans are basically active, healthy and experienced people who are capable of self-determination and continued valuable contribution to society.

The major problems which older people share are caused not by advancing age, but by society's false images and stereotypes of aging and the resulting policies and programs which grow out of and consequently perpetuate these stereotypes.

Latest Government Study Unsupportive Of Saccharin Ban

NEW YORK (UPI) — The latest government cancer Saccharin study does not support a ban on the artificial sweetener, the American Council on Science and Health said Tuesday.

The study, in fact, makes saccharin look good, said Council scientists challenging the Food and Drug Administration-National Cancer Institute report issued late in December.

"If anything, the latest FDA report offers considerable assurance of the safety of saccharin," said Dr. Elizabeth M. Whelan, head of the scientific consumer advocacy group.

The FDA-NCI report claimed a link between heavy saccharin use and bladder cancer, especially among smokers.

"We want to set the record straight," Dr. Whelan said as she called to order a panel of scientists assembled to refute the government report.

"Our review of the subject of saccharin and cancer leads us to conclude that science has not been able to demonstrate the sweeteners are a human health hazard."

Dr. Whelan, an epidemiologist and research associate at Harvard School of Public Health, and the others made these points:

"The epidemiological study of bladder cancer found no increase in cancer risks among the general population of artificial sweetener users.

"The results about increased risk of bladder cancer among heavy users of sweeteners who smoke — were based on interviews with more than 3,000 bladder cancer patients and almost 6,000 persons without cancer. However, these results were based on relatively few individuals and may occur simply by chance.

Dr. Peter Greenwald, director of the division of epidemiology for the New York State Department of Health, said:

"The usual lag period in cancer induction raises the most bothersome aspect of interpretation. Known occupational carcinogens established as strong carcinogens for the bladder, require 13 to 30 years or more after exposure before the cancer becomes manifest.

"Thus, it is hard to understand how a supposedly weak carcinogen such as saccharin could increase bladder cancer incidence in less than five years for some people as suggested by the study."

Congressional Leaders Predict Carter Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will boost military spending, approve aid for Pakistan and join President Carter's call for a Moscow Olympics boycott, congressional leaders predicted Tuesday.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan has put Congress in a defense mood that has brought talk of renewing the draft.

"I have a feeling this will be a security-minded Congress," Byrd told reporters as the 96th Congress convened its second session.

"I think Afghanistan will push other items onto the back burner," he said. Carter told Congress Monday he will request $158 billion for defense, a 5 percent increase, saying "we must pay whatever the price to remain the strongest nation on earth."

Byrd and O'Neill agreed Congress is likely to approve some increase in defense spending, but would not say how much.

They also predicted Congress will approve resolutions backing Carter's vow to boycott the Moscow Olympic Summer Games if the Soviets do not withdraw troops from Afghanistan next month.

Byrd also said he doubts the Senate will act this year on ratifying the new U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. Carter had asked the Senate to delay action because of the Soviet military move into Afghanistan.

However, the Senate tabled 50 to 36 an effort by Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., to amend a procedural motion to formally take the treaty off the Senate calendar.

"Had it been a substantive vote on the treaty, the treaty would have been defeated," Tower told reporters later.

Across the Capitol, O'Neill told reporters he believes there is a growing mood in the country that Congress should strengthen defenses by restoring a peacetime draft.

O'Neill, D-Mass., said he would support restoring the draft if President Carter and his military advisers "think we need it."

"There's a mood out there that we've got to be prepared for conventional skirmishes," he said. "There is a realization that we can't stop World War III on the basis of what we have now."

Byrd, D-W.Va., said he thinks there will be "increased discussion" of restoring the draft. He said he personally favors a return to registering young people in case the draft itself is restored in some emergency.

Alaska Offshore Drilling Leases Blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Tuesday blocked the government from accepting $491 million in bids for oil and gas offshore drilling leases in coastal waters near the North Slope of Alaska.

The government could have accepted the bids today, giving companies the right to bring drilling rigs to the icy Beaufort Sea.

But U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. said he was blocking the bids because the government isn't following all the provisions of two important environmental laws.

Justice Department lawyer Margaret Strand said, "I expect we'll file for a stay" of Robinson's order and ask the U.S. Court of Appeals to overturn the decision.

The tracts involved are three to five miles offshore and lie several miles east of Prudhoe Bay, where oil drilling has been carried out for several years. The onshore drilling is not involved in the suit.

Nine environmental groups and two Eskimo villages on the North Slope claim the government violated provisions of the Endangered Species Act and the National Environmental Policy Act. Robinson agreed that provisions of both laws were not followed by the Interior Department.

Astronomer Recalls Planet Pluto On Anniversary Of Discovery

CHICAGO (AP) — Fifty years ago, a 24-year-old former wheat farmer peered far out into the solar system and electrified the science world by discovering a new planet.

Clyde Tombaugh named his discovery Pluto, after the god of the underworld.

"It was a big break for me," he recalled. "At the time I had no college education, only high school."

Tombaugh had studied the stars since he was 12, growing up in rural Illinois and later Kansas. When times got tough on the farm, he took a job at the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz. It was there, early in 1930, that Tombaugh made photographic plates of the sky that confirmed Pluto's existence. It was the discovery of a lifetime for Tombaugh and launched him on a long and productive career in astronomy.

Tombaugh, 74, now is professor emeritus of astronomy at New Mexico State University. He spoke with reporters in Chicago on Monday to mark the golden anniversary of his discovery.

Even now, little has been learned about tiny Pluto. Located some 2.7 billion miles from the sun, it meanders the frigid frontier of the solar system, taking 247 Earth years to complete one orbit of the sun. It is the ninth and outermost planet. But its lopsided orbit has temporarily swung it closer to the sun than Neptune.

In 1978, discovery of a moon of Pluto helped astronomers calculate that the planet has a mass of about one-fifth that of Earth's moon and a density comparable to water, leading many astronomers to suggest that Pluto may resemble a giant methane snowball.

The search for Pluto was started early in the 20th century by Dr. Percival Lowell, an American astronomer who had calculated the path of the planet Neptune. But he found slight irregularities in the predicted orbit of Neptune — perturbations that Lowell decided could only be caused by the gravitational pull of an undiscovered planet.

Lowell started work at the Flagstaff observatory in 1906 to find his "Planet X" by photographing and comparing identical sky sections.

The theory behind his experiment was simple. A star appears relatively fixed in the night sky. But in comparison, a planet — its very name means "wanderer" — rushes along its orbital path, shifting drastically against the frozen backdrop of stars.

Lowell looked for the planet from 1905 until his death in 1916.

The search resumed in 1929, this time using two new pieces of equipment — a 13-inch photographic telescope, and a blink comparator — a device that rapidly interchanged the photographs to be compared. If a heavenly body had moved appreciably, its image would appear and disappear as the photographs were rapidly switched.

Sitting for hours at a time on a mountaintop in a dark dome peering into the sky was tedious, painstaking work, too boring for someone with a doctor's degree in astronomy. So, directors of the observatory sought a highly skilled amateur to make the plates. They chose Tombaugh.

Tombaugh said he had no idea when he took the job that he would end up exploring the distant fringes of the solar system.

"It didn't matter what they wanted me to do. Just anything to get off the farm. We got hauled out that year and were absolutely broke. When I got on that train to go to Flagstaff, I didn't have enough money for the return fare."

The original plan called for Tombaugh to make and develop the plates. An experienced astronomer would then perform the tedious task of comparing them using the comparator.

Soon, Tombaugh proved to be such a capable astronomer that he was asked to compare the plates as well. "My heart sank to my knees," Tombaugh said. Since he had made the plates, Tombaugh knew what a "starry mess" was pictured on them. Each image would have to be carefully examined. "I wasn't a bit happy," Tombaugh said of the task which made him famous.

In February 1930, after examining some 400,000 stars of the constellations of Taurus and the western portion of Gemini, Tombaugh was examining plates photographed in late January of the eastern part of the constellation. He had completed about two-thirds of the photographic field.

Suddenly, there it was. A dim object was popping in and out of the background field of stars.

"That's it!" Tombaugh remembers exclaiming. "Everything was confirmed." The observatory director held off telling the world until further tests confirmed the discovery.

Then on March 13, 1930, the 75th anniversary of Percival Lowell's birth, the world finally learned that Tombaugh had found the mystery planet that Lowell had predicted some 30 years before.

Buying new locomotives is just a part of our 1980 capital improvement program. Altogether we are spending $371 million. In addition to these new engines, our program includes adding 2,075 new freight cars, rebuilding 85 locomotives and 638 freight cars, modifying an additional 217 cars and adding 448 miles of new and reconditioned welded rail.

We have spent $1.5 billion in the past ten years on physical improvements. This is in addition to the $4.25 billion spent in the same period for the routine maintenance of our equipment and roadway. Tatum Disgraces The Game

PICTURE THIS TELEVISION COMMERCIAL.

Outspoken (and vastly overrated) Oakland Raiders defensive back Jack Tatum limps slowly toward the dressing room, obviously in pain. A football game is underway in the background. You can hear the crowd cheering wildly.

Enter a young boy at the end of the dressing room tunnel with a bottle of one of America's favorite soft drinks in his one hand. He hurries to catch up to his injured hero.

"Mr. Tatum. You want my soda pop?"

"No, kid. Get outta here."

"Really, Mr. Tatum, you can have it."

"What did I stutter or something? I said get the heck out of here or I'll break your legs!"

"You sure you don't want it?"

Tatum, losing his patience and temper, charges his admirer. He grabs the bottle of cola, takes a swig, spits it in the boy's face and pours the rest over the kid's head.

"Now I said get out of here and that is what I meant. Beat it," growls Tatum as he hurls the bottle toward the stunned youngster.

THE SHAKEN KID, with a big tear waiting to fall from the corner of his eye, mumbles, "Thanks, Mean Jack," as he dejectedly exits the stadium tunnel.

Of course, no advertising executive would think of touching that commercial, but in the vicious and mixed-up football mind of Jack Tatum, it would be considered an award winner.

I'm sure Tatum would love to star in the leading role. He probably wrote the script back in the fourth or fifth grade under the guise of a "What America Means To Me" essay.

Tatum, a product of Ohio State, has been playing professional football for some 10 years now. He recently devalued his attitude toward the game and his fellow players in a book entitled "They Call Me Assassin." As the title suggests, the writing is not about pleasantries Tatum exchanged with opponents on the gridiron.

Tatum, always known as a ferocious hitter, has turned in several All-Pro seasons during his career. But I'm sure most of America's football-viewing public will remember him best for the infamous — but legal — tackle he made on New England Patriots wide receiver Darryl Stingley in an exhibition game in August of 1978.

OUR ANTI-HERO DRILLED Stingley right between the numbers as the latter hauled in a pass underneath the Raiders' zone coverage. On film, the tackle looked like a normal, hard NFL hit. Unfortunately, it was more than an everyday stick.

Stingley never moved following the tackle. He laid on the field motionless. New England trainers and doctors worked over him for more than 15 minutes. Stingley never got up. He was taken from the field on a stretcher. The tackle ended his career. It almost claimed his life. To this day Stingley is paralyzed from the neck down.

To Tatum, it was just another day at the office. He went right back to the Oakland huddle and continued to play. He was not moved by the horrible sight in front of him. After all, that is what he gets paid for — according to him.

In "They Call Me Assassin," Tatum tries to justify his cruelty on the field by claiming that it is a part of his contract. Intimidation and brutality are his weapons. And the better he uses those tools, the more money he receives from Oakland owner Al Davis. To Tatum, a pro football contract actually means a contract, or, as the spies say, a sanction.

"I never make a tackle just to bring someone down," Tatum declares in his confessional. "I want to punish the man I'm going after and I want him to know that it's going to hurt everytime he comes my way."

PROBABLY THE MOST DISTURBING element contained in the book is the nonchalant attitude Tatum takes toward the injuries he has inflicted on opposition players. He has no remorse for Stingley — the man he ruined and came close to killing. He evens claims the injury (I won't say accident) could have been avoided.

"I could have attempted to intercept but because of what the owners expect of me when they give me my paycheck, I automatically reacted to the situation by going for an intimidating hit."

Sickening is the only word I know to describe the instances of pain Tatum makes light of. On one occasion, Tatum describes hitting Denver Broncos tight end Riley Odoms so hard that Odoms' body went completely limp as he fell to

MSU Names Weaver AD

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Six days of speculation ended Tuesday night when Michigan State University named former Spartan football player Douglas Weaver athletic director at the Big Ten school.

E SPORTS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Wednesday, Jan. 23, 1980

For almost a week, Texas Tech Athletic Director Dick Tamburo, himself a former football great at Michigan State, was believed to be the top candidate for the position vacated last Tuesday by Joseph Kearney.

Weaver, a teammate of Tamburo's on MSU's 1962 national championship squad, leaves the athletic directorship at Georgia Tech open.

Weaver, 49, had been athletic director at Georgia Tech since 1976. He replaces Kearney, who quit last week to become athletic director at Arizona State. Kearney took Michigan State football coach Darryl Rogers with him.

Weaver also was athletic director at Southern Illinois and football coach at Southern Illinois and Kansas State.

Weaver played center and linebacker on Michigan State teams that won 26 of 27 games during the 1950 through 1952 seasons.

Tamburo, reached at home late Tuesday, had this to say about Weaver's appointment.

"Douglas Weaver is a fine guy and a good friend of mine. He was a teammate of mine and I think Michigan State got a super guy for a super job."

Tamburo would not say if Michigan State had offered him the job of athletic director. Tamburo has been Texas Tech athletic director since September, 1978. He was hired for the job by former Tech president Cecil Mackey, who is now the president of Michigan State.

"Like I've said all along, I am very happy here at Texas Tech," declared Tamburo.

Weaver's appointment, subject to approval by Michigan State's board of trustees, came just one day after the school's vice president, Ken Thompson, interviewed Weaver in Atlanta.

Michigan State spokesman Fred Stabley said a search committee recommended Weaver. Stabley said Weaver did not ask to be considered for the post.

Stabley said Weaver will assume his duties in East Lansing as soon as he can make arrangements to end his responsibilities at Georgia Tech.

One of Weaver's first duties, Stabley said, will be to help find a successor to Rogers, who resigned last week. Possible successors include Pittsburgh Steelers defensive coordinator George Perles and Steelers offensive line coach Rolie Dotsch.

"We are bringing in an excellent, proven athletic administrator in Doug Weaver," said Mackey. "I'm sure he will have the support of every segment of the university community."

Thompson said university officials were especially pleased to name an athletic director who is a Michigan State graduate.

the ground and his eyes rolled back into his head. "I had another knockout, and maybe this time I had even killed a man," Tatum recalled. "God knew that I didn't want something like that to happen."
Tatum also maligns everyone from Franco Harris to Bert Jones. Harris likes to "cake out." Jones is "a little boy in a man's body." Tatum displays nothing but contempt for Lynn Swann, whose career he almost ended with a blow to the back of the head during the 1975 American Football Conference championship game.
IT IS SAD TO THINK what the spirit of football would be if every player thought like Jack Tatum. Fortunately, Tatum's thinking is the minority viewpoint of the game. The game is rough, at times vicious, but very few players have ever claimed to play the game for the sheer enjoyment of hurting another man.
National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has been quoted as saying Tatum "has put himself in a vulnerable position." Rozelle's statement must mean that the NFL might take some action against Tatum — a fine, a suspension, maybe a slap on the wrist. But that "vulnerable position" may also be on the playing field. Maybe someday, Tatum's body will go limp and his eyes will roll back into his head.
Stingley, still adapting to life in a wheelchair, had this thought: "It appears to me he doesn't have any respect toward life itself. Football is a game. Life is a game. He's not playing fair at either one."

Plainsmen Down Sluggish Herd

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Maybe Bob Decker should have jumped-started the Hereford Whitefaces before the game instead of waiting around for the fourth quarter to pop up. Decker's Herd scored only 28 points in the first 24 minutes against Monterey Friday night. And, well, that's really not saying a lot. Taking advantage of Hereford's cold shooting and colder rebounding, the Plainsmen ran up a 58-49 District 4-AAAA lead. Monterey, which won its 19th straight conference clash and its 22nd of the last 23rd loop encounters, is now 2-0 in district play and 19-5 overall. Hereford is 1-1 and 10-11, in those respective departments. Starting off like an Edsel on jacks or a pair of slick Goodyears at an icy intersection, the Whitefaces scored only eight points in the third quarter and four, yep four, more in the fourth stanza. During the span, Monterey wasn't setting the court on fire either. The Plainsmen had eight and 14 points. Then, with Monterey on top by 17 points (45-28) after a pair of Brad Muehlbrad free throws, Hereford started a comeback, of sorts. Hereford, using the buckets by Norman Hill, Joe Walker and Mike Fraser, cut the margin to 10 points (46-36) with four minutes left in the game. But, it was a little too much too late. "I'm disappointed in the way we lost our leads," said MHS head man Joe Michalka. "We can't afford to do that anymore. It really hurt." A pair of layups by MHS's Trav Clar-dy, who ended the night with 33 points after hitting 15-of-22 shots from the field, and four Mike Wooten freebies allowed Monterey to own an 18-point advantage. Then Hereford caught fire again, outscoring MHS 11-2 over the final minute of play. That surge resulted in MHS blowing another big lead. Hereford appeared ready to jump on the injury-ridden Plainsmen who were playing without starters Greg Thomason (who had chicken pox) and Ian Hyslop (who had an ankle that resembled a watermelon). Playing on emotion and the hot-outside shooting of Darrel "Spiderman" Polk, HHS hopped out to a 9-4 lead with 5:40 left. A technical foul on Michalka at the start of the game put HHS on some kind of emotional high. (Michalka was whistled for the T after arguing that Polk should have been charged with goal-tending a Clardy shot. The official didn't agree with Michalka who had run all the way down to the opposite end of the court.) But slowly and surely, Monterey took the lead in the first quarter after Clardy scored eight points. At one time, the 6-6 senior had scored 22 of Monterey 26 points during the first three quarters.

Hill Gives Tech Solid Defense

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
A funny thing happened to Ben Hill as he traveled from Camden, N.J., to Hobbs, N.M., to Lubbock.
Hill, who led his high school team to a New Jersey state championship in 1975, learned something that a lot of cagers only hear about and pay very little attention to — defense.

"You can usually look at the man that Ben's covering," said Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers, "and you'll notice that he hasn't scored many points. Ben's not flashy, but he's a real key for us on defense. He takes only high percentage shots and he's one of the best rebounding forwards in the league."

Hill has been a defensive standout all year for the Raiders, but a funny thing happened against the Baylor Bears Saturday night at the Coliseum. Hill scored some points — 14 in the first half alone — and kept the Raiders close.

For his work against the Bears — Hill scored 16 points and had six rebounds in only 26 minutes of playing time — the 6-6 junior has been selected The Avalanche-Journal player of the week.

"I try to concentrate on a lot of things when I'm on the court," said Hill. "Some nights the shots are there. Against Baylor I was open and I took the shots. But scoring's not one of my first priorities."

Defense is Hill's specialty.
"I think that's just something that happened once I got to Tech," he said. "I concentrate on playing good position, playing away from the ball and trying to help out with the open man."

"I feel like if we play good defense we're going to score on the other end," he added. "We've just got to work for the high percentage shots and they'll come to us."

The Raiders, 5-1 in Southwest Conference play, took Tuesday off and have until Saturday to play again. And Hill, who spent a year at New Mexico Junior College before coming to Tech, says rest was just what the doctor ordered.

"Coach Myers gave us two days off and now we're going to get ready," said Hill. "We're going to go over a lot of things and try and get back the intensity that we had at the beginning of the season. We played hard against Baylor and Rice, but mentally we may have been kinda' relaxed."

One of Tech's problems against the Bears was that Hill, who rarely gets in foul trouble, got in early foul trouble.
"When Ben goes out," said Myers after Tech had nipped Baylor 69-67, "it hurts. And it hurts us tonight."

After his big first half, Hill missed most of the second half but finished the game with 16 points. Since SWC play began, Hill has been dead-end from the field.

A&M Beats Arkansas, Takes Lead In SWC

By The Associated Press
A technical foul against Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton enabled Texas A&M to take the lead at College Station, and the Aggies implemented a successful delay game that gave them a 45-39 victory Tuesday night for the undisputed Southwest Conference lead.

The win gave the Aggies a 6-0 record, a game ahead of the 5-1 record of both Arkansas and Texas Tech.

Texas A&M led most of the game, which turned into a defensive battle. Arkansas was down 24-20 at the half but fought back behind 6-10 guard Scott Hastings and used four consecutive Aggie turnovers.

After tying the game twice, the Hogs took a 31-29 lead with 12:36 remaining and then moved four points ahead.

But Sutton, who had been complaining about the officiating all night, was whistled for a technical foul when the Hogs led 35-32. A&M made both technical shots to cut the lead to 35-34 and then, after getting possession out of bounds after the technical, Vernon Smith pulled down a rebound and went back up for the basket that put A&M ahead to stay, 36-35.

SMU 85, Rice 83
In Houston, Brad Branson hit a turnaround shot from the foul line with 6 seconds to play to give Southern Methodist a come-from-behind 85-83 victory over the Rice Owls Tuesday night in a SWC play.

The Owls led all the way until reserve guard Dave Piehler hit a 20-foot jump shot with 2:06 to play to give the Mustangs an 80-79 lead. Branson followed with a layup before Bobby Tudor scored to cut the SMU lead to 82-81.

Baylor 62, Texas 48
In Waco, freshman Jay Shakir came off the bench to trigger a second half rally that guided Baylor to a 62-48 victory over Texas.

Baylor is now 7-9 on the season and 2-4 in conference play. The loss dropped Texas to 10-6 on the season and 3-3 in the SWC.

Baylor broke a 38-38 deadlock with nine minutes remaining and Shakir hit 10 of his 14 points down the stretch as the Bears pulled away from the troubled where he's connected on 23 of 34 attempts for a 67.6 percentage. On the year he's shooting 59.2 percent and averaging 10.1 and 5.5 rebounds a game.

"It's takes me a while to get going," admitted Hill, "but I think we're in good shape right now. Last year we lost some close ballgames — now maybe the tables are turned."
The Raiders travel to Dallas this weekend to face SMU on Saturday then return home to tangle with the tough Arkansas Razorbacks on Monday. But Hill says there is no way that the Raiders will be overlooking the Ponies.
"Now, I just don't think that will happen," he said. "We just take 'em one at a time. We're going to work hard this week. We'll be ready for SMU."

Congressional Leaders Predict Support For Olympic Boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — The second session of the 96th Congress opened Tuesday with a nearly unanimous call for a U.S. boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow.

There were at least three separate resolutions in the Senate and a seeming drumfire of speeches in the House and Senate demanding that U.S. athletes stay home in response to the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said "an overwhelming majority" of the Senate would support a boycott.

And House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said he hoped a resolution calling on American athletes to boycott the Games could be approved by week's end.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, said that while he supports an Olympic boycott, he would also like Carter to order a total embargo on all industrial trading with the Soviet Union.

An Olympic boycott, he said, "is like hitting them in the face with a cream puff."

One dissenter was the assistant Republican leader of the Senate, who accused President Carter of using the Soviet actions in Afghanistan to obscure the continuing stalemate over the holding of American hostages in Iran.

Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska said that by calling for U.S. athletes to boycott the Moscow Olympics, Carter was "moving the peas under another shell."

"I'd like to hear more about the hostages and less about the Olympics," he said.

A boycott of the Summer Games, he said, would jeopardize the Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., this winter and the 1984 Summer Games scheduled for Los Angeles.

The three Senate proposals calling for a boycott came from Sens. David Pryor, D-Ark., Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.

Pryor said, "For Americans to pay homage and give credibility to the Kremlin's concept of fair play would make a mockery of what we profess to believe and to practice."

Carter has asked for the U.S. Olympic Committee to pull out of the Summer Games if the Soviets do not withdraw from Afghanistan in the next 30 days.

Muskie, who supports that approach, said, "The United States simply cannot lend legitimacy to a regime which refuses to accept or comply with the basic rules of international law and sovereignty."

"A dozen years of detente have been wiped out by a single act of international cannibalism," Muskie said.

Pryor said, however, that a boycott should be urged no matter when the Russians withdraw their forces.

"I don't want to seem to reward Russian efficiency," by setting a deadline, he said.

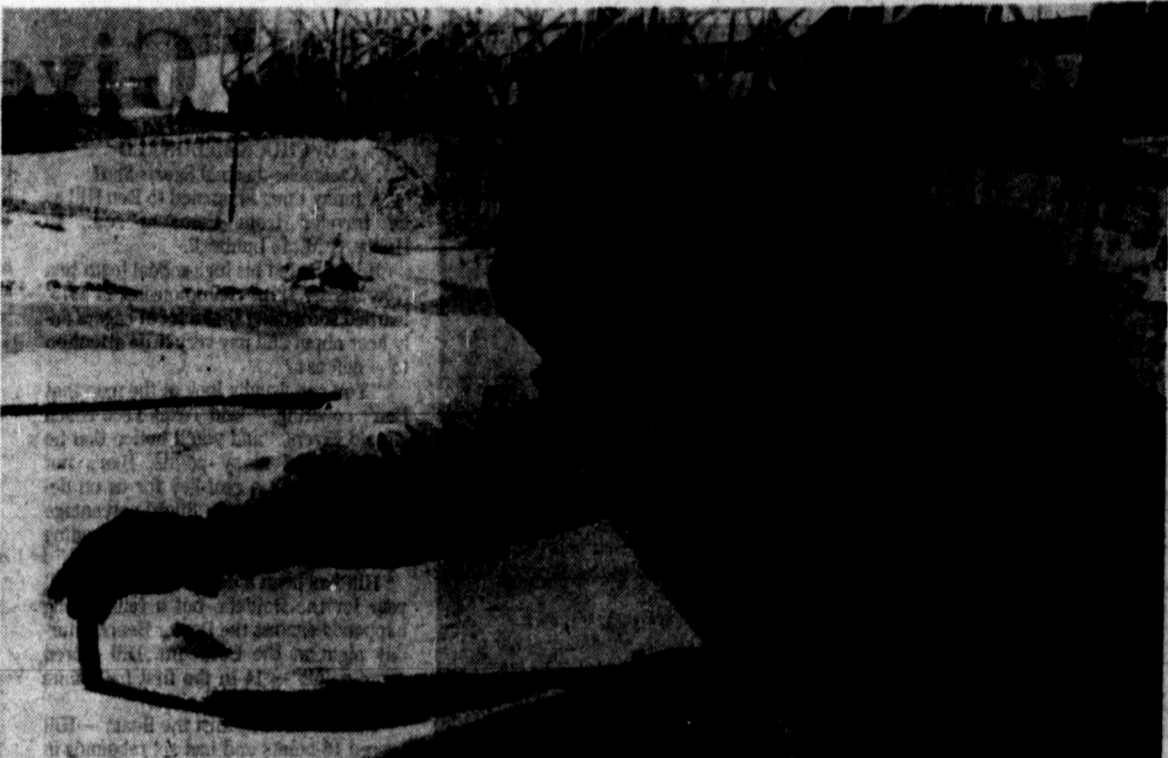

The freshman senator's resolution calls on the International Olympic Committee to try to have the Olympics moved to another site.

Falling that, he said there should be no U.S. team participating in the Summer Games.

The Carter administration has been advised that it has no legal authority to bar participation in the Games by U.S. athletes and the resolutions proposed to Congress would not have the force of law.

Among those supporting Pryor's resolution were Majority Leader Byrd and at least six Republicans, including Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma and Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming.

Some effort was made for a quick Senate vote on the resolution. Instead, the various proposals were referred to two committees, Foreign Relations and Commerce.

RIGHT HERE IT'S THREE CENTIMETERS DEEP — Gordon Tait, supervisor for the National Weather Service Olympic support unit, measures the amount of snow that has collected on a camera platform next to the speed skating rink while making

More Snow Forecast For Lake Placid

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — A snow squall moved through the Olympic region Tuesday, dumping a fluffy layer of what quickly is becoming known as "white gold" on this Adirondack Mountain community.

The National Weather Service in Albany, N.Y., forecast an accumulation of two to four inches of snow with more flurries later in the week at the site of the 1980 Winter Olympic Games.

After an unusually warm and dry early January, Lake Placid began receiving snow flurries last weekend. About three inches had accumulated through Monday morning.

"That's white gold out there, that's what it is," said one pleased resident, a postman.

Lake Placid's wintertime drought had caused speculation that there would not be enough snow by February to stage some of the Olympic events.

However, some Olympic officials have admitted privately they are happy about the light snowfall. While the state of New York has upped its snowmaking budget to cover the cross-country and biathlon trails with man-made snow, it has saved thousands of dollars more on snow removal.

Approximately five miles of cross-country trails already have been covered by man-made snow. Another 10 need to be covered in order to hold the Games.

Snowmaking covers the entire length of the Alpine skiing courses at Whiteface Mountain, and the bobsled, luge and speedskating facilities are refrigerated.

The weather service also issued a long-term forecast last week that called for sporadic but occasionally heavy snowfall during the month of February with temperatures a little warmer than usual.

"The 'Farmer's Almanac' predicted similar weather for the Adirondack region this winter."

Mrs. Thatcher Plans To Request Alternative To Moscow Location

LONDON (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is to write to Britain's Olympic authorities asking them to seek an alternative site to Moscow for the 1980 Games, she said Tuesday.

Thatcher told the House of Commons that she was also asking the British Olympic Association to offer sites in Britain for the staging of certain Olympic events.

The announcement followed an earlier meeting of government ministers to consider moves by Britain against the Soviet Union following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, has already stated that it would be impossible to switch the Games from Moscow. However, the British Department of the Environment is now thought likely to carry out a study of sites which could be used to stage some Olympic events.

This move was discussed at the meeting, which was attended by 12 senior ministers.

Wildcats Crack AP Top 20

By The Associated Press
Neil McCarthy doesn't think this year's Weber State basketball team can stand up talent-wise to the Willie Sojourner powerhouse of the late 1960s.

The pride of the Big Sky Conference currently boasts the nation's longest winning streak — 17 games — and that has steadily stirred the interest of voters in the Associated Press basketball poll.

With a good part of the 1979-80 college basketball season gone, Weber State finished in the Top Twenty Tuesday, shooting into the No. 18 spot on the list with a marvelous 17-4 record. The only hiccup for the Wildcats this season was a Monday-day, overtime loss to Utah State by seven points.

Weber State's stately performance so far has triggered the inevitable comparisons with the explosive Sojourner-led team of 1968-69 that compiled a 27-3 record.

"I don't know if this year's team is as good as the Sojourner team," says McCarthy, now in his fifth full season as the Weber State coach. "But we play together very well. We're really the essence of a college team, in that we don't just come down and shoot pro-style. We'll shoot, but generally we're disciplined enough to take only the good shots."

Weber State is a veteran team this year with four seniors in the starting lineup — 6-foot-6 Bruce Collins and 6-foot Mike Mattos in the backcourt, 7-2 Richard Smith at center and 6-8 David Johnson at one of the forwards. The other starter is 6-6 junior Gerald Mattinson at the other forward spot.

"We're an unselfish team," says McCarthy. "Maybe we don't have the best talent, either, but we do have the most desire."

While Weber State finally was surfacing in the national rankings, DePaul continued to hold the No. 1 spot after victories over Lamar, Maine and Louisiana State. Winning their 15th straight game, the Blue Demons were a unanimous choice for the top spot, collecting all 57 first-place votes for a maximum 1,140 points.

Oregon State, with a 17-1 record after triumphs last week over Washington State and Washington, moved from fourth to second in the national rankings with 1,049 points.

Duke climbed two places to No. 3, collecting 950 points after triumphs last week over Wake Forest and North Carolina State. Ohio State dropped two spots to No. 4 with 929 points after a 1-1 week which saw the Buckeyes beat Minnesota in overtime and lose to Michigan in overtime.

The remainder of the Top Ten included: No. 6 Syracuse, No. 7 Louisville; No. 8 Notre Dame; No. 9 St. John's and No. 10 Missouri.

Sports In Brief

Triple Wrestling Event Set

A triple main event is on tonight's wrestling card at Fair Park Coliseum, according to promoter Nick Roberts.

Highlighting the event, which gets underway at 8 p.m., will be a tag-team match pitting Killer Brooks and James Dillon against Dory Funk Jr. and the "Mystery Partner." The Mystery Partner will be unmasked prior to the start of the match.

Also, Rick Romero and El Gran Marcus will battle behind a seven-foot steel cage. Roberts said the barrier was put to "keep these two in the ring."

Kevin and David Von Erich meet champions Gino Caruse and Gary Young for the Western States tag-team championship. And Siva Ali wrestles Bob Moran, in a preliminary bout.

Tech Women's Game Cancelled

The women's basketball game between Texas Tech and Angelo State in San Angelo was canceled Tuesday morning due to inclement weather. The game, originally scheduled for Tuesday night, has not yet been rescheduled.

The Lady Raiders' next game is still on, however. That match is with Oklahoma State in Stillwater, Okla., this Friday. The game is set for a 7:30 p.m. tip-off.

Dimmitt Seeks Opponents

You can't play games if you don't have opponents, and if you don't play enough games, you probably won't win the games you play.

That's the problem facing the Dimmitt Bobcats.

Cocher Ken Cleveland is requesting opponents for his District 3-AA team's 1980-81 schedule for the following dates: Dec. 12, Jan. 23, Feb. 6, and Feb. 24, for the boys and a Jan. 6 opponent for his girls.

Aggies To Sign Top Schoolboy

PORTLAND, Texas (AP) — Tommy Robison, Gregory-Portland's all-American defensive tackle, has announced he will sign a Southwest Conference letter of intent with Texas A&M.

Regarded as one of Texas' premier collegiate prospects, Robison earlier this month was the recipient of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce's annual award as the No. 1 football player in Texas. He also was named recently to the Parade Magazine High School All-America football team.

Exam Sidelines Longhorn

AUSTIN (AP) — Sophomore starter Henry Johnson of Texas will miss the Texas-Baylor basketball game Tuesday night because a makeup examination he has not yet been graded.

Johnson already has missed two games because of grade problems.

In addition, starter Ron Baxter was on crutches Monday with a sprained ankle, and Coach Abe Lemons listed sub Rob Cunningham as a starter in place of Baxter.

Baxter, a 6-foot-4 senior, holds the school rebounding record and is closing on Jim Krivacs' all-time school scoring record.

Three freshmen — LaSalle Thompson, Fred Carson and George Turner — led out the Texas starting lineup.

Turner, a bluechip recruit sought by Baylor and Texas, is hitting only 28.1 percent of his field goal attempts in Southwest Conference play, and Lemons said, "I've never seen a slump like this. He works hard, he's always asking questions... You couldn't ask for a guy to work any harder. I don't understand it."

Western Texas Leads Poll

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (UPI) — Soaring with an undefeated 19-0 record, Western Texas College Tuesday grabbed first place honors in the National Junior College Athletic Association's weekly poll.

The 22 regional directors gave Western Texas 189 points and 15 first place votes.

Kankakee (Ill.), 18-0, earned second place honors, and Three Rivers (Mo.), 20-1, third place.

Broome (N.Y.), 11-1, and Midland College (Texas), 18-1, were ranked fourth and fifth, respectively.

The final 15 schools were: Casper College (Wyo.), 13-1; Hiwassee (Tenn.), 20-1; Gloucester, 15-1; Tyler, 17-2; SUNY (State University of New York) at Farmingdale, 8-2; Allegany Community College (Md.), 15-2; Brewton-Parker (Ga.), 14-1; Jackson College, (Mich.) 10-3; Bryard (Fla.), 18-2; Tuncis (Conn.), 10-2; Western Oklahoma State, 15-2; Lorain, 15-1; Golden Valley Lutheran (Iowa), 13-1, tied with Westark (Ark.), 12-0; and Connors State (Okla.), 15-2.

Super Bowl Sets Record

NEW YORK (AP) — The Super Bowl game between Pittsburgh and Los Angeles on CBS was seen by 20,330,000 American homes — the most ever for any television show other than the final episode of "Roots" — Nielsen's preliminary estimates indicated Tuesday.

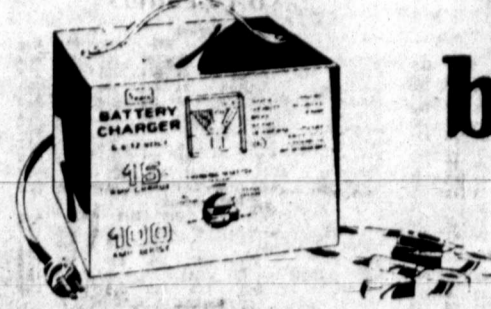

According to the Nielsen figures, the game — seen during prime time in parts of the country — had a rating of 46.3 and a share of 67. That means 46.3 percent of all American households watched the game and two-thirds of the ones in use were tuned to Super Bowl XIV.

Those ratings made the game the third highest rated — behind Super Bowl XII (47.2) and XIII (47.1) — and the seventh highest show of all time. Super Bowl XII between Dallas and Denver in 1978 had the highest rating.

Gervin, Spurs Trim Clippers

By The Associated Press
George Gervin and James Silas teamed for 55 points, and newly acquired John Shumate added 16 Tuesday night, to spark San Antonio to an easy 129-100 National Basketball Association victory over crippled San Diego.

consecutive loss. It was the Cavaliers' third victory in their last four outings.

BULLS 145, PISTONS 131
CHICAGO (AP) — Rickey Sobers and David Greenwood scored 26 points apiece Tuesday night and the Chicago Bulls shot 71 percent from the field en route to a 145-131 National Basketball Association victory over the Detroit Pistons.

The Pistons, lead by Greg Kelsey, who had 25 points, and Eric Money with 22, remained far behind, trailing by as many as 26 points before Chicago substitutions enabled Detroit to come to within 10 points late in the fourth quarter.

The former collegiate All-America has been plagued with illness and injury since leaving Notre Dame in 1974. The Spurs are his fifth pro team.

The Clippers, who dropped their third straight game, were playing without Lloyd Free, the NBA's No. 2 scorer behind Gervin at 31 points per game. Free suffered an ankle injury last week.

CELTICS 112, ROCKETS 106
BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics blew a 22-point lead after Dave Cowens was injured early in the second half but rallied down the stretch with reserve Gerald Henderson contributing six key points Tuesday night for a 112-106 National Basketball Association victory over the Houston Rockets.

Cowens hit on nine of 10 field goal attempts for 18 points before being forced to retire with a jammed left ankle with Boston in front 67-53 and the third period just 2:25 old.

Barry, who had 17 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter, sank two free throws. But Boston's Larry Bird hit on a long jumper, and Chris Ford added two free throws. Calvin Murphy scored for Houston on a rebound.

The 6-6 senior basketball player hit 17 of 21 field goals, two of six free throws, and had 22 rebounds, four assists, six blocked shots and only three fouls in two games.

His best effort was against Tarleton, when he scored 26 points and had 13 rebounds.

Four runners-up were forward Keith Gardner, who had 30 points and 14 rebounds; guard Bill McGee, with 30 points and 11 rebounds; and guard Bruce Carver, who had 34 points, four rebounds and seven assists.

Gardner leads District 8 in field goal shooting, having connected on 155 of 248 for 62%.

All four runners-up played in two games apiece.

Hot Lobos Tame Lukewarm Panthers

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Coach Don Abbott couldn't remember when his Levelland Lobos played better, and coach Joe McWilliams couldn't remember when his Dunbar Panthers played worse.

The result, a 76-69 pounding by Levelland that kept the Lobos alive in District 1-AAA while killing all but the faintest Panther first-half hopes.

Levelland, which led by only 20-19 with 15 seconds gone in the second quarter, sprinted to a 46-28 halftime edge then rode that margin down the stretch for the win.

Dunbar pulled to within eight with 3:30 minutes left in the game, 62-54, then to within six with 3:13 showing, 66-60, but could never put together the effort for that final big push.

"We played as well there in the first half as I've ever seen any Levelland team play," said Abbott after the game. He had good reason to smile, the Lobos lost their home opener to Berger last week and needed this win to stay in contention in the conference.

"I don't think anybody's going to go undefeated in this district," Abbott said. Currently, Estacado and Berger are undefeated 2-0 in loop play while Canyon and Levelland are 1-1. Dunbar and Dumas stand 0-2.

"I really feel like 4-1 will at least tie for the first half," said Abbott.

That is no consolation to McWilliams, whose Panthers have not only lost their first two district games, but dropped both of them at home.

"I don't know what the answer is," he said. "Some things that have been happening again and again happened again tonight. We get a person in trouble or try to rest a player, and the player we put in off the bench doesn't do the job."

What McWilliams was referring to was the lack of a substitute for his post man Stanley Whitfield. Whitfield, the heart of the Dunbar team, picked up two fouls in the first two minutes of the game, picked up his fourth with 3:22 left in the third and fouled out with 5:44 left.

CAREERS

By JOYCE LAIN KENNEDY

Student financial aid officers are becoming increasingly resourceful at shaping "aid packages," so your own school is a logical first stop in reaching out for a student loan.

If your school can't help, you still have options: many banks, credit unions, savings and loan associations and other lenders handle the federal Guaranteed Student Loan Program and can be approached directly. All students are eligible for GSLP loans — no matter how well off their parents may be.

Should you strike out, you can ask your state loan guarantee agency for names of lenders who are making loans. If your state doesn't have a guarantee agency, contact the U.S. Bureau of Student Financial Assistance at one of ten regional offices. You can locate these offices by calling the federal student information hotline at 800-638-6700; in Maryland, 800-492-6602.

If your school can't help, and you can't find a federally guaranteed loan, turn to the idiosyncratic affiliations you may have. Professional, industrial and special interest groups — from the American Baptist Student Aid Fund to the Retired Officers Association — offer loans to members or their children. Loans also available to students in particular fields. One good loan resource book is the 1980-81 edition of "Financial Aids for Higher Education" by Olean Keeslar.

What's ahead on the federal guaranteed loan scene? Student loan legislation expires this spring and a number of proposals are being floated in Congress.

A bill passed by the House of Representatives — and thought to have good chances of clearing the Senate — raises the ceilings on the amount of undergraduate money under the GSLP from $2,500 to $3,000 a year — $12,500 total — and from $15,000 to $25,000 total for undergraduate and graduate studies.

Parents would be able to borrow up to $3,000 a year towards their share of a student's expenses but unlike subsidized student loans, parents' 7 percent interest would begin at once.

If the House bill becomes law, another new provision would allow the Student Loan Marketing Association to refinance student loans, consolidating debts and extending the repayment time to as many as 20 years.

Even with improved access and easier terms, student loans are a thorny option. Unlike grants, scholarships or an inheritance from your great aunt Zelda, you eventually have to pay the money back. Sometimes a loan is the only practical solution to paying for education. But it should be considered a last resort after making an intensive search for money you don't have to pay back as well as part-time jobs.

READER SERVICE: If you'd like a single copy of "Student Consumer's guide — Six Federal Financial Aid Programs 1980-81," send your postcard request to Joyce Lain Kennedy at this newspaper. The offer ends March 1, 1980.

Super Bowl, Post-Game Show Give Super TV Ratings To CBS

NEW YORK (AP)—A full two-thirds of the television audience Sunday evening watched Super Bowl XIV on CBS, and more than half stayed around for the post-game program and "60 Minutes," next in line, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

The extraordinary, though hardly surprising, audience helped CBS to first place in the networks' prime-time ratings race for the fifth week in a row, and drew the challenger even with ABC in the ratings for the season so far.

The rating for the Super Bowl game — kickoff was an hour before the 7 p.m. EST start of prime-time — was 46.3. Nielsen says that means of all the country's TV-equipped homes, 46.3 percent were tuned in for at least part of the game between the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Los Angeles Rams.

Of sets in use during the game, 67 percent were tuned to CBS.

In addition to the three highest-rated programs in the week ending Jan. 20, CBS listed three others in the Top 10, and compiled a rating for the period of 22.5. ABC was second at 20.2, and NBC third at 16.2.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 22.5 percent of the homes in the country with television were watching CBS.

For the season to date, both CBS and ABC have ratings of 19.4 to NBC's 17.7. CBS has been chipping away at ABC's lead for several weeks and has, in fact, won the three-way race eight times in the last 10 weeks.

The networks, which calculate weekly and seasonal averages, disagree on that calculation. CBS and NBC call it a tie; ABC says it still holds the lead, 19.4 to 19.2 for CBS and 17.5 for NBC.

ABC's highest-rated program was "Three's Company," in fourth place, while NBC's most-watched show, "Little House on the Prairie," was 12th.

Several programs introduced since the first of the year showed signs of promise. CBS' "House Calls" was No. 13 in the ratings, and ABC's "One in a Million" finished 24th. "Knots Landing," a companion of sorts to CBS' popular "Dallas," was No. 30 in the ratings, and NBC's "Skag" finished right behind.

It was not a particularly good week for specials. NBC's recently condemned "Shirley" was No. 60, followed by "The Adventures of the Wilderness Family" on ABC, NBC's "Prime Time Saturday," a movie, "The Late Show," on NBC, and CBS' "Beatrice Arthur Special."

Here are the week's 10 highest rated shows:

Superbowl XIV, with a rating of 46.3 representing 35.3 million homes, Super-bowl XIV post-game, 35.7 or 27.2 million, and "60 Minutes," 33.2 or 25.3 million, all CBS; "Three's Company," 31 or 23.7 million, ABC; "M-A-S-H," 29.8 or 22.7 million, CBS; "Taxi," 27.8 or 21.2 million, and "Fantasy Island," 27.3 or 20.8 million, both ABC; "Dallas," 27.2 or 20.7 million, CBS; "Love Boat," 26.1 or 19.9 million, ABC, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 25.7 or 19.6 million, CBS.

The next 10 shows: "Hart to Hart," ABC; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC; "House Calls," CBS; "Soap," ABC; "Barney Miller," and "Eight is Enough," both ABC, tie; "Real People," NBC, and "If Things Were Different," CBS, tie, and "Mork and Mindy" and "Benon," both ABC.

'Scared Straight' Set For Encore Airing

"Scared Straight," a television documentary designed to "scare crime" out of juvenile delinquents, will be aired for the second time on KAMC, Channel 28, at 9 p.m. today.

The program which documents an uncensored session with hardened criminals and juveniles sentenced to three hours at Railway State Prison in New Jersey, first was aired in Lubbock in May 1979 during late night viewing hours.

After considering feedback from the first presentation, the documentary will be aired for a second time today during prime viewing hours — a time better suited to reach the show's targets — teenagers and young people.

The hard-hitting documentary which includes explicit descriptions by the criminals of homosexual rapes, suicides, murders and other aspects of prison life, will be aired as a public service without commercial interruption. The program is sponsored by Crime Line Inc., and Chan-

Son Of Television Comic Hopes Series Will Materialize Soon

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Barry Van Dyke, Dick's 29-year-old sprout, is thinking about taking flying lessons now that he's completed his eighth TV pilot film, all of which have somehow missed the mark.
 Barry would like to think he isn't to blame for the failures of "Stitches," a medical sitcom, "Tabitha" (spin-off daughter of "Bewitched"), "The Harvey Korman Show" and "Casino," a riverboat drama to be telecast soon.
 He also starred in two comedic occult pilots, "Ghost of a Chance" and "Heaven On Earth," which he describes as pair of rip-offs of Warren Beatty's hit movie, "Heaven Can Wait."
 Young Van Dyke, fast becoming a cynic, says a dozen such pilots have been filmed and the studios and networks will keep trying to rip-off the idea until they get it right.

 Barry's best hope to land a series is "Galactica 1980," a sort of TV phoenix risen from the ashes of "Battlestar Galactica" which crashed and burned in last year's ratings wars. It was also released as a movie.
 The new version of "Galactica" features only one survivor of the original cast — Lorne Greene, for better or worse.
 Van Dyke explained that the Cylons, evil space creatures, did away with the likes of Richard Hatch, Dirk Benedict, Maren Jensen and other heroes and heroines of the battlestar.
 "Galactica 1980" ostensibly takes place 35 years after the original episodes ended. For the first time the spacemen return to Earth where they are as fascinated with mankind's antiquated methods and machinery as today's Earthlings might be in 17th century Philadelphia.

Also, the reprise provides Universal Television an opportunity to further amortize the enormously costly space ship sets built in hopes of a longrunning weekly series.
 According to Barry, all may yet be salvaged. "Galactica 1980" will be seen on three successive Sunday nights beginning Jan. 27 which makes it mini-mini-series. If ratings are high, it could become a weekly show again.
 Barry, a square shouldered, handsome young man who bears little resemblance to his father, is tired of making pilots. He is also weary of a young actor's hand-to-mouth existence.

Married and the father two sons — Carey, 4, and Shane, 5 months — Van Dyke has "paid his dues" as young actors are wont to say.
 He dropped out of a San Fernando Valley junior college to work for his father for three years in "The New Dick Van Dyke Show" which was produced in a suburb of Phoenix, Ariz.
 "I began as a production assistant and general gofer," Barry said. "I transported the crew in and out of Arizona from Hollywood every week. For three years I played bit parts and extra roles. I held cue cards and did whatever had to be done to help Dad."

"My father neither encouraged nor discouraged me about acting. He never gave me advice. Acting was something I wanted to do, even though I knew it would be a very rough road."
 Van Dyke senior paved the way for Barry by setting up a meeting for his son with his own agents at William Morris. The agents patted Barry on the head and told him to take acting lessons and return in a couple of years.
 Barry spent three years studying drama with Jeff Corey, supporting himself as an extra at $45 per day when he could get work. He was proud of being financially independent from his wealthy and influential father.

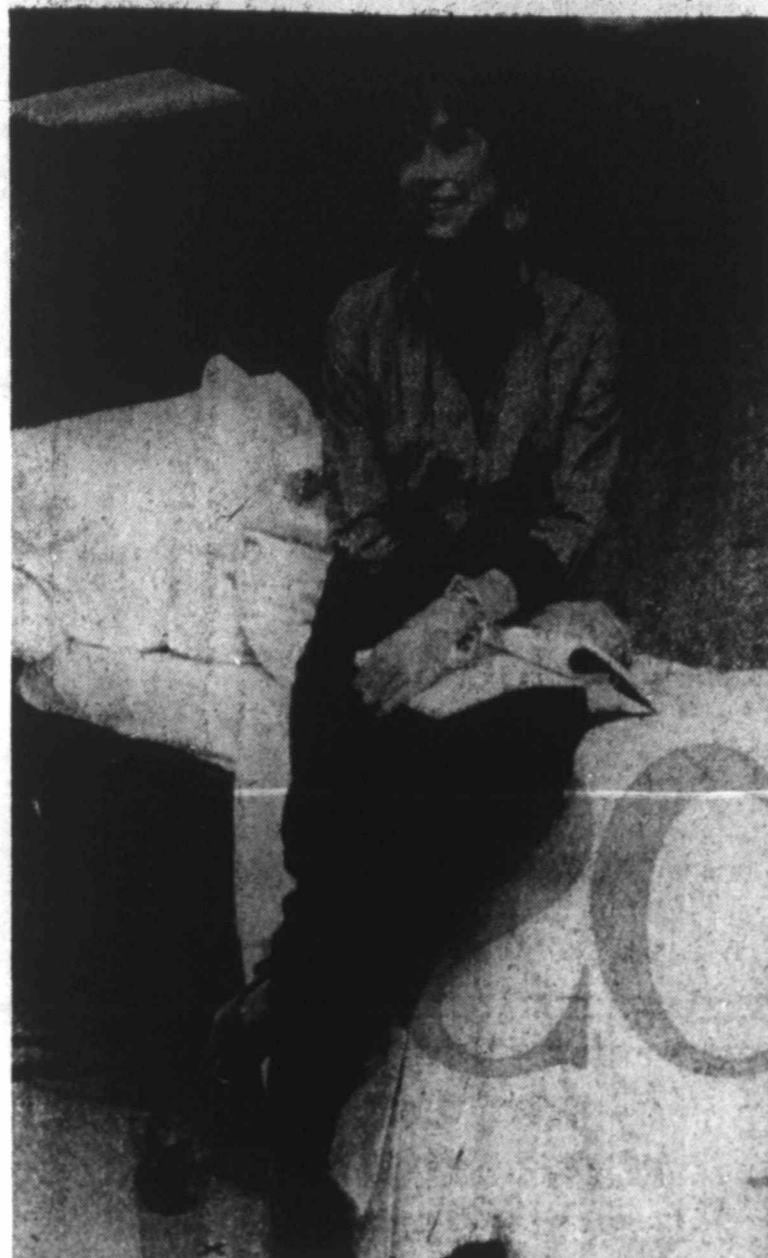

Eventually William Morris accepted the young man as a client and signed him to a holding contract at Paramount Pictures — which accounted for most of his pilot assignments and guest shots on episodic shows.
 "I'm no longer under contract to Paramount," Barry said. "But that doesn't mean I won't be making more pilots."
 "At first I was naive enough to think they would all become hits. You never really get used to failure. But you have to get up a head of steam and be optimistic every time to make the show work."
 "People sometimes tell me I sound like Dad. But I don't look like him which is helpful. It's difficult enough being a celebrity's child. Few producers make the connection because I don't look like Dad."
 "When they do make the connection, it doesn't make any difference."

Three-Part Series On Presidency To Be Aired By Public Television

NEW YORK (AP) — One perhaps unorthodox way to look at the presidency in this election year is to consider what, rather than who, Americans want for the job.
 "And basically," says Don Fouser, after months of research, "you come right down to this: When you're looking for a president, character comes first."
 "That's what everyone tells us," he says. "What a refrain!"
 Fouser produced a three-part series on the presidency, "Every Four Years," to be broadcast by public TV stations beginning tonight on channel 5 at 8 CST. Subsequent installments will air Jan. 30 and Feb. 6.
 As with most Public Broadcasting Service programs, air date and time may vary.
 Veteran correspondent Howard K. Smith is host for the series.
 "What we attempt to do with the series," says Fouser, a two-time Emmy winner for "The Great American Dream Machine" in 1971 and "VD Blues" in 1972, "is examine the presidency at a time when more and more people are asking whether one man can handle the job."

hour examination with a survey of Americans' attitudes toward the office.
 "The first program," he says, "is an exciting stage-setting that documents the American fascination with the presidency. When we follow with the other two programs dealing with the nature of the office and how its power evolved, viewers will gain a rare educational experience."
 The show's producers commissioned a special Gallup survey to determine, among other things, what Americans expect from a president's behavior on such matters as dress, drugs, religion, sex and alcohol.
 "We found things like character, leadership, morals, ethics and political smarts are important," Fouser says. "And the feeling appears to be, the further we get from Watergate, the more people realize the need for a strong leader."
 "How about taboos for the president? What does he think about marijuana? A cocktail before dinner? What would people think if they found he had told a racial or ethnic joke in private?

 "We discerned," says Fouser, "what appears to be a gradual liberalization of attitudes toward the president. But despite that, people still want a straight, moral man, a man 10 feet tall."
 The second hour-long program studies the development of presidential power.
 "George Washington quickly established the president's role in foreign policy, which the founding fathers had not intended," Fouser says. "And very early in this century, the president began to exercise dominance in domestic affairs, with Lyndon Johnson the most dramatic figure in that area."
 The concluding segment studies the president's use of that power, with the help — or hindrance — of cabinet members and aides.

Newest Wave Of Smoker Research:
MERIT favored 3 to 1 over high tar brands in tests comparing taste and tar level.

Merit Sweeps New Tests!

Smokers Report: MERIT Taste Matches High Tar Cigarettes.

New taste tests with thousands of smokers prove it.

Proof: A significant majority of smokers rate MERIT taste as good as—or better than—leading high tar brands. Even cigarettes having twice the tar!

Proof: Of the 95% stating a preference, 3 out of 4 smokers chose the MERIT low tar/good taste combination over high tar leaders when tar levels were revealed.

MERIT: Proven Long Term Alternative To High Tar Brands.

Proof: The overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers polled feel they didn't sacrifice taste in switching from high tar cigarettes.

Proof: 96% of MERIT smokers don't miss former high tar brands.

Proof: 9 out of 10 enjoy smoking as much since switching to MERIT, are glad they switched, and report MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

You've read the results. The conclusion is clearer than ever: MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar.

A combination that's attracting more and more smokers every day and—more importantly—satisfying them long term.
