

Chamber Map Offered As Evidence In Desegregation Trial

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 1967 Chamber of Commerce map, designating some Lubbock eastside schools as "colored," was introduced into evidence in federal court Tuesday during the conclusion of the second day of proceedings in the Lubbock public schools desegregation trial.

Government attorney Robert Rodriguez noted that although the map was not sponsored by the school board, it may have had an effect on housing patterns. The "colored" notation added by the chamber reflects the school board's past segregative acts, he said, which in turn may have influenced the current racial makeup of the city's residential areas.

The legend on the map identifies Dunbar High School, Struggs Junior High and Iles and Wheatley elementaries as "colored."

Chamber assistant manager Grey Lewis testified that during certain years the map was published, there was no indication of which schools were predominantly black. Maps published in 1963, 1969, 1970 to 1972, 1975, and 1978 to 1979, did not indicate minority schools, but Lewis said he did not know why the notation was left off those maps.

Rodriguez said government attorneys "are in no way suggesting that the LISD (Lubbock Independent School District) contracted for publication of the map."

School attorney Tom Johnson repeatedly objected to allowing the map as evidence, asking Lewis whether "there is any indication that the schools had anything to do with the placement of 'colored' on those maps?"

"No," replied Lewis.

The chamber representative said approximately 25,000 copies of the map were published in 1965 and about 10,000 were published in 1961. He said he did not know how many were printed in 1967.

News Conference Set By School Trustee

Lubbock school trustee Deaton Rigsby has scheduled a news conference for 10:30 a.m. today to announce whether he will run for election this year.

The 49-year-old Rigsby was appointed to his Place 3 seat on the school board in June 1979 to fill the position left vacant by the death of Charles Waters. Rigsby was selected from a field of 12 candidates and was sworn in as an interim school board member June 28.

A longtime Lubbock resident, Rigsby is an independent insurance agent and a former member of the Lubbock City Council. He also has served on the Tax Board of Equalization here.

When he accepted the school board appointment in June, Rigsby said he would seriously consider running for the trustee seat. He also said that Lubbock has a good school system and that he was interested in continuing that system and even improving on it.

Rigsby and his wife, Jan, have six children.

U.S. Attorney William Moore of Savannah declined to give details of the alleged conspiracy, but sources said the drugs involved were marijuana and cocaine.

After calling four witnesses during the first day and a half of the segregation trial, the school district rested its case Tuesday afternoon.

During afternoon proceedings, Lubbock Realtor Bobby Williams testified that schools, including racial makeup, figure highly in home buying decisions in the city.

The government witness, owner of an insurance-real estate agency, said that "from my experience ... one of the first questions asked is about schools." He said most of his clients appear to want to move to an area near neighborhood schools.

Those statements by Williams contradicted testimony by schools' expert witness Karl Lynn Guntermann, a Texas Tech University professor, who said that his studies show schools to be an "insignificant factor" in home purchasing decisions.

U.S. Justice Department attorneys are attempting to prove that school board acts, such as placement of schools and drawing of attendance zones, have influenced housing patterns sufficiently to preserve some segregated schools.

Specifically they contend that school officials have kept the white population moving south and southwest through placement of schools.

The school district maintains it has followed population trends, not created them.

In his testimony, Williams elaborated that he has found some potential home buyers "didn't want to live east of Avenue Q." He added he "had the impression" such buyers did not want their children to attend such schools as Dunbar High.

Williams said that for people concerned about the schools, "Monterey (High School) is the number one priority area."

When asked by government attorney Gilah Goldsmith about "what makes a school good or bad," Williams replied that "the number one factor would be racial."

Later, under cross examination, schools attorney Johnson asked Williams whether real estate agents sometimes utilize various items, such as schools, as selling points, even if the purchaser had not inquired about those factors.

Williams replied that they probably do.

Then Johnson asked, "Isn't it true that some of the reputations of the schools may have been created by people in the real estate business?"

"I don't think so," Williams answered.

"Are you sure?" Johnson asked. "I'm sure I don't think so," the realtor said amid some laughter in the courtroom.

The trial is scheduled to resume at 8:30 a.m. today with government expert witness George Henderson expected to take the stand the entire morning.

Earlier Tuesday, Guntermann said studies he has conducted in South and Southwest Lubbock show "schools are an insignificant factor in residential locations decisions. I found that to be rather surprising," he said.

A school district expert witness today testified that, to his surprise, schools are a "significant factor" in homebuying decisions as the latest hearing in the Lubbock public schools segregation suit went into the second day.

Dr. Karl Lynn Guntermann, associate professor of finance at Texas Tech University, said studies he has conducted in South and Southwest Lubbock show "schools are an insignificant factor in residential location decisions. I found that to be rather surprising."

He continued that he expected the school factor to be important because "in many cases home purchasers will state that as a reason" for locating in a particular area.

Guntermann said he studied the areas surrounding Williams Elementary in Southwest Lubbock during development in the early 1970s and also the area south and southwest of Loop 289 around 1977.

Guntermann said he found that, even more than school factors, variables such as size and age of the house are important in home purchasing decisions "at least almost all the time."

"This means in spite of what people may say about its importance (school location), it doesn't come down to being that important."

However, government attorneys argued the validity of Guntermann's study, questioning whether deliberately discriminatory acts by the school board had been considered.

Guntermann acknowledged he had not addressed the factor of segregation in his studies nor the effect of segregated acts by the school board.

Expert testimony took up all of this morning's proceedings with another Tech professor testifying to the relationship between income and housing purchases.

Dr. James Jonish, chairman of economics at Tech, testified that his studies indicate that income is generally the major factor in decisions of home buying.

Jonish said he has "had a hard time accepting" the role of the schools in housing decisions. He noted that "there are more efficient discriminators in housing."

However, government attorney Gilah Goldsmith contended that were Jonish's theory valid, different races at the same income level would live in the same neighborhoods.

Jonish acknowledged that assumption, adding that his theory was general in nature and not intended to cover all situations.

Times Of London Bans 'Ms.', Calls It Artificial, Ugly, Silly

LONDON (AP) — The Times of London has banned use of the title Ms., calling it "artificial, ugly, silly... a faddish middle-class plaything." American feminist leaders defended the title, saying men would think differently about it if they had to be identified by marital status.

The British newspaper announced Tuesday it was banishing Ms. in the latest supplement of The Times' stylebook. Ms. is used by some women instead of Miss or Mrs.

"The forlorn fatherless and motherless little word Ms. is cast into the lexicographical outer darkness," wrote Trevor Fishlock, who writes the regular column London Diary.

"This is a rallying point for common-sense. There are several reasons why Ms. should be allowed no air," Fishlock wrote. "It is artificial, ugly, silly, means nothing and is rotten English. It is a faddish middle-class plaything, and far from disguising the marital status of women, as is claimed, it draws attention to it. It is a vanity."

He added: "there is an important battle to be fought for all women, not just a tiny elite," but that "Ms. is one of the excesses of the revolution and should be junked."

The Times, once called "The Thunderer" because of the tone of its editorials, has an influence in Britain far beyond what its circulation of 300,000 would suggest. It is must reading for every government official, parliamentarian or businessman. It is considered the voice of the Establishment.

London Times' Editor William Rees-

Mogg originally forbade use of the term, without value judgment, in a June 1976 ruling that excepted "those occasions when a special point is being made in the course of a story, as heading to a letter, or as self-description, in quotation marks."

Explained Letter Page Editor Leon Pilpel, who has often been involved in style decisions: "We use Miss or Mrs. because The Times seeks to tell its readers who these people are."

At The Guardian, a national daily with a liberal bent, an editor said: "We use Ms. happily for people who want that term used. We don't use it as a general rule. There was a bit of puzzlement when it was first introduced, but I don't think there are any strong feelings about it."

Asked to comment on The Times' decision, "Ms." magazine editor and pioneer feminist, Gloria Steinem, said in New York: "I think that America has declared its independence from England a long time ago and we need not pay attention to this. (The term) Ms. is very important and I think men would realize this if they had the male equivalent of Mrs. or Miss... Women should be called whatever they want to be called."

Ms. Steinem, which is the title by which she prefers to be called, said the term had existed for about 30 or 35 years and that it was first used in secretarial handbooks as a way of addressing a woman when one did not know her marital status.

"If Fishlock had to be identified entirely by his wife's name, I think he'd suffer a loss of identity," she said.

Betty Friedan, a pioneer of the women's movement and author of "The Feminine Mystique," commented: "It is a perfectly commonsensical way to indicate women." Demanding the term be accepted "isn't the most important battle" of the movement, she said, "but it makes a lot of sense. All men are called Mr., regardless of marital status, simply as adult persons."

"There's really a lack of understanding of what's behind it (the term)," said Barbara Rochman, executive director of the New York Chapter of the National Organization for Women. "Men never have been classified according to marital status. Women are. That shouldn't be. I don't think it's an elitist issue."

She added: "It's interesting that The London Times banished it but The New York Times has never used it."

A spokeswoman for The New York Times, quoting from the newspaper's stylebook, said the term Ms. is used only in quoted matter, letters to the editor and in news articles when discussing the term itself.

The Associated Press Stylebook says Ms. is to be used only if it is the preferred title.

Patrons: Khomeini Hated, Bjorn Borg Admired

LONDON (UPI) — The votes are in for the 14th annual awards at Madame Tussaud's and the tally shows Ayatollah Khomeini is more hated than Hitler and Bjorn Borg is more popular than Muhammad Ali.

The ballots were cast by some 300 visitors to Tussaud wax museums in London and Amsterdam last month.

"We handed out 300 questionnaires in the week before Christmas, which is good time because we get a good cross-section of foreign visitors as well as natives," said Juliet Simpkins, publicity director for Madame Tussaud's in London.

"We do this every year and usually strong pattern emerges in the voting in each category — for instance, the Ayatollah Khomeini beating Hitler by an enormous number of votes for the most hated and feared category.

"Hitler has only once in the past few years been knocked from first place and it took Idi Amin to do it then."

Voting is broken down into eight categories — politics, sport, entertainment, arts, beauty, hate and fear, all-time hero or heroine and favorite figure on display in Madame Tussaud's.

Telly Savalas as the television detective Kojak was the "all-time" favorite figure on display at Madame Tussaud's in London and Rembrandt was the top pick in Amsterdam.

Winston Churchill was the favorite hero in London again this year, while Joan of Arc beat out 1978 winner Martin Luther King as the favorite hero or heroine in Amsterdam this year.

In politics, the local vote carried the day. Margaret Thatcher beat last year's winner, Jimmy Carter, in London and Dutch Prime Minister Andreas Van Agt won in Amsterdam for the second consecutive year.

Pancreas Transplant Patient 'Doing Well'

DALLAS (AP) — A 27-year-old woman was reported in stable condition and "doing well" after receiving a pancreas in rare transplant surgery for her diabetes.

Doctors said the woman came through last week's surgery "fine" and that the donor pancreas is functioning normally, bringing her blood sugar levels within the normal range.

It was the third pancreas transplant performed by the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School team and one of only about a dozen of its kind ever done in the United States, the doctors said.

"The patient is stable and is doing well," Dr. Richard Dickerman, assistant professor of surgery, said Monday. "She has been sitting up on the edge of her bed, talking. We're pretty excited about it."

The pancreas, in addition to making digestive enzymes, is the body organ that produces insulin, a hormone that controls the level of sugar in the blood.

Diabetics suffer from pancreatic malfunction that leads to insulin deficiency. Many must take daily insulin shots as a result.

Dickerman said the woman, who is from Arlington, has been a diabetic for 12 years and had a kidney transplant 15 months ago after vascular problems, which are common in diabetes, caused kidney failure. The pancreas transplant is intended to prevent further vascular damage.

"It (the surgery) was her decision. She didn't want to wait for further problems to develop. She already was experiencing mild problems with her eyes," said Dickerman.

He said the surgery, developed by a team at the University of Minnesota, was still highly experimental.

One of the two previous pancreas transplant recipients at the medical school was suffering from serious side effects from his disease at the time of the surgery and died a few days after the operation. Medical school officials said the second patient's body rejected the transplant and the patient was placed back on insulin injections.

During the one-hour operation Saturday, surgeons took a portion of the pancreas from a shooting victim and placed it in the patient's abdomen. The transplanted gland was given a new blood supply by connecting its blood vessels to an artery in the patient's leg.

Dickerman said surgeons have had more success with the new type of pancreas transplant because the patient's own pancreas is left in place to furnish the necessary enzymes to the bowel for digestion.

He said enzymes secreted by the donor pancreas are suppressed by drug and X-ray treatment and are absorbed in the abdomen.

Although about 4,000 kidneys are transplanted each year in the United States, pancreas transplants, like heart transplants, have been relatively rare in recent years due to rejection problems.

Dickerman said it will take three months to determine if the patient will develop any rejection problems.

Gonzalez Suggests Big Reward Fund

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—It will take a reward fund of $3 million to solve the assassination last May 29 of a federal judge, says U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, who has asked President Carter to make the money available.
Rewards totaling $125,000 are being offered in the unsolved slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., gunned down outside his townhouse as he left for work.
The federal government is offering $25,000 of that reward; a group of attorneys is posting the rest.
But there have been no arrests in that assassination or the Nov. 21, 1978, attempted assassination here of a federal prosecutor.

"They (investigators) aren't getting anywhere now," Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat, said. "They don't have any leads. It is my settled opinion that unless they go to this level — up to $3 million — they won't get anywhere."
Gonzalez said he has introduced a resolution in Congress seeking the money. Michael A. Morrow, special agent in charge of the FBI's San Antonio office, declined to comment on Gonzalez's resolution.
Sam Millsap, spokesman for the attorneys, said the group would favor increasing the reward total if federal authorities believe it will help the investigation.

Minister Defends Character Of Iranians

HOUSTON (AP)—A black minister who recently returned from a two-week mission to Iran said Tuesday, "The Iranians are not militaristic. They want an honorable peace. They love Americans, but have no faith in the American government."
The Rev. Bobby Mills of Houston told a news conference the Iranian citizens do not believe that Americans "value human lives. And we must demonstrate that we do. And we must understand our nation cannot police the world any longer. We must live in peace and harmony."
Mills was one of four black ministers who went to Iran seeking release of the 50 American hostages held by militants at the U.S. Embassy.
The group returned after they failed to meet with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and were denied permission to talk with the hostages.
But, Mills said, the mission had been successful and a major breakthrough had been made in solving the hostage crisis.
Michael Cooper, lawyer for the ministers, said the group had been invited to return to Iran Feb. 4 to participate in a conference of some 500 persons from "throughout the world."

"and on our return we have been promised a meeting with the ayatollah and we may talk with the hostages. That is why we call our first mission a success."
Cooper said the conference would look into the problems of Iran today and said expenses for the five Houston delegates would be paid by the Iranian government.
The attorney said the "hostage crisis has moved to another level. The Iranians want the world to understand the suffering during the reign of the shah. Once the world understands, the hostage crisis will be solved."
"The Iranians want justice for all the people of the world. They simply want the people of the world to understand their historic suffering and American's participation in that oppression."
The two ministers at the news conference said they had been assured by the militants that the hostages were in good

Delay In First Space Shuttle Flight Seen By NASA's Chief

WASHINGTON (AP)—The first flight of the space shuttle may have to be delayed until early next year to assure that all problems have been resolved, the head of the space agency reported Tuesday.
"NASA said last month there was a 10 percent possibility the first shuttle, Columbia, could be launched as early as June 30, a 50 percent chance by the end of September and an 80 percent chance by the end of 1980. Only a few pessimists predicted a 1981 launch date."
Frosch testified before the House Committee on Science and Technology, which is considering the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's proposed $5.7 billion budget for fiscal 1981.
The shuttle, a reusable ship which will land on earth like a glider, originally was to have undergone its first manned launch in early 1979. Repeated postponements of its maiden flight stemmed mainly from technical problems with the shuttle's engines and thermal protection system.

On the first trip to Iran, the ministers said they believed the ayatollah would give preference to black clerics who wanted to see the hostages.
At the news conference, Mills said, "Iranians do not play up the race issue. They do have empathy for the suffering of black people."

Census Projections Say State To Receive Two House Seats

WASHINGTON (AP)—Census Bureau projections released Tuesday indicate that Texas will receive two additional House seats after the 1980 census, raising its congressional delegation to the third largest.
The new projections, which show 14 House seats expected to change hands, are the first based on 1979 population estimates. The estimates released last year indicated that only 11 seats would be affected.
States expected to gain the additional three seats are Florida, New Mexico and Colorado, while Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts suffered the additional losses.
Texas currently has 24 congressmen and is tied with Illinois as the fourth-largest state delegation. Pennsylvania has the third largest group, trailing California and New York.
Final reapportionment will not take place until after the 1980 census, and the report cautioned that even small differences between 1979 estimates and the official 1980 figures could affect reapportionment.
The new report indicated that only Florida would fare better than Texas in reapportionment, adding three seats to its 15-member House delegation.
California, which already has the largest delegation in the House with 43 congressmen, also would receive two new House seats.
Other states expected to gain one seat each are Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah and Washington.
New York is projected to lose four seats, dropping its House delegation from 39 to 35 members.
States expected to lose two seats each are Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey and South Dakota would lose one seat each.
The House is limited to 435 members, so seats are shifted from state-to-state after each census to accommodate the moving population.

Energy Adviser Warns Against Misleading Auto Mileage Trend

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average 27.5-mile-per-gallon automobile of 1985 may actually get only 19.5 mpg on the road if the present trend of misleading mileage figures continues, a House subcommittee was told Tuesday.

Barry McNutt, a technical adviser to the Department of Energy, said the mileage stickers on new car windows overstate their gas mileage by as much as 30 percent.

If the trend continues, he said, auto-makers may meet government goals of high-mileage cars in part by publishing higher figures rather than by getting more miles per gallon.

"The impact of this trend of increasing shortfall, if unchanged, would be to increase automobile fuel consumption by

The London five-power naval conference opened in 1935.

1 million barrels," McNutt said. McNutt testified before a House Government Operations subcommittee on energy that is looking into consumer complaints that their new cars don't live up to the mileage figures on the window sticker.

The reasons for the mileage discrepancies vary, witnesses said. Mileage figures are computed from prototype vehicles rather than cars on the assembly line, and critics say the companies tailor the prototype to the test.

Subsequent technical changes through the model year can change the mileage, but are not reflected in changed stickers. And, the tests are run by professional drivers under carefully controlled climate conditions on machines called dynamometers, something like automobile treadmills.

The man responsible for mileage standards, Douglas Costle, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, argued that the stickers do their consumer protection job as long as car buyers remember that the figures are for comparison and not a prediction of what mileage actually will be obtained. He said the fact that actual mileage is below the sticker mileage doesn't affect the comparison.

One critic, Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety, said the warning to use the numbers only for comparison doesn't have much impact on the average car buyer. He said it implies that poorer drivers get worse mileage, and "everybody thinks they're a good driver."

Ditlow, whose organization is a spin-off of consumer advocate Ralph Nader's operation, said the problem is lax EPA enforcement.

"In some cases, EPA is a willing accomplice to the auto industry in generating phony mileage data," said Ditlow. "The EPA test procedures continue to be easily and substantially circumvented by auto manufacturers."

But Costle, noting that his agency is more often accused of being hostile to business than friendly, said there are other factors.

Costle said the 1975 law that set mileage goals for the nation's auto industry — the reason the EPA began testing for mileage in the first place and the source of its current mileage data — restricted the extent to which EPA could change the testing procedure to make it resemble the real world.

And Costle disputed McNutt's assertion that the situation is getting worse. He said EPA has refined its standards somewhat over the last two years, and actual mileage in 1979 fell only 16.1 percent short of the sticker mileage, on the average. In 1977, he said, stickers overstated the mileage by 19.6 percent.

Mother, Pathologist Testify In Man's Infant-Slaying Trial

A Lubbock pathologist who performed an unusual skeletal autopsy on the remains of a 3-month-old infant allegedly beaten to death three years ago told Lubbock state court jury Tuesday he believed the baby's death was caused by skull fractures of "more than average" traumatic nature.

Dr. John P. Ray's testimony before the panel followed that of the tearful mother of the child, who told jurors she vowed to return one day to the unmarked grave in northwest Lubbock County where she buried her dead son the night of Jan. 15, 1977.

Dr. Ray and Phyllis Olivas were the state's key witnesses Tuesday as the murder trial of Patrick Brito Olivas, Mrs. Olivas's common-law husband, entered its second day. The 49-year-old defendant is accused of fatally beating the couple's small son, Serapio Roman Olivas.

Mrs. Olivas, who did not look at her husband during her two hours of testimony before the 140th District Court jury, said her husband began beating their child when the infant began crying as they argued in their Clovis Road motel room the night of Jan. 15, 1977.

When Olivas finally stopped his assault on the child, she told the eight-man, four-woman panel, and left to buy some cigarettes, she grabbed the child and began walking to Amarillo.

But when she reached the intersection of a county road and North University Avenue, about one mile north of FM 1729, she told the panel, she discovered her infant son was dead and buried him.

Tuesday morning, Mrs. Olivas slowly recounted the tale of digging her son's small grave with her hands after discovering he was not breathing and was "real white; he was cold."

"I said I'd come back some day," she added, beginning to cry softly.

Earlier, Mrs. Olivas had described the beatings she says she and her son suffered at her husband's hands.

When the couple arrived at their room at the Satellite Motel, she said, he accused her of having an affair and an argument began. During the fight, she said, the baby began crying.

Mrs. Olivas said her husband, with whom she had lived four years, picked up the child and began slapping him. She said he then grabbed the baby's feet and began banging his back and head against the bed.

When he grabbed the baby by the back of the neck and repeatedly doubled the infant's body over forward, the baby stopped crying and was "just sniffling," she added.

"He (the baby) was conscious, I think," Mrs. Olivas said. "Not too much, but a little bit."

As soon as Olivas left the room, she said, she bundled up the child and ran from the motel. She told lead prosecutor Mark McBride she was afraid of her husband and her only thought was to reach her family in Amarillo.

However, after she buried the infant and began walking toward the paved roadway, she said Olivas, who apparently had been searching for her and their son, picked her up and took her back into town.

She said he threatened to kill her if she told anyone about the beating and instructed her to tell relatives the child had died and was buried in Mexico.

Mrs. Olivas added that her husband never showed any remorse for his acts that night.

"Pat acted like it never happened," she said.

Despite an hour of rigorous cross-examination by defense counsel Pat Simek, Mrs. Olivas refused to alter her story.

She repeatedly denied questions and implications that she had accidentally injured the child and was covering her acts by blaming Olivas.

Similarly, Dr. Ray also refused to back down on his opinion as to the cause of the child's death.

Ray said he found two fractures, "major" injuries to an infant, in one of the skull pieces he examined last year.

And while the skeletal autopsy is one of only about six the pathologist has performed, Ray told Simek that he could say "with reasonable medical certainty" that the fracture and probable ensuing brain hemorrhage caused the baby's death.

Ray said his opinion was supported by the type of blood pigment found along the fractures, indicating they had occurred before the baby died, as well as the fragile nature of infant's bones. When Simek asked the doctor if it were possible the fracture occurred several days before death, Ray emphatically answered no, listing the same reasons.

And, Ray said, he believed the severe trauma that produced the fractures were more consistent with a hypothetical beating proposed by prosecutor McBride than with another type of head injury.

Oil Companies Report Jump In Profits, Earnings

By The Associated Press
Gains in North Sea crude oil production helped spur Conoco Inc., the nation's ninth-largest oil company, to an 80.7 percent jump in profits and eleventh-ranked Phillips Petroleum Co. to a 24 percent earnings increase in 1979, the companies said Tuesday.

The announcements continued the stream of higher earnings reports from major oil companies that resulted in part from the doubling of world oil prices last year.

Conoco also said it is stepping up its capital spending program by 17.7 percent this year, raising its outlay for energy exploration and development and other major projects to $2 billion from $1.7 billion in 1978.

Phillips said earlier its capital spending budget would rise to $1.9 billion this year from $1.4 billion in 1978.

In another development, Cities Service Co. said it is boosting its quarterly dividend by a dime to $1 a share on March 3 to shareholders of record Feb. 11.

Cities Service, the 17th-largest oil company, also said it planned a 3-for-1 stock split.

Conoco, based in Stamford, Conn., said it earned $815.4 million, or $7.58 a share, against $451.3 million, or $4.20 a share, in 1978. Fourth-quarter earnings rose to $190.7 million, or $1.77 a share, up 22.8 percent from $155.2 million, or $1.45 a share, in the fourth quarter of 1978.

Annual revenues rose to $13.1 billion from $9.9 billion; fourth-quarter revenues totaled $3.8 billion, against $2.8 billion.

Phillips said in Bartlesville, Okla., it earned $891.1 million, or $5.77 a share, last year.

Major Arab Oil Exporters Follow Saudi Arabia's Price Increase

NEW YORK (AP)—Iraq, the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait and Qatar Tuesday followed Saudi Arabia in $2-a-barrel crude oil price increases that left observers surprised and worried that further boosts were on the way.

"This whole thing doesn't seem to make sense," a trader at one large U.S. oil company said of Tuesday's 7 percent to 8 percent increases. "We've gone back into the leapfrogging game again," said another. Both asked not to be quoted by name.

The Kuwaiti move to $27.50 was announced by the country's oil minister, Sheikh Ali Khalifa Al Sabah, while the other increases were reported by the official United Arab Emirates news agency and also by industry sources in New York.

As was the case with the 8.3 percent Saudi increase, which came on top of a 33 percent boost last month, the latest increases were retroactive to Jan. 1.

Iraq, the second-largest member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries after Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar provide around 2 percent of U.S. oil needs.

Iraq's price rose to $27.96, the United Arab Emirates went to $30.56, and Qatar's climbed to $29.23.

Saudi Arabia provides about 7.4 percent of U.S. oil needs, and its $2 increase to $26 per 42-gallon barrel is expected to add up to a penny to the average price of a gallon of gasoline and heating oil in the United States. The other increases could add a half-cent or less to prices at the pump.

Producer price increases already have added 14 cents or more to the U.S. price of a gallon of gasoline since mid-December.

Industry analysts had said the latest

Saudi boost was designed to bring the country more in line with OPEC's moderate members — including the four who raised prices Tuesday — which last month had set their prices on the basis of a theoretical $26 Saudi price.

Saudi Arabia pumps nearly one-third of the 31 million barrels produced daily by OPEC members, and its prices are the benchmark on which other cartel prices traditionally have been set.

But traditional differentials between Saudi prices and those of other OPEC members widened sharply in 1979 as consuming nations scrambled to rebuild supplies.

Islamic Officials Denounce Pressure

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Islamic foreign ministers concluded an emergency session Tuesday night condemning "Soviet military aggression against the people of Afghanistan" and denouncing any sort of pressure on Islamic nations.

A joint declaration opposed the use of force or imposition of economic or political sanctions against Iran by the United States, and condemned Egypt's establishment of relations with Israel.

The three-day meeting was attended by ministers from 35 of the 41 member nations of the Organization of Islamic Countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization. The declaration incorporated the resolutions adopted by the closed-door plenary sessions.

The conference chairman, Agha Shahi of Pakistan, addressing the final session, said the decisions taken by the ministers demonstrate the cohesion and unity of the Islamic world and would have far-reaching impact on the future course of events not only "in our immediate region but far beyond."

Shahi declared: "Let there be no doubt in anyone's mind that the Islamic nation all over the world is vibrant with vitality and fully prepared to meet the challenges confronting it. It is prepared to defend its security against forces of domination and exploitation."

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass said the Islamic foreign ministers' call for withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan was a "crude interference" in Afghanistan's internal affairs.

"The resolution repeats the malicious inventions of imperialist propaganda directed against the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan and the Soviet Union," said a Tass report read over Soviet television. The report was the first official Soviet reaction to the resolution.

Tass said the Islamabad session acted "under the influence of imperialist forces, and first of all of the United States."

The United States, while applying crude, arm-twisting tactics and leaning on the support of those Moslem regimes which depend on it, is trying at all costs to distract the attention of the countries of this region from the real threat coming from the forces of imperialism and Zionism," Tass said.

Tass said Washington sought to "switch the attention of Arabs and Moslems to an imaginary danger and to isolate the Arab countries from their true friends."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the strong anti-Soviet stand taken by the conference "reinforces the international outrage" was expressed recently by the United Nations General Assembly.

"We share the deep concern of Islamic countries over the brutal Soviet aggression, which has the effect of denying self-determination to the independent-minded and deeply religious Afghan people," Carter said.

Talking to newsmen after the ministers meeting ended, Shahi, the conference chairman, said the question of the Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy complex in Tehran, Iran was mentioned by some of the foreign ministers in their speeches during the closed-door sessions.

Soviet Official Condemns U.S. Policy

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria and the Soviet Union accused the United States on Tuesday of trying to divert Arab attention from the Palestinian issue toward Iran and Afghanistan.

A joint communique issued at the end of a three-day visit by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko also said they respect the right of the pro-Soviet government in Afghanistan to defend its soil and its non-alignment.

During his visit as guest of President Hafez Assad, the Soviet official condemned American policy as a threat to world peace. While in Syria, Gromyko also met with Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Syria refused to attend a meeting of foreign ministers from Islamic countries in Islamabad, Pakistan. The conference adopted a resolution on Tuesday condemning the Soviet Union for military intervention in Afghanistan and demanding the "immediate withdrawal of Soviet troops."

The foreign ministers, denouncing pressures of all kinds against Islamic countries, also opposed the use of force or imposition of economic or political sanctions against Iran by the United States and condemned Egypt's establishment of relations with Israel. The conference included delegations from 35 of 41 member countries and the PLO.

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass said the Islamic foreign ministers' call for withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan was "crude interference" in Afghanistan's internal affairs.

"The resolution repeats the malicious inventions of imperialist propaganda directed against the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan and the Soviet Union," said a Tass report read over Soviet television. The report was the first official Soviet reaction to the resolution.

Syria's invitation to Gromyko was seen as giving the Soviets an Arab platform to criticize the United States and a show of Soviet support for Assad, whose possible military threat to Israel has been greatly diminished by The Egypt-Israel peace treaty.

In the joint communique, Syria and the Soviet Union condemned the American-sponsored Camp David peace accords that led to the treaty, and President Carter's efforts to rally world opposition to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

They cited "the importance of respecting the will of Afghanistan to defend the land, territorial integrity and unity of the motherland and a policy of non-alignment."

The communique said the United States claims to be the protector of Islam while it protects Israel, which it said occupies Islamic holy places and Islamic territories — a theme Gromyko raised in a toast Sunday, calling America "the worst enemy of Islam."

Before boarding his plane to Moscow,

Gromyko said he was "very satisfied" with his talks with Assad and added: "We are very serious about continuing to build up our strong relationship in all fields."

The communique underscored Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's April, 13, 1974, declaration that Moscow would intervene to defend Syria if it comes under attack.

The PAUL BOONE Family would like to express their appreciation to the many blood donors who responded to the request for help on Jan. 25th.

Lubbock Windmill Enthusiast Recreates Them In Metal Sculpture

WINDMILL COMING ON — A windmill, like the "Texas 1890" to be depicted on one of five windmill postage stamps to be issued first in Lubbock Feb. 7, gets some finishing touches from Don Bloyd who made it of tin cans and welding rod. (Staff Photo)

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Windmills were special for Don Bloyd when he was growing up at Seagraves.

The sight of a windmill looming on the sandy horizon meant an oasis, a little greenery, a stock tank filled with water and, maybe, a little shade in which to rest.

"If there was nobody around for miles, you could slip off your clothes and cool off so good in the tank," Bloyd, now director of finance for the Lubbock post office, recalled.

Skimpy dipping was so popular at isolated windmills that one rancher lined a water tank with rock especially for swimming.

Windmills dotted the countryside and Bloyd stopped at all along the way on many of the summer days he spent hunting arrowheads.

When he took up metal sculpture, windmills were his main subject — for their importance to the West Texas economy and also because they are "one of the prettiest things we've got out here."

Nobody was more excited than Bloyd when Lubbock was chosen as the site for the first day of issue ceremonies for a book of postage stamps premiering Feb. 7.

A "Texas 1890" windmill is included among five historic American windmills depicted in the books, which go on sale only in Lubbock Feb. 7 at The Museum at Texas Tech. On the following day they will be available all over the country.

During first day ceremonies, the first ever for Lubbock, metal replicas of the Texas windmill made by Bloyd will be presented to national postal officials in Lubbock for the occasion.

A much larger sculpture will be presented to The Museum, which was chosen for the ceremony because of the windmills preserved there.

In creating the special sculptures, Bloyd adhered closely to the stamp artist's conception of the southwestern windmill — metal wheel and tower with an overhead tank like those seen mostly around homes and barns.

For his own collection and gifts for friends, Bloyd adds more realism — cross braces, a platform and a ladder to reach the platform.

The scenario for other windmill art varies as widely as that around windmills of his youth and those still plentiful along Bloyd's excursion routes.

Spotting new windmills and settings to feed a growing hobby is as exciting today as arrowhead hunting.

Bloyd got into the welded art two years ago when he bought the equipment for Mrs. Bloyd, who wanted it for her art expression. By the time they had figured out all the details, she was happier just adding his creations to the home decor and giving them to friends.

Raw material has never been a problem. First off, Bloyd hit on an endless supply — discarded tin cans and welding rod.

"You take something that's been thrown away and make something out of it. It's fun."

Friends began saving cans instead of tossing them in the trash. Bloyd reciprocated by making bread baskets, lamps or hanging ornaments.

At first Bloyd tried painting his artistic creations, but decided nothing could improve upon the metal as it turned to a variety of colors in reaction to the hot torch.

Whatever color he needs for effect can be supplied by an appropriately timed swipe of the torch.

He once stayed up all night to create an oil derrick setting to match a drawing for a rush gift.

Now, he stays up only long enough to add another metal reproduction of the windmill stamp to match a growing demand for the special edition honoring windmills.

Bombing Range Hazards Re-Emphasized

A-J Correspondent
CLOVIS, N.M. — Civilians who trespass on Melrose Bombing and Gunnery Range are risking severe injury to themselves, warn officials at Cannon Air Force Base.

Officials are concerned about civilians venturing onto the fenced off property, even if it is only to retrieve stray livestock, are offering to escort anyone needing access to the property.

Melrose Range, a tract of land fenced and marked as Air Force property 10 miles south of Melrose, is the target for aircraft from Cannon and other military installations dropping practice bombs.

An inert practice bomb weighs up to 25 pounds and hits the ground at more than 600 mph. Many aircraft also shoot 20- to 30-millimeter cannon at range targets.

Trespassers could be endangered by unexploded projectiles that may be on or beneath the ground. Such explosives could maim or severely burn a person.

A person needing to enter Melrose Range should contact the 27th Combat Support Group director of operations and training, Cannon AFB, N.M., 88101, or call 505-784-3311, extension 2225. An escort will be provided.

Former Lubbockite Designs W.C. Fields Stamp

W.C. Fields, the American comedian best remembered for his caustic wit and barbed comments about children and little old ladies, is featured on a new 15-cent commemorative stamp designed by a former Lubbock resident.

Free-lance illustrator Jim Sharpe, a former Texas Tech student and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude W. Sharpe of 1920 32nd St., designed the Fields commemorative stamp. The standard-size commemorative was issued Tuesday, the 100th anniversary of the entertainer's birth, in Beverly Hills, Calif.

The stamp honoring Fields is the fourth issue in the Performing Arts and Artists Series that began in 1978 and has included stamps for country singer Jimmie Rodgers, actor and playwright George M. Cohan and humorist Will Rogers.

Sharpe, who now lives with his wife and two children in Westport, Conn., designed all four stamps in the special series and is working on another one that will probably be issued later this year. "But I can't tell you what that one is yet," the artist said during a telephone interview Tuesday.

Designing stamps is a relatively new endeavor for Sharpe, who has illustrated more than 30 covers for Time magazine and TV Guide. "The stamps were a real treat, a high point in my career," he noted.

Working on the stamp illustrations was difficult, Sharpe said, because the portraits are reproduced on such a small scale. Sharpe explained that each likeness was developed as a composite of old photographs of each entertainer.

The Fields stamp shows two images of the comedian, one a portrait and the other a full-length view of him juggling. Fields liked to think of himself as "the greatest juggler on earth" and first made his reputation as a comic juggler.

Sharpe's own career in art actually had its beginnings in his early childhood. "I knew in the first grade exactly what I wanted to do," he said.

As a child, Sharpe first aspired to be a cartoonist and spent his leisure time creating comic strips. He started Tech in 1954 as an advertising art major and worked for a short period in the advertising department for Furr's Supermarkets.

Sharpe said he decided to become an illustrator after spending long hours studying a charcoal drawing by Norman Rockwell that hung in the old Tech Student Union Building.

His college career was temporarily interrupted about 1956, when he joined the U.S. Navy and served several years as a naval aviator. After leaving the service, Sharpe enrolled in the Art Center College of Design in Los Angeles, Calif., where he graduated with honors in 1964.

Sharpe spent the next four years in Detroit, Mich., working first for the Campbell-Ewald Co. as the art director for the Chevrolet account. During that period, he visited Lubbock to do an ad-

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: We have three children, eight, seven and five years of age. I am busy cleaning, cooking, baking, marketing, doing the laundry, mending, canning, taking care of the yard and keeping two cars washed and waxed. I drive the kids to Sunday school, piano lessons, dental appointments, etc.

I am not complaining, Ann. I actually enjoy my life, but my husband is making me miserable with his insistence that I go out and get a job. He keeps yelling, "Everybody's wife is working but you!"

Do I have to get pregnant again so he will let me stay home? Please tell me if I am "not up on the latest," as my husband insists. I feel awfully inadequate. — Lima, Ohio Problem

Dear Lima: Apparently it's your husband who is "not up on the latest." Tell him Lincoln freed the slaves in 1863.

The way I figure it, your husband would have to shell out about $50,000 a year if he had to pay for the services you are performing. Tell Mr. Money-Hungry that Ann Landers says he's in a semi-conscious state, and I hope he'll put a rubber band around his head and snap out of it.

Dear Ann Landers: So much for your advice to "decent girls." You said that if you work the bars at 5 p.m., you'll find men who are also working the bars looking for pushovers. "Save your money and take a trip to Bermuda, Nassau, or Aspen."

I've always had faith in you, so I took your advice and went to the Bahamas. The day I arrived I was mugged, robbed and beaten with a block from my luxury hotel. Your "counsel" cost me $450 in medical bills plus the anxiety of receiving medical attention from strange doctors 2,000 miles from home. Thanks a lot. — Broke, Bruised, And Wiser

Dear B. B. & W: Were you alone when you were mugged? What time was it? An unaccompanied woman on a pitch-black night is easy prey to a mugger on any street in any city, large or small, inside the U.S. or out.

I'm sorry you had such an unpleasant experience, but there's no substitute for good judgment.

die an insult far better than a complaint. Train yourself to say, "Thank you, I'm so glad you like this dress (or coat, or new hair-do). I like it, too." Another appropriate response is, "How nice of you to notice. Thank you."

Confused about what's right and what's wrong in today's "new morality"? You're not alone. If you want honest, down-to-earth information on your sex questions, read Ann Landers' new booklet, "High School Sex and How to Deal With It — A Guide for Teens and Their Parents." Send $0.50 plus a "long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Expert Gives Card Safety Suggestions

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Protect against credit card loss to avoid problems and financial burdens.

Millions of credit cards are lost or stolen each year, with millions of dollars of unauthorized purchases made on these cards, says Claudia Kerbel, a consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A & M University System.

Consumers are partially protected against financial losses when credit cards are lost or stolen. The federal Truth-in-Lending Act provides that the maximum liability of a credit card holder is $50 for unauthorized charges made on a credit card. However, many consumers carry a number of credit cards and, for example, they lose ten cards they are liable for $500, the specialist points out.

To avoid problems and financial burdens of credit card loss, follow these tips:

1. Cut up and throw away all cards not needed or used regularly.
  2. Maintain in a safe place a list of all credit cards and their numbers.
  3. Keep a list of the toll-free numbers to contact if cards are lost.
  4. Notify the issuer of a lost card immediately.
  5. Upon receiving a new card, sign it immediately.
  6. Never loan a credit card to anyone who hasn't been authorized to use it by the issuer — this is a violation of contract.
- To recognize the possible signs of credit card theft, check the monthly bill closely, Mrs. Kerbel advises. If an expected monthly bill doesn't arrive, someone may have stolen the card and sent in an address change.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

The caps on two cleaning products in my bathroom looked alike, but the products should not be used for the same purpose as one is very harsh. One day, I mistakenly grabbed the wrong one.

To avoid making this mistake again, I painted the top of the container of harsh cleanser with bright red fingernail polish to call my attention to it.

This idea could work with any product that could be mistaken for another when you're in a hurry. — Carol

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK
Like some bumper stickers aren't funny, you know?

Like, "Insanity Is Hereditary. You Can Get It From Your Children." You've all seen that one, right?

For sure, I've got a few good hours left before I check into the home, but as sure as I'm sitting here I've got the first symptoms of a case of children called, "Trites Disease." I mean really!

You're not going to believe this, but I used to speak in clear, concise, coherent sentences. At the end of them my voice fell until it was almost inaudible. Then a few years ago, every sentence became a question. I began to develop creeping clichés. Not a lot at first, but just a few "you knows" and a couple of "reallsys!"

Today, my brain has absolutely no control over my mouth. It just rambles. It reacts to every word uttered whether it makes sense or not.

Like someone can say, "My dog died," and I'll answer, "You're kidding!"

Or someone will say, "Dad is being held for ransom and we need $10,000 in a bowling bag at the playground by noon," and I'll reply quickly, "No problem."

My reaction to anything, whether it be winning the Pillsbury bake-off or the nomination for the presidency, is "Awwrite."

Like really? I'm an English major, you know?

I'm trying to fight this speech-crippling disease for sure, but it isn't easy with three kids running in and out who speak nothing but children.

When I told my friends that I had taken "right on" out of my vocabulary and was working on "sorry 'bout that," my friends just smiled.

"It won't do any good," they said. Children are carriers of all kinds of bad habits. Then they mature and move on to adulthood and you're stuck.

Last night I was in my son's apartment when he said, "Mom, sit up straight or your spine will grow that way. And get your feet off the furniture. I just had it cleaned. Stop snacking or you won't eat your dinner."

I stood up and shouted, "Really, how rude! If I were a few years older, I bet you'd have a little more respect for me, right? Well, for sure, this is the last time I put up with your nagging, you know?"

He outgrew it. Maybe I will too.

For children who are frightened by an ice pack after getting a bump on the head or lip, try using teething rings, the kind with the liquid inside.

Keep them in the freezer for those little emergencies. A child can easily hold one next to the "hurt."

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 23-year-old male. I was born with an undescended testicle. My parents never talked to me about it. I have avoided jobs, etc., that would require physical examinations. I can't remember ever having an examination. I never wanted anyone to know about the condition. I understand this can lead to cancer, although the problem has never caused pain or discomfort (physically).

Is there such a thing as an artificial testicle? I shy away from relationships with girls and I wonder about sex life and infertility. I really want two testicles. Can you help? — J.W.

I truly hope that I can.
An undescended testicle occurs in seven or eight of every thousand males.

First, about sex and fertility. The scrotal sac is about two degrees cooler than temperature inside the body, where the undescended testicle remains. The cooler outside temperature is ideal for best sperm production. The higher temperature inside seems to damage the testicle.

Men with one testicle are fully capable of normal relations. They produce adequate male hormones. Although their sperm count (numbers) may be lower they generally are capable of producing their own children. That's the good news.

As you imply, there is a greater chance of cancer developing in an undescended testicle than in a normal one, so they are removed, particularly if they have not descended by puberty.

Yes, it is possible to use certain inert (plastic) substances for placement in the scrotum to simulate a real testicle. No one need ever know.

You are young, so there probably have not been any serious consequences from your lack of medical attention up to now. But don't let this doubt and anxiety burden you another day. Be examined and get the wheels of medical treatment rolling.

South Plains Offers New Courses

WELLAND (Special) — Short courses in "Home Landscape Development Course I," "Song Writing" and "Financial Planning for Present and Future" begin next week at South Plains College.

Preparation of the lawn for summer, addition of new trees and shrubs, pruning and starting a compost pile will be included in "Home Landscape Development," which begins Monday.

Earl Gerstenberger, instructor, said the course will cover the basic activities to help you to insure a beautiful yard this summer. Classes meet from 7-10 p.m. Mondays for two weeks in the SPC Agricultural Building, Room 2. Cost is $10.

Dan Hanson will teach a 12-hour, six-week course in "Song Writing," covering basic harmony, notations, forms, styles, rhythm, lyrics, copyright law, music licensing, publishing, recording practices and selling your own song.

The class is open to anyone interested who has a basic knowledge of scales and chords and has the ability to accompany himself on an instrument," explained Hanson, SPC music instructor. The class meets 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays from Feb. 5-March 11 in the SPC Band Hall, located in the Fine Arts Building. Cost is $15 per person.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have some tattoos that I would like to have removed. I was wondering if you can give me some information regarding this. — K.J.C.

Tattoo removal depends on the location of the tattoo and how large it is. Most specialists, including dermatologists and plastic surgeons, have favorite techniques. These range from actual excision of the area, to planing, as is done for acne scars. Others have tried retattooing with glycerine and tannic acid, then rubbing with silver nitrate. Your doctor will have to advise you on which procedure is best for you.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently my husband had Guillain-Barre syndrome. Would you give us some information as to what causes it and precisely what it is? — A.D.

This has been the subject of some interest in recent years. Guillain-Barre (GHEE-an-bar-RAY) syndrome is an illness affecting nerves. It can follow a viral illness, certain immunizations, or trauma (injury).

A vague respiratory infection often precedes the illness, which is featured by generalized nerve inflammation.

As nerves become inflamed they lose their protective coatings. It is somewhat akin to an allergic reaction. The symptoms depend on the extent and location of nerve damage.

Usually, weakness of the leg muscles is the first symptom. It can progress to actual paralysis. The paralysis may ascend to involve even the breathing muscles.

With exercise and therapy, complete recovery is expected in most Guillain-Barre patients after the paralysis subsides.

Dear Dr. Donohue: You discussed dizziness recently, the kind related to ear problems. You mentioned seasickness medicines that might help. I had dizzy periods and my doctor said it was because the arteries are unable to get enough blood to the brains. I was wondering if seasickness medicines would help me. — Mrs. P.R.

Probably not; but they might be given a short trial.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple — write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of the booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Russian Dancer Scorns Bolshoi Defectors

By NIKKI FINKE
MOSCOW (AP) — Her name isn't Russian, and her face isn't Russian. But that has never bothered Margi Scott a bit.
 For the 46-year-old dancer and daughter of a New York lawyer, who was the Bolshoi's only black ballerina, is content to call Moscow home.
 It seems like an accident of birth that she was brought up in the Soviet Union. Then again, her entire family history has been a series of travels and tragedies spanning three continents.
 In an interview at her Moscow apartment, Scott had no sympathy for the recent rash of Bolshoi defectors who have leapt West.
 "I think this is kind of hypocritical greediness," she said angrily. "An artist is always greedy for creativity."
 "But to claim that there is no artistic freedom here is just a lie. Those people who are really interested in creativity will always find something interesting to do for themselves."
 And the Bolshoi?
 "For us, who love our theater, it is always unpleasant when such things happen. But it is no blow to the Bolshoi. The Bolshoi has been standing for 200 years and it is still standing."

 These are not just official slogans that she speaks, but evidently her own personal convictions. She does not often talk with Western reporters, preferring to keep her life and past private.
 While it has been several years since she retired from dancing professionally, she is still remembered as the "black beauty" of the Bolshoi stage — in roles like the peasant seductress in "Don Quixote," a fiery gypsy girl, a rhythmic African native.
 How did Margi Scott, with caramel-colored skin and natural Afro hairstyle, get to Moscow?

It started in 1848, when her great-grandfather was sent to New Orleans from Africa as a slave, her own research shows.

Her father, Ben Henry Scott, left the United States to study law at Moscow State University in the 1930s, heady days when many black Americans, including singer-actor Paul Robeson, were coming to Russia to see what the new Bolshevik state had to offer.
 Her father was not a Communist, says the ballerina — who herself joined the party in 1963 — but a "progressive youth organizer."

It was at the university that he met Margi's mother, a Russian also studying law and who later became a journalist.
 The two married and Margi, a Soviet citizen, was born here in 1933. Soon afterward her father returned to America, intending only a short stay.
 Margi never saw him again.
 "He died too young ... when the war broke out," she said. And she stayed in Moscow with her mother.

Her interest in dancing "began when I was born," she said.
 Without her mother's permission, she went alone to the Bolshoi Ballet School when she turned 7 and auditioned. She was accepted immediately, but her mother didn't share the thrill.

"She thought it was very bad. In our (Russian) family, everyone was an outstanding scientist, anatomist or physician. My mother was hoping that I would be a doctor," Scott recalled.

It wasn't until World War II that her mother realized dancing could be as important as doctoring. The young ballerina came home with ration cards — the same chits given to Soviet workers.

"My mother finally understood that ballet is serious," the dancer said.
 She made her stage debut before reaching her teens, and from then on was given mainly "character" roles to dance.

 During an exhausting 21 years on stage, Scott also graduated from theater school and began to work as a choreographer with her Soviet dancer-husband, Yuri Papko.

"All that work was harmful to my health," she said, so she retired from the stage a bit earlier than most dancers.
 Now she concentrates on her jobs as a teacher of classical dance at Moscow's famed Maly Theater and as a ballet master or choreographer at the Bolshoi. And she will soon defend her doctoral thesis on "The Choreographic Culture of Tropical Peoples," a four-year project that took her through Tanzania, Kenya, Ghana and Nigeria.

most unfortunate that the ace, king and queen of spades only stopped the suit twice.

South won the first spade (she had to) and led the 10 of clubs to East's jack. Back came a spade and now South decided to take her four diamonds and settle for down three.

That looked like a pretty good result when at the other table, East proceeded to double three notrump after the same bidding sequence.

West opened the same jack of spades and South decided to try to get out for down two by leading a heart to dummy's jack. Much to her surprise that jack held. So she continued with dummy's king and once more East decided to hang on to her ace.

So South led a diamond to her king and played a third heart. Now East not only had to take her ace, but saw it capture her partner's queen. South wound up with two spades, four hearts, four diamonds and a score of plus 950 for an overtrick at three notrump doubled.

Older Americans Change Lifestyles To Cope With Inflation

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Inflation has taken its toll on most segments of American society, but among those most affected are the elderly who are trying to make ends meet on retirement incomes.

tired several years ago, he knew that his family could not survive on their Social Security incomes. So, Hamrick decided to start what he calls his "retirement business."

A former car salesman, Hamrick now operates the H&W Tackle Co., which keeps him busy repairing fishing tackle. "It's kept me out of trouble," he noted. But even with the money from his repair business, Hamrick said that he and his wife have had to change their way of life somewhat. "We don't participate in a great many things we normally would do," he said. "You just have to discipline yourself not to spend money."

According to Hamrick, he and his wife aren't doing without any necessities, but they cannot participate in many recreational activities or buy arts and crafts they would like to have.

Hamrick said many senior citizens are hit with high bills for necessary medications, but he and his wife have been lucky in that area. However, the couple has faced heavy expenditures for the upkeep of their home, he said, noting that any type of unanticipated expense causes budget problems.

The current financial problems faced by the majority of Americans remind Hamrick of the Great Depression days in the 1930s. During the depression, most people had difficulty getting any money, he said. The big difference now, he said, is there is enough money, but the dollar won't buy as much.

"The net result is very much the same," Hamrick added.

Another local senior citizen vividly recalls the depression days. Evela Jordan said that living through the depression taught her to conserve.

"Through our Home Demonstration Clubs, we learned to raise and preserve foods," she said. "We also learned to take the clothes we had and remake them."

Now, at the age of 79, Mrs. Jordan is still practicing the conservation lessons she learned in her youth. "At my age, I still do a lot of freezing, and I have always sewn," she said.

Mrs. Jordan views the current inflation as "a proposition you have to live with." One has to learn to be practical, she said. "If you can't do something about a certain situation, you have to accept it."

The Lubbock woman spent many years working as a salesperson and finally ended her career after working several years in a health food store. Now, she lives off the income from her small retirement fund and her Social Security checks.

"I have to have a little help along to make ends meet," Mrs. Jordan said, noting that if her medical expenses become too high, she seeks financial assistance from her son.

When she goes grocery shopping, Mrs. Jordan said that she buys only good, nourishing goods. "I don't buy any junk foods," she said, "and I've learned to get along without beef."

Her meat entrees consist chiefly of seafoods, chicken and turkey. Mrs. Jordan explained to stretch meats, she said that she often prepares many casserole dishes.

Emphasizing the need for healthy foods, Mrs. Jordan said she also tries to buy fresh fruits and vegetables as much as possible. "And if I have the opportunity, I watch the ads for specials."

One of the things that concern Mrs. Jordan is increases in taxes, which she said contributes to the average person's problems in coping with inflation. Every-time taxes go up, her house payment increases, she said.

And when her house payment goes up, Mrs. Jordan finds she has less money to spend on other necessities.

Lubbock County Man Charged In Shooting At Repair Shop

A rural Lubbock man has been charged with aggravated assault in connection with a shooting incident Friday night in which a man was slightly wounded.

Bartlett Anderson Slack Jr., 56, of Route 5, Box 171-C, was charged Tuesday in the shooting of David Lawrence Lindsey, 36, of 5620 16th Place, according to Lubbock County Chief Assistant Deputy Sheriff Alton Hobbs.

Lindsey was wounded in the left shoulder, but was treated at Health Sciences Center Hospital and released following the incident, which occurred about 11 p.m. Friday.

Witnesses told deputies several persons had been drinking at a repair shop owned by Slack when Lindsey and Slack became involved in an argument. Lindsey was wounded by a single bullet fired from a .357-magnum pistol, reports indicate.

After being wounded, Lindsey walked to a nearby nightclub. Employees there notified the sheriff's office. Lindsey was taken to the hospital by Emergency Medical Service ambulance.

Slack had not been arrested late Tuesday, Hobbs said. The Criminal District Attorney's office has recommended bond be set at $7,500.

Actor Seeking To Build New Image In Television Film

By JERRY BUCK
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Newhart wanted a new image for his first television movie after six years as the sedentary psychologist in his own series.

Newhart got off the couch, so to speak, and started running. In "Marathon," which airs Wednesday night on CBS, he plays a married, middle-aged jogger whose mid-life crisis sends him trotting after another woman.

On "The Bob Newhart Show," which left the air two years ago, he honed the image of a conventional husband who had eyes only for his wife, played by Suzanne Pleshette. And lifting a martini glass was about as deep as he was into physical fitness.

"I thought 'Marathon' was an interesting thing for me," said Newhart. "It was a change from Dr. Hartley."

Newhart was interviewed during a lunch break of yet another image-changing movie. He is playing the president of the United States in Buck Henry's new comedy, "The First Family."

"I had about a month to get in shape for 'Marathon,'" said Newhart, a golfer for years but never a runner. "I started doing a little running. I finally got up to half a mile. What really got me in shape was one of those computerized bicycle exercisers."

The movie didn't call for him to run any great distance at a time. One day he did have to run in every scene. "I didn't get tired," he said. "I had the stamina. The thing that I was worried about was I wanted to look good. I wanted to look like a runner."

He also shed five pounds because it's difficult to hide a pot in a track suit. "Is he still running?" he grinned and said. "I stopped running the minute the picture ended. It's a form of self-flagellation."

In the movie, Newhart is married to Anita Gillette. His running buddies are Herb Edelman and Dick Gautier. On the cinder path, he runs into Leigh Taylor-Young and the comedy comes from his thwarted attempts to arrange a tryst with her.

He makes a date with her at a Holiday Inn, but neglects to find out which one. There were 11 in the area. "At the end of the picture, I enter the New York Marathon," said Newhart. "At the end of the marathon I see my wife waiting — and so is Leigh Taylor-Young. I have to decide which way I'm going. Which I'm bound by secrecy not to disclose."

The producers, Linda Otto and Joan Barnett, hired Lazo Taborn, a former 1:50-meter world record holder and a running coach, to insure accuracy in the running sequences. Ron Friedman wrote the script and Jackie Cooper directed.

In the past, Newhart, a one-time accountant who gained fame with a record called "The Button-Down Mind of Bob Newhart," has made such films as "Thursday's Game," "Hell Is for Heroes" and "Catch-22."

"I tried to get out of doing the last year of the series," Newhart said. "I had

'Love Boat' Reunites Another Team

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Old movie teams don't fade away, they sail back on 'The Love Boat.'

The ABC-TV Saturday night series may not challenge viewers' intellects, but its producers do supply a heavy load of nostalgia. It reteamed June Allyson and Van Johnson, the all-American couple of the 1940s. Then Ginger Rogers and Douglas Fairbanks Jr., who hadn't costarred in 40 years.

Now its Jane Wyman and Dennis Morgan, who appeared opposite each other as part of the Warner Bros. stock company of the 1940's and 1950's. The other day they were shooting a scene in the rain at 20th Century-Fox, with the writers' building doubling as a Mexican monastery. Wyman plays a nun in the show. Morgan is an old sweetheart.

After finishing the scene, the pair sought shelter in Stage 10, the regular "Love Boat" set, nibbled at lunch and reminisced with a reporter.

Wyman, trim and lovely at 66, has remained on the local scene, guest starring in occasional TV movies. Morgan has been long absent.

"It's been 15 years since I did a movie, maybe longer," said Morgan, who started as an opera singer in the Midwest and became a star of musicals ("My Wild Irish Rose") as well as dramas ("Kitty Foyle"). The years (70) have been kind to him as well, the face handsome, the hair greying but full.

What has he been doing? "I have a ranch between Fresno and Yosemite where I spend a lot of time," he explained. "I travel for the cancer society, and I do an occasional play: I filled in for Pat O'Brien in Chicago when he got sick a few years ago. I go back to Wisconsin every summer. Last year I played 'Paint Your Wagon' at the university. I enjoy my five grandchildren; the oldest is now at USC. Can you believe that? I serve as lector — the one who reads the gospel — at our community church."

"TV talk shows? I might go on if I had a book to sell, but I wouldn't do it unless I had a reason. I'd like to do a movie if a good part came along. But what has blown the business apart is paying the superstars $2 million for a picture. There's nothing left over for anyone else."

Neither star could remember how many films they had made together, but that's only natural.

"In those days Warners was making 52 pictures a year, as were the other studios," Wyman recalled. "Many times I'd find myself working in two pictures at once. I remember I was testing for 'The Yearling' at MGM at the same time I was doing the Cole Porter picture ('Night and Day') at Warners, which I didn't want to do."

"It wasn't unusual to appear in four movies a year," added Morgan. "And don't forget we used to shoot on Saturdays then. We had to be young to work that hard."

"But we had fun," Wyman said. "Even when we weren't working, we came to the studio; we didn't want to miss anything. We were family then — Annie (Sheridan), Jackie (Carson), Dennis (Lexie (Alexis Smith)). I guess Olivia (DeHavilland) wasn't part of it. I think she was Melanie-ing about that time."

"We all had lunch together every day, and we used all the mischief in our being to devise new ways to top each other."

The fastest homing pigeons, air-expressed 1,500 miles, can return to their lofts within three days.

Longtime Stage, Screen, Radio, TV Comic Jimmy Durante Dies

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jimmy Durante, the honky-tonk comic with the out-sized nose whose artful mix of clowning, fractured English and heart-warming pathos endeared him to generations of Americans, died Tuesday at age 86.

The famed "Schnozzola," as he was known to friends and fans alike, died alone in a hospital room where he had been confined for three weeks for treatment of a lung ailment.

Upon learning the news, comedian George Burns, 84, a longtime friend, said: "What can I say that the world doesn't already know? He was a fine man and a wonderful artist."

Red Buttons, another old friend, said: "I loved him. We all loved him. I am sorry to hear the news."

"But I am almost glad he is out of his misery."

Durante was admitted to St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica on Jan. 7, suffering from acute lung congestion. The cause of death was listed as pneumonia complicated by the effects of previous strokes, said Chris Thomas, a hospital spokeswoman.

None of Durante's family was present when he died, Miss Thomas said.

The family went home about midnight, said family spokesman Joe Bleeden. However, he said Durante's wife, nephews Bobby and Julie Romano and actor Desi Arnaz planned to visit Durante's body at Godeau and Martinoni Funeral Home.

Dick Palmer, a spokesman for the funeral directors, said a rosary and mass were scheduled Thursday at Good Shepherd Church in Beverly Hills, with a semi-private interment Friday morning at Holy Cross Cemetery.

After a stroke in November 1972 left him partially paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair, Durante was forced to say good night to Mrs. Calabash for the last time and retire from show business.

Throughout his career, one of his trademarks was to end his performances with, "Good night, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are." He once confided he was referring to his first wife, who had died.

Durante's routines were a show business staple for 64 years, and he was a leading star on radio and in early television. He made nearly 30 movies and until 1972 played regular engagements in Las Vegas and on television.

He found retirement hard to accept, remaining at home with his wife, Marjorie, and their adopted daughter, Cece. They rarely went out.

In April 1974, Durante went to New York for a Bantam luncheon attended by newspaper editors and publishers. He received an award from the Bantams and responded with a faltering rendition of his longtime trademark, "Inka Dinka Doo."

In one of his last interviews before his illness, Durante remarked after a Las Vegas performance: "I love it out there. It ain't work. To hear those people out there laugh and enjoy themselves... When you're out there, you pray to God that it'll never end."

Durante was hospitalized for several weeks in May 1978 with an upper respiratory infection and complications of the earlier stroke.

Although paralyzed, Durante continued to receive guests regularly at his Beverly Hills home. And fans continued to write and send gifts, including "Mrs. Calabash" pillows and copies of his record.

Durante starred in virtually every branch of show business, including vaudeville, Broadway, nightclubs, radio, television and movies.

He became a headliner in a 1928 Ziegfeld show in which he had the line: "Be nice to people on the way up. They're the same people you'll pass on the way down." That, he said later, "is a nice line to live by."

Durante loved show business, entertaining and audiences, which he said did not change much with time.

"You put a joke in modern dress," he said, "but the substance is the same, just as people are the same although the clothes they are wearing may be a different style. People like to laugh, and I like to make 'em laugh. That makes me happy, makin' them happy. That's my life."

Early in his career — his first job was as a razzmatazz saloon pianist on Coney Island — Durante was afraid people would laugh at him. His parents wanted him to be a more serious pianist.

But at his second job, at Terry Walsh's, Durante met a pop-eyed dancing waiter named Eddie Cantor, who advised: "There's no future in just playing the piano. People like you, Jimmy, you ought to be telling jokes while you're playing, and maybe sing once in a while."

After playing other local clubs, Durante formed his own Dixieland band and they opened their own bistro, which was called the Club Durant because the sign painter left out the E.

Durante later teamed up with singing waiter Eddie Jackson and veteran soft-shoe entertainer Lou Clayton, both of whom remained with Durante the rest of their careers.

Clayton persuaded Durante to use his nose as a stage prop.

One of Durante's earliest and most popular songs was "I'm Jimmy, That Well Dressed Man." But at the time, he was not well dressed.

After the Club Durant was closed by Prohibition agents, the act played several other clubs until it broke up in 1931, when Durante got a bid from Hollywood.

Clayton became Durante's business manager until his death in 1950, and Jackson still appeared with Durante in night clubs and on television.

Friends said Durante made a lot of money in Hollywood, but he could not seem to hang onto it. He insisted on paying Clayton a third of his income, and his staff and taxes took a big bite. He was a sucker for a hard-luck story, but the fact that he was often taken did not seem to bother him. He said: "I only wish that I was a Rockingfellow."

His first wife, Maude Jeanne Olson, whom he married in 1921, died in 1931. He married Marjorie Little on Dec. 14, 1960, after a courtship of 16 years. In 1962, when he was 69, the couple adopted a 6-month-old daughter, Cecelia, whom he called Cece.

Durante's losing battle with the English language was not phony. His love of big words, a la Mrs. Malaprop, was born of his Brooklyn background. He massaged the language on stage and off.

Durante created a style that was unique. He would crush a fedora and don it askew in a gauche impression of a boulevardier. He would flutter his eyes and comb his scant hair as chorus girls clamored over him. He would erupt in mock anger at an intruding waiter or a performer who tried to steal the spotlight from him.

He was ever the extrovert. Sightseeing buses stopped regularly at his Beverly Hills home and he would emerge to greet the tourists.

McArthur Charged With Accepting Bribe

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo dismissed as sheer libel Tuesday a claim by an American researcher that the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur illegally accepted $500,000 from wartime Philippine President Manuel L. Quezon.

Quezon's official biographer described the report as "interesting but absurd." Quezon died in 1944; MacArthur in 1964.

The secretary of Quezon's Cabinet said he could not confirm or deny something he knew nothing about.

Romulo, aide to both Quezon and MacArthur during World War II, said: "It's too bad dead people are being libeled that way when they can't defend themselves."

"I was very close to both men here, in Corregidor, Australia and in the United States but I know absolutely nothing about that. Insofar as I'm concerned and as far as I know, it's libel to both," Romulo said.

Carol Pettilo, a Boston College historian, said she uncovered a copy of an executive order Quezon supposedly issued on Jan. 3, 1942 giving MacArthur and three unnamed aides a total of $640,000 "in recognition of their outstanding service."

Although she said it would be "simplistic" to describe the money as a bribe, Dr. Pettilo said it might have been what made MacArthur change his mind about an earlier decision not to evacuate Quezon to form a government-in-exile as Japanese forces were about to complete their occupation of the Philippines.

Increasing Danger Of U.S.-Soviet Military Confrontation Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet use of its growing power against Afghanistan significantly increases the danger of U.S.-Soviet military confrontation during the next five years, a top defense official said Tuesday.

Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Secretary of Defense Harold Brown said events in Afghanistan show the Soviets may be willing to threaten vital U.S. interests in the Middle East.

"The possibilities of a military confrontation with the Soviet Union will increase significantly in the first half of the next decade," Jones told the House Armed Services Committee.

"I do not believe that means a bolt-out-of-the-blue nuclear attack on the United States," Jones added later. "But I think it is more likely that they will try to intimidate us — make us blink."

Jones said U.S. ability "to avert such a confrontation or deal with it successfully if it comes" depends largely on Congress's decisions on President Carter's $142.7 billion defense budget.

Brown said U.S. military forces in Europe could move "right now" against an attempted Soviet takeover of the Persian Gulf but he said he doesn't know which side would win. "We could not be confident of the outcome. The Soviets also could not be confident of the outcome."

Of Carter's proposal to register young persons for a possible military draft, Brown said women should be included "largely as a matter of equity and social policy," but added, "I certainly don't believe they should be in combat."

However, a decision on whether women should have a combat role would be decided if Congress renews the actual draft, not simply when registration returns, he said.

Jones said he would be willing to study plans to draft women but "I would be reluctant to endorse it right now."

Brown stopped short of declaring that there is greater danger of a U.S.-Soviet military confrontation.

But he agreed with Jones that "the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan is a signal that the U.S.S.R. is willing to use its power directly, outside the Soviet bloc countries."

Brown also said any threat to Middle East oil "is a grave one to us and an even greater one" to allies in Europe and Ja-

Ex-Lubbock Resident Stamp Designer

Sharpe said his real break came after he took his art portfolio to New York City, where he soon found a number of people interested in his work. Since that time, he has done illustrations for a number of magazines, paperback books and the Reader's Digest Condensed Books. He also did all the artwork on an Elvis Presley special aired on the ABC show.

All of the illustration work has been exciting, Sharpe said, but designing the stamps "has been the real icing on the cake."

The Fields stamps will go on sale today at the Main Post Office in Lubbock.

COMPLETE STOCKS AND BONDS MARKET

Weak Mart Shows Loss

NEW YORK (AP) — An afternoon spell of selling left stock prices with some moderate losses Tuesday in another session of heavy trading.

Oil and defense issues, the leaders of the market's early 1980 rally, showed some of the most notable losses as traders cashed in on some of the recent rise.

Precious metals issues racked up sharp gains, by contrast, as gold and silver prices rebounded from their slide of late.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 10 points at its low an hour before the close, finished with a 4.10 loss at 874.40.

New York Stock Exchange volume reached 55.48 million shares, up from 53.62 million Monday.

At mid-morning Tuesday, turnover for January surpassed 1 billion shares, the first time that has happened in any month in the exchange's history.

Analysts said the rapid spread of new price increases among the oil-exporting countries might have contributed to the market's weakness.

Several Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries members posted increases in the wake of Saudi Arabia's announcement Monday of a $2 per barrel hike.

NORVAL POLLARD

A College Cage Classic

AS KENT WILLIAMS LAUNCHED his desperation jumper with the few remaining seconds of Monday's basketball encounter between Texas Tech and Arkansas rapidly slipping into the past, an uncanny quiet fell over some 10,000 anxious onlookers at the Municipal Coliseum.

The sudden calm provided an instant for silent wonderment: Does it have the velocity? More important, does it have the range? Is it ever going to come down? Gee, I hope it doesn't hit someone in the back of the head! Tech better get the rebound.

All of those thoughts flashed through my mind from the time Williams let the shot fly until it gained re-entry somewhere in the Coliseum rafters.

SWOSH! My thoughts were rudely interrupted as the deathly quiet exploded into sheer delight. Those 10,000 viewers had just had their own doubts put to rest and were reacting the way any red-blooded American sports fan would react to the home team's success — by making noise.

Williams' 32-foot comet had fallen. And if our "cruise" missiles are half as accurate as Williams' rocket — we're leading the arms race again. The bomb fell right on target. The two points tied the score at 61-61 with only eight seconds left in regulation play and eventually sent the game into overtime, postponing a heart-breaking 71-69 Tech loss to the Razorbacks by some 15 minutes.

THE GAME WAS A TRUE classic — college basketball at its finest. DePaul and Notre Dame couldn't have done any better. Kentucky and Duke would have been envious. Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton hit the nail on the head when he said it was a shame that one team had to lose. Both teams played well enough and hard enough to win.

While the West Texas weather iced streets and chilled hearts, Tech and Arkansas played in a tropical climate — somewhere in the 60s to be exact. The Hogs hit 66 percent of their shots from the field and Tech drilled 60 percent of its floor shots. Both teams were anything but cold.

And on slippery streets and frozen windshields slowed traffic, the Raiders and Hogs motored about unhindered. They marched up and down the court trading baskets. Neither team went ahead by more than three points throughout the second half or five-minute overtime period. The score was tied 16 different times and the lead changed hands 13 times.

It wasn't that we weren't playing defense," offered Tech coach Gerald Myers. "It's just that Arkansas was executing its offense very well. They (the Hogs) were playing defense, too. It just happens that we were also executing our offense very well."

THE INCREDIBLE INDIVIDUAL performances turned in during the 45 minutes of action were responsible for making the contest so memorable. The game had a new hero every other minute. It wasn't a matter of home-court advantage, talent or any of those intangibles — just which team hit the last shot before the buzzer sounded.

Tech's first hero was Williams, whose low-percentage shot paid high dividends. Maybe he has a bionic eye? I know there are a number of athletes around who couldn't have hit that shot with a rifle, let alone a basketball.

Senior Thad Sanders, who hit five of five field goal attempts and sparked the Red Raiders defensively in the second half, provided the heroics with little more than a minute remaining in overtime. Sanders' unbelievable tip-in of a missed Williams' free throw put the Raiders ahead 69-67 with 1:08 remaining. Now all Tech needed was a missed shot on the part of the Razorbacks and a rebound. With the Raiders controlling the ball, it would be difficult for Arkansas to regain the lead.

The Hogs missed their first attempt at a tying basket, but the Raiders did not come up with that much-needed rebound. The ball bounced high off the iron and landed right in the hands of Brad Friess, who took two steps and put it back up and in to knot the score at 69-69.

ARKANSAS'S FINAL HERO was reserve guard Mike Young. Young put up an off-balance jumper from the top of the key with only a second left to break the tie and bring back that deathly quiet to the Coliseum. Williams and junior Ralph Brewster were draped around Young like a wet towel as he released the ball. It even appeared that Brewster got a finger on the ball as it left Young's hand.

Nonetheless, it found its mark and allowed the Razorbacks to edge the Raiders, was the third time in four seasons the Hogs have nipped Tech at the buzzer. A difficult loss indeed.

It is a shame that either team had to lose this contest. All who witnessed it won. And like other sports classics, no one who saw the action will soon forget it.

Tech Hopes To Halt Skid

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
HOUSTON — Suddenly, the Red Raiders have found themselves in a position that has become all too familiar with Lubbock motorists during these snowy days.

The brakes are locked — and the Tech cagers are in a definite skid.

Tonight, in the troublesome Hofheinz Pavilion, the Raiders must try to stop that skid from turning into an out-and-out tailspin.

Five days ago, the Raiders were 5-1 in Southwest Conference play and sitting on top of the world. Tonight they'll take a 5-3 mark into their 7:30 tipoff with the 3-5 Houston Cougars.

Five days ago, the Raiders were comfortably entrenched in second place in the SWC. But if they lose to the Cougs tonight, and if Texas defeat SMU in Austin, the Raiders will be tied for third place with the Longhorns. And Hofheinz Pavilion can be an easy place in which to lose. Last year the Raiders were blown out of the tub in the first half and wound up losing 103-89. In fact, the last time the Raiders won in Hofheinz was in 1976.

So much for the bad news.

On the positive side of the ledger, the Raiders played exceptionally well in a 71-69 overtime loss to Arkansas Monday. The Raiders connected on 60 percent of their field goal efforts in the game — 65 percent in the second half.

"We played very good in the second half against Arkansas," Tech mentor

Gerald Myers acknowledged. "We probably got more production out of our offense in that half than we did in any other conference game."

"If we continue to play with that kind of efficiency, I think we're going to be hard to stop."

"Of course, we'll have to play better defense," Myers added. "But a lot of that (Monday night) was Arkansas's offense."

Myers admitted that Tech's situation in the current SWC standings is a precarious one.

"We're in a situation where we're going to have to win some games to hang onto third," he said. "Texas is breathing down our neck now — they're only one game back."

But the problem at hand isn't Texas, it's Houston.

And when you talk about the Houston Cougars you're talking about the Williams boys — Kenneth and Robert. When both of them are hitting — and they usually are at home — the Cougs can be trouble.

Against Texas A&M Monday night, Robert scored 22 points and Kenneth added 20, although the Cougs dropped a 93-79 decision to the league-leading Aggies. Both are averaging over 15 tallies a game, and Robert — only a freshman — has been the more productive of the two since conference play began.

"We've had problems at Houston," Myers admitted. "We can't let them force the tempo and play a fast, transition-type game. That killed us last year."

And that's not the kind of game you can afford to get into down there. You have to control the tempo or find some other way to control the game."

"Last year they pressed us early," Myers continued. "They forced us into turnovers and just broke our backs. This

Sanders Shines Against Hogs

Thad Sanders has started only one game for the Red Raiders in his senior season.

But the "Doctor" has made his presence felt. And against Arkansas on Monday night, Sanders turned in what may rank as his best individual performance during his four years at Tech.

Coming off the bench during the crucial stretch run, and playing through the overtime period, Sanders was five of five from the field for 10 points in only 15 minutes of playing time.

He also sparked the Raiders defensively, coming up with two rebounds, blocked shot and a steal.

For his work in the Raiders' heart-breaking 71-69 OT loss to the Hogs, Sanders has been named The Avalanche-Journal Tech player of the week.

Every bucket that Sanders hit was a big one. He hit a spinning jumper to give the Raiders a short-lived 59-59 tie with a minute left in the game. In overtime he scored four of the Raiders' eight points including a spectacular tip-in of a missed free throw by Kent Williams.

Although the Raiders lost both games last week — by a total of three points — they did get some outstanding individual performances. Senior Kent Williams scored 25 points and dished out 12 assists in the two games and is fast closing in on a Tech record for single-season assists.

Williams has 97 to his credit now, only eight shy of the Raider record of 105 set by Keith Kitchens in 1975.

David Little, who leads the Raiders in scoring with a 15.6 average, scored a career-high 27 points against SMU. Little was 11 of 19 from the field in Tech's 76-75 loss to the Ponies.

And forward Ben Hill, who has suddenly turned into a bona fide scoring threat, totaled 28 points in the last two games.

Although, Sanders saw only three minutes of action against the Ponies, his performance against the Hogs was hard to overlook. The senior from Port Arthur has had better point totals in the past, but never under a pressure situation like he encountered against Arkansas.

And Tech coach Gerald Myers said Tuesday that Sanders should see plenty of action tonight against Houston. Sanders is needed primarily for his defensive abilities and quickness against the Cougs.

Pacers Defeat Rockets 133-112

By The Associated Press
 Billy Knight, continuing a recent scoring rampage, pumped in 26 points Tuesday night, leading the Indiana Pacers to an easy 133-112 victory over the Houston Rockets in the National Basketball Association.

The 6-foot-6 Knight, little used and averaging about 8 points a game for the season, has averaged nearly 25 points since getting a starting role in the past four games.

Knight hit all five of his field goal attempts in the first half and scored 12 points as the Pacers raced to a 72-59 lead at the intermission.

Warriors 111, Pistons 100
 Phil Smith hit a season-high 26 points to lead the Golden State Warriors to a 111-100 victory over the Detroit Pistons in National Basketball Association action Tuesday evening at the Pontiac Silverdome.

The teams were evenly matched through most of the first quarter but a 14-5 Golden State scoring advantage late in the period broke a 20-20 tie and gave the Warriors a 34-25 lead at the end of the quarter.

The Warriors' scoring surge was led by center Robert Parish who had 9 points and Jo Jo White who had 8 points during the quarter.

Hawks 98, Bullets 82
 John Drew scored 20 points and Dan Roundfield added 19 as the Atlanta Hawks took advantage of poor first-half play by the Washington Bullets and coasted to a 98-82 National Basketball Association victory Tuesday night.

The Hawks built a 54-32 halftime lead and improved it to 73-40 with 4:35 left in the third period before the Bullets found the range.

They outscored Atlanta 32-13 over the next 10½ minutes, to draw to 86-72 with six minutes left in the game.

Roger Phegley got nine of his team-high 17 points and Greg Ballard scored eight of his 14 down that stretch.

Borger Defeats DHS

BORGER (Special) — Borger's Brett Smith scored a game-high 25 points to lead his team to a 73-63 victory over Dunbar Tuesday night.

The win, which makes Borger 23-3 and 3-1 in District 1-AAA play, put the team in a tie for the district leadership with Canyon and Estacado. Dunbar's district record is now 0-4.

Dunbar, led by Leroy Rivers' 24 points, scored 28 points in the third quarter to tie Borger at 49-49, but were outscored by 10 during the final eight minutes of play.

Dunbar outshot the Borger team from the field, hitting 26 field goals as compared to 25 for the winners. The Panthers were outscored at the foul line 23-11.

Borger featured a balanced scoring attack with four players in double figures, compared to two for Dunbar.

Borger also won the boys' junior varsity game by 10 points, 83-73.

In girls' action, Borger also came out on top by claiming a 48-46 cliffhanger.

The game was the girls' second-half opener in District 1-AAA. Borger is now 6-16 for the season and Dunbar has a 10-13 record.

Dunbar's Lisa Caviel was the game's high scorer with 22 points, but her other five teammates could only come up with an additional 24 points.

Borger had a more balanced scoring attack with two players in double figures. Marie Brooks scored 20 points and Donna Coffey added 12.

Just as in the boys game, Dunbar outshot its opponent from the field, but were outscored from the foul line. Dunbar hit 18 field goals to Borger's 16, but were outscored from the charity stripe 16-10.

CTK Drops Two To Abernathy

Christ the King, already eliminated in its district tournament, took it on the chin again Tuesday night, dropping two of games to Abernathy.

The Antelope boys topped CTK 58-47 and the Trojan girls fell 70-17.

Matt Washburn and Ed Connors led the CTK scorers in the boys game with 16 and 12 respectively. Roger Pinson paced Abernathy with 12 points, followed by Sylvester Dunn and Scott Morrison with nine each and Roger Mitchell and Rick Houston with eight apiece.

In the girls' game, CTK had to play without the services of leading scorer Leslie Schmidt and standout guard Veronica Rivera. Mary McGann was the only Trojan girl to make more than one field goal, hitting two and scoring nine points.

Pat Conway scored 12 for Abernathy and Ramona Irlbeck added 14 more.
