FIGHTER CRASH SITE — Maj. Jim Reinhard, public affairs officer at Cannon Air Force Base, stands near part of the wreckage of a F-111D fighter jet and a private plane which collided north of Clovis, N.M., killing four persons. Reinhard said the computer-assisted Air Force tactical fighter was on a routine flight from Cannon Air Force Base when the collision occurred. Both fighter crewmen and both occupants of the smaller craft were killed. In the background is a section of the fuselage and wing assembly of the fighter. (Another photo on Page 14, Sec. A.) Crash Of Air Force Jet, Small Plane Kills Four CLOVIS, N.M. — The wreckage from a fiery mid-air collision between a jet fighter and a small private plane was being examined Wednesday afternoon by U.S. Air Force officials trying to determine why the two planes collided.

The single-engine Cessna Turbo Stationair II and a F-111D tactical fighter from nearby Cannon Air Force Base collided over Ned Houk Park, some six miles north of Clovis, about 10:30 a.m. (MST). Both occupants of the Cessna and both crew members of the fighter were killed, authorities said.

John R. Russell and Homer D. Douglas, both of Albuquerque, were in the private plane.

The crewmen of the fighter were Capt. Roy W. Westerfield, 34, of Smithtown, N.Y., and 2nd Lt. Steven P. Anderson, age undetermined, of Ivyland, Pa., according to Lt. David Knowles, public affairs officer at Cannon Air Force Base.

The F-111D crashed in flames in a field just east of New Mexico State Highway 18. The wreckage of the smaller craft was spread over a one-mile area about 1 1/2 miles from where the fighter crashed.

The fighter apparently was on a routine training flight out of Cannon Air Force Base, said public affairs officer Maj. Jim Reinhard. He said the plane was in a low altitude landing approach when the collision occurred.

Witnesses at the park reported they heard a low-flying plane and looked up to see the two planes collide. One witness said the Cessna spiraled to the ground after being hit, but the fighter apparently remained aloft a short while longer before bursting into flames.

Jet's Cockpit Ejects

The cockpit of the F-111D, carrying the two crew members, ejected from the craft, but apparently it was too close to the ground for the parachute to slow its descent.

The cockpit portion was found about 200 yards from the main wreckage. The bodies of the crew members were still strapped in the cockpit, Reinhard said.

The F-111D is a highly advanced fighter, capable of flying at almost 2,000 mph at altitudes as low as 200 feet. The plane contains terrain-following radar and computer-assisted navigation systems.

Details of exactly how the collision occurred were still sketchy late Wednesday, but Reinhard said the incident will be investigated by the Air Force and the National Transportation Safety Board.

Tracked On Radar

Knowles said the fighter was being tracked on radar at the base, but he said he did not know whether the Cessna was visible on the radar.

Knowles also said it is not yet known whether either of the pilots was aware another aircraft was in the area.

Air Force Security Police had cordoned off the F-111D crash site by early afternoon, because the plane reportedly contained "classified material," including advanced electronic devices.

Reinhard said, however, the plane was not carrying any missiles or bombs at the time of the crash.

The Cessna was registered to Building Contractors, an Albuquerque architectural firm.

Woman Killed, Husband Hurt By Gunmen

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WHEN Carlsbad City Councilman John Volpato and his wife, Elaine, were called to their pharmacy late Tuesday to fill an emergency prescription, they thought they were helping one of their many customers.

Instead, Mrs. Volpato, 56, was fatally shot and her husband seriously wounded by two men who entered the store demanding drugs.

Carlsbad Assistant Medical Examiner Marilyn Sullivan pronounced Mrs. Volpato dead at the scene. Although Miss Sullivan is withholding a ruling on the death pending an autopsy, reports indicate the woman suffered four gunshot wounds.

Volpato, a 12-year veteran of the city council and mayor pro tem, was shot in the hand and left shoulder and was reported in stable condition Wednesday evening at a Dallas hospital.

Carlsbad Det. Lt. John Tully said no suspects were in custody late Wendesday, but that Volpato described one suspect as a "tall, good-looking Spanish male."

Police Chief Charles Galloway said Volpato, 42, had received a telephone call about 11 p.m. from an unidentified person asking that an emergency prescription be filled. Galloway said Volpato and his wife went to the store, known as

Airline 'Bumping' Shows Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — New figures from the Civil Aeronautics Board show an increase in airline bumping in November.

Officials said domestic airlines bumped 35 percent more passengers in the month than in November a year earlier, while traffic was up only 8 percent.

Bumping is the practice of denying seats to passengers even though they have reservations. It is necessary when more seats are reserved than are actually available.

Airlines said they overbook to account for passengers who make reservations and then don't show up. Under new board rules they have to ask for volunteers before bumping someone, and compensation must be paid.

The highest bumping rate for domestic airlines was posted by Altair Airlines which denied seats to 25.87 of every 10,000 passengers. Second was Air Florida at 25.05.

Hughes Airwest had the highest bumping rate on international flights, 55.76.

Senate To Conduct Corruption Inquiry

Williams, Bayh, Cannon Face Studies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee voted 6-0 Wednesday to conduct a "preliminary inquiry" into allegations that Sen. Harrison B. Williams, D-N.J., accepted money in exchange for the promise of legislative favors.

The vote marked the first formal decision by the Senate panel to look into results of an FBI probe of political corruption.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., the committee chairman, also said the committee staff will make a preliminary examination of published allegations of possible wrongdoing by Democratic Sens. Birch Bayh, of Indiana and Howard Cannon of Nevada.

Land Purchases Alleged

Various sources have reported that the FBI has been investigating allegations by an organized crime figure that Cannon accepted help in buying land in exchange for his influence over trucking deregulation legislation.

A Chicago business man, Allen Dorfman, reportedly was overheard on an FBI wiretap saying that Bayh would get a $100,000 interest free loan in exchange for unnamed legislative favors, according to The Wall Street Journal.

Cannon and Bayh have both denied the allegations.

Cannon, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, said he spoke to FBI Director William Webster and Webyster told him he is not the subject of any current inquiry.

The FBI in Washington had no immediate comment on Cannon's report of the conversation but the head of the FBI field office in Las Vegas, Joseph Yablonsky, told reporters:

It has bveen confirmed to me by our headquartrers that such a conversation took place.... There is no pending investigation of Sen. Cannon."

Early Williams Appearance

Heflin said Williams will be given an opportunity to appear before the committee during the opening stages of the investigation.

Although the Senate committee formally opened its inquiry, it is unclear whether evidence from an FBI "sting" operation in which Williams and seven House members were implicated will be turned over to the committee.

In testimony before the House and Senate Ethics Committees, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said that if congressional investigators seek FBI bribery evidence before trials are held "a number of guilty individuals may go unprosecuted or unpunished."

Civiletti told the House and Senate committees he expects indictments in 90 days in cases in which FBI agents posing as Arab representatives offered bribes to members of Congress and other public officials.

One senator and seven House members became subjects of the probe, but a Civiletti deputy told the House Ethics Committee he does not know how many might be charged.

No Decisions Made

"There are no decisions made" as of yet, Heymann said. Heymann said an "optimistic estimate" is that all criminal trials could be completed in six months.

Until then, the Justice Department will resist turning its evidence over to Congress, Heymann said.

Civiletti said competing congressional investigations "could severely impede our ability to secure convictions of those guilty.

"A number of guilty individuals may go unprosecuted or unpunished and innocent ones may be more severely prejudiced," Civiletti said.

Heymann read Civiletti's letter to the House committee and added:

"The nightmare picture is one in which we get entangled in each other's feet," Heymann said. "In that case ... both the committees and the Department of Justice look incompetent."

Not Demanding Evidence

The House committee agreed to hold off demanding evidence. Chairman Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., said, "The committee will just get whatever information it can from the department without jeopardizing the criminal proceedings."

Committee members agreed, but several said they doubt that congressional investigations would be so harmful. Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., told Heymann, "The reputations of all those members of the House have been impugned, and now the Justice Department wants us to lay back."

Meanwhile, acting Senate Republican Leader Ted Stevens said Civiletti told congressional leaders that no senators other than Williams and Larry Pressler, R-S.D., were "subject to inquiry." Williams reportedly was told he is under investigation. The FBI says Pressler rebuffed suggestions of a bribe.

Stevens said the Justice Department has indicated the members of Congress mentioned in the scandal fall into three categories: those whom the department believes it has evidence to make a case against; those it believes whom, unless more information surfaces, the department believes it will probably not be able to present a case.

There were calls on Capitol Hill for creation of a special prosecutor to investigate the allegations. Sen. Bill Roth, R-Del., urged creation of a five-member commission composed of retired senators, judges or legal scholars.

Two congressmen, Reps. Ted Weiss, D-N.s into whether leaks about the FBI probe were orchestrated for some unspecified reason.

Lubbock Man Among Dead At Santa Fe

A 26-YEAR-old Lubbock man and nine persons from eastern New Mexico were among the 33 inmates killed during last week's riot at the New Mexico State Penitentiary in Santa Fe.

Danny Dewayne Waller of Lubbock, who was serving a 1-to 5-year sentence for use of a stolen credit card, possession of a stolen auto and contributing to the delinquency of a minor, was among those listed as killed during the uprising, according to a report released Wednesday by New Mexico Gov. Bruce King's office.

Waller, a Lubbock native, was arrested in August 1978 in Clovis on a warrant out of Wichita Falls.

Late Wednesday, his body was being held at the New Mexico State Medical Examiner's office in Albuquerque before being transferred to a funeral home.

Also listed as killed in the prison violence were Richard Fierro, Robert Quintela, Gilbert Olguin Moreno and Ben Moreno, all of Carlsbad; Donald Gossens and Steven Lucero, both of Farmington; Frank John Ortega of Las Vegas, Larry Cardon of Las Cruces and Phillip Hernandez of Clovis.

Phyllis Gossens of Farmington, the mother of Donald Gossens, said, "I feel like he's gone to a much better place. I'm not happy about it. I feel like the demons of hell were turned loose in Santa Fe."

The search for bodies continued Wednesday in burned out areas of the riot-torn prison. State Medical Examiner James Weston said a team of anthropologists would sift through the charred ruin of the prison gymnasium and a dormitory to determine whether there were more victims.

State officials said Wednesday that about 100 inmates were "unaccounted for," but said they should not be presumed dead or missing because some prisoners refused to give their names to authorities. — KIMBERLY PALMER

Inmates Stage New Rampage In New Mexico

SANTA FE (AP) — Inmates set fires and flooded cells in a new round of violence at the riot-torn New Mexico State Penitentiary, and officials said Wednesday they were trying to expedite the transfer of hardcore criminals out of state.

No injuries were reported in the Tuesday night outburst, which began after maximum-security prisoners were moved back into a cellblock.

Gov. Bruce King's news secretary, Jill Marron, said the group involved in the flare-up included men belived to be ringleaders in the 36-hour weekend uprising that left at least 36 inmates dead at the state's only maximum-security prison.

"They set mattresses, paper and blankets on fire," she said. "Officers entered the cellblocks to extinguish the fires and bring the situation under control."

The violence was the first since National Guardsmen and a Santa Fe police special weapons team moved into the penitentiary Sunday to take back control from the prisoners.

Prospect Of Light Rain, Snow Forecast For Area

LIGHT RAIN turning to snow by tonight is expected to return to a recently thawed South Plains today, as forceful northerly winds push a massive cold front southward over the area.

As the cold front penetrates past the Panhandle into the Lubbock area, the system will bring a 20 percent chance for rain to the South Plains this afternoon.

As the front pulls the mercury lower, however, forecasters say the moisture will turn to snow.

Temperatures today are expected plunge from near 50 this afternoon to near 20 tonight. Weather officials are forecasting a 50 percent chance for snow around the Hub City before dawn Friday.

Temperatures should remain cold Friday, never reaching past 36. Cold temperatures are expected to continue through the weekend, even though a slight warming trend should continue through Monday.

Temperatures should reach to near 40 Saturday, but should be reaching to near 50 by Monday.

Across the nation today, snow will spread across the central Rockies into Kansas and western Missouri, and rain will fall across most of the southern Plains states into Arkansas and Louisiana. Scattered showers will dampen parts of Washington state, while scattered snow showers are expected over the central Appalachians and upper Ohio Valley.

Afternoon highs will be in the 60s and 70s across the southwest, from southern California into the Gulf Coast of Texas. Readings in the 50s and 60s will dominate central California and most of the Deep South. Temperatures climbing only into the 20s will prevail across most of the New England area into Ohio and the central Plains states, while 30s and 40s will dominate the rest of the nation.

Break In Four-Year-Old Murder Case Indicated

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff
(c) 1980 A-J Publ. Co.

THE MYSTERIOUS death four years ago of Lubbock nightclub dancer Marcella Valenzuela is the target of an intensive reinvestigation by law officials, and a murder indictment in connection with the case may be returned this week, The Avalanche-Journal has learned.

While a 140th District Court grand jury panel has been considering cases this week, Lubbock police detectives have held numerous closed-door meetings with Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford and his staff.

Montford and his office members have refused comment on the secretive sessions, but sources told The A-J Wednesday that lawmen now have a break in Miss Valenzuela's puzzling death.

On Jan. 5, 1976, police found Miss Valenzuela's partially clad and decomposing body in the bathtub of her small efficiency apartment near the Texas Tech campus.

Officers at the death scene said her apartment was "messy," but did not appear to be ransacked. However, police reportedly found signs that someone had been in the apartment with the 20-year-old Carlsbad native.

Miss Valenzuela, who had moved to Lubbock from Carlsbad only 18 months earlier, reportedly had last been seen alive the early morning hours of New Year's Day 1976. But authorities declined to comment on who had seen her.

Then Justice of the Peace F.H. Bolen, who handled the inquest concerning the young woman's death, said Miss Valenzuela had been dead "three to five days, at least" when her body was discovered by the apartment complex manager.

The manager had received a long distance phone call from Miss Valenzuela's sister inquiring about her welfare and that led to the grim discovery. Her employer and coworkers at a city club told police they thought Miss Valenzuela had gone out of town to visit relatives after she left the nightspot about 9 or 10 p.m. New Year's Eve, and they said they had not been overly concerned by her absence from work.

Although investigators reportedly found several clues in the apartment, the decomposed state of Miss Valenzuela's body hindered pathologists. No visible wounds were found on the body, and four attempts at discovering what killed the young woman failed.

Bolen finally ruled Miss Valenzuela had been "murdered by unknown means."

A-J sources say new information in the case now indicates Miss Valenzuela was strangled. Her death, sources say, apparently was the result of a lover's quarrel and authorities have the name of a suspect.

If the new information, which was presented to the grand jury late Wednesday afternoon, does yield a murder charge in the case, sources say the indictment will be sealed because the suspect is not in custody. Another source said investigators believe the suspect already may have left the Lubbock area.

Miss Valenzuela's death was one of several unsolved slayings Montford said he would actively pursue when he took office a year ago.

Band Of Snow Spreads From Ohio, Tennessee Valleys To Carolinas

By The Associated Press

A wide band of snow spread from the Tennessee and Ohio valleys to the Carolinas and the mid-Atlantic coast Wednesday while skies were mostly clear over much of the rest of the nation.

Snow depths reached a half a foot in parts of South Carolina, and schools were closed and roads treacherous in much of Tennessee, Georgia, the Carolinas and Virginia.

Snow was also scattered from northern Illinois, through parts of Wisconsin to the upper Great Lakes and the eastern Dakotas, while rain fell along along parts of the Carolina coast and the north Pacific coast.

Skies were clear across the southern Plains and the lower Mississippi Valley, clear to partly cloudy across the southern Rockies and mostly clear in New England.

Snow was forecast Thursday across the central Rockies into Kansas and Missouri and over the central Appalachians and the upper Ohio Valley.

Temperatures were expected to reach the 20s in most of the northern half of the nation, with 60-and 70-degree readings forecast from Southern California to Texas.

Temperatures at 1 p.m. CST Wednesday ranged from 15 at Bismarck, N.D., to 74 at Brownsville, Texas; Palm Springs and Thermal, Calif., and Vero Beach and Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Here is Wednesday afternoon weather in selected cities, as provided by the National Weather Service:

•East: Atlanta 37 snow, Buffalo 21 cloudy, Caribou 23 fair, Charleston, S.C., 40 cloudy, Cincinnati 30 snow, Cleveland 30 hazy, Detroit 30 partly cloudy, Indianapolis 29 cloudy, Knoxville 35 snow, Miami 73 fair, Nashville 29 snow, New York 27 cloudy, Philadelphia 26 cloudy, Pittsburgh 29 snow, Richmond 31 snow, Washington 31 snow.

•West: Phoenix 71 cloudy, Salt Lake City 31 snow, San Diego 60 foggy.

Goose Freed From Plastic Predicament

WAYNE, N.J. (AP) — The once-noosed goose is loose without the noose, but Joyce Shapiro will still know it by the gimp of its limp.

And so the tale of a 4-month-long wild goose chase ended happily Tuesday when the 55-year-old Mrs. Shapiro trapped a Canada goose and freed it from the plastic wound around its neck and head.

"Oh, I was so happy," Mrs. Shapiro said Wednesday. "I now feel as free as the bird itself. I've spent hours with this goose."

Mrs. Shapiro's vigil began last October when a golfer at the Packanack Golf Club noticed the long-necked bird's predicament.

Its black head and neck were wrapped in plastic from a six-pack of beer or soda, and the large bird could not open its beak more than a quarter-inch, Mrs. Shapiro said. The plastic collar seemed to frighten other geese and isolate the bird from the hundreds of others feeding in the area, she said.

"And he wasn't able to eat much," she said of the goose, one of many birds at her lakefront home in this suburban community of 49,000 people.

Golfers and bird watchers tried in vain to capture the bird, which stands more than a foot high and weighs about 20 pounds, to free it from the noose. Game wardens were stumped. State officials, contacted because the Canada goose is protected in New Jersey, advised leaving the bird alone as long as it could walk, fly and eat.

Others gave up, but Mrs. Shapiro would not quit.

Each morning, she scattered cracked corn in her backyard on Lake Packenpack. And she built a gated 6-by 6-foot chicken wire cage in hopes of catching the bird.

"I was looking out the window yesterday, when I saw that the goose was actually sitting all the way in the cage eating the cracked corn," she recalled excitedly.

"I started to pull the string to the gate, which ran through the window of my husband's study. Of course, the goose heard me but I climbed out the window and managed to force him back. It must have been quite a sight."

Afraid to handle the bird without help, Mrs. Shapiro called her brother to "goose sit" while she drove to the nearby home of Gisela Karlan, a member of the Wildlife Rehabilitation Fund.

"When the wildlife lady got here, she crawled into the cage and picked the goose up. We took it into the playroom, and I cut the piece of plastic off. It had kind of grown into his beak," Mrs. Shapiro said.

The women freed the bird hours later after feeding it a piece of bread — likely its first bulky food since encountering the plastic noose.

"He didn't seem afraid," Mrs. Shapiro said. "He honked like geese do, as if to thank us."

Mrs. Shapiro feeds ducks and geese by the dozens and expects to see "my goose" often. She said she would recognize the newly loose goose because it limps from a previous injury.

"He flew out of the cage as free as a bird," she said. "It was just marvelous."

El Salvador Leftists Unrelenting

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Armed leftists occupying the Spanish Embassy vowed Wednesday to hold the building and eight hostages, including the Spanish ambassador, "until our demands have been satisfied."

Leftist high school students also continued their occupation of the Education Ministry, holding Education Minister Eduardo Colindres and hundreds of others hostages.

The students invaded the ministry Tuesday demanding a 40 percent reduction in tuition at private colleges, expanded enrollment at free public universities and dismissal of some ministry officials. A spokesman for the students said they ranged in age from 13 to 18, and the occupation was peaceful. It was not known if they were armed.

Crowds chanting slogans gathered at the embassy Wednesday. Some brought bags of food for the leftists, members of the Feb. 28 Popular Leagues, or LP-28.

The militants released three Salvadoran employees of the embassy Tuesday night but were still holding Ambassador Victor Sanchez Mesa, embassy counselor Juan Carlos de Ranero, chancellor Manuel de la Helguera, three Spanish employees and two Spanish industrialists who were visiting when it was seized.

The ambassador told an Associated Press reporter allowed into the embassy the Red Cross was supplying food to the hostages and had allowed a doctor to visit him. He has a history of mild heart problems.

Congressmen, If Guilty, Should Be Removed, Hance Declares

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance Thursday offered no sympathy for eight of his fellow congressmen implicated in a major FBI bribery scandal, declaring that "if they are found guilty, they should be removed" from Congress.

"It's a tough situation," the Lubbock Democrat said of the findings of the FBI's "Operation Abscam," in which FBI agents posed as representatives of an Arab sheik offering bribes to win a casino gambling license and other favors.

"But if the FBI stays within the letter of the law; even if they have to use unusual means, I think they shoulud be able to check into any type of criminal activity," Hance said.

Seven House members and a U.S. senator have been implicated in this, the largest investigation of political corruption ever undertaken by the FBI. They are Sen. Harrison Williams Jr. of New Jersey and Reps. John Murphy of New York, Frank Thompson Jr. of New Jersey, Richard Kelly of Florida, John Jenrette of South Carolina and Michael Myers, Raymond Lederer and John Murtha of Pennsylvania. All but Kelly are Democrats.

"I don't think the FBI needs to hold a guy's head in a fire until he confesses to something," Hance said. "But if a person is involved in criminal activity, whether he's in the Mafia or Congress, then I think the FBI is justified in checking into it."

Throughout his career in the Texas Senate and in Congress, Hance has held a hard line against legislators implicated in scandals and plans to maintain his tough stance. "I was one of only two House members to cosponsor a bill asking (Rep. Charles) Diggs (D-Mich.) to step aside after he was convicted (of 25 counts of mail fraud last year)," he said.

"I think we should see what the grand juries will do with this, but if these guys are indicted, I will support and maybe sponsor legislation calling for them not to vote on anything until after their trials," he said. "And if they're found guilty, they should be removed."

News of Operation Abscam surfaced Saturday and, Hance said, there had been no advance warning. The revelation caught most Congressmen "quite by surprise," he said.

"The first thing I knew about it was when I read the Sunday papers here," Hance said. "There's a lot of speculation going on up here right now. Everyone has their theories on what happened, but it's still in the gossip stages."

Implicating more than 20 public officials in its 14-month investigation, Operation Abscam, which involved well over 100 FBI agents, is being called "the biggest Washington scandal since Watergate" by some veteran Capitol Hill observers. The Justice Department, which oversaw the operation, is preparing to present its evidence to a series of East Coast grand juries, and U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti already has declined to turn over any evidence to the House Ethics Committee before the grand juries get it.

"I agree with Civiletti on that if for no other reason than it will prevent anyone from saying that because we're investigating each other there could be some tapering with the evidence or some of it could be misplaced," Hance said.

Hance is worried about the damage the scandal could do to Congress's image and effectiveness, but he's more concerned with the diversion from the many pressing problems before Congress the scandal and subsequent investigation could provide.

"Well, it certainly doesn't help us, but I look at it like this," Hance said. "I work as hard as I can at this job and I have nothing to apologize for. You can take any group of 435 people, whether they're preachers or congressmen or newspaper people or whatever, and you're going to find a few rotten apples.

"There is a problem with elected officials, though, because we're supposed to uphold the public trust," he contined. "Therefore we have higher standards."

"We've just got to correct it as quickly and easily as we can and move on, and get back to the issues at hand," Hance said. "We've still got inflation to whip and a defense to bolster and a lot of other things to work out. And that's what we need to concentrate on."

Commission To Survey 'Bill Problem'

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock's Human Relations Commission is surveying city health facilities to determine the availability of programs for people who "fall through the cracks" between those who can pay their medical bills and the legally indigent.

"I know this is a strange thing for HRC," director Carolyn Lanier said, "but who else is doing it?" Mrs. Lanier explained that she was constantly receiving phone calls from people who are working and paying taxes, but still can't afford medical care.

She cited a complaint from a young woman who makes about $500 a month. Her 20-month-old child has a severe vision problem and had been seeing an opthalmologist for treatment every two or three weeks at $25 to $35 per visit.

The young mother could not afford the treatment. After contacting the Texas Commission for the Blind, the Texas Tech Eye Clinic and a private physician, Mrs. Lanier found that most agencies assume another group is taking care of the problems.

The HRC survey is designed to find out which agencies are taking care of such problems. If the surveys document a need for an agency or program to provide medical care for the working poor, the HRC probalby will approach the county medical society, Mrs. Lanier said.

In other business, the commission was told that letters have gone out to other cities which have agreed to name a street after Martin Luther King Jr. The letters request information relating to the process of naming or changing the names of streets in other cities as well as the response to the name change.

The information is requested in light of the recent push by some city groups to rename Quirt Avenue after King. City officials cite a local ordinance preventing the naming of city streets after people, claiming that if they make an exception to the ordinance it will create a flood of such requests.

Mrs. Lanier also reported that in response to a drive to recruit minorities for the police force, pamphlets are being printed for distribution before the Feb. 15 deadline. City public information director Vaughn Hendrie told the group that 157 persons have picked up applications for police work, 12 of them women.

Officials Fear Cold Damage To Wheat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says a push of severe cold weather has led to fears that some winter wheat may be subject to damage.

"Snow cover increased but remained light in many areas, spurring the potential of possible damage. However, no freeze damage was apparent," the department said.

By Feb. 3 most grain planted last fall was still "rated fair to good," said the weekly report on weather and crop conditions.

"Winter wheat in the corn belt was rated good but had only limited snow cover," the report said.

No Easy Answers On Prisons

THE SAVAGERY and horror experienced during 36 hours of murderous rampage in the New Mexico State Penitentiary can only be inferred from the evidence of carnage that remained when order was restored.

But with at least 36 persons dead and an estimated $27 million in property damage, the riot will go down as one of the most violent and destructive in American history.

Penologists, psychologists, sociologists and "gist about" everybody else will be years analyzing the causes and proposing reforms to forestall a similar massacre in other prisons across the land.

ON THE SURFACE, conditions such as overcrowding of prisoners and understaffing will be easy to pinpoint as targets for corrective action.

But the New Mexico institution is by no means the only one overcrowded and understaffed.

The truth is that we do not yet understand enough about the nature of man and the way his mind works—about abnormal psychology, anti-social behavior, group dynamics, whatever—to really deal satisfactorily with those prone to violence.

If we did, we presumably could soon clear out the prisons and return the criminals, fully cleansed and changed, to society.

Given the present state of the art, in other words, extreme care must be taken in whatever kinds of "reforms" are implemented as a result of the New Mexico tragedy.

Society will run even greater risks if it reacts by either tightening or relaxing too much what already is known about operating prisons and about the limitations on rehabilitating the prisoners.

FURY DIRECTED toward inmate informers, and fed by drugs confiscated during the riot, apparently exploded into unimaginable violence once the bloodshed began at the Santa Fe prison.

Reports indicated the disturbance started with the drinking of homebrew in one cellblock and that guards sent in to put it down were inadequate for the job.

Once they had been overpowered and supposedly "unbreakable" glass had been broken to secure prisoners' records and keys to every part of the facility, the carnage began.

The immediate task, after the clean-up, will be to sort out the facts and try to determine who did what to whom. There are unlikely to be any totally satisfactory answers.

But if the massacre could have been prevented by spending a comparatively few more dollars on adequate staff and facilities, or by using different policies or management practices already tried and proved elsewhere, this needs to be clearly established.

Innovative reform may not be needed at all.

AN EDITORIAL:

Will Real One Please Stand?

IS HE THE dove on the left side of the table who for years has been shaping a foreign policy emphasizing human rights and global demilitarization?

Or is he the hawk on the right side of the table who now is issuing ultimatums for the Soviet Union, shipping arms around the world and suddenly deemphasizing if not abandoning all of the principles he aggressively promoted during the past three years?

One of the most striking examples of the President's sudden policy reversal is his decision to offer $400 million worth of military and economic aid to Pakistan.

Last year, he cut off all military assistance to Pakistan when President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq refused to allow international inspection of a nuclear research program suspected of being designed to produce nuclear weaponry.

MR. CARTER has been critical, furthermore, of Zia ul-Haq's human rights policies, condemning him for repeatedly postponing parliamentary elections to install a civilian government to replace a martial law regime established in the 1977 military coup.

Similarly, Mr. Carter pledged to reduce the U.S. role as the world's leading arms merchant because "competition in arms sales is inimical to peace."

During the past year, the administration has expanded its sale of everything from small arms to jet fighters throughout the Mideast.

Demilitarization of the Indian Ocean was a goal propounded in Carter's State of the Union message only two years ago. Today, approximately two dozen American warships and an equal number of Soviet military vessels are stationed there or in the adjoining Persian Gulf.

THE SOVIET invasion of Afghanistan provided the geopolitical rationale for the military and economic aid decision on Pakistan, but the move meant the President had to ignore three touchstones of his earlier foreign policy—discouraging the proliferation of nuclear weapons, stressing human rights and reducing foreign military aid sales.

The man who four years ago said we should "continue our friendly relationships with Russia" now says it could pose the most serious threat to world peace since the Second World War."

One thing, however, has remained constant, i.e., the validity of an observation Mr. Carter offered in a March 1976 speech, during the last presidential campaign:

"Our foreign policy today," said the candidate, "is in greater disarray than at any time in recent history."

M. STANTON EVANS:

Reagan Policies Speak To Issues Of The Hour

WASHINGTON—The stunning upset scored by George Bush in Iowa appears to have snapped the campaign of former front-runner Ronald Reagan out of its early lethargy.

But whether the candidate's managers have perceived the causes of the Iowa debacle, and will be able to correct them, has yet to be determined.

In some respects, the Reagan campaign this time resembles the scenario of 1976, which is cause for hope among Reagan backers.

An early, above-the-battle attitude, defeat resulting from this posture, a decision to "take the gloves off" and start slugging. In '76, that change of strategy led on to a string of primary victories, and almost snatched the nomination from Gerald Ford.

CAN A similar switch this time lead to a like reversal? Perhaps. But while some things remain the same in 1980 as they were in 1976, others have changed dramatically.

And the things that have changed could make it harder to come back from a loss that dissipates an early lead.

In 1976, the key to the situation facing Reagan was simply this: He was challenging an incumbent President inside a Republican Party notorious for party loyalty.

To replace that President with himself, he had to show that there was some intelligible difference between them, which militated in Reagan's favor. Above-the-battle didn't get the job done.

WHAT WAS important about "taking the gloves off" in that campaign was that it finally got the point across, showing that on numerous issues—Panama, detente, the Kissinger foreign policy generally—the Ford regime was pursuing notions at variance with the opinion of the rank and file. They therefore had a reason to vote for Reagan over Ford.

Most of these considerations do not apply in 1980. George Bush is not an incumbent President, is not presiding over current policy, and has nothing like the track record that Ford compiled as a target to campaign against.

The key to the situation is accordingly quite different, also. The immediate issue now encompasses the GOP rank and file, but also goes far beyond it.

THE COUNTRY has a queasy feeling that we are at sea, beset by perils and confusions, while the President of the United States and most of the audible spokesmen in Congress have no idea of what to do about it.

Reagan's task—and opportunity—was to step in and fill this void. To project an image of strength and certitude, in contrast to the waffling performance of the Carter White House.

With Americans imprisoned in Iran, and Soviet troops parading through Afghanistan, the time was over-ripe for such a show of statesmanship and resolution.

What was calamitous about the above-the-battle posture this time was that it blew this opportunity. Talking about Puerto Rican statehood instead of Iran, promoting a "North American accord" as the centerpiece of foreign policy discussion, ducking on the grain embargo against the Soviets.

PROCEDURAL FAILINGS in Iowa obviously didn't help, but this default on matters of substance was the central problem.

Given the current hawkishness of the country, switching to a more "hard line" posture now may improve things—if it is seen as responsible firmness.

There is little question that Reagan's views on substantive issues are closer to the Republican rank and file than are those of George Bush, nor is there much doubt that Reagan's policy stance is closely fitted to the leadership requirements of the present hour.

But those views must be presented in a coherent, systematic fashion that shows Reagan is in command of the situation—responsible in statement and resolute in intention.

GEORGE WILL:

Man For No Seasons

WASHINGTON—Jeepers creepers, not even demagoguery is what it used to be. The falling away from high standards was apparent in Edward Kennedy's re-announcement speech.

Once upon a time, when a Democrat got all steamed up he sounded like William Jennings Bryan proclaiming "you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold" (Bryan was partial to silver) or FDR rattling on about Republicans being mean to his dog Fala.

Kennedy rose to the standards of his party only once: "It is less than a year since the Vienna summit, when President Carter kissed President Brezhnev on the cheek. We cannot afford a foreign policy based on the pangs of unrequited love."

Kennedy's speech did its job: It defined his campaign, which now stands squarely for two things: more statism at home and more appeasement abroad.

Statism? Regarding inflation, "there is only one recourse." It is, naturally, wage and price controls. Well, he had to say something, and he is not the person to criticize Carter for increasing spending 11 percent a year.

(There was enough snickering when he said how distressed he is about Carter's failing to balance the budget.)

But here is a quiz. What industrial nation has most frequently tried what Kennedy favors? (Answer: Britain.)

Appeasement? Kennedy lends support to the terrorist line that the United States is somehow culpable for allowing the Shah into the country. He seems ready to accept a terrorist veto over U.S. immigration.

LIKE CARTER, Kennedy will not yield to "blackmail." Unlike Carter, he is not inclined to try ransom. (The administration hints that Iran can expect foreign aid when the hostages come home.)

Kennedy proposes—are you ready, America, for Real Leadership?—a UN commission to say beastly things about the Shah.

Regarding Russia's geopolitical assault in Southwest Asia, Kennedy accuses Carter of "exaggeration," and seems strangely reassured by the fact that "this is not the first abuse of Soviet power, nor will it be the last."

Kennedy is a blessing to Carter's campaign: He says, with a straight face, that Carter's defense proposals are too strong.

Kennedy even includes a ritual punch at the "military-industrial complex." I am not surprised that Kennedy evidently has not opened his eyes or his mind for a decade, but he really should buy speech writers who can rise above cribbing from that old phrase-maker, Eisenhower.

BUT SPEAKING of the "military-industrial complex" (as we are fated to do until someone notifies Kennedy that he snoozed through the 1970s), consider, as Kennedy does not, the facts.

Here is the trend of defense spending as a percentage of GNP (in parentheses), beginning with 1948, after the rush of postwar disarmament: 1948 (4.5); 1952 (13.2); 1960 (8.8); 1968 (7.2); 1970 (8.9); 1975 (7.5); and 1979 (4.6).

Astonishingly, Kennedy says the threat to the Persian Gulf is distracting the administration from "more vital interests".

"For example, this nation has an important stake in the independence of Yugoslavia. If President Tito were to die while we were preoccupied in the Persian Gulf, the Soviets could be tempted to launch an attack on Yugoslavia—a country that President Carter as a candidate declared he would not defend."

KENNEDY IS NOT exactly saying that he would defend Yugoslavia. He is not saying anything exactly. But he evidently thinks Yugoslavia's independence is far more important to the United States than is the flow of oil from the Gulf.

This, in spite of the fact that, as James Schlesinger says, Soviet control of that oil would devastate America and end the association of free nations.

"I am sure," Kennedy says, "that every American would prefer to sacrifice a little gasoline rather than shed American blood to defend OPEC pipelines in the Middle East."

He suggests that Persian Gulf oil can be almost effortlessly ("a little gasoline") dispensed with; and he ignores the fate our allies would suffer were Russia to become the rationer of that oil.

BY RIDICULING Carter's "preoccupation" with the Persian Gulf, and by suggesting that rationing is an alternative to resisting Soviet domination of the Gulf, Kennedy has done with regard to the Gulf what he criticizes Carter for having done with regard to Yugoslavia:

He is signaling to Russia that, as President, he would not defend the independence of the Gulf.

Kennedy says he speaks "for all the Americans who were ignored in the State of the Union Address." That's about right.

Carter's State of the Union Address dealt with national security, which concerns everybody. Kennedy speaks for everybody else.

ANDREW TULLY:

License To Kill

WASHINGTON—This is tough-talk time. President Carter has pledged to protect the Persian Gulf from Soviet aggression by military action, if necessary. And Ronald Reagan has come out for dispatching U.S. troops to Pakistan.

In retort, various members of Congress are saying that Carter couldn't, unilaterally, take either of those actions. There is, they say, something called the War Powers Act of 1973, which was enacted over Richard Nixon's veto.

There is, indeed. In fact, however, the law is no real prohibition against Jimmy Carter employing American troops anywhere in the world in the name of national security.

THE PRESIDENT may still commit troops to foreign hostilities, so long as he reports to Congress within 48 hours thereafter and explains the circumstances, authority, and expected scope of his action.

Not until 60 days had passed would the President have to stop the hostilities, and that deadline could be extended by 30 days if he certified more time was necessary for safely withdrawing American forces.

That's no ban on Presidential war-making.

True, the law provides that within a 60 to 90 day period Congress could force immediate withdrawal by passing a concurrent resolution, not subject to Presidential veto.

BUT CONGRESS moves slowly at best, and by the time it could act a misguided or even unscrupulous President would have taken care to so involve us that withdrawal would be impossible.

To specify: The Constitution states Article 1, Section 8, that Congress shall have power "to declare war, grant letters of marque, and make rules concerning captures on land and water."

Well, "to declare war" means just that. But the War Powers Act gives just enough power to the President to clear the decks for another Vietnam.

Because nobody can foresee what emergencies might arise, Congress has no choice but to give the President authority to act quickly in a time of authentic national peril—a Russian attack on the U.S., for example.

INDEED, YOU can count on the fingers of one hand the liberals in Congress who would raise their voices in protest if Carter dispatched troops to Israel. And none of the hawks on either side of the aisle would object to a military adventure aimed at Moscow.

Meanwhile, Carter—and Reagan—would find support in Section 1, Article 2, of the Constitution, which says the Executive power shall be vested in the President.

It can be argued that acting in the interests of the U.S. abroad by military means is part of that Executive power.

Truman used that power in Korea. John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson used it in Vietnam. Even the War Powers Act, designed to put Presidents in their place, says Carter—or Reagan—could use it in Pakistan or in the Persian Gulf.

JAY HARRIS:

The Draft Debate...

THE GREAT Debate, over registration for the draft, and the draft itself, has now been joined.

It has been complicated by the argument as to whether women should be signed up, drafted, serve in combat...

Suddenly, millions of young men and women have come face to face with the reality of the world in which they live, the Atomic Age with a mailed fist.

As a result, such headlines as the following have been showing up in the nation's papers: If War Is Inevitable, Who Should Fight? Americans Draw Battle Lines On Future War. Feminists Diverge On Women's Draft, and Case For Drafting Of 50-Year-Olds...

And a Texas paper put it this way: It's Everybody's Job.

AS CAN BE seen, the Great Debate is on in earnest...

In the Halls of Congress, in millions of homes, over coffee cups, on college campuses.

And while there seems to be a consensus that America faces perhaps its gravest threat since Hitler, and that some sort of U.S. buildup—in men and materiel—is a must, just how that should be done is the Big Question.

Unfortunately, much of the sound and fury has been centered around whether women should be registered and later drafted, and if drafted should they serve in a combat role.

For some unaccountable reason, everyone, including the feminists, and all others seem to forget that in World War II women did serve—in the WACs, WAVEs, ferrying planes, helping build them, in offices, weapons factories, parachute packing, a thousand and one ways.

NO WOMEN were called into the front lines in that war, nor in any since, formally.

But, that is not to say, even here they haven't served with valor. In World War II, the fairer sex of Britain was given a choice: serve in industrial war work, on a farm or in a uniform.

That thousands in all three endeavors helped Britain "go it alone" through the dark days of the blitz, the buzz bombs and fire raids. In the Battle for Britain, women as well as men helped win the war, and civilians as well as the military suffered heavy casualties.

The "front line" to the English was their homes...

And for whatever it is worth, two generations of Americans have grown up not mindful of the fact that U.S. bombers took the war to the very doorsteps of the enemy in those days in order to end the carnage for both sides. It wasn't a pretty picture then, and it will be even less so the next time.

IN THE DAYS since President Carter said he would ask Congress to restore registration for the draft, today's Crisis World came closer home to almost everyone.

For the first time, millions realized that Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness, if not the good life, is something which someone paid dearly for in the past, and may have to again.

It has been interesting to read the reactions...

On the one hand, a hefty majority agree that the Soviet Union poses a major threat, not only to the Mideast and Persian Gulf oil supply, but perhaps to the Free World itself. On the other, there is sharp disagreement about what to do about it. Much of the confusion seems to revolve around what should be done. To far too many Americans, the "unthinkable," an Atomic Armageddon is just that, Unthinkable.

IN THIS week's U.S. News & World Report, Senators Sam Nunn, D. Ga., and Mark Hatfield, GOP, Ore., debate the issue of reviving the draft...

Arguing the nation should never have been left with no means to back up its regular and reserve forces, Sen. Nunn says a pre-draft registration "would cut 90 to 100 days off the time needed to get young men to report..."

Sen. Hatfield says "registration cannot be separated from a draft" and "that a draft is more characteristic of a totalitarian system than a free society." Instead of the draft, he says, "the 1.3 million reserve force" should be utilized...

In a nationwide survey, 61 percent polled favored resuming the draft, 29 percent opposed it, while 79 percent opted for just registration. Yet, on some campuses, the cry of "Hell no, we won't go!" has echoed again.

THE PROBLEM seems to be that far too many people, both young and old, still do not perceive the sort of world in which we live.

As Jim Wright of The Dallas Morning News notes, "the Sir Walter Scott type of war, if such there ever was, is long gone. The Russians, and indeed all Europeans of World War II vintage, know that modern wars tend to be between whole populations..."

Columnist Ellen Goodman argues that war has always been part of man's makeup, "but more awesomely, as a male activity, a rite of passage, a test of manhood, war has been gruesomely acceptable." Because of this, she says, women should be part and parcel of the armed forces, not so much as to wage war, but perhaps to prevent it...

And James A. Stegenga, a professor at Purdue, makes a case for drafting 50-year-olds for the next one. "Instead of calling up immature 19-year-olds, who will have to be mothered and socialized to accept the rigors of military life, the military could induct mature 50-year-olds who have spent their adult lives working in organizations, patiently coping, understanding legitimate restrictions, suffering idiots and shouldering responsibilities..."

And at some point, he says, "the 50-year-old soldier is likely to ask the old civilians in Washington: 'You're sending me where to do what? You gotta be kidding!'"

In the meantime, jokes and worries aside, armed Soviet soldiers are waging a bloody war in Afghanistan and 50 Americans remain hostage in Tehran.

L.M. BOYD:

Pass It On:

THERE ARE children in the Micronesian Islands with first names like Radio, Cigarette and Careless. The parents are said to be enthralled with modern gimmicks of the western world. One particularly popular pair of syllables, no doubt spread by visiting servicemen, is Love Me. That, too, has become a proper name there.

Exactly why male horses have 40 teeth while female horses only have 36 teeth I can't explain.

Q. What two points on the 50 United States are farthest apart?

A. Log Point, Elliot Key, Florida, and Kure Island, Hawaii. Between them are 5,852 miles.

Auto mechanic to lady who has arrived to pick up her car: "You see, when you had the flat tire, the settling of the axle on the cramshaft created pressure on the firegat rods, pushing them up through the transmission and into the engine housing. That'll be seven hundred, twenty-two dollars and forty-three cents!"

Denver Building Boom Based On Energy Industry Expectancy

DENVER (AP) — Downtown Denver, rising out of sandy plains 20 miles from the Rockies, is in the midst of a billion-dollar building boom fueled by expectation it will be the heart and hub of a new energy industry.

By the end of the 1980s, the city core that started as a 19th century gold and cattle boom town will be a half-mile stretch of skyscrapers, stores and luxury condominiums bisected by a $57 million bus-pedestrian mall.

The mall project was kicked off last Sunday with realignment of one-way streets flanking the site.

By 1990, some 30 skyscrapers will be completed, planners say.

"This used to be Skid Row, now look at it," said Jack Clifford, assistant executive director of the Denver Urban Renewal Authority, gesturing out his office window at a cluster of half-completed buildings.

"Sometimes we get a little cautious about overbuilding, then we take another look," he said. "We're creating two million to three million square feet of office space, but we're still running at a 4 to 5 percent vacancy rate.

"They're gobbling it up as we build it and they're still coming."

Gold was discovered in 1858 about half a mile southwest of where all the frenzied building is taking place. The town that became Denver was then called St. Charles. The gold petered out quickly, but the cattle barons moved in, building opulent mansions just east of town in a frenzied attempt to outdo their neighbors.

As the plains east of the Rockies settled into a farming economy, Denver became a center for produce storage, transportation and banking. Now its future may lie in energy resources.

Denver is ideally located for this.

Today's FOCUS

Much of the exploration for shale oil is focused on the Western Slope of the Rockies in Colorado. The state also has large deposits of coal, molybdenum and uranium.

Clifford said many of the future skyscraper tenants are mining firms such as Anaconda and Amax and oil companies such as Amoco, Chevron and Atlantic Richfield.

More are expected to move in as the United States launches an effort to develop synthetic fuels, Clifford said.

The Urban Renewal Authority oversees the largest single chunk of downtown real estate, the 113-acre, 27-block Skyline area.

By the time its last parcel of land has been developed some 10 years from now, Skyline will include more than $500 million in low-income housing, luxury condominiums, glass-and-steel office buildings and dozens of stores, Clifford said.

At the opposite end of the core is another half-billion-dollar cluster of skyscrapers financed and developed by private firms ranging from giant mining concerns to insurance companies and foreign investment syndicates, many from Canada.

The 11-block pedestrian mall that will link the two areas is a project of Denver's Regional Transportation District and is aimed at breathing new life into downtown retail businesses.

"We have a good downtown from a commercial standpoint, but it's pretty much an 8-to-5 working environment," said transit director Howard Beck.

In addition to boosting retail sales and beautifying Denver, the mall also was intended to cut the city's growing pollution problem.

Denver's air was once so pristine that the city was known as a center for treatment of tuberculosis and asthma. But auto exhausts have clogged the air, and the Colorado Medical Society suggested last year that people with respiratory diseases might benefit by living somewhere else.

So a decision to buy diesel buses rather than the more expensive, but cleaner, electrical buses was criticized by environmentally minded citizens and the Environmental Protection Agency.

City officials also hope the mall will help halt the sprawl that has scattered the city's work force 30 miles in either direction along the Front Range of the Rockies. The sprawl has cut Denver's share of federal transit funds, which are based in part on population density.

The anti-sprawl effort also is reflected in the downtown building push. In the Skyline project, about $19.6 million is going to 690 units of low-income housing and an additional $80.2 million to 811 condominiums ranging in price from $50,000 to $250,000.

WORKERS INJURED

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Two construction workers were injured when a small section of cement bleachers collapsed in the Rosemont Horizon stadium, where five men were killed in a roof cave-in last summer. The section was being lifted into place Tuesday when a weld gave way, authorities said. Seven other workers on the bleachers were unhurt. In the earlier cave-in of the entire roof, there were 15 injuries in addition to the five dead.

Shell Suing Over Sinking Of Tanker

LONDON (AP) — Shell Oil International of London is taking legal action claiming $57.5 million against an unidentified company in South Africa in the sinking of a supertanker whose oil cargo reportedly had been replaced with seawater.

Shell declined Wednesday to identify whom it is suing because "we're prevented by legal restrictions." However, there was speculation the claim is being made against South Africa's state-owned oil company.

The action is the second taken by Shell since the tanker Salem sank off Dakar, Senegal, on Jan. 17 after a series of explosions. Shell has said it owned the Salem's cargo of 193,000 tons of light Kuwaiti crude oil.

The company issued a writ last week claiming $56.8 million against Frederick Soudan, chairman of the Liberian-registered Oxford Shipping Co. which owned the 214,000-ton tanker. Oxford Shipping also operates out of Houston, Texas.

Soudan has, through his London attorneys, denied responsibility for the Salem's disappearance and its cargo of oil, destined for Italy.

Soudan left London for Geneva five days ago, the day after Lloyds of London and Scotland Yard launched an investigation into what a Shell spokesman described as "a breathtaking case of maritime fraud."

Soudan, 36, a former insurance salesman, was born in Lebanon, but is understood to be a naturalized U.S. citizen.

Investigators quoted a crew member of the ship as saying the oil was secretly unloaded at Durban, where the Salem made an unscheduled stop, Dec. 27. That violated the stringent embargo by Middle East producers against selling oil to South Africa.

The crewman told investigators the Salem's tanks were filled with seawater to make it appear fully laden, and it sailed from Durban on Jan. 2.

Fifteen days later, investigators say, the vessel was scuttled off Senegal in one of the deepest trenches in the Atlantic Ocean to prevent divers checking the hull.

Lloyds, which had insured the 10-year-old tanker and its cargo for $80 million, faces one of the biggest maritime claims on the London insurance market — unless criminal conspiracy can be proved.

South Africa buys its oil wherever it can, but all its oil purchases are shrouded in official secrecy. South Africa often pays $20 a barrel above the normal Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries price to get around the OPEC embargo.

There was some confusion over how Shell obtained the oil. Shell claimed last week that it had bought the oil from Pontoil, a trading company based near Genoa, Italy, after the Salem sailed from Kuwait — a normal oil business practice.

However, Sheik Ali Jaber al-Sabah, Kuwait's undersecretary for oil contracts, claimed Wednesday that Shell has denied it purchased the cargo from Pontoil.

Shell officials in London were not available immediately for comment on the Kuwaiti report. Pontoil executives also could not be reached.

The sheik announced that Kuwait had suspended all oil sales to Pontoil while the Salem's last voyage is investigated.

Two To Give Birth To Test-Tube Babies

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Two Australian women are expected to give birth to test-tube babies this summer, doctors said Wednesday.

Dr. Ian Johnston said one of the women was Mrs. Linda Reed, a 24-year-old former nurse from the small Victorian country town of Churchill. She is five months pregnant, he said.

Medical tests have shown Mrs. Reed's pregnancy is "totally normal," Johnston said, and she is being treated as a normal expectant mother.

Johnston did not identify the other woman, but said she was 31 and was three and a half months pregnant.

Mrs. Reed has a four-year-old son and the other woman has two children, but they can not have additional children normally because both have blocked fallopian tubes, which prevents their husbands' sperm from reaching their eggs.

The doctors said the eggs were fertilized by their husbands' sperm in laboratory glassware, then planted in the wombs of the women at the Royal Women's Hospital in Melbourne.

Mrs. Reed did not attend the news conference, and a neighbor said Wednesday the Reeds had departed on a vacation.

"They've gone away for two weeks' holiday to get away from it all. They don't want to be hassled and we don't blame them," said the neighbor, Mrs. Brian Benson.

The principal members of the research team were Johnston, of the Royal Women's Hospital, and Professor Carl Wood, Professor John Leeton and Dr. Alex Lopata of the Queen Victoria Medical Center.

Lopata said that since 1973, the team had fertilized more than 30 eggs outside the womb and transplanted them back into the mothers, but the eggs failed to develop because hormone therapy had been used on the expectant women.

Guerrilla Leader Unhurt After Attack

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe, after narrowly escaping death in a grenade attack on his home, accused supporters of former Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa on Wednesday of a systematic assassination campaign against Mugabe's party.

Mugabe also accused the British governor, Lord Soames, of siding with Muzorewa's party and of enacting a new anti-violence ordinance as the first step in banning Mugabe's party from the Feb. 27-29 parliamentary elections aimed at providing a black-ruled country.

Soames signed an ordinance Wednesday giving his administration the power to ban political parties, muzzle candidates and forbid rallies if needed to curb escalating political violence.

British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington responded angrily to a resolution passed last week by the U.N. Security Council criticizing British administration in Rhodesia. He called it "one-sided and absurdly selection" and said it served to increase tension in the former British colony in Africa.

Ian Smith, the former white prime minister who led Rhodesia's 1965 break with Britain to avoid black majority rule, met with Prime Minister P.W. Botha of neighboring South Africa. Botha's anti-Marxist government has threatened repeatedly to intervene if the British-sponsored Rhodesian cease-fire dissolves into chaos.

Mugabe said at a news conference that Soames was "promoting Muzorewa. He is biased against us. What we take exception to is prominence given reports against us, and no prominence is given to these attacks perpetrated by auxiliaries loyal to Muzorewa." He was referring to irregular units of the Rhodesian security forces loyal to Muzorewa, who was named prime minister last April and served until Soames took control last December after the cease-fire accord was reached.

Mugabe said, "All told, in a matter of four to five days, auxiliary forces have tried to eliminate the lives of five of our candidates." He also accused the auxiliaries of the grenade attack early Wednesday on his home, and the rocket assault on the home of his party's transport and welfare secretary, Kumbirai Kangayi.

Mugabe was unharmed, but Kangayi was injured seriously.

Three men were arrested in connection with the incidents, but police refused to say whether the men had ties with Muzorewa.

Mugabe said Soames must control the auxiliaries, adding, "If they are his forces, under his command, then he must take responsibility for their acts."

The auxiliaries, accused by the guerrillas of widespread political intimidation, are under the command of the Rhodesian security forces and thus under Soames' control. The London peace accords that ended the seven-year war and restored British rule put the Rhodesian military and government under Soames' command.

Asked why Soames would be biased against Mugabe's party, Mugabe said, "They don't want us to win the elections. They feel we are committed to a socialist state. We are not deterred in our search for peace by these acts against us."

A spokesman for Soames said the governor deplored attacks on candidates, but was far more concerned about intimidation of black voters in rural areas. The spokesman said the worst intimidation was occurring in eastern areas where Mugabe's men had operated during the war.

Pakistani Urges Peace Force In Afghanistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq suggested Wednesday that an international peace force replace the Soviet troops in neighobring Afghanistan.

"The Soviet Union should withdraw its troops from the Afghan soil and let us combine together and make a peace force in Afghanistan," Zia told visiting Indian journalists.

He said the peace force should ensure the Afghan people are able to decide how the country should be run, without foreign interference.

An estimated 85,000 Soviet troops have been in the Central Asian country since the ouster and execution of former President Hafizullah Amin in late December. He was replaced by Soviet-backed Babrak Karmal.

Zia said a peacekeeping force of Indians, Pakistanis and Iranians could fulfill such a role and help the thousands of Afghan refugees, now in Pakistan, return to their homes.

He also described as "incorrect" and "a matter of propaganda" charges by the Soviet Union that Pakistan is providing bases for Afghan rebels on its territory.

Zia said Pakistan was giving refuge to "these brothers from Afghanistan only on humanitarian grounds. Pakistani soil is not being used for any subversive activities in Afghanistan."

The general also called on India to use its influence with the Soviet Union to get Soviet troops out of Afghanistan, the United News of India reported.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India had a close relationship with Moscow during her first administration from 1966 to 1977. Returned to power on a landslide election victory last month, Mrs. Gandhi has said the intervention in Afghanistan was unjustified but that the Soviets will not be pressured into withdrawal.

Soviets See Resentment On Afghan Border

HEIRATAN, Afghanistan (AP) — Roaring through a swirl of snow and dust, a mile-long line of Soviet trucks and armor snakes across Afghanistan's lifeless steppe.

Like dozens of convoys that have preceded it by land or air in the past six weeks, this one faces a hostile populace and the threat of a bruising guerrilla war this spring, when the snows melt.

Afghans living in the area say at least one convoy a day arrives via a nearby pontoon bridge the Soviet army threw across the Amu Darya — the river Alexander the Great and Marco Polo knew as the Oxus. The river was bridged as thousands of Russian troops poured into Afghanistan in late December to take up the war against anti-communist rebels.

Heiratan, a desolate little cluster of mud huts and a customs shed, faces the Soviet city of Termez, Uzbekistan, across the fast-flowing river, which is several hundred yards wide here.

Among dozens of civilian trucks slithering through thick mud and slush ambles an occasional fur-capped, great-coated Soviet soldier. Afghan smugglers wander about trying to sell the Soviets hashish, watches and photos of local film stars.

No one tried to stop a trio of Western reporters as they drove into Heiratan in a rattletrap Soviet-made taxi after a 350-mile journey from Kabul, the Afghan capital, by bus, auto and, at one point, horse-drawn cart.

The trip across the Hindu Kush mountain range and the northern plains provided a first-hand look at an area where the Soviets are most visible and their presence most profoundly detested by the local population.

Every bridge and hairpin bend on the road from Kabul, the only paved north-south route, is guarded by Soviet tanks or armored personnel carriers.

An Afghan in the group made a throat-cutting gesture and told the reporters, "Shuravi — mujahaddin," meaning Soviets had been attacked by Islamic rebels.

Less direct signs of guerrilla disruption in the north abounded. The number of school days has been reduced, some roads are closed, even the national sport of "buzkashi," a polo-like game in which horseman use a headless calf as a ball, is not being played — horse owners sympathetic with the rebellion are refusing to provide steeds.

Northern Afghanistan is more rigidly anti-communist than the rest of the country because many of its religious elders remember how the Marxists tried to stamp out religion in the Soviet republics of central Asia in the 1930s, sending thousands of Uzbek and Turkoman Moslems fleeing into Afghanistan.

"We don't like them, never have," a businessman told one of the reporters in Mazari Sharif, capital of the northern province of Balkh. "If they take over here I won't be able to say what I like, pray how I like, even go to Kabul if I like."

The Soviet presence here has only inflamed resentment that has seethed ever since Afghan Marxists came to power in April 1978 in a bloody coup.

In one provocative move, the Marxists last year plastered a large red party symbol over the main entrance to Mazari Sharif's beautiful blue mosque, where local tradition says Ali, son-in-law of the Prophet Mohammed, is buried.

"They said that if Ali is such a good man he should become a party member," one Afghan joked bitterly.

Everywhere the reporters stopped, they found Afghans ready to vent their hatred for all things Russian.

FM Road's Rerouting Blamed On Secretive Commissioners

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MULESHOE — An unpublicized decision by Bailey County commissioners five years ago to change the location of a proposed farm road was blamed Wednesday for the rerouting of the road away from the community of Bula in southeast Bailey County.

About 25 Bula residents showed up at a public meeting here to oppose the changed routing of Farm Road 3397 to one mile west of their small farming community. Originally, the eight-mile road was to have traveled through Bula. The Bula residents were joined by about 25 Circle Back community residents who supported the change.

At the meeting, County Judge Glenn Williams said commissioners were secretive about their decision to move the farm road west at a meeting on March 18, 1975.

Williams said he was ill that day and didn't attend the 1975 meeting. No minutes were taken at the meeting because county commissioners reportedly told county clerk Hazel Gilbreath that they weren't planning any official action, he said.

The judge also noted that on Feb. 28, 1975, three Circle Back representatives met with the commissioners and asked that the road be moved one mile west.

"When the road's location was changed from east to west, the commissioners never told me about their decision. In fact, I was never told about the change until Feb. 1, 1980," the judge told the group.

"The commissioners were mistaken in their action," Williams said. "If the people had been told the truth right away, there would have been no controversy. The full and truthful information was not put over when it should have been."

George Wall, district engineer for the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation Department in Lubbock, also attended the 1975 meeting and he told the Bula group Wednesday that he came out of the meeting "with the understanding that the county commissioners now wanted the west road instead of the east one."

The proposed road is located in Precinct 4, and Bula farmer Benny Claunch pressed Precinct 4 Commissioner Rudolph Moraw for his reason for supporting the change.

"I had decided there were more houses, more people and more traffic on the west road and the county commissioners agreed with me to change the road's location," Moraw responded.

Bula farmer Ivan Clawson told Williams that Moraw told him a week ago that the state had made the decsion to move the road.

Originally, the proposed FM 3397 was to begin at FM 298 and travel south into Bula, according to plans by the state highway department.

Near the end of the two and one-half hour hearing, the county judge said that the commissioners were at fault for being secretive about the matter.

But, he added, "I hope you two groups will feel good about each other and let the past be past," Williams told the crowd.

State highway officials told the gathering that construction costs for the proposed road will be $980,000 and that the right-of-way costs are estimated at $36,441. The county commissioners plan to use federal revenue sharing money to pay for the right-of-way costs and the state will pay for the road.

Avalanche-Journal's Editor Set As Speaker For LCC Symposium

Jay Harris, editor of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, will address Lubbock Christian College's Freshman English Symposium on Monday.

Harris's topic will be "Words: a Tool of the Trade." He will address the symposium at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the chapel of the C.L. Kay Christian Development Center.

The symposium is planned by the LCC English Department and sponsored by the Center for Business and Economic Education. The public is invited to attend both sessions at no cost.

Harris was born near Hico in 1918 and attended public schools in Paducah and Lubbock. He received a B.A. degree from Texas Tech with majors in journalism, political science and government and minors in English and Spanish. He graduated in the top 10 percent of his class.

While still a student in 1938, Harris began working for The Avalanche-Journal sports department, then moved into news editing and makeup on the afternoon and morning papers.

Following a three-year stint in the Army Air Corps 1942-45, Harris returned to the A-J. He was managing editor of the morning paper for 20 years, then became executive editor and served in that capacity until 1972, when Morris Communications purchased the paper. He became editor in 1972.

In the past five years Harris has traveled extensively, approximately 480,000 miles in numerous trips abroad. He has met with and interviewed several heads of state and other leading officials, both foreign and domestic.

Harris has visited South Africa, Egypt, the Mideast, Israel, Italy, Morocco, Portugal, France, Switzerland, Germany, Greece, India and Mexico.

A member of the Texas and national Associated Press and United Press International managing editors associations, Harris serves as a trustee of the West Texas Museum, has been an active member of the Downtown Rotary Club for 28 years and delivers 30 to 60 talks a year on various subjects from foreign affairs to local events.

FEMALE GRADUATES

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Female graduates of Michigan State University begin their first jobs earning an average $1,000 less than male graduates, according to a survey by the school. The survey said the finding holds true for women graduates regardless of their degree level. With a bachelor's degree, a woman can expect an average annual starting pay of $12,355, the study showed.

Tax-Sheltered IRA Often Overlooked

(Ninth in a Series)
By RAY DeCRANE

While bemoaning the fact they don't have tax shelters, which seemingly are available only to the wealthy, millions of Americans are ignoring the best tax-saving opportunity available to them.

If a tax shelter means the opportunity to have an economic advantage without paying a tax on it, two of the greatest shelters available to the average person are Individual Retirement Accounts and Keogh Plans.

Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) permit working people who are not covered by a pension or a profit-sharing program to fashion their own retirement program under favorable tax rules. While 50 percent of all working people in this country are not participants in a pension program and have only Social Security checks to look forward to at retirement time, only a pitifully small percentage of them are taking advantage of the IRA and the tax laws.

An employee who is not under a pension program is permitted to set aside 15 percent of his compensation — but not more than $1,500 a year — into his own IRA. He gets two big advantages for taking steps to provide more financial security for himself, of which the first is that his contributions to his retirement program are deductile on his tax return.

The second advantage is that the interest earned on his money is accumulated free of income tax during his working years. The IRA account can be opened at a savings and loan, bank, insurance company, brokerage firm, or through the purchase of U.S. Retirement Bonds.

A consistently followed IRA program will permit average low-income employees to accumulate a retirement nest-egg of $100,000 or more.

Where a worker and his spouse are both employed and each qualifies for an IRA, they may each have their separate programs and may deduct as much as $3,000 on their joint return.

If a worker has an unemployed spouse, he may open a spousal account and contribute into it annually the lesser of $1,750 or 15 percent of his earned income. This could provide future pensions for today's housewives.

Keogh Plans are to the self-employed what IRAs are to employees. A self-employed person — a manufacturer's representative, doctor, dentist, plumber, barber, realtor, etc. — can set aside 15 percent of net self-employment income, but not more than $7,500 yearly, in a retirement fund.

The Keogh account holder gets the same tax advantages as the IRA participant — deductibility of annual contributions and tax-deferral on the interest earnings.

Proper use of a Keogh account will permit millions of today's self-employees to retire as millionaires.

IMMIGRANTS GIVEN RUFUGE

OTTAWA (AP) — Two crew members who fled the Soviet freighter Aleksandr Serafimovich last week have been given permission to remain in Canada while their application for landed immigrant status is processed. Immigration Minister Ron Atkey issued the permits to Yelena Terekhova, 22, a cleaning woman, and Aleksandr Ryaguzov, 33, a cargo officer.

Authors Say U.S. Becoming More Dependent On 'Hostile Oil'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The United States is becoming increasingly dependent on "hostile oil" from countries in the Mideast and Africa antagonistic toward the West, two Harvard University energy experts warned Wednesday.

In an article in the current issue of Foreign Affairs magazine, Robert Stobaugh and Daniel Yergin also condemned domestic oil and natural gas price controls as "a great disservice" that encourage consumption. They recommended conservation measures to achieve a no-growth U.S. energy policy for the 1980s.

"Our whole industrial system is like a vehicle built to operate on $3 (a barrel) oil, puffing along with an inefficient engine and with a body leaking vast amounts of energy," they said in the article published Wednesday.

Imported oil costs around $30 a 42-gallon barrel, 10 times as much as it did in 1973, and the energy waste "drives higher the price of future oil purchases, which in turn makes it easier for OPEC to cut production and raise prices even more," they said.

Stobaugh, a Harvard Business School professor, and Yergin, a lecturer at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, headed the six-year Harvard Business School energy study that resulted in the book "Energy Future," published last May.

The authors said Iran, Iraq, Libya and Algeria supplied 30 percent of world market oil in 1978, but now are "decidedly antagonistic to the United States."

Iraq, Algeria and Libya supplied the United States with about 20 percent of its imported crude oil supply in 1979 compared with about 10 percent in 1973, Yergin said in an interview.

U.S. purchases of Iranian oil were banned by President Carter after militants took a group of Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran last November.

The authors also claim that Saudi Arabia, producer of one-third of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' oil and supplier of 7.4 percent of U.S. oil needs, no longer can be considered a stable supplier.

"The seizure in November of the Grand Mosque in Mecca by perhaps 700 militants may well prove, in retrospect, to have been the single most important development relevant to energy in 1979," they wrote, adding "that such a conspiracy could go undetected is deeply disturbing."

The intervention in Afghanistan by the Sovet Union "suggests that it may eventually be prepared to challenge some of the most vital Western interests," Stobaugh and Yergin wrote.

"This situation, superimposed on national and regional instabilities, certainly provides a further major reason for immediate concern about the security of oil supplies," they said.

"The United States could be at a dramatic turning point," the Harvard writers said. "Perhaps the Ayatollah (Ruhollah) Khomeini and the 'students' who took Americans hostage have now succeeded in achieving what three presidents have been unable to do — dramatize the danger of overdependence and so change the course of U.S. energy policy."

The authors called price controls on domestic oil and natural gas "a dangerous delusion for a country that imports almost half its oil and is the largest buyer of OPEC oil."

Price controls on U.S.-produced oil are scheduled to be lifted next year. Some domestic natural gas has been removed from price controls but the rest will be controlled until at least 1985. A "windfall" tax bill now before congressional conferees would raise $227.3 billion over the next decade from new revenues arising from the lifting of oil price controls.

The Harvard authors said, "our aim should be zero energy growth for the 1980s — not just because our supplies might be limited to that but because meeting this goal through productive conservation is the best way to promote positive economic growth."

Tanker Crew Flees Ship After Fire

MIAMI (AP) — A fire in the engine room of an oil-laden tanker forced 22 crewmen to flee in lifeboats Wednesday but was brought under control a few hours later, the Coast Guard reported. Smaller fires continued to burn.

Nine crewmen stayed aboard to fight the blaze on the 600-foot Aries, which radioed a distress signal about 2 p.m. from west of Dry Tortugas island.

"There's still concern about the possibility of a reflash fire," said Lt. Moris Turner of the Miami Coast Guard station. "But it appears everything is under control now."

The Coast Guard cutter Cape York went to the scene and picked up crewmen and helped fight the fire, said Coast Guard spokesman Mike Ayers. Two private ships, the Texaco North Dakota and the Guadalupe, also stood by during the fire and two U.S. Navy helicopters were sent from Key West.

Turner said the fire apparently was caused by an electrical malfunction.

"The fact that there are still fires around the pilot house indicate it spread somehow," Turner said.

At least two crewmen were reported injured and evacuated to Key West — one with a broken arm and another with a history of heart problems.

Bani Sadr Blasts Lawless 'Dictators'

By The Associated Press

Iran's new president, taking on the U.S. Embassy militants directly for the first time, attacked them as lawless "dictators" Wednesday after they engineered the arrest of a government minister as an alleged ally of the CIA.

President Abolhassan Bani Sadr's bitter denunciation of the Moslem militants may set up a showdown between them and his emerging government that could affect the fate of the approximately 50 Americans the militants have held hostage at the Tehran embassy for 95 days.

Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his Revolutionary Council have accepted a U.N. plan for an inquiry into the ex-shah's regime that American officials hope will lead to the release of the hostages.

But the Iranians continued to make conflicting statements Wednesday about whether and when the hostages would be freed.

In another development, 49 Americans sympathetic to the embassy militants' cause arrived in Tehran but were detained for four hours at the airport because of confusion over their entry visas.

The government official arrested was the minister of national guidance and information, Nasser Minachi.

Embassy Documents "Found"

The militants alleged in a national television broadcast Tuesday evening that documents they found in the embassy showed that Minachi had "close links with the CIA." The minister, who denied the charges, was arrested by the militia-like revolutionary guards at his home at about midnight.

Bani Sadr denounced the arrest as unauthorized by the state prosecutor, and assailed the state radio-television system for giving air time to the militants without prior government approval.

Government Within Government

In an interview with the Tehran newspaper Kayhan, he said the embassy militants were paving the way for lawlessness in Iran and he called them "dictators who have created a government within a government."

"How could you expect a government employee to go to work feeling secure?" he asked. "No legal or judicial security in the country ... will undoubtedly lead to disorder."

It was the strongest attack yet on the militants by Bani Sadr, who has taken over as head of the Revolutionary Council, which will be dissolved after parliamentary elections scheduled for March.

The militants claimed they had found documents in which:

— The Central Intelligence Agency, in the months before the revolution, described Minachi as a "moderate human rights activist" seeking to reconcile Khomeini's demands with a desire to retain the Iranian monarchy.

— Former U.S. Ambassador William Sullivan noted Minachi had informed the embassy that Khomeini's family would be on the same plane as Khomeini himself when he returned from exile last January. The militants questioned why Minachi would provide such information for the Americans.

— It purportedly was disclosed that Minachi, in traveling to Washington as head of an Iranian human rights committee, was actually cultivating his ties to the U.S. government.

Second Such Arrest

Minachi's was the second such arrest engineered by the embassy militants.

A former spokesman for the revolutionary government, Amir Abbas Entezam, was arrested in November after the militants claimed to have found documents linking him with the embassy and the CIA.

The developments in Tehran were reliably reported by Western journalists in the Iranian capital.

The 49-member American group, invited to Iran by the embassy militants to help publicize the militants' positions, was detained for four hours by immigration authorities at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport after arriving from London because they did not hold proper entry visas from the Iranian Embassy in Washington, an informed source at the airport told a reporter.

The visitors were permitted to leave the airport for their hotel in downtown Tehran early Thursday, but it was not immediately clear whether they would be allowed to stay in Iran for 10 days as planned.

Bani Sadr, in another attack on the embassy militants, said after a Revolutionary Council meeting late Wednesday the government would decide whether to admit Americans invited by the militants or send them back to the United States.

The American group is led by a University of Kansas faculty member, Norman Forer, who said Tuesday the invitation to Tehran was "a heightened expression of friendship toward the American people."

U.N. officials in New York say the key unresolved issue in their plan for an investigation of the ex-shah's regime is whether the hostages would be freed once an investigatory body is established, as the Carter administration demands, or not until after the investigation is completed, as the Iranians insist.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Kuwait, quoted an unnamed Foreign Ministry official Wednesday as saying the investigatory commission's "work" would have a "profound effect" on the hostage crisis.

But it also quoted Ayatollah Mohammed Behesti, influential secretary of the Revolutionary Council, as saying he believes the hostages will not be released until the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to Iran

Soviets Say Chinese Aid Moslem Rebels

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviets claimed Wednesday that Chinese "advisers" are in Afghanistan alongside Moslem rebels. "Thousands" of the anti-communist rebels, the Soviets added, are receiving training in base camps in China for their fight against the Moscow-backed Afghan government.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the Chinese often accompany Afghan rebels across the frontier into Afghanistan, which shares a small border in the northeast with China as well as a large northern border with the Soviet Union.

"We have facts indicating that Chinese 'advisers' and 'instructors' often accompany their 'charges' on their bandit raids so as to show in practice the methods of struggle against the Afghan revolution," Tass said in a disptach from Kabul, the Afghan capital. An estimated 85,000 Soviet troops have been in Afghanistan since late December following the execution of former Afghan leader Hafizullah Amin, who was replaced with Soviet-backed President Babrak Karmal. The United States, China, and a host of Western allies and Third World nations have condemned the Soviet intervention.

Pakistan Bases Claimed

The agency also claimed the Chinese, along with Americans, were "training, equipping and arming" rebels at more than 70 bases in northern Pakistan.

A related article in the weekly "Literary Gazette" reported the capture of a band of assassins in Kabul. It did not say when exactly the men were caught but said they were found carrying weapons made in the United States and China, anti-government leaflets, "a large number of Maoist booklets and brochures," and a list of 22 assassination targets. Similar bands had been found and "neutralized" elsewhere, it said.

In other developments:

— India's Foreign Secretary R.D. Sathe assured Pakistani President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq that India will try to persuade Moscow to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan. Indian journalists reported from Islamabad. They quoted Sathe as saying the message would be conveyed when Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko arrives in New Delhi next week for talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. She has said the intervention was unjustified but has refrained from condemning it.

Peace Force Proposed

— President Zia, whose country also borders Afghanistan, suggested an international peace force should replace the Soviet troops. In reply to a question from visiting Indian journalists, Zia said the force would allow Afghans to decide their own issues without foreign interference. He also termed as "incorrect" and "a matter of propaganda" Soviet charges that the Moslem rebels are launching forays into Afghan territory from bases in Pakistan.

— The rebels are facing a severe shortage of arms and ammunition, according to Italy's largest daily, Milan's Corriere della Sera. "When a guerrilla has fired his daily allowance of 25 bullets he can just hurl stones," it quoted a rebel leader as saying. It reported fighting "in the whole country."

— Afghan Foreign Minister Shah Muhammed Dost was quoted by Tass as saying the United States and China are countries from which "a threat to Afghanistan really comes from" because they are both supplying neighboring Pakistan. The U.S. government has offered Pakistan $400 million in military and economic aid and says the Pakistani armed forces must be bolstered to meet a potential threat from the Soviets.

Brezezinski Mission Reported

— Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, said President Carter sent his national security advisor, Zbigniew Brezezinski, to Pakistan last week to "measure" it for its new role as a provider of "various sorts of services to the armed forces and military strategy of the United States." This would include the widening of Pakistan"s "already dangerous role" in letting Afghan rebels use its territory, it said.

Tass said "thousands of bandits and terrorists" are being trained inside China "so as to be smuggled later on into" Afghanistan.

It said two Afghan rebels captured earlier this week in the northeastern province of Badakhshan, which borders on China, were carrying American weapons and photographs showing them in Chinese army uniforms.

"When questioned, the bandits testified that these pictures were taken at one of the special bases for training anti-Afghan, bandit formations in the Chinese province of Xinjiang," Tass said.

Resignations Requested In Clovis Probe

A-J Correspondent

After meeting behind closed doors for more than an hour Wednesday night, the Clovis City Commission voted unanimously to extend indefinitely the leave of absence of City Manager Darrel Kreighbaum and Assistant City Manager Cleve Teague.

The motion, made by Commissioner Frank Murray, also includes the stipulation that the two be taken off the payroll effective the pay period that ended Feb. 1.

A standing-room-only crowd was present at the meeting after reports of a secret meeting held by the city commission Tuesday night. The commission reportedly met at the office of Mayor Chick Taylor Jr. and decided to ask for the resignations of Kreighbaum and Teague. Two commissioners called on each man Tuesday night with a message "the commission wants your resignation." Neither man was present at the Wednesday night meeting.

Kreighbaum and Teague had been given a leave of absence at their request in January after the New Mexico Department of Finance and Administration had requested that the men take a leave of absence while an investigation of city financial matters continued. The investigation was started after City Clerk-Treasurer Mike Taylor was fired for conduct unbecoming a city employee subsequent to bonding out three massage parlor employees from Clovis City Jail in October of 1975.

Taylor is wanted on a felony warrant out of Curry County in connection with the check he apparenlty issued for the bond.

Mrs. O'Hair Loses Nativity Scene Suit

AUSTIN (UPI) — Attorney General Mark White Wednesday announced the state won a 2-year-old fight with Madalyn Murray O'Hair over display of a nativity scene in the Capitol rotunda at Christmas.

White said U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts granted the state's motion for a summary judgment against the suit brought by the atheist leader and her son, Jon Murray.

Mrs. O'Hair and Murray alleged their 1st Amendment rights were violated by the State Board of Control allowing display of the nativity scene in the Capitol and for a Jewish Festival of Lights program in the landmark building.

Corner Drug, and waited a few minutes before two men entered.

Reports indicate one of the men told Volpato, "Here's my prescription," and pulled out a handgun ordering Volpato to the back of the store to get drugs. Galloway said Mrs. Volpato then screamed and the other suspect began shooting. Volpato managed to reach a telephone and call police.

Tully said he believes the Volpatos, the parents of two teen-agers, were shot with either a .38 or .357-caliber gun and that a third suspect may have been waiting in a car outside the downtown drugstore.

John Heaton, co-owner of the pharmacy, told investigating officers that although an unknown quantity of amphetamines and methadone was taken during the robbery, a large amount of cash that was in the store was not touched.

When Volpato was going to be in his store after hours, he usually notified the Carlsbad police department and had done so Tuesday night, Tully said. "In the past, he (Volpato) sometimes requested a police unit to meet him at the store, but he didn't make a practice of it," Tully said.

Police said Volpato, who had operated the pharmacy for about 15 years, did not make such a request Tuesday.

'Rope Trick' Claimed Used In 33 Murders

CHICAGO (AP) — A prosecutor told a jury Wednesday that John W. Gacy Jr. used a "rope trick" to strangle his victims and "snuffed out 33 lives because they were inconvenient to him."

Assistant State's Attorney Robert Egan, in opening arguments before a jury of seven men and five women, said the killings of the 33 young men and boys between the ages of 15 and 21 were premeditated. He described the former remodeling contractor as a "rational, evil man."

Gacy, 37, accused of more murders than anyone else in this country's history, sat motionless during the opening statement. He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

"Acts Of Insane Mind"

Defense attorney Robert Motta, in his opening statement, said the crimes were "acts of an insane mind ... (acts which Gacy) couldn't stop, couldn't control. He became a compulsive killer."

Among the spectators who filled the courtroom of Circuit Judge Louis B. Garippo were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Piest, their son Kenneth, 26, and daughter, Kerry, 23.

The body of Robert Piest, 15, was among four recovered from rivers and linked to Gacy. The other corpses were found on Gacy's property, 26 dug up from a 30-inch-high crawl space under his ranch-style dwelling.

Blood Flow Curbed

In each case, Egan told the jurors, Gacy used a "rope trick" in which he put a rope around the neck of the victim to make a tourniquet and strangle him. He stuffed a cloth in the mouths of some, Egan said, to "keep the blood from dripping out the mouth and nose."

Egan said that on the night of Dec. 11, 1978, when Gacy was at a drugstore in Des Plaines talking about remodeling work, Piest overheard him say he was going to hire youths for summer work.

Piest's mother was to have picked him up later that night to celebrate her birthday with the family, but her son never showed up.

Piest had told co-workers he was going to see Gacy about a summer job and drove away with him, Egan said. Gacy and Piest, the prosecutor said, eventually drove to the defendant's home where Gacy tried to have sex with the youth, who refused.

Showed "Rope Trick"

However, Gacy forced him to have oral sex and showed him the "rope trick." The youth was dead within 10 seconds, the prosecutor said.

Eventually officers got a search warrant and a receipt for developing film that belonged to Piest's girlfriend was found in the house.

The next day, police put a stakeout on Gacy.

Egan said that one of the officers went into the bathroom and when the heat came on he noticed an odor coming up from the vent.

Later, a youth told police of being employed by Gacy and digging drainage ditches under the house. Gacy told the youth to leave mounds alone down there, Egan said.

Bodies Discovered

When authorities started digging under the house, Egan said, they found "bodies, bodies and bodies, day after day after day."

Egan pointed out that some bodies were found in trenches that had been dug under the house and quoted Gacy as saying, "I wanted to have graves available."

Egan said that Gacy gave statements to authorities in comfortable surroundings in which he remembered the names and details about them.

"He (Gacy) was very responsive, gave details, was engaging at times and laughing at times" as he gave the lengthy statement, Egan said.

Egan said Gacy said he killed because he thought the victims, if they lived, would tell the neighbors and others that he was a homosexual.

Prayer Law Hearing Set Today

BOSTON (AP) — Civil Liberties Union attorneys Wednesday asked the state supreme court to suspend a new school prayer law, saying voluntary student prayer violates the constitutional guarantee of a separate church and state.

Lawyers John Reinstein and Kenneth Sweder sought a restraining order against compliance with the law, which was signed into law by Gov. Edward J. King last November and took effect Tuesday. A hearing on the request was scheduled today.

The suit was filed on behalf of families from suburban Framingham and Marblehead, and school committees in the two communities were named as defendants. Officials in the two communities said prayer will continue despite the suit.

The Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts called the law a "blatant violation of the First Amendment."

"Previous (U.S. Supreme Court) decisions have said schools can neither prohibit, inhibit, or promote religion, that they must remain neutral," said John Roberts, director of the Civil Liberties Union. "Getting schools involved in promoting religious practices in the school violates the Constitution."

The law requires teachers to begin the school day with an announcement that a volunteer may lead each class in prayer. Students who do not wish to take part may leave the classroom.

The effect of the law varied across the state.

School committees in Newton and Beverly have voted to ignore the law.

"Some kids stood up yesterday and said the Hail Mary, which is fine for them but not for kids who are Jewish or Mormon," said Roberts. "We are filing the suit for them."

"Until we're notified that the law is unconstitutional, it's our responsibility to implement it," said Framingham schools spokeswoman Babs Levin.

Mrs. Levin said there was "minimal participation" among Framingham's 11,000 students. Eight students volunteered prayers in 38 elementary school classrooms, she said.

There were no prayers offered at schools in neighboring Ashland.

"No one volunteered," said School Superintendent Barry Ruthfield. "It's the newness it. It's not a thing you can turn on and off."

One Natick student offered a prayer thanking God for the education he has received. In Milford, students heard a passage from the Old Testament read over the public address system. A girl in Holyoke was applauded by fellow third graders when she read a prayer prepared by her mother.

In Northampton, an entire high school home room walked into the hall when the voluntary prayer period was announced.

"If they were interested in praying they'd do it in their own home," said senior Molly Dubiel.

spokesman for the prison, termed the latest disturbance "minor."

Hundreds of prisoners who had spent three nights huddled in blankets on a prison recreation yard were back inside the penitentiary Wednesday, with the "exception of the blacks who elected to stay out," Baca said.

"The blacks will be housed in an annex," Baca said. "It is my understanding that quite a few of them will be moved to other prisons."

Officials have said that much of the violence during the reign of terror was directed at informants, but Dr. Marc Orner, the prison psychologist, said racial tensions also were involved.

King said he hoped to move more than half of the 1,073 prisoners who have been accounted for moved to state and federal prisons in Kansas, Colorado, Arizona, Nevada and Oklahoma by Friday. Thirty-five New Mexico inmates have been transferred by air to a federal institution in El Reno, Okla.

The governor said "hardcore" prisoners would be moved out of state because New Mexico could no longer provide "maximum security incarceration." He said some inmates who had been held in protective security also would be moved to other prisons.

Some of those killed were horribly mutilated. Inmates said an execution squad armed with blowtorches and axes was responsible for some of the murders.

Swiss Catholics Backing Dissident

LUCERNE, Switzerland (AP) — Roman Catholic groups in Switzerland have collected some 20,000 signatures supporting theologian Hans Kung, who has been barred from teaching by the Vatican because of his controversial views and dropped from the faculty of the West German University of Tuebingen.

The Lucerne-based Action for Human Rights in the Church also said Wednesday it would submit a formal protest against the ban and a request for reforms of church teaching procedures to the Swiss Bishops Conference.

Kueng earlier this week canceled his lectures at Tuebingen. He had continued teaching despite the Vatican ban last December, but a majority of his fellow theology professors issued a statement saying the dispute over his teaching had harmed the faculty.

Student Reports Attack Near City High School

A Monterey High School student was cut on the chest and arm Wednesday when he was attacked by two men near the school.

Steve Phillip Dehn, 17, told police he was attacked after he parked his car about 8:15 a.m.

The youth said the two attackers pulled up in a late model tan Ford Galaxie just as he was leaving his car. One of the suspects, described as a tall white male, about 18 years old, wearing a red cap, began to argue with the victim about a previous fight, the victim told police.

Then the suspect pulled a small knife out of his pocket and began swinging it toward the student, police said. The pair stuggled and the student was cut on the chest and the left forearm.

During the struggle, the victim was able to break free and get a club out of his car. He said he used the weapon to frighten the two suspects away. He was not seriously wounded, police reports indicated, and he was able to get the license number of the suspect's car.

An elder of the South Side Church of Christ, 1409 23rd St., reported to police Wednesday that more than $1,500 in electronic equipment was stolen from the church either late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

W.C. Boyd of 3213 67th St. said that a tape recorder, public address amplifier, microphones, cassette recorder and radio were taken.

Police said entrance to the church was gained by kicking out a window in a door. Police said they found fingerprints that may belong to the burglar in several of the church rooms.

A 32-year-old man was taken into custody late Tuesday afternoon for allegedly assaulting an animal shelter employee during an altercation on the roadside at U.S. 84 and Quirt Avenue.

According to reports, officers arrived on the scene to find a green Chevrolet boxed in by two animal shelter trucks. The driver of one of the trucks told police a man in the Chevrolet had hit him three times and threatened him with a knife.

Clark Ellis Grisham, 21, of Lubbock told police he pulled up behind the suspect's vehicle at a stop sign on Quirt Avenue. Reports show Grisham honked at the suspect's car when it failed to proceed through the stop sign when the traffic cleared.

Grisham said he honked again when the car did the same thing at a yield sign, and then both vehicles pulled over to the side of the road.

Police said an argument ensued and then the two men started to scuffle. The suspect reportedly pulled a lockblade knife during the fight, but a witness, believed to be another animal shelter employee who had arrived in a second truck, grabbed the knife and held it until police arrived.

The suspect told police that no one pulls up behind his car and honks at his wife, who was driving the car. He also told police that he could hit anyone he pleased.

When asked if he had another knife, the suspect told officers, "If I had another knife you wouldn't be standing here now."

When the man was placed under arrest, officers heard him threaten Grisham by saying, "I'll get you later."

He was booked into county jail on suspicion of assault, terroristic threats and threat to do bodily harm to a peace officer.

In other activity, a 30-year-old man and his wife were arrested about 3:15 a.m. Wednesday for using abusive language at a police officer when their car was stopped for running a red light in the 1900-block of Texas Avenue.

Reports indicate that when the couple was stopped in their gray Datsun pickup, both occupants got out to talk to police. When officers asked the woman, who was not driving, to return to the pickup, the husband yelled "Don't talk to my wife that ----way."

When the man again reportedly used abusive language when he asked police to write him a ticket so he could be on his way, one of the officers said, "Your language is going too far and will get you in the jailhouse."

Reports show the man reportedly replied, "Go ahead, ---it, put me in jail." Police then handcuffed him and placed him under arrest.

When officers tried to search the vehicle, the woman yelled at them that they couldn't search the truck without a warrant. Reports show she also used profane language when talking to officers.

When police found an outstanding warrant on the woman, she too was placed under arrest and both were transported to the county jail. Police said the couple used foul language all the way to jail.

A 20-year-old Lubbock man was arrested shortly before noon Tuesday on suspicion of felony possession of marijuana, police said.

The man, driving a 1974 Lincoln Continental, was pulled over by officers for speeding about 11:25 a.m. in the 2700-block of Quirt Avenue, reports indicate.

A radio check revealed a warrant for the arrest of the man had been issued for failure to appear in court on a previous traffic violation.

Officers began a routine inventory of personal property in the man's car.

Officials Capture Jail Escapee

A man who escaped from the Bailey County Jail in Muleshoe was arrested shortly after 11 a.m. Wednesday northwest of Lubbock on U.S. 84, the Department of Public Safety said.

Michael Lee Dalton, 26, who reportedly made his escape between midnight Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday, was captured near Shallowater in a Pontiac Trans Am, according to a DPS dispatcher.

Authorities earlier in the day had been alerted that the escapee may have been traveling in the sporty car, which was reported stolen from a Littlefield car dealer about 4:45 a.m. Wednesday.

Bailey County Sheriff Dee Clements said he felt the prisoner had help in his escape.

"Someone helped him I think," the sheriff said.

Clements said Dalton apparently pried open his cell door, then climbed through a window in an open area on the ground floor of the jail.

No one saw Dalton make his escape, which was not discovered until shortly after 8 a.m. Wednesday, according to authorities. However, Clements said the prisoner apparently was slipped some kind of heavy tool to pry open the cell.

The sheriff added he felt Dalton had assistance in tearing off a steel mesh covering on a window in the "run-around" area, used by jailers to inspect the cells. After the covering was off, the escapee was able to unlatch the window, Clements said.

Dalton was last checked on about midnight Tuesday and no tool was noticed. "So we feel something was put there last night (early this morning)," Clements said, adding that he had no indication who may assisted in the escape.

A rust-colored 1980 Trans Am was reported stolen from Bary Arms Olds and Cadillac in Littlefield early this morning, and authorities suspected Dalton had taken the vehicle. A DPS dispatcher confirmed the prisoner was in a Trans Am when he was apprehended near Lubbock.

Twelve Seek Place On Primary Ballot

A-J Correspondent

PADUCAH — Twelve candidates have filed to be placed on the May 3, Democratic primary ballot.

Jack Isbell will run against incumbent James Sweeney for commissioner of Precinct One. Incumbent Lester Moss will face Clinton Matney for commissioner of Precinct Three.

Contesting for the seat of County Democratic Chairman are Afton Williams, longtime Precinct 1 chairman, and John Ratliff. That position is being vacated by Glen Bates.

Kenneth Trent, who has been appointed as Precinct 2 chairman, is seeking election to that seat.

Seeking re-election at the May primary are Frank Taylor for sheriff; Roy Jones for county attorney; Rue Young for tax accessor-collector; B.L. Smith Jr. for Precinct 3 chairman; and Charles Walker for Precinct 4 chairman.

News Briefs

Frontage roads along Interstate Highway 27 through New Deal have been changed from two-way to one-way traffic, the state highway department has annouced. The change was brought about by the necessity of routing main lane traffic to frontage roads during reconstruction of the main lanes, a highway department spokesman said. The reconstruction is expected to begin in about a month, but will require about a year for completion.

Early Criminal Indictments Seen In Bribery Cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department expects criminal indictments in 90 days in the corruption scandal that implicates at least eight members of Congress and reportedly has spread to high levels of the New Jersey state government.

Meanwhile, Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., confirmed reports that he took $25,000 in cash in the probe but asserted he was conducting his own investigation.

Chagrined by press disclosures of the FBI investigation, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti asked Congress Wednesday to refrain from conducting separate inquiries that might jeopardize federal prosecutions.

If Congress persists, Civiletti said, "a number of guilty individuals may go unprosecuted or unpunished."

Already, knowledgeable sources said, the FBI has shut down several other undercover investigations in several cities rather than risk disclosure because of scandal publicity that began last weekend.

The sources, who asked not to be named, said the other discontinued undercover operations were "showing great promise" of producing significant criminal charges. None involved a member of Congress, the sources said.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter and Civiletti had a "general conversation" Tuesday about the case, but they did not discuss it in detail.

Also Wednesday, the Senate Ethics Committee voted 6-0 to conduct a "preliminary inquiry" into allegations that Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., accepted money in exchange for the promise of legislative favors.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., the committee chairman, also said the committee staff will make a preliminary examination of published allegations of possible wrongdoing by Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev.

Heflin initially reported that the panel would similarly look into allegations concering Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

But late Wednesday, Heflin said he has been informed by the Justice Department that "they don't have any evidence of wrongdoing."

As a result, Heflin said, the committee would drop any plans for a separate investigtion of Bayh.

Cannon and Bayh have both denied the allegations.

Cannon says he was assured by the FBI Wednesday that "there is no pending investigation against me."

Cannon said he spoke to FBI Director William Webster and Webster told him he is not the subject of any inquiry.

The FBI in Washington had no comment on Cannon's report of the conversation, but the head of the FBI field office in Las Vegas, Joseph Yablonsky, told reporters:

"It has been confirmed to me by our headquarters that such a conversation took place.... There is no pending investigation of Sen. Cannon."

Meanwhile, the Trenton (N.J.) Times reported the FBI was investigating at least six prominent New Jersey figures in the bribery case, including top officials of Democratic Gov. Brendan Byrne's administration.

In an interview with NBC News, Kelly said that "I put the money in the pockets of my coat."

Kelly said he took the $25,000 from what turned out to be FBI agents because he thought they were "shady characters" and was investigating them.

Another newspaper, Newsday of Long Island, N.Y., quoted unnamed federal sources as saying that Kelly took the money from undercover agents at a Georgetown townhouse, stuffed the bills in his trouser and jacket pockets, smoothed the bulges and asked: "Does it show?"

But Kelly said in the broadcast interview that "when they (the FBI) blew the cover on their case they blew the cover on mine."

Kelly said he returned all but $174 of the $25,000 to the FBI.

Quoting federal sources close to the investigation, the Trenton Times said those implicated in the FBI investigation include Joseph Lordi, chairman of the New Jersey Casino Control Commission, and former state Sen. Martin L. Greenberg, a former Byrne law partner who is now president of a yet-to-open gambling casino in Atlantic City.

Both Lordi and Greenberg, who once headed the state Senate committee with jurisdiction over casino laws, denied involvement.

The newspaper said two other, unidentified members of the casino commission were under investigation in addition to Kenneth MacDonald, who resigned Monday. Also reported under investigation were state Sens. Joseph Maressa and Angelo Errichetti.

Sources told the Times that the Justice Department shifted responsibility for the bribery probe from U.S. Attorney Robert Del Tufo in Newark to the Brooklyn office because some subjects of the inquiry had learned of it through Del Tufo's office.

Del Tufo, who has refused to discuss the investigation, was nominated as federal prosecutor by Williams, one of the members of Congress allegedly involved in the scandal.

The others are Kelly and John Murphy, D-N.Y.; Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J.; Michael Myers, D-Pa.; Raymond Lederer, D-Pa.; John Jenrette, D-S.C., and John Murtha, D-Pa. Most have denied any wrongdoing.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Civiletti told House leaders Tuesday that "some cases are strong; others are not so strong" against the members of Congress. O'Neill said Civiletti gave no details.

Earth Garageman Eased Into Windmill Business By Accident

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

EARTH — Gus Parish wasn't a windmiller at all. The Parish Windmill now carrying his name all over this country and into Canada and Mexico began as a favor to a rancher friend.

It all started years ago because the sandhills around Earth burned a lot.

"You had to sweep the fire out; even a tractor couldn't go in there," Parish related.

One day, with telltale smoke boiling on the horizon, the Mashed O Ranch foreman limped his truck, loaded with cowboys and brooms, into Parish's garage.

"Somebody had let water get in the gas. I grabbed a coil of that new copper tubing and built him an outside fuel line from the tank in the back of the truck. He and the cowboys and brooms were on their way in 15 minutes.

"I got all the Mashed O business after that."

When Mashed O cowboys were down from 40 to 10, Parish was asked to build a lightweight pump jack one man could handle.

The task, Parish insisted, was impossible, but he kept tinkering until he had it done.

About a decade ago, after the Aermotor company had moved to Argentina, Parish, who had sold the windmills through his hardware store, was approached to build the Mashed O a windmill.

Working with knowledge accumulated in garages since boyhood, Parish came up with a chain-driven windmill that was "practically maintenance free."

He combined the sprocket-and-chain drive with more vanes to the wheel to pick up the slightest wind, then added a right angle control vane to help control the wheel in strong winds.

A special tail vane helps control windmill speed and the pump's rod stroke, allowing a smooth, even stroke regardless of high winds.

"The news people took it up, word spread all over the country and we were in the windmill business," Parish said.

Surface pumps for lake, tail water and river systems remain the big item for the Parish factory, but windmills continue to grow in sales each year.

Water underneath the sandhills was sold to and depleted by Lubbock, and Parish developed the pumps so farmers and ranchers can pump rain water collected in "wallow lakes" onto the surface before it seeps underground or evaporates.

Pumps are regular business, windmills are sporadic, with the biggest markets in Canada, Mexico, Nebraska and Kansas.

With only three windmill companies operating in this country, Parish gets its share of mail concerning windmill power.

"They usually cool off when they find out a turnkey job with a well and windmill runs about $5,000 and that will buy a lot of electricity," Douglas Parish, who heads the company his father started, said.

Almost 100 per cent of the Parish mills sold are for range use. Homesteads, so far, can get by cheaper pumping water with electricity.

But distances on ranches still make the windmill the rancher's best bet for water.

"You get off the highways and into these big pastures and you'll see a lot of windmills. We sell a lot of replacement windmills," Parish says.

Papa Gus," as the patriarch of the Parish clan is known around the Earth and Springlake area, grew up in Llano County, hunting on Packsaddle Mountain and playing on Enchanted Rock.

The oldest of nine children, he got little schooling as there always was some little job he could get to help out.

One of the jobs as a boy was apprentice to a garage owner, the start of a vocation that was to keep the Bailey County farm running after Parish bought a half-section of the 100,000 acres the vast Mashed O turned loose for settlers.

His first garage was in the middle of nowhere on the future site of Springlake. A hardware store and farm implement dealership followed.

Parish helped form the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District soon after Lubbock bought water rights from the Mashed O holdings.

Retired by a disability, he still spends time at his corner of the work room, working out new ways of making Parish-made equipment a little better.

As long as his golf cart can make it from the house to the shop, Parish will be on hand to answer the phone "Yes, this is Papa Gus" to the generations of Earth who have life a little easier because of his ability to figure new ways to put materials to work.

If energy problems get too bad, he and Douglas figure there will be a way the Parish windmill can be adapted to help out.

POSTMARK LUBBOCK — More than half a million cancellations of first day covers for a new booklet of postage stamps honoring windmills will be made by Feb. 22 when first day of issue activities end for Lubbock post offices. More than 7,500 envelopes have been received in time for official ceremonies at 11 a.m. today in The Museum of Texas Tech University. (Staff Photo)

Historic Stamp Booklet Goes On Sale Today

A Lubbock first happens today.

At 10 a.m. a new postage stamp booklet goes on sale only in Lubbock. It carries images of five historic U.S. windmills and will be available at all post offices.

At 11 a.m. official first day of issue ceremonies will be held in The Museum of Texas Tech University with Carl C. Ulsaker, senior assistant postmaster general for the U.S. Postal Service, presenting the booklet.

CARL ULSAKER

Dr. Virginia Noelke of the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee will be speaker for the event.

The museum was chosen for first day ceremonies because of the windmills preserved in its Ranching Heritage Center, a 12-acre outdoor ranch museum.

Festivities get underway with the presentation of colors by the Reese Air Force Base color guard and a welcome by Dr. Lawrence L. Graves, interim president of the university.

Special guests for the occasion will include Ronald Sharpe who designed the stamps showing the 1720 Robertson Windmill at Williamsburg, Va.; a replica of the 1790 Old Windmill at Portsmouth, R.I.; the 1793 Cape Cod Windmill at Eastham, Mass.; the 1860 Dutch Mill at Fabyan Park Forest Preserve in Illinois; and a Texas 1890 windmill.

Dr. W. C. Holden, longtime director, and Dr. Leslie C. Drew, current director of the museum, will be platform guests at the ceremonies.

Charles B. Bolar, district manager for USPS, will introduce Ulsaker and Elmer J. Reed Jr., sectional center manager and postmaster at Lubbock will emcee the event.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Monterey Jazz Ensemble. Invocation will be by the Rev. J. M. Washington of St. Paul's of the Plains Episcopal Church, and benediction by the Rev. A. L. Davis of St. Luke's Baptist Church.

The new booklet will contain two panes of ten 15-cent stamps. It is $3 and will be for over-the-counter sale.

Postal employees Wednesday were readying stamps and envelops for the special occasion during which first day covers will be hand stamped at the museum.

A special first-day cancelling machine, capable of imprinting perfect marks demanded by collectors, will be at the Lubbock post office through Feb. 22 when more than half a million first day covers will have been canceled for collectors from all over the world.

About 7,500 first day envelopes already have been received in Lubbock from collectors.

The South Plains Stamp Club will have its own first day cover available at the museum along with the Ranching Heritage Association. Both covers carry images of RHC windmills — the Star windmill by the Barton House for the club and the Eclipse Windmill for the RHA.

Tomorrow, the stamp booklets will be available all over the nation.

Today, they are available only in Lubbock.

Hello, again!

Jo Ann Ray, Lubbock, sent a recipe for "Dream Pie" that was printed in the A-J 16 or 17 years ago. So, for everyone, including Eloise Maynard, here is the recipe (it must be a good one!).

DREAM PIE

2 eggs
1 cup light corn syrup
1½ cups sugar
¼ cup flour
1 cup coffee cream
1 cup pecans
1 cup coconut
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tbsp. melted butter
2 unbaked pie shells

Mix dry ingredients, add cream and syrup and beat well. Add eggs, vanilla, pecans and coconut and continue mixing. Pour into 2 unbaked pie shells and bake at 350 degrees until brown. Can be served with ice cream or whipped cream.

Well, you asked for casserole recipes, and here are some most unusual ones!

La Noma Stringer, Lubbock, enclosed the following two recipes.

ZUCCHINI CASSEROLE

1 clove garlic
1 cup sliced red onions
½ green pepper, thinly sliced
2 tsps. cooking oil
1 lb. ripe tomatoes sliced or a 16-oz. can
3 cups thinly sliced zucchini
1 cup grated cheese

Saute garlic, onions and peppers in hot oil. Add zucchini, tomatoes, 1 tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. pepper. Cook for 2 minutes. Place in a shallow baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes or until zucchini is tender. Sprinkle with cheese. Cook until cheese melts 5 to 8 minutes. Makes eight servings

FINNAN HADDIE AND POTATO CASSEROLE

¾ lb. finnan haddie
4 med. potatoes peeled and diced
2½ cups milk
2 tbsps. butter

Cut finnan haddie into serving-size pieces, and put into sauce pan with potatoes and milk. Heat slowly until milk begins to simmer. Turn into a shallow baking dish, and dot with butter. Bake in over 350 degrees until potatoes are tender, about 30 to 35 minutes. Serves five.

Zahn Turner, Floydada, would like the recipe used by Furr's Cafeterias for "German Chocolate Pie." She wrote, "I have tried several recipes but none can compare."

BANANA SPLIT CAKE
(sent by Darleene Herring)

2 cups graham cracker crumbs
1 stick oleomargarine, melted

Add crumbs; pat into 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan and bake 8 minutes at 350 degrees.

Filling
2 eggs
2 cups confectioners' sugar
1 stick oleomargarine

Beat all ingredients no less than 15 minutes. Spread on top of cooled graham cracker crust. Slice 4 bananas on top of filling. Add 1 large can drained crushed pineapple. Cover with 1 large carton commercially-prepared and frozen whipped cream topping. Garnish with pecans and maraschino cherries. Refrigerate.

BANANA SPLIT CAKE
(sent by Mrs. Joe Pryer of Hobbs)

Mix 2 cups graham cracker crumbs with 1 stick melted oleomargarine.

Line oblong (approximately 13 x 3 x 2-in.) pan with above.

Mix:
2 cups powdered sugar
2 sticks oleomargarine (room temperature)
2 eggs

Beat 15 minutes.

Put on top of crumbs.

Then, slice three or four bananas and put on top; and follow with a large can of crushed pineapple (drained) on bananas. Top with 9-ozs. whipped cream topping, maraschino cherries and one cup of pecans. Chill overnight.

Pat Snider of Snyder enclosed a similar recipe. Thanks, Pat! She would also like a recipe for "Green Enchiladas" if anyone has a good one.

Mrs. Royce Stanley, Spade, enclosed several recipes. May we just use two this time?

NAVAJO TACOS

Sauce:
4 cups cooked pinto beans
1 15-oz. can tomato sauce
1 small jar picante sauce
2 lbs. ground beef

Brown meat. Add meat to bean mixture and simmer about 30 minutes until most of liquid is absorbed. Spoon meat mixture over fry bread and top with choice of grated cheese, lettuce, onion, tomatoes and avocados.

Fry Bread:
2½ cups flour
¼ tsp. salt
1 to 1¼ cups water
4 tsps. baking powder
1 rounded tbsp. shortening

Mix everything together; cover and let set 15 minutes. Fill heavy skillet 1 to 1½ inches deep with shortening and let get very hot. Knead large spoonful of dough with enough flour to roll. Roll into size of saucer, punch hole in center about the size of a penny, and place in hot shortening. Fry until light brown and turn over once. Drain and serve hot.

BUTTERNUT POUND CAKE

3 cups sugar
1 small (the smallest) can evaporated milk
1 3 cup water
½ cup shortening
1 cup oleomargarine
5 eggs
2 tbsps. vanilla, butter and nut flavoring (this is in one bottle)
¼ tsp. salt
3¼ cups flour

Beat sugar, oleomargarine, shortening together; add flavoring and beat in eggs, one at a time. Mix water and milk together, adding alternately with dry ingredients. Pour into greased and floured tube pan. Place in cold oven and bake approximately one hour and 40 minutes at 325 degrees. You can also bake in two loaf pans but if you do, cut the time of baking by 20 to 25 minutes.

Here is a "super" one dish meal recipe. Thanks to Charlene Haynie of Lubbock for sending it.

BEEF AND TATER CASSEROLE

1½ lbs. ground beef
1 envelope dry onion soup mix
1 can cream of mushroom soup

Press uncooked beef in ungreased 2 or 3-qt. baking dish; sprinkle onion soup mix over meat. Spread soup over this.

Topping:
¾ cup water
3 tbsps. oleomargarine
½ tsp. salt
¼ cup milk
1 cup potato flakes
2 eggs (beaten slightly)
4 slices bread
1 cup milk
½ tsp. onion powder (optional)
½ cup grated cheddar cheese

In sauce pan bring water, margarine and salt to boil. Remove from heat and add ¼ cup milk, stirring in potato flakes. Let stand one minute. Stir in eggs. Tear bread into small pieces, mix with potato mixture. Pour 1 cup milk over mixture and let stand 5 minutes. Add onion powder and mix well. Spoon over meat and bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese and return to oven for approximately 5 minutes.

Love those "never fail" recipes. Here's one from Mrs. G.L. Fawver of Floydada.

NEVER FAIL CHESS PIE

4 eggs (slightly beaten)
1½ cups sugar
2 tsps. cornmeal
⅛ tsp. salt
½ cup melted butter (or oleomargarine)
4 tbsps. cream or evaporated milk
1 tsp. vanilla

Combine eggs; sugar, cornmeal, salt, butter and vanilla. Blend well, do not beat. Pour into 10-inch unbaked pie shell. Bake at 350 degrees for about 30 minutes.

Oh, it's time to stop already!

Please send tips, recipes and requests to: Reader's Exchange, Family News Department, Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Tx. 79408. Recipes printed are not tested by the Family News Department.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am 27 years old. He is 31. He works hard, doesn't chase other women and doesn't hang around bars.

I have dedicated myself to this man for three years. Because I love him, I have cooked his meals, slept with him and cleaned his house. I believe I've proven my sincerity, and now I want some reassurance that I will be a permanent part of his life.

He says he is unable to make that kind of commitment because he doesn't want to make a promise he may not be able to keep. He claims he doesn't believe in marriage because most marriages don't work, and if I really loved him I wouldn't be concerned aboout a piece of paper and a ring.

Is marriage all that important, Ann? When I speak of leaving, he says, "It's up to you." Please throw me your lifeline of common sense. I'm — Sinking Fast In Georgia

Dear Sinking: If it's marriage you want, my advice is move out immediately and stop wasting your time. One of two things will happen: He will miss you and ask you to marry him — or he will find another soft-headed female who is willing to cook his meals, sleep with him and clean his house.

If the latter happens, you can either kick yourself for having invested so much love and time and energy — or you can congratulate yourself for having had the good sense to get out when you did.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 15-year-old girl who is a faithful reader. Sure, I have a few problems, but the one I am writing about concerns YOU.

Your column appears seven days a week. This makes me wonder. Don't you ever take a vacation? If so, who takes your place? — Inquisitive In New Orleans

Dear In: Yes, I do take vacations. If I didn't, I'd wig out.

Because my column is syndicated, I must be four weeks ahead of publication date. Just to be safe, I stay seven weeks ahead. When I plan to travel I make it eight or nine. Nobody ghosts for Ann Landers. Every word of my column, every booklet, every magazine article and every speech is written by me.

Dear Ann Landers: The owner of the Exotic Pet Store in Providence, R.I., was wrong when he told Action Line it is illegal to sell monkeys. I visited my cousin in Los Angeles last summer and she had three pet monkeys. I am almost certain she bought "the couple" in a local pet store, and the female gave birth the following year. Check your facts and tell "Exotic" to check his. — Caldwell, Idaho, Fan

Dear Fan: James Nolan, the assistant managing editor of the Akron Beacon-Journal, also wrote to say the Rhode Islaand source was in error. Here are the facts:

There is now a federal law that prohibits the importation of monkeys, but pet stores may sell the animals, provided they are licensed by the Department of Agriculture and if there is no local ordinance against it. For example, monkeys can be sold in Chicago, but not in nearby Evanston.

If anyone out there is interested, be aware that the price of monkeys has skyrocketed. The ring-tail species we used to see with organ grinders once sold for about $80. Today they cost $550 — and up.

Hints From Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

If an inspector for the health department was to inspect my kitchen stove today, he'd surely condemn my house.

On second thought, wish he would — I'd sure like to eat out tonight! — Vivian

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I like to feed my children and hubby a nice hot breakfast.

But, since all of us are on different schedules, trying to prepare and serve cooked cereal without it turning into "gloop" before the last person is served was really a problem.

One morning I decided to try something, even if it didn't turn out. Well, it did!

When the cereal was nearly done, I put the pan into a larger pan with a little hot water — double-boiler fashion.

I found by keeping the pan on a low or simmer flame, and stirring frequently, I was able to serve everyone cereal of a nice consistency, not too thick or thin.

Hope this helps someone else survive the breakfast syndrome. — Ann Carroll

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

When my knees or feet start hurting from the cold weather, I just wrap them with a cloth, preferably wool, and slip them into a long plastic bag, such as a bread wrapper.

The warmth sure relieves the aches and pains. Of course, don't try walking in such a contraption, as the plastic could be slippery. — Rose Cesare

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: A relative of mine was told his body makes too many red blood cells, so he has to be drained of blood occasionally to thin it out. He is confused about this and cannot understand his doctor's explanation. Can you explain in plain language for him? He reads your column regularly. — B.S.C.

Too many red blood cells is "polycythemia."

There are two kinds. "Secondary" polycythemia means the red cells are too numerous because of some known "primary" condition. For example, with severe lung disease there may be not enough blood oxygen "carriers." That causes secondary polycythemia.

In the other form, "polycythemia vera," the cause of the increased red cells is not known. If the cause is found, that can be treated to improve the situation.

In either case, repeated removal of excess red cells can be done. The blood is removed, red cells extracted and the non-red cell portion returned. Occasionally, doctors try to suppress red blood cell production in the bone marrow. Radioactive phosporous therapy is one means of doing this.

This outline should give your relative some basis with which to discuss his specific problem with his doctor.

Dear Dr. Donohue: The heel of my right foot is very painful when I step down. What is it and what is done for it? — M.K.

You have to find the cause, and only a thorough examination will do. Heel pain often is due to calcaneal bursitis — an inflammation of the small friction-reducing sac that lies between the large tendon at the back of the heel and the heel bone. Rest and anti-inflammatory medicines (aspirin, indomethacin, phenylbutazone) help. A plastic heel cup can reduce jarring and provide temporary relief.

Another cause of heel pain is plantar fascitis. This is inflammation of the supporting tissue at the bottom of the feet. Spurs on the heel bone often mean that some inflammation has already taken place in these supporting tissues.

A sturdy arch support and heel lift may lessen pain. An injection of cortisone-like drug into the painful area is advocated by some doctors. See the booklet, "Relief and Care of Your Feet," for more on such problems. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 21 and have one testicle 25 percent larger than the other. I recently got a physical and the doctor could not find any abnormality. Lately, I have had pain there almost daily. It's like a swollen feeling and is very tender. Please advise. — R.P.

You should alert your doctor to the fact that you now have a painful, swollen testicle. It may be inflamed. Some structure other than the testicle may be involved, like the epididymis (sperm tube). You should be rechecked because you have new symptoms — pain and swelling.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: Yes or no? Can gonorrhea germs live on toilet seats? — Mrs. T.S.C.

The last word is never in on these questions, but studies are being conducted periodically. The most recent one I can cite is from a medical journal. Of 72 men's and women's restrooms surveyed there was no evidence of gonorrhea germs found on toilet seats sampled. The germs that were found were mostly those normally found on human skin.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I had a swollen sore on the inside of my buttocks. It was very uncomfortable for two days. Then it burst and blood and pus drained from it. Now it is getting better. I am keeping it clean. Can you tell me what it was? — D.B.

It sounds like a boil or carbuncle (larger boil). They are usually caused by the staph germ. Drainage, either spontaneous (as happened to you) or by a doctor is necessary for cure. If healing does not progress you should have it examined. Keep the area sterile.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: What causes a young man in his early 20s to expose himself in public? Could this lead to more serious things later on? — Worried.

The reasons are psychological and so is the treatment. He needs your support and your urgings to him to seek psychiatric help. Certainly legal problems can follow, but I cannot say whether or not this would lead to deeper psychological problems later on. It well might.

Diverticulosis is a bulge in the digestive tract. To learn more about it, write to Dr. Donohue for his booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You," P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Divinity Cheers Winter Holiday

The origins of Valentine's Day have grown a little hazy. Some say that St. Valentine, legendary patron of lovers, was an imprisoned priest who fell in "From Your Valentine." Another tale has it that throughout Europe during the Middle Ages, people believed birds chose their mates each year on February 14.

Whatever the history, the scarlet trimmings of cards and candies exchanged Feb. 14 provide a spot of color and cheer in the dreariness of midwinter.

Homemade candy can provide a special touch of thoughtfulness this Valentine's Day. Whether that candy is boxed as a gift, shared at the office or served to guests who stop by around Feb. 14, there's a special sweetness about homemade candy that says "I care."

The following recipe was supplied by Brandies of California.

DIVINITY

2½ cups sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
½ cup water
1/3 cup brandy
2 large egg whites
⅛ tsp. salt
½ cup chopped toasted almonds
½ cup chopped marachino cherries

Combine sugar, corn syrup, water and brandy in a narrow deep kettle (bottom of double boiler is excellent). Stir over moderate heat until sugar dissolves. Allow to boil about 5 minutes, watching closely until mixture stops foaming (the brandy makes the candy boil up high in the kettle, at first, so watch closely to avoid boil-overs). When foam subsides, cover kettle and boil 5 minutes at low heat, to dissolve any sugar crystals on both sides of kettle.

Uncover, place candy thermometer in the syrup, and boil over moderate heat to 260 degrees. Meanwhile, when thermometer reaches 250 degrees, beat egg whites with salt at high speed of mixer to soft peaks. Stop mixer until syrup reaches 260 degrees, then remove syrup from heat, start mixer at high speed, and pour syrup very slowly, in a steady stream into egg whites. As soon as all the syrup is in the egg whites, and mixture begins to climb beaters, clean beaters and beat with a wire whisk or large spoon until candy begins to lose its gloss and hold its shape. Quickly fold in almonds and cherries, and turn into greased 8-inch square pan. Let stand until set before cutting. Makes about 1½ lbs.

Note: If drop divinity is preferred, drop by teaspoonfuls onto waxed paper, pushing candy off with a second teaspoon. Makes about four dozen drops.

VALENTINE TREAT — Sharing homemade sweet treats with friends is a great way to celebrate St. Valentine's Day. Brandied Divinity, foreground, is brightened with bits of candied cherries with toasted almonds adding crunch to the smooth candy.

JUICE USE

Use frozen concentrated juices within two or three days after opening and reconstituting them, recommends Gwendolyne Clyatt, a consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

MICROWAVE FAILURES

Most microwave failures are the result of overcooking. Remember that foods cook 80 percent in the microwave oven, and the final 20 percent when removed from the oven.

Woman Examines Lifestyle

By TOM UHLENBROCK

DUPO, Ill. (UPI) — Irene Prall says she spent more money this year for food. But then her food bill for 1978 averaged only 35 cents a day.

"A lot of people don't believe that, but it's all here in this book," said the 73-year-old widow, waving a battered brown notebook she retrieved from her purse.

"I've kept a record of everything I spent for food since 1975. I spent $127.29 in 1978 and this year it'll be about $25 more. But I've had a good bit of company this year and I haven't watched it as closely as I usually do. And I've also got some things that I bought still frozen in the icebox."

Mrs. Prall lives on her Social Security benefits, her savings and income from renting out a section of her modest, one-story home. She doesn't really need to pinch pennies, but believes most people spend far too much on food.

"I have seen so many people claim that they cannot live on Social Security, that they starve. I have proved to myself that it can be, but then I've always been economical," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Prall said she avoids such specialty cuts as rib eye and pork chops in favor of beef roasts and turkey.

She favors chicken and other meats that sell for around a $1 a pound. She said one chicken can last her several meals, and a roast will last more than a week.

"Tonight I'm having the last of a big pot of Irish stew I made with a roast and vegetables from my garden," she said. "I made it weeks ago, then froze individual portions.

"Last night I had a breast of chicken and some doughnuts my neighbor gave me. She was going to throw them out. I sliced them in half, put a little butter in the bottom of my skillet, and warmed them up. They were delicious."

She also never buys soda, alcoholic beverages, cookies and other bakery goods, prepared foods such as pizzas or paper products except bathroom tissue.

"I don't drink milk but I use canned evaporated milk on my cereal in the morning and for cooking," she said. "I never buy packaged things except for cake mixes. If I have company, I make my own rolls. I don't buy any fruits because I have my own canned."

Mrs. Prall grows most of her food in a 40-square-foot backyard garden. This year, she grew peas, corn, cabbage, black-eyed peas, lima beans, onions, tomatoes, beets, carrots, spinach, sweet potatoes, white potatoes, butter beans, turnips and garlic.

She cans or freezes anything she doesn't use fresh — using empty foil,margarine cartons and the plastic wrapper from her newspaper as freezer cartons — and still has vegetables to give to her neighbors.

(Unless the newspaper wrappers are food grade plastic, she's taking a chance. Some plastics can leach toxic materials into food.)

"I go to a horse barn down the street for my fertilizer," she said. "The owner's glad to get his stables cleaned out, and I can get six tubs of fertilizer in my car."

She said her 1974 Gremlin gets 25 miles per gallon, but she often rides the bus to visit her daughter in the St. Louis suburb of Glendale. The 44-mile round trip costs only 20 cents with her senior citizen's pass.

A retired tailor, Mrs. Prall makes her own clothes. She proudly displayed a blue suit, white blouse and pair of slacks she made from $7.65 worth of sale-priced fabric.

When she bought her present house 10 years ago, Mrs. Prall said, it was in disrepair. She tore out the walls down to the studs, put up new plasterboard, rewired the whole building, laid new carpeting and built most of the kitchen cabinets.

"I just had siding put on the outside," she added. "I watched them do it and now I know how."

Mrs. Prall said some neighbors tease her about tight budgeting. Some say it could not be done if illness struck.

"I've been in the hospital 10 times since my husband died in 1937," she said. "But somehow or another I get out of bed and start over. Three years ago I had to have an appendectomy. I had my surgery on the 18th of February and I got out and planted my potatoes on the 15th of March.

"When my husband died, I was left with two children, 4 and 6 years old, and nothing else — no home, no job, no Social Security benefits. My husband couldn't get any insurance because he had illness before. But I was determined. I just knew there was a way and I made that way."

Through ingenuity and hard work, Mrs. Prall reared both children and now even has money for such splurges as an annual trip to Florida and a European vacation she took last year with her daughter.

"I don't think I spent more than $2 for any meal while I was in Europe, and we had good food — good as I have here at home and sometimes better," she said. "It's just like here. You've got to use your head a little bit."

FOOD FAIRE

DOUBLE DECKER FUDGE

Cocoa Layer:
½ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup cocoa
1 1/3 cups (14-oz.) sweetened condensed milk
4½ cups (1 lb.) sifted confectioners sugar
2 tsps. vanilla
1 cup chopped nuts

Melt butter in large saucepan over low heat. Add cocoa; cook and stir until smooth. Blend in sweetened condensed milk; stir over low heat about 5 minutes or until thickened. Remove from heat; beat in confectioners' sugar and vanilla until smooth. Add nuts; pour into 9" square pan. Set aside.

Cranberry Layer:
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 3/4 cup whole berry cranberry sauce
1 pkg. vanilla frosting mix

Melt butter in medium saucepan; stir in cranberry sauce. Cook and stir just until mixture begins to boil. Remove from heat; stir in frosting mix. Return to low heat; cook, stirring constantly until smooth and glossy, one or two minutes. Remove from heat, spread mixture evenly over cocoa layer. Chill fudge in refrigerator until firm, before cutting in desired shapes.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

A misbid through miscounting values or not hearing the auction properly usually leads to disaster. In today's hand however, declarer miscounted his high-card points and later bragged about it.

Six clubs is a fine contract. It only depends upon a winning guess in diamonds. Although both diamond honors are offside in the diagrammed hand, declarer was able to make the contract by an unusual end play against West.

If South knew he had 21 points he would have opened two notrump, silencing West and eliciting three notrump from North. However, South counted only 19 points and opened one club. Naturally, West doubled and North bid two notrump which in their partnership was a limit raise in clubs, i.e., 9 to 11 points and five or more clubs. South, by this time, discovered an extra queen and Blackwooded.

The opening heart lead was won in the closed hand with the ace and trumps were drawn in three rounds. Declarer decided West's vulnerable double must include the ace-queen of diamonds as only 10 high-card points were missing. If West also had four or more spades, a likely possibility, South saw a way to make his slam.

South cashed the king of hearts and played three more rounds of trumps.

On the fifth and sixth trumps South pitched his two small diamonds. West was in a quandary on the last trump. If he pitched a spade, declarer's fourth spade would be the 12th trick. Accordingly, he pitched the diamond queen. South led a small diamond to his king and West's ace. Dummy's jack of diamonds was now established and the spade ace was the entry to cash it.

West was really unhappy. He realized that if he had originally led a spade, declarer wouldn't have been able to make the slam by this unusual squeeze.

China Sports News Nixes Excessive Sex

PEKING (AP) — China's sports news advised its readers Wednesday that too much sexual activity is bad for health.

The paper said sexual activity is a normal demand of adult men and women and normal sexual activity is good for health. But it said sex takes energy, and excessive activity over a period of time will weaken the body.

Citing the case of a man with high blood pressure who suffered partial paralysis after sex, the paper cautioned against sex for persons who are ill, drunk or overly fatigued.

It suggested appropriate sexual activity was once or twice a week for young.

Tech Professor Receives Teaching Award

Accounting Prof. Thomas A. Ratcliffe in Texas Tech's College of Business Administration has been selected 1979-80 recipient of the "New Professor-Excellence in Teaching Award" from the Dads Association.

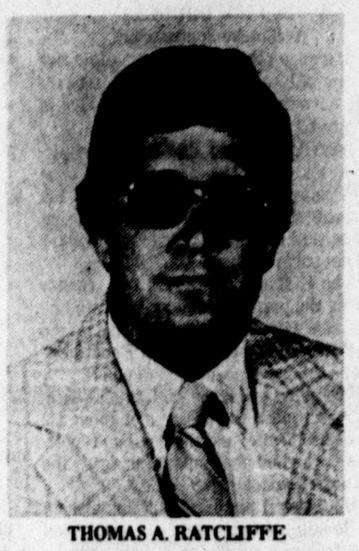
The award will be presented at the Dads Association Midwinter Trustees meeting at the university Feb. 16. He will be the seventh recipient of the award, which goes to a professor who has been at Texas Tech University no more than four years and who has demonstrated teaching excellence. Ratcliffe is in his third year at Tech.

The recognition carries with it a $500 award provided by the Hemphill-Wells Foundation.

Director of Accounting Gary E. White, in his nominating document, said Ratcliffe has a record of "teaching excellence in undergraduate, graduate and contiunuing professional development courses. Students and participants in his course offerings have given him outstanding evaluations, and he is consistently mentioned as an outstanding instructor by recent graduates and current students in our program."

An evaluation group of his peers said Ratcliffe could "present a complex topic in a manner in which students could understand the material . . . he showed a marked level of confidence in presiding over the class. He has a highly proven knowledge in financial accounting. There exists an obviously outstanding rapport bewtween the teacher and the students."

Dr. Ratcliffe received the bachelor's degree from Troy State University in 1974, the master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Alabama in 1976 and 1977, respectively. His major field is accounting, with secondary fields in economics, statistics and organizational behavior. His dissertation was on "A Simulation of Changes in the Social Contract: A Step Toward a Social Accounting Model."



THOMAS A. RATCLIFFE

He joined the Texas Tech facuty in 1977. He has developed and taught continuing education programs for the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, National Association of Accountants, Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, Texas Tech University Center for Professional Development and University of Alabama Continuing Education Division.

He serves as consultant to a variety of business and accounting firms, especially in the areas of leasing and foreign currency exchanges.

He and another Texas Tech professor, Dr. Paul H. Munter, are under contract with Prentice-Hall to write the "Complete Handbook of Inflation Accounting."

He has written papers and articles for publication and delivered speeches, presentations and programs before regional and national organizations and societies.

The French revolutionary calendar was introduced in 1793.

THE SUPERMARKET SHOPPER

By MARTIN SLOANE

The primary purpose of a coupon club is to provide its members with an opportunity to trade their unwanted coupons and refund forms. This third in a series on coupon clubs explains how that trading can be done most efficiently and effectively.

A good trding session is definitely one of the most enjoyable parts of couponing and refunding. It resembles something that can best be described as a cross between a rummage sale and an Oriental bazaar.

Sounds of trading echo from all parts of the room.

"Does anyone have the refund form for the Dow Olympic Bag?"

"I've got four Minute Rice box tops. Who needs them?"

"I'll give 50 cents worth of cash-off coupons for every good refund form I can use.

The trading of refund forms is usually done on a one-for-one basis with one form traded for another of approximately equal quality.

"Quality" is a hard thing to define. It not only means trading a $1 refund form for another $1 refund form.

In addition, it usually means that food forms are traded for food forms, while non-food forms (for proiducts like detergents or paper towels) and traded for other non-food forms.

The major exceptions are hard-to-find refund forms and high-value forms like those for the recent Dow $5 Gift Certificate. A club member with one of these forms may ask for several of the more ordinary variety in exchange.

A new method of trading refund forms is cathing on quickly. It is called the "Shopper's Circle" method. Here is how it works:

You arrange your chairs in a circle. Each of your puts 15 or more refund forms in an envelope with your name written on the outside.

The trading starts with each of you passing your envelope to the person on your left.

You then have two minutes to look through the forms in the new envelope ou received. If you find one you need, you take it out and replace it with a refund form of equality quality.

At the two-minute mark, the timekeeper calls out, "Pass your envelopes to the left."

The envelopes more around the circle, changing hands every two minutes, until they get back to their original owners.

This method gives everyone an equal chance to trade productively. After this phase of trading is completed, members can do some one-to-one trading to obtain refund forms that they could not find in the envelopes.

Most club members are very casual about trading cash-off coupons. Since they don't want the coupons they bring to trade, they freely invite other members to pick out any that they need.

In turn, they are given the opportunity to do the same with the other members' unwanted coupons.

There is no general rule for trading proofs of purchase. Proofs such as box tops and labels may be traded for other proofs. But those very valuable proofs that can be used for current refund offers are often traded for refund forms.

Each proof may be worth one form or 10 depending on the value of the refund for which they are needed. Box tops and labels that are not needed for current refund offers are usually sold in batches of 10 to 100 for a penny or two each.

Your coupon-club meeting should be gracefully concluded around 11 p.m. Each member will go home with dozens of new refund forms, lots of new cash-off coupons — and perhaps, the proof of purchase he or she needed fore that big $3 refund offer.

In addition, the beginners have learned some of the secrete of couponing and refunding, new friends have been made, and everyone has had a great time.

Next week I'll tell you about some of the ways you can make your coupon club even more enjoyable and worthwhile.

Store Camera Tips Off Police To Robbery Scam

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Staging a robbery is not as simple as a 16-year-old convenience store attendant may have thought, say Lubbock police in the juvenile division.

Investigators said poor acting and pictures taken by the hard-to-fool Crime Eye camera resulted Tuesday in the teen-age clerk's being referred to the juvenile authorities for allegedly giving a false report to police.

The 11 shots taken every two seconds during the purported holdup indicated no one else but the attendant was in the northwest Lubbock 7-Eleven Food Store at 4 a.m. Sunday, according to police.

The store employee said a rifle-wielding man robbed the business of about $30 during that time, and the boy also reported he watched the bandit run from the store after snatching up the loot.

But several pictures show the attendant looking directly at the camera and then walking back to the register after he dropped the sack containing the cash, police said. The boy is then shown using the telephone, apparently calling police.

"We feel real sure there wasn't an armed robbery," said Capt. Bill Cox, head of the police department's juvenile division. "But we still don't know why he tripped the camera and then looked right at it."

Officers said photographs show the attendant taking the cash out of the register, placing it in a sack and then walking to the other end of the counter. Subsequent photos show the boy extending his arm and dropping the sack on his side of the counter.

But the teen-ager reportedly told police he tossed the loot on the other side of the counter, where the bandit picked it up and fled the store.

The boy also said the man carrying a rifle with a scope was standing near the front door. However, the shots reportedly show a mirror reflecting nothing next to the entrance but a small rug.

Police were attempting to determine why receipts that night show the cash register about $12 ahead, instead of behind, after the reported holdup.

Church Seeking Injunction Against Pastor

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The governing board of a local Baptist church has filed suit in district court here seeking a permanent injunction against its pastor for allegedly refusing to leave his position after being fired.

The suit, filed in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court, claims that the Rev. Tony Williams Sr., pastor of Community Baptist Church at 220 Quirt Ave., "has refused to vacate his former position as pastor of the church" after he was fired by the Board of Deacons in January.

The suit also claims that although the Board of Deacons terminated Williams' contract in January, he (Williams) "continues to occupy church property and continues to hold himself out as pastor."

"Unless enjoined and restrained from such conduct, the defendant's (Williams) conduct will disrupt and paralyze all activities of the Community Baptist Church," the suit says in support of the request for the permanent injunction.

The suit also says that Williams' actions in refusing to leave are "interfering with the rightful conduct of the business" of the church and that the church has "no adequate remedy at law" against Williams' actions, in that the Board of Deacons wants to hire another minister.

The suit seeks a permanent injunction against Williams, prohibiting him from "continuing to hold out as pastor of the church, refusing to vacate premises and to turn over properties of the pastor's office to the Board of Deacons, coming into the premises for the purpose of holding himself out as pastor and from interfering in any other manner with the proper and lawful religious activities of Community Baptist Church."

Junior High Students To Trace America's History During Patriotic Assembly

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Since the divisiveness of the 60s, patriotism has taken something of a beating in this country, but a group of Mackenzie Junior High School students this week will continue the school tradition of celebrating national pride.

Almost 200 students will participate today and Friday in a patriotic assembly featuring drama, dance and song that trace the events and progress of America's history.

The students, under the direction of teachers Jackie Williams and Agnes McElroy, will perform for the school PTA at 7:30 p.m. today and again for the student body at 8:30 a.m. Friday.

The focus of the triennal production is on the achievements of Americans despite voices of dissent.

Four narrators will guide the audience through numbers and 31 scenes from history that are woven together to deliver a message of patriotism.

Students in the show will depict scenes from events that include the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Westward Movement, Civil War and the landing of man on the moon.

Mrs. Williams said the program is presented because, "We want them (students) to take pride in their country." She said this year the show is intended to show students that, "We have all these problems, but we've still gone on to accomplish very great things."

She added, "The voices of dissent make us aware of these problems."

Mrs. Williams said she believes youngsters in junior high "are still not ashamed" of patriotism. "They don't think it's uncool." She said student audiences during the past three assemblies in 12 years have been receptive to the program.

Whether joining the cast for patriotic reasons or for the novelty of it, the students say they are having fun with the show.

"I think it's a lot more fun since we've been studying about it," said ninth grader Kirk Coats. "Even after seeing pictures in the books, you never really know what they're talking about."

Mart Posts New Highs

NEW YORK (AP) — A late surge of buying in rail and oil issues swept most stock-market indicators to new highs Wednesday in a busy session on Wall Street.

Multi-point gains in many rail stocks pushed the Dow Jones average of 20 transportation issues up 10.33 points to a new peak of 294.51.

Analysts said that 3.64 percent jump was the largest they could recall for the transportation average, which includes representative airline and motor freight stocks as well as rails.

Also hitting new highs were the New York Stock Exchange composite index, up .56 at 66.39, and the American Stock Exchange market value index, up 1.72 at 279.97.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which has lingered far below its 1973 record level of 1,051.70, posted a 5.21 advance to 881.83.

New York (AP) — Wed's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

French Automaker Agrees To Chrysler Assistance

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — The French automaker Peugeot will lend Chrysler Corp. $100 million secured by Chrysler's Peugeot stock, Chrysler announced Wednesday.

Chrysler also said it will study the possible U.S. manufacture of a car Peugeot already has designed and may help Peugeot expand distribution of its own products in North America.

Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca said in a statement the agreement was an "important portion" of needed interim financing while it arranges to use the $1.5 billion in loan guarantees approved by Congress late last year.

The troubled No. 3 automaker expects to report a loss of $1 billion for 1979 and has said it would run out of money this month without help.

An affiliation such as that envisioned by the agreements announced Wednesday long has been proposed by some industry analysts as necessary to Chrysler's survival in the long run. Another once-troubled U.S. company, American Motors Corp., already is linked to a Peugeot competitor, Renault, under agreements by which Renault will own 22.7 percent of AMC.

Peugeot said in Paris final agreements on the various projects may be signed before June. Chrysler's creditors must approve the deal.

Chrysler sold its European operations to Peugeot for $230 million plus 1.8 million Peugeot shares -a 15 percent interest — in August 1978. Chrysler was barred from selling the shares before November of this year, and could not receive dividends on any profits earned before Jan. 1 of this year.

Iacocca said in December Chrysler was negotiating with the Peugeot family to sell back the shares.

The shares are carried on Chrysler's books at $324 million, but at the current price on the Paris Bourse and the current exchange rate would be worth $111 million.

If no agreements can be reached, Peugeot will get an option to buy the shares by Dec. 31 "at a price to be determined by an independent expert."

Peugeot said it may supply Chrysler with diesel engines and that the two would exchange various auto parts.

The companies said the new car would be built in the United States by Chrysler for sale in North America. The accord also calls for studying whether to produce jointly a light truck.

The car would be sold in different versions by both Chrysler and Peugeot dealers.

The marketing help would be aimed at permitting "Peugeot to expand its product range in the middle and upper lines of European imported cars, so as to attain, progressively, the sales levels of its principal European competitors in those markets," Chrysler said.

Peugeot, the sixth largest company outside the United States, made 2.5 million vehicles last year, but has never been important in the North American market.

Though it enjoyed a U.S. sales increase of 30 percent last year, its 11,688 cars put it in 17th place among the 20 companies that have sales tabulated by trade publications.

Interest Rates Reach High On Home Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) -The effective interest rate for all conventional home mortgages reached a new high in early January of 12.03 percent, the government said Wednesday.

And future mortgage rates are sure to be even higher, probably averaging more than 13 percent — a figure already eclipsed in certain pockets of the nation, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said.

Moreover, the length of mortgage loans continued to shrink, from nearly 28 years at the beginning of 1979 to slightly more than 27 years last month.

"Higher market interest rates, the poor savings experience of thrift institutions that supply most funds, and the Federal Reserve's continued anti-inflation policy all contributed to the higher mortgage rates," said board chairman Jay Janis.

January's effective rate for conventional, single-family home mortgages was 25 basis points higher than early December's mark and 175 basis points, or 1.75 percent, above January 1978's effective rate.

Effective interest rates include the mortgage interest, plus certain home-buying fees such as commissions and discounts.

Janis, appearing before a Senate banking subcommittee Wednesday, said the impact on rising mortgage rates has been "quite dramatic."

Mortgage demand remains weak, he said. "While there is availability of mortgage funds in major markets, loan commitment activity remains low, and points to further reductions in housing starts," Janis added.

Janis said housing demand also is deflated by the economy's uncertain outlook. The well-advertised recession has yet to develop, creating a cloudy picture that keeps contractors and home buyers from making large investments, he said.

The bank board reported that:

•The effective mortgage rate on newly built, single-family homes rose from 11.64 percent in early December to 11.89 percent in early January;

•The effective mortgage rate on previously occupied homes rose from 11.89 percent in early December to 12.11 percent early last month.

•The effective commitment rate, the rate financial institutions promised for mortgages to be closed in the future — reached 13.07 percent for newly built, single-family homes.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We have been buying stocks for our grandchildren, ages 12 and 15, under the "gift to minors act" form. The stocks we purchased for them pay good dividends but have dropped in price. Can we sell these stocks and buy something else? My husband and I disagree, as to whether the answer is "yes" or "no."

A. It's "yes" — assuming that you or your husband is custodian for each of the children's accounts. If you have named someone else as custodian, that person has the power to sell and buy for the account.

Under the gift to minors act form, securities and-or money are registered in an adult's name, as custodian for the child. Only one adult and one child for each account.

Among other things, the custodian is empowered to manage, invest and reinvest the custodial property for the minor. This means that the custodian can sell stock held in the account and reinvest the proceeds from the sale in other stocks.

The new stocks, of course, must be registered in the child's gift to minors account. And any cash left over as a result of the transaction must also be registered in that form.

The power to manage the account gives the custodian the opportunity to sell securities that have not done well and put the child's money to work elsewhere — hopefully to do better.

Q. You wrote that when an older person gives stock to a child under the gift to minors act, it is usually wise to name someone else as custodian for the account. You added that this would prevent the value of the stock from being included in the older person's estate, for federal estate tax purposes, if the older person dies before the child becomes an adult.

This didn't seem right to me, because I remember a previous column in which you wrote that such stock is an irrevocable gift and belongs to the child.

So, I called the Internal Revenue Service and was told that the stock would not be included in the donor's estate — no matter who was custodian. What say you?

A. You ran into a friendly revenooer. The official IRS position has long been that securities or cash in gift to minors act form are taxable in the estate of the donor — if the donor is also the custodian.

The convoluted reasoning behind this position is that a donor-custodian retains some power over the account. The IRS has lost some cases on this but has won others.

So, the safe thing — especially for grandparents and other older people — is to name some other adult as custodian for every gift to minors account.

Q. My husband and I own 100 shares of preferred stock of a big utility company which pays $4.50 a share dividend. We bought 50 shares, at $91.75, in 1965; 30 shares, at $92.25, also in 1965; 20 shares, at $34.15, in 1974. That's a total cost of $8,038. My husband is 86. I am 81.

The stock is now trading at $37. If we sell and take a loss of $4,338, we would put the money in a savings certificate. Would you advise us to do that?

A. No. With a market price of $37 and an annual dividend of $4.50, that stock is providing you with a current yield of 12.16 percent. It's unlikely you could get a sure yield that high on the $3,700 — less commission — you would receive by selling that stock.

It's a sad thing, but you have learned a hard lesson about straight preferred stocks — on which dividend rates never change and whose market prices fall when money rates increase.

Although it's unlikely you will ever see those 100 shares worth $8,038, their market price will increase when interest rates in general come down. Meanwhile, you'll get a good yield — based on going market rates.

You might as well hang on to those 10 shares.

Government Looking At 'New Mortgages'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is considering allowing mortgages which you renegotiate every few years, and it wants to know what you think of the idea.

The idea has been suggested by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which could allow federal savings and loan associations to offer the new mortgages.

The agency will accept comments from the public until March 4, and if you have something to say, write to the Secretary, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, 1700 G St. NW, Washington, D.C., 20552.

Basically, the idea is to set up a short term loan — three to five years — with a long term amortization period, up to 30 years.

For example, let's say you buy a home with a 20-year variable mortgage at 12 percent interest.

After five years the loan would be renegotiated with the interest rate rising or falling depending on market conditions at the time.

There is a limit of one-half of one percent per year increase, and over the life of the loan the maxmum net increase or decrease in interest would be 5 percent.

At the end of each five-year period you could look for other financing also, which could be an advantage if rates had declined

Mutual Funds Display Rapid Growth

WASHINGTON (AP) -Assets of mutual funds nearly doubled last year to $104 billion, reflecting the explosive growth of money market funds, which pay many small savers double-digit interest rates.

The Investment Company Institute, the national association of mutual funds, said Wednesday the $104 billion compares with $55 billion in assets at the beginning of 1979 and $35 billion in 1974.

Mutual funds traditionally invest in large portfolios of common stock and then sell shares of this pool to individual and corporate investors.

But mutual funds in increasing numbers are offering so-called money market funds that pay interest rates comparing favorably with Treasury bill rates.

The money market funds also compete with federally insured 6-month money market certificates offered by banks and thrift institutions, but only at $10,000 denominations, a figure often too steep for small savers.

While money market funds are not insured, they often sell at denominations as low as $500 or $1,000. They can be cashed in at any time without penalty. Some funds also offer check-writing privileges.

"The headlong expansion (in mutual funds) has been caused by the popularity of money market funds," said David Silver, president of the institute.

In January, money market funds grew by a record $8 billion, bringing them to about $53 billion, about five times higher than a year earlier.

Silver said traditional mutual funds also are performing well. The value of mutual funds throughout 1979 rose 27 percent, he said.

"It is baffling that the really remarkable results of common stock mutual funds over the last few years have gone largely unnoticed even though people are looking as never before for investments that have stayed ahead of the rate of inflation," Silver said.

Money market funds have commanded much more attention, particularly from banks and thrift institutions.

Many of their depositors, unhappy with the interest on passbook accounts, are withdrawing their savings and investing in the more lucrative money market funds, sold by mutual funds as well as by stock brokerage firms.

To combat this trend, banks and thrifts are now offering a 30-month saving certificate that sells at $100 denominations or above and pays interest at market rates.

Banking officials want the government to regulate money market funds in much the same way that it oversees commercial banks, savings and loan associations and other thrift institutions.

Officials have said they hope such regulation would increase costs incurred by the money market funds and force them to reduce their interest rates to investors.

Price Of Gold Rises Past $700

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gold rose past $700 an ounce for the first time in two weeks Wednesday, and the U.S. dollar's value slumped against the British pound as hopes rose for a settlement of the nation's steel strike.

Gold closed in London at $718 an ounce, up $30 from Tuesday's close, and at $710.50 an ounce in Zurich, up $36. In later New York trading, gold for February delivery finished on the Commodity Exchange Inc. at $713, up $26.

After the Comex close, gold was quoted by Republic National Bank of New York at $708, up $25 from Tuesday and $48 from Monday.

"There's a general feeling that that gold's become a good bargain buy," a New York trader said of the past two days' gains. "By the end of the week or the beginning of next week, I think we'll see gold at about $760," he said.

The International Monetary Fund was scheduled to auction 440,000 ounces of gold Wednesday afternoon, but traders have said they do not believe the auction will have a significant impact on long-term price or supply trends.

The British pound gained sharply after unions and the British Steel Corp. agreed to resume negotiations aimed at ending a strike which has closed the state-owned steel industry.

A new round of oil price increases, which has put pressure on Britain to boost the price of its North Sea oil, also gave the pound a boost, traders in New York and London said.

The pound rose to $2.3145 in New York from $2.3130 earlier in the day in London. The British currency had closed at $2.2890 in New York and $2.2930 in London Tuesday.

The U.S. dollar also was lower against all other major currencies but the Canadian dollar. Dealers could find no specific reason for the decline, but one speculated the drop "must have been due to a large commercial order" rather than speculative reasons.

The Japanese yen closed in Tokyo at 240.35 yen, up from 239.875 yen Tuesday, and finished in New York at 239.90 yen, down from 240.10.

Other 3 p.m. CST New York dollar rates included: 1.7318 West German marks, down from 1.7437; 4.0580 French francs, down from 4.0843; 1.6035 Swiss francs, down from 1.6253; and 1.1601 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1596.

Late European dollar rates included: Frankfurt, 1.7350 marks, down from 1.7392; Zurich, 1.6135 Swiss francs, down from 1.6212; Paris, 4.05825 French francs, down from 4.0825; Amsterdam, 1.9155 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9215, and Milan, 807.30 Italian lire, down from 808.00.

RCA To File Claim For Lost Satellite

McAFEE, N.J. (AP) — RCA Corp., its $20 million satellite lost in space, has filed a $70 million insurance claim, a spokesman said Wednesday.

RCA hopes the loss of the Satcom III communications satellite will not delay expansion of a national cable television network that was counting on it, said spokesman John Williamson.

Williamson said the $70 million covers the cost of the satellite, its launching and expenses from business interruption.

The one-ton satellite, launched Dec. 6, disappeared from tracking screens Dec. 10 after the firing of a kickmotor that was to send it into permanent orbit 22,300 miles above the Pacific.

RCA is negotiating with American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to use another satellite on a temporary basis, he said.

He said RCA "probably will accept" AT&T's offer of 11 transponders, or channels, for cable TV transmission. RCA must respond to the offer by Feb. 15, Williamson said.

RCA has plans for a new satellite, Satcom IV, to be launched in June 1981.

Scientists still are trying to determine the fate of Satcom III. Williamson said a failure review board, including experts from outside RCA, will make a report by mid-April.

The scientists' speculation has been that it burned in the atmosphere or went into a wayward orbit.

The insurance claim was filed with underwriter Marsh & McLennan of New York, which represents a large group of companies, according to Williamson.

POPE ISSUES APPEAL

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II makes a pressing public appeal for the release of a 9-year-old child kidnapped for ransom a few days ago at the town of Locri in southern Italy. "I make my warmest appeal to the kidnappers for little Giovanni Furci be given back to his parents," John Paul says.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

There once was a lady from Niger,
Who went for a ride on a tiger.
He returned from the ride,
With the lady inside,
And a smile on the face of the tiger.

AN ANALYST SAYS THIS COTTON MARKET is a tiger, not a bull.

"Remember the story about the lady who went for a ride on a tiger? She held on by its tail, but she was afraid of what would happen when she had to let go.

"There will be a letting go time, and what will happen to us then?"

Cotton (until the last day or so anyway) has been in its rocket phase, the analyst points out. The market repeatedly scored new contract highs last week and rose seven cents from the low at the start of the week to the high on Friday.

Since the grain embargo selloff the second week of January, March through last week had advanc ed 14 1/2 cents and had been up 15 out of 19 days. All-time records again were set last week for weekly volume, as well as open interest.

MORE THAN 286,000 CONTRACTS were traded on the New York Cotton Exchange during January, substantially more than during any other month.

"We know that statistics will get us into trouble," the market analyst says. "Having got us all bearish at the bottom, perhaps they will keep us bullish at the top.

"Nonetheless," he says, "this crop is sold." This week's export report, he says, probably will bring current sales to near the 8 1/2-million-bale level.

That, coupled with normal domestic offtake, will use up — or at least have committed — what U. S. producers have grown this season.

"Statistically, at least, with the season just half over, we already are digging into last season's carryover," the analyst says.

But a mill source, one of those who has been playing as close to the vest as possible and who was among the domestic mill cotton buyers who watched with amazement and alarm this week as futures prices broke through the 90-cent level, says he remembers what happened during the 1973-74 season.

COTTON FUTURES ABOUT FIVE MONTHS into that season had climbed to 99 cents, he points out, still a record high. The bullish enthusiasm was almost unbridled and seemed almost universal.

It appeared then, as now, that most of the estimated production had been booked for export or for domestic use, the mill source says.

But by late in March of 1974, just three months later, prices had plummeted by about 35 cents and the market outlook had turned decidedly bearish.

One particular area of confusion among domestic mills these days appears to be the level at which to set prices for goods for third and fourth-quarter shipments.

When mills set prices for the second quarter, many had no idea that futures and spot prices on tenderable-type cottons would rise so dramatically.

Mills that didn't immediately buy cotton to cover sales subsequently found replacement costs formidable.

As a result, many mills feel extremely nervous when quoting prices for good- for third and fourth-quarter deliveries.

HEAVY LONG LIQUIDATION SENT COTTON futures reeling to 200-point limit losses at the close Wednesday.

Volume was estimated at an all-time high of 20,050 lots. An estimated 1,100 sell orders were unsatisfied at the close after the front of the market locked limit down well before the final bell, floor brokers said.

Spot March opened 100-120 points down, recovered and moved to a new contract high at 100 points up on the day, and then collapsed to finish 300 points off the session's top level.

After opening lower, the erratic market moved into the plus column in sympathy with precious metals, brokers said, delaying expectations for a technical correction after the recent sharp gains. But selling appeared just above 90 cents in March.

TRADING ON TELCOT TOTALED A LIGHT 8,178 bales, with the bulk of the activity coming during the morning when futures were surging upward. There was little activity during the afternoon.

Prices averaged 59.94 cents, an average of 1,703 points over the loan, but the raw figures — as compared with those of recent days — are not necessarily an accurate reflector of the market conditions.

Buyers during the morning were bidding up on the higher mikes, which comprised a larger proportion of the day's volume than previously, and this accounted for the higher average price and higher average premium over the loan.

Price quotes ended off 75 points in a weak market.

Little U.S. Farmland Under Foreign Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department reported recently that as of Oct. 31, less than one-half of 1 percent of American farmland was owned by foreigners or American corporations with 5 percent foreign ownership.

In its first analysis of congressionally mandated reports on foreign ownership of farmland, the department said such ownership was so small it probably would cause few problems overall but may affect local areas where ownership is high.

"The quantity of foreign-owned agricultural land is so small that it is unlikely that any aggregate impact on agriculture, either positive or negative, could be detected," the department said.

But the report, while saying the effects of foreign ownership cannot be determined with certainty yet, added that "in areas of heaviest concentration it is possible that some communities could be locally affected."

The report to President Carter and the Congress is the first under a 1978 law requiring foreigners or corporations with 5 percent foreign ownership to notify the government of farmland holdings.

The law was passed amid concern by lawmakers and farm leaders that farmland purchases by foreigners could drive American family farmers off the land and compromise the nation's control over its food production.

Specifically, the department said, 6,500 reports filed by foreign owners or U.S. corporations with 5 percent foreign ownership showed they controlled 5.2 million of the nation's 1.23 billion acres of farm land.

The report said foreigners owned about 2.9 million of those acres while the corporations controlled about 2.3 million. The department said it found foreign-owned farmland in all states but Rhode Island.

About 43 percent of the land in question is forest land, the report said, and only 9 percent of the foreign owners changed the use of the land after they bought it.

The South had more than 1.3 million acres of foreign-owned farmland, about 39 percent of the total, with the bulk concentrated in Tennessee, Georgia and South Carolina, the report said. Those three states alone accounted for a quarter of all the foreign-owned farmland reported.

Significant foreign holdings also were reported in Nevada, New Mexico and Oregon but they primarily resulted from foreign ownership of single parcels in excess of 100,000 acres each.

"Nevada, South Carolina and Tennessee have the largest porportion of the reported foreign-owned agriculture land to all privately-held land in the United States," the department said. Even so, these are extremely small."

The foreign owners represented more than 50 countries, the report said, with investors controlling more than half the American holdings coming from the United Kingdom, Luxembourg and West Germany.

"Purchases buy foreigners are likely to increase land values, but not greater than new entries into the real estate market from domestic sources," the department said. It said that while foreign sellers of American farmland currently can get a capital gains tax break, that advantage is probably small.

"Foreign ownership is no more likely to foreclose farming opportunities than purchase by domestic owners," the department said.

City Men Appointed To State Panels

A-J AUSTIN BUREAU

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements has announced the appointment of two Lubbock men to posts on to state panels.

Dr. Duane Miller, 45, was reappointed to the State Seed and Plant Board.

Miller, a professor and chairman of the department of plant and soil science at Texas Tech University, was reappointed for a two-year term to expire Oct. 6, 1981.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward was appointed to the Governor's Advisory Committee on Education.

Woodward was appointed for a term to expire June 7, 1980.

NEW WATER SYSTEM

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Three hundred families in Fonda Lake will get a new water system to replace the one contaminated with rock salt stored near the town for snow removal. For nearly a year, the families in the Livingston County community have been supplied bottled water by the state.

Farmers' Incomes Hit Record In 1979

WASHINGTON (AP) — New preliminary figures by the Agriculture Department showed Wednesday that farmers' net incomes last year matched an all-time record of $33.3 billion set in 1973.

The new 1979 income figure also was up by 4 percent from the department's earlier forecast of $32 billion. Farmers netted $27.9 billion in 1978, according to the report.

However, as department economists have been predicting for months, farmers' income picture for 1980 looks grim, at least through mid-year.

Based on projections of income in the first and second quarters of 1980, adjusted to annual rates, net farm income this year could decline to between $25.2 billion and $24.4 billion.

That would mean farm income could drop by a margin of 24 to 27 percent from last year's record-matching $33.3 billion. Department officials last fall predicted 1980 income could decline by around 20 percent.

All the income figures in the report are in current dollars, meaning no adjustments were made to account for inflation from one year to another.

The brief report, a summary of one scheduled for release later this month, did not mention the 1980 farm income situation in its text, but a table included the figures.

Department economists have said they expect no appreciable effects on 1980 farm income as a result of President Carter's suspension of trade with the Soviet Union because government actions have been taken to bolster commodity prices.

The report said those actions "have restored grain prices, which dipped sharply immediately following the suspension announcement" by Carter on Jan. 4.

However, it added, "Repercussions are still being felt throughout the transportation, storage and shipping industries as grain supplies are being diverted to alternate markets and-or storage."

Further, the report said, the longer-range farm market outlook "is still unclear" and market conditions "in the second half of 1980 will depend not only on world grain production but on Soviet action as well."

The report repeated earlier Agriculture Department forecasts that retail food prices are expected to rise by an average of 7 to 11 percent this year, probably averaging about 8 percent more than in 1979

Expert Estimates Effect Of Grain Embargo

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The American grain industry will need two to three years to recover from the effects of the Soviet grain embargo, a leading grain exporter said recently.

"The Soviet share of our export market had been runing from 10 to 13 percent," said Robert W. Kohlmeyer, senior staff merchant of Cargill Inc.'s commodity marketing division. "Grain producers must look for other markets to replace the Soviet exports."

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — A late selloff in wheat futures contracts on the Chicago Board of Trade dragged down the prices of other grains, which closed lower Wednesday largely based on technical factors.

The market had been steady to higher throughout most of the trading session. But when commission houses that had been large buyers of grains and soybeans throughout the week became sellers, the market tumbled under the weight of the liquidation.

Most traders cited technical market factors like price chart positions and orders to sell when the market broke for the sell-off.

In addition, an unconfirmed rumor that a major commercial firm was shipping several million tons of wheat into Chicago from Minneapolis contributed to the washout.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow to moderate Wednesday. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate and demand was moderate.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations were down 50 points.

The base price of grade 41, staple 34, mike 3.5-4.9, was quoted at 70.60 cents, up 25 points from a week ago. Grade 42, staple 31, mikes 2.7-2.9, was quoted at 51.55.

Growers sold mikes 3.0-3.2 around 1,525 to 1,725 points over 1979 loan rates. Mikes 2.7-2.9 brought 1,125 to 1,325 points over and mikes 2.6 and below sold at 1,100 to 1,300 over.

Gins paid growers $95 to $115 per ton for cottonseed.

Cattle Futures Rebound Limit

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 95 to 150 points higher on sales of 24,605 cars Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

February through August contracts were up the limit with other months at daily highs. Prices ran up the limit around midday on buying sparked by higher cash beef at noon and steady to higher cash cattle on reduced receipts.

Traders also noted light deliveries thus far. Commission houses and locals were active buyers with stops touched off on the scale up in closing trade.

Deliveries total 13 thus far. Wholesale beef was up 1 cent at 99 to 101 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect 9,800 head today.

Cash cattle were steady to up $1.50, with the best top at $68.50 at Illinois direct. Slaughter totaled 121,000 head.

Hog futures closed 10 to 62 points higher paced by June and August. Sales totaled 7,362 cars.

Best prices were pared by late profit taking and selling stemming from an outlook for weaker cash hogs today. Early gains followed the firmer tone to the pork complex and higher cash hogs on reduced receipts. There also was spillover demand from other meat pits.

Deliveries total two thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 2 cents at 63 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

The six markets expect 29,000 head today. Cash hogs were steady to up $2, with the best top at $40 at Joliet. Slaughter totaled 342,000 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed 90 to 150 points higher on 2,539 cars. March through May were up the daily limit.

The market ran up on active commission house and local buying. Spillover demand from the cattle pit along with higher beef at noon and steady to higher live prices were noted.

The six markets expect 5,500 head today. Cash feeders were steady to up $4, with the best top at $131 at San Antonio.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 20 to 150 points higher paced by July. Sales totaled 11,787 cars.

Active local and commission house short covering and other buying lifted futures to limits around midday. Spillover demand from the cattle pits and buying on the firmer pork complex, higher live hog prices and light deliveries were noted as supporting factors.

Late profit taking and other selling trimmed best levels on expectations of weaker live hog markets today.

Deliveries total 531 thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged at 33½ to 37½ cents, f.o.b. river.

Government To Pick Up Tab For Chickens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has announced a $5.5 million purchase of more than 11 million pounds of frozen whole chickens to help relieve a surplus caused by President Carter's suspension of trade with the Soviet Union.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said the chickens "will be donated to hospitals, nursing homes and other institutions" by the department.

A spokeswoman, who asked not to be identified, said the purchases were "a one-shot deal" and that the department has no plans to buy more chickens directly as a result of the president's action.

Carter announced on Jan. 4 an embargo on about17 million metric tons of grain, plus soybeans and some other commodities, including the chickens, that the Soviet Union was expected to get this year.

The government also is taking steps to buy or store the canceled grain to help protect farmers from declines in market prices.

Officials said last week that the Agriculture Department would buy at least 5,000 metric tons of the frozen chicken. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and the 11 million pounds announced Wednesday equals about 5,000 metric tons.

Prices paid for the chickens ranged from about 46 cents to 53 cents a pound.

Offers were accepted from seven companies: Holly Creek Fryers Inc., Broken Bow, Okla.; Cagle's Inc., Pine Mountain Valley, Ga.; Central Soya of Athens Inc., Athens, Ga.; MFC Services, Madison, Miss.; Gold Kist Inc., Atlanta, Ga.; Lumbee Farms Coop Inc., Lumber Bridge, N.C.; and Green Acre Farms Inc., Sebastopol, Miss.

Women's Views Divided On Draft Registration

By DEBBI STALTER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

President Carter's announcement that he plans to reinstate standby draft registration, shadowed by the fact that he has gone on record in support of including women in the measure, has been viewed by some as giving the feminists what they asked for and deserve.

Others say, however, that if men have to go to war, sending women into service would only be fair.

Carter administration officials say the president would make a decision on draft registration Wednesday and announce that decision today, but he will need Congressional action to put any actual draft into effect.

Although Carter now has the power to require men between ages 18 and 26 to register for military service, he does not have the right to enforce registration of women or draft either sex, pending an act of Congress.

And because registration and draft personnel have dwindled to a skeleton staff since registration procedures were abandoned in 1975, Congress will also be faced with approving an estimated $10 million to put the nearly defunct Selective Service System back into working order.

Women and women's groups in Lubbock are far from beating the drums in support of sending females to war. However, several seem to feel women should be required to register for service to at least pinpoint the nation's military strength.

However, two local military recruiters said they feel women are not needed in the service during peacetime or that women should not be drafted in any case.

"We get all the quality women we need without a draft," said Lynn Walthall, Navy recruiter for officer programs.

Walthall said that in officer programs, women are paid the same salary as men. To enlist in the service now, the woman must fill a current need in Navy operations, he said, adding that the Navy does not allow women to serve on combat ships.

Walthall said he feels a draft is not needed at this time, saying that "It would just make our job easier."

An Army recruiter also expressed a personal opinion that women and combat do not belong together.

Sgt. Jimmy DeLaGarza said, "I don't think they should have to register, since the next step is the draft."

DeLaGarza said he feels a woman's place is not on the battlefield. He added that recruitment operations are now serving as a civilian function, and that the decision of how the draft will be handled will be up to the Selective Service System.

Lubbock women's organizations, both for and against the Equal Rights Amendment, are opposed to sending their sisters to war, but the line between the two opinions is drawn when a no-choice situation arises.

Skeet Workman, president of Lubbock's Eagle Forum, whose national affiliate is dedicated to blocking passage of the ERA, said, "We don't support the draft or registration. Registration will be the first step to drafting.

"It's bad enough that men have to go (to war), but I just don't think we need to be sending our young women into combat," she added.

Mrs. Workman gave support to a volunteer army, saying anyone has the right to offer his or her military service without a draft and that there are many ways a man or woman can choose to serve the country.

And although some might think that those pushing for equal rights either want the draft or had it coming, the president of the local chapter of the National Organization for Women said her group opposes the draft and registration altogether.

Noting that NOW feels Congress and the president should be working on peace, not war, chapter President Cathie McWhorter said, however, that "If anyone is called, women ought to be registered, also."

From a different viewpoint, Darline Buckberry, Lubbock League of Women Voters president, said that although the league supports the ERA, the measure has nothing to do with whether women will be drafted.

The league's position, similar to that of the national ERA America stand, is that regardless of the ERA's passage, Congress has always had the power to draft women. According to Kathleen Currie of the national ERA America, "Whether to draft women is a political decision, not a legal one."

Mrs. Buckberry said the local league has no position on the matter of drafting or registering, because her group feels the decision is strictly up to Congress, and individuals will just have to abide by what the legislative body determines will best benefit the country.

"They (the public) always say they can't do it without the ERA," Mrs. Buckberry said, "but they've (congressmen) always had that right, with or without it."

The ERA has been ratified by 35 of the 38 necessary states to put the measure into legislation by the June 30, 1982, deadline. Five states that originally gave approval, however, have rescinded their action, although the validity of such a move is still in question).

Several influential congressmen have predicted that Carter will have a difficult time winning support for standby draft registration whether or not women are included, although Don Richards of U.S. Rep. Kent Hance's office said there seems to be strong support in the House for registration.

Although Carter has not clarified whether he intends to put women into combat positions, Hance has said he will not vote to include women, either way.

"There are those who feel they should be registered, but I do not," Hance said. "If they want to volunteer, that's fine."

Hance said that registration for men should be started within 60 days because without it, the draft could not go into effect for six to eight months.

Hance predicted that the move to register will pass both the House and Senate, saying that the inclusion of women will be a close vote.

Richards said that there has been no clear-cut feeling toward the draft among congressmen yet, possibly because some are waiting to see what Carter's proposal will include.

Richards pointed out that registration now would be done through local post offices only to let Washington know where its potential draftees are. He said physical examinations would not be given during this preliminary action, nor would military classifications be made.

Sen. John Tower and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen may find their votes canceling each other out when the decision-making time nears.

While Tower opposes even registering women, Bentsen supports their registration, although he is not in favor of sending women into combat.

"I know it's not a politically popular decision, but I believe women ought to register," Bentsen said. "They too owe an obligation to serve their country, either in the military or through some other form of service, perhaps in areas of need in their communities."

On the other hand, Tower feels that in the event of mobilization, registering women will only interfere with trying to prepare men for combat in a short period of time.

Tower said that the need for women has been met in the past through volunteers, as in World War II.

And, Tower said, the addition of women to the issue will hurt the passage of the draft registration measure, because there is already significant opposition to the draft in Congress.

Bentsen said, though, that the concept of the volunteer army "just isn't working, and the government has to quit kidding the people about it," adding that he is a former supporter of volunteer service.

THREE WOUNDED

CHICAGO (AP) — Three persons were wounded when an attempted holdup erupted into a shootout at a check-cashing stand in a Veterans Administration hospital, authorities said. The wounded were identified as one of the gunmen, a bystander and a security guard.

The '80 Rabbit is a big show off.

Our lot is jumping with '80 Rabbits that can't wait to get their show on the road. They've got some impressive new features to show off this year. Like their shiny metallic coats. Touches of chrome here and there to make them even snappier. Trunk space and people space galore. And a refined fuel-injection engine for a quieter and more efficient ride.
If you've never seen a Rabbit strut, drop by Montgomery Motors today. We've got a lot full of Rabbits and they're putting on quite a show.

LANDING AT SMITHSONIAN — A copy of a Viking Lander spacecraft, like the two that landed on Mars' surface in 1976, is examined by Smithsonian employees Wednesday in Washington during its first day on exhibit at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum. The remotely-controlled spacecrafts sent back photographs of Mars and data on its meteorology and geology. Pittsburgh Students To Fight Banning Of Overnight Visitors

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Students are complaining that a plan to ban overnight visitors will turn University of Pittsburgh dormitories into "monasteries," but officials at the urban campus say they hope the policy will cut down on crime.

"We don't want it. We have to fight this," Terri Slack, chairman of the student-resident association, said Wednesday. "I haven't talked to anyone who is for the new visitation policy."

Beginning with the new term in May, the university plans to stop male and female students from sharing rooms between 2 a.m. and 10 a.m. in 10 dormitory buildings throughout the city's Oakland section.

Members of the same sex may visit overnight but must register at the dormitory control desk and cannot stay longer than three days every two weeks. Each of the 4,100 resident students will be limited to 30 visits a term and regular visitors will be discouraged.

"Anytime you increase security, you necessarily have to decrease some freedoms," said Pitt spokesman Mary Ann Aug. "We really feel it is essentially a practical matter. How do you control who comes and who goes when you have that many people?"

Dormitories have been open on a 24-hour basis since 1971. But security became a hot campus issue last January when a freshman student, Monica Jones, was found strangled in a dorm trash area.

The man charged with the murder, Sidney Brinkley of Philadelphia, allegedly stayed in a dormitory with a female friend even though he was not a registered student.

"Under the present rule, you are not permitted to have guests for longer than five consecutive days," said Sue McFarland, editor of the Pitt News. "He had been living there for weeks and weeks at a time.

"I'm sure security wouldn't have been a concern at all if not for the murder," she added. "Students are very enraged. It's difficult to have something taken away that they've had for so long."

When Dr. Conney Kimbo, vice chancellor of student affairs, announced the new policy this week, he was met with jeers from hundreds of students and a banner reading: "Monastary of Pittsburgh."

"Legally we're adults," shouted one student. "We can vote, be drafted and go to war, and the university has no right to regulate our morals."

Kimbo said the university has "the responsibility and the right to change housing policy as long as its legal, and this is legal."

Miss Slack said students were talking with the American Civil Liberties Union, writing to congressmen and planning to protest at the next board of trustees meeting.

"It's the principle. They're limiting my personal life," she said. "A lot of the students feel the university is punishing them because the present rules are not adequately enforced."

Many students say they will violate the new policy.

"I really don't think there is a rule in society that isn't broken," said Miss Aug. "But this makes it more difficult for unauthorized people to cause trouble."

Charismatic Religionists Convening

DALLAS (AP) — Leaders of charismatic congregations around the world will meet here this week to assess the state of the Christian "renewal" movement.

Organizers expect 400 to 500 Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Methodist, Lutheran, Baptist and Pentecostal leaders to attend the U.S. Summit Convocation today through Saturday. The meeting is being sponsored by the Episcopal Charismatic Fellowship.

Charismatics gained momentum in the '60s and '70s as a neo-Pentecostal movement toward emotional expression and the use of "gifts" such as speaking in tongues and healing. Like the Pentecostals of the early 20th century, charismatics claim to be "born again" or "filled with the Holy Spirit."

Unlike the earlier movement, however, the charismatic renewal has grown within the "mainline" Protestant and Catholic denominations. The Gallup Poll last year estimated 3 million Americans had joined the charismatic movement.

Some denominations met the movement with mixed reactions; others denounced it outright. Glossolalia, or speaking in unknown tongues, received the most criticism. Some theologians said such gifts ceased after Biblical times or that charismatics placed too much emphasis on them. Others said charismatics became too dependent on individual leaders and that they lost touch with the real world.

Now, however, charismatic leaders see the movement maturing and reconciling with the mainline churches in the 1980s, with less emphasis on gifts and more emphasis on spiritual unity.

The renewal in Dallas has been closely watched by charismatics around the world, primarily because of the efforts of the city's "five elders" — the Rev. Ted Nelson of the Episcopal Church of the Resurrection, the Rev. Bob Cavnar of the Catholic Christian Community of God's Delight, the Rev. Paul Morrell of Tyler Street United Methodist Church, Dr. Everitt Fjordbak of the Lakewood Assembly of God and the Rev. Morris Sheats of Beverly Hills Baptist Church. Sheats, former minister of Trinity Church in Lubbock, recently has been succeeded by the Rev. Gene Downs.

In 1976, the ministers began a non-denominational, yearly Feast of the Pentecost rally, which has spread across the United States and to Europe, Nelson said.

Nelson said the renewal as a whole is "kind of growing up. I think the perspective of the renewal has changed some for the better ... And it's not going to go away."

He said the Episcopal Church is growing more tolerant of charismatics because of the movement's maturing image, because it is growing while the mainline church is losing members and because "there's good evidence (for using gifts) in Scripture and in our own prayer book."

Morrell said the Methodist charismatic movement also is maturing and "slowing down in other ways. We're beginning to establish a stronger theological base because we're getting ready for a considerable advance in the next decade."

Unlike other denominations, Morrell said the Methodist hierarchy continues to resist the renewal.

Ambassador Expects End Of Oil Spill

HARLINGEN (AP) — Bob Krueger, U.S. ambassador-at-large to Mexico, said Wednesday he learned two weeks ago that workers have a good chance of shutting off the source of the world's worst oil spill by the middle of this month.

Krueger said he was not surprised Tuesday to hear Gov. Bill Clements predict the offshore Mexican oil well would be capped within 72 hours if everything goes right.

"That didn't come as any surprise," Krueger said of Clements' information obtained from sources at the well site.

"We did not make any particular announcement (two weeks ago) because when you're dealing with subterranean passages you don't want to set about some hope that won't be realized," he said.

Krueger spoke to local civic leaders and talked briefly afterward with reporters.

Earlier predictions in August and January that the Ixtoc I well in the Bay of Campeche was almost shut down fell through, Krueger noted.

"Clearly our hopes are there, but we don't want to get up any false hopes. I'm not in a position to offer any guarantees," he said.

The United States and Mexico are about two months away from signing an agreement on handling of future oil spills. The ambassador said the pact would not affect the current problem.

"The question of Ixtoc I has not been resolved," he said of negotiations with Mexico for compensation of clean-up costs along Texas beaches last summer.

"We still hope it might be possible to keep it out of court," he said. Several lawsuits have been filed against the Mexican national oil company, a private Mexican drilling contractor and the American company that leased a rig used at the well.

U.S.-Mexican relations have been rocky in the past and will constantly be reassessed as Mexico develops a stronger economy through its vast oil and gas reserves, Krueger told the breakfast audience.

"We have not, in short, had an entirely tranquil past. But I think those times of conflict are past and we can build from the scars of the past and build a more binding relationship," said the former Texas congressman.

Mexico has 50 billion barrels of proven oil reserves and an additional possible reserve of 200 billion barrels, he said.

But the United States cannot dwell on energy as the only important factor in its relations with its southern neighbor, he warned.

The two nations are increasing trade, supporting each other's tourism and cooperating on drug-smuggling crackdowns.

"In the last three years a cooperative has allowed Mexico to spray opium poppies in the field. It has reduced heroin imports to this country by 85 percent and the number of deaths from heroin by more than a half," he said.

Veto Powers Against Teachers' Collective Bargaining Warned

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday he would veto a bill giving teachers collective bargaining and a right to strike if the legislature passes it.

Clements made his comment at a news conference as leaders of the Texas State Teachers Association outlined the TSTA's legislative program for 1981.

"I am absolutely opposed to it and will oppose it in any way I know how. ... I think they (TSTA) are making a mistake. To borrow a phrase, I think they've shot themselves in the foot. If the legislature passes it, I will veto it," he said.

TSTA leaders rejected the notion that the 118,000-member organization was abandoning its insistence it is not a union.

"We are a professional organization," said president Cecile Russell, who contended this makes TSTA different from the rival Texas Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO.

Major items in TSTA's legislative program are:

•Job security — similar to tenure at colleges — for teachers who satisfactorily complete a 1-½-year probationary period. When lay-offs are necessary, senior teachers would go last.

•Collective bargaining, with teachers receiving a right to select by majority vote an organization to negotiate wages and working conditions with school boards.

•Higher salaries — the exact amount TSTA will ask has not been decided, but executive secretary Jim Butler said Texas teachers average $13,038 a year, compared with a national average over $15,000.

•A statewide group health insurance program for teachers and retired teachers that will cost $288 million per biennium.

"Because many teachers cannot afford or obtain health insurance, they are reluctant to be absent. So they teach when they should not. That hinders education," Mrs. Russell said.

Mormons Want Out

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A half dozen women stood to declare they want out of the Mormon Church after excommunicated Mormon Sonia Johnson, a staunch advocate of the Equal Rights Amendment, spoke to Utah supporters.

Mrs. Johnson said she's received more than 5,000 letters, most of them supportive, since she was excommunicated in December. "I've enjoyed it a lot. Politics can be fun," she said. "When you just wash dishes, you don't find that out."

More than 300 people — mostly women — applauded Tuesday as Mrs. Johnson talked about her excommunication at her home stake at Sterling, Va. She has appealed the action.

She said she has "checked out" her feelings in support of the ERA, which would ban discrimination based on sex, with her Mother and Father in Heaven.

"If God is sexist, then there's no hope," she said. "We might as well just go jump off our pedestals and kill ourselves."

Olympic Tow Truck

GRANT, Mich. (AP) — You can add tow trucks to the list of "official" Winter Olympics paraphernalia.

James Lemson of Grant, his son, and three other Michigan men are due in Lake Placid, N.Y., Thursday to operate one of 17 such trucks bearing the Olympic insignia.

Cars are banned from the Olympic Village and buses will be used to shuttle spectators back and forth. Lemson says his job will be towing out buses that get stuck in snowbanks along the narrow roads.

Letter Writer Exists

FORT LEE, N.J. (AP) — There really is a Richard Feder and he really does live in Fort Lee, N.J. But he doesn't write those letters to RoseAnn Roseannadanna, the newswoman played by Gilda Radner on NBC Television's "Saturday Night Live."

Even if he did write the letters, Feder says he would not be offended by RoseAnn's comeback line: "Whadda you doin' livin' in NEW JERSEY anyway?"

Says Feder, "I make fun of New Jersey. Factories, giant smokestacks, smog, the turnpike ... it's the pits."

Feder, vice president of a textile printing plant, rose to secondhand stardom one Saturday when brother-in-law Alan Zweibel, a writer on the show, told him to watch that night.

"The first time I heard my name, I looked at my wife," Feder recalls. "I was debating whether to go under the chair or feel good about it. So I decided to feel good about it."

They Got The Kitchen Sink

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — These thieves got everything. No "but" about it.

Police say the owner of an unoccupied house reported the theft of items valued at $845. Gone were an antique oak table, a sliding glass shower door, bathroom plumbing fixtures, a bathroom sink ...

And the kitchen sink.

Prices For Pooches

McBRIDE, British Columbia (AP) — A bounty of $15 per dog has turned canine catching into cold cash for enterprising residents of this western Canada town.

Village clerk El Leiske said Tuesday that three people have been bringing in dogs since a report two weeks ago focused on the difficulty of keeping a dog catcher.

"We've had 11 (dogs) turned in," he said. Most were later picked up by their owners.

The decision to pay a bounty to anyone bringing in stray dogs was made after no one would take the dog catcher's job on a regular basis.

The town of 800 has had four dog catchers in the past six years. At least two received anonymous threats of violence, and all complained they had lost friends due to the unpopularity of the job.

Mickey Mouse Wins Lawsuit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mickey Mouse and cartoonist Dan O'Neill have ended their eight-year legal fight involving the use of Mickey in pornographic pictures.

Documents on file in U.S. District Court show O'Neill and others who published parodies of the famous mouse engaged in X-rated activities have agreed not to do it any more, while Walt Disney Productions has dropped contempt of court proceedings. Disney claimed the character was used without permission.

The original court judgment against O'Neill and others involved in Air Pirates Funnies called for O'Neill, Bobby London and Ted Richards to pay Disney $190,000 each. That judgment stands, but the court documents indicate it was agreed that Disney will not try to collect.

Who's Who?

COLCHESTER, Conn. (AP) — For three weeks after she lost their identification bracelets, Robin Everett couldn't tell which of her 3-month-old twins was Tina and which was Tanya.

"I had to stop calling them by their first names because I was afraid I'd be calling them by the wrong name," Mrs. Everett says.

In the meantime, the 23-year-old mother called the babies by nicknames, such as "Stinky."

The identity crisis was solved Tuesday when birth records containing the babies' footprints were compared with newly-taken prints.

Mrs. Everett says she'll avoid further confusion by putting fingernail polish on Tanya's toes.

Statement 'Just For Laughs'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A spokesman for United Technologies Corp. says "It was all for laughs" — the statement by UTC president Alexander M. Haig Jr.: "I will someday be president of the United States."

"It was a play on words," said UTC spokesman Phillip Norton Wednesday. "He said, 'I will someday be president of the United States.' He said he was gaining on it. He said he had become president of United Technologies, so he had missed by only one word."

Haig, the former NATO commander and Nixon White House chief of staff, could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Haig made the statement in Philadelphia on Tuesday. When pressed on the subject, Haig said he was happy in private life and that, while he decided in December not to run for the GOP presidential nomination, he was not ruling out "anything" in the future.

Teacher Talks Resume

CHICAGO (AP) — Negotiators for striking teachers and the Board of Education renewed efforts Wednesday to agree on budget cuts needed to help the 473,000-student school system through its financial crisis.

Talks also continued between the firefighters union and the city. No progress was reported toward agreeing on a written contract.

Teachers continued to defy a temporary restraining order to return to work, staying out of classes for the eighth straight day. Classes were called off last week when teachers refused to work because they had not been paid.

They were paid in full last Friday, but went on strike Monday in a dispute over the school board's intention to dismiss 1,600 teachers as part of a financial plan to bail out the financially-strapped school district.

Circuit Court Judge Richard Curry, who issued the back-to-work order Monday, urged negotiators to return to the bargaining table Tuesday. The two sides met for four hours Tuesday night, but no progress was reported.

The school board met publicly for about 30 minutes Wednesday morning before beginning a two-hour executive session which preceded renewed talks with the union.

Flu Reports Accelerate Across City

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With the inevitability of winter comes the inescapability of the flu, and a lot of Lubbock residents are feeling pretty miserable now.

Both the public schools and Texas Tech University report an increase in flu-type ailments among students, but public health officials aren't alarmed, saying it's just normal for this time of year.

Maybe there's some comfort in knowing the bug is probably just the milder "type B" influenza, which is briefer and less of a knock-out than the type A version which circulates every few years. But for those people who contract even the "B" version, it usually means from 24 to 48 hours of aches and pains, stuffy head and low-grade fever.

Lubbock public schools report a drop in attendance this week, attributing it to "a flu or virus of some sort." School superintendent Ed Irons said that the average attendance of 94.5 percent is down to 91.38 in LISD schools, adding that Evans Junior High school is reporting large numbers of absences.

"We try to curtail large assemblies," Irons said, in an attempt to keep children who might be carrying the strain from spreading it to others, "but that's about all we try to do."

Dr. Reagan Gibbs, director of student health at Texas Tech, reports an upswing in the number of students coming through his clinic this week, though overall, clinic traffic has been down for this time of year. Many of the students are complaining of flu-like symptoms, he said.

Health Department director Marjorie Orr said there has been no definitive diagnosis that this is "type B" influenza but that the weaker strain has been diagnosed across the country elsewhere with the same symptoms.

Those persons who come down with the flu will usually be sick for two to three days, she said, adding "They feel real miserable for 24 to 48 hours." Most people suffer no complications from the B strain, she said, such as the pneumonia associated with "type A" influenza.

There is a vaccine available for both types of flu, Dr. Orr said, but there hasn't been a big drive to vaccinate against "type B."

Scotland Yard Scandal Widens In Scope

LONDON (UPI) — There's dirty work afoot at Scotland Yard. The cops have become the robbers.

Detective after detective in the world's most famous police force is being arrested and charged with theft, bribery and conspiracy.

Two were charged with a crime of startling audacity — stealing money from Scotland Yard's own receiver of stolen property.

Five middle-rank cops have been arrested so far. Four detectives from the separate City of London force have been suspended. In addition, the one-time head of the Yard's serious crime squad wes jailed for three years for conspiring to bribe another policeman to help a wanted man evade arrest.

Scotland Yard sources say these actions are "Merely the beginning." The quaintly named "Operation Countryman" is closing in.

"Countryman" is a sleuthing crew of 80 of Scotland Yard's country cousins. For more than year these provincial policemen have been digging into corruption at the Yard, whose force formally is known as the Metropolitan Police.

Their probe has been called "Potentially the most devastating investigation within the police forces for years." By every indication it was overdue.

Recently the Yard quietly cracked down on widespread corruption in its pornography squad. Another clean-up hit the drugs squad. Sir David McNee, the tough Scottish Police Commissioner, said last April there were then 68 officers suspended for "serious breaches of discipline, dishonesty or corruption."

"I shall never eliminate corruption in the Metropolitan Police," McNee said. "It will always be with us. All we can do is hope to reduce it and keep it as low as possible."

McNee and his predecessors fought corruption constantly. But they always used the Yard to fight the Yard.

Then in August 1978, an underworld informant whispered allegations of corruption in the Yard and in the separate City of London police force in connection with three spectacular robberies — two payroll heists from Fleet Street newspapers and a robbery outside a bank. A security guard died in one robbery.

Nobody could be sure how far inside and outside London the corruption had spread. So the Home Office reached to the far west of England and ordered Leonard Burt, ssistant chief constable of the county of Dorset, to investigate.

Burt recruited "countrymen" from provincial forces all over the west of England. His 80 sleuths waded into such a complex web of allegations, names and incidents that they began using a computer to keep track.

"Countryman" quickly got as spooky as any spy novel. Burt moved his headquarters out of London for fear of leaks. One top London crime writer noted its investigators used "considerable care and security.

"Telephone conversations are delibertely oblique, meetings held with great care and every effort is made to keep out of sight of even the humble man on the beat."

Burt began to get help. A Sunday newspaper turned over to him evidence it uncovered against one top Yard detective which indicated he helped plan one $1.65 million robbery and took hefty bribes to suppress evidence.

The first two Yard detectives arrested were charged with accepting bribes and demanding others.

Tough British press laws made sure that "Operation Countryman" proceeded in considerable secrecy. Newspapers here name names only when formal charges are filed, and then are allowed to report nothing more until a trial's verdict is in.

One such report came from a trial which ended the same day the fourth and fifth Yard detectives were arrested.

Three cops and three civilians were jailed by an Old Bailey jury which heard that the cops — not part of Scotland Yard — were in a special squad set up to stop "scandalous" thefts from railway depot.

When the cops found how easy it was they began stealing on their own. They casually provided police escorts for thieves hauling off the loot, and once even used a police truck to ferry stolen goods out of the depot.

TERRORISM IN GUATEMALA

GUATEMALA CITY — The Guatemalan army reports 13 men including two guerrillas were killed Monday in a guerrilla ambush of a truckload of troops in the north, apparently in retaliation for the death of 28 peasants from the area among 37 killed last week in the Spanish Embassy. Police in Guatemala City say terrorists shot and killed two military officials and a police officer in the capital.

Commission To Consider Annexation Of Property

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Planning and Zoning Commission members tonight will consider annexing an additional 307 acres of property north of the Lubbock Children's Home.

In January, the City Council annexed property surrounding the home, despite opposition from adjacent property owners, who said the annexation would bring higher taxes and would create problems in enforcing city codes in a section of land north of Idalou Highway.

Although the council approved the annexation, council members asked the commission to determine if the annexation should be extended north to encompass some 300 acres.

Lubbock Children's Home officials had requested the annexation because of water problems the home was experiencing.

The commission also will consider a request by E. Reuel Nash, for Northwestern Plaza Inc., to change zoning of property at 5321 Brownfield Road from a high density apartment district (A-2) to general retail (C-3) specific use zoning.

Approval of Nash's request will allow development of a private swimming pool, tennis courts and racquet ball facilities.

The developer's original request was for commercial (C-4) zoning which would have allowed development of a private club. Nash, however, withdrew the request following stiff opposition from surrounding property owners.

The commission also will consider Thursday zone case requests by:

— Lloyd Croslin Jr., for Croslin & Reynolds, to change zoning on property at North Loop 289 and Ash Avenue from single family (R-1), to C-3 and C-4.

— Billy Meeks, representing Clayton J. Ross, to change property at 5201 Fourth St. from R-1 to local retail (C-2) zoning.

— R. Preston Shaw to change property located at 3515 22nd St. from R-1 to apartment medical (AM) zoning.

— Jack McQueen, for R&S Enterprises to change property located at 2408 Frankford Avenue from R-1 to family apartment (A-1) zoning.

— Joe D. McKay, for F Properties, to change zoning on property at 3202 64th St. from two family (R-2) to A-1.

Methodist Church Pastor To Speak At Ladies Night

The Rev. Dr. Mouson Biggs, Jr., pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church in Beaumont, will be guest speaker at Lubbock Rotary Club's annual Ladies Night, Feb. 14, at the Lubbock Country Club.

Co-author of the best seller, "When You Graduate," the Rev. Biggs also writes a weekly column for The Beaumont Enterprise, appears on a daily television program, and moderated a 90 minute radio program for six years.

He became pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church in Beaumont six years ago. The congregation at that time totaled more than 3,300 members. Since that time, the church has gained 1,800 new members.

In addition to his church-related activities, the Rev. Biggs often speaks at conventions, clubs, chambers of commerce and has appeared before dinner groups in 19 states.

Ladies Night is being held this year in conjunction with the 75th Anniversary of Rotary International.

George Gilkerson is chairman of this year's event.

Tech Respects Young Owls

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

HOUSTON — Nobody needs to tell Gerald Myers or his Texas Tech basketball team that the Rice Owls are a much-improved squad. And nobody needs to remind the Raiders what happened on their last trip to Houston, one week ago.

The Rice Owls drove home the first point quite well the last time the two teams met in Lubbock — forcing Tech into overtime before David Little's free throws finally clinched a tough 62-59 win.

One week ago today, the Raiders suffered their worst defeat of the year, bowing to the Houston Cougars 75-63 in Hofheinz Pavilion.

Myers said the Owls' earlier performance should give the Rice club a vote of confidence when they meet the Raiders at 7:30 tonight in Autrey Gym. The Raiders will take a 7-4 Southwest Conference mark into the tilt while the Owls are 2-8.

"I think our guys realize what we're up against," said Myers. "They know we've got to be ready to play. We have a lot of respect for Rice — I shouldn't have to do a lot of talking to get them ready."

But the Owls close game in the Coliseum should also give Rice an added edge — or so says Myers.

"On the other hand, that last game will also give them a lot of confidence," he said. "They believe that they can win this one."

In the Owls last outing, they defeated Wright State 83-79 in a non-conference game. In that contest, the Owls hit a phenomenal 71 percent of their shots from the field in the second half. For the game, Rice hit 62.2 percent.

Leading the Rice attack in that game was 6-5 sophomore Ricky Pierce who scored 26 points. Pierce also had 28 in a losing cause against Baylor last Saturday. He leads the Owls in scoring with a 17.1 per game average and in SWC play has been scoring right at 20 points an outing.

Others averaging in double figures for the Owls are 6-5 guard Bobby Tudor (11.7) and 6-8 forward Kenny Austin (11.2). The other Owl starters are 6-8 freshman center Robert Shaw and 5-10 point guard Anthony DeCello. First off the bench is 6-6 Brian Burns.

"That last game with Wright State should give us some confidence," said Owl boss Mike Schuler. "We started shooting the ball like we are capable of doing."

The Owls did not play well in a regionally televised loss to Baylor and could hit only 36 percent of their field goal efforts. Both Rice conference wins have come against TCU.

"We'll need to play better defense against Rice than we did last time," said Tech's Myers. "I know that's all I've been talking about lately, but our overall team defense is what enabled us to win our last two games (against TCU and A&M)."

"Pierce, Tudor and Austin are three outstanding players," Myers added. "But Austin is the guy that can kill you if he comes up with a big game."

Austin, a 6-8 freshman from Los Angeles, has played well at times this year (he scored 20 in the Owls 60-59 win over TCU a week ago) but he has been erratic most of the year.

The Raiders will open with their set lineup of Kent Williams and Jeff Taylor at the guards; David Little and Ben Hill on the wings; and Ralph Brewster on the post. Thad Sanders, Leslie Nichols and Steve Smith are also expected to see action for the Raiders.

After tonight's contest with Rice, the Raiders will drive to Waco for a Saturday night battle with Baylor. Myers says both games are important as far as the SWC post-season tournament is concerned.

"Right now you've got two or three teams fighting for every spot," Myers said. "Texas and Houston are fighting with us for that third place spot and SMU and Baylor are fighting for the sixth spot.

"Everybody needs to win now and every game has become crucial," he added. "We can't afford to get lax and we can't afford to go so overboard on defense that our offense slips.

"You see teams go backwards sometimes," Myers said thoughtfully, "and they start playing worse. Hopefully that's already happened to us — and we're past that."

Last Thursday's loss to Houston was the Raiders third in a row, but Tech came back to defeat TCU and league-leading Texas A&M at home. With their 7-4 record, the Raiders have a one-game lead over Texas for third place — the Longhorns are 6-5 in SWC play.

Of the Raiders four SWC losses, three have come on the road.

Golden Gloves Tickets Now Available

Tickets are now on sale for next week's Golden Gloves regional boxing tournament to be held at the Lubbock Civic Center.

The tournament is scheduled for Feb. 14, 15 and 16 with fight action beginning at 7:30 p.m. each of those days.

Tickets, priced at $3, $4 and $5, can be purchased at Oshman's Sporting Goods, Athletic Supply, Inc., Video Cassettes, Etc., and the Civic Center box office.

Approximately 120 amateur boxers from the South Plains will compete in the event and hope to continue on to the Golden Gloves state tournament.

Tasker Legend — Part Two

"YOU CAN WALK IN MY tracks," sings Jerry Lee Lewis, "but you can't fill my shoes."

Sez you, Jerry Lee.

Tim Tasker certainly knows where "The Killer" is coming from. Sons of legends usually do.

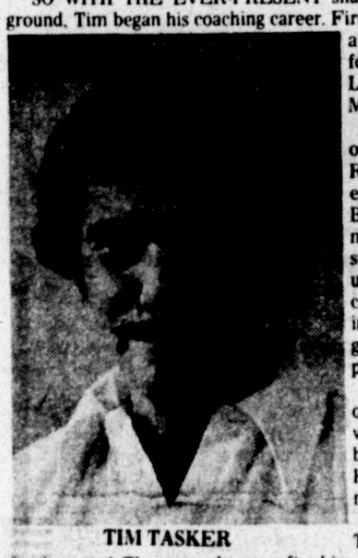
Tasker is a certified SOL, all right. His father, Hobbs basketball coach Ralph Tasker, wears a size 16, double D wingtip in the high school basketball world. Answer these. How many men have gyms named after them? And while they're still kicking, at that?

Ralph Tasker for one.

With that staring Tim in the face, no one would have blamed him if he'd decided on selling industrial supplies after graduating from New Mexico State. Instead, he hopped into the nearest pair of doubleknit shorts and started drawing a bunch of Xs and Os on locker room walls.

Apparently, full-court presses and double overtimes were in Tim's blood. Life's calling, if you will.

SO WITH THE EVER-PRESENT shadow of daddy Ralph in the background, Tim began his coaching career. First as an assistant at NMSU, then for a brief stretch at El Paso Irvin High, followed by a couple of seasons in Levelland and finally winding up at Monterey.



TIM TASKER

Besides the same last name and one-time identical mailing address, Ralph and Tim also have something else in common — both are winners. But while Ralph has long-since made a name for himself as a highly successful boys' coach, Tim is gradually becoming known as a top girls' coach. The younger Tasker is beating down his own trail in the same game. Only the gender of the participants has has changed.

Although some SOL's might take offense to a continuing comparison with their father, mother, sister or brother, Tim is quite the opposite. He welcomes it. To Tim, it's the ultimate compliment.

"I think he's the best," nodded Tim. "There's no doubt about that. Look around. They named a gym after him. That's quite a compliment."

TIM EVEN GOES AS FAR to admit that he patterns both his off-and on-court basketball philosphies after his dad's. It's worked for Ralph, contends Tim, so it can work for him, too. It's your basic goose and gander game plan, all over again.

"As far as Xs and Os go," continued Tim, "everything is exactly the same. . .exactly. We may differ on a few things, but not many."

Basketball, according to the Book of Tasker, consists of two things — hard work during practice and a running, wide-open attack come game time. The Plainsmen and Hobbs Eagles exit the yellowdog with the trottle wide open. Slow down offense isn't in either's vocabulary. Bite your tongue.

And Tim believes hurry-up is the only way to play, particularly in the girls' game. That philsophy, plus "the best bunch of girls a coach could ever ask for" . has propelled the Plainsmen to a 25-2 season record in Tim's first year. Tim also dismisses the fact that girls' basketball is a spectator sport matched only by water ballet for pure drudgery. This season, the Plainsmen have scored an average of 77 points an outing. Things haven't been dull. No one sits on their hands at home games. Neck cramps come with the territory.

TIM DOESN'T WORRY ABOUT getting the "girls'-coach" tag slapped under his name. If for some reason (and he doesn't see one right now) he decides to re-enter the boys' ranks, he doesn't see any problems at all. Once a girls' coach, not always a girls' coach, he figures. The game's the same, he says, just the uniforms are different.

"I don't see any difference as long as your a winner," explained Tasker. "And getting to the final four (of the state basketball tournament) is a accomplishment (in either league). That speaks for itself. But I'm sure there's a stigma about being a girls' coach. There shouldn't be. It doesn't make sense."

And Tim, not one to sit idlely, admits sometimes the girls' programs are treated like leper colonies.

"We're overlooked," stated Tim, "by the media and all. We take a backseat to the boys. And it shouldn't be like that."

Asked if the girls are sometimes treated like second-rate citizens, Tim said: "Yes."

The way he plans on improving the situation in Lubbock is to bring more respectability to the game. That's done, he said, by winning a state championship.

A difficult task.

Thomason's Hot Hand Pulls MHS From Fire

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

For awhile Tuesday night it looked like Monterey's conference winning streak was about to be put on permanent hold. It appeared No. 23 was the end of the line for the Plainsmen.

The Plainsmen, swarmed all night by an alert Lubbock High defense, had been held to just nine points in the first half. A Billy Breedlove bucket early in the second period had kept the Plainsmen from being shut out in the second quarter.

Trav Clardy, Monterey's 6-6 senior center, who averages over 20 points a contest, was scoreless for more than 16 minutes. And Lubbock owned a four-point lead, 13-9.

But just when things seemed their darkest for MHS, Greg Thomason came in to turn on the lights. Thomason, this week's Avalanche-Journal AAAA player of the week, hit all 10 of Monterey's third-period points to help lead MHS to a 39-35District 4-AAAA win over the Westerners in overtime.

Thomason edged out teammate Steve Wooten and Westerner Kirk Cole for the weekly honor.

Against LHS, Thomason was Monterey's leading scorer with 14 points. It was Thomason's shooting from the 12-to 14-foot range that helped open the middle of the lane for MHS' big men to work. Until Thomason started hitting in the third quarter, MHS had failed to penetrate LHS' stubborn defense. After that, however, the Plainsmen got close-range buckets from Clardy and Gary Hodges during the final period.

Meanwhile, Wooten scored all eight of Monterey's overtime points to lend a big hand in the victory. He connected on a 15-footer with 2:20 left in the fifth period and then came back two minutes later with a four-point play. The four points, which came after he hit a layup and a pair of free throws following an intentional foul, put MHS up 37-33.

Cole, the biggest man in LHS' lineup at 6-3, led the Westerner defense that shut down Monterey completely. The Plainsmen hit only 17-of-41 shots from the field and five-of-11 free throws. Cole, LHS' second-leading scorer for the evening with nine points, eventually fouled out of the game, however.

Young Miss Holladay Brownfield's Honey

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Ask Brownfield coach Vernon Paul about his star player, Marcy Holladay, and he'll tell you what a "super kid" she is.

She'll probably be president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes next year, he'll tell you, and besides that, she's a hard worker who'll stay in the gym as long as he lets her.

But mention her name to any of her District 3-AAA opponents, and all they can talk about are points and rebounds.

Sure enough, Marcy Holladay is leading the area in scoring in her sophomore year with a 22.2 points per game average. And she's the fourth-leading rebounder with 11.3 boards a game.

But she topped even those statistics last weekend. Miss Holladay scored 23 points against both Sweetwater and Snyder, two of the top three teams in that district, and pulled down a total of 37 rebounds.

Miss Holladay and the Cubs split, winning Tuesday night's clash with Sweetwater 46-44 and losing to Snyder 46-38 in overtime.

Those performances are more than enough to earn Miss Holladay The Avalanche-Journal's AAA player of the week award in the girls' ranks.

The 5-foot-10 sophomore is one of the main reasons Brownfield has done so well this year, the Cubs' first varsity season. Records of 10-13 overall and 2-4 in league play may not sound like much, but for the first season around the District 3-AAA circuit, it's impressive.

In the Snyder game, Miss Holladay popped in 23 points and dominated the boards, pulling down 21 rebounds. In the win over Sweetwater, she got another 23 points and 16 rebounds.

But life isn't all sunshine and tip-ins for this week's MVP. Seems people think she's a tomboy because of her athletic talent.

"Everybody thinks I'm a tomboy and everything, but it doesn't bother me that much," she said.

This weekend's top boys' performance was turned in by Borger's Chester Williams. He tossed in 33 points Tuesday night to lead the Bulldogs past Levelland in a key District 1-AAA win.

That, linked with 26 points against Canyon Friday night in a win that clinched a share of the district's first-half title for the Bulldogs, wrapped up the weekly honor for Williams.

Chaps Host Mary College

The Lubbock Christian College basketball team, loser of its last two Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association games, will break from its conference schedule to host Mary College at 7:30 tonight in the fieldhouse.

The Chaps, 4-3 in the TIAA and 14-14 overall, have lost at home to McMurry (92-77) and Sul Ross (64-62) within the last five days.

"The Mary College game will be a measure of what we're made of," said LCC coach Larry Hays. "Mary has a good solid program and I have a lot of respect for them."

Mary College is located in Bismarck, S.D., and had a 12-13 record entering Wednesday night's game with Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

Mary is led by center 6-5 Mike Capaccio and 6-1 guard Dean Kreitinger.

"Having a non-conference game at this point might be a blessing for us," Hays said. "I'm sure that losing two games in a row in conference will have its effect.

"You don't lose two in a row without it hurting you, somewhat. There's nothing like a win."

The Chaps are expected to start center Kevin Wharton; forward Keith Gardner, and guards Bill McGee, Bruce Carver and Marshall Smith.

Anderson Decides To Attend Baylor

WACO (AP) — Blue chip high school quarterback Alfred Anderson, who passed for 1,580 yards last year, announced Wednesday he would accept a scholarship to play football at Baylor next fall.

Anderson said he had narrowed his choices to Houston and Baylor before finally deciding to stay in his own hometown. Anderson is a senior at Waco Richfield.

He was named the high school player of the year by Texas High School Magazine and was selected on the all-state team by high school coaches.

The 6-foot-2, 200-pound player amassed 523 yards rushing last season and scored 31 touchdowns — 17 passing and 14 rushing.

Raiders Not Interested

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders have as much as said that county supervisors will be wasting their time today in voting on a lease proposal for the National Football League team.

"The proposal has no validity," said Al LoCasale, the executive assistant to the Raiders' head man, Al Davis, after the proposal was made public Tuesday. A copy was taken to the team's office, and a Raiders' representative refused delivery.

The Alameda County Board of Supervisors is expected to approve the proposal in its meeting today, making the offer a formal one.

LCC, UTEP Split Pair Of Contests

EL PASO (Special) — Dave Hanna failed to give up an earned run as Lubbock Christian College defeated the University of Texas-El Paso 4-3 in the first game of a double-header here Wednesday afternoon.

However, in the nightcap, LCC fell for the first time this season, losing to the Miners 8-6 in a game called after five innings because of darkness.

The Chaps are now 3-1 for the year and will return to action Feb. 17 when they travel to Hawkins for a meeting with Jarvis Christian College.

Steve Cargile broke open a 1-1 ball game when he slapped a two-out single to score Tim Leslie in the fourth inning of the first game. Steve Brigante, who drove in three runs for LCC but had two errors that led to three Miner runs, connected for a two-run single with bases loaded to keep the drive alive and led LCC to the win.

Hanna, who gave up only four hits and one walk while striking out five, picked up the win. He was relieved by Chris Cook in the fifth stanza.

LCC gave up five unearned runs in the first inning of the nightcap and lost a race with the sun to come from behind.

The Chaps put together a rally in the top of the fifth inning and came up with three runs, but the comeback was thwarted in the final inning when Tracy Witherspoon flied out to deep center field. Prior to that, Richard Bowles and Toney had slapped home runs.

Kelley Simons was the winning pitcher, Paul Wright the loser.

Smith, Wright Lead Aggies Over SMU

By The Associated Press

The Texas Aggies, as usual, depended on firepower from forwards Rynn Wright and Vernon Smith to carry them to a 67-56 Southwest Conference basketball win Wednesday night over Southern Methodist.

The win gives A&M a 10-1 SWC mark and a temporary half-game lead over Arkansas, which plays at Baylor tonight.

Wright tallied 20 points for A&M, while Smith added 17. Sophomore center Rudy Woods got 10 points, collected nine rebounds and blocked five Mustang shots.

SMU was led by Dave Piehler's 16 points and 15 from guard Billy Allen.

The loss dropped SMU to a 4-8 SWC mark.

A&M led by just three points at halftime, 27-24, but outscored the Mustangs 14-6 in the first 10 minutes of the final period to erase any doubt about the outcome.

The Aggies maintained their lead until SMU closed to within seven in the final 1:15, but SMU was called for offensive goaltending, then coach Sonny Allen drew a bench technical, and the game was on ice for the Aggies.

"SMU played a good game, very deliberate, and they made us work for the win," said A&M coach Shelby Metcalf. "I was impressed with their play.

"In the second half," he continued, "we dropped back and stopped their penetration."

Texas 90, TCU 62

John Danks and Henry Johnson combined for 39 points to lead the Texas Longhorns to a second-half surge that carried them past Texas Christian 90-62 in Southwest Conference basketball Wednesday night.

Danks led the 'Horns with 22 points, and Johnson added 17, as Texas poured it on in the final period.

The Longhorns led by four at halftime, 35-31, and the Horned Frogs were as close as five points with 13 minutes remaining, until Danks, Johnson and freshman LaSalle Thompson put the game away.

Thompson got all of his 12 points in the second half.

Eric Summers led TCU's scoring effort with 17 points, and pulled down nine rebounds.

Texas now has a 7-5 SWC mark now, with a 14-8 overall record. TCU fell to 2-10 and 7-14.

"They're just better than we are," said TCU coach Jim Killingsworth. "We played them well for a while but we finally just wore out. Unless we hit 60 or 70 percent from the field, we're not going to beat a team like Texas."

The Frogs, in fact, hit just 43 percent from the field, while the Longhorns made 53 percent of their floor shots, thanks largely to the accuracy of Danks and Ron Baxter.

Tech Athletic Department Promotes Keith Samples

Texas Tech Athletic Director Dick Tamburo Wednesday announced that Keith Samples, Tech's sports information director for the past two years, has been named to the newly created position of Assistant Athletic Director for Media Relations and Promotions.

In making the announcement, Tamburo said Samples will continue to have direct input into Tech's sports information operation, but would have expanded duties in the areas of promotion, marketing, advertising sales and involvement with radio and television networks for Tech athletics.

"The creation of this new position will be a tremendous plus for the expansion and development of our athletic program," declared Tamburo. "By establishing this position, we are making a conscious effort to continue to be competitive in the Southwest Conference.

"Having Keith work more extensively with promotion projects and with our radio and television projects will speed up the positive growth of our department."

Samples took over the duties of sports information director in January, 1978, after 1½ years as assistant SID at Tech. He began working in athletics at Tech as a student assistant in the sports information office in 1974 and later became a full-time employee after receiving a degree in journalism, with a minor in business.

"I am both happy and excited about the new position," Samples said. "It is a tremendous opportunity for me and I am grateful to Dick Tamburo and Texas Tech for having the confidence in me to let me expand by responsibilities."

LORENZO MAKES REQUEST

Lorenzo High School requests a boys' varsity basketball game, home or away, for Jan. 6, 1981, and girls' and boys' teams to complete its respective fields for the Lorenzo Invitational Dec. 11-13. For further information, contact Larry Birdwell, (806) 634-5592.

Despite a loss of 140 yards net on the ground, quarterback Marc Wilson of Brigham Young was the NCAA total offense leader in 1979 with 3,580 yards.

Barry's Rockets Destroy Nets

By The Associated Press

Rick Barry hit an National Basketball Association record seven three-point baskets and canned a pair of decisive free throws with four seconds to play Wednesday night to lead Houston to a 115-114 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Barry, who led the Rockets with 27 points, hit his first four three-point baskets of the game and finished with seven of nine attempts. He broke the previous record of five which he shared with San Diego's Brian Taylor and Boston's Chris Ford.

Houston led the Nets by seven points, 111-104, with 2:12 left in the game but the Nets rallied to a 113-111 deficit with 49 seconds to play.

After Houston's Tom Henderson blocked a shot by Roger Phegley, Barry sank two free throws for a 115-111 Rocket lead with four seconds to play.

The free throws nullfied a three-point basket by New Jersey's Ed Jordan at the final buzzer.

New Jersey took a 19-7 lead in the first quarter but the Rockets reeled off 10 unanswered points and Barry started his three-point barrage to get the Rockets back in the game.

Phegley led the Nets with 25 points, including 16 in the fourth quarter. Former Rocket Mike Newlin and Jordan each scored 18.

Moses scored 26 points for Houston and Rudy Tomjanovich added 20.

Boston 129, Philadelphia 110

Larry Bird, Nate Archibald and Cedric Maxwell led a furious second-half charge in rallying the Boston Celtics from a 14-point, third-period deficit to a 129-110 National Basketball Association victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Wednesday night.

Bird scored 22 points in the second half while Archibald had all of his game-total 18 points and Maxwell 15 of his total 19 over the final two periods.

Bird finished with 32 points as the Celtics evened their season series with Philadelphia 2-2 and moved two full games ahead of the 76ers in the Atlantic division.

Boston has a 41-13 record, and Philadelphia 39-15, the two best in the NBA.

Milwaukee 111, Cleveland 109

Brian Winters sank a 20-foot jump shot from the top of the key at the buzzer, lifting the Milwaukee Bucks to a 111-109 National Basketball Association victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers Wedesday.

The lead changed hands six times in the closing 2:51, the last when Junior Bridgeman, who finished with 23 points, sank a jump shot to put the Bucks ahead 109-108 with 28 seconds left.

Dave Robisch then missed a jump shot for the Cavaliers, and Milwaukee's Bob Lanier fouled Cleveland's Kenny Carr in the rebound scramble with 11 seconds left.

However, Carr sank only one of three free throws, tying the score at 109-109.

After a Milwaukee time out, Winters took a pass near the top of the key and fired up a shot on what appeared to be a broken play. The ball swished through the net as time expired.

Winters scored 19 points, Quinn Buckner 18 and rookie Pat Cummings a career-high 17 for the Bucks.

Denver 122, Chicago 111

John Roche and newcomer Alex English keyed a fourth-quarter surge as the Denver Nuggets raced to a 122-111 National Basketball Association victory over Chicago in a battle of Midwest Division cellar-dwellers Wednesday.

With the victory, the Nuggets moved ahead of the Bulls and the idle Utah Jazz into third place in the division. Chicago fell to last place.

English, playing his first game for Denver since being acquired from the Indiana Pacers last Friday, scored 29 points and Roche added 18 as the Nuggets pulled away from the Bulls.

The two clubs battled back and forth throughout the first half with the Nuggets behind by two at halftime, 54-52. Then, in the third quarter, the Nuggets took advantage of Chicago center Artis Gilmore's absence to pull to a 9-point lead 86-77 at the end of three periods.

Then English and Roche took over in the fourth quarter as the Bulls dropped their sixth straight game.

Dan Issel led the Nuggets with 32 points and George Johnson added 18. Reggie Theus led Chicago with 21 points.

Thomason's Hot Hand Pulls MHS From Fire

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

For awhile Tuesday night it looked like Monterey's conference winning streak was about to be put on permanent hold. It appeared No. 23 was the end of the line for the Plainsmen.

The Plainsmen, swarmed all night by an alert Lubbock High defense, had been held to just nine points in the first half. A Billy Breedlove bucket early in the second period had kept the Plainsmen from being shut out in the second quarter.

Trav Clardy, Monterey's 6-6 senior center, who averages over 20 points a contest, was scoreless for more than 16 minutes. And Lubbock owned a four-point lead, 13-9.

But just when things seemed their darkest for MHS, Greg Thomason came in to turn on the lights. Thomason, this week's Avalanche-Journal AAAA player of the week, hit all 10 of Monterey's third-period points to help lead MHS to a 39-35District 4-AAAA win over the Westerners in overtime.

Thomason edged out teammate Steve Wooten and Westerner Kirk Cole for the weekly honor.

Against LHS, Thomason was Monterey's leading scorer with 14 points. It was Thomason's shooting from the 12-to 14-foot range that helped open the middle of the lane for MHS' big men to work. Until Thomason started hitting in the third quarter, MHS had failed to penetrate LHS' stubborn defense. After that, however, the Plainsmen got close-range buckets from Clardy and Gary Hodges during the final period.

Meanwhile, Wooten scored all eight of Monterey's overtime points to lend a big hand in the victory. He connected on a 15-footer with 2:20 left in the fifth period and then came back two minutes later with a four-point play. The four points, which came after he hit a layup and a pair of free throws following an intentional foul, put MHS up 37-33.

Cole, the biggest man in LHS' lineup at 6-3, led the Westerner defense that shut down Monterey completely. The Plainsmen hit only 17-of-41 shots from the field and five-of-11 free throws. Cole, LHS' second-leading scorer for the evening with nine points, eventually fouled out of the game, however.

Young Miss Holladay Brownfield's Honey

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Ask Brownfield coach Vernon Paul about his star player, Marcy Holladay, and he'll tell you what a "super kid" she is.

She'll probably be president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes next year, he'll tell you, and besides that, she's a hard worker who'll stay in the gym as long as he lets her.

But mention her name to any of her District 3-AAA opponents, and all they can talk about are points and rebounds.

Sure enough, Marcy Holladay is leading the area in scoring in her sophomore year with a 22.2 points per game average. And she's the fourth-leading rebounder with 11.3 boards a game.

But she topped even those statistics last weekend. Miss Holladay scored 23 points against both Sweetwater and Snyder, two of the top three teams in that district, and pulled down a total of 37 rebounds.

Miss Holladay and the Cubs split, winning Tuesday night's clash with Sweetwater 46-44 and losing to Snyder 46-38 in overtime.

Those performances are more than enough to earn Miss Holladay The Avalanche-Journal's AAA player of the week award in the girls' ranks.

The 5-foot-10 sophomore is one of the main reasons Brownfield has done so well this year, the Cubs' first varsity season. Records of 10-13 overall and 2-4 in league play may not sound like much, but for the first season around the District 3-AAA circuit, it's impressive.

In the Snyder game, Miss Holladay popped in 23 points and dominated the boards, pulling down 21 rebounds. In the win over Sweetwater, she got another 23 points and 16 rebounds.

But life isn't all sunshine and tip-ins for this week's MVP. Seems people think she's a tomboy because of her athletic talent.

"Everybody thinks I'm a tomboy and everything, but it doesn't bother me that much," she said.

This weekend's top boys' performance was turned in by Borger's Chester Williams. He tossed in 33 points Tuesday night to lead the Bulldogs past Levelland in a key District 1-AAA win.

That, linked with 26 points against Canyon Friday night in a win that clinched a share of the district's first-half title for the Bulldogs, wrapped up the weekly honor for Williams.

Chaps Host Mary College

The Lubbock Christian College basketball team, loser of its last two Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association games, will break from its conference schedule to host Mary College at 7:30 tonight in the fieldhouse.

The Chaps, 4-3 in the TIAA and 14-14 overall, have lost at home to McMurry (92-77) and Sul Ross (64-62) within the last five days.

"The Mary College game will be a measure of what we're made of," said LCC coach Larry Hays. "Mary has a good solid program and I have a lot of respect for them."

Mary College is located in Bismarck, S.D., and had a 12-13 record entering Wednesday night's game with Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

Mary is led by center 6-5 Mike Capaccio and 6-1 guard Dean Kreitinger.

"Having a non-conference game at this point might be a blessing for us," Hays said. "I'm sure that losing two games in a row in conference will have its effect.

"You don't lose two in a row without it hurting you, somewhat. There's nothing like a win."

The Chaps are expected to start center Kevin Wharton; forward Keith Gardner, and guards Bill McGee, Bruce Carver and Marshall Smith.

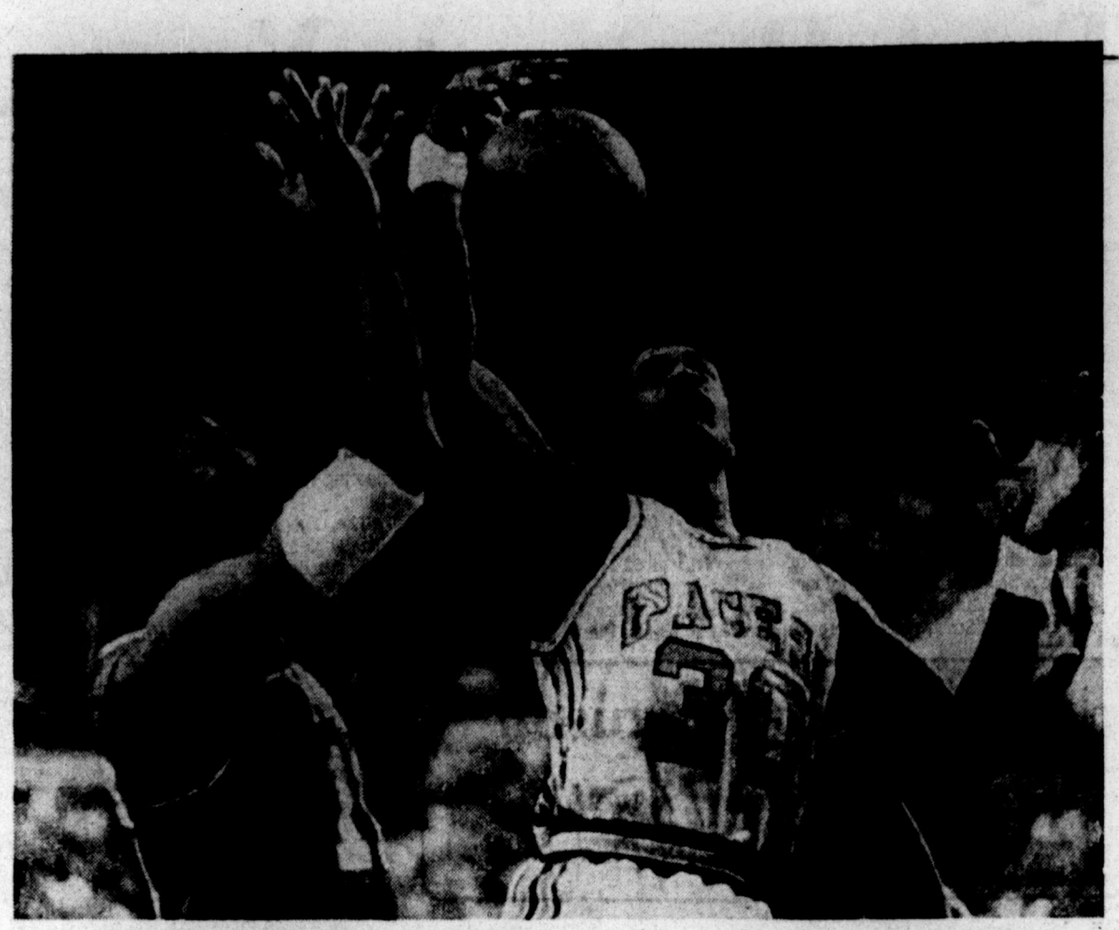
Anderson Decides To Attend Baylor

WACO (AP) — Blue chip high school quarterback Alfred Anderson, who passed for 1,580 yards last year, announced Wednesday he would accept a scholarship to play football at Baylor next fall.

Anderson said he had narrowed his choices to Houston and Baylor before finally deciding to stay in his own hometown. Anderson is a senior at Waco Richfield.

He was named the high school player of the year by Texas High School Magazine and was selected on the all-state team by high school coaches.

The 6-foot-2, 200-pound player amassed 523 yards rushing last season and scored 31 touchdowns — 17 passing and 14 rushing.



BIG MAC IS BACK — Indiana Pacer forward George McGinnis (30) goes up over Philadelphia's Caldwell Jones (left) to pull in this first-quarter rebound during Tuesday's NBA contest. McGinnis last wore a Pacers' jersey in 1976, before he signed with Philadelphia as a free agent. He was traded to Denver two seasons ago, and was shipped to Indiana by the Nuggets Monday for Alex English. (AP Laserphoto)

Raiders Not Interested

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders have as much as said that county supervisors will be wasting their time today in voting on a lease proposal for the National Football League team.

"The proposal has no validity," said Al LoCasale, the executive assistant to the Raiders' head man, Al Davis, after the proposal was made public Tuesday. A copy was taken to the team's office, and a Raiders' representative refused delivery.

The Alameda County Board of Supervisors is expected to approve the proposal in its meeting today, making the offer a formal one.

LCC, UTEP Split Pair Of Contests

EL PASO (Special) — Dave Hanna failed to give up an earned run as Lubbock Christian College defeated the University of Texas-El Paso 4-3 in the first game of a double-header here Wednesday afternoon.

However, in the nightcap, LCC fell for the first time this season, losing to the Miners 8-6 in a game called after five innings because of darkness.

The Chaps are now 3-1 for the year and will return to action Feb. 17 when they travel to Hawkins for a meeting with Jarvis Christian College.

Steve Cargile broke open a 1-1 ball game when he slapped a two-out single to score Tim Leslie in the fourth inning of the first game. Steve Brigante, who drove in three runs for LCC but had two errors that led to three Miner runs, connected for a two-run single with bases loaded to keep the drive alive and led LCC to the win.

Hanna, who gave up only four hits and one walk while striking out five, picked up the win. He was relieved by Chris Cook in the fifth stanza.

LCC gave up five unearned runs in the first inning of the nightcap and lost a race with the sun to come from behind.

The Chaps put together a rally in the top of the fifth inning and came up with three runs, but the comeback was thwarted in the final inning when Tracy Witherspoon flied out to deep center field. Prior to that, Richard Bowles and Toney had slapped home runs.

Kelley Simons was the winning pitcher, Paul Wright the loser.

Smith, Wright Lead Aggies Over SMU

By The Associated Press

The Texas Aggies, as usual, depended on firepower from forwards Rynn Wright and Vernon Smith to carry them to a 67-56 Southwest Conference basketball win Wednesday night over Southern Methodist.

The win gives A&M a 10-1 SWC mark and a temporary half-game lead over Arkansas, which plays at Baylor tonight.

Wright tallied 20 points for A&M, while Smith added 17. Sophomore center Rudy Woods got 10 points, collected nine rebounds and blocked five Mustang shots.

SMU was led by Dave Piehler's 16 points and 15 from guard Billy Allen.

The loss dropped SMU to a 4-8 SWC mark.

A&M led by just three points at halftime, 27-24, but outscored the Mustangs 14-6 in the first 10 minutes of the final period to erase any doubt about the outcome.

The Aggies maintained their lead until SMU closed to within seven in the final 1:15, but SMU was called for offensive goaltending, then coach Sonny Allen drew a bench technical, and the game was on ice for the Aggies.

"SMU played a good game, very deliberate, and they made us work for the win," said A&M coach Shelby Metcalf. "I was impressed with their play.

"In the second half," he continued, "we dropped back and stopped their penetration."

Texas 90, TCU 62

John Danks and Henry Johnson combined for 39 points to lead the Texas Longhorns to a second-half surge that carried them past Texas Christian 90-62 in Southwest Conference basketball Wednesday night.

Danks led the 'Horns with 22 points, and Johnson added 17, as Texas poured it on in the final period.

The Longhorns led by four at halftime, 35-31, and the Horned Frogs were as close as five points with 13 minutes remaining, until Danks, Johnson and freshman LaSalle Thompson put the game away.

Thompson got all of his 12 points in the second half.

Eric Summers led TCU's scoring effort with 17 points, and pulled down nine rebounds.

Texas now has a 7-5 SWC mark now, with a 14-8 overall record. TCU fell to 2-10 and 7-14.

"They're just better than we are," said TCU coach Jim Killingsworth. "We played them well for a while but we finally just wore out. Unless we hit 60 or 70 percent from the field, we're not going to beat a team like Texas."

The Frogs, in fact, hit just 43 percent from the field, while the Longhorns made 53 percent of their floor shots, thanks largely to the accuracy of Danks and Ron Baxter.

Tech Athletic Department Promotes Keith Samples

Texas Tech Athletic Director Dick Tamburo Wednesday announced that Keith Samples, Tech's sports information director for the past two years, has been named to the newly created position of Assistant Athletic Director for Media Relations and Promotions.

In making the announcement, Tamburo said Samples will continue to have direct input into Tech's sports information operation, but would have expanded duties in the areas of promotion, marketing, advertising sales and involvement with radio and television networks for Tech athletics.

"The creation of this new position will be a tremendous plus for the expansion and development of our athletic program," declared Tamburo. "By establishing this position, we are making a conscious effort to continue to be competitive in the Southwest Conference.

"Having Keith work more extensively with promotion projects and with our radio and television projects will speed up the positive growth of our department."

Samples took over the duties of sports information director in January, 1978, after 1½ years as assistant SID at Tech. He began working in athletics at Tech as a student assistant in the sports information office in 1974 and later became a full-time employee after receiving a degree in journalism, with a minor in business.

"I am both happy and excited about the new position," Samples said. "It is a tremendous opportunity for me and I am grateful to Dick Tamburo and Texas Tech for having the confidence in me to let me expand by responsibilities."

LORENZO MAKES REQUEST

Lorenzo High School requests a boys' varsity basketball game, home or away, for Jan. 6, 1981, and girls' and boys' teams to complete its respective fields for the Lorenzo Invitational Dec. 11-13. For further information, contact Larry Birdwell, (806) 634-5592.

Despite a loss of 140 yards net on the ground, quarterback Marc Wilson of Brigham Young was the NCAA total offense leader in 1979 with 3,580 yards.

Barry's Rockets Destroy Nets

By The Associated Press

Rick Barry hit an National Basketball Association record seven three-point baskets and canned a pair of decisive free throws with four seconds to play Wednesday night to lead Houston to a 115-114 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Barry, who led the Rockets with 27 points, hit his first four three-point baskets of the game and finished with seven of nine attempts. He broke the previous record of five which he shared with San Diego's Brian Taylor and Boston's Chris Ford.

Houston led the Nets by seven points, 111-104, with 2:12 left in the game but the Nets rallied to a 113-111 deficit with 49 seconds to play.

After Houston's Tom Henderson blocked a shot by Roger Phegley, Barry sank two free throws for a 115-111 Rocket lead with four seconds to play.

The free throws nullified a three-point basket by New Jersey's Ed Jordan at the final buzzer.

New Jersey took a 19-7 lead in the first quarter but the Rockets reeled off 10 unanswered points and Barry started his three-point barrage to get the Rockets back in the game.

Phegley led the Nets with 25 points, including 16 in the fourth quarter. Former Rocket Mike Newlin and Jordan each scored 18.

Moses scored 26 points for Houston and Rudy Tomjanovich added 20.

Boston 129, Philadelphia 110

Larry Bird, Nate Archibald and Cedric Maxwell led a furious second-half charge in rallying the Boston Celtics from a 14-point, third-period deficit to a 129-110 National Basketball Association victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Wednesday night.

Bird scored 22 points in the second half while Archibald had all of his game-total 18 points and Maxwell 15 of his total 19 over the final two periods.

Bird finished with 32 points as the Celtics evened their season series with Philadelphia 2-2 and moved two full games ahead of the 76ers in the Atlantic division.

Boston has a 41-13 record, and Philadelphia 39-15, the two best in the NBA.

Milwaukee 111, Cleveland 109

Brian Winters sank a 20-foot jump shot from the top of the key at the buzzer, lifting the Milwaukee Bucks to a 111-109 National Basketball Association victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers Wedesday.

The lead changed hands six times in the closing 2:51, the last when Junior Bridgeman, who finished with 23 points, sank a jump shot to put the Bucks ahead 109-108 with 28 seconds left.

Dave Robisch then missed a jump shot for the Cavaliers, and Milwaukee's Bob Lanier fouled Cleveland's Kenny Carr in the rebound scramble with 11 seconds left.

However, Carr sank only one of three free throws, tying the score at 109-109.

After a Milwaukee time out, Winters took a pass near the top of the key and fired up a shot on what appeared to be a broken play. The ball swished through the net as time expired.

Winters scored 19 points, Quinn Buckner 18 and rookie Pat Cummings a career-high 17 for the Bucks.

Denver 122, Chicago 111

John Roche and newcomer Alex English keyed a fourth-quarter surge as the Denver Nuggets raced to a 122-111 National Basketball Association victory over Chicago in a battle of Midwest Division cellar-dwellers Wednesday.

With the victory, the Nuggets moved ahead of the Bulls and the idle Utah Jazz into third place in the division. Chicago fell to last place.

English, playing his first game for Denver since being acquired from the Indiana Pacers last Friday, scored 29 points and Roche added 18 as the Nuggets pulled away from the Bulls.

The two clubs battled back and forth throughout the first half with the Nuggets behind by two at halftime, 54-52. Then, in the third quarter, the Nuggets took advantage of Chicago center Artis Gilmore's absence to pull to a 9-point lead 86-77 at the end of three periods.

Then English and Roche took over in the fourth quarter as the Bulls dropped their sixth straight game.

Killanin Promotes IOC Meeting

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, has drummed up big attendance for this weekend's vital discussion on the threatened boycott of the Olympic Games in Moscow.

Of the 89 members of the IOC, 76 are expected for the session which precedes the XIII Winter Olympics at Lake Placid. That is far more than would have been expected to come if the Russians had not intervened in Afghanistan and sparked off an Olympic crisis.

Killanin has personally canvassed members and urged them to attend. He is expected to call for a solid vote in favor of resisting pressure from governments and going ahead with the Moscow Olympics as planned.

Before the session, the 66-year-old Irish president of the IOC will have private talks with Robert Kane and Col. Don F. Miller, president and executive director respectively of the U.S. Olympic Committee, and with Russian sports officials.

The USOC has promised President Jimmy Carter it will relay his request that the Olympics in Moscow be moved or canceled if Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan. Carter has said he would ask the USOC not to send a team to Moscow if that condition is not met.

Neither Kane nor Miller are members of the IOC. There will be no resolution from the USOC on the agenda. The 140 National Olympic Committees do not file motions for IOC sessions.

The IOC is self-elected and self-perpetuating and is composed of hand-picked individual members who in theory are not answerable to any national bodies. It has two American members, Douglas Roby and Julian K. Roosevelt, neither of whom support Carter's plan.

Roosevelt denounced Carter's boycott call as "the way of a coward. . .It disturbs me greatly that the politicians and our so-called leaders in Washington must so openly admit defeat in their own bailiwick — i.e., politically, diplomatically, economically and militarily, in this world situation, and call upon the Olympic movement, which has been a force for good in the world for 80 years, to pull their fat out of the fire."

The IOC meets annually, but twice in Olympic years — at the Winter Games and at the Summer Games. Normally a lot of members miss the Winter Games — those from Latin American, African, and Asian countries where skiing and skating mean nothing.

This time a 100 percent attendance is expected from the 14 Latin American members. Seven of the 10 members in Africa have said they will come, and seven of 12 from Asia.

The Soviet Union has two members, and there is one IOC member each in Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Romania and Bulgaria. They all are expected. The only absentee from East Europe will be Boris Bakrac of Yugoslavia, who has sent an apology.

The IOC wants to squash the boycott campaign and go ahead with the Games for two reasons, one idealistic, one financial.

The Olympic ideal is that the Games bring the youth of the world together, irrespective of politics, and should be secure from government pressures.

But in addition the IOC stands to lose most of its revenue if the Moscow Games collapse. It takes one third of the money paid for television rights and uses it to pay for its own vast administration costs and to help amateur sport around the world.

NBC, which is paying $35 million for television rights in Moscow plus $52 million for equipment, is insured with Lloyds of London against the non-appearance of a U.S. team and will certainly pull out if there are no American athletes. It has paid most of the IOC's share of the money in installments, and the IOC would have to pay it back.

"The IOC is not insured against such a situation," said Monique Berlioux, the director.

Americans Continue Financial Support Of Olympic Teams

NEW YORK (AP) — Even as President Carter was threatening to call for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics, Americans were sending money at "a furious rate" to fund the U.S. Olympic team, says an analyst of the U.S. Olympic Committee' fund-raising figures.

Bu Alan Sack, senior vice president of Hub Mail Advertising in Boston, said Wednesday it is still too early to tell how the boycott threat hanging over the Games will affect the fund-raising efforts.

Sack said he has noticed some falling off in the money received since Carter said the Moscow Games should be canceled, postponed or moved if Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

More Americans were sending more money to fund the U.S. Olympic team during the month of January than they did during the identical period one year ago, Sack said.

Sack's company uses its computer to tally private citizen donations to the USOC, which asked for contributions from 750,000 individuals in letters mailed last October. That total was 35 percent higher than the number of appeals mailed out in October of 1978.

Still, the number of donors in January increasd by 101 percent over January, 1979, while the amount of money raised jumped 114 percent. Last month, the USOC received $291,688.15, while in December the USOC raised nearly $1.4 million from its mail appeals.

Sack points out that month-to-month comparisons are misleading because the number of responses always decline as the October mailing date becomes more distant. The significant comparison, he says, is with similar periods from the year before.

On Jan. 4, Carter, for the first time, raised publicly the possiblity of a boycott. Sack said he was originally surprised by the public's response of sending more money. "It did baffle me initially," he said. "But then I did some serious contemplation, applied some of my psychology background and could come up with only one conclusion.

"It's total conjecture on my part, but I think the whole situation in Iran and then Afghanistan created an enormous frustration on the grass roots level in the U.S. People were asking 'What the heck's happening here?'

"Then they have in their hands this letter from the USOC, which is the equivalent of apple pie, motherhood and the red, white and blue. It's supposed to represent all that's good in America. So they send in the money, perhaps hoping that — by magic — the hostage problems and the Russian troops would go away. It's partly a fantasy, but basically it's a patriotic move."

Sack said Carter's Jan. 20 statement appeared to have some impact on donations. "There's been some effect, but how much is hard to tell. We need at least three weeks to get a proper read. Responses are still coming in now at at a greater rate than they did a year ago at this time. But I see a slackening; they're not coming in at the furious rate they were a month ago."

Where does this leave the USOC?

Five years ago, the USOC prepared its budget for the 1977-80 Olympic period and decided it needed to raise $44 million. The costs for the actual two-week periods in February in Lake Placid and July in Moscow accounted for less than 10 percent of the four-year budget.

E. Ray Mueller, the USOC's director of fund raising, said the expected cost of transporting and taking care of the U.S. team at Lake Placid was $950,000. He said the expected Moscow cost $2.4 million. "Both will go above that," he said. "There's the higher cost of airfare and everything else. We didn't include an inflation factor when our budget was made up five years ago."

According to Mueller, the USOC is about $10-11 million shy of its $44 million goal. Although Olympic years are traditionally the richest for contributions, this has already been a strange Olympic year.

The USOC doesn't want the donations to dry up. There are bills to be paid and athletes to be trained. And even if the U.S. doesn't go to Moscow, some form of alternative Games for American athletes has become a Presidential priority.

"At this point, it (the boycott threat) has not impaired our fund-raising efforts," Mueller said from the USOC's headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo. "A lot of our fundraising efforts, like jogathons and black-tie dinners are still planned, but right now they're on hold. How do you promote for something in May or June with the uncertain situation now?

"In any case, money is needed for our athletes' future training. We will do something to honor our Olympians. Our problem is to convince our athletes to keep training. We've told our athletes to continue training and we've told our national governing bodies to go ahead with the trials. We still need the money."

A lack of funds isn't likely, particularly since corporate America has rallied around the Olympic flag. Approximately 75 companies have paid at least $50,000 to align themselves with the USOC. These contracts, making companies official USOC suppliers or permitting promotional campaigns tied to the USOC, supply some guaranteed funds.

Taiwan Athletes Refused Admittance

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Seven Taiwanese athletes made a symbolic attempt to enter the 1980 Winter Olympics Wednesday, but were turned away on grounds that they were not complying with a new ruling regarding their name, flag and anthem.

The athletes, plus an attache and spokesman, arrived at the credentials center outside the Olympic Village, and were turned away after credentials officials consulted their superiors.

Hillary Cole, the reception supervisor, declined comment, and the chief of protocol, Stephen Stanton, could not be reached for an explanation.

Attache Kon-Son Ha said the Taiwan athletes object to an International Olympic Committee resolution passed in Nagoya, Japan, last fall which bars them from using the name China, or their traditional flag or anthem. The resolution says they may compete under some other conditions.

"The Republic of China Olympic Committee believes that these conditions violate the IOC's own charter and that they discriminate unfairly against Republic of China athletes in violation of United States law," said Michael Lee, secretary-general of the ROCOC.

While Swiss courts have refused to overturn the resolution, another suit is pending in state Supreme Court in nearby Plattsburgh. There, a Taiwan athlete has filed suit against the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee, seeking to carry his own national banner into the competitions which start next week.

A group of 28 athletes from mainland China was admitted to the village last week. They are mainly skaters and Nordic skiers.

Coalition's Demise Enables Dallas To Land Club

By ALEX SACHARE
Associated Press Writer

It will not go down in the annals of history as one of Washington's most memorable caucuses.

The "unholy six" is the way they were dubbed, and give or take one or two, the owners of those National Basketball Association teams who opposed expansion to Dallas gathered last Friday night in rooms 2149-50 of the Washington Hilton.

The strategy session was hosted by Jerry Buss, owner of the Los Angeles Lakers. Among others in attendance when the meeting started around 9 p.m. were Harry Mangurian and Red Auerbach of the Boston Celtics, Bill Wirtz of the Chicago Bulls, Mike Burke of the New York Knicks and Alan Cohen of the New Jersey Nets. During the night they were joined by Mike Gearon and Stan Kasten of the Atlanta Hawks and Joe Taub of the Nets.

They met to discuss what they would do the following day when the NBA Board of Governors met to discuss the expansion committee's recommendation that the league grant an expansion franchise to Dallas. All had their objections, many of which had been discussed when some of them got together at New York's fashionable 21 Club seven weeks earlier.

Some objected to the financial terms, under which only $3.5 million of the $12-million expansion fee would be paid this year, with the rest spread over six years interest-free.

"The $12 million is a joke. It's a fictitious price and we all know it," said Mangurian.

"So little money is up front, it makes no economic sense for us to participate in expansion," said Buss. "And where is the scrutiny? When I came in I had to put $10 million on the table, and they kept me sitting around for 16 hours anyway."

Others objected to the method of stocking the expansion team. "The way it's set up, they'll draft a lot of free agents and then collect draft choices as compensation when they can't sign them," said Auerbach. "They'll get three or four first-round choices next year and all of a sudden they'll be a power, because that's how you build a team."

Others feared expansion would be bad for the owners' image, making them look greedy.

Or they didn't like the idea of sharing their television revenues with the newcomer.

Or they thought the league already was over-expanded. "Instead of adding, we should be subtracting," said Mangurian.

And others wanted to use their expansion votes as trade-offs, to gain concessions on other matters.

When the meeting broke up, around 12:45 a.m., it looked like New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Boston, New Jersey and Atlanta were all going to vote against expansion. Philadelphia was also expected to vote no. That's seven negative votes, and only six were needed to block the move.

But it didn't happen. The coalition fell apart. When the vote was taken, Dallas got its franchise by an 18-3-1 vote.

And those numbers are misleading.

Seattle voted no, but actually favored expansion. Sonics owner Sam Schulman cast his vote as a protest over the board's changing the terms under which Dallas would be admitted, and lambasted those who advocated the change during the meeting.

The abstention was cast by Cleveland's Nick Mileti, who felt it inappropriate to vote since he was in the process of selling his share of the club. Had his vote been crucial, he would have voted in favor of expansion.

So of the "unholy six," only two voted no — New York and Chicago. Once again a group of NBA owners, highly opinionated men who pride themselves on their individualism, were unable to band together in a common cause.

It represents a victory for NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, well known as a mediator and worker of compromises.

This time the compromise involved new expansion terms, under which half of the $12-million entry fee would be required up front, with the rest due within five years, with interest. Existing teams would be permitted to protect eight men from the expansion draft, instead of seven, and if Dallas picked a free agent and failed to sign him, it would not receive any compensation if he signed elsewhere.

These new terms did not leave a pleasant taste in everyone's mouth. Schulman wasn't the only one who was unhappy. "It's a second-class way of doing business," said one owner. "It's pitiful to make (Norm) Sonju go back to his partners, hat in hand, for more money," said another.

But the point of a compromise is not necessarily to please everybody. It's enough to create a situation that is not displeasant enough to arouse opposition, and that's what the new expansion terms did. They conceded just enough to the anti-expansionists so that they could change their votes without losing face.

Green Begins Defense Of Hawaiian Title

HONOLULU (AP) — With 144 golfers in the field, it will indeed be difficult for Hubert Green to win a third straight Hawaiian Open golf title this week, but he'll be the one most closely watched.

For in this 72-hole tournament that starts today at the Waialae Country Club course, Green holds the record with his 267 last year despite soggy conditions. He won the year before with 274.

His 63 over the 7,234-yard (par 36-36-72) layout in the third round, ties him for the best 18 ever here with Jack Nicklaus, Takashi Murakami and George Burns.

The latter, winner of the Bing Crosby event last Sunday, also did it last year but finished only tied for ninth at 275 although only a stroke higher than Green's winning score in 1978.

Green has won $112,556 in five Hawaiian opens, a record for an individual in this tournament. This time the event will be worth $325,000 with $58,500 going to the winner.

Green finished only 19th in the Crosby, yet commented, "I'm hitting the ball from tee to green better than ever, but putting poorly."

Green complained about his putting before last year's tournament and wound up 21 strokes under par.

Nicklaus won't be on hand this time, but 28 of the top 35 on the Professional Golfers Association money list of 1979 will be competing.

Craig Stadler, winner of the Bob Hope Desert Classic and the highest money winner so far in this young season, will also be among the missing.

Green finished 13th on the 1979 list with $183,111. Tom Watson, leader with a record $462,636, and already a winner this year at San Diego, will be in the field for this 15th renewal in Hawaii. Watson, the money leader each of the past three seasons, stands fourth in 1980.

Former winners in the field, in addition to Green, are Bruce Lietzke, who won in 1977, Lee Trevino, 1968, Tom Shaw, 1971, Greer Jones, 1972, and Ben Crenshaw, 1976.

Weather in Honolulu has been ideal the past couple of weeks, but the golfers fully realize the possibility of wind and rain. Saturday's third round last year wad delayed three hours by inclement weather and gusty winds up to 40 miles an hour blew during the final day.

Green, who played with an unorthodox style, said, "I am a low-ball hitter and if the wind is blowing, that will help."

Clements Grants Parole For Ex-Cowboy Hayes

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboy Bob Hayes was granted parole Wednesday by Gov. Bill Clements, 10 months after Hayes was sent to prison on a drug-dealing conviction.

Hayes will not be eligible for release until some time in March, according to a spokesman for the state Board of Pardons and Paroles. She said the board would determine the exact release date.

Clements said he had signed Hayes' parole papers earlier in the afternoon.

"I wrote him that I did so with a real sense of anticipation that with his experiences now, both bad and good, he could be a great influence on young people, not only in Texas but in the entire country," the governor said at an afternoon news conference.

Hayes has served 10 months of a five-year sentence for delivering cocaine to an undercover officer.

The State Board of Pardons and Paroles in early January had recommended Hayes for parole.

Clements said Wednesday he had discussed the mattr with Texas Department of Correctios director W.J. Estelle, who called Hayes a "model prisoner" and performed very well while in prison.

The governor said his decision to sign the parole was consistent with similar cases and Hayes got no special consideration.

Clements also said he had seen reports that Hayes plans to work with the Rev. Jesse Jackson's youth programs, but said he could not verify those reports personally.

HOBBS CLOBBERS ANDREWS

Hobbs, the second-ranked Class AAAA team in New Mexico, won an interstate contest against Andrews' fourth-ranked Class AAA team Tuesday night by a score of 128-108. Andrews' Brian Templeton led all scorers with 32 points. Willie Williams led Hobbs with 20 points. Andrews, which now has a 25-3 record, will play Ector Friday night for the championship of the second half of District 2-AAA competition.

PLAINS BOYS WIN

The Plains boys' team defeated Anton 66-50 and the Anton girls beat the Plains girls 46-45 in District 5-A play Tuesday night.

HOLE-IN-ONE

Mark Jarrett fired a hole-in-one on the 23rd hole at Meadowbrook golf course Wednesday afternoon. Looking on were Hector Flores and Jim Pitifer. The hole is a 289-yard, par four.

Tech President To Speak Before Amarillo Foundation Group

The foundation which donated land for Texas Tech University's medical site in Amarillo will hear Tech's new president, Dr. Lauro Cavazos, speak at the group's annual meeting next week.

Cavazos will address the Amarillo Area Foundation following the annual meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Tascosa Country Club in Amarillo.

Tech regents Clint Formby and James Snyder also will attend the meeting. Jim Matthews, executive director of the foundation, said Tech medical school officials have also been invited.

Cavazos is dean of Tufts University School of Medicine at Boston and will begin his duties as Tech president April 1. He is the first Tech alumnus to serve as president of the university.

The foundation, formed in 1957, supports educational and charitable undertakings, according to its charter.

"One of the most important accomplishments was the acquisition of additional land for Amarillo Medical Center," said Wales Madden Sr., who is the retiring president of the group.

The Amarillo Medical Center includes 18 facilities, one of which is Tech's Regional Academic Health Center.

Matthews explained that the original site contained 407 acres and that within the past two years the foundation has acquired an additional 30.5 acres. He said the foundation does not, and cannot by law, sell land to medicial facilities on the site. "We gave the land to Texas Tech" for the university's regional health facility, he said.

Cavazos will tour the Amarillo Medical Center and many of its facilities Tuesday afternoon before the foundation meeting.

The annual audit and election of board officers will be on the agenda of the meeting. There are 33 members of the board of directors of the foundation, and Matthews said membership includes approximately 186 Panhandle residents.

Collision Of Two Roosevelt School Buses Probed By DPS

The Department of Public Safety Wednesday investigated a collision between two Roosevelt School District buses that was not reported by the bus drivers.

Trooper Ricky Grant said the two drivers did not break the law in not reporting the Tuesday accident, which resulted in minor damage to the two buses and minor injuries to about five children.

He explained that under state law accidents resulting in no injuries and in damage less than $250 do not have to be reported to authorities.

After the accident at about 3:20 p.m. Tuesday, none of the children reported any injury to the drivers, Grant sad.

But later, after the children were taken home, several complained of "sore knees and shoulders," he said. Three children were taken to doctors for treatment, he said.

The accident occurred on FM 1729 about three miles east of Lubbock. Grant explained that one of the buses was following the other.

"There was a disturbance among several students in the second bus and when the driver looked around to see what was going on he ran into the first bus, which had stopped," Grant said.

Grant said there is still a possibility that the drver of the second bus might be ticketed because of the accident.

Doctor Awarded Money For Anguish Suffered

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Supreme Court agreed Wednesday to review decisions awarding a prominent Corpus Christi surgeon $25,000 for the anguish he suffered when he heard a car hit his son and then watched the 11-year-old die.

A March 26 hearing was set on the appeal of the car's driver, James Hamilton Bedgood, and owner, Robert E. Sorenson.

Dr. Herbert Madalin, a chest and heart surgeon, won $20,000 for his anguish and $5,000 for the loss of earning capacity that he blamed on depression over the death of his son, Robert.

A Corpus Christi jury and the Corpus Christi Court of Civil Appeals also said Bedgood and Sorenson must pay an additional $69,000 for Robert's pain and anguish before he died, the Madalin family's probable financial losses from his death and the boy's funeral expenses.

Robert was playing with friends on a frontage road in front of his home on Sept. 14, 1974, when a car struck him and tossed him 60 to 80 feet.

Madalin said he was working in the backyard when he heard the sound of an approaching car. Seconds later, he heard his son scream and then heard a thud "like a watermelon being dropped from a great height."

He rushed out front and found the boy unconscious, bleeding profusely from a torn artery and his face covered with blood.

Madalin said he was with the boy when he died in an ambulance enroute to a hospital.

The Corpus Christi Court of Civil Appeals upheld the mental anguish judgment for Madalin because he was present when his son was killed but cancelled a $25,000 judgment for Mrs. Madalin because she was away from home at the time.

The appeals court said the issue of anguish was properly before the jury even though it was not mentioned in Madalin's original suit.

"Mental anguish, like pain and suffering, is difficult to quantify, and any determination of an award should be left to the intelligence and conscience of the jury," the appeals court said.

Also at issue is whether Madalin should have been allowed to testify, as both physician and father, that he believed Robert suffered both pain and anguish before he passed out.

The appeals court said this was permissible, but Sorenson and Bedgood challenged that finding on appeal.

In other action, the court:

•Dismissed as moot a case in which Mike Emmons, 17, of Pasadena sought to forestall his punishment for wrapping a teacher's house with toilet paper. The State Board of Education upheld the school board's decision to send Emmons to the school district's guidance center for six days.

•Agreed with lower court decisions that the Houston city council lacks the power to disannex the Clear Lake City area or call a disannexation election in response to a petition with 55,000 signatures.

•Ruled the state owes City National Bank of Austin $154,493 in back rent for offices used by the State Commission for the Blind for 13 months after the agency's lease expired in 1975.

Death Row Inmate Granted Second Trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A Death Row inmate, convicted of clubbing a man to death in a crime spree that included raping and robbing the murder victim's date, won the right to a new trial Wednesday because of a faulty indictment.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the Houston murder conviction of Leon Rutherford King in the April 11, 1978, beating death of Michael Clayton Underwood.

The 7-2 decision returns the case to Houston for another trial.

King was convicted of clubbing Underwood to death with a shotgun during the course of a kidnapping, robbery and aggravated rape. A jury found the crime was unprovoked and that King, if allowed to live, would be a continuing threat to society.

Underwoord's date testified they were leaving a nightclub when King and another man accosted them in the parking lot and forced them into a pickup truck at gunpoint.

She said King and his accomplice later stopped the truck and made Underwood get out and lie on his stomach. She said King hit Underwood on the head several times with the shotgun and took money and a cigarette lighter from his body. Subsequently, she said, the two men raped and sodomized her and stole her watch, some earrings, a lipstick and lighter from her purse.

The high court said the trial judge should have granted King's motion to throw out the indictment because it omitted the name of the woman who allegedly was the victim of aggravated rape, robbery and kidnapping.

State law limits the use of the death penalty but allows it in cases where murder was committed during the course of another crime, including robbery, rape and kidnapping.

The court said the indictment probably would have been adequate if it had mentioned only kidnapping and robbery as offenses accompanying Underwood's murder.

But "by virtue of the state's additional allegation of aggravated rape," the indictment also had to give the particulars of that offense, including the victim's name, the court said.

In other decisions, the court:

•Reversed the conviction of Suzanne Schiller Turner of Dallas on charges she falsified Medicaid claims and collected money belonging to Blue Cross-Blue Shield, which operated the medical assistance program for the state. The court said the indictment was faulty because it said the money was stolen from an employee of Blue Cross-Blue Shield, who did not own the funds.

•Upheld the life sentence a Houston jury gave Terry Marini in the 1976 shotgun slaying of Buell Bankston. The court said Marini's blurted confession, "I did it," was admissible.

•Reversed the life sentence given Sam R. Sanders Jr., who killed nurse Steve Lulenski in the emergency room of Brackenridge Hospital in Austin in February 1976. The only issue at trial was whether Sanders was sane, but the trial judge improperly allowed a psychiatrist to tell the jury Sanders killed his uncle in 1971.

•Reversed the aggravated assault conviction of Zebedee Young Jr. in Wichita Falls because the trial judge permitted Young's wife to testify against him.

•Affirmed the arson conviction of Aslone Foy Jr., whom a Houston jury sentenced to three years in prison. The court said it was all right for the trial judge to let Marleon Dugar, whose house was set afire, testify that Foy had threatened her, her husband and her son with a pistol a few weeks before the fire.

•Upheld the 50-year sentence given Earnest Lee Smith by a Dallas jury in the January 1977 shooting death of Bernice Fletcher, a drive-in grocery clerk.

•Ordered a new trial for Julian Lewis, whom a Crockett jury had assessed an eight-year prison sentence in the fatal shooting of R.H. Smith outside a cafe in Grapeland on June 28, 1975. The court said Lewis was denied a fair trial when the judge permitted prosecutors to introduce a witness' written statement that contradicted her previous testimony.

Texas Criminal Appeals Court Overturns Murder Conviction

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday overturned the Hale County murder conviction of Tommy Earl Scott and ordered a new trial.

Scott had been convicted of the shooting death of Edward Glenn Owens on June 11, 1976, and had been sentenced to 50 years in prison.

Scott appealed on grounds that the trial court's charge to the jury was "fundamentally defective" by authorizing conviction "upon a theory not charged in the indictment."

Upon rehearing the case, the appeals court agreed and ordered a new trial.

The indictment alleged that Scott "did . . . unlawfully, knowingly and intentionally cause the death of an individual, Edward Glenn Owens, by shooting him with a gun . . ."

The court's charge instructed the jury to find Scott guilty if the jurors found he had caused Owens' death "by shooting him with a firearm, to wit: a gun, or did then and there intend to cause serious bodily injury to the said Edward Glenn Owens and with said intent to cause such injury did commit an act clearly dangerous to human life, to wit: shooting at Edward Glenn Owens with a gun and causing the death of the said Edward Glenn Owens, as alleged in the indictment . . ."

Robbery Conviction Upheld By Appeals Court

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The robbery conviction and 13-year sentence assessed Victor Briones for his role in the death of a Lubbock nightclub patron was upheld Wednesday by the Court of Criminal Appeals.

The court, in a separate action also ordered a Lubbock County trial court to reconsider its ruling that Larry Wayne Sisco was competent to stand trial for alleged indecency with a child.

Briones argued in his appeal that the trial court erred in overruling his motion for an instructed verdict at the close of the state's case, and that there was not sufficient evidence to corroborate the testimony of an accomplice witness.

That witness, Felix Ybarra, testified he and Briones were drinking together in the nightclub when the victim, Max Stone, told them he was too intoxicated to operate his car and needed someone to drive him home, the appeals court opinion states.

Briones and Ybarra agreed to assist him, the opinion says, with the three men driving to a dirt road on the north side of Lubbock, where, Ybarra testified, Briones beat and stabbed Stone before taking his wallet and watch.

Briones later was arrested by Lubbock police, who found a pill bottle with Stone's name on it in the glove compartment of the car in which Briones was found.

That and other evidence and testimony from other witnesses "was more than sufficient to corroborate the accomplice's testimony," the appeals court ruled.

In the Sisco case, the court's opinion notes Sisco was arrested May 28, 1978, and was tried that fall, with a hearing Oct. 30 on his motion for a sanity hearing.

The appeals court commented that, "We believe that the trial court utilized an improper method in determining whether the issue of incompetency was raised in the pre-trial hearing." The trial court was ordered to determine from the record of the prior hearing whether there is evidence to support a finding of incompetency and to file its findings with the appeals court before a final disposition is made in the case.

Sisco was found guilty and assessed "confinement for a term of years."

Area Man's Escape Conviction To Stand

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has upheld the Deaf Smith County escape conviction of Bill Rutherford.

Rutherford was sentenced to life in prison for the escape conviction, which was enhanced by two prior felony convictions.

Rutherford appealed the conviction on grounds the trial court erred in admitting a previous conviction for enhancement because the conviction was not final and he was denied assistance of counsel on that appeal.

In its opinion, the appeals court said the appellant had pleaded guilty in the prior case and waived his right to appeal.

The court ruled that the trial court must grant permission for a defendant to appeal after right of appeal has been waived.

Since no such permission was granted, the conviction was final and properly used for enhancement, the court said.

Rutherford also contended that the enhancement provision of the state's criminal code is unconstitutional because it violates the cruel and unusual punishment clause by imposing a disproportionate sentence upon him.

Former Critic Finds New Life As Co-Host Of 'Real People'

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Until "Real People" materialized, John Barbour thought he would never perform again.

He has a caustic wit, and in jobs on local TV stations as talk show host and critic-at-large, he'd rubbed some of his bosses the wrong way.

"As a performer my career was over," he said. "I'd decided I wasn't going to be a critic any more, and I had no income. But I Felt good. The first thing in my life is my family, and I'd take care of them.

"I knew I'd done my shows well and the public had accepted them, but management hadn't. When I left KNBC, they wouldn't give me a $50 a week raise even after I'd won five Emmys. I never had a contract the five years I was there because somebody was always saying, 'Fire him!'"

In one survey, 10 per cent of the viewers polled said they tuned in the local NBC station's news program just to see Barbour's biting reviews of movies and television shows. Another 10 per cent said they watched in spite of Barbour.

"If you'd told me that two years later I'd be co-producer and co-host of a show on NBC that I had helped create, I would have thought you were crazy. Even in my arrogance I wouldn't have dreamed it."

"Real People" is one of NBC's few solid hits, and is the only show to survive from last spring's tryouts. Along with CBS' "60 Minutes" and ABC's "20-20," it is in the vanguard of what could be a new wave of informational television in the 1980s. Barbour calls it the "entertainment of reality."

The show is more than just a collection of eccentric Americana. Its stories are sometimes humorous, sometimes touching, sometimes enlightening, and usually interesting. It can be more bizarre than fiction. Who could come up with a family that earns its keep by lying in coffins at parties, or the reaction of a gas station attendant when a hand comes out of a coffin in a hearse to pay for the gasoline.

Barbour helped create the show with George Schlatter, and is not only co-producer and co-host but one of the writers and editors as well. His duties as an on-the-scene reporter have taken him to a panhandlers' school in New York and a nudist colony in Indiana.

"Real People," which airs Wednesday nights at 7 p.m. CST, resulted from a telephone call NBC president Fred Silverman made to Schlatter, who had been executive producer of "Laugh-In." Silverman asked for a spring series about "real people."

Schlatter grabbed onto Silvermans phrase for a title, and about a week later, Barbour signed on. He'd previously worked with Schlatter as a writer and resident critic on the revival of "Laugh-In."

"Fifteen years ago when George started 'Laugh-In' he'd wanted to include segments about ordinary people," Barbour said, "but NBC was more interested in Rowan and Martin.

"And when I was host of a local talk show, 'AM Los Angeles,' I Built the show into a hit by bringing on real people. I had very few celebrties. I think people are tired of celebrities."

After he left the talk show, he began collecting newspaper items about unusual people. "I knew that the networks eventually would have to break down the barriers between news and entertainment," Barbour said.

"When I went to ABC to create a late-night show, I wanted to use ordinary people. ABC wanted comics. So we parted company. I told them that the entertainment of reality would change the face of television."

Barbour said he thought Schlatter showed remarkable courage in a business where few producers stand up to a network. "Some people at NBC didn't want me on the show, but George refused to allow them to test the talent. He said he was going to do the show his way and that was it."

"Real People" lets its subjects tell their own story and it never passes judgment, which probably has something to do with its success. The most you get is a glance from the reporter or host to the camera.

"The key," said Barbour, "is intelligence coupled with a sense of humor and a sense of humanity. People have had it with celebrities. It's like Andy Warhol said, 'We'll all be stars for five minutes.' The wonderful thing about the show is that is shows real people as role models rather than plastic fictional characters."

'Knots Landing,' Prime Time Soap Opera, Rated Successful Spinoff

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Knots Landing," the new prime time soap opera, slipped into the top 20 TV ratings this season on a pass, so to speak.

The hour-long melodrama is a spinoff of the spectacularly popular "Dallas" series which unreels the passions and pitfalls of the rotten but rich Ewing clan of Big D, down Texas way.

Actually, "Knots Landing" preceded "Dallas" as a potential series. It was originally brought to CBS several years ago by writer David Jacobs, who was turned down because the network wanted a "big rich family" show.

Jacobs took the cue and wrote "Dallas," which became an instant hit. After that CBS took another look at "Knots Landing" and decided to boost it into orbit by using "Dallas" as a first stage rocket.

Essentially, the basics of "Knots Landing" are the trials and tribulations of four couples who live in a cul-de-sac in a middle class California beach community somewhere in the environs of Los Angeles.

To dovetail "Knots Landing" with "Dallas," the braintrust planted Gary Ewing, a black sheep member of the clan, and his wife, Valene, in six "Dallas" episodes. Then Gary and Valene decamp for Knots Landing and a new life.

The "Dallas" episode dealing with Gary's departure was seen at 10 p.m. Thursday Dec. 20 instead of the show's customary 10 p.m. Friday-night spot.

At the tail end of that show, all loyal "Dallas" viewers were asked to tune in at the same time, night and network the following week to watch what happened to Gary and Valene. Then "Dallas" returned to its Friday night slot.

Apparently, most loyal fans did tune in the first episode of "Knots glanding." The transition had been made as slick as a whistle.

In the first individual episode of "Knots Landing," Patrick Duffy, who plays Bobby Ewing, Gary's younger brother, made a guest appearnce to further tie the show and viewers together.

In the second week big bad J.R. Ewing, the detestable oil billionaire, in the person of Larry Hagman, appeared to give the new show even more clout.

Subsequently "Knots Landing" has stood on its own feet, dominating the ratings in its time slot. It has done so ever since.

Last month the network decided the fledgling show might not be strong enough to withstand viewer disenchantment with a pre-emption for "The People's Choice Awards." So CBS slotted the Jan. 25 episode of "Knots Landing" into the "Dallas" timeslot and pre-empted "Dallas."

No one is more pleased with the success of "Knots Landing" than Michele Lee, who plays Karen Fairgate in the new series.

Michele starred in six unsuccessful sitcom pilots, among them "I Married a Bear," "The Singles," "Over and Out" and "The Michele Lee Show."

Wife of actor James Farentino in private life, Michele is a tall, slender brunette with a background in theater, movies and TV film . She won a Tony nomination for her Broadway role in "Seesaw."

"We made the 'Knots Landing' pilot more than a year ago," she said on a rare day off. "We knew it was going to be a spinoff from 'Dallas.' But we also knew we'd have to find our own audience.

"We keep telling ourselves we're not a soap opera like 'Dallas' because each episode is complete in itself. The stories aren't continued from show to show.

"Also, we're realistic. 'Dallas' is a larger-than-life series. But we're resigned to being called a soap even though we're in prime time. It's because we deal dramaticlly with sensational interpersonal relationships.

"My role is refreshing. I play a 'today' woman who epitomizes the modern wife and mother involved with the women's movement. She's strong, assertive, well educated and faithful to her husband, played by Don Murray.

"But she's also facing midlife crisis, which is a key element of those parts of the story that involve her.

"We don't have an s.o.b. that everybody loves to hate like J. R. Ewing but we expect viewers will tune us in for other reasons.

"The four couples cover several age brackets and stages of emotional development and marital balance. Most adult viewers will be able to identify with the problems involving the couples.

"Granted, we got a head start by counting on 'Dallas' viewers. Eventually we'll have to establish our own following.

"Who knows? Someday we may get followers of our show to tune in 'Dallas.'"

TV 'Scope' Said Ideal For Short Stories

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — The short story, in Bob Geller's mind, is inherently well-suited for adaptation to television, "because," he says, "it deals with character, gesture, moments of self-discovery.

"Even 15 years ago, when I was teaching literature as an adaptation," Geller says, "in looking at my notes, they were all notes in terms of visual translation.

"And the short story lends itself to television because it is meant to be scoped smaller."

Geller established himself as something of an expert on the subject with "The American Short Story," which he brought to public television in 1977.

He enhanced that reputation last spring with "Too Far to Go," an NBC movie based on 17 stories by John Updike, and returns to public TV on Monday evenings (8 p.m. on Channel 5) with a second season of "The American Short Story."

"I taught writing for a whole bunch of years in my earlier days," Geller says, "and was most drawn to the short fiction form as something you can read several times at key points in your life, and each time take something new away.

"Say one were to read a short piece by J.D. Salinger. The notations made 20 years ago would not be the same as those made today.

"And how many times can you read 'Moby Dick'? The short story can be read several times."

That kind of thinking, says Geller, was basic to production of the package of 17 stories, eight of which will be broadcast for the first time this year.

The cycle began with Teresa Wright and James Whitmore in Ring Lardner's "The Golden Honeymoon," and continues next Monday with Eric Roberts in "Paul's Case," by Willa Cather.

Geller is co-founder of Learning in Focus, Inc., producer of "The American Short Story" series with financial help from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Corp. for Public Broadcasting, and Xerox Corp.

Geller taught high school English in Mamaroneck, N.Y., for several years, and later was educational director for the American Film Institute. He spent two years helping train minority candidates for careers in television, and from 1971 to 1973, was assistant to the dean of the Antioch Film-Media Programs.

"The short story," he says, "was designed as a mass-appeal, populist experience, and found wide appeal among magazine writers.

"With the advent of the paperback, most writers were wanting to get right along to the novel. But with a bumper crop of short story writers in the '50s, the form gradually became more sophisticated — It made its statement in the fewest number of pages, without dropping a stitch."

Despite its qualitative development, the focus of the short story has remained much the same, Geller says. "It is about us, it's the common man's reading."

The 17 stories in the cycle were chosen from among hundreds initially suggested, and great care was given to their dramatization and filming.

"The question was, can you pick stories that at least have a narrative line that can be developed," Geller says, "while maintaining the texture created by a Scott Fitzgerald, for example."

The series continues Feb. 18 with "The Greatest Man in the World" by James Thurber, Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Rappaccini's Daughter" Feb. 25, "The Jilting of Granny Weatherall" by Katherine Anne Porter on March 3, Ernest Gaines' "The Sky is Gray" March 10, and "The Man That Corrupted Hadleyburg" by Mark Twain and William Faulkner's "Barn Burning" both on March 17.

Beginning March 24, the series will feature stories presented in the initial cycle three years ago.

CBS Anchorman Wants Release From Contract

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite, television's most widely recognized newsman, wants out as "CBS Evening News" anchorman as soon as possible, to devote more time to specials and other journalistic work, the network said Wednesday.

Cronkite, speaking through CBS News' press department, confirmed published reports that he had told network executives he would like to give up the evening news anchor no later than November 1981, when his current contract expires.

"This is not anything really new," a network spokeswoman said. "He has said before he would like to spend more time on other things not directly related to the nightly deadline."

Cronkite took over as evening news anchorman in April 1962, when the broadcast was 15 minutes each night. The news program was expanded to its present half-hour format in September 1963.

Under Cronkite, who doubles as the program's managing editor, "CBS Evening News" has been No. 1 in the ratings since 1968.

Cronkite, 63, was quoted in Wednesday's Washington Post as saying, "I told them that I'd like to be able to step out right now, but they won't let me do it right away." The CBS spokeswoman said Cronkite had confirmed that statement.

The development fanned rumors that had circulated for several days that Dan Rather, a correspondent for CBS' "60 Minutes" newsmagazine, was at the center of a bidding war involving all three networks.

Rather, a former White House correspondent for CBS, has been mentioned off and on as a possible successor to Cronkite.

One report had all three networks offering Rather as much as $8 million over five years.

Rather declined to discuss money, but said, "I have 16 months on a contract at CBS. I certainly intend not only to fulfull that contract, but work like hell here for the next 16 months."

Further, said Rather, "I haven't decided anything about my own future, and that's not to say that I'm going to decide anything immediately."

Cronkite suggested word that both Rather and Roger Mudd, another CBS correspondent, were being courted by the opposition may have prompted network executives to ask him about his future. "Hey, we're in a little bit of a bind," the anchorman quoted the executives as saying. "They wanted to know what my intentions were."

Cronkite over the years has devoted considerable time to duties other than the evening news. He was perhaps the most prominent reporter during coverage of the space program, and has been a fixture at political conventions since the mid-1960s.

In recent years, he has given attention to independent projects aimed at bringing the news to the classroom, and now is involved in development of a new CBS News science magazine, "Universe."

ABC News, meanwhile, confirmed having "conversations with Dan Rather," adding, "They are private, and we wish them to remain so. The media reports concerning these conversations, on the whole have not been quite accurate."

"Mr. Rather is highly regarded by all three networks, but if as reported, Mr. Rather has been chosen by CBS to succeed Walter Cronkite, it indicates the high regard CBS has for him and the difficulty anyone else would have in attracting him."

Of Cronkite's possible depature, Rather declared, "Everybody here respects Walter beyond description and I certainly do, and I hope that Walter could be convinced to stay doing what he is doing."

Deal Pending To Share Portraits Of Washington

BOSTON (AP) — The famous portrait of George Washington — the one pictured on the dollar bill — may be shared by two cities like a child shuttled between divorced parents.

Museums in Boston and Washington will take turns at custody if a new joint ownership compromise is approved by all the parties concerned.

The deal must approved by the boards of three institutions and the state attorney general, but negotiators expect a final settlement within two weeks.

At stake are a pair of portraits of George and Martha Washington painted 184 years ago by Gilbert Stuart. The one of George, described by some as the most famous painting in America, is the original of the engraving on the dollar bill. Copies of the unfinished portrait — in which the first president appears to be rising out of a cloud — hang in classrooms across the country.

The paintings are owned by the Boston Athenaeum, a private library on Beacon Hill, which has loaned them for the past century to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The Athenaeum stirred a flurry of controversy last April when it announced it would sell them for $5 million to the National Portrait Gallery, a branch of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

Sources, who asked not to be quoted by name, said the proposed deal was worked out principally by Howard Johnson, president of the Museum of Fine Arts. Under it, they said, the Athenaeum would receive "slightly under" $5 million for the two pictures.

Just over $2 million is being contributed jointly by the Museum of Fine Arts and a fund-raising effort by the Washingtons Belong in Boston Committee. The rest is being put up by the National Portrait Gallery, the sources say.

Still to be resolved is how long the pictures will spend in each city, although they are expected to be shared equally.

However, retired Gen. James Gavin, the World War II paratrooper who is leading the fund-raising campaign, is strongly opposed to the compromise and has attempted to persuade state Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti to block it.

James Barr Ames, president of the Athenaeum, acknowledged a deal was being worked out to share the paintings between the museums.

"We hope to work something out where nobody would win, but everybody will win, if you seen what I mean," he said.

The board of the Commonwealth Cultural Preservation Trust, set up to control the money raised by the fund-raising effort, voted 5-1 last month to go along with Johnson's proposal, the sources said.

The state attorney general must review major sales of assets by charities.

Cassettes Envisioned To Replace Records

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Marshall Barnes is preparing for the day when teen-agers go out to buy video cassettes of their favorite rock operas as easily as they now purchase stereo recordings.

Barnes, 20, has spent the last several months writing, directing and producing what he says is the first "video rock" album.

With the help of several teen-age friends, Barnes has formed his own production company, Cowtown Records and Video Works.

His first project, a 90-minute cassette, features local performers in a science-fiction plot. The program is expected to be ready by late February for airing on cable TV systems throughout Ohio and the Northeast.

Barnes said the production, entitled "Christopher," is the story of a future space traveler who is killed in outer space and then reincarnated as an American teen-ager.

As Christopher experiences life in the United States, his mind has dreamlike flashbacks to his earlier existence. Those flashbacks are portrayed in song and graphic design through the use of video computer techniques, Barnes said.

Barnes said he wants to make the album a "social commentary" with which teen-agers can identify.

"I really got into music and drama in elementary school," he said. "They had an arts impact program where we'd get to meet performers and learn the business firsthand. After that, I formed a rock band and started writing and producing on my own."

The Columbus native is no stranger to television production. He's worked on several local cable programs. On one, "Marshall Barnes and Friends," he was host of a forum for local rock bands.

Barnes wrote the music and choreography for "Christopher" in his spare time. The public access project is being produced largely as a community effort, with production facilities donated by a Columbus cable TV outlet.

Some well-known rock musicians have plans to produce the same kind of recording, he said, but as far as he knows, none have been completed.

Although there are no plans to offer the album for public sale, Barnes said he hopes to syndicate the project across the country over cable television.

"It's all new," Barnes said. "No one's ever done this before.

"I feel right now like this is my purpose on earth — to create things like this. It's something that comes very natural to me. And I'm excited."

Actor Testifies Loud Radio Led To Beating

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Christopher Walken, who won an Oscar as best supporting actor for his role in "The Deer Hunter," testified Wednesday that he was beaten up by two brothers after he "politely" asked them to turn down their radio.

After hearing Walken's testimony about the incident on a Manhattan sidewalk, the brothers stopped the trial and pleaded guilty to assault charges. Justice Bernard Moldow said he would give them no more than a year in prison at their April 3 sentencing.

The brothers, William Ortiz, 19, and Samuel Ortiz, 21, claimed outside Manhattan Supreme Court that they got into a fight with Walken after he "demanded" that they lower the volume.

"We wouldn't have done anything if he had asked nice," said William Ortiz.

The 36-year-old actor testified he approached the brothers near his Upper West Side home about 8 p.m. last Oct. 11 while the radio blared at "top volume." Walken lives nearby.

"I said, 'Excuse me, would you please turn down your radio,'" Walken testified.

When the request was ignored, Walken said, he asked, "Would you please turn down your radio? You shouldn't be playing it that loud." He said the request was made "politely."

The actor, who won an Oscar for his portrayal of a soldier with a fatal fascination for Russian roulette, said Samuel Ortiz cursed and said, "I have a right to play my radio as loud as I want."

"I said 'Maybe you got a right, but you got no manners,'" Walken told the jury. "The minute I said, 'You got no manners,' I was punched in the head."

Walken said Samuel Ortiz threw "at least a dozen punches" and that William Ortiz hit him in the face with a stick and kicked him in the side.

"The whole thing probably took less than 30 seconds," Walken said. "I never threw any punches."

Scars were visible on Walken's face and one finger was in a brace. He said the bones near the top joint of the finger were fused surgically and he cannot bend it.

Cultural Understanding Forum Scheduled Today

The Institute for Communications Research at Texas Tech University will conduct its first Public Forum for Cultural Understanding at 2 p.m. today in room 223 of the Mass Communications Building.

The first session will cover "Understanding China" and "Understanding Mexico." Dr. H.J. Hsia, a native of China and professor of mass communications at Tech, will speak on both topics. Hsia is familiar with both the Chinese and Mexican cultures.

Los Angeles TV Station Loses Big Contract

LOS ANGELES (AP) — KABC-TV has lost a $160,000 advertising contract in a dispute over a series of programs over methods of pricing merchandise.

Last week, KABC's 6 o'clock Eyewitness News program concluded a month-long consumer series examining whether stores using electronic scanners to read coded prices on merchandise should continue using item pricing — or marking costs on individual items as well as on the shelves.

The news team filmed spots in stores using the scanners, checked the the accuracy of computer prices and asked the audience to respond. John Severino, vice president and general manager at KABC, said the message was clear.

"We sampled the Southern California area and determined that people were very, very highly in favor of unit pricing," Severino said.

Then last Friday, Ralphs Grocery Co., a chain with 100 stores in the state, mostly in Southern California, and an innovator in the use of price scanners, canceled its KABC television ads, which were contracted a month ago to run through June.

"We felt Ralphs was being treated unfairly by KABC and being singled out for trying to be innovative and introduce new technology," said Jan Charles Gray, vice president and general counsel at Ralphs. "It was apparent to us that ABC had chosen to create a hostile atmosphere which was not giving us the best medium for our advertisements."

Severino denied that the station focused on Ralphs specifically, and said film crews visited several grocery chains. But Gray claimed the station preyed on his company, doing most of its filming in Ralphs stores and only mentioning other grocery stores tangentially.

Severino said the cancellation seemed "more than coincidental" and KABC reported Ralphs' action on the air.

But Gray said ratings had more to do with the decision to cancel than the coverage flap. He said the store's advertising agency studied the gross ratings for local news stations and found a "downward" trend in KABC's short-term ratings.

Severino said Eyewitness News has offered a standing invitation to Ralphs to present its views on the air, which the company has so far rejected.

'Husbands By Hour' Provide Repair Services For Women

DALLAS (AP) — A new business started by two bachelors who call their service "Husbands by the Hour" might raise a few eyebrows in the vice squad.

The service is $15 an hour.

Don Cannaday and Robin Hill insist their business is strictly legitimate — a repair service for women — and some men — who have a door that's stuck, a faucet that drips or a lamp that needs rewiring.

Or most anything else around the house that needs fixing, they say.

"We've been repairing things free for women for years," said Cannaday. "Payment was usually lunch or dinner after we finished. We never asked for money, and never expected it, but some of our friends felt uncomfortable not paying us.

Hill said it's almost impossible these days to get someone to come to a home or apartment to do odd jobs. "And it gets expensive hiring specialists. I know of plumbers who are charging $35 an hour, and that's a lot to fix a drippy faucet."

But Cannaday said the two entrepreneurs don't pretend to be experts.

"We're not electricians or plumbers or carpenters. We know a little bit about a lot of things. If we can't do a particular job, we'll admit it and suggest a professional be called," he said.

He said the pair of fix-it men will paint the kitchen, wallpaper the bedroom, hang pictures, refinish floors, check furnaces and change filters, take cars in for annual inspections, and do just about anything else that's legal and not too complicated.

They say each man has talents the other doesn't have, but Hill says, "Some of it depends on who has the tools and who doesn't."

Vivian Simmons, the world's most tattooed man, died in Toronto in 1965. He had 4,831 tattoos covering his entire body.

Rally For Cambodia Stopped At Border

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — More than 120 Western celebrities and politicians, some carrying white flags, held a protest rally Wednesday at a bridge leading into Cambodia when their loudspeaker plea to enter that war-wracked country with food and medicine went unheeded.

The group sat on a sun-scorched road behind a barbed-wire border checkpoint. Its members were asked to meditate for five minutes on "the fragility of life" and "the difficulty of obtaining peace."

The plea over the loudspeaker was made from the bridge by three representatives of the group and was addressed "to those who've been standing on the other side of the bordeer."

It asked for permission to enter the country with 20 truckloads of relief supplies and a medical team, although march organizers said earlier they had already given up hope of entering Cambodia.

More than a dozen guards — either Vietnamese or Cambodians loyal to the Heng Samrin regime — had been sighted earlier beyond the narrow metal bridge over the stream that marks the frontier, but there was no response to the marchers' request to enter.

The Vietnam-backed government in Phnom Penh condemned the march earlier as "a very vile action," and Thai military sources said they had seen troops erecting a barrier just inside Cambodia earlier in the morning to ensure that no marchers passed.

Although some were prepared to enter Cambodia carrying their white flags on bamboo poles, most of the marchers did not even bring along their passports. Plans had already been made to turn over the supplies to the Thai Red Cross for distribution in Thailand.

After the pause for meditation, civil rights activist Bayard Rustin, a veteran of "freedom marchess" in the southern United States, led the group in singing "We Shall Overcome." Later, four Buddhist monks in orange robes chanted a prayer.

"We are not here to pre-judge the situation but just to pose the questions of why Cambodia does not let in more doctors and more food," folk singer Joan Baez said.

Leo Cherne, head of the International Rescue Committee, called the march an "unqualified success," and said: "International attention, recently diverted by Afghanistan and Iran, has been refocused on Cambodia." The American-based committee and the French-based Doctors Without Borders organized the march.

An American doctor told reporters that he and several colleagues "for the most part, we were against it from the start."

Another American volunteer, who asked not to be identified, said: "The way it was all handled was sort of a joke, but maybe they did serve a purpose."

Elie Wiesel, head of the U.S. President's Commission on the Holocaust and a Nazi concentration camp survivor, said if international organizations had gone to the German border in 1939 they could have pressured Hitler into freeing Jews.

Exiled Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg said victims of Stalin's purges also suffered without the kind of international support now being given to Cambodians.

Other celebrities in the march included Norwegian Actress Liv Ullman, British member of parliament Winston Churchill, Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum of the American Jewish Committee, and several French politicans, artists and writers.

Most of the marchers said only international pressure would force Cambodian authorities to permit greater international efforts to head off mass starvation in Cambodia. Millions of Cambodians are said to have died since the Communist regime of Pol Pot came to power in 1975.

Pol Pot was deposed in January 1979, two weeks after Vietnam sent troops into Cambodia and installed Heng Samrin as the new strongman. Thousands of Vietnamese troops still are there battling the remnants of Pol Pot's army, and starvation continues.

Mother, Son Defect From Soviet Ballet

TOKYO (AP) — The Bolshoi Ballet on Wednesday lost two more defectors seeking political asylum in the United States, a mother and son who were lesser members of the troupe but who came from one of the Soviet Union's most famous ballet families. Sponsors said the Japanese tour would continue.

During a tour of the United States last August and September, three of the best known members of the Bolshoi defected.

Soulamif Mikhailovna Messerer, 71, a well-known ballet instructor, and her son, Mikhail Messerer, 31, an occasional solo performer, had a conversation with a Soviet Embassy official telling him they wanted greater artistic freedom, then left by plane for New York, the Japanese Foreign Ministry said. The two were granted asylum after spending Tuesday in protective custody of the U.S. Embassy where they sought assistance in defecting.

Mrs. Messerer, a widow and frequent visitor over the past 20 years who is fluent in Japanese, had been in Tokyo since last November as head of the Bolshoi Troupe giving ballet lessons to members of the Tschaikovsky Memorial Tokyo Ballet Troupe under contract. Sources said she has the honorary title of Soviet People's Artist and has many ballet students in Japan.

Her brother, Asaf M. Messerer, 76, a former star dancer and one of the Soviet Union's leading ballet teachers, also is in Japan with Bolshoi as ballet master but did not defect. Tour sponsors said he was with the show Wednesday. He also holds the title of People's Artist.

Moscow ballet fans considered Mikhail Messerer a capable dancer but not one of the troupe's stars. He had appeared recently in small solo roles in Moscow in the two-year-old ballet "These Enchanted Sounds." This was his fourth visit to Japan.

He is a nephew of the Soviet Union's leading ballerina, Maya Plisetskaya.

Mrs. Messerer, in a red sweater and brown fur coat, smiled and waved as she boarded the plane for New York. But her son, dressed in a dark leather coat and dark glasses, was glum.

The Messerer family has produced a number of professionals and intellectuals. Asaf Messerer's son, Boris, is a painter married to poet Bella Akhmadulina. Miss Akhmadulina, who has clashed with Soviet cultural authorities in the past, signed a statement this week in defense of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, banished last month by the Kremlin from Moscow to Gorki, a town 250 miles away.

The Kyodo news service said Mrs. Messerer apparently had planned her defection because she had been depositing her savings in a foreign bank in Tokyo. The newspaper Asahi Shimbun quoted police sources as saying the two "despaired life in Russian society."

John Ohta, U.S. Embassy spokesman, said the Messerers "wanted a freer environment for artistic activities." The Soviet Embassy declined to comment, saying no officials were available.

The nearly 100-member Bolshoi troupe left Moscow on Jan. 23 for a tour of 12 cities in Japan. Its first performance was in Tokyo last Saturday. It gave its fifth performance Wednesday before a capacity crowd in Nagoya, in central Japan.

Sources close to the Bolshoi said troupe members were given security screenings before being allowed to leave Moscow for Japan. The sources said 11 or 12 troupe members were barred from making the trip, including star male performer Vladimir Vasiliev.

The screenings appeared to be a result of sensitivity of Soviet authorities over the possibility of further defections after the three last summer in the United States.

Lead dancer Alexander Godunov defected in New York on Aug. 23. His wife, ballerina Ludmila Vlasova, decided to stay with the troupe but when she boarded a Soviet plane at New York's Kennedy Airport, U.S. authorities kept the plane grounded for three days until being satisfied she was not being taken against her will.

The Bolshoi lost the husband-and-wife team of Leonid and Valentina Kozlov, who defected in Los Angeles on Sept. 16.

Other prominent Soviet ballet defectors have included star dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov of Leningrad's Kirov Ballet, who defected in Toronto in June 1976, Kirov dancer Natalya Makarova, who defected in London in September 1970 and Rudolf Nureyev, who defected in Paris in 1961.

In the past seven months, four other Soviet citizens have defected to the United States while visiting in Japan, which does not grant political asylum.

They were Stanislav A. Levtchenko, 38, a journalist with the New Times magazine on Oct. 25; a computer engineer in September, and two members of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra, a man and woman, in June.

Japanese officials said 20 Soviet citizens in Japan since 1954 have sought political asylum, most often in the United States.

Author Fighting Against Censorship, Categorization With Release Of Book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With publication of his seventh book, "Rushes," John Rechy hoped for the impossible — that critics would forget to categorize him as "the homosexual author."

It was a vain hope in view of the book's subject matter — the seamy ritual of "cruising" in a waterfront gay bar.

"I do have a sort of exotic life I guess," Rechy concedes. "But I'm as good a writer as anyone writing now.

"The problem is the homosexual in literature is still viewed as an adjunct, an appendage, not part of the whole flow."

Rechy tells of an effort by his publisher, Grove Press, to win recognition for "Rushes" in a major book review publication.

"Their attitude was, 'We know Rechy is a very serious writer, but we'd have to have two other homosexual books to write about,' " he recalls. "It was as if three homosexual books equal one heterosexual book."

Even now, 17 years after he published his first treatise on homosexual life, "City of Night," Rechy is infuriated at discrimination in the literary marketplace.

"What's amazing," he says, "is that after seven books, after being translated into 12 languages in 20 countries, after teaching at colleges and lecturing at universitiesn after having my books taught in literature classes, I still have to fight the exact battles I fought with my first book. Censorhsip still exists."

Some libraries refuse to stock his books. Others keep them in "special collections" not for public display.

"In our time, you'd think the whole thing would have settled down," says Rechy. "But people can't get past it — just the fact that a book deals with homosexuality.

"It's true for all homosexual authors," he adds. "I can understand why Gore Vidal and Truman Capote have just decided to stay away from it — to simply not write about the subject at all."

For Rechy, now in his 40s, homosexuality is a fact of his literary life. He has been writing about it since 1963 when "City Of Night" became an underground sensation and was received by critics with undisguised venom.

"When 'City of Night' came out, you can't imagine what I was getting," he says. "The New York Review of Books called it 'a fruit salad.' The Los Angeles Times called it 'a thing.' Someone even suggested I was an accidental writer, for God's sake."

But the book became a best-seller. Rechy says it has now sold over a million copies, and there have been 10 printings in paperback. It was even published in Braille.

"I think 'City of Night' was the book that helped many homosexuals come out of the closet," Rechy says. "Its theme became almost a cliche — a journey of discovery and the discovery is found in the journey itself."

Rechy's own journey to sexual identity began in El Paso, his hometown. The son of a Scottish musician father and Mexican mother, he knew early discrimination because of his mixed race.

"I didn't fit in," he recalls. "Later I would be a homosexual who didn't conform to what a homosexual was supposed to be. So again I didn't fit in."

He began writing as a small child, attended what is now the University of Texas at El Paso on a scholarship, studied English and French literature and edited the campus literary magazine.

He did not know he was a homosexual.

"After college, during the Korean War, I enlisted in the Army. It was then that I began thinking about homosexuality."

He did not easily acknowledge his sexual preference.

" ... I went through a lot of difficulties," he says. "That's why I entered homosexuality through hustling. In a capitalistic society, I guess I felt you can do anything for money and that makes it OK."

Later, he would define what he calls "the troubled landscape of the homosexual world."

"We are the only minority born into the opposing camp," he explains.

Studio Reports Quarterly Profits Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — Columbia Pictures Industries Inc., an entertainment company, Wednesday reported higher profits in the latest quarter and cited favorable results from several films as a major reason for the gain.

Columbia Pictures said net income for the second quarter of its fiscal 1980 year, which ended Dec. 29, totaled $7.19 million, or 73 cents a share, up 5 percent from $6.86 million, or 71 cents a share, the previous year. Results for 1978 included $1.18 million from the Arista Records, which has since been sold.

Excluding earnings from discontinued operations in the second quarter of fiscal 1979, Columbia's quarterly profits were 26 percent higher than income from continuing operations in the same period a year earlier.

Revenue for the second quarter was $164.28 million, up from $122.46 million in 1978.

GOING STRONG — Veteran actor Pat O'Brien, with his wife, Eloise, smiles during a recent interview at his Los Angeles home. O'Brien has marked up his 80th birthday and a pacemaker inside his chest keeps his heartbeat regular. But he is still vigorous enough to inspire the Notre Dame varsity to go out and win one for the gipper. (AP Laserphoto)

Age, Pacemaker Not Enough To Keep Pat O'Brien Idle

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — He has marked his 80th birthday and a pacemaker in his chest keeps his heartbeat regular. But Pat O'Brien is still vigorous enough to inspire the Notre Dame varsity to go out and win one for the Gipper.

The Milwaukee-born actor who made his film debut in the 1931 "The Front Page" was preparing for yet another dinner-theater engagement with his wife Eloise. This time they were heading for Scottsdale, Ariz., for a six-week stand in "Second Time Around." They have had similar runs in New Orleans, Louisville, San Antonio, Columbus, Ohio, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Dallas.

"It's occupational therapy for me," O'Brien remarked in the memento-filled den of his Brentwood home.

"People tell me when I'm on the road, 'You don't need this; why don't you stay home and enjoy yourself?' Well, I do need it. There's some altruism involved; you're bringing enjoyment to people who need it. But it's selfish, too — there's a lot of fun in making people laugh.

"I love the theater, always have. You get a different audience every night, and each one has different reactions. You lose a laugh one night, then you try to get it back the next time out.

"I try not to make it sound like sour grapes because I'm not offered any movie parts. Let's face it, I don't get the movie offers. But I still prefer the theater. I had my 80th birthday last November and I went on the stage when I was 20. That's 60 years in the theater, and I'm always eager to get back."

The O'Briens average six months in the theater each year. During the six months at home, Pat spends time with his dwindling circle of pals — Jimmy Cagney, Ralph Bellamy, Lloyd Nolan. O'Brien is a popular guest on the TV talk shows and recently played Ron Howard's great uncle on "Happy Days." Pat's last movie was Burt Reynold's "The End," in which he played husband to Myrna Loy.

"That was fun," he remarked. "It was the first time Myrna and I had appeared together in 46 years. She was loaned from MGM and I was loaned by Howard Hughes to do 'Consolation Marriage' at RKO."

The O'Brien mantle is decorated with numerous awards, including an Emmy and the Carbon Mike, which he received from the Radio Pioneers. No Oscar. Astonishingly, Pat has never been nominated for an Academy Award, not even for his most famous role in "Knute Rockne, All American" (in which he exhorted his team to score victory in memory of George Gipp, the fallen player acted by Ronald Reagan).

"It seems a shame," a reporter commented.

"I think so, too," Pat said with an Irish grin.

Such a lapse of recognition doesn't bother him. He gets plenty on the road. "So many people remember the old pictures," he said.

Does he himself watch old movies on TV?

"Oh, sure," he admitted. "Like Bob Hope says, I like to switch the dial and watch my hairline recede."

The titles are memorable: "Ceiling Zero," "Boy Meets Girl," "Angels with Dirty Faces," "The Fighting 69th," "Torrid Zone," "The Iron Major," "Fighting Father Dunne," "The People Against O'Hara," "The Last Hurrah," "Some Like It Hot." Oddly, his favorite is the 1935 "Oil for the Lamps of China."

"For my next picture, Jack Warner bought a best-selling novel and changed the title to 'I Married a Doctor,'" Pat recalled. "I Asked him why the hell didn't he keep the original title, and his reply was: 'Who wants to see a movie about a street?' The book was 'Main Street' by Sinclair Lewis.

Pat O'Brien is one of the town's legendary story-tellers, and he practices his craft at the end of each play. "Mostly I tell Irish stories, but also some Jewish, Negro, English, Scotch," he said. "But nothing that hurts, and nothing off-color. I would never tell an audience a story that I wouldn't tell at my own dinner table."

During a Chicago run five years ago, O'Brien collapsed and doctors advised an operation for a bleeding ulcer. The actor refused, curing the ulcer with medication. Later he had a heartbeat irregularity, and a specialist suggested a pacemaker. "That's what you went to medical school for," said O'Brien, assenting.

"I've been blessed," he said. "Last week I celebrated my 49th wedding anniversary, and we've got four children and six grand-children. When people ask for our secret, I tell them you've got to have a sixth sense — a sense of humor. That, and never stop being in love."

Pop Music Bigwigs Proclaim 'Total War' Against Pirates

CANNES, France (UPI) — The Soviet representative had a right to her superior smile. "In Russia, the question of record piracy is academic as there is none," said Margarita Voronkova of VAAP — the organization that licenses the use of Soviet music.

In this gilded resort town bulging with thousands of the men who write, perform and sell popular music the world over, she alone could make the statement that would bring a groan of envy from her audience.

By contrast there is plenty of this form of theft in the United States and elsewhere in the West, a good deal of it operated by organized crime with a total take in the tens of millions of dollars a year.

Piracy consists of illegally copying tapes or records and selling them at cut prices, depriving composers and performers as well as publishers of their royalties.

Add in the growing practice of taping albums off the radio rather than buying them and music men believe they are losing hundreds of millions of dollars annually on a global basis.

When pop music was booming, and basking in the belief it was recession proof, the piracy and home taping problems were annoying but endurable. The industry now knows that, when money is tight, the young tend to cut down on record purchases and many firms, American and British especially, have had to trim their staffs for the first time.

So it was in a crisis climate that the 64th annual Marche International du Disque et de l'Edition Musicale, better known as MIDEM, convened here recently with some 5,480 participants from 44 countries.

"Death to the pirates," British publisher Ronald White told a parallel meeting of the International Federation of Popular Music Publishers, speaking figuratively. "This must be our battle cry. It is up to us to go back to our countries and start the armies marching."

"Total war," demanded veteran Felix Faecq of Belgium.

"Billions of dollars, pounds, yen, francs, pesetas and deutschmarks are being stolen by these people every year. It must be stopped," said Dr. Hans Sikorski of Germany.

Mrs. Msa Watanabe of Japan estimated home taping equalled 100 million albums a year in her country.

Pirates already are being rigorously prosecuted in the United States and some other countries, and representatives from these areas began for the first time to discuss home taping as the more urgent dilemma. The problem here is that while home taping, even for personal use only, may technically infringe the copyright, it obviously is impossible to prosecute the millions of people who do it in good faith.

France's Minister of Culture and Communication, Jean-Philippe Lecat, hinted that his country — engaged in a campaign to boost French songs whose theme is "Let's Sing in French" — was working on a method of making up some of the taping losses. This would involve a tax on new blank cassettes, the proceeds to be distributed to the music industry. Germany pioneered such a tax in 1966 but at too low a rate to meet current losses.

Other than piracy and home taping, the major talking point was how to end the current slump in pop music sales. The consensus was that the industry would have to cut down the huge advances it has been giving to top recording artists and otherwise tighten its belt, and press ahead with new technology such as digital recording and audiovisual cassettes in the hope this would bring buyers into record shops.

Naturally the sudden appearance of new superstars with new music would galvanize the business the way the Beatles did 15 yeas ago and probably open another era of freehanded spending — since memories are shorter than titles in the song trade.

But there are no comparable musical trends or stars in the offing. Nothing on display at MIDEM even hinted at a revolution in teen-age taste.

Russia's Piotr Chabanov of Melodiya, also moving against the trend, said he exported 5 million records to the West in 1979 and had signed deals to distribute recordings by Barbra Streisand, Shirley Bassey, Abba and other Wstern stars in the Soviet Union.

"We have many artists of our own who will soon be big in the West," he predicted.

The French campaign to break into markets traditionally dominated by the Americans and British is part of a general scheme to spread French culture in all fields, especially language. The government has nominated Henry Chapier as a sort of "Mr. Song" (or "Monsieur Chanson") to study the problems encountered by French songs and suggest solutions.

One of the first moves will be to persuade overseas radio stations to play more French products — if not as much as France plays of theirs. English language songs are the currency of French discos, for example.

Workmen Mistake Gold Leaf For Paint, Scrub It Off

MIAMI (AP) — Thinking vandals had sprayed yellow paint on a U.S-Latin friendship monument, city crews sloshed on paint thinner and scrubbed away the yellow stuff.

Down the drain went Oscar Dior's 14-karat gold leaf.

Dior, an artist who runs a sign business in North Miami, said he applied the gold to the bronze Colombian coat of arms at the Torch of Friendship in late December.

The friendship torch is in the city's Bayfront Park of the Americas and contains plaques from Latin nations symbolizing friendship with the United States.

Dior, who lived in Colombia for 15 years, said he and some friends were looking at the Colombian plaque one day. "The plaque is so dirty you can't see what nation it is," he said.

So he sat down with brushes, varnish, laquer and $500 worth of gold leaf. He painstakingly applied the thin leaf, sheet by sheet.

A work crew was dispatched last week to scrub the yellow gunk off the plaque.

"If there was gold leaf there, nobody made us aware of it," said Bernard Beck, superintendent of property maintenance. "That's a shame if it was. Gold is very expensive."

Dior discovered the back-to-bronze look on Tuesday.

He said he's willing to try again — if the city will promise not to scrub his work away this time.

Toy Manufacturer Guarantees Fun

NEW YORK (AP) — Schaper Toys is guaranteeing fun — or your money back — on a line of its toys selling for $8 to $15.

The Minneapolis-based manufacturer said Wednesday it will refund the purchase price if, after 30 days of play, a child is not playing with its toy more than any other toy.

A spokeswoman said the company will begin advertising the offer in April on its Playmobil sets, which are recommended for ages 5 and up.

The toy consists of sets of pieces on various themes ranging from police to construction to cowboys and Indians.

To get a refund, the toy must be returned in the original package, along with the sales slip, within 90 days of purchase. "And we'll send you a check for the price you paid," the guarantee says.

Assorted Russian republics united as the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in 1922.

U.S. agricultural exports in fiscal 1979 reached a record high of $32 billion, double the amount of imports, according to Sperry New Holland.

EXAMINING SQUID — Dr. Clyde Roper of the Smithsonian Institution and Carla Sinder of the New England Aquarium look over the remains of a giant squid that washed up dead, on an offshore Massachusetts island. (AP Laserphoto)

Massachusetts Beach Yields Rare Squid

BOSTON (AP) — A deep sea monster — 450 pounds of squid — went on display Wednesday at the New England Aquarium as experts tried to figure how the beast reached the shores of Massachusetts.

The giant squid — not unlike the one battled by Captain Nemo 20,000 leagues under the sea in the Jules Verne classic — was found dead last weekend on Plum Island, Mass.

It was discovered by wildlife rangers at the Parker River Natural Wildlife Beach. Ten men were rounded up by the aquarium to carry it by stretcher from the beach.

The squid is about eight feet in body length, with tentacles 10 to 16 feet long. Nothing like it had been seen in Massachusetts since a similar squid was found in 1968.

Giant squids, according to Aquarium experts, generally live 500 to 1,000 feet deep in the ocean.

Aquarium staff members said Wednesday the new specimen will be pumped full of a liquid formula to preserve it.

It will be on display for three weeks, then moved to the Museum Of Comparative Zoology at Harvard.

Jury Must Decide Punishment For Convicted Desert Recluse

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (AP) — The jurors who convicted recluse Ronald Bristlewolf of killing three people near his dugout home in the desert now must decide whether to recommend that he be put to death.

Bristlewolf, 44, was found guilty of three counts of first-degree murder Wednesday after the jurors deliberated nine hours. Today, the jury will resume deliberating to recommend a penalty to District Judge Llewellyn A. Young.

Under state law, Bristlewolf could face death in the gas chamber. His attorney has said he will appeal the convictions.

Bristlewolf, who had his last name legally changed from Gress in 1973, had pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity to the June 1978 shootings.

He sat stern-faced, as he has throughout the two-week trial, as the jurors were polled and affirmed their findings of guilty in the shootings of Richard Weese, 40, and his wife Judy, 31, of Longmont, Colo., and fellow desert recluse Pete Cachenaut, 75.

The decayed bodies of the three victims were found June 24, 1978, about 150 yards from Bristlewolf's dugout home in the Black Rock Desert more than 120 miles north of Reno. Bristlewolf was arrested the next day.

Special Prosecutor Mills Lane charged Bristlewolf killed the Weeses because he felt they "posed a threat" to his occupancy of the dugout near a hot spring. He said Cachenaut "was executed to shut him up" when he happened onto the scene two days later.

Deputy Public Defender Martin Wiener argued ballistics experts had been unable to link Bristlewolf's guns to the Weese's bodies. Weiner also noted that all three psychiatrists who testified said Bristlewolf had suffered from paranoid schizophrenia. Two said he was probably legally insane at the time of the killings.

"There is something going on behind this man's eyes you and I don't understand. There's no emotion," Wiener told the jury. "You see a man who has made a life for himself. He doesn't bother anybody and doesn't want anybody to bother him."

In closing arguments, Lane claimed Bristlewolf was "bad, not mad ... paranoid schizophrenia, my behind, he's a mean, nasty human being."

'Chief' Recalls Marvelous Achievements

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — There was a time, before age dimmed his memory, when Chief Coy dazzled the boys at George the Greek's shoeshine parlor.

The chief had a marvelous memory. He could name the 48 states and the capitals, all the presidents of the United States, the first 50 popes and a string of other such facts — in four minutes flat, every time.

He never used a missal for Mass at Sacred Heart, the brown stone Catholic church where he went every morning. And once Coy claimed he'd never been asked a question about the Bible or ancient history he could not answer.

"He was a smart man," said George Mamas, who is still shining shoes in his shop on Fulton Street. "He never drink or smoke or chase the women or that stuff, but he know a lot."

The chief developed his great memory after quitting the ring. He quit the ring after beating everyone, an impressive skein of wrestlers and boxers the likes of Cyclone Miller and the Texas Bull Dog and even Knockout Brown, whom he knocked out in three rounds.

The readers of the National Police Gazette called him the most popular welterweight in the country in 1929 and gave him a silver watch. Readers voted for him because of his gumption and because of his face.

Chief Coy had an awesome face. The right side was paralyzed, frozen in place like the last days of a punchdrunk fighter. But his disfigurement happened long before he stepped into the ring. And as he grew up, his great, slanting face become his trademark as a fighter and later as a strongman, marathon runner and memory expert.

Coy will be 78 years old this month and doesn't live anymore in his old room at the Jefferson Hotel where on the walls he had a picture of Jesus and a picture of himself. He lives now at Pavilion Arms, a nursing home.

"You know my records?" he said recently, sitting by the window in the sun. "I got records'll never be broke."

In his prime, Coy bent steel bars into three-leaf clovers and ripped tobacco tins in half with his teeth. A brochure he had printed years ago proclaimed him "Robert Chief' Coy, The World's Most Versatile Athlete."

> "He never drink or smoke or chase the women or that stuff, but he know a lot."

There was the time he played 1,000 holes of golf without stopping, 51 hours straight, at the Madison Golf Course in Peoria. Once he played the piano in the window of a local music store for 118 hours, mostly "Blessed Jesus, Keep Me in Your Heart" and "Till We Meet Again."

"It was election time," George laughed. "He'd get politicans to pay him to put up their posters next to his piano. Chief Coy didn't tell them he was putting their opponents up, too."

Sometimes barefoot, sometimes in pouring rain, Coy would run long distances just to show he could do it. And once, on a $25 bet, he says he turned over a Model T Ford coupe, then uprighted it, tied a rope to the front end, slipped a loop around his fireplug of a neck and pulled the car around the block.

But for the locals, Coy's greatest achievement was the great pocket billiards marathon of 1930 at at George Chiames' pool hall downtown. Coy vowed to play billiards longer than any human being in the history of the world.

Newspaper stories recorded the event. Coy began at midnight and as the week wore on, crowds came and went. After a couple of days, Coy started mistaking the nine ball for the cue ball, but otherwise kept on his feet. After 120 hours, a telegram arrived from the National Billiards Association, recognizing the record performance. Spurred by the news, Coy vowed to play at least a week, but he did not.

By Saturday, hundreds of people were gathered in the corner around the yellow lamp where Coy, bent with fatigue, in bedroom slippers, played on.

At midnight, after 120 hours and 15 minutes, it was over. Coy gradually lost sight of the table altogether. He stagged backwards and began babbling deliriously. His great face looked worn and hollow.

Years ago, he told his friend George why he undertook his strange career of athletic and mental achievement. "They used to talk about me," Coy said. "You know, looking like I do and for so long. When I'd walk along I'd hear kids, and later grownups, talk about me as 'that guy.'"

Coy never had any choice. When he was an infant, his father struck him one day, paralyzing his face. It was his disfigured appearance, he said once, that gave him the iron determination to do the impossible.

If he cannot remember the details, it does not matter. It is enough to know, however dimly, that he set standards in this life and met them.

CHOIR DATES POSTPONED

PARIS (AP) — A series of performances by the Soviet Bolshoi Theater Choir scheduled for Paris has been postponed. The organizers, L'Agence Littraire et Artistique Parisienne, gave no reason for postponing the March 26-April 15 tour.
