City's bond package totals $16.8 million

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

After deleting two projects from the list, Midland City Council decided Tuesday on a $16.83 million package for a bond election planned for early September.

The council will meet at 10 a.m. Thursday in Council Chambers to decide the type of bonds before gathering at 10 a.m. Monday to set the date for the bond election.

Council members deleted proposals for a $150,000 remodeling of the city jail and a $2.5 million underground parking garage and above ground park next to the city's convention center.

Before cutting the list, total for the bond election had been $19.48 million.

Projects approved by the council include water and sewer system expansions, street improvements, a new city-county health facility, a new municipal court building, two-story expansion to City Hall, police station renovation and improvements to the city garage and maintenance buildings.

ADDITIONS TO the water and sewage treatment plant facilities are estimated at $7.8 million. Of that, $3.6 million would go for a planned expansion to the sewage treatment plant.

Another $6 million is slated for street bonds. Director of Public Works Fred Baker told the council the money would go for some known necessary projects with the remainder to be used for other projects as they become apparent.

Some of the planned projects include improvements to the drainage channel and extension of a storm sewer along Garfield Street in front of Midland College and along North A Street where flooding has been heavy recently.

Improvements also are planned for major thoroughfares such as Midkiff Road, Wadley Avenue and Garfield Street, the assessment paving program and upgrading traffic lights.

About $750,000 of the bond issue would finance a new city-county health building. Councilman Gordon Marcum II said the new building could become self-sustaining.

Currently the city pays rent to Midland Memorial Hospital, which houses the department.

Marcum said that rent could be applied to pay off bonds for the new facility under the bond proposal.

Marcum said state funds were available if the facility qualified as a regional health center.

Costs of keeping two satellite clinics—one on the eastside and the other on the southside of Midland—could be further reduced by combining all clinics into one building, said Councilwoman Doris Howbert.

The city hopes to "free up space for police quarters" by constructing a new municipal court building, Councilman G. Thane Akins said. Estimated cost for the structure is $380,000.

Currently, the municipal court is located in the Public Safety Building on East Texas Avenue.

PLANS CALL for the building to be put on city-owned land directly across from the Public Safety Building.

That project would allow remodeling police quarters in one step.

Council also approved renovation of the Public Safety Building. The structure currently houses the police department central fire station and the municipal court.

Cost of the remodeling has been estimated at $700,000. But the council cut $150,000 for improvements to the jail, saying funds for this may come from elsewhere, since

Apartment fire damage estimated at $20 million

HOUSTON (AP) — Whipped by strong northerly winds, a fierce fire tore through a fashionable, wood-shingled apartment complex, causing a "conservative $20 million" damage and leaving hundreds of residents homeless.

Fire Chief V.E. Rogers said the fire at the Woodway Square apartment complex was the worst he had seen in 24 years on the force.

The flames first appeared about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday and quickly jumped from building to building. At the height of the fire, more than 35 buildings were in flames, but no one was killed, authorities said.

About 450 of the 1,080 apartment units were destroyed and about 700 residents were left homeless, said Jerry Privette, a Woodway official.

He said a $2 million renovation of 15-year-old apartments had just been completed and damage would be a "conservative $20 million." His estimate did not include losses to the residents.

On the tennis courts, people arranged plush velour sofas and oak china cabinets, preparing for the night.

Standing beside the swimming pool were two young women in bikinis — their only clothes.

"Everything, everything's gone," mumbled Peggy Gardner, 19, a waitress. "No shoes, no money."

She and roommate Bette King, 21, spent the day at a Galveston beach about 30 miles south of Houston. "When we got home, our apartment was burned to the ground," Ms. Gardner said.

Arson is suspected, officials say. "We're questioning a couple of people right now," officer Danny Holmes of the police arson division said late Tuesday night.

No figures were available on the extent of the damage.

Rogers blamed the quick spread of the fire on the wood shingles that covered the huge Woodway apartment complex on the city's affluent near west side.

Just a few hours earlier, the Houston City Council had tabled an ordinance to strengthen safety requirements for wood-shingle roofs. Houston Mayor Jim McConn said he thought the measure would be reconsidered quickly.

"We're lucky nobody was killed," McConn said after a helicopter tour of the area.

Because most residents were away when the fire started, only a few were injured. Three persons were admitted to Houston hospitals.

Carter again pleads for windfall profits tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said from a trip to the grasslands of what this nation is, what its problems are," asked Republican congressional leaders today to support his proposed "windfall" oil profits tax.

Senate GOP Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said he told Carter at a breakfast meeting in the White House that "the chances of getting a windfall profits tax enacted are very good, indeed."

However, Baker said the president and the Republican leadership are not in agreement on the distribution of the revenue from the proposed tax on oil companies. The Republicans advocate taxing only those profits that are not plowed back into efforts to develop new energy sources.

Baker said he thought a compromise was possible. "You don't have to have a 100 percent plowback," he told reporters.

The senator also praised Carter for making an effort to open regular communication with congressional Republicans.

The president's nine-hour trip Tuesday to the lush green hills of Kentucky also brought him campaign-like acclaim in the small, whiskey-making city of Bardstown.

Carter expects to oppose Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter says he expects the Republicans to nominate Ronald Reagan for president next year but thinks Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee would be a more worthy candidate, the New York Times reported today.

In an interview with economics specialist Leonard Silk Monday night, Carter said he did not view Baker as easier to beat but as better qualified for the high office than the former California governor.

In his own party, he said he viewed Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. of California as a formidable challenger for the Democratic nomination. He said he did not think Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., would make a run for the nomination.

Carter also said he accepts that the country now is in a recession, but he does not think it will be a severe one and expects it to be over by next summer, the newspaper reported.

Carter told Silk that he expected unemployment to rise during the rest of this year and into 1980.

He said he would continue to focus his economic policy on arresting inflation, but did not rule out a tax cut next year should economic decline be sharper than expected, the Times said.

On another matter, Carter said that achieving Egyptian-Israeli unity was more vital than ever in light of a CIA report that the Soviet Union may soon have to start importing oil.

The military forces of Egypt and Israel are critical to stability in the Middle East, he said.

He said he hoped American Jewish leaders would support resolution of the Palestinian issue, without which stable peace between Egypt and Israel is not possible.

But in the interview, Carter also likened the Palestinian issue to the "civil rights movement here in the United States" and Jewish leaders in New York today reacted with outrage.

"Carter's suggestion that the PLO is akin to civil rights is the worst insult he could level at Americans trying to achieve true equality," said Arnold Foster, counsel of the Anti-Defamation League.

"Americans are not murderers or false revolutionaries," Foster said. "I'm flabbergasted at the insulting comparison."

The remark was called "inept and unfortunate" by Richard Cohen of the American Jewish Congress. Cohen said it was comparing nonviolent activism for fundamental rights and liberties with "terrorist attacks on innocent women and children by PLO killers whose purpose is to destroy the Jewish state."

Midland man shot to death

A Midland man was found shot to death at his home about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, a spokesman for the Midland County Sheriff's Department said today.

Felix Bermea Sr., 32, Route 3, was found dead by Midland Fire Department medical personnel when they arrived at his residence south of Midland, officials said. Peace Justice Robert Pine pronounced Bermea dead at the scene.

A suspect in the shooting was in the custody of the sheriff's department early today, officials said.

The weapon used in the shooting apparently was a small caliber gun, according to official reports.

A sheriff's department spokesman said it appeared Bermea had been shot about five times.

An autopsy has been ordered in the investigation of the shooting death.

Midland, Odessa hospitals to continue...separately

By SUSAN TOTH
Staff Writer

Odessa's Medical Center Hospital and Midland Memorial Hospital plan to continue efforts to upgrade cancer treatment facilities in the region.

The efforts, however, may be less a joint project than a race to see which one can get the upper hand first.

The medical staff of the Odessa hospital voted July 23 to retain the hospital's cobalt-therapy center there and to continue to pursue affiliation with the Sammons Cancer Center at Baylor University's School of Medicine in Dallas for chemotherapy treatment.

The vote came after a report to the group on attempts to gain regional support for the proposed Allison Permian Basin Radiation Therapy Center in Midland.

The medical staff's recommendations will be made to the hospital's board of managers at the Aug. 14 meeting.

MEMBERS OF THE Midland hospital building committee met Friday with the architect for the proposed Allison Center to plan changes on the application for the $2 million-plus center.

The amendments to the certificate-of-need application are expected to be filed next week, according to MMH Administrator Wayne Ulrich, despite the move by the Odessa physicians.

Medical Center officials originally had opposed the creation of the Midland treatment facility because, they contended, it would merely duplicate treatment available in Odessa.

Because federal guidelines increasingly are tightening up on excess hospital beds, improvements in one facility could block expansion or construction of the other.

The vote by the Odessa physicians, however, was characterized as a "middle of the road stance" by Odessa radiologist Dr. Robert Lewis.

"It (the vote) was way short of a statement of support," Lewis noted. On the other hand, in view of what's gone on before in the local community, it was about the least we could say."

Until plans for the Midland center are finalized, Lewis said, the Odessa physicians are reserving judgment. "It (the vote) was sort of a 'kissing-your-sister deal,'" he said.

"I don't see any opposition or any strong support at this time. Either may develop."

MIDLAND MEDICAL officials met with a nationally-known cancer treatment equipment specialist earlier this month in an effort to overcome objections from the Odessa group. The consultation resulted in a list of higher-powered linear accelerators and computerized radiation therapy equipment which would allow the Midland Allison Center to offer a wider range of services than any hospital in the region and added an extra $1.3 million to the price tag.

Midland officials also formed a regional ad hoc committee, drawing in former opponents and friends alike, to help make changes in the plans for the center and administer it after it was in operation.

The change in plans was designed to overcome obstacles in the path of the certificate of need — a requirement before the center can be constructed — and to win over Odessa physicians. In an earlier survey, 78 percent of Odessa physicians indicated they would not refer patients to the Midland center as it was originally planned.

Despite the vote Monday by the Odessa medical staff, Ulrich noted, Medical Center Hospital officials last week "indicated a willingness to continue working with us in developing this project, and we are continuing to keep them informed of the changes in our application."

WITH OR WITHOUT the support of the Odessa physicians, Ulrich said he expected the Allison Center to be approved and built.

"The increased size and scope of equipment and the upgrading from a 6-megavolt to a 20-megavolt linear accelerator will effectively serve to counteract any opposition from any one that our proposed facility is a duplication of facilities already available," Ulrich said.

"We will have such a wide array of facilities — exceeding anything available in this region — available to the citizens of West Texas that this center will serve."

Hospital district president Ed Magruder agreed.

"While he said he was unsure of the effect the Odessa vote might have on the Midland center, "We will continue to seek the help of everyone who is willing to join in the effort and hope it will be successful."

That success, Magruder said, will be assured once the center is constructed and patients request their doctors refer them to the closest center for treatment, "and that will be this one."

"It would be nice if we could expect every physician in the whole region to refer all patients who require radiation therapy to this center, but realistically, we can't expect everyone to do that regardless of what we have," Magruder said.

Ousted Odessa police chief issues eight-point statement

ODESSA — Ousted Assistant Police Chief Tommy Callendar issued an eight-point statement this morning contesting the reasons given for his forced resignation last Thursday.

The 20-year Odessa police veteran said he had withheld comment until now "because I have no intention of entering into a verbal shouting match in the news media."

In his statement, however, he said he did not believe Police Chief Jack Tomlin made the decision to dismiss him, as Tomlin contended.

"I wonder what pressure was brought to bear on him to take credit for this forced resignation without just cause," Callendar said in the statement.

Tomlin asked for Callendar's resignation after Callendar allegedly refused to allow two officers to appear in an El Paso hearing without a subpoena.

About that incident, Callendar said in the statement that he was "forced to resign on the face value of a letter from the El Paso DA's office which did not contain the full facts" in the case, that he has been refused a copy of the letter.

He also said he had been told by an assistant county attorney four days before the trial that the case had been resolved. The statement did not specify whether the attorney was from Ector or El Paso county.

Further, the statement said, "had a subpoena been issued as the law requires," the officers would have appeared. Without the subpoena, the statement contends, Odessa taxpayers would have had to pay the officers' expenses for the trip. Callendar said he wished to apologize to the district judge in the case "and assure him and everyone else the officers would have appeared in court had a subpoena been issued."

Callendar's forced resignation prompted Odessa police officers to hold elections Monday on the formation of an International Brotherhood of Police Officers Association chapter in Odessa.

Police officials said Tuesday 63 of the 134-man force had already paid dues to the organization, and some 90 had voted for the organization and a charter was expected "within 48 hours."

Chief reason for forming the union was "job security for the men," the spokesman said.

Callendar, in a telephone interview Tuesday, said he would take a "wait and see" stance on regaining his job through litigation if the union is formed.

Callendar's forced resignation Thursday was followed Tuesday by the resignation of 14-year city employee Bryan Henderson, public works director and city engineer for the city of Odessa.

After two-week battle, 6,000 acre blaze in Idaho wilderness contained

By The Associated Press

After a two-week battle that cost $307,000, firefighters finally have contained a 6,000-acre forest fire along the Middle Fork of the Salmon River in a scenic Idaho wilderness area.

The stubborn Ship Island fire was declared contained Tuesday evening. Forest Service spokeswoman Vera Crandall said fire lines have been established around the entire area.

She said the fire — which was burning along steep, almost inaccessible mountain slopes — might burn a month, "but at least now it won't spread."

U.S. Forest Service officials calculate the cost of battling that blaze was $307,000 through Tuesday. Another Middle Fork fire, 60 miles downstream, cost more than $500,000 to quell. It was controlled late Monday.

The Ship Island fire started July 17. Last Thursday, the blaze claimed the life of firefighter Kyle Pattee, 29, Ashton.

Most Midland gasoline dealers dislike DOE order to post profits

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

Midland service station owners expressed mixed reactions to the new Department of Energy ruling which would have required dealers to post profit margins for public inspection.

Until late Tuesday when the DOE eliminated their ruling, gasoline dealers were required to post on the premises in four-inch letters the maximum allowable selling price of gasoline or a certification that the price they are charging is at or below the maximum allowable price.

This, plus the pump price of gasoline, would have revealed the profit margin service station owners are making on their products.

Another ruling which allows for a 15.4 cents a gallon profit to dealers goes into effect today, according to DOE officials. Protests from angry service station owners around the country, though, caused the DOE to drop the regulation on posting profits.

Most dealers in Midland, contacted before DOE changed its mind, said they felt the ruling was unfair.

"It is something that is being forced down our throat," said Paul Thorne, a local service station owner.

"Why do they (the government) pick on the poor old service station operators," he said. "If the government does that to us, then they ought to have profit margins posted at grocery stores."

Thorne said he feels the service station owners are being singled out because gasoline is a popular, but scarce, commodity.

"It (gasoline) is the cheapest commodity Americans can buy," he claimed. "Just price a gallon of milk with a gallon of gas."

Ron Hollingsworth also agreed that the ruling would have discriminated against service station owners. He remarked that other businesses are not posting their profits, so why should the station owner.

Costs such as insurance, rent and labor for the service station have tripled and the profit margin is not that much, he noted.

"This, plus the pump price of gasoline gets into, they mess it up," Hollingsworth said.

Other station owners objected to the Department of Energy's ruling because they felt it was infringing on their right to privacy.

"I think it's nobody's business what my profit margin is," Darral Albrecht said.

But another service station owner was looking positively towards enacting the now-dead ruling. Tom Rice said he was glad the government was allowing the service station operators to tell consumers the true story of what they really make.

"Consumers finally will see that we are selling (gasoline) for less cost," Rice added. "They will see how little profit we are making off gasoline sales."

Harold Logan said the ruling did not bother him very much. He agrees that the 15.4 cents profit per gallon is a raise, but said he will leave the price of gasoline as it already stands.

Dealers are allowed a 15.4 cents profit margin for the gas they sell, but most of them said they will not immediately tack on an additional amount due to competition.

Innocent plea to be entered

SALEM, Mass. (AP)

A lawyer for a brother and sister who married after growing up in separate families says he will enter an innocent plea for his clients during their arraignment on incest charges.

Lawyer Joseph Gavin was to enter the innocent pleas today in Essex County Superior Court for David Goddu, 22, and Victoria Pi torino, 24, who grew up with adopted families in separate sections of the state.

They were married in May but their marriage is considered null by the state. They have been traveling since their marriage.

The couple appeared at Lawrence District Court for a probable cause hearing last week.

Extra charges may appease operators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, service stations may charge motorists extra for cleaning windshields, changing oil, filling tires and honoring credit cards, the Energy Department said Tuesday.

The department's decision is aimed at appeasing aroused service station owners who still planned to demonstrate today at the White House and the Capitol.

While gasoline dealers may charge separately for services other than gasoline, they "cannot make this a condition for buying" fuel, the department said.

Moreover, stations must give motorists the option of paying for gasoline with cash rather than credit cards, if an extra fee is charged.

Dealers also cannot charge extra for pumping gas at a full-service tank, the department said, but they can set up a self-service aisle.

The extra non-gasoline charges are not mandatory, the Energy Department said. And with gasoline suddenly available after weeks of long lines, many stations may be reluctant to impose the extra costs, said one department official who asked not to be identified.

The department Tuesday also eliminated a requirement, which had incensed many service station owners, that they post their profit margins on gasoline pumps. Station owners claimed the requirement was anti-competitive because it gave other dealers knowledge of their costs.

The new rule requires only that dealers post their maximum lawful selling price or a certificate attesting that they do not exceed that legal maximum, the department said.

Medical examiner demoted for sloppiness, impropriety

NEW YORK (AP) — The city's acting chief medical examiner, Dr. Michael Baden, has been demoted to deputy because of allegations of sloppiness and impropriety.

One allegation is that Baden once said publicly that former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller had died during sexual intercourse.

The demotion on Tuesday came just hours before he would have been named chief medical examiner, a post he has filled in an acting capacity since last Aug. 1. Baden, 45, reverts to his former job of deputy chief medical examiner.

In a news conference Tuesday, Mayor Edward Koch said, "I have decided on balance not to reappoint him. It is very painful for me. I have an obligation." No replacement was named.

Baden called the charges against him "untrue and unfounded" and politically inspired.

Dr. Reinaldo Ferrer, the health commissioner and Baden's immediate superior, said Baden lacked temperament and judgment. In a memo to Koch, Ferrer labeled Baden's alleged talk about Rockefeller's death last January "a serious instance of unprofessional conduct."

He said Baden focused on the death of the late governor and vice president during a lecture Feb. 9 at Lenox Hill Hospital, where Rockefeller was pronounced dead.

Ferrer said Baden "included a number of details not previously presented, in such fashion as to indicate that the governor had died during sexual intercourse."

Pre-registration schedules set

Pre-registration schedules for both secondary and elementary schools were announced this week by Payton Cook, pupil and community services director for the Midland public schools.

Secondary school pre-registration is scheduled today through Aug. 15 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Aug. 14 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. has been set as pre-registration day for all elementary schools for students new to a school campus. A student is new to a campus if any of the following conditions apply:

— The student is beginning school for the first time either as a first grader or kindergarten student.

— The student is transferring from another Midland school or from a private school after having completed kindergarten or first grade.

For example, a student who attended Travis Elementary School as a kindergartener last year whose family has moved into the Bowie Elementary School area should pre-register Aug. 14 at Bowie.

Another example is a child who attended a private school as a first grader last year and is enrolling in Sam Houston Elementary this fall. The pupil needs to pre-register Aug. 14 at Sam Houston.

— The student has moved to Midland during the summer from another school district and will be enrolling for the first time this school year in Midland. The student needs to pre-register in his area school.

Man waiting for burglar killed by police as burglar

TROY, Mich. (AP) — A 24-year-old Troy man, hiding in his van waiting for a burglar, was shot to death by two policemen who thought he was a burglar, a police spokesman said.

Troy Police Capt. Gary Mollenkopf called the incident "an unfortunate set of circumstances."

David Prior's sister said she visited the Troy police station to tell officers her brother would be hiding in the van that night. "I asked for extra surveillance and they killed him," Claudia Prior said.

According to Mollenkopf, Prior had decided to spend the night in the van after a thief had made off with stereo and radio equipment the two previous nights.

A neighbor called police reporting a burglar in the neighborhood, Mollenkopf said, and one officer approached the van, opened a door and shone his flashlight into the vehicle.

Mollenkopf said Prior then pointed his pellet gun at the officer and said, "You're dead."

The officer shot once or twice, then fell to the pavement to avoid being shot by Prior, the captain said. The second officer, thinking the first had been shot, then fired six shots into the van.

U.S. wants planes back from Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is attempting to buy back highly sophisticated F-14 fighter planes from Iran, the State Department said Tuesday night.

Fear that the U.S.-made jets will fall into Soviet hands is one reason the United States wants to get the 78 Navy jets back.

"We have been discussing with the Iranian government the possibility of our buying back the F-14s, which we originally sold to the Iranians," State Department spokeswoman Maryann Bader said. "But there has been no final resolution yet."

The jets cost about $25 million each, but the United States has told Iranians that it will not pay that much for the used fighters. The Washington Post reported in Wednesday's editions.

The Carter administration is also considering an alternative to paying cash, offering to pay for the planes with aerospace hardware, such as spare parts for Iranian civilian planes and for the less sophisticated fleet of F-14 fighter-bombers that Iran intends to keep flying, the newspaper said.

The Post said the government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini says it doesn't want to keep the F-14 jets, which require detailed maintenance.

Any elementary student who cannot pre-register Aug. 14 should pre-register before the opening of school Aug. 29, Cook said.

A student new to the campus who has moved from outside Midland or has transferred from a private school must have a report card or a birth certificate if he has not previously attended school, and a certificate of immunization.

The required immunizations are DPT, with one shot having been given after the fourth birthday; polio, measles and rubella. Mumps immunization is required for pupils aged 5 to 7 entering grades K, 1 or 2. By Texas law, immunizations must be current or in progress before a pupil may enroll in school.

New secondary students may pre-register between today and Aug. 15. Counselors will be on duty at the city's three junior high schools, two freshman schools and two high schools beginning today.

Secondary students who are moving to Midland or transferring from a private school should pre-register to insure a schedule of classes when school opens Aug. 29.

Because schedules of classes are computerized, those pupils who register late may not receive a class schedule the first days of school, said Cook. The parent or student should call the office of the counselor where the pupil will attend secondary school to make an appointment to pre-register as soon as possible, he said.

Revolutionary Sof Tap soles provide your most comfortable experience in footwear. Here's why: Sof Taps are cut-outs in the sole that have been fitted with a direct flexion molding. This process forms tabs on the walking surface (shaped like an animal's natural foot pads) that cushion every step you take. Sof Taps also prolong the life of the sole and an outworn ordinary shoe by up to 50%. Sof Tap soles are made from a revolutionary soft, supple, perforated leather. So soft, you won't have to break them in and even to the tenderest feet. The perforations allow air to circulate for foot health and comfort. Sof Taps are a breakthrough in footwear. # Confirmations likely by Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles W. Duncan is ready to join President Carter's newly overhauled Cabinet as energy secretary, and G. William Miller headed today for a Senate vote on his nomination to become treasury secretary.

Duncan, a wealthy former corporate executive who once worked as a roustabout in the Texas oil fields, was confirmed Tuesday by the Senate on a 95-1 vote to succeed James R. Schlesinger as Carter's chief adviser on energy policy.

Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, was approved unanimously today by the Senate Finance Committee to succeed W. Michael Blumenthal as treasury secretary.

At the same time, the Senate Banking Committee approved without dissent the nomination of Paul A. Volcker, an economist, banker and former undersecretary of the treasury in the Nixon administration, to succeed Miller as Federal Reserve chairman.

Senate confirmation of Miller and Volcker was expected by Friday, when Congress begins its month-long August recess.

It is expected Duncan will be sworn in before Labor Day to take over an agency which has been repeatedly criticized as inefficient and slow-moving in a time of critical energy shortages.

Duncan was praised by members of the Senate Energy Committee as an experienced manager who would improve the workings of the department, which has an annual budget of $11 billion.

Meanwhile, the Senate Judiciary Committee also took quick action on another Carter Cabinet change Tuesday, approving Benjamin Civiletti as successor to Attorney General Griffin Bell.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said he will cast the only no vote against the Duncan nomination because Duncan had no previous experience in developing new sources of energy or improving the production of domestic oil.

Proxmire said he was also disturbed because Duncan played no part in devising the newest of Carter's energy proposals now working their way through the Congress.

Duncan is a former president of the Coca-Cola Co. and has been deputy secretary of defense since the beginning of the Carter administration.

Except for a job as a young laborer in the oil fields, he has not worked for oil or other energy producing companies.

He is a millionaire and is believed to be the richest member of the newly restructured Carter Cabinet.

"I believe he will do a good job," said Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., senior Republican on the committee, cautioned against expecting too much from Duncan in handling tough, complex energy issues. "We must not expect him to be a miracle worker," he said. "He is a human being."

Reflecting the political pressures generated by energy concerns, the full Senate acted only one day after Duncan testified before the Senate Energy Committee. The committee had approved the nomination 16-0 only a few hours after Duncan completed his testimony.

The committee vote on Civiletti, currently the deputy attorney general, cleared the way for speedy action by the full Senate, probably later this week.

There was little discussion among Judiciary Committee members, despite some opposition expressed by Hispanic leaders during hearings last week.

They said Civiletti had failed to investigate cases of police brutality and other civil rights violations against Hispanics.

Civiletti said he had pursued police brutality cases whenever there were grounds for a federal prosecution and met with his critics after they testified.

Investigation of shootings under way

Investigation into the Sunday shooting of six men during the 19th Annual Family Fair at Our Lady Guadalupe Church, 1301 Cherry Lane, was continuing today, according to a spokesman for the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

No formal charges stemming from the shootings had been filed early today, officials said.

Six men were injured in two shooting incidents that occurred early Sunday morning, following Saturday night's festivities at the fair, and late Sunday night.

One of the six men, John Cedillos, 20, was released Monday from Medical Center Hospital in Odessa where he was transferred Sunday.

The five other men injured in the Sunday shootings were listed today in fair condition at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Initial fighting at the fair began about 12:30 a.m. when Jose Galindo, 24, was shot. He originally was admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital in critical condition.

Galindo's brother, Manuel Galindo, was treated and released from the hospital Sunday morning for a cut above the eye.

Five other men were injured about 10:30 p.m. Sunday when a second fight erupted at the fair.

Officials at the sheriff's department have theorized that the two fights were the product of a "long-standing family feud."

A man treated for bullet wounds as a result of the Sunday night shooting and currently in Midland Memorial Hospital is in the custody of the sheriff's department.

A .38 caliber pistol is in the custody of the sheriff's department. Deputies today were looking for a small caliber pistol that may have been used in the shootings, officials said.

Continued use of imported fuel 'dangerous,' Odessa group told

By BILL MODISSETT Staff Writer

ODESSA — The United States is on dangerous ground by relying on imported oil to meet its energy needs, Houston Natural Gas Corp. chairman Robert R. Herring warned Monday in Odessa.

Herring was speaking at the American Bank of Odessa's fourth annual Silver Bar Award presentation at Odessa Country Club. During that luncheon, Herring also predicted an impending confrontation over energy between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Herring, chairman and chief executive officer of Houston Natural Gas Corp., was featured speaker at the presentation ceremony. The award this year went to Baxter L. Breaux, president of Permian Engineering & Manufacturing Corp. of Odessa.

The award is presented annually to the Ector County resident who "best exemplifies the highest traditions of accomplishment under the American system of free enterprise," bank officials said.

During his address, Herring warned those in attendance that "political maneuvering" by the Soviet Union in Saudi Arabia will continue, thus threatening the reliability of importing oil from that country. He also opined that the quest for energy will lead to a confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The United States, Herring said, must move ahead urgently in developing domestic energy to reduce its vulnerability to the Soviet Union.

Herring also said the United States must push for the quick resolution of problems in Saudi Arabia to give some stability to the relationship with that country.

"I'm deeply concerned today about the present course of our nation," Herring told the gathering.

He said the current uncertainty being felt in the oil industry can't be blamed solely on President Jimmy Carter because the Congress has been "inept" in dealing with the energy situation.

Herring also urged increased use of coal in this country, saying such a move will result in lower costs to consumers and will free natural gas now being used for the production of electricity for other uses.

During a press conference preceding the ceremony and luncheon, Herring and Ben F. Love of Houston, chairman of Texas Commerce Bancshares, told news media representatives they do not believe the energy situation will affect financial institutions severely. Love said he believes those institutions will continue to make a "concerted effort" to make money available for domestic energy production.

Speaking of the uncertainty currently being felt by the oil industry concerning what course the federal government will take on the energy situation, Herring said. "We certainly can't operate in a high-risk business in a sea of uncertainty."

He also said if the oil industry had the freedom it needs for enhanced recovery operations it could substantially increase the amount of oil being produced within the United States, cutting dependence on imported oil.

Chances are the price of oil will continue to rise, said Herring, sparking increased drilling activity in the Permian Basin area.

Touching briefly on the windfall profits tax proposed for the oil industry by President Carter, Herring said such a tax will not hurt the industry if the federal government allows the industry tax credits for funds invested on fuel development. Otherwise, the tax — if enacted — will hurt the industry, he said.

Summarizing his statements, Herring said, "We have a desperate situation in this country."

Breaux, winner of this year's Silver Bar Award, moved to Odessa in 1962. His firm, Permian Engineering & Manufacturing Corp., manufactures and repairs oil well servicing equipment.

The award was presented by George Haley, president of American Bank of Odessa, who told the gathering, "The winner exemplifies achievement of the highest order."

The recipient of the annual award is chosen by an anonymous committee from nominations given to the bank.

Prosecutors questioning prospective Davis jurors

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors were prepared today to resume questioning of 65 prospective jurors that remain in the murder conspiracy trial of millionaire Cullen Davis.

The panel of 65 was seated Tuesday after State District Judge Gordon Gray dismissed 10 more prospects who said they had formed an opinion in the case. Monday, he dismissed 30 persons who said their feelings as to Davis' guilt or innocence would influence their verdict.

Gray said he hoped 32 "qualified" jurors could be found among the remaining 65 prospects, but conceded it would take at least a week to do so.

Prosecutors completed individual examinations of six prospects on Tuesday. Three were excused for cause.

After the state ends its questioning, the defense, led by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, will conduct its interrogation.

Once the 32 are agreed upon, prosecutors and defense attorneys will "strike" 10 each. The surviving 12 will form the jury for a trial some say could extend until Christmas.

Fort Worth industrialist Davis, 45, is accused of masterminding a summer-time 1978 murder-for-hire scheme involving his divorce judge, Joe Eldson.

Eldson, who was not harmed, masqueraded as the victim of a contract killer as part of an FBI scenario that led to Davis' arrest Aug. 20.

The case was transferred to Houston last fall and then back to Fort Worth after the Houston jury deadlocked 6-4 for conviction and a mistrial was declared Jan. 22.

The defense contends Davis was framed by his ex-wife Priscilla and others.

Chief prosecutor Jack Strickland addressed the panel of 65 Tuesday afternoon and then launched into individual questioning of the prospective jurors.

He held the gavel the indictment against Davis alleges both solicitation and conspiracy to commit capital murder, first degree felonies punishable by a maximum sentence of life in prison.

Haynes objected vehemently when Strickland said the indictment alleged Davis conspired to "assassinate Joe Eldson, to have him killed for money."

Council cuts some projects from coming bond issue

federal prisoners are kept in the city jail with the city receiving a certain amount from the federal government each day. That money may go for jail improvements, the council noted.

Expansion of City Hall, which already has a basement and three above-ground floors, was added to the list. Estimated cost for adding two floors is $750,000. This would include the cost of setting up an emergency operations room in case of a disaster.

Expanding the city garage and an operations building was included at an estimated cost of $600,000. The operations building was constructed over an old landfill, Baker said. The landfill has settled about a foot, causing walls in the building to fall down. He proposed moving the building to firmer ground.

THE TWO-LEVEL underground parking garage for Midland Center fell on a 3-2 vote with only Akins and Councilman Tom Sloan in favor of it.

The half block area next to the convention center would have been used for two levels of parking underground with the part above the ground to be converted into a park area.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. pointed out that land on neighboring blocks

Five arrested on drug charges

Law enforcement officials from the federal government and area cities served a search warrant Tuesday and arrested five persons suspected of conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamine in Odessa.

At the same time, a laboratory suspected of being used to manufacture methamphetamines was seized.

At 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, federal agents from the Drug Enforcement Agency and law enforcement officers from Midland, Odessa, Alpine and the Ector County Sheriff's Department, served a search warrant at a residence west of Odessa.

Five people were arrested and are in Midland City Jail.

which had been converted into metered parking is not being utilized completely. Before going ahead with the underground garage, he suggested the council wait a year to see if more parking will be warranted with the center's opening in January 1980.

His idea was opposed by Joe Kloesel, president of Midland Chamber of Commerce, who said, "The chamber believes there is a need for the parking space downtown. I feel this is the right place and the right time (for the parking garage). You wouldn't be gaining anything by waiting."

Sloan favored using the land for a parking garage, noting the city had purchased that land and forced the stores on it to close.

FRED FAULKNER of the Parks and Recreation Commission suggested various parks improvements totaling $1 million be added to the bond issue. But Angelo said some of the items were going to be accomplished with revenue sharing funds. The motion to add parks improvements failed.

When the council meets in a second special session this week, it will have to decide what type of bonds to obtain. City fathers also will review how much higher water and sewage rates will have to be raised to pay off the revenue bonds on these projects.

More rain likely tonight, Basin area weatherman says

Cool temperatures and light rain greeted many Permian Basin residents again this morning although rainfall amounts were small throughout the area.

But the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport said this morning that more rain is likely tonight.

An official .10 inch of rain had been recorded at the weather service office by early this morning. Reports from throughout the city of Midland indicated drizzle still was falling.

Monday night's rainfall boosted the total for this year, so far, in Midland to 10.13 — a full 1.97 inches over the normal amount. The annual average rainfall for Midland is 13.51, according to the National Weather Service.

In North Midland, some areas recorded as much as .4 inch overnight Monday and others reported .26. The Midland Farmers' Co-op, located 1.5 miles east of Midland, received about an inch of rain Monday night.

Greenwood, located 10 miles east of Midland, received about half an inch Monday night and reported drizzle this morning. Greenwood Estates, five miles due north of Midland Regional Airport, reported .2 inch this morning.

In the Permian Basin area, McCamey received the heaviest rainfall, according to reports. Precipitation there was measured at one inch. One report indicated that Forsan, south of Big Spring, received 1.5 inches.

Lamesa reported receiving about .25 inch. Other communities reporting rainfall today included Andrews, Stanton, Rankin, Big Lake, Crane, Big Spring and Odessa.

Monahans received about .96 inch.

Temperatures were cooler this morning, with the thermometer dropping to a comfortable 66 degrees about 6 a.m. today in Midland. Low temperature tonight is expected to be near 70 and the high on Thursday should climb into the lower 90s.

This morning's low, however, couldn't match the record low temperature of 56 degrees set in 1936. Record high for an Aug. 1 is 105 degrees set in 1944.

Meanwhile, the weatherman said Midlanders can expect possibly more rainfall tonight. A 30 percent chance for rain is forecast for tonight. Skies should be partly cloudy Thursday.

Very heavy thunderstorms were reported early today along a weak cool front extending along a line from Texarkana to San Angelo to Marfa.

Most of the heavy activity was located along the front between Texarkana and San Angelo.

Contributions pour in for destitute lady, 91, jailed for stealing $15

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — One man sent a $700 check; another mailed $100 in cash. Some sent a $1 bill with no return address. Several mailed checks for $15.04 — the exact value of the food destitute 91-year-old Mattie Schultz was jailed for stealing last week.

Contributions for Mrs. Schultz are pouring in from across the nation. A total of $2,300 was received Monday and Lorraine Wernert, president of the senior citizens group coordinating the fund, estimated Tuesday that the total would reach $7,000.

An Illinois man scrawled on a scrap of paper, "I hope this helps. No one should have to steal to survive in the U.S.A." The note was clipped to a $700 check.

"God bless you," wrote an unidentified woman who mailed a $1 bill.

The national attention, however, has done more than generate contributions. It's also soiled San Antonio's image, said Mayor Lila Cockrell, who has launched an investigation into why Night Magistrate Mary Elizabeth Ladd forced Mrs. Schultz to spend a night in jail.

"Since this case has been brought out so much in the media, not only locally, but across the country, I felt a responsibility to inquire about it," said the mayor. "I think it is most unfortunate. The city of San Antonio is not an uncaring city."

Mrs. Cockrell said she would report to city council members in Thursday's executive session. Ms. Ladd, 28, often at odds with other city and county judicial officials, is appointed by the council.

Mrs. Schultz was "resting comfortably" Tuesday in a hospital, where she was admitted last Friday for exhaustion brought on by her sudden celebrity status.

"The excitement was just too much for her. She is thrilled and shocked by all the help. It's something she didn't expect," said Rev. Bob Pugh, who has regular contact with Mrs. Schultz.

Officials at the supermarket have dropped the misdemeanor theft charges, which carried a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Mrs. Schultz had been bilked out of her $5,000 life savings by con artists in 1973. She said she lived on $238 per month in pensions. Texas Department of Human Resources officials said, however, that Mrs. Schultz had on several occasions refused aid.

Pension reform plan

The annual effort to trim the federal budget usually zeroes in on the spending for the national defense, a convenient target.

And the focus generally is on the highly visible tools of war — the planes, the tanks, the aircraft carriers.

But a significant chunk of the Defense Department's spending program each year is mandated for the generous military pension system, which has no direct bearing on the national security. Defense Secretary Harold Brown estimates that retirement costs now demand about 8 percent of the total defense budget.

Last year, a presidential commission proposed reforms to reduce the pension burden and to bring more equity to the pension system. Now the recommendations have been shaped into legislation by the Pentagon and sent to Congress.

The package, if approved, will save in the long run some $2.5 billion a year. To avoid penalizing present military personnel, however, the savings will be delayed until about the turn of the century.

And, indeed, costs will rise during the next few years as more soldiers, sailors and Marines are drawn into the pension system.

The reform plan acknowledges the nation's obligation to honor its pledge to current personnel. It promises reductions in the practice of "double-dipping," which allows retired military personnel to draw a full pension while working at a civilian government job. It would make military personnel eligible for pensions after 10 years, instead of the present minimum of 20 years. It would delay a portion of pension benefits, which currently go to many retirees in their late 30s, until the beneficiary reaches the age of 60.

Persons now in the service could choose either the new retirement plan or stick with the one presently in force. Potential "short termers," predictably, would opt for the new system, while career people would prefer the old. New recruits would be covered by the reform plan.

The reform legislation is fair. A new generation of taxpayers will enjoy a reduced burden from military retirement payments. The retirement program will remain a recruitment incentive with the promise of greater participation in retirement benefits.

Congress — and the military establishment — should look upon the reform plan with favor.

New era in Nicaragua

When the Roman Catholic archbishop blessed the junta of National Reconstruction in the old national palace by the Plaza of the Republic in Managua the other day, a new era opened for Nicaragua.

It ended more than 40 years of rule — misrule, many would say — by the Somoza family, aided and abetted over the years by the government of the United States of America.

The U.S. abandoned Somoza, in its wisdom, and we are now attempting to make a new start in our relationship with Nicaragua. That's good but it doesn't wipe out the past. There will be resentment and anti-Americanism for many years to come.

We can hope that the junta will be moderate, that not many "war criminals" will be executed, that the new government will not be Castro-like.

But there is really very little we can do about it if the Nicaraguan revolution follows the Iranian or the Cuban pattern.

We must be friendly so long as the Nicaraguans are friendly, helpful if they are willing to accept our help and respectful so long as they are not disrespectful.

The Nicaraguans are quite capable of governing themselves. They don't need our instruction or our intervention.

These living practitioners merit a medal, Jimmy

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter asked us to say something good about America. Okay, I will. The Preservation Hall Jazz Band of New Orleans is what is good about America. Its traditional music is happy, hopeful, lively and unpretentious like the country once was and ought to be.

It is Negro music, born in New Orleans well over a century ago, and played to make people happy. There are only two score musicians left who are recognized practitioners of this uniquely American music.

They are old men now. As these pioneers die off, the seven remaining New Orleans jazz bands are patched up with an occasional white, chosen only because of demonstrated and unquestioned competency in playing this special style. New Orleans jazz is largely four-beat and differs considerably from the two-beat "Dixieland" developed by white musicians from the authentic article.

The Preservation Hall band played to packed houses here last week at the Wolf Trap Farm Park for the Performing Arts. The middle-aged clapped, cheered, whistled and shouted but remained in their seats while young people in the audience got up and snake-danced in the aisles to foot-tapping favorites. "Basin Street," "Amen," "Ice Cream," "I Sing Because I'm Happy," "I Ain't Got Nobody" and the "Saints Go Marchin' In" roused audiences for two nights.

Someone once remarked that the Preservation Hall Jazz Band is the only act where parents aren't embarrassed to bring their children, and conversely, where children aren't embarrassed to be with their parents.

This observation is tribute to the classic quality of this style of music. As one seasoned practitioner puts it: "We play pretty for all the people." This music is simple, never hectic or frantic, or capable of driving anybody away. But trends and fads in lesser forms drove it away many times in the past 50 years. Consequently, New Orleans jazz musicians often fell on hard times or had to take other work.

Look at the core of this band. There's Willie J. Humphrey Jr., the clarinetist, born in 1900. He played during World War I, later did his jazz on Streckfus riverboats on the Mississippi. He had learned from his grandfather, born a generation before the Civil War. Even at 79, way past Social Security age, Willie tries to make his music "a little bit better."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

They get away with murder here

WASHINGTON — Two years ago, Dragisa Kasikovich, chief editorial writer of the militantly anti-communist Serbian-American newspaper, Liberty, was brutally beaten and stabbed to death in Chicago, along with the 9-year-old daughter of his fiancée.

Regrettably, the murders may have been instigated unwittingly by our column. The previous day, we had detailed the intervention of the UDB, Yugoslavia's secret police, in affairs of the Serbian Orthodox Church. The column was published in Liberty along with Kasikovich's editorial comments, which may have led his killers to believe mistakenly, that he was the source of our information.

This is the suspicion of Senate investigators. The murders were never solved. Now we are beginning to understand why.

Top-secret intelligence documents make clear that foreign agents can literally get away with murder in the United States, as long as the FBI and the State Department decide it doesn't affect our own national security.

At least eight prominent anti-communist exiles have been assassinated in this country since 1955, intelligence sources told us. One was strangled with his necktie, another had his head split open and a third was blown to bits in his car.

A top-secret report spells out for such anti-communist exiles — and the hired guns who stalk them — just what kind of protection the exiles can expect from the FBI. None.

"National security" is, operationally, not deemed to include threats against United States residents directed at chilling or curtailing their political activity," the report states.

In other words, political exiles are fair game for the paid killers of the repressive regimes that they fled to the United States to escape. Their only protection is the local police in the communities they live in. But as the secret report notes, "local police departments are hardly a match for foreign intelligence services," whose agents frequently operate with the advantage of diplomatic immunity.

The FBI concentrates its limited manpower and budget in the counterintelligence area on countries "whose intelligence activities are hostile to, or of particular concern to, the national security of the United States," according to agency guidelines.

But there's "an easy way out" in cases of political murder. An FBI source told our associate Dale Van Atta that "we can accurately say no federal statutes were violated in these foreign agent incidents and so we aren't required to help the local police."

Even this limited interest in agents of supposedly "hostile" powers is absent in cases involving nations whose intelligence operations are considered of lower priority, like Chile, Iran and the Philippines. It's always "open season" on political refugees from those repressive regimes.

Even in the unlikely event that the FBI sticks its nose into a politically sensitive area, the CIA and the State Department are standing by, ready to discourage any embarrassing enthusiasm. A top-secret report, prepared for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by its counsel, Michael Glennon, cites two instances when the FBI was warned about pursuing for-

INSIDE REPORT: President signals change in his tax-cut thinking

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although it came out in his old fuzzy use of language, now supposedly replaced by decisive rhetoric, President Carter last week tipped a change that dwarfs all the recent cosmetic transformations: a tax cut effective next Jan. 1.

The eight members of the House and Senate gathered at the White House Thursday morning to discuss an anti-inflation policy could scarcely believe their ears. Shortly after entering the meeting, the president made a statement that, according to note-taking lawmakers, was close to this: It might be a very good idea if, in about October, we propose a tax cut of around $20 billion effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Whether this constituted a flat statement of a 180-degree policy change was cloaked by Carter's old imprecision. But even if he was not proclaiming an instant abandonment of his iron line against any tax reduction in the face of deepening recession, he was obliquely signalling a high probability that change is on its way. Nobody left the White House with much doubt on that score.

The political implications surpass anything done so far to salvage Carter's presidency. Republicans have been counting on the administration to remain in the deep root-canal school of political economy: when people really suffer from economic policy, it must be working. If Carter instead embraces tax reduction, it may blunt the Republican edge for 1980 while restoring his own political fortunes.

The first sign of this reassessment came after we reported that Carter, just as last year, was lagging behind the conservative tax-cut coalition in Congress. One senior administration official, a member of the Economic Policy Group, told us he agreed with that assessment and hinted that change was ahead.

The change was suggested at Carter's July 25 news conference. Responding to a question about Republican tax-cut plans, he declared "there is no free lunch" but did not rule out a tax cut. "When I heard that," one influential liberal Democratic congressman, who has been backing the president's hold-the-line campaign against tax cuts, told us, "I felt a cold chill."

Chill or not, this congressman was in the White House next morning for a regular meeting of the Democratic congressional task force against inflation with anti-inflation czar Alfred Kahn. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas started the fireworks by declaring that with unemployment expected to surpass 8.5 percent in the current recession, a tax cut is absolutely imperative.

That set off a barrage from practically everybody else present, especially the Democratic fiscal big guns of Capitol Hill, all ardent root-canal advocates: Chairman Edmund Muskie of the Senate Budget Committee; Chairman Robert Giaimo of the House Budget Committee; Chairman Al Ullman of the House Ways and Means Committee. They insisted on tight fiscal policy, no matter how deep the recession goes.

Bentsen, chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, retorted that his colleagues could think what they would but he was predicting the administration, probably by October, would be advocating a tax cut for Jan. 1. It was then that Jimmy Carter entered the room to lend credence to Bentsen's forecast.

Carter's opaque statement — a cross between a hedged forecast, a melancholy wish and a teasing hint — left the congressional budget-balancers with their mouths gaping. Giaimo and Muskie quickly responded that the president's own balanced budget must not be abandoned.

After Carter left the room, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York (who had remained silent) approached White House domestic policy chief Stuart Eizenstat and asked him whether it was not true that the president had just advocated tax reduction. No, the imperturbable Eizenstat replied calmly, the president was merely promising to take another look in October.

Whether Eizenstat joins the congressional liberals in opposing quick tax reduction, it is considered certain that Vice President Walter Mondale (present but silent during the meeting) will be fighting against them. Despite Carter's surprise, nobody believes the battle is over.

The new element is that the president was obviously impressed with what Bentsen told him on the mountain during the Camp David meetings. Considering the inflationary boosts of income tax brackets and the Social Security payroll taxes, it will take over $20 million for the American taxpayer to stay even. At least another $10 billion is needed to promote capital formation. Add to this rising unemployment rolls, and the president may become an ardent tax-cutter.

Carter failing to cut personnel.

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter seems to have promised more than he can deliver with his pledge to "cut the total size of the federal workforce."

He said that in an address to the nation Oct. 24 in which he outlined several steps he would take to combat inflation.

But at last count the total federal workforce has actually grown since then. As of May it was up about 27,000 people, to 2.9 million civilian workers.

Even discounting normal summer hirings and hiring in the Postal Service, Congress and other areas outside direct presidential control, federal employment is still creeping up.

In fact, the president may soon be forced to throw 1,000 to 2,000 federal workers off the payroll next Oct. 1 to meet a new legal ceiling on federal employment. He had hoped to cut employment through attrition and, in the process, come in well under the ceiling.

True, Carter's actions have slowed hiring of full-time federal workers in the sector he controls directly. But this has been offset to a large degree by increased hiring of part-time and temporary help, which Carter did not attempt to cut.

Carter's proposed budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, also calls for reductions in the workforce. If he sticks to it, some of the promised cuts will eventually take place.

But so far Carter hasn't delivered what he promised, much as he failed to deliver on his campaign pledge to cut the number of federal agencies from an alleged 1,900 or so to 200.

Carter now has no hope whatsoever of getting the total number of governmental units anywhere close to 200, and in fact has abandoned or watered down several of his major reorganization plans because of congressional opposition.

What Carter promised Oct. 24 was this: "We will slash federal hiring and cut the federal workforce. I'm ordering tonight a cut in federal hiring (that) will cut the total size of the federal workforce."

Though he promised to cut "total" employment, he ordered only a semi-freeze on hiring, only in the segment he controls directly, and only of full-time, permanent employees. He left a loophole for part-time and temporary help.

But it sounded stronger to promise a "total" cut than to promise a cut in "full-time permanent employment in the executive branch, excluding the Postal Service," which is what he actually attempted.

Carter let agencies fill only half their full-time vacancies as they came open. The order lasted only a few months and was quietly replaced by specific personnel ceilings in January.

These actions have had their effect. As of May, the latest period for which the federal Office of Personnel Management has figures, there were 28,212 fewer full-time federal workers under Carter's direct control than there were when he spoke.

But bureaucrats have endured hiring freezes off and on for decades, and know how to get the government's work done in spite of them. This time they seem to have hired more than 40,000 part-time and temporary workers to take up the slack. While full-time, permanent employment is down in Carter's segment of the government, total employment in that segment — including part-time and temporary workers — has actually increased by about 14,000 since his speech.

All this leaves Carter with nearly 27,000 more federal workers drawing pay than will legally be allowed on the payroll Oct. 1, under a ceiling imposed by Congress even before Carter promised his cut.

Free clinic slated Saturday at college

A free blood-pressure and breathing function clinic will be held at Midland College Saturday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. in the Occupational-Technical Building.

"The purpose of the clinic is to evaluate people who may have breathing problems or high blood pressure," according to Merv Cross, director of the MC respiratory therapy program.

The screening process requires very little time, is totally painless and all test results will be confidential, Cross said.

"If anyone is having problems such as shortness of breath, chronic cough, dizziness or frequent headaches, he's encouraged to attend the clinic," Cross said. "The screening process could save an individual costly hospital expenses by recognizing a problem early enough to correct it by simple measures."

The clinic is sponsored by the students participating in the respiratory therapy program at Midland College, Midland Memorial Hospital Women's Auxiliary, Midland County Lung Clinic and State Medical Supply, Inc. of Abilene, which is furnishing some of the testing equipment.

Signs will be posted on campus giving directions to the Occupational-Technical Building, and more information about the clinic may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 258.

Use air to save gasoline

NEW YORK (AP) — A recent survey by the Illinois Institute of Technology found that 50 to 70 percent of tires checked were underinflated during the summer and 60 to 80 percent had the same deficiency in the winter.

Not only is proper inflation crucial in the performance and safety of tires, says Firestone's director of consumer affairs, Jack B. Scarliff, it also helps to lower gas consumption, since underinflation increases rolling resistance.

'Just early round,' Bundy pledges

MIAMI (AP) — Condemned by a judge as "a total waste of humanity," Theodore Bundy has been ordered to pay with his life for the beating and strangulation murders of two sleeping women. But it may be a long time before the people of Florida collect.

"In a way, this is my opening statement," the articulate former law student said in an emotion-choked monologue Tuesday shortly before he was ordered to die in Florida's electric chair.

"This is just the first...early round of a long battle," Bundy vowed between sniffs. "I haven't given up by any means." It was the first time in his five-week trial he had shown any emotion.

"He refused to plead for mercy. 'Absurd,' said Bundy, 'to ask for mercy for something I did not do.'"

Judge Edward D. Cowart was unimpressed. "It's a tragedy for this court to see such a total waste of humanity," said the judge. "You're a bright young man. You'd have made a good lawyer. I'd have loved to have you practice before me. But you went another way, partner."

Twice the judge ordered Bundy put to death "by a current of electricity...passed through your body until you are dead," for the deaths of Margaret Bowman, 21, and Lisa Levy, 20.

Cowart said the beating of Miss Bowman "was vicious, vile, wicked and atrocious."

Both women were attacked with a crude oak club as they slept in the Chi Omega Sorority house at Florida State University in Tallahassee the morning of Jan. 15, 1978. Bundy also was convicted of three counts of attempted murder in the beatings of three other women who lived in the sorority house and in a nearby apartment. Cowart sentenced Bundy to 198 years in prison for burglary.

Louise Bundy, 52, of Tacoma, Wash., looked at the courtroom floor as the sentences were imposed on the son she has called "my pride and joy." Then she left, tight-lipped, saying nothing.

Death sentences have taken on added impact in Florida since the state sent convicted murderer John Spenklink to the electric chair on May 25.

But Bundy's determination to fight his sentence, combined with other pending trials and an automatic Florida review process, seem certain to push any potential execution date years into the future.

Bundy is due for trial Sept. 17 in Lake City, Fla., on a charge of strangling 12-year-old Kimberly Diane Leach on Feb. 9, 1978. The prosecutor there says he expects Bundy to be made available.

Bundy also is charged with murdering a Michigan nurse near Aspen, Colo., in January 1976, but Colorado authorities say they're probably the last in line for Bundy. A 15-year Utah prison sentence awaits him for the 1974 kidnapping of Carol DaRonch near Salt Lake City.

Bundy's attorneys have already announced they will seek a new trial in the Chi Omega case. And they say they have found a half-dozen constitutional grounds for appeals. Meanwhile, Bundy has an automatic right of appeal straight to the Florida Supreme Court.

Exterminators leave a Schenectady, N.Y., home Tuesday after doing battle with "millions" of cockroaches and other insects found there. ## Police find 'ankle-deep' swarm of cockroaches

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — Police arrived on the quiet city street expecting only to respond to a call about a barking dog. Instead, they found an ankle-deep swarm of cockroaches that had spilled from a house to the street and trees, covering one policeman as he stepped from his cruiser.

Inside, the officers discovered a 64-year-old woman with her two dozen dogs, 15 cats, two mice and a parrot — all victimized by cockroach and flea bites.

"It's unbelievable, but true," said police Sgt. Rudy Basha, who said the cockroaches were "ankle deep" in some spots. "The cockroaches were all over the street. The walls of the house were so full that they had nowhere else to go."

Schenectady's health commissioner, Dr. William Bartlett called the infestation "incredible," and added it was the worst he's ever seen in 20 years on the job.

Although city police had initially said there were "hundreds of thousands" of cockroaches around the house, exterminator Harry Linindoll said later "the number is definitely in the millions."

One of the two women who lived in the house, 64-year-old Iva Fletcher, was taken to Ellis Hospital, where she was in satisfactory condition with cockroach and flea bites covering much of her body.

The ambulance that transported the woman, as well as the Schenectady Animal Shelter van and four police vehicles at the scene of the incident, had to be fumigated.

James Provost, manager of the animal shelter where the pets were taken, said the cats were so starved in the house they had fed on each other's flesh. The cockroaches, in turn, had apparently feasted on the flesh of everything in the house, including each other.

Provost added that several of the mice and the cats had to be destroyed because they were so badly bitten.

"It was a nightmare," Provost said. "I had to shake my head to find out if it really happened." Provost said cockroaches stretched from "wall to wall and floor to ceiling."

The other resident of the house, 66-year-old Madeline Cooper, was not home at the time of the incident. Both women face cruelty-to animals charges filed by the animal shelter.

Tuesday night, city officials sprayed insecticides over a three-block area around the infested house, and pledged to have the building torn down by the end of this week.

Landlord Peter Galvin, who lives in Rotterdam, N.Y., said the infestation was not his fault. He said the women had not allowed him into the house in the past year.

Galvin said he will fight the demolition since he still holds a mortgage on the property.

'I wouldn't harm her,' Tucker

By ELIZABETH P. LATT

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP) — James Keith Tucker says he thought of leaving 5-year-old Caroline Thompson somewhere along the route from Florida to South Carolina. But he says he was afraid the child "couldn't get back to her mama."

The 18-year-old High Point, N.C., man is charged with kidnapping Caroline from a parking lot of a Daytona Beach, Fla., motel Saturday and taking her to Myrtle Beach, S.C. He was arrested there Monday night, and the child was returned unharmed to her parents, Russell and Rachel Thompson of Dunwoody, Ga.

Throughout the incident, Tucker said, he sniffed glue. He told Caroline it was medicine. "She's just 5 years old. She didn't know."

He said sniffing glue, a habit he acquired at the age of 12, "messed up" his brain.

"When I'm on that glue, I don't think too good," Tucker said Tuesday as he sat in a cell at the Florence Detention Center, where he was being held on $250,000 bond.

Tucker is expected to be sent later this week to Florida to face kidnapping charges. He also is charged with interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle.

Tucker, a slight, soft-spoken man, said he didn't mean to take the child. She was sitting in the back seat of her parents' car when it was taken from the Florida parking lot.

He said his biggest concern was the child's safety. "I wouldn't harm the girl in no way," he said. "I was scared. She was 5 years old. If anything happened to her, if she got hurt in any way, it would be my fault."

Tucker said he took good care of the girl. "I didn't let her go hungry. I fed her good."

He said he used money and charge cards from Mrs. Thompson's billfold to pay for the food and for the lodging he rented in Myrtle Beach Sunday. Other guests at the motel notified police Monday after recognizing the pair from television newscasts.

Tucker said he calmed the child by stopping twice during the trip from Florida and telling her he had called her parents. He also told her he was taking her home to Georgia.

"I know what I done was wrong," he said. "Yeah, it was wrong. I'm talking about everything."

Tucker was paroled July 13 from a North Carolina prison where he was committed earlier this year as a youthful offender for two auto thefts, prison department records show.

Since his release, he had been working at a furniture factory in High Point. But one day about two weeks ago, he said, he left work for his lunch break about noon and had some beers. "I stole this man's truck and decided I'd take off."

'Look kindly,' mother urges

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rachel Thompson, resuming the family vacation that became a two-day nightmare when her 5-year-old daughter was kidnapped, says the law should look kindly on the man charged in the abduction.

"I think it should certainly be taken into account that he did not mean to hurt the child," Mrs. Thompson said Tuesday. "To punish him for something he didn't mean to do wouldn't be right."

Police have said car theft — not kidnapping — was the aim of the man who jumped into the Thompson's station wagon at a motel here Saturday and drove off with the screaming child in the back.

James K. Tucker, 18, a paroled auto thief from High Point, N.C., is being held on $250,000 bond in Florence, S.C., some 60 miles west of Myrtle Beach, S.C., where little Caroline Thompson was recovered late Monday.

FBI officials say Tucker will probably be moved to Florida this week to face charges of kidnapping.

The man was "mean and yelled," Caroline said, but did not mistreat her or her two pets.

"We ate hamburgers and french fries at McDonald's and he let me go swimming by myself in the motel pool," said the blond, blue-eyed youngster, sitting cross-legged on her rumpled bed at the Holiday Inn where the ordeal began.

The family planned to remain here several days. Their car, with all their belongings, was being driven here from South Carolina by a motel employee.

"We had a very bad time every minute she was gone," said Mrs. Thompson. But she and her husband Russell, both 34, spoke gratefully of the kidnapper. "He took good care of her," Mrs. Thompson said. "We're so grateful to him. He didn't hurt her in any way. He tried to comfort her."

Caroline said at first she cried "just a little...and I told him to take me back. He said, 'No.' He said, 'Shut up.'"

Tucker evidently drove straight through to Myrtle Beach, stopping to sleep in the car on Saturday night and arriving early Sunday.

He and the girl checked into a motel and stayed until Monday afternoon, when a guest recognized them from news descriptions. Authorities were notified and a highspeed chase ended in Tucker's arrest.

Right to rationing may cost Carter

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is ready to give President Carter the gas-rationing authority he wants, but only at a price he may be unwilling to pay: repeal of part of his month-old mandatory thermostat-setting program.

The House was meeting today to complete action on the rationing legislation after giving the president the latest in a long string of unwelcome energy surprises late Tuesday.

The rationing bill's floor manager, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., says adoption of the thermostat-law rollback has added new controversy to the legislation and again put its passage in jeopardy.

And leaders are no longer as optimistic that the legislation can be placed on the president's desk by the end of the week — the start of the month-long congressional summer recess.

The apparent rationing victory the House gave the president Tuesday night was short-lived. It was followed up by a 267-152 vote to repeal the law championed by Carter requiring commercial buildings to set their thermostats at no less than 78 degrees in the summer and no more than 65 degrees in winter.

That law has been in force only since July 1, but member after member took to the floor of the House — itself held at an energy-saving 78 degrees — to complain about how uncomfortable Americans have been under the law.

The administration issued the temperature-setting edict under authority granted it in an energy conservation law enacted last year. The conservation law was the only part of the president's 1978 energy package to get through Congress.

Under the amendment by Rep. Chalmers P. Wylie, R-Ohio, buildings could be exempt from the temperature control law if utility bills — or other documentary evidence — could be produced to show that an equivalent amount of energy had been saved through other means.

Dingell said there's no question about the White House position on the amendment — it's opposed. "We tried to stop it but there was nothing we could do," Dingell said. "It's just another example of the House approving something it didn't understand."

Democratic leaders claimed the same thing last Wednesday after the House unexpectedly approved a Republican-sponsored amendment giving Congress two changes to block a gas-rationing plan proposed by the president.

The House reversed that vote Tuesday after a heavy lobbying campaign by the White House and the Democratic leadership. The vote was 234-189 to give the president a free hand in preparing a standby rationing plan.

The bill stipulates rationing would be used only in a severe fuel shortage, of at least 20 percent.

And the House decided to retain Congress' right to reject a rationing plan by having either house veto it once the president actually moved to implement it. But this was a condition the president said he could live with.

The House rejected the first Carter rationing plan entirely last December.

Thus it seemed things were going well for the president Tuesday night until adoption of the Wylie amendment.

Wylie cited the unpopularity of the mandatory temperature law, which he said has left office workers, shoppers and others in commercial buildings around the country uncomfortable in the summer heat.

"If there is a different way to conserve energy, then I think we should adopt it," Wylie said.

Backers said steps like turning off lights at night or turning off other electrical devices were examples of a way that a building could save the same amount of energy as dialing up thermostats to 78 degrees.

"I believe this is an issue on which this House should speak. People are upset throughout the nation by the 78-degree thermostat setting," Wylie said.

The proposal would also allow buildings to be exempt from setting thermostats to 65 degrees in the winter if — as in the summer — an equivalent savings of energy could be documented.

But Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., chairman of a House Government Operations subcommittee on energy, said the Wylie amendment — while popular because it gave the impression of "comparable energy savings" — would "gut" the president's energy conservation plan if allowed to stand.

He said it would open a huge loophole in the law, setting off an avalanche of claimed exemptions that he said would be difficult to enforce.

Leaders had hoped to send the rationing bill to the Senate Tuesday night — a timetable that seemed important for getting the rationing bill to the president's desk before the recess.

Odessa official resigns after Friday incident

ODESSA — Another Odessa public official has resigned his position following an incident at a local massage parlor Friday.

John Pratt, who had served as assistant county attorney for the last three years, resigned Monday from the Ector County Attorney's office.

According to Ector County Attorney Mike Atkins, Pratt was asked to resign after he was involved in an argument with a woman and a man at Reflections, an Odessa massage parlor.

The club was not one of the ones currently involved in litigation, Atkins said.

Ector County officials raided several massage parlors two weeks ago, producing charges against individuals ranging from prostitution to possession of marijuana.

Atkins said Pratt took it upon himself to visit the massage parlor Friday night.

"The exact conversation is in dispute, but it's uncontroverted that he was there. We don't go out to conduct raids on our own," Atkins said.

Atkins said Pratt was involved in an argument with a woman employee of the parlor and a man who was there "to receive a haircut."

After the incident was reported, Atkins requested the attorney's resignation, he said today.

Intervenors question accountant for TESCO

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An accountant with Texas Electric Service Co. spent much of Tuesday testifying before the Public Utility Commission on her firm's requested $91.4 million rate hike.

Judy Boss, TESCO accountant, was cross-examined much of the day by intervenors in the rate case. Ms. Boss testified about TESCO's various accounts during the second day of the hearing.

TESCO Treasurer D.E. Kelch will next testify about financing, a PUC spokesman said. Rate design is expected to be discussed Wednesday, the spokesman said.

The PUC staff had originally sought to have TESCO's request dismissed claiming it was merely a restatement of a rate hike turned down in 1978. TESCO received a $40 million increase in 1978 but had requested $110 million.

The PUC staff is now recommending a $30.3 million increase, the spokesman said.

W.M. Taylor, vice president for engineering and fuel for TESCO, testified all day Monday in the first day of hearing, testifying about TESCO's fuel reserves and alternative fuel sources, the spokesman said.

The PUC spokesman said the TESCO hearings are expected to continue all week.

Welcome party greets rescued whale successfully returned home

PROVINCETOWN, Mass. (AP) — Saquish the pilot whale returned to the sea Tuesday after 2 1/2 days ashore and was greeted by a waterspouting cousin — a humpbacked whale three times her size.

"It appears it was a successful return to the sea," said John Dayton of the New England Aquarium, who was on the boat that released the one-ton, 14-foot whale in the waters off Provincetown.

The whale was found moaning on Saquish beach near Plymouth early Sunday morning and was saved from dying of heat stress by a bucket brigade that bathed her in soothing salt water until she was taken to the New England Aquarium in Boston.

The Aquarium found no sign of illness and concluded that tricky currents might have trapped her and led to the beaching. So the staff decided to put her on a stretcher aboard a research vessel and return her to the companionship of her own kind.

Dayton said the Aquarium picked Stellwagon Bank, northwest of the tip of Cape Cod, because it's a shallow area where whales are often seen. A number were there Tuesday, he said.

"We followed a pair of humpbacked whales, splashing and showing off for us, and we saw a lot of other whales in the distance, though no pilot whales," he said.

Thirty survive freezing water in North Sea plane crash

LERWICK, Shetland Islands (AP) — Thirty persons, most of them North Sea oil workers, escaped from a British charter plane that nose-dived into the sea as it took off from Mainland Island in the Shetlands north of Scotland, but 17 others drowned, authorities said today.

First reports said all 47 were British. Survivors said the plane filled quickly with icy water Tuesday, but they managed to reach emergency exits. Some swam for shore, others were picked up by helicopter or small boat.

"I was five feet from the back of the plane," one man told reporters. "Water was pouring in from the front. I tried to get out of the rear, then I went back for my lifejacket. I had to jump over the seats and the water was up to our necks. I just seemed to grab hold of the person in front and get dragged to the door."

The Hawker-Siddeley 748 was chartered by Shell Oil and was taking off from Mainland's Sumburgh Airport, near Lerwick, with 44 oil workers bound for leave in Aberdeen, Scotland, and a plane crew of three.

Sumburgh is a small staging airport on the rocky coast where helicopters ferry workers to and from the oil rigs. Witnesses said the plane took off in heavy rain and crashed into the sea only 50 yards from the end of the runway.

"One minute it was going along the runway, the next it was in the sea with only the tail visible," one said.

Jonathan Dalrymple-Smith, a pilot who ran to the shore to help survivors, said: "I saw one person clinging to the tail and three others on the starboard wing. A lot of people were swimming toward the shore."

"It was absolute chaos," said James Buchan, an oil worker who was in the airport lounge. "The first we knew of the crash was when these people, half dead and chattering with cold, began to come into the lounge."

Britain committed to black rule in Rhodesia: Mrs. Thatcher

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the Commonwealth Conference today she will listen "with the greatest attention" to what is said about Zimbabwe Rhodesia and that her government is "wholly committed to genuine black majority rule" in the former British colony.

Zimbabwe Rhodesia is the big issue at the conference, which opened today and is being held on African soil for the first time. British officials predicted much debate and no new action, and Mrs. Thatcher gave no concrete details of what policy her government would follow.

"The aim is to bring Rhodesia to legal independence on a basis which the Commonwealth and the international community as a whole will find acceptable, and which offers the prospect of peace for people of Rhodesia and its neighbors," she said. As Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda opened the conference, a score of guerrillas from Zimbabwe Rhodesia paraded outside. The demonstrators carried placards blaming Britain and the United States for the seven-year war in their homeland and attacking their passive attitude toward the white-minority government in South Africa.

Kaunda said black Africa's position is that Zimbabwe Rhodesia "is a British colony and that nothing has changed. Its leaders are rebels against the crown." He said the "rebellion" sparked an "escalating war of liberation," and declared, "Africa will win this war."

Kaunda said if Zimbabwe Rhodesia and Namibia, a former German colony administered by South Africa despite U.N. censure, "were located in a different part of Africa there would be no problem. And if South Africa didn't enjoy support from the West, there would be no problem."

Britain and the United States have huge investments in South Africa, military and economic power in southern Africa bordering both Zimbabwe Rhodesia and Namibia.

Today was Mrs. Thatcher's first meeting with the prime ministers, chiefs of state or other government leaders from Britain's 38 former colonies since her Conservative government took office three months ago.

Commonwealth Secretary-General Shridath Ramphal told reporters Tuesday that just to avoid a split on the issue of Zimbabwe Rhodesia would be an achievement for the week-long meeting. Mrs. Thatcher met with Kaunda Tuesday night amid intensified maneuvering to prevent an open row over her leaning toward recognition of Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's new government in Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Miss Lillian will be released

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter, the president's 80-year-old mother, will be released from the Americus-Sumter County Hospital soon, the hospital's nursing supervisor said Tuesday night.

Freddie Woodall said Mrs. Carter "has been up and walking around and is feeling much, much better."

She said the president's mother, affectionately known as "Miss Lillian," probably "won't be here (at the hospital) too much longer, but we don't know what day she'll be released."

Hospital officials said Mrs. Carter's physician, Dr. John H. Robinson III, "wants her to be totally comfortable when she leaves."

Mrs. Carter was hospitalized last week after complaining of "severe, extreme pain" in the shoulder, according to Robinson. He said her pain "could be bursts," a joint inflammation, and added that he had ruled out heart trouble.

'Buy from a Spy' former USS Pueblo crew member's slogan

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ed Murphy says customers are often bewildered by the slogan for his camper center, but "Buy from a Spy" is more than a sales pitch to the former navigator of the USS Pueblo. Eleven years ago, the businessman was Lt. Ed Murphy, second-in-command aboard the decrepit spy ship that surrendered without a shot when North Koreans torpedoed it in the fog-shrouded Sea of Japan. One man died in the attack and several of the 82 crew members were injured. The North Koreans held them prisoner for 11 months before releasing them in December 1969. The Pueblo incident is one that has faded from America's memory, say a handful of the Pueblo crew now living in San Diego. But the men from the Pueblo sometimes remember it all too clearly. "I'm reminded of the torture just from the sheer physical pain that returns from time to time," Murphy said. Ten officers were "tortured brutally during those first weeks," he said, "and the scars that remain aren't just physical." Murphy's kneecaps were separated and repeated beatings at the hands of the North Koreans also took their toll on his back. "It's kind of sad," the 41-year-old father of two said, "because now I can't play baseball with my son and I have to be careful even riding a bicycle." But he is not bitter, and toys with the idea of returning to North Korea. "I've become fascinated with the country because I can identify with a part of history," Murphy said, "and I'd really like the opportunity to go back — not as a spy, though." Although no Pueblo reunions have been planned, about a half dozen crew members have relocated in the San Diego area — a sentimental journey, Murphy believes. "When we came home, at the airport and on the bus to the hospital, there wasn't a street we passed without people waving to us. People literally opened their hearts to us and I think every crew member must reflect on that love." Because several live in this military town, fate has thrown crew members together on more than one occasion. Murphy was reunited with Tony LaMancha when the former Pueblo sailor — now a bank manager — called him about a business loan Murphy had applied for. "This job is a little less dangerous," LaMancha laughed. "I was one of the fabled 27 communication technicians on the Pueblo — the job is still classified as far as I know. But it was no big secret — we were an intelligence gathering ship." LaMancha, 32, is somewhat cynical now, he admits. "The Pueblo opened my eyes a little sooner to politics," he said. "We were made scapegoats, fall-guys, by the government. Because we surrendered." "Nobody blamed (then-President Lyndon) Johnson for having us there in the first place; they blamed the Koreans for having the nerve to come out and get us," he said.

British cutting socialist legacy

LONDON (AP) — Calling it painful but necessary surgery, Margaret Thatcher's new Conservative government has moved boldly and swiftly to pare down the socialist legacy of previous Labor governments. In their three months in office, the Tories have aimed the scalpel vigorously at upper-bracket income taxes, government spending, nationalized industries and state-supported commissions. Critics claim the Conservatives are knife-happy and have made a faulty diagnosis of the country's ailments. Some within the ruling party are worried. The Conservatives' popularity nosedived as the cost of living shot up and the stock market dropped. But Mrs. Thatcher makes no apology. She says she's "carrying out the voters' instructions." Campaigning before the election May 3, she told the people it was their last chance to stop Britain's slide out of the first rank of nations and into full socialism and penury. Angered by a winter of strikes that the Labor government couldn't control and that curtailed hospital services, schools, garbage collections and the burial of the dead, the voters gave the Tories a commanding 43-seat majority in the 635-seat House of Commons. Mrs. Thatcher wasted no time acting on her belief that business and management would lead the country to prosperity if taxes and government red tape were not reduced. In its first parliamentary term, which ended last week, her government: —Cut the base rate of the income tax from 33 percent to 30 percent and the top rate from 83 percent to 60 percent. To make up for the loss in revenue, sales taxes were boosted 12.5 percent on luxuries and 8 percent on most other goods and services to a uniform 15 percent. —Announced it will sell large chunks of the government's stock in state-owned industries, including British Airways, the national airline; British Aerospace, the combination of aircraft manufacturers and related industries, and the booming oil industry, and will limit the drain on the Treasury to support money-losing steel and shipbuilding businesses. —Vowed to keep next year's public spending down to this year's level in real terms, which is expected to mean trimming more than $9 billion from the total planned by the previous Labor government. —Signed the death warrant for 3,000 planning, advisory and supervisory bodies that the Tories consider a waste of money and a hindrance to business. —Boosted to 14 percent the Bank of England's prime lending rate, on which all commercial interest rates are based, and eased restrictions on individuals and corporations sending and spending funds overseas. —The increase in the interest rate and North Sea oil production have boosted the pound sterling, Britain's currency, to a four-year high, but the good news stops there. —The London Stock Exchange, which boomed in April on expectations of a Conservative victory in the election, has dropped 17 percent. Inflation has risen from less than 10 percent to 11.4 percent, and government ministers predict it will hit 17.5 percent before Jan. 1. —The latest Gallup Poll gives Labor a lead with the voters of 5 percentage points over the Conservatives, compared to a Tory lead of 7.2 percentage points three months ago. —Manufacturers complain the pound's new strength is making British exports more expensive abroad and reducing orders. —Labor leaders are upset by predictions that unemployment, now considered high at 5.2 percent, will exceed 6 percent.

Knesset strips wealthy Israeli of his immunity

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Knesset, Israel's Parliament, voted 61-30 today to strip wealthy financier Samuel Flatto-Sharon of parliamentary immunity so he can be prosecuted on charges of vote-buying during the 1977 elections. When Flatto-Sharon, 49, was elected, his position also prevented his extradition to France on tax evasion charges, and today he forms a one-man bloc in Parliament. The removal of his immunity was selective and does not subject him to extradition. Israel's attorney general concluded a lengthy investigation of election irregularities two months ago and presented Flatto-Sharon with a charge sheet, the equivalent of an indictment. Flatto-Sharon has denied the charge, which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine. In an interview on Israel Radio, he claimed he did nothing that other parties do not routinely do. He also said he would investigate on his own the conduct of other parties. Flatto-Sharon, who fled to Paris from his native Poland during World War II to escape the Nazis, has been accused by French authorities of a massive business swindle in the early 1970s from which he amassed millions of dollars.

Increase in grain price boosts farm averages

WASHINGTON (AP) — A grain-price boom that began in late spring helped boost the average prices farmers got for raw food and fiber products by 0.75 percent in July, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said in its monthly report that higher prices for corn, wheat, lemons, potatoes and grain sorghum contributed most to the increase in prices from June to July.

Grain price boosts at the farm generally aren't reflected in food prices for months, economists say, for food if "middleman" costs, profits and prices follow normal patterns.

The department's chief economist, Howard Hjort, said last week that he expects retail food prices for all of 1979 to average "close to 11 percent" higher than the 1978 averages.

He said pricing practices of "middlemen," rising coffee prices and the number of broiler chickens, hogs and beef cattle slaughtered this fall are the decisive factors.

Food prices in 1978 averaged 10 percent higher than the year before, the first double-digit increase since 1973-74, when the tab went up 14.5 percent in both years.

Farm prices in June averaged 146 percent higher than a 1967 benchmark. The index was 144 percent higher in June.

The July parity ratio for farm commodities was 73 percent, down from 74 in June but the same as a year ago, the board said.

At 100 percent, the indicator would mean, theoretically, that farmers have the same buying power they had in 1910-14.

AGRICULTURE

but fruit and vegetable prices are passed through quickly.

The boom in prices for key food and feed grains began in early June after reports of problems with the Russian crop.

A Soviet harvest below its goals would keep the Russians as strong buyers next year in the U.S. market, where stocks are plentiful. They have purchased more than 14.8 million metric tons of grain for delivery by October.

Substantial purchases are expected in the next year as well. Demand for U.S. grain by other countries already had picked up when the Russians stepped up their buying over a period of several weeks.

Prices at the farm for all types of wheat averaged $3.95 a bushel, 23 cents above June's mark and $1.14 above a year ago.

Corn, the major feedgrain for meat and dairy animals, rose 24 cents to $2.73 a bushel nationally.

As the new crop of potatoes moved to market, the board said, prices nearly quadrupled, from $1.22 to $4.57 per 100 pounds. The index of potato, sweet potato, dry bean and dry pea prices rose 24 percent.

Grapefruit, apple and strawberry prices also rose, but lemons more than doubled from $8.63 a box to $17.60.

Average farm prices have dropped only twice since a steady upward swing began last December—in April and June by 1 percent each month, with another 0.75 percent rise in between.

The first four-month rise was a key factor in a sharp boost in retail food prices in the first quarter of this year. The department says marketing costs and profits have been and will be responsible for further hikes in what shoppers pay.

Meat generally accounts for about 30 percent of the consumer's food bill. Lower prices were reported for cattle, hogs, broiler chickens, oranges, eggs and tomatoes.

Food prices in June were up 0.2 percent, the smallest monthly gain since last July. Higher restaurant prices and marketing costs such as fuel expenses were responsible, government officials said last week.

The decline in live cattle prices in July was the third straight drop after five months of record levels. They still averaged about 30 percent higher than a year ago. Combined prices for all meat animals were 19 percent above July 1978.

July farm prices were 14 percent above a year ago, the board said. Farm income last year recovered after three years of declines.

The report said prices paid by farmers to meet expenses, including living costs, also rose 0.75 percent in July to a level 14 percent above July 1978.

Higher prices for fuel, machinery and feed were offset slightly by continued lower prices for young animals to be fed for slaughter. Hikes of 4 cents to 6 cents a gallon were reported for gasoline and diesel fuel for the second straight month.

Economists do not consider farm prices in a single month to be reliable indicators of future retail food prices.

But, they say, a steady pattern over a longer period does have an impact on what consumers pay

'Hopper lawsuit dismissed

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) —

A court showdown between the National Audubon Society and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency over the emergency use of pesticides to kill swarms of grasshoppers is off because the emergency is over.

U.S. District Judge Donald Porter dismissed the Audubon Society's lawsuit against the use of toxaphene late Friday.

The dismissal came eight days after the federal Environmental Protection Agency withdrew permission for South Dakota to use the chemical to kill grasshoppers on 600,000 acres of rangeland.

Lawyers for the National Audubon Society said they had no objection to the dismissal since they had received what they wanted — a ban on the use of toxaphene on rangeland.

The toxaphene battle began early this summer when millions of grasshoppers hatched along western South Dakota streams and spread out over the prairie, reducing green forage to the bare stalks.

Agriculture officials found hundreds of insects per square yard in some areas, and offered programs to spray the grasshoppers.

On June 26, the state received special EPA permission to spray the potent toxaphene on 600,000 acres of rangeland.

Governor wants strikers ordered back to work

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Gov. Al Quie asked President Carter on Tuesday to order striking grain handlers back to work at grain-clogged Lake Superior harbors.

The request for the Taft-Hartley 80-day cooling off period came a week before the wheat harvest was to begin in Minnesota and farmers warned that they might have to dump half their crop on the ground.

Quie said in a telegram that as much as one-third of the upper midwest's 1979 wheat crop could be lost because of overtaxed storage and transportation facilities.

The White House press office said that it would have no comment from the president until after he returned late Tuesday.

The strike by 520 grain handlers, members of Local 118 of the American Federation of Grain Millers began July 6 at an elevator in Superior, Wis., and spread to all eight elevators in the Duluth and Superior ports. The first talks since the strike began are scheduled Thursday, but Quie said earlier the two sides were a long way apart.

The main issue in the walkout is over a cost of living clause in a contract which ran out June 30th.

The strike compounded an already tight storage problem. Many rural elevators still hold last year's crop, and railroads and barges have been unable to meet all delivery demands.

In his telegram, Quie told Carter the strike had closed down the third largest agriculture port in the country, and that all other shipping channels were loaded beyond capacity.

Carter was said the crisis could have a serious effect on inflation, the price of food and the nation's balance of payment problems.

The telegram was also signed by Minnesota Sens. David Durenberger and Rudy Boschwitz and North Dakota Sen. Milton Young.

Charles Rhoades, president of the Minnesota Wheat Council, said Thursday that there is storage space for only half of a normal wheat crop. If the strike is prolonged, he said, Minnesota farmers may have to dump half their crop on the ground. He estimated that half of any crop on the ground will be lost to spoilage caused by rain, insects and rodents.

Record crop being moved

WASHINGTON (AP) — A seasonal shortage of railroad cars to move grain is inevitable but "the fact is the railroads are currently moving record amounts of a record crop," the Senate Agriculture Committee has been told.

Richard E. Briggs, executive vice president of the Association of American Railroads, told the panel's marketing subcommittee Monday that during the week of July 14 railroads handled 31,788 grain cars, an 8.1 percent jump over the comparable week in 1978.

At the same time, railroads have 125,454 new cars on order, the highest backlog in 23 years, he said.

Union Pacific Railroad President John C. Kenefick told the subcommittee that 1978 was a record hauling year, with a 22 percent increase in shipments over 1977, but this season his line already shows corn loadings up 30 percent, wheat 27 percent and other grains up 16 percent.

The railroad men and Deputy Undersecretary of Transportation John J. Fearnside were at the hearing primarily to urge deregulation of the railroads.

Present rules and procedures for changing services and prices are outdated and the main reason railroads cannot respond quickly to the needs of farmers, grain elevators or other shippers, they said.

Many farm products other than grain are exempt from the complex regulations and rural towns generally are served more by unregulated than regulated haulers of all kinds, they noted.

"With an increased reliance on the free market, both labor and management will know that their livelihood depends on their ability to meet the needs of the shippers ... This will lower costs and, more importantly, increase the sensitivity of railroad personnel to shippers' demands," Kenefick said.

Nitrite substitute causes 'afterglow'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-month government test of bacon cured with potassium sorbate and some sodium nitrite found it as good as or better than bacon treated with a regular nitrite bath when it comes to thwarting botulism contamination, officials report.

But there may be a problem yet with the "afterglow."

The Agriculture Department's Food Safety and Quality Service said Monday a task force of private and government scientists is still investigating rashes and throat irritations reported by those who ate the bacon the biologists and chemists were studying.

Until the cause of the tasters' problems is pinned down, no decision will be made on whether to allow sorbate to be used in curing bacon, said Dr. Donald L. Houston, the agency's administrator.

USDA officials are seeking a substitute for nitrite because it may cause cancer while preventing deadly botulism. Nitrite occurs naturally in the environment but is also made for use as a preservative in 7 percent of the food supply.

In addition to the health dilemma, the economic future of the food industry — especially pork and beef producers and processors — is at stake. Other scientists are reviewing a 1977 Massachusetts Institute of Technology study that said nitrite, a chemical additive used for decades to cure meat, probably causes cancer in laboratory animals.

Set-aside decision is close

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is nearing a decision on how much acreage it would like farmers to keep out of wheat for 1980.

The Senate passed by voice vote Monday a nonbinding resolution urging USDA to adopt a 5 percent set-aside rather than drop the idea of cutting production, as many expect it to do. A 20 percent set-aside was in effect this season.

Sen. James J. Exon, D-Nebr., said farmers who aren't restrained will respond to recent grain-price booms by overplanting and busting the market. The acreage-iddling program is voluntary but farmers can't get USDA crop loans unless they comply.

Dorothy Hamill is playing it cool these days. The Olympic ice skating champ will be 23 this month and she says she is just beginning to realize how lucky she is. All that dedication as a youngster is paying off for her in hard cash as sponsors like Ice Capades, Clairol and American Optical give her the hot item treatment. (Los Angeles Times Photo by Larry Armstrong)

Pay-off finally arrives for Olympic ice skating champion

JANE LEVINE
The Los Angeles Times

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Dorothy Hamill breezes in. Not exactly short and sassy but pretty, wholesome, demure. Her high-neck, full-skirt navy silk dress is in obvious contrast to the gaudier summer outfits of the lunch bunch at The Bistro. It is a contrast in which Hamill comes off very much The Star.

But little more than a year ago, at least one sports writer called her "An American Tragedy." Others said she was pawn of the Hollywood money-making machine which had signed her up, sold her off to the highest bidder (Ice Capades, Clairol, American Optical) and, in the process, anesthetized her talent, her dignity and her spark of life.

Philip Taubman, writing in Esquire, claimed she was "a lonely, frightened figure, lost on the road to fame and fortune...a potential Mark Spitz."

"I did go through a very bad time in my life," Hamill now says. "There was a real letdown after the Olympics. I'd been working toward a single goal ever since I was a child. I achieved it at 19 and I couldn't help but wonder what to do next."

"Sure, it seemed so wonderful at first. I was famous. I was going to be rich. But then the lawyers, the agents, the accountants came rushing in, telling me what I ought to do and with whom. I was depressed, confused. I ended up in the hospital with a bleeding ulcer within a year."

The Olympic ice skating champ turned 23 this July and she says the sadness is past. "I am just beginning to realize how lucky I am. I was very dedicated as a youngster and now it's all paying off."

The pay-off, of course, is in cold, hard cash. And in more hard work — of the type for which she never trained.

After lunch, she will climb into a rented limousine the color of creamed corn, travel to a convention of optometrists in Anaheim, make a short speech ("I'm a crummy public speaker"), and promote a new Dorothy Hamill line of eyewear manufactured by America's OCAL.

The next day she will leave for New York (her second trip in as many weeks) to do a Life Savers commercial for TV. After that she'll visit her family in Connecticut.

She apparently has all the money she needs for all the possessions she wants. She's already bought so many clothes that she's converting one bedroom of her newly purchased three-bedroom house in Pacific Palisades into a huge closet to accommodate them all.

"When you're on tour with a show in all those strange cities, there's not much to do except skate and shop."

Hamill admits she had problems learning to travel with the show. She felt like an outsider, was obliged to wear bunny-like costumes with padded bra, rink routines that didn't come close to the technically expert achievements she had spent her life perfecting, and for which she has had practically no use since the day she won her Olympic fame.

Now, she says, she enjoys the job and her show costumes are designed by someone who "understands how I like to look."

How Hamill likes to look is simple, scrubbed and conservative. Her favorite designer is Ralph Lauren ("I own practically every shirt he ever designed"); her favorite dress-up outfits are suits.

"Dean says I look very Eastern," she says referring to actor and tennis player Dean-Paul Martin, son of Dean Martin. He has been her boyfriend for the last three years.

Martin, 27, is obviously a highlight of her life. "We help each other," Hamill says. "And we also have a lot of fun."

Leading menswear designer says fashion depends on economics

By TIMOTHY HAWKINS
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — "The question of what's fashionable today is a question of economics," says Luciano Franzoni, who designs his neoclassical suits, jackets and slacks for Hart, Schaffner & Marx. "Whether you're buying appliances, furniture or clothes, the mood today is cautious. When the economy is good and the dollar is jumping, you can afford fads. Now people want something for their money. There's more talk of quality than there was five years ago. Today, if you buy a suit, you don't want it to be obsolete in a year."

Fear of obsolescence, notes Franzoni, does not necessarily mean people want the cliches of safe clothing. "They want pizzazz," he says, "but pizzazz with quality."

For a man who for the last decade has been designing tailored clothing for a company with a somewhat conservative image, Franzoni has a very casual, unstructured attitude toward fashion. He doesn't see the point in wearing a tie, unless it's to satisfy a dress code. And he doesn't believe in dress codes. "I believe in dressing right," says Franzoni, wearing one of his navy pin-striped suits, pale blue dress shirt and navy silk tie. "And dressing right is what your own personal dress code says it is."

Whether Western, Eastern or Middle American, says Franzoni, it's important to dress with a sense of humor and to develop your own sense of style. "You must step out of the fashion track meet," says the 52-year-old designer. "Get vibrations and sensations from what is going on in the mainstream. And then do your own thing."

Stars today are more likely to take fashion cues from the public than the other way around, says Franzoni. "In the '30s and '40s, few people could afford to dress in the elitist manner of Fred Astaire and Cary Grant, but today, you see Travolta and Stallone everywhere. People are dressing in conventional manners; stars are dressing to reflect public taste rather than to influence it. What Stallone and Travolta wear on the screen comes from the streets — not vice versa."

Course on parties to repeat

Due to popular demand, the course, "The Joy of Entertaining" has been scheduled again at the Permian Basin Graduate Center.

The one-day class will be held Aug. 21 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Graduate Center building, 105 W. Illinois Ave.

Taught by Janice Constantine Jefferson, this course is presented for men and women who love to entertain or those who always wanted to, but feel "inadequate," "nervous," or "unsure" about different types of entertaining. It will reveal the dos and don'ts of organizing a successful party—what puts the sparkle and fun into some parties and why others end up with the blahs.

Ms. Jefferson has catered parties for hundreds or small intimate groups from presidents to the family next door. She will return to Midland from her home in Dallas to share her secrets of making entertaining a beautiful occasion for hosts and hostesses, as well as guests.

Every type of entertaining will be discussed, including recipes for coffees, brunches, lunches, teas, weddings, cocktail parties, suppers, buffets, seated dinners, business entertaining and fun parties for occasions with football games, ballooning, 40th birthdays and more.

Call the Graduate Center for more information at 683-2832 or 563-2311.

Child care legislation defeated easily

Copley News Service

For a few months it looked as though working parents might find some help for their child care woes. The optimism didn't last long. In fact, putting an end to the Senate child care legislation turned out to be as easy as taking candy from a baby.

The bill introduced by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., called simply S.4, would have authorized up to $90 million next year to help working mothers in lower income brackets pay some of the costs of child care.

Cranston felt that financial justification existed for the bill to aid preschoolers and "latch-key" children who stay alone after school. Juvenile delinquency, vandalism, welfare dependence and child abuse problems continue to plague the nation. He felt some commitment to the welfare of children at an age when it does some good might have been the solution.

The bill had little chance of passing without the backing of President Carter, who had supported child care measures as part of his presidential platform. Mr. Carter failed to request the funds, even though Vice President Walter Mondale had been a firm supporter of child care when he was a senator.

Cranston cited "a mood in Congress and among the people that is negative toward proposals for new federal programs at this time regardless of their social need and cost effectiveness."

S.4, he said, became "a victim of these austere times."

Austere times may have pushed the failure of the legislation, but a strong conservative mood against child care helped. Congress is well aware of the accusations that, as the Liberty Lobby put it, it would "Sovietize" America. Child care bills always bring a massive letter-writing effort, and Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, though she is new in the Senate, has already received a barrage of highly emotional and hostile mail. When Mondale was still a senator and sponsored child care legislation, he received as many as 14,000 anti-child care letters.

That campaign was never matched by a similar mail onslaught by working parents or child care supporters. "What can you expect?" said a California activist. "Most working mothers live right on the margin of their incomes. They tend to be young and fairly poor. After working eight or more hours and coming home to take care of the kids, they don't have the time or energy to follow what's happening in Washington, much less write letters."

Still another blow for child care legislation was what Cranston called "significant disagreement" among supporters of federal aid. After an 11th hour meeting, some of the pro-child care forces did not rally behind S.4 "for the kind of national public education effort" needed, according to Cranston. They didn't, because many of them thought the bill was entirely too skimpy, that it amounted to little more than none at all, and a costly bill had no chance of passing.

Supporters will not abandon the effort, though. The Coalition of Labor Union Women (CLUW) intends to encourage Cranston to try again. The senator has promised to not give up.

Controversial firefighter testifies

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Male firefighters viewed Linda Eaton "as sort of a novelty" when she joined their ranks in 1977, says former city human rights director Candy Morgan.

But Ms. Morgan, who left the human rights job last fall, said Fire Chief Robert Keating was "very positive" about having Miss Eaton as the city's first female firefighter.

She testified Monday in the first session of a sex discrimination hearing for Miss Eaton, 26, who drew nationwide attention in January when she defied her superiors to nurse her son, Ian, during "personal time" on her 24-hour shift at the Iowa City fire station.

She was twice suspended and threatened with dismissal before filing a sex discrimination complaint with the Iowa Civil Rights Commission. An expert on breastfeeding was to testify today.

"There were a lot of questions, a lot of unknowns," Ms. Morgan said of Miss Eaton's hiring. "There was a great deal of fear (among the firefighters) that standards would be lowered" to accommodate her. "There was a sense of skepticism."

But Keating "was very anxious to do what was required by law," said Ms. Morgan. "We asked how it was going and he was always very positive."

Ms. Morgan spent most of the day on the stand. Much of her testimony concerned the history of the city's affirmative action efforts, including a voluntary conciliation agreement with the federal Equal Opportunity Employment Commission to boost the city's female employment from about 18 percent to 33 percent.

The city's workforce is about 28 percent female, said Ms. Morgan, who currently works for the Iowa Department of Social Services.

Miss Eaton worked as a firefighter from August 1977, until May 1978, when she was transferred to a city custodial job because of her pregnancy.

When she returned to the fire department in January, Keating told her she would not be allowed to nurse Ian, now 9½ months old, because it would be disruptive and could slow her response time in an emergency.

She went ahead with the firehouse feedings and was suspended and threatened with dismissal until Johnson County District Judge Ansel Chapman issued a temporary injunction to allow her to nurse her baby while the sex discrimination complaint was heard.

Jaw pain laid to stress

CHICAGO (AP) — Today's tensions are subjecting increasing numbers of American women to severe facial pain, a Chicago authority on the subject believes. Dr. Daniel M. Laskin, director of the facial pain clinic at the University of Illinois college of dentistry, says his findings have upset the theory that certain types of facial pain are due to bad bite results from malposition of teeth and jaws.

Laskin says his findings raise hope for more effective, less expensive treatment among America's 10 million facial pain sufferers, 80 percent of whom he says are women.

The conditions, known as TMJ (temporo mandibular joint) syndrome, is characterized by moderate to severe pain radiating from the jaw muscles, with accompanying difficulty in mouth and jaw movement.

Traditional treatments involve filling down of teeth, use of bite plates, and sometimes even jaw surgery. But Laskin says that by merely teaching patients how to cope with their tensions, plus use of simple medications and exercises, he and his associates have achieved far better results in most cases.

"The most provocative finding was an analysis of the types of patients seeking treatment," Laskin explains. "Over 80 percent were women, and 80 percent of that number were 20 to 40 years old, well educated, and from upper-middle-class economic backgrounds."

Laskin said he believed there was an upswing in the number of professional, independent women seeking treatment. This increase, he says, "seems to be in direct proportion to the increased demands for excellence being imposed on women by the feminist movement."

It wouldn't be quite so offensive at the beach, but when she walks around the shopping center in high heels with half her behind showing, I must object. My wife agrees with me.

I voiced my disapproval to Lisa, and she informed me that it's the accepted mode of dress these days for her generation, and furthermore, my prudishness amazed her.

Yes, I know there is a song stating that "Mary" is a grand old name, but that doesn't help.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 33, married to a wonderful man, and we have two fine children. So what's my problem?

I eloped at 16 and never had a wedding, which is to one big regret in my life.

My husband and I are going to Las Vegas for a vacation soon and I understand there are places there where couples can get married in a church-like setting. I am told they have beautiful chapels, filled with flowers, and they even have someone to perform the ceremony. Furthermore, you can rent a lovely wedding gown and tux, and have regular wedding pictures taken.

I want to know if you think I'm crazy to want a really beautiful wedding.

Abby. My dream is to have a picture of myself as a bride in a real wedding gown.

I am embarrassed and ashamed to ask my husband what he thinks of my secret wish, but you reply I will show him your letter, unless you think the whole idea is completely nuts. Sign me... — SENTIMENTAL IN TEXAS

DEAR SENTIMENTAL: I don't think the idea is nuts. It's lovely. Since you are already married, why not have your marriage vows renewed in that lovely

DR. NEIL SOLOMON High-fiber diets still controversial

Dear Dr. Solomon: High-fiber diets seem to be the latest food fad. What is fiber, and is it really very beneficial? — Mr. W.D.

Dear Mr. D: Dietary fiber is simply the part of a plant that is not broken down by chemical action during the process of digestion. Actually it is nothing new — your grandmother probably knew it as roughage — but its benefit to the body is still a matter of controversy.

Those who advocate the consumption of foods high in fiber, such as bran, whole grains, and many fruits and vegetables, claim it can prevent a number of diseases. These include cancer of the colon, hemorrhoids, appendicitis, varicose veins, atherosclerosis, diverticular disease, hiatus hernia and ischemic heart disease. The theory is based on the observation that these diseases are all but unknown among rural Africans, although they do occur in Africans who move to urban areas and begin consuming a diet that is low in fiber and high in fat.

Dr. Denis Burkitt, a British champion of the high fiber diet, says that about 30 years ago the diseases were less common in blacks than in whites. He attributes this to the fact that many blacks lived in rural areas before World War II and their diets were higher in fiber than those of whites. Today the diets are much more alike, and the incidence of these diseases is virtually the same in both groups.

While not all scientists agree about the value of fiber, it does appear to be useful in treating constipation and diverticular disease. This is due to the effect it has on the consistency and bulk of the stool, and the time it takes to travel through the intestines. Because fiber holds water, stools resulting from a high-fiber diet are bulkier and softer, and pass through more easily. Fiber advocates reason that this, in turn, means that bowel tissues are less exposed to poisons and cancer-causing substances produced in the intestines. They also believe it reduces the amount of cholesterol absorbed by the body.

Critics of this theory point out that there is no evidence that people who suffer from constipation have a greater incidence of cancer of the colon. They maintain that it is not a lack of fiber that creates dietary problems, but the increased consumption of animal fat and protein. Controlled studies have shown that adding bran to the diet does not affect cholesterol levels.

The chances are that most people consume more fiber than they realize. Cellulose, one of the components of dietary fiber, is used in ice cream, in low-calorie salad dressings, and in whipped cream toppings, to name only a few products to which it is added. Since it is tasteless and odorless and does not change the color, flavor, or aroma of the food, the additive is largely unnoticed.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is meant by the term "idiopathic" when applied to a disease? — Don.

Dear Don: "Idiopathic" simply means that the cause of the disease is unknown.

New frontage road signing poses real highway problem

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State highway officials say they have no estimates of what it will cost to change yield signs on highway frontage roads across Texas, to give off-ramp motorists the right-of-way, but say up to 3,400 miles of highways and freeways could be affected by the switch.

House Bill 1421 mandates that off-ramp traffic have right-of-way over access road traffic, and that vehicles entering or exiting controlled access highways from two-way frontage road have right-of-way over traffic heading the opposite direction.

The bill goes into effect Aug. 27 and State Department of Highways and Public Transportation officials expect the change-over of yield signs to be completed by then.

Odessa college cites record enrollment

ODESSA — A record enrollment for the second summer term was set at Odessa College, according to OC Registrar Sue Blair.

A total of 848 students enrolled, including 628 who signed up during registration, 63 from late registration and 157 who began open-entry courses which allow students to sign up any weekday year-round.

Enrollment figures for last summer's second session totaled 691.

"We don't have any figures on how many signs will be involved or how much the change-over will cost," a highway department spokesman said.

The highway department will try to gather those figures from the various district offices after the change-over has been complete, the spokesman said.

The highway department official did say that about 2,000 miles of rural interstate highways, 700 miles of urban interstate and 700 miles of non-interstate freeway exist in the state and will be affected by the change.

Some of those roads already have the signs placed in the manner designated by the Legislature but many don't, he said.

All controlled access highways — including the interstate highways, non-interstate freeways and some U.S. and state highways — come under the new law.

Bob Neely, public affairs officer for the highway department's District 14 headquarters in Austin, said the big question created by the new law will be an "attitude adjustment" for persons who regularly use the frontage roads, especially the two-way access roads.

"Where (motorists) had a straight shot before, they are going to have to yield to on and off traffic," Neely said. "They're going to have to pay close attention to the signs."

Britain's Prince Charles, fitted out in a vintage flying outfit he said had been dug out of a museum for the occasion, poses in front of a 45-year-old wood and canvas Tiger Moth aircraft. He had just fulfilled an ambition by flying the craft at the Royal Air Force base at Benson. (AP Laserphoto)

Greenland starts rationing liquor

GODTHAAB, Greenland (AP) — Liquor rationing will be introduced on this Danish island Wednesday in an effort to halt excessive drinking.

Each Greenlander over 18 will be allowed 72 liquor units per month to quench his thirst. The basic unit is the equivalent of a bottle of beer, so drinkers can buy 72 beers, or 12 bottles of wine or six fifths of hard liquor.

The legislature voted for rationing because 90 per cent of the crimes on this island of 50,000 people were committed under the influence of drink. Rationing will cost the treasury the equivalent of $9.5 million in lost liquor taxes, about one-third of the tax take of the island, which was granted home rule May 1.

Midland College again to offer SAT mini-course

High school juniors and seniors have been encouraged by school officials to take advantage of the Scholastic Aptitude Test mini-course being offered again this year at Midland College.

Classes will be held Monday and Aug. 13, 20 and 27 in room 164 of the Occupational-Technical Building at Midland College from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The four two-hour sessions include a review of learned skills, a survey of test-taking techniques, approaches to material analysis, goal setting procedures and a simulated SAT examination.

Faculty representatives are Ben Cason of Lee High School and Ricardo Torres of Midland High School.

The course is designed to improve general test-taking skills, enhance reading skills and capabilities to evaluate written materials and familiarize students with the type of examination questions encountered during the SAT.

The $10 registration fee for the course, which is open to anyone, is non-refundable and a balance payment of $30 is due at the time of the first session.

For pre-registration and more information students should contact the office of Dr. Douglas W. Brown at the Midland public school administration building, 702 N. N St., or call 682-8611.

LVN training course slated

Pat Myers, director of the Midland College vocational nurses training program, has issued a reminder that the next LVN training class begins Aug. 27.

"With the expansion of Midland Memorial Hospital, plus the number of physicians moving into the Midland area, we need to begin training more LVNs to fill the expanding job market," Mrs. Myers noted.

The upcoming one-year course is limited to 30 students, and applicants should have a high school diploma or GED certificate.

More information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Myers between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Her office is located in room 124 of the Occupational-Technical Building on the south side of the MC campus.

East German pilot asks political asylum

OLFENBUETEL, West Germany (AP) — An East German crop-duster pilot hid his 5-year-old son and two friends in the spray tanks of his airplane and flew across the border to West Germany, authorities reported Tuesday.

They said the 29-year-old pilot asked for asylum, citing political and economic reasons for the airborne escape Monday.

Besides his son, he brought with him a 33-year-old friend and her 16-year-old daughter. Officials indicated the plane would be returned to East German authorities.

New SALT II would cause U.S., Soviet blowup: Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry Kissinger says attempts to rewrite the SALT II treaty would trigger "a tremendous blowup, a crisis atmosphere" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

It would be two or three years before arms negotiations could resume, he added.

The former secretary of state gave the treaty a conditional endorsement Tuesday but expressed alarm that the military balance is "beginning to tilt ominously" against the United States.

He tied his support to an administration commitment for higher defense spending and a Senate declaration linking acceptance of future arms agreements to Soviet behavior throughout the world.

Kissinger recommended delaying ratification until the next Congress if it takes the administration that long to offer new military programs.

If the only choice were to vote for or against the treaty without any improvements in weapon programs, he said, he would recommend rejection of the pact.

He also suggested that several areas of the agreement be clarified with unilateral reservations and understandings. Such clarifications would be "achievable without renegotiation" of the actual terms of the treaty, he said.

Kissinger offered his views to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the first of two appearances on Capitol Hill this week. He testifies Thursday on the treaty before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Lt. Gen. Edward Rowley, a treaty critic and former representative of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to the SALT talks, was called to appear before the Armed Services panel today.

Kissinger's proposals were described as "positive" by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who noted Kissinger opposes amendments "which would kill the treaty."

Under questioning, Kissinger said Senate

amendments sending the treaty back to negotiators "would probably end any negotiations until the (November 1980) elections. There would be a tremendous blowup, a crisis atmosphere."

President Carter probably would keep U.S. weapons systems within the ceilings of the treaty, and the United States probably would not make necessary improvements in weapons programs, he said, adding it would take two to three years for negotiations to get underway again.

Failure to ratify a treaty negotiated over seven years under three presidents would undermine NATO allies' confidence in the United States, "but so would a perceived military imbalance," said Kissinger.

In the way of clarifications, Kissinger proposed that it be made clear temporary restrictions on U.S. cruise missiles not be extended unless matched by similar restrictions on comparable Soviet weapons; that the United States not be barred from transferring weapons technology to its allies, and that in SALT III, the United States assert the right to build heavy missiles comparable to the Soviets SS-18 rocket.

He shied away from recommending specific U.S. programs to improve the military balance or to put a price tag on what is necessary. He said with consultations among the secretary of defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the armed services committees of Congress, "it ought to be possible to work out an agreed framework."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said "one Congress can't bind another" on defense spending and that the administration already is committed to the MX missile program, building the Trident submarine and deploying cruise missiles.

"What more do you think we should commit ourselves to?" Church asked.

Kissinger said the MX

Senate hears Clements testify on SALT II pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposed Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty accommodates the Soviet Union and should not be ratified without amendments, Texas Gov. Bill Clements told a Senate committee Tuesday.

"We are indeed the world's strongest nation with military capability only a part of the matrix," the former deputy secretary of defense testified. "But it is our military capability that is falling behind and that is what is fundamentally wrong with this SALT treaty."

Clements said he supported nuclear arms limitation treaties, but the SALT agreement as written would place the nation squarely in an underdog's role.

"We will lose credibility," he said. "This treaty will be destabilizing because our allies will question our basic strengths."

The governor said the United States' military capability has declined in the past two and a half years.

Clements held his position in the Department of Defense under Republican leadership from 1973 to 1977 and participated in the early stages of U.S.-Soviet negotiations for the SALT II treaty.

"I assure you that I do not appear before you today in a partisan role," Clements told the Senate Armed Services Committee. "I speak to you as an interested American who feels deeply that this SALT treaty is not in the best interest of our nation."

Clements said he could support the treaty if several changes were incorporated and the Senate endorsed spending about $25 billion during each of the next few years to reinstate "necessary strategic programs."

The governor included on site inspection for both parties as one of his qualifications. The treaty's critics have said verification of the Soviet Union's compliance would be impossible without it.

The United States' dependence on foreign oil should be studied before making any conclusions about the treaty's strategic implications, Clements said. "Our foreign policy and our national security, which are two peas in the pod, cannot tolerate for long the energy policies that we now have in this country," he said.

The armed services committee began its hearings on the treaty's military implications July 23, and the schedule calls for them to continue after the month-long congressional recess in August.

The committee's approval, however, is not necessary for SALT II to reach the Senate floor. That vote will come in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Sen. John Tower of Texas is the ranking Republican member on the armed services committee.

Begin in excellent condition: doctors

JERUSALEM (AP) — The condition of Prime Minister Menachem Begin was pronounced excellent today, and doctors said he would be released from the hospital Friday morning.

Prof. Sylvan Lavie, head of the medical team treating Begin for an obstructed artery in the brain, said the prime minister will need a week's rest at home, but will be able to do a minimum amount of work there.

"I have no doubt that in about 10 days he will be able to work as before," Lavie said.

Begin, 65, entered Hadassah Hospital July 19 complaining of dizziness and blurred vision.

Lavie said the dizziness had disappeared and Begin's field of vision had been broadened by treatment, but his peripheral vision may be permanently affected. The doctor said he expected Begin's vision to continue to improve as blood bypasses the blocked artery and reaches surrounding areas of the brain. The prime minister should adjust to any remaining impairment, he said.

"In the long range he will adapt himself to read as much as before, but it will take two, three or four weeks," Lavie said.

Lavie said Begin's mental capacities were normal. The affected artery in the rear section of the brain was far from the area which controls intellectual functions, he said.

Neurological tests on Tuesday showed "no evidence that any other arteries were affected," and there was no reason to believe the problem would recur, he said. Begin will continue receiving oral anti-coagulants for three months as a preventive measure, Lavie added.

Church weddings down

ROME (AP) — The number of church weddings is going down in Italy because of growing indifference to religion, Roman Catholic researchers say.

Civil ceremonies now account for 11 percent of Italian weddings, compared to 1.2 percent in 1967, the Magazine of the Italian Clergy reports in its current issue.

"At the age of 14 or 15 people become obsessed with consumerism, hedonism and atheism. Therefore at 25 they have a civil wedding in accordance with their religious indifference," Bishop Pietro Fiodelli of Prato wrote in a commentary.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON High-fiber diets still controversial

Dear Dr. Solomon: High-fiber diets seem to be the latest food fad. What is fiber, and is it really very beneficial? — Mr. W.D.

Dear Mr. D: Dietary fiber is simply the part of a plant that is not broken down by chemical action during the process of digestion. Actually it is nothing new — your grandmother probably knew it as roughage — but its benefit to the body is still a matter of controversy.

Those who advocate the consumption of foods high in fiber, such as bran, whole grains, and many fruits and vegetables, claim it can prevent a number of diseases. These include cancer of the colon, hemorrhoids, appendicitis, varicose veins, atherosclerosis, diverticular disease, hiatus hernia and ischemic heart disease. The theory is based on the observation that these diseases are all but unknown among rural Africans, although they do occur in Africans who move to urban areas and begin consuming a diet that is low in fiber and high in fat.

Dr. Denis Burkitt, a British champion of the high fiber diet, says that about 30 years ago the diseases were less common in blacks than in whites. He attributes this to the fact that many blacks lived in rural areas before World War II and their diets were higher in fiber than those of whites. Today the diets are much more alike, and the incidence of these diseases is virtually the same in both groups.

While not all scientists agree about the value of fiber, it does appear to be useful in treating constipation and diverticular disease. This is due to the effect it has on the consistency and bulk of the stool, and the time it takes to travel through the intestines. Because fiber holds water, stools resulting from a high-fiber diet are bulkier and softer, and pass through more easily. Fiber advocates reason that this, in turn, means that bowel tissues are less exposed to poisons and cancer-causing substances produced in the intestines. They also believe it reduces the amount of cholesterol absorbed by the body.

Critics of this theory point out that there is no evidence that people who suffer from constipation have a greater incidence of cancer of the colon. They maintain that it is not a lack of fiber that creates dietary problems, but the increased consumption of animal fat and protein. Controlled studies have shown that adding bran to the diet does not affect cholesterol levels.

The chances are that most people consume more fiber than they realize. Cellulose, one of the components of dietary fiber, is used in ice cream, in low-calorie salad dressings, and in whipped cream toppings, to name only a few products to which it is added. Since it is tasteless and odorless and does not change the color, flavor, or aroma of the food, the additive is largely unnoticed.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is meant by the term "idiopathic" when applied to a disease? — Don.

Dear Don: "Idiopathic" simply means that the cause of the disease is unknown.

New frontage road signing poses real highway problem

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State highway officials say they have no estimates of what it will cost to change yield signs on highway frontage roads across Texas, to give off-ramp motorists the right-of-way, but say up to 3,400 miles of highways and freeways could be affected by the switch.

House Bill 1421 mandates that off-ramp traffic have right-of-way over access road traffic, and that vehicles entering or exiting controlled access highways from two-way frontage road have right-of-way over traffic heading the opposite direction.

The bill goes into effect Aug. 27 and State Department of Highways and Public Transportation officials expect the change-over of yield signs to be completed by then.

Odessa college cites record enrollment

ODESSA — A record enrollment for the second summer term was set at Odessa College, according to OC Registrar Sue Blair.

A total of 848 students enrolled, including 628 who signed up during registration, 63 from late registration and 157 who began open-entry courses which allow students to sign up any weekday year-round.

Enrollment figures for last summer's second session totaled 691.

Greenland starts rationing liquor

GODTHAAB, Greenland (AP) — Liquor rationing will be introduced on this Danish island Wednesday in an effort to halt excessive drinking.

Each Greenlander over 18 will be allowed 72 liquor units per month to quench his thirst. The basic unit is the equivalent of a bottle of beer, so drinkers can buy 72 beers, or 12 bottles of wine or six fifths of hard liquor.

New SALT II would cause U.S., Soviet blowup: Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry Kissinger says attempts to rewrite the SALT II treaty would trigger "a tremendous blowup, a crisis atmosphere" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

It would be two or three years before arms negotiations could resume, he added.

The former secretary of state gave the treaty a conditional endorsement Tuesday but expressed alarm that the military balance is "beginning to tilt ominously" against the United States.

He tied his support to an administration commitment for higher defense spending and a Senate declaration linking acceptance of future arms agreements to Soviet behavior throughout the world.

Kissinger recommended delaying ratification until the next Congress if it takes the administration that long to offer new military programs.

If the only choice were to vote for or against the treaty without any improvements in weapon programs, he said, he would recommend rejection of the pact.

He also suggested that several areas of the agreement be clarified with unilateral reservations and understandings. Such clarifications would be "achievable without renegotiation" of the actual terms of the treaty, he said.

Kissinger offered his views to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the first of two appearances in Capitol Hill this week. He testifies Thursday on the treaty before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Lt. Gen. Edward Rowny, a treaty critic and former representative of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to the SALT talks, was called to appear before the Armed Services panel today.

Kissinger's proposals were described as "positive" by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who noted Kissinger opposes amendments "which would kill the treaty."

Under questioning, Kissinger said Senate

amendments sending the treaty back to negotiators "would probably end any negotiations until the (November 1980) elections. There would be a tremendous blowup, a crisis atmosphere."

President Carter probably would keep U.S. weapons systems within the ceilings of the treaty, and the United States probably would not make necessary improvements in weapons programs, he said, adding it would take two to three years for negotiations to get underway again. Failure to ratify a treaty negotiated over seven years under three presidents would undermine NATO allies' confidence in the United States, "but so would a perceived military imbalance," said Kissinger.

In the way of clarifications, Kissinger proposed that it be made clear temporary restrictions on U.S. cruise missiles not be extended unless matched by similar restrictions on comparable Soviet weapons; that the United States not be barred from transferring weapons' technology to its allies, and that in SALT III, the United States assert the right to build heavy missiles comparable to the Soviets' SS-18 rocket.

He shied away from recommending specific U.S. programs to improve the military balance or to put a price tag on what is necessary. He said with consultations among the secretary of defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the armed services committees of Congress, "it ought to be possible to work out an agreed framework."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said "one Congress can't bind another" on defense spending and that the administration already is committed to the MX missile program, building the Trident submarine and deploying cruise missiles.

"What more do you think we should commit ourselves to?" Church asked.

Kissinger said the MX

deployment should be accelerated, its method of basing should be selected, improvements should be made in short-range nuclear weapons and conventional forces should be beefed up for faster deployment over.

In Kansas City, Defense Secretary Harold Brown took issue with Kissinger's criticism of the Carter administration's military spending.

He told reporters Carter had increased U.S. emphasis on NATO.

Senate hears Clements testify on SALT II pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposed Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty accommodates the Soviet Union and should not be ratified without amendments, Texas Gov. Bill Clements told a Senate committee Tuesday.

"We are indeed the world's strongest nation with military capability only a part of the matrix," the former deputy secretary of defense testified. "But it is our military capability that is falling behind and that is what is fundamentally wrong with this SALT treaty."

Clements said he supported nuclear arms limitation treaties, but the SALT agreement as written would place the nation squarely in an underdog's role.

"We will lose credibility," he said. "This treaty will be destabilizing because our allies will question our basic strengths."

The governor said the United States' military capability has declined in the past two and a half years.

Clements held his position in the Department of Defense under Republican leadership from 1973 to 1977 and participated in the early stages of U.S.-Soviet negotiations for the SALT II treaty.

"I assure you that I do not appear before you today in a partisan role," Clements told the Senate Armed Services Committee. "I speak to you as an interested American who feels deeply that this SALT treaty is not in the best interest of our nation."

Clements said he could support the treaty if several changes were incorporated and the Senate endorsed spending about $25 billion during each of the next few years to reinstate "necessary strategic programs."

The governor included on site inspection for both parties as one of his qualifications. The treaty's critics have said verification of the Soviet Union's compliance would be impossible without it.

The United States' dependence on foreign oil should be studied before making any conclusions about the treaty's strategic implications, Clements said. "Our foreign policy and our national security, which are two peas in the pod, cannot tolerate for long the energy policies that we now have in this country," he said.

The armed services committee began its hearings on the treaty's military implications July 23, and the schedule calls for them to continue after the month-long congressional recess in August.

The committee's approval, however, is not necessary for SALT II to reach the Senate floor. That vote will come in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Sen. John Tower of Texas is the ranking Republican member on the armed services committee.

Nigerians seize oil interests of BP

LONDON (AP) — The Nigerian government's seizure of British Petroleum's interests in Nigeria will cost BP about an eighth of its total supply of oil, the company said today.

"BP will lose 12 million metric tons a year — about an eighth of the company's total supplies," a spokesman said. This is about 9.6 million gallons of crude per day.

Nigeria announced the takeover Tuesday in retaliation for the alleged sale of crude oil to South Africa by BP through a swap arrangement with other companies. It said BP sent North Sea oil to South Africa and replaced this with supplies from Nigeria.

The British government owns 51 percent of the stock in BP, and the general belief in London was that Nigeria had fired the first opening shot in a black African campaign to deter Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher from recognizing Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's biracial government in Zimbabwe Rhodesia. The Foreign Office said Nigeria's stated reasons for the takeover were "totally contrary to the facts." It added: "Taking into account the timing of the extraordinary move on the eve of the Commonwealth meeting, the British government can only suppose that the real reason for the Nigerian action is something entirely different."

Mrs. Thatcher has already indicated that since Zimbabwe Rhodesia now has an elected government with a black majority, her Conservative majority in the House of Commons will let the economic sanctions against the African country expire in the fall and Britain may even recognize Muzorewa's government. This is the chief issue before the Commonwealth Conference of prime ministers opening in Zambia today.

BP is a partner with Shell in the Shell-BP Petroleum Development Co. which produces about half of the total Nigerian oil output, now 100.8 million gallons per day. BP owned 20 percent of the company's stock as well as a 40 percent of the stock of BP Nigeria Ltd., the local marketing company.

WARD DISCOVERY

Gifford, Mitchell & Wisenbaker No. 1 Blue Jacket, discovery well of Shawnee (Atoka) field of Ward County, has been re-completed as a flowing oil discovery in the Delaware sand.

The operator reported a Delaware potential of 219 barrels of 39.9-gravity oil and 334 barrels of water, through a 1-2-inch choke. The gas-oil ratio is 1,808-1.

The pay was acidized with 1,500 gallons and fractured with 30,000 gallons.

Total depth is 16,355 feet and hole is plugged back to 5,194 feet.

The completion was through perforations from 4,914 to 4,924 feet. The strike originally was completed from the Atoka, through perforations from 14,450 to 15,520 feet, for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 4,102,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

The wellsite is 1,901 feet from south and 2,039 feet from west lines of section 62, block 34, H&TC survey and eight miles south of Pyote.

Superior bids high

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Oilmen offered the federal government $1.26 billion for drilling space in the oil-rich Gulf of Mexico at an offshore lease sale Tuesday.

The whopping high bid was $153 million offered by a combine headed by Superior Oil Co., officials said. They said the bid was for 4,254 acres south of the Sabine River, which forms the border between Texas and Louisiana.

An Interior Department official said the crowd of about 500 was the largest since a big sale in 1951. The next-highest bid of $74.4 million by Tenneco Oil Co. and its partners also was for rights off southwestern Louisiana.

The Interior Department put a total of 123 tracts of Gulf sea bottom up for sealed bids Tuesday. A spokesman said the sale drew bids from more than 125 oil companies.

The sale went on despite the state of Louisiana's attempt to keep 32 tracts off the selling block.

Attorney General William Guste fought the sale in federal court and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, but both refused his request for a temporary restraining order. The 5th Circuit acted just an hour before the sale.

Guste claimed the tracts lie so near the offshore boundary any wells drilled in them would drain oil or natural gas from state-owned sea bottom areas.

He said the district judge rejected Louisiana's petition "because he did not want to impede development of oil and gas during the energy crisis and he hoped we could work it out."

Blast claims 4th victim

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A fourth man has died as the result of an explosion and fire at the Marathon Oil Co. refinery in Robinson, Ill., authorities said today.

Kenneth Rodgers, 52, of Robinson, who suffered burns over 100 percent of his body died late Tuesday night at Memorial Medical Center here. He had been flown to the hospital's burn unit by helicopter after the accident Monday.

Rodgers and the three men other men who died were in a construction building when a pipe in a thermal cracking unit broke and sprayed hot oil. Rodgers crawled from the rubble, but the others died at the scene.

Two other men remain in serious condition in the hospital's burn unit.

World petroleum supply nearing consumer demand

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK (AP) — World oil supplies are just about meeting demand again, analysts say, but that may not last for long. Militant members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are cutting supplies to support higher price levels.

The nations fear that an oversupply or glut of oil could undermine the $18 to $23.50 a barrel price structure voted by the cartel a month ago.

"It's clear that we're coming into a balanced condition, but it could all blow up in our faces," said Larry Goldstein, an analyst at the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, supported by oil industry money.

Supply and demand are balancing, analysts say, as the result of decreased consumption by Western nations and the decision by Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest member, to raise production this quarter by 1 million barrels a day, to 9.5 million barrels daily.

The Saudis made that move in an attempt to stabilize the world oil market and moderate further price increases. The base price of OPEC oil has risen 42 percent this year.

But OPEC's more militant members apparently are afraid that the stability could turn into a price-eroding glut in the next few months, and have begun taking steps to insure against that by cutting their supplies.

Further instability in oil markets could lead the cartel into calling a special meeting in September to discuss supplies, prices and the erosion of the dollar.

OPEC members said in June such a meeting was possible, and a Kuwaiti newspaper, Al-Siyassah, said Monday that the latest decline of the dollar made a special meeting "likely."

Three nations have cut oil supplies in recent weeks or hinted that they are about to do so, including: —Algeria, which cut back sales to oil companies by 20 percent earlier this month. The Algerian oil may not actually be removed from the world oil market, industry sources speculate, but instead be diverted to the more-lucrative spot market or to Algeria's rapidly expanding refinery system.

—Nigeria, which has told its customers it is considering cutting production by at least 10 percent. Nigeria, which like Algeria produces some of the world's best oil, has been running oil fields at full capacity for several years, and officials have long desired to ease back.

—Kuwait, which has pushed from April 1 to Jan. 1 the date for a production cut of as much as 25 percent. Kuwait produces a total of 2 million barrels of oil a day and is planning to reduce its daily output to 1.5 million barrels, according to industry sources. Fuller McGowan, a spokesman for Gulf Oil Co., one of Kuwait's major customers, said Gulf's supply of oil from Kuwait will be cut 500,000 barrels daily to 400,000.

Algeria, Nigeria and Kuwait may not be the only nations considering cuts in their oil output. Privately, oil industry executives are expressing worry that political problems and desires to keep oil supplies as tight as possible may cause Iraq, Iran and Libya to cut back as well.

Any cuts by those nations could combine with the reductions by Algeria, Nigeria and Kuwait to eliminate any glut and possibly cause a slight shortage — perhaps forcing prices up again.

"When you start adding them (cuts) up, it more than takes care of the Saudi increase," said Goldstein.

Mexican slick inching toward nation's waters

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Runaway Mexican oil that is threatening Texas coastal industries and recreation continued inching toward U.S. waters today.

A Coast Guard spokesman said late Tuesday that the northern most evidence of the massive oil spill was a thin sheen spotted 60 miles south of U.S. waters and about 35 miles offshore.

Richard Griggs said the surface sheen "doesn't represent too much oil."

Griggs said the northern most patch of oil was 100 miles south of U.S. waters and some 20 miles offshore.

The oil is still spewing from a blow-out Mexican well from the Bay of Campeche. The well has been gushing up to a million barrels of oil a day since the June 3 blowout.

The latest projection by experts gathered here to track the oil indicated traces of the spill may cross into U.S. waters by the weekend.

The oil posed a threat to a 4-year-old fishing tournament that in the past has only been canceled by war.

Mary Lou Campbell of South Padre Island said 700 fishermen are expected to compete in the 3-day event that begins Thursday. She said some of the fishermen will be competing as far as 100 miles offshore.

"We talked with the Coast Guard and they seemed to think it would not effect our tournament," Mrs. Campbell said.

The oil also poses a potential threat to the multi-million dollar Texas shrimping industry. Griggs said samples from the spill are now being tested for toxicity.

Guy Pete, a long-time Texas shrimper, said he feared that even a thin sheen on the Gulf surface could cause damage to the shrimp.

"I'm not a biologist, but the sunlight is just as vital to the sea as it is to a farm," Pete said.

He called the oil spill "the biggest threat I can remember that we've ever had here."

He recalled that during World War II U.S. ships sunk in the Gulf caused problems for Louisiana shrimpers. He said oil from those sunken ships turned up in his shrimp net during the war.

Griggs said Coast Guard equipment aimed at heading off the oil was being trucked here from North Carolina. The equipment includes booms that are used to physically lock or divert the oil. Experts are particularly worried about oil that might get into the Laguna Madre or other interior waters.

Pete said any damage to the shrimp would be a major hardship to him and other shrimpers.

"Every dollar I've ever earned has come out of that gulf. That's all I know... all I do," he said.

Emergency fuel sought

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Carl Parker urged Gov. Bill Clements on Monday to allocate emergency fuel to aid in the cleanup of Southeast Texas areas flooded by heavy rains last week.

"I have had several calls from city managers and mayors in Southeast Texas about the need for additional fuel for operation of flood cleanup vehicles," said Parker. "At a time when more garbage trucks are needed to remove trash and debris left by rising waters from Tropical Storm Claudette, some municipalities are faced with a reduced fuel allotment."

Parker, D-Port Arthur, specifically mentioned that nearby Bridge City had its fuel allocation reduced by 25 percent.

"The health and safety of the citizens of Bridge City are certainly endangered when refuse is left for long periods of time. Other municipalities face the same dilemma," Parker said in a statement.

House Texans support personal staff boosts

WASHINGTON—Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 19 through July 25.

HOUSE
AMTRAK: The House rejected, 197 for and 214 against, an amendment to continue the full 27,500-mile Amtrak passenger train network for another year. The amendment was proposed to HR 3996, a bill authorizing Amtrak operations in fiscal 1980 and beyond. As later passed and sent to the Senate, the bill cuts Amtrak to 22,000 miles in for and 216 against, the House failed to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to approve a proposed "neighborhood schools" constitutional amendment. The measure was designed primarily to outlaw court-ordered busing to integrate schools. Members voting "nay" either favored busing or felt that amending the Constitution was an inappropriate response to the problems of busing.

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Gramm, Archer, Pickle, Leath, Hightower, Wyatt, de la Garza, White, Stenholm, Hance, Loeffler, Paul and Kazen voted "yea."
Wilson, Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Wright, Leland, Gonzalez and Frost voted "nay."

ROLL CALL REPORT

order to stem its massive financial losses.

Members voting "yea" wanted to keep Amtrak at its present size during the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Charles Wilson, D-2, Jim Mattox, D-5, Phil Gramm, D-6, Bill Archer, R-7, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Hightower, D-13, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Mickey Leland, D-18, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Abraham Kazen, D-23 and Martin Frost, D-24, voted "yea."

Reps. James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, J. Marvin Leath, D-11, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Charles Stenholm, D-17, Kent Hance, D-19, Tom Loeffler, R-21 and Ron Paul, R-22, voted "nay."
Rep. James Wright, D-12, did not vote.

STAFF INCREASE: The House voted, 214 for and 120 against, to allow House members to enlarge their staffs by up to four part-time or temporary positions. This raises the present ceiling of 18 aides that a member can have on his personal (as opposed to committee) staff. It leaves unchanged the $288,000 limit on salaries for a member's personal staff. The measure (H Res 359) does not require Senate concurrence and takes effect Aug. 1.

Members voting "yea" wanted larger personal staffs.

Hall, Wilson, Collins, Roberts, Mattox, Gramm, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Wright, Hightower, Wyatt, de la Garza, White, Leland, Hance, Gonzalez and Frost voted "yea."
Archer, Leath, Stenholm, Loeffler, Paul and Kazen voted "nay."

RINGING THE BELL

Bellringer hails memory of a great black journalist

With BOB TIEUEL

Out of the pages of the Black Experience: Black journalists who love their field and are dedicated to racial welfare and uplift are indeed rare specimens. Yet a lifelong friend of mine was just such a journalist, and his name was Woodrow "Woody" Taylor. He served as longtime editor of the New Pittsburgh Courier, one of the nation's best known black newspapers. Woody died the other day after an illness of more than two years.

Some years ago, we were in high school around the same time in Boley, Okla., a town of blacks at that time which boasted good schools, a junior college, two banks, businesses of almost every kind and, above all, men and women who took pride in black opportunity and dignity.

We lost contact with Woody for a number of years, and then one day we got a letter from Pittsburgh, and it was from Woody. He told us that he often had a chance to run across a copy of "Ringing the Bell" in some of the newspapers in the nation and how much he enjoyed my opinions from "a preacher's point of view."

WOODY TALKED of his experiences as a free-lance journalist traveling over the country and working mostly in editorial capacities with some of the nation's newspapers. Woody was a tall, pure black young man who had a rich baritone voice and could sing like a mockingbird. In the letters we exchanged for several months, he talked about the possibilities for future growth of Boley, his old girl friends and his male friends in the good old days.

Taylor was born three years before this correspondent; now I've told my age. He was born in 1911, and yet so many of our old schoolmates have answered the roll call which we often talked about. And now he is gone. There are only a few of us left.

He received his training in journalism at Lincoln University in Missouri and worked for such great newspapers as the Afro-American, the Norfolk Journal and Guide, the Kansas City Call and the Cleveland Call and Post.

DEAR WOODY: Through the years we have had similar experiences. You were a traveling journalist; I was a traveling Methodist minister. We both had chosen fields in which we were vitally interested and ones for which we believed we could further the cause of liberation for our downhearted and oppressed people of color.

You speak of the times when you would take a new job with a colored newspaper and had to strive hard sometimes to make ends meet, if they would ever meet. During those same years, we would be assigned a mission church in Kansas or Tennessee, or perhaps in Massachusetts or Delaware. Most often the church was small and the members poor. We did well to get an offering large enough to pay for the week's board.

You know, Woody, that in those days a dollar was a dollar and we could buy a loaf of bread for five cents. Yet we both felt that we were in a position to bring hope and more faith to our people, who kept "climbing high mountains."

One time I was assigned to pastor a church some 500 miles from my family in East Texas. We made the trip twice a month. Often we had to travel 150 to 250 miles to pastor a Methodist mission. Only God knew how we made it. But we did, and we look back with a certain joy and thanksgiving that we have come this far on the way.

We shall miss you now that you are away, but we know that we shall meet again and tell God how we overcame. It's been a long, hard struggle, but it was worth it, I'm sure you would say. See you later, a friend, Bob.

Saudi Arabia: strange mixture of medieval and modern worlds

By BOB DUDNEY
Dallas Times Herald

Although they are far too polite to come out and say it, Saudi Arabians believe Westerners are ignoramuses if they snap photos of camels crossing one of their new superhighways. Correctly, they assume Americans too often focus upon the embarrassing aspects of the country rather than its true progress.

At hand is formidable evidence of Arabia's modernity: airports that are among the busiest in the Middle East, world-class traffic jams, state welfare programs that make Sweden appear parsimonious by comparison, massive classroom enrollments. Like Paris, Jeddah has a posh new Meridian hotel.

But for a Westerner accustomed to consistency in everyday realities, the contradictions found in today's Saudi Arabia are uniquely jarring, especially since Saudis tend to see nothing particularly strange about what's happening. Perhaps no place else in the world has leaped so deeply into the modern world while dragging so much baggage from the 13th century in its wake.

"It seems that while they have privately decided to go along with this modernity the while," one Arabist observes, "the Saudis have also concluded that it cannot last and so they have kept their old insurance policy...against the day when the oil geologists are proved hopelessly wrong."

As we suggested elsewhere, the ordinary Arabian camel is an inspiration for more than a few memorable scenes. Some still roam the city streets, though one encounters them most frequently in the desert. Occasionally, a camel can be seen lying stoically in the bed of a Toyota pickup truck, almost like some off-track vehicle its Bedouin owner keeps handy should an emergency arise.

Islam is the source of more imposing contrasts. As the holiest piece of real estate in the Moslem world, Mecca is off-limits to unbelievers. Yet, it is accepted that infidel engineering skills are sometimes needed.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE

No Need for Genius

By Alfred Sheinwold

You needn't be a great mathematician to know that the whole is greater than any of its parts.

South can make today's slam if each opponent has three diamonds since he can eventually discard a spade from dummy on his last diamond. There is another chance if East has the king of spades since then a spade finesse will succeed.

The odds are almost two to one that the diamonds will not break favorably. The odds are even that East has the king of spades. Still, South needn't choose the spade finesse over the diamond break.

TEST DIAMONDS

After drawing trumps South should take the top diamonds and give up a diamond. If the suit breaks favorably, South can discard dummy's losing spade on the last diamond.

If the diamonds fail to break favorably, South can get to dummy with a trump to try the spade finesse. Both chances together are better than just one of them.

ANSWER: Bid two no-trump, the negative response with this borderline hand. If the king of spades were the ace or the queen of diamonds were the king, you would raise to three spades at once rather than bid two no-trump.

So the new Intercontinental Hotel's construction was supervised by Western workers using closed-circuit television monitors and radios.

With the obvious opportunities this system creates, it is not surprising that one enterprising Australian contractor converted to Islam to exploit the building boom in Mecca. Nor that the Saudis have adapted to the realities of travel in the kingdom by causing a 40-kilometer bypass to be built around the Holy City so Westerners can reach Jeddah from Taif.

Islamic law frowns implacably upon alcohol, a restriction Americans find difficult. "But I've never heard Saudis complain about it, even if they're pined," is the curious way an American official put it. Clad in sepiulchral black veils from head to ankle, a Saudi woman seems remarkably lifeless except for the chick platform shoes she is wearing. No legal theaters exist, but the Saudis are perhaps the largest consumer of video-tape machines and home projectors — per capita — in the world. A gallon of water costs five times as much as gasoline, which costs about 18 cents.

All this is interesting, but a Westerner misses a deeper meaning if he regards it as merely curious. A keener eye sees symbols of an underlying struggle between old and new, East and West, the tried and cherished values from a more traditional time adapting themselves to the demands arising from even more than $100 million a day in oil revenues. How well the Saudis accomplish this is of more than passing significance for the Western world.

"A Saudi I met couldn't understand why Americans would have ever wanted black and white TV, since color was available," says Walter O'Rourke, a Fort Worth, Texas, native working at Ras Tanura. "He has always had color TV. They have inherited the 20th century, as is, with no idea of what came before."

A traveler finds evidence of this everywhere in Saudi Arabia. But perhaps none is more impressive than an incident near Al Jufarah, an isolated village about 100 miles west of Riyadh on the new road to Jeddah. After what he must have considered a long interval, the polite young Saudi began pointing at his distinguished visitor's camera, an ordinary 35mm. Much confusion ensued before it was established the photograph was not available immediately.

After seeing a few polaroids, he could not understand why every camera didn't perform the same manner of high-speed miracles.

DC-10 AFT PYLON ATTACHM

Chrysler Corp. will get loan chairman believes

American Airlines mechanic Raymond Lattanza, of Tulsa, Okla., listens to questions during the second day of the National Transportation Safety Board's hearings on the May 25 DC-10 crash near O'Hare International Airport. He told the board he noticed an engine stand "was misaligned" when that DC-10 was being serviced in Tulsa, on March 29, 1979. (AP Laserphoto)

American Airlines mechanics found nick on DC-10 engine

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — American Airlines mechanics have testified they found a nick on an engine support bolt in a DC-10 jetliner two months before it crashed on takeoff at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport on May 25.

Now, National Transportation Safety Board investigators want to find out whether that nick is related to a 10-inch crack that is believed to have caused the plane's left engine to fall off, resulting in the nation's worst air disaster.

American mechanics testified Tuesday during the second day of hearings on the crash that they discovered the nick — but no other damage — during the plane's last major inspection.

The mechanics told NTB investigators they spotted the small nick on the top of a supporting bolt that held the left pylon to the wing of the jet during an inspection in Tulsa, Okla., on March 29. The pylon attaches the wing to the engine.

Eight weeks later, the plane crashed when the left engine ripped from the wing shortly after takeoff.

Clerical error demolishes wrong building

CLEVELAND (AP) — The city mistakenly demolished a commercial building valued by its owner at $40,000 because of a "clerical error," a Cleveland official says.

"We tried to remove a blighting influence in the neighborhood, and through a clerical error, we did it faster than we should have," said Lisa Thomas, chief of the municipal demolition bureau.

Charles Colombo, owner of Colombo Enterprises, said a wrecking company struck down the unoccupied building owned by his company and caused $10,000 in damage to an adjacent building he owns, which houses a dairy store.

"They tore the building down without giving proper notice," said Colombo.

Colombo said he began constructing the small building in 1976, but left it as an empty shell for lack of a tenant. He said he regularly constructs a shell, then finishes the interior to meet the specifications of a tenant.

The city building division issued citations in June alleging several building code violations at the site and notified Colombo by certified mail to correct the violations or raze the building by July 20.

City law entitles him to a 30-day grace period and the chance to appeal the demolition order.

He said the 30-day warning was never sent.

"I'll take responsibility for it," said Ms. Thomas. "There is nothing to hide. A mistake was made. We'll own up to a mistake."

"All the man has to do is take us to court and sue us. I apologized to Mr. Colombo profusely, met with him two or three times and really tried to make him aware how sorry we were with only giving him one notice," she said.

The disaster claimed 273 lives. Mac H. Brown, an overhaul inspector at American's Tulsa workshop, said his mechanics reported the nick and repaired it.

Investigators asked whether the nick might indicate the support bolt struck the wing mounting during maintenance with enough force to cause the crack.

Dale Warren, a design engineer for McDonnell Douglas, which built the plane, said, however, that simulated lab tests failed to produce a similar crack after being struck six times by a powerful outside force.

Much of Tuesday's session focused on when the fatal 10-inch crack developed in the bolting assembly, but investigators are also trying to determine whether there was other structural damage that went undetected.

More American mechanics testified Tuesday that they and their colleagues often failed to follow airline instructions, which call for removing the pylon and engine as one unit.

Mechanic Brian Bricken explained why the mechanics didn't follow the step-by-step instructions given them. "The way we do it is safer and more practical," he said.

Politics and poor records brought troubles to homes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Politics and poor record keeping brought troubles and publicity to Rep. Clay Smothers' black child care home at Malakoff, the Dallas legislator told a Capitol news conference.

However, Smothers said Tuesday, he feels sure the state Department of Human Resources will let him continue to operate as long as he attempts to make corrections.

The state department, which found more than 40 violations of state standards at the home June 21, said later Tuesday it has not receives reports of a recheck made Friday and Monday.

"There's dozens and dozens of lily white child care homes out there that have not been attacked," Smothers said. "Mine is the only black child care home. Doesn't that tell you something?"

"There's no doubt about it," Smothers said, "there is a clear implication that my appearing with (Evangelist Lester) Roloff in Corpus Christi had something to do with it."

Smothers was shown with Roloff on television when the evangelist and a large group of preachers defied the Department of Human Resources attempt to close Roloff's homes in Corpus Christi on court orders.

Bishop College president and two others face charges on embezzling

DALLAS (AP) — Bishop College President Milton Curry and two other top administrators today face charges of embezzling $672,500 in federal funds.

A federal grand jury indicted Curry, Bishop Vice President Reginald M. Lefall and Assistant Vice President Walter B. Johnson on charges of embezzling the money and converting it "to their own use and to the use of another." The indictment, however, specifies that the funds went to Bishop College.

The men were also accused of conspiracy to defraud the federal government and with six counts of making false statements and claims to the government.

The three men were given leaves of absence May 31 after they were charged with bank fraud and theft of $411,000 from the college's employee pension fund. They are scheduled to go on trial here Nov. 5 on the earlier charges.

Smothers said he also was a supporter of an unsuccessful bill in the recent legislative session that would have let Roloff's child care homes operate without a license. He said the bill would not have affected St. Paul Industrial Training School which is operated by Smothers and other members of his family as a state-licensed institution. The so-called Roloff bill applied only to church-operated homes.

"We are not dodging being licensed and I don't think the Department of Human Resources will ever try to close St. Paul's as long as we try to correct the violations."

Smothers blamed himself for "poor record keeping."

"We are not in compliance in some things and we have a long way to go. Some of DHR complaints are valid and some are ridiculous ... I think we can be in compliance by the last part of August? If we are not, I will ask the DHR to send a representative to live on our campus until we are."

He admitted he spanked inmates for punishment "and I am not going to give it up. I did one the other day while the DHR inspector was in the next room ... I spank with a paddle from one to four licks. That's a last resort."

The State Insurance Board should study creation of a separate rating classification for people who carpool at least half their work week, said David B. Irons, attorney for the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office.

"Whether or not participating in carpools actually reduces the insured exposure, we believe such a program would be worthwhile if it served only to inspire a conscious participation by a broad segment of the work force in the program of national energy conservation," Irons said in testimony prepared for a two-day insurance board hearing on car insurance rates.

The industry has asked for an average statewide rate hike of 21.7 percent. The insurance board's experts have recommended an 8.9 percent average increase.

Last year, the board raised rates an average of 3.2 percent after the companies requested an 8.9 percent increase.

Irons said the average motorist who drives his car to work pays 26 percent more in collision rates than the car owner who uses his car for pleasure and recreation.

If a motorist leaves his car at home

DETROIT (AP) — The chairman of Chrysler Corp. says he refuses to believe his company — which has run up more losses in three months than in all of last year — won't get a $1 billion loan from the federal government.

Chairman John Riccardo, reporting an industry-record $207 million loss for the second quarter, urged stockholders Tuesday to write to members of Congress. Chrysler is asking the government for cash payments now to cover tax credits in future years to balance the loss of more cash.

"I refuse to believe that that won't happen and I think to consider any other alternatives doesn't make sense," Riccardo said. "And I frankly won't speculate on the likelihood of any other alternative."

In their report to shareholders, Riccardo and President Lee A. Iacocca said, for the first time in public, that there was a "possibility of reduced competition in the industry" — a phrase that could cover anything from a full or partial shutdown to a takeover by a competitor.

Outside studies earlier had indicated Chrysler could not survive as a full-line producer without some kind of help.

Government help should take two forms, Riccardo told reporters: postponing the tough 1981 pollution standards to 1983 and an "accelerated tax credit."

Companies that lose money may deduct those losses from income in future years, for up to five years, before figuring taxable income. Chrysler has used up all those credits from years past.

Chrysler can credit this year's losses against future profits, but needs the money now. So what Riccardo wants is the ability to take the credits now and next year in the form of checks from the U.S. Treasury, repaying in 1981 and 1982.

But he would not limit the credits to the actual losses for 1979 and 1980. Instead, he would make the credits equal to the extra costs for research, engineering and tooling caused by government regulation, or half the expected $1 billion expenditure in each of those years.

Riccardo repeated a familiar theme — that pollution and mileage regulation is almost crushing the company because it has fewer cars over which to spread the costs than its larger competitors.

Regulations costing GM $340 a car cost Chrysler $620, he said.

United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser made a similar point when he called for the government to take a $1 billion ownership position in the company as an "investment in people." He asserted that the mileage and anti-pollution regulations benefit everyone, so the whole country should help Chrysler share a burden it seems unable to shoulder alone.

Riccardo said his difference with Fraser was "one of form."

In Washington, a spokesman said the Treasury Department had assembled an interagency committee to examine the best form of help for Chrysler. The treasury said it was concerned about the possible impact of Chrysler's problems "on the overall economy and on the employees of Chrysler and its suppliers."

Chrysler said it accounts for 500,000 jobs. It employs 131,000.

Legislation would be needed for the relief Chrysler wants and Riccardo said he hoped it could be passed in the current session.

Wage rises misleading, says union

DETROIT (AP) — A Ford Motor Co. position paper contending that wages paid to assembly line workers rose 130 percent over 10 years is misleading, the United Auto Workers union charges.

UAW Vice President Ken Bannon said Tuesday that the Ford study is meaningless because it does not take inflation into account.

Ford's report, submitted to the union as part of the current auto industry contract negotiations, said assembly line wage scales rose from $3.62 an hour in 1968 to $8.34 an hour in 1978 — an increase of 130 percent.

The report also said average annual earnings on the assembly line — including average overtime and holiday and vacation pay — climbed from $10,266 to $23,465 in those 10 years.

The Consumer Price Index for the period rose 91 percent, Ford said.

"Their arithmetic was correct, but such comparisons are meaningless," said Howard Young, a consultant to UAW President Douglas Fraser.

Young said that, after inflation is figured in, "the real wage increase was only about 20 percent. That's a yearly average of less than 2 percent over the 10 years."

Young also took issue with another claim Ford made in the report — that hourly labor costs rose from $5.46 to $14.09 in the 10 years, a jump of 67 percent. "The real increase was about 35 percent," once inflation is figured in, Young said.

Bob Krueger defends appointment to new post

By PAUL WEST (c) 1979, Dallas Times Herald

WASHINGTON — President Carter's choice for the newly created post of ambassador-at-large for Mexican affairs, Bob Krueger, Tuesday defended his appointment in his first appearance before Congress.

The sometimes hostile questioning of Krueger by a House subcommittee provided a preview of an expected attack on his appointment next month in Senate confirmation hearings.

At least two members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee have already announced they will oppose Krueger's nomination on the grounds his new post is both unnecessary and an insult to the Mexican people.

But Krueger, a former congressman from Texas, told the House science subcommittee that U.S.-Mexican relations have become too complicated to be handled solely by the U.S. ambassador in Mexico City.

He pointed to ongoing negotiations over exports of Mexican tomatoes to the United States, a sensitive political and economic issue in both nations, as one example.

"It's hard for someone in Mexico to meet with someone in Capitol Hill or elsewhere in Washington," said Krueger.

He quoted U.S. Ambassador to Mexico Patrick J. Lucey as having told him recently, "I really can't handle it (the tomato import issue) from Mexico."

But Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis., charged that Krueger's appointment, if confirmed, would only brew more trouble between the two countries.

"You know the old saying: Too many cooks spoil the broth," said Roth. "It seems like that could happen here."

Asked to describe Lucey's duties under the new arrangement, Krueger replied that the ambassador in Mexico City has always been responsible for dealing "with day-to-day problems down there."

Krueger said his own job will be "to coordinate on this end of the pipeline, as it were, U.S. relations with Mexico." He pledged "to work to get a unified, coordinated policy" that would help improve sagging relations between the two countries.

Although he said illegal immigration from Mexico to the U.S. is potentially the biggest problem facing the two nations, Krueger also touched on the controversy over the United States' eagerness to share in Mexico's new-found oil riches.

Krueger suggested an agreement to trade Mexican petroleum for U.S. technology as one possible solution.

"Such an agreement could satisfy Mexican development needs," he said. "There is no reason why we should not explore a long-term trade arrangement, particularly in view of

Carpoolers should get break insurance spokesman says

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Motorists who regularly leave their cars at home to ride in carpools should get a break on their auto insurance, an insurance industry spokesman said today.

The State Insurance Board should study creation of a separate rating classification for people who carpool at least half their work week, said David B. Irons, attorney for the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office.

"Whether or not participating in carpools actually reduces the insured exposure, we believe such a program would be worthwhile if it served only to inspire a conscious participation by a broad segment of the work force in the program of national energy conservation," Irons said in testimony prepared for a two-day insurance board hearing on car insurance rates.

The industry has asked for an average statewide rate hike of 21.7 percent. The insurance board's experts have recommended an 8.9 percent average increase.

Last year, the board raised rates an average of 3.2 percent after the companies requested an 8.9 percent increase.

Irons said the average motorist who drives his car to work pays 26 percent more in collision rates than the car owner who uses his car for pleasure and recreation.

If a motorist leaves his car at home

its mutual benefits and strengthening of U.S.-Mexico relations."

Increased technology is seen by many in Washington as one way for Mexico to expand and diversify its economy and provide more jobs for the country's rapidly growing work force.

Since taking over as U.S. coordinator for Mexican affairs at the State Department last month, Krueger has met with Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda de la Rosa and former President Miguel Aleman Valdez.

He also said he plans to visit Mexico in the near future, presumably to lay the groundwork for an expected meeting in Washington this fall between Carter and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Next week, Krueger said, he will begin holding meetings with representatives of several U.S. government agencies on the tomato import question.

"I'm up to my ankles in tomatoes," he said jokingly.

With an annual export volume of over $200 million, tomatoes and related winter vegetables are, after oil, the leading Mexican item shipped to the United States. Florida tomato growers, who are feeling the pinch of low-priced Mexican competition, want tighter controls placed on the imports, arguing that Mexico's producers are dumping their goods at prices below the cost of production.

Following his appearance before the subcommittee, Krueger insisted that the Senate's failure to confirm him in his ambassadorial post has not stopped him from performing his new duties.

President Carter nominated the 43-year-old Krueger to the newly created ambassador-at-large post on June 22. His appointment in the $57,500 a year job must still be confirmed by Senate, however.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., who chairs the Senate's Western Hemisphere Affairs subcommittee, and Rep. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., have announced their opposition to the appointment. At their request, a confirmation hearing scheduled for last week was postponed until the Senate returns from its month-long August recess.

Krueger is still expected to win Senate confirmation by a comfortable margin when his appointment comes to the floor for a vote.

Ambassador Lucey had originally been expected to assume the new post in Washington, with Krueger a possible replacement in Mexico City. But after press reports about the change began appearing in March, Carter reaffirmed his faith in Lucey and the former Wisconsin governor announced plans to remain in Mexico.

Death being investigated

GLEN ROSE, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration began an investigation into the death of a 56-year-old laborer at the Comanche Peak nuclear power station, the seventh fatality during construction of the half-completed plant.

A spokesman for Brown & Root Inc. said Elliberto Garza fell about 25 feet from a building last Friday. Garza was taken to a local hospital, then transferred to a hospital at Cleburne, where he died.

Brown & Root is building the power plant for Texas Utilities Co.

Six of the seven workers who died since construction began in 1974 have been Brown & Root employees. The Houston-based contractor was fined $720 after a 39-year-old worker was killed in a fall in January.

Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr.

Rep. Diggs censured by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr. was returning to his normal duties as a congressman today after a climactic day in which he became only the 19th member in the history of the republic to be censured by his House colleagues.

The House voted 414-0 Tuesday to censure the Michigan Democrat for financial misconduct. Four members voted present.

While embarrassing to Diggs, the action had little, if any, practical effect on his congressional standing. He still retains his right to vote, his committee assignments and the perquisites that go with being a congressman.

He has no positions of power, having relinquished both his chairmanships after his federal court conviction last year on 29 counts of mail fraud and of making false statements.

Diggs, the first congressman to be censured in 58 years, showed no emotions during the debate or as House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill pronounced the censure.

Censure, the strongest punishment short of expulsion, requires the member to stand in front of the House while his actions are formally condemned.

The censure was based on an admission by Diggs that he violated House rules by using his congressional payroll to help pay his personal expenses.

The House action has no effect on Diggs' federal conviction, which he is appealing.

Nor does the censure close the door to further disciplinary action by the House should Diggs lose his appeals.

Diggs, a former chairman of the House Black Caucus, faces a three-year prison sentence if his appeal is rejected.

The veteran congressman presented no defense on the House floor, and his comments afterwards were muted.

"I don't have anything to say," he told reporters. "It (the censure) speaks for itself."

Asked if he would resign, as one member suggested, Diggs replied: "I'm still here and I expect to serve out my term." Asked whether he intends to seek re-election next year, he said, "Oh, yes."

Diggs was easily re-elected in his Detroit district after his conviction by a federal court jury.

The debate on censure and the actual censure administered by O'Neill were lacking in drama. Members of the House ethics committee, the body which recommended the punishment, used their time to explain the evidence and to state why they believed censure was a more appropriate punishment than expulsion.

Senate vote near on Talmadge case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee is close to a vote on whether to recommend censure or some other disciplinary action against Sen. Herman Talmadge for financial misconduct.

The committee scheduled a meeting today to consider a recommendation of censure from Carl Eardley, the panel's special counsel who headed a 14-month-long investigation into the Georgia Democrat's finances.

The committee could postpone any decision on the case until after the Senate's 30-day August recess which begins Friday.

But committee sources indicated Tuesday it was more likely some vote would be taken today.

Talmadge has been accused of five specific violations of Senate rules, including turning campaign contributions to his personal use and knowingly claiming Senate expense funds to which he was not entitled.

Sources say four of the six members of the committee have indicated they will support some form of disciplinary action against Talmadge, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

At least one member of the committee has said he would be willing to discipline Talmadge for violations of Senate rules, but not allegations which could lead to prosecution by the Justice Department, said the sources, all of whom declined to be named.

Daniel Minchew, Talmadge's principal accuser and former close aide, has pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to a federal charge of making false claims for Senate expenses.

Trevino tabs himself as PGA man to beat

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Lee Trevino, armed with the old, abounding confidence and a re-found putting touch, stamped himself as the man to beat in the 61st PGA National Championship.

"I haven't missed a putt since Canada," Trevino said Tuesday after hurrying into the locker room to avoid a thundershower that swept over the historic Oakland Hills Country Club course.

"I'm playing good, real good. And I'm putting. 'Oh, man, am I putting, I'm putting better than I have in years; maybe even better than I did in the early '70s.'"

IT WAS in the early '70s that the brash and brassy Trevino performed so many of the heroics that made him part and parcel of American folklore.

It was in those years that he won consecutive British Opens, once won the national championships of Britain, Canada and the United States in a four-week span, reeled off a string of Vardon Trophy triumphs.

Those were his glory years. "And I'm putting better than that now," Trevino said. "I'm playing just as good, maybe better, and I'm putting."

"You know what I did? I went back to the way I used to putt. 'I found I was getting my head and eyes behind the ball. Like (Jack) Nicklaus putts, you know. Well, I've gone back to the old way, the way I used to putt. I've got my head over the ball.'"

THE SQUAT and swarthy man paused a moment, took a putting stance with his weight on the left side, made a sweeping motion with his hands and repeated himself.

"Haven't missed a putt since Canada. He won that tournament, the Canadian Open, finished second in another, later event and had a solid performance in the British Open, a performance that was hampered by the cold, wet weather he hates.

Those credentials, that recent record of performance, made him one of the major challengers for the $60,000 first prize that will go to the winner of this, the last of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness.

THE 72-HOLE chase begins Thursday over the 7,011-yard, par 70 Oakland Hills Country Club course, a most demanding, difficult layout that Ben Hogan labeled "The Monster."

win, but I'm playing good enough. Should his touch be a trifle off, however, an array of the game's greatest talent is waiting to take over.

The two chief challengers, of course, are Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus. Watson, winner of four titles and a record $387,000 already this season, has been the outstanding player in the game for more than two years.

NICKLAUS ISN'T far behind. Although he's had the most frustrating, unproductive season of his career, his last two starts have produced some of his best golf of the year — a tie for second in the British Open a third in Philadelphia.

Among the other standouts are defending champion John Mahaffey, Lanny Wadkins, Hubert Green, Ray Floyd, U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin, Masters king Fuzzy Zoeller, Bruce Lietzke, Ben Crenshaw, Tom Weiskopf, Jerry Pate, Tom Kite and South African Gary Player, who won the PGA the last time it was played here.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by ABC.

McCoy upsets Russian to gain boxing finals

MOSCOW (AP) — A teen-age fighter from Massachusetts carries the United States' final hope for a medal in the boxing competition at the Spartacade Games. And he didn't expect to still be around.

"I'm surprised I won the fight," said Andre McCoy, a 19-year-old middleweight from New Bedford, Mass., after he decisioned Eduard Mktchaynan of Soviet Armenia.

Miscues cause 7-1 Elcor loss

TYLER — Four errors by Elcor in the fourth inning spelled defeat for the Midlanders as the Tyler Raiders took a 7-1 victory over the Chems in the second round of the Texas Teen-Age Senior State Baseball Tournament Tuesday night.

Terry Willis started for Elcor and was charged with the loss while Tommy Burt, who threw a four-hitter, was the winner for the host team.

Tyler pounded out 10 hits while committing only one error while Elcor was charged with five miscues. The Chems face Baird at 3 p.m. today and must win in order to stay in the double elimination meet. If Elcor wins at 3 p.m., it will then move into the 8 p.m. game later in the day.

"I thought I beat him but I also thought the judges would give it to him. You never know about these judges."

McCoy impressed the officials enough to take the close bout and advance to the group finals Thursday. A victory then would ensure him a spot in the gold medal bout Saturday against the champion of the Soviet national group.

"I think I could have floored him if the fight had lasted a bit longer," added the 6-foot-3 McCoy, who fell behind on points but rallied in the third round. He forced Mktchaynan to take two standing eight counts in the final round.

McCoy is one of a few Americans with a shot at a medal here. With the track and field competition concluded Sunday, most of the American contingent of 117 athletes has completed action.

The American men's and women's basketball squads have been eliminated from medal eligibility. The men are 2-2, while the women are 1-3 following Tuesday's play.

Tom Bennett, an assistant coach with the men's team, praised the play of Dave Lawrence of McNeese State, who contributed 10 points and 11 rebounds.

"We got a real good game today from Lawrence," said Bennett. "We outboxed them 16-33. He was a big factor."

The American men met Latvia today for third place in their grouping. The U.S. players cannot win a medal because the top two finishers in their group advanced to a four-team final round with two teams from another group to determine the medals.

"A big factor in our losses was our inconsistent shooting," he added. "We hit 38 percent both nights we lost, against Ukraine and Leningrad. Against Yugoslavia we hit 65 percent and won."

The men's team, which has been playing in Vilnius, Lithuania, will return to Moscow Saturday morning and tour the Soviet capital as guests of the Soviet National coach. The team will fly back to the United States Sunday.

Steelers don't believe that Swann has retired

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — All-Pro wide receiver Lynn Swann of the Pittsburgh Steelers says he's retiring from pro football at the height of his career, but team officials don't believe him.

"I fully expect Swann will play with the Steelers this year," a team spokesman said Tuesday night. Swann, who played in all three of Pittsburgh's Super Bowl victories, announced his retirement Tuesday by phone from San Francisco, where he's suing city officials over alleged civil rights violations.

Swann added this to statement to a sports writer skeptical of the announced retirement: "You're trying to get me to say there's a possibility of me changing my mind. I told you how I felt. I've retired."

Steelers President Dan Rooney also predicted Swann's return. Nonetheless, his absence apparently irritates team officials.

Conceivably, the retirement could be a way of bypassing the fines that could be levied for being late for preseason camp.

BUT REGARDLESS, he is missed as the team prepares for its preseason opener against the Bills in Buffalo Saturday.

Swann, his two brothers and a cousin are suing the city of San Francisco for $2 million, alleging false arrest, false imprisonment, assault, battery and "emotional disturbances due to racial slurs."

The action stems from a January, 1971, incident when the four were in San Francisco to celebrate after Swann was drafted in the first round by the Steelers.

An All-American and three-year starter at the University of Southern California, Swann is now considered the best receiver on the Steelers, if not in all of professional football.

He played in the Pro Bowl for the third time last season and was named to the All-NFL first team by four news organizations and the All-AFC first team by two others.

Swann capped a standout regular season in 1978 with 13 postseason receptions for 274 yards and three touchdowns.

ROONEY LEFT open the question of whether Swann will be fined, as cornerback Mel Bount and middle linebacker Jack Lambert were in 1977 for holding out in contract disputes.

"When he returns, I want to find out what the whole story is. We'll make that decision then. It's difficult to make a comment when you don't know all the facts," Rooney said.

"A person's civil rights are involved, so it's not a simple matter," he added. "But it goes back to football. Football can't be the last rung on the ladder. It's important. If the players don't think it's important, then we're all in trouble. Football is our business."

In that 1971 incident, the four involved were stopped at a red light during a police search for the so-called Zodiac Killer.

Swann claims a police officer broke his watch with a nightstick and beat the men around the knees.

"They thought we were four dumb blacks they could beat up. I just think it's a matter of principle that I stick around for the trial," Swann said earlier.

The trial opened in San Francisco Superior Court July 16.

The 6-foot, 180-pounder, who caught 61 passes for 880 yards and 11 touchdowns for his best season last year, conceded a trial is not the best way to prepare for the new season.

Swann told a San Francisco newspaper on Monday that he may not play until the final exhibition game, but that he would go to training camp when the suit is completed.

Noll said Swann called him before the trial began, "asking for permission to report late." Noll said he refused and added, "We'll just assume you're retired."

Swann's absence apparently irritates team officials. Conceivably, the retirement could be a way of bypassing the fines that could be levied for being late for preseason camp.

BUT REGARDLESS, he is missed as the team prepares for its preseason opener against the Bills in Buffalo Saturday.

Swann, his two brothers and a cousin are suing the city of San Francisco for $2 million, alleging false arrest, false imprisonment, assault, battery and "emotional disturbances due to racial slurs."

Cubs unleash homer display against Caps

SHREVEPORT — The Midland Cubs unleashed a rare display of homerun power here Tuesday night in a 10-4 victory over the Shreveport Captains.

Five homers left the park, three by Midland which accounted for seven of the Cubs' 10 runs, in the wild contest. Shreveport hit two shots, both solo blasts off the bat of Steve Wilkins, who has been a thorn in the side of Midland during this series.

The Cubs carried a meager 3-2 lead into the fifth, but Mike Turgeon unloaded a three-run blast and Carlos Lezcano followed that with a two-run shot as Midland ran to an 8-2 margin. Javier Fierro later hit a two-run homer in the eighth to finish out the scoring. Wilkins' blasts came in the fourth and eighth innings.

Turgeon knocked in four runs with his homer in the fifth and a double in the third. Fierro drove home three runs in the game. Shreveport's Wilkins went 4-for-4 at the plate with his two homers. He scored three of the Caps' four runs.

Lee Smith, 5-3, got the win for Midland with 3 1/2 innings of relief. He replaced starter Henry Mack in the second inning. Midland is now behind in the series by a 3-2 margin with the series wrapup tonight.

The Cubs return home Friday for a short five-game homestand with San Antonio. Friday is two-bit beer night while Saturday's contest is Campbell Soup night. All kids, 14 and under, will be admitted free with five red and white Campbell soup labels. Tuesday is Reporter-Telegram Family Night with the entire family admitted for $3 with a coupon from the paper.

Shamrocks capture two

FREEMONT — The Midland J. I. O'Neill Shamrocks opened the Texas Teen-Age State Hi-Junior Baseball Tournament with a bang Tuesday in winning two games.

The talented Shamrocks pounded Brownsboro, 20-6, in its opener and then posted a 6-0 victory over Victoria in a late night contest that wasn't over until 2 a.m. today.

In the 12 noon opener, Clay Bateman and Jay Motter worked in the heat and humidity with Bateman striking out 10 Brownsboro batters in four innings. Motter struck out four in the three innings he worked.

Alan Koonce slammed a pair of home runs and knocked in seven runs for the Shamrocks during the rout. Bateman ripped a triple while Russell Hays, Motter and Frank Garramore had a double each. Koonce went three-for-four at the plate along with Motter.

Deric Enis' two-run triple in the seventh inning broke open a close game with Victoria as the Tall City team scored five runs during the uprising.

Koonce went all the way and struck out 10 Victoria batters while throwing a one-hitter. Koonce and Jerry Zachery had a double each. Zachery and Hays had a pair of hits each.

Midland is idle until 6 p.m. Thursday when it will face the winner of the Texas City-Waco game which is at 8 p.m. today. Texas City bombed Idalou, 24-0, in its opener with Mickey Smith throwing a no-hitter for the Gulf Coast power.

Eller moves to Seattle with worlds to conquer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It was in the fall of 1960 that Carl Lee Eller journeyed from Atkins High School in Winston-Salem, N.C. to the University of Minnesota.

At the time, it seemed to him to be halfway around the world. Now — 19 years later and All America and All Pro honors behind him — Eller is moving on again.

"It's like my journey is just continuing isn't it?" he asked Tuesday afternoon. "Moose," as he became known, was traded by the Minnesota Vikings to Seattle Monday night for defensive tackle Steve Niehaus.

"But it's nice to know there's other worlds to conquer, even at this late date," said the 37-year old defensive end who made rushing passers in the National Football League his weekly obsession.

"It's nice to know that someone still wants you; to know that even though I've probably played my best years and that I'm in the twilight of my career, it's still possible to add something to it."

Eller played in the shadow of Bobby Bell at the University of Minnesota and in the shadow of Alan Page while with the Vikings. He never begrudged either, instead preferring to establish his own identity.

That identity was soon to become well known among NFL quarterbacks, who saw his 6-foot-6, 250-pound frame looming large in their backfields on Sunday afternoons.

"I more or less look at this (the trade) as a new arena to play football in for a brief moment," said Eller. "I can't expect to replace what's happened to me here. I'm going out there with a lot of fond memories of Minnesota."

Rivers becomes expensive Ranger

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Texas Rangers outfielder Oscar Gamble was headed for the New York Yankees today to satisfy Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's rejection of a swap announced Monday of four Texas minor league players for outfielder Mickey Rivers.

"I'm disappointed it happened in the middle of the season. I had just bought a house here," said the 29-year-old Gamble, who had hit eight home runs and six doubles for Texas this season, mostly in the role of designated hitter.

Gamble, the Rangers' leading hitter with a .335 average, was scratched from the starting lineup shortly before Tuesday night's Texas-Detroit game. Manager Pat Corrales told him he'd been traded to the Yankees for Rivers.

Rangers officials said Monday's trade would have stood if they had kept secret the names of the minor leaguers, who were to stay in the Texas farm system until the end of the season.

"We were directed to find an alternate way to complete the deal," said Eddie Robinson, executive vice president of the Rangers.

"It was unacceptable to allow the minor league players involved in the deal to be named without moving them to the Yankee roster immediately. We could not do that because we didn't have waivers on them," Robinson said.

The Rangers and Yankees had announced the trade was announced Monday. Rivers promptly caught a plane from Chicago, where the Yankees were playing, and arrived in Texas in time to make an appearance in the seventh inning of Monday night's game.

Rivers singled in his only at-bat during Monday's 6-1 loss to Detroit. He started Tuesday night and contributed a pair of singles to Texas' 16-hit attack that buried the Detroit Tigers, 11-3.

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said he may protest the loss, on grounds Rivers was still a Yankee.

"They should never have put that player on the field. If you know it, how do you play him?" said Anderson.

Spurs may lose four free agents

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)—Larry Kenon, seeking an $800,000 per year contract, says it's very unlikely he'll be back with the San Antonio Spurs next season and is believed to be headed for the Los Angeles Lakers.

If he leaves, it'll mean the National Basketball Association Central Division champion Spurs have lost all four of their players who became free agents.

FORWARD ALLAN Bristow has already signed with Utah, veteran guard Louie Dampier says he won't be back with the team and veteran 6-foot-11 forward-center Coby Dietrick said Tuesday he's signing with Chicago.

"The Spurs and I are a long ways apart," Kenon, 26, told The San Antonio Express. "At this point, I would say there is a small chance that I would be a part of the Spurs this year."

"I feel I am the best all-around forward in the game and I expect to be paid so," added Kenon, who averaged more than 22 points and nearly 10 rebounds per game last season.

THE EXPRESS quoted Los Angeles sources as indicating that the 6-9 Kenon, a two-time NBA all-star, had worked out a deal with the Lakers, but that Lakers and Spurs officials could not agree on compensation.

The Lakers, the Express said, fear that NBA Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien might give the Spurs stand-out guard Norm Nixon as compensation if a deal can't be agreed on.

"The commissioner might take a player in a position that would throw us out of balance," Lakers General Manager Bill Sharman said, referring to Nixon. "We'd like to have Kenon if compensation can be worked out ahead of time."

Spurs President Angelo Drossos would not comment on the report that he had met with new Lakers owner Jerry Buss to work out compensation for Kenon.

DROSSOS DID say, "If Larry Kenon does sign with another club, it would be in the best interest to have compensation worked out."

Kenon acknowledged that the compensation issue was a big problem, adding, "We've talked to the Lakers, but we're not close to any agreement. The Spurs are asking a lot."

Kenon reportedly made $210,000 last year, second on the team only to NBA scoring champion George Gervin. The Express quoted sources as saying the Spurs offered Kenon $250,000 per year, which is reportedly in the neighborhood of what Gervin now makes.

Kenon said he thought the Spurs could afford to pay him what he wants.

Bas at

DIETRICK, WHO along with James Silas is one of two original Spurs, said the Spurs haven't shown much interest in signing him.

"I feel abandoned. I tried to stay here. I was willing to stay here for less. Chicago has treated me like a good player," said the nine-year veteran, who averaged 6.5 points and 4.1 rebounds per game last season.

Dietrick, 31, a 6-foot-11, nine-year veteran from San Jose State, averaged 6.5 points and 4.1 rebounds per game last season after having started much of the previous season. He shot 52 percent from the field.

Doug France back at camp

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP)—All-Pro offensive tackle Doug France has returned to the Los Angeles Rams' training camp after an unauthorized four-day "retirement" in which he leveled allegations of unequal treatment of black and white Rams players.

The fifth-year pro out of Ohio State met Tuesday with Los Angeles Coach Ray Malavasi, General Manager Don Klosterman, Executive Vice President Steve Rosenbloom and Vice President Harold Guiver and most talked as if nothing had happened.

"Doug saw Ray (Malavasi) this morning and got everything straightened out," said Rosenbloom. Added Guiver: "We had a very nice talk. Everything is fine."

"I'm here to play football," said France, adding, however, that "If I say I misread things, it's like apologizing."

"Maybe I was (misreading the signs), but then again, I don't think so. You see things. But if it doesn't change, I can overlook it," the 270-pound tackle said. "All you can do is open eyes."

France underwent surgery to remove bone chips from his elbow during the off-season, and said he left camp partly because the arm had been bothering him during the Rams' training camp at Cal State Fullerton.

But France, a black, also implied strongly that subtle racism on the team had influenced his decision to take some time off.

Baseball furious at NBC switch

An AP Sports Analysis
By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Baseball is furious at its longtime television partner, NBC, because the network cut short coverage of the Saturday Game of the Week for the National Sports Festival in Colorado Springs.

In less sensitive TV times, this slight may have been shoved under an executive's rug somewhere. But, with the rival Olympics one year away, it meant war.

Baseball is putting its spiked foot down. The national pastime hates sharing its 1980 summer with the Olympics, but it has no choice next July. This July, however, it will fight any inroads into its live and promotional airtime.

"It's an absolute breach of contract," Tom Villante, baseball's director of marketing and broadcasting, said Monday. "The whole situation is outrageous, and we're not going to take it lightly."

NBC's four-year contract with baseball requires that games be shown in their entirety. Baseball wasn't consulted on Saturday when NBC decided to leave the Atlanta-Cincinnati and New York Mets-Chicago Cubs games to show one hour of taped highlights from the Sports Festival.

pushing its evening programming back to accommodate both baseball and the Sports Festival, but was turned down.

"We were set to handle a normal five-to-10 minute baseball runover, but 30 to 45 minutes wipes out an entire show," Ohlmeyer said. "Baseball's being upset is legitimate. Conversely, if we had let baseball run over, the U.S. Olympic Committee would have been upset."

Villante, who says he received an apology Monday morning from NBC Sports President Art Watson, doesn't feel NBC had any choice. The baseball game came first and was foremost.

"Where did Ohlmeyer come off making the decision by himself?" Villante said angrily. "I'm bothered by his cavalier attitude: the public and baseball be damned. They made a bad business decision in not giving themselves enough time between events. But baseball had to be the priority."

Villante said the Atlanta-Cincinnati game, originally a two-night doubleheader, was switched to a day game to accommodate the national telecast. "Maybe we could have started the game at 1 o'clock, but they never asked us," he said.

WHEN THE network sent its advisory to its affiliates, plans were to follow baseball to the bitter end. However, NBC may have been unhappy with baseball because the only two telecast choices in the afternoon were the Braves-Reds and Mets-Cubs — not big box office draws. And NBC and baseball couldn't work out a schedule change that might have made a different TV game available. This possibly left bad feelings at NBC, and made it easier for the network to ditch the baseball.

When the move was made, NBC explained the switch to its viewers and provided game updates. Still, 200 irate callers phoned NBC in New York on Saturday. One oddity of the back-and-forth coverage was that NBC made its final cut from Atlanta with one out to go.

Ohlmeyer admits it was misleading not to provide earlier advisories for the viewers who were expecting to finish the game they started. "None of us are perfect," Ohlmeyer said. "If I had thought of it at the time, I would have done it. We've had shows (the LPGA Championship June 9 was one) wiped out because we stayed with baseball."

"We never thought we could make everybody happy, but we thought we could cover both stories."

VILLANTE DISAGREES. He thinks NBC blew the build-up for a possible fourth home run by Dave Kingman of the Cubs and missed the late stages of two exciting games.

"It was just bad judgment from the fans' point of view," Villante said. "If they want the Olympics every four years, fine — it could help baseball if NBC gets its popularity up. But we won't let them treat us cavalierly."

VILLANTE SAYS he wouldn't have granted permission, but the overture should have been made anyway.

"Why wasn't there any communication?" asked Villante. "I'm concerned about the spirit and good faith of the contract with NBC. Is their attitude toward baseball changing?"

There doesn't appear very much baseball can do to NBC for the contract violation, but Villante is very concerned that the network doesn't begin treating the national pastime as a second-class citizen. He was already upset because NBC had given publicity and aid to the impostor who cavorted on the field in an American League uniform at the All-Star Game two weeks ago.

Villante is also concerned about Don Ohlmeyer, NBC's high-powered executive producer who was hired away from ABC because of his Olympics expertise.

For his part, Ohlmeyer considered the National Sports Festival the network's only live practice session to work on the taping and packaging that will be so essential to the smooth broadcast of 152 hours of Olympics next year.

Ohlmeyer says he alone made the decision to cut off baseball and plug in the Sports Festival. "It was not a decision I made lightly, but it was strictly a programming decision, ultimately predicated on length of time," he said.

OHLMAYER SAID the main game (Cincinnati-Atlanta) ran late and eventually ended at 5:12 p.m. EDT, leaving only 18 minutes for the Sports Festival broadcast. He said he petitioned the network for latitude in

Candelaria sets plans to pitch against Phils

MEADVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher John Candelaria walked away from a two-car crash with intentions of heading right back to the mound this weekend.

The 25-year-old left-hander was driving alone on Interstate 79 south of here Tuesday when his car collided with one carrying five persons, including a Rochester, N.Y., family of three, state police said. No serious injuries were reported.

The pitcher told a physician at Meadville City Hospital he intended to pitch this weekend, when the rival Philadelphia Phillies visit Pittsburgh. "I think he can do it," said Dr. William Moyers, chief of the hospital emergency room. "He had soreness

Bart Conner tugs at Thomas legend

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Bart Conner grabbed the hem of the mantle that proclaims Kurt Thomas America's top gymnast and gave it a sharp tug.

Conner, a 21-year-old University of Oklahoma student who began gymnastics at 10, won gold medals in three events, including the high bar that was Thomas' downfall Tuesday night at National Sports Festival II.

Thomas, 22, world champion in the floor exercise and sixth all-around, attempted a triple flyaway dismount — his first in competition — and landed on his knees. He needed a 9.65 from the judges to win the event, but was awarded a 9.55.

"Everybody tries new things, and sometimes you do it and sometimes you don't," Conner said of Thomas' flyaway.

He said he was a little surprised to win the high bar, but added, "After seeing Kurt's routine, I should have won."

Conner estimated Thomas' landing cost him up to .1 on judges' scorecards.

Conner also won gold medals in the vault and parallel bars, while taking second in floor exercise and third in the rings.

Thomas, who passed up a near-cinch gold medal in floor exercise, won the pommel horse as expected but was second to Conner in the high bar and parallel bars and second again to Larry Gerard in the rings.

The Indiana State graduate was named all-around champion in team competition earlier, and it was Thomas the overflow crowd of 7,300 at the Air Force Academy Fieldhouse came to watch.

"I didn't want to end in a crash," Thomas said later, adding that he had the difficult dismount on his mind all through his routine.

Thomas said he was working on his weaknesses — strength, flexibility and technique in some areas — in getting ready for the World Championships in Dallas in December.

"I'll be ready for it," he said, and predicted the United States gymnastics team could place as high as fourth in the 1980 Olympics in Moscow. The Soviet, Japanese, Chinese and East German teams present the main obstacles, he said.

Hounded before and after the competition by autograph seekers, Thomas said he doesn't mind the adulation. "I love it."

As for Conner, a member of the 1976 Olympic squad, he expressed surprise at doing so well at the Festival. "The routines I'm doing now are routine," he said. But he is adding new elements for the world title competition and the Olympics.

"The guy who puts in a new trick that blows everybody away has got it," Conner said. "I have a brand new dismount in the high bar that may be ready by December. It's a double back with two twists. It's about as rare as a triple flyaway."

So who's best? "That's a good question," Conner smiled. He said Thomas had beaten him in recent competitions, "and if you look at it that way, he is."

But Conner isn't worried. He's determined to remain one of the best for a long time — "maybe three more Olympic games."

Gymnastics held sway for thesecond night in a row at the six-day Festival, which ends tonight. On Monday night, Tracee Talavera, a 74-pound sprite who will be 13 next month, won one gold medal and tied for another after grabbing the all-around title in the women's competition.

Chamber tourney nears deadline

Chamber of Commerce members have until Friday to enter the annual golf tournament to be held Wednesday, Aug. 8, at Hogan Park Golf Course.

The entry fee of $12 includes green fee, a barbecue lunch, refreshments and awards.

Prizes will be awarded for first, second, third and last place four-somes. The format of this year's tournament will be a Florida Scramble. A longest drive contest will also be held.

Carter 'weakest' putter

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Veteran Sam Walker calls young Michael Carter "the weakest 65-foot shot putter I've ever seen."

Carter, a burly 6-2, 260-pound high school sensation, is well aware of his lack of strength and plans to begin a special weight program when he enters Southern Methodist University in the fall.

Not only is the weight program being geared to quicken his development in shot putting, it is also designed to help him in football.

The soft-spoken Carter was one of the nation's most widely recruited football players. His 4.6 speed for the 10-yard dash makes him an ideal candidate for nose guard, although he played four positions in his senior year at Thomas Jefferson High in Dallas.

At SMU, he is going to try both sports full time, although no athlete ever has done that successfully for four years in college. Walker, Carter's biggest booster, played two seasons of football at SMU and threw the shot before dropping football and concentrating on track and field.

Karl Salb also attempted football and shot-putting at the University of Kansas. He started as a sophomore on the Jayhawks' 1968 Orange Bowl team, but then dropped football and stayed with the shot.

"I will try and do well in both. I toyed with the idea of giving up football and concentrating on track and field," said Carter, "considered an outstanding prospect in the shot for the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow. "Some track and field people told me to give up football."

"But the track and field coach (at SMU) told me I needed only six months to work out for the Olympics, and I'll have that time after football."

"That should be enough time for Michael Carter," said Walker. "Michael is in the process of setting a precedent. He's got natural ability to do these two sports extremely well. The only thing that could hinder him is a serious injury."

Football practice at SMU begins Aug. 10 — and Carter will be there. He might have sat out this season of football, but a new collegiate rule prevents a freshman from redshirting.

He won't do much, if any, shot-putting until after the football season. He will, however, be working with weights under the direction of

Horner's start better than baseball's greats

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves infielder Bob Horner has played the equivalent of one full season of big-league baseball — and he's off to a better start than Henry Aaron, Mickey Mantle and even Babe Ruth.

In his 157 games over the past two seasons, the 21-year-old has a .291 batting average, 42 home runs and 121 runs batted in.

At comparable points in their careers, Aaron, Mantle and Ruth were not doing as well.

According to baseball records, slugger Ted Williams came closest to doing what Horner has in his first full year.

Williams at the age of 21 batted .327 with 31 home runs and 145 RBI in 149 games. Aaron at age 21 hit .287 with 19 home runs and 83 RBI in 162 games. Mantle at 21 batted .287 with 21 home runs and 97 RBI in 142 games. And Ruth at 22 batted .291 with nine home runs and 46 RBI in 168 games.

Horner, who was the Braves' No. 1 draft pick and later National League Rookie of the Year, said he knows what he's done, but doesn't like the comparisons.

He is especially reluctant to be discussed in the same breath with Aaron, who, after hitting 755 home runs, now serves as the Braves' director of player development.

"Anytime you compare me to somebody else, especially Aaron, it's unfair not only for me but for Hank too," Horner said. "Maybe in 16 years it would be something to talk about, but I'd really rather not do it even then. He's him and I'm me."

Horner's agent, Bucky Woy, called his client the "greatest thing since Mickey Mantle" when Horner signed with the Braves in June 1978. And he hasn't backed down from his predictions for Horner's future.

"I hate to sit there and say, 'I told you so,'" Woy said. "I said he was

Boston Red Sox 'want to cry'

By The Associated Press

Things have been perfect for Dave Garcia in the past week or so. For Don Zimmer, they've been perfectly awful.

And Tuesday night took the cake. "I want to cry," said the manager of the Boston Red Sox.

It wasn't only that Zimmer's team lost a double-header to the Cleveland Indians, 11-10 in 11 innings and 3-0. It was HOW the Sox were dropped.

They held a 10-5 lead going into the ninth inning of the first game, but poor relief pitching allowed the Indians to tie the game and send it into extra innings. Then Toby Harrah won it for Cleveland with a run-scoring double with two out in the 11th.

That gave baseball's hottest club its ninth straight victory, and they made it 10 in a row with their second-game triumph. The double losses left the Red Sox with a 1-6 record over the same span.

"You never know what will happen, even six runs down," said Cleveland Manager Garcia, who saw his team losing by 10-1 at one point. "If you would have asked me when we were six runs down if we would win, I would have said the chances were slim. But when I saw it happening, I said, 'Don't stop!'"

About his unbeaten 10-0 record as manager of the Indians, Garcia noted:

"I didn't expect this, obviously. But we've got some guys who can play. During one stretch earlier this season, we won 22 of 32 games. If you can do it for one month, why not six months?"

Cleveland's ninth-inning run scored on an RBI grounder by Alston, Harrah's two-run double, a run-scoring bouncer by Jim Norris and a wild pitch by Bill Campbell.

Len Barker combined with Sid Monge on a two-hitter as the Indians won the second game.

"You don't mind these long days when you win 10 ball games in a row," said Harrah. "It's not easy to win 10 in a row. This is a good indication of the kind of ballclub we have. We've been getting great pitching. I don't think we've peaked yet. No way are we playing our best yet. We've been playing good fundamental baseball, but we can play better."

Orioles 9, Brewers 5

Ken Singleton's two-run homer capped a four-run third inning, and Eddie Murray hit a grand slam homer in the ninth, powering Baltimore over Milwaukee.

Sammy Stewart, 7-4, earned the victory in relief of Mike Flanagan for the Orioles, who have won 12 of their last 14 games. Stewart allowed only three hits in 5 1/3 innings.

"I said all year that their pitching staff keeps them in every game," said Milwaukee Manager George Bam-berger. "They get a starter knocked out, then again like Stewart comes in and throws zeroes."

Royals 6, Blue Jays 5

George Scott slammed a two-run, seventh-inning homer, his first since joining Kansas City June 13, to lead the Royals over Toronto.

Scott's blast over the left-center field fence off Jesse Jefferson, 1-9, followed a leadoff single by Al Cowens and erased a 5-1 Toronto lead. It was his fifth homer of the season.

Reliever Marty Pattin, 4-2, gained the victory with help in the final two innings from Dan Quisenberry and Al Hrabosky, who picked up his ninth save.

Rangers 11, Tigers 3

Al Oliver collected three safeties as Texas rocked four Detroit pitchers for 16 hits and rolled to an easy victory over the Tigers.

Oliver had one of six Texas doubles, along with two singles, and drove in one of the Ranger runs. Four Texas players knocked in two runs each — Dave Roberts, John Ellis, Pat Putnam and Nelson Norman.

Yankees 7, White Sox 3

Jim Spencer hit a three-run homer to power New York over Chicago for Ron Guidry's ninth victory. Spencer's 13th homer of the year came in the fourth inning of Randy Scarbery, 1-6, following a single by Lou Piniella and a walk to Graig Nettles.

Guidry, 9-7, posted his third straight victory with relief help from Rich Gossage.

Angels 8, Mariners 1

Dave Frost pitched a five-hitter and Bobby Grich singled twice to drive in three runs and lead California past Seattle. Grich singled off reliever Byron McLaughlin with two out in the sixth to drive in the first two Angels' runs and also singled off Rich Flinton in the seventh to knock in a run and cap a five-run Angel rally.

A's 2, Twins 1

Pinch-runner Larry Murray scored from third on a wild pitch by Minnesota's Geoff Zahn in the ninth inning, giving Oakland its victory over the Twins.

With one out in the bottom of the ninth, Jeff Newman tripled off Zahn, 9-3, and Jim Eissian was walked intentionally. Mike Edwards, the next batter, swung and missed at a curve ball before Zahn threw the next pitch into the dirt. The ball bounced away from catcher Butch Wynegar and Murray scored standing up.

Winfield halts Phil Niekro bid

By The Associated Press

Dave Winfield buys tickets so kids who can't afford them can see baseball games for free. He runs parties before the All-Star game so thousands of youngsters can meet their favorite professional stars, have a cookie or two and collect autographs.

Dave Winfield also hits very, very well for the San Diego Padres. He leads the National League in hitting with a .345 average, is tied with Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the lead in runs batted in with 81, and his 25 home runs put him third behind Schmidt and Chicago's Dave Kingman.

His fielding, throwing and base running aren't bad, either, if you like understatement. Despite all this, though, Winfield insists: "People just don't know who Dave Winfield is."

Atlanta's Phil Niekro knows. The Braves' right-hander gave up three of the five Winfield hits and two of the four Winfield RBIs that helped the Padres to a 10-3 rout of the Braves Tuesday night.

The kids know who he is for the David M. Winfield Foundation reportedly will spend $100,000 on them this season.

And if the rest of the people don't know him by now, they may very shortly. Because Dave Winfield has eight hits in his last eight official at-bats, and if he hits safely in his first three trips to the plate against Atlanta tonight, Winfield will place his name in the NL's record book.

"I've had a consistently good season," he says, "but I let my peers determine how good a player I am. (Pittsburgh's Dave) Parker is a great player and you hear people talk about him a lot. People just don't know who Dave Winfield is."

He is a player who hit .393 in July, with nine home runs and 25 RBIs. He hit singles in his last three at-bats Sunday and added three singles, a double and a homer against the Braves Tuesday night to pull within two hits of joining the eight other NL players who have hit in 10 consecutive at-bats.

The last player to do it was Woodrow W. Williams of Cincinnati in 1943. The major league record is 12 hits in as many at-bats, shared by Mike Higgins of Boston (1938) and Walt Dropo of Detroit in 1952.

Further, Winfield has seven hits in his last 10 tries against the knuckleballing Niekro.

Astro 6, Giants 1

Craig Reynolds' two-run triple in the Houston second helped the Astros beat San Francisco and give Joe Niekro his 15th victory.

"I was watching the scoreboard to see how he (brother Phil) pitched," said Niekro, who needed relief help from bullpen ace Joe Sambito to make his record 15-6 while Phil dropped to 14-13. "I want to see him pitch well. We both want to win 20 games this year and make Mom and Dad proud."

A fielding error by Reynolds led to three San Francisco runs in the seventh. The Giants added a ninth-inning run on Jack Clark's single.

That run was the first in 23 innings against Sambito, who previously had pitched 10 2-3 innings of shutout relief.

Dodgers 7, Reds 6

Dusty Baker and Bill Russell drove in two runs each and Los Angeles survived a ninth-inning rally by Cincinnati to nip the Reds and give Don Sutton his first victory in six weeks.

Russell's two-run triple in the eighth boosted the Dodgers' lead to 7-2, but the Reds got four in the ninth — three on a double by red-hot Ray Knight.

The triple gave Knight 11 RBI in the last three games and 25 in 17 contests. Dave Patterson, the Dodgers' fourth pitcher of the inning, put out the fire to preserve Sutton's first victory since June 21.

Sutton was knocked out of the game in the sixth when a grounder by Dave Collins hit his left knee. X rays revealed a bruise.

Expos 5, Cardinals 0

Rudy May pitched a three-hitter in his first start of the season and recorded his first shutout since Sept. 26, 1976 as first-pitch Montreal blanked St. Louis to pull a full game ahead of Pittsburgh in the NL's East Division.

The triple was May's seventh straight, tying an Expos' record, and lowered his earned run average for July to 1.11.

"I kind of surprised myself," said May, who spent the first half of the year in the Montreal bullpen. "I basically wanted to give six or seven good innings and provide the team with a lift."

Rodney Scott scored on Andre Dawson's first-inning groundout to give May all the offense he needed.

Phillies 4, Cubs 1

Nino Espinosa's six-hit effort, Philadelphia's first complete game in the 19 games since July 8, helped the Phillies beat the Cubs.

Bake McBride's inside-the-park homer got Philadelphia started. His drive to right-center appeared to have been caught by center fielder Jerry Martin after a long run, but he collided with right fielder Scot Thompson and the ball fell loose.

Martin lay stretched out on the ground and Thompson tried to start a relay play before collapsing to the synthetic turf. Both received treatment but returned to their positions after a five-minute delay.

Mets 2, Pirates 1

An RBI single by Lee Mazzilli and a run-scoring groundout by Willie Montanez backed the combined four-hit pitching of Tom Hausman, Wayne Twitchell and Ed Glynn as New York trimmed Pittsburgh.

Prepare now for recession, Peoria's mayor warns cities

By LEE MITGANG

How ready are America's cities for the current recession?

Unlike some previous downturns, warnings of this recession had been showing up in forecasters' tea leaf months in advance. Knowing it's coming is one thing. But what have leaders of American cities done to prepare for it?

Peoria, Ill.'s Mayor, Richard E. Carver, who this summer was named president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, thinks mayors across the country have trimmed their budgets and readied themselves for hard times.

But he warned in a recent conversation that this recession could be even tougher for U.S. cities than the last one.

And if anything, most cities are less prepared to deal with a serious downturn than when the last one hit five years ago. Carver says inflation has ravaged local tax dollars, and most city budgets have little fat left to trim. If recession forces cities to make further budget cuts, vital services would be sacrificed.

It is likely, he says, that only cities like New York, Cleveland, Newark and others which would face probable collapse without federal dollars can expect sympathetic treatment from Washington — especially at a time when the Carter administration is committed to huge spending on the energy front.

"There are certain key cities that can't be ignored. The cities will have to wave a flag and say to Washington we can't ignore the impending problems," he says.

But the Peoria's of the nation — the medium and smaller cities where federal money is not usually a matter of life or death — will probably have to fend much more for themselves this recession, says Carver. "We are going to have to concede that it'll be tough for the Peoria's. There'll be belt-tightening."

Nonetheless, he says, cities will necessarily take their cues from Washington in combating the recession. Mayors are now waiting to see if the Carter administration will bolster its jobs programs, provide direct federal aid to help balance the local budgets, or pursue other possibilities.

"The cities understand how to deal with this recession," he says.

"But it's up to the federal government to put the mechanisms together and make them clear."

Carver's election to the presidency of the mayor's conference is further evidence that the relationship between urban America and Washington has changed radically in the past few years.

Carver, a second-term Republican mayor of a medium-sized, prospering Middle West city, talks the language of lowered expectations and self-help — a far cry from the usual calls by big-city mayors for more and more Washington aid.

He has also set his sights on higher goals. On July 30, Carver announced his candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat that Illinois Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson, III is vacating.

Rather than emphasizing one-shot relief for all cities during the recession, Carver says he intends, as leader of the mayor's conference, to push for meaningful tax laws to help build inner city commerce and develop lasting private sector jobs.

"The Conference of Mayors will be looking further to see how tax laws can target capital formation to center cities. It's my judgment that we should take a hard look at things like expansion of the use of industrial bonds and investment tax credits."

Portable wildernesses impart fresh meaning to vacation camping

By ANDREW SCHNEIDER

YORK HARBOR, Maine (AP) — Using flashlights in the misty darkness, Gerald and Helen Harper pitched their tent along the rocky Maine coast. They spent the night anticipating the uncluttered beauty of a coastal sunrise.

When the sun finally rose, they found a forest of metal blocking their view. Their small piece of wilderness was crammed with 96 trailers and three trees.

"The guidebooks said, 'Come to Maine to get away from it all,' but we woke up and found it's all still here," moaned Harper, a stockbroker from New York City. "I can see more of the great outdoors in Central Park."

"We thought we could save money and get away from the crowds by going camping," his wife said. "But after paying more than $1,000 for what the clerk called the 'bare essentials,' we get here to find we're camping in a parking lot with more New Yorkers than we left in Manhattan."

Though the Harpers may not have considered their night in Libby's Campground "roughing it in the wilderness," many of the others in the four-acre field said they had found just what they wanted.

The Harpers' $228 canvas tent was dwarfed, both in size and price, by the transportable homes that surrounded it.

"Explorer," "Woodsmen," "Adventurer," "Deep Woods," "Savage," and other brand names on their metal sides offered the only hint that they had something to do with the outdoors.

Costing as much as $30,000, the motor homes and trailers carry all the luxuries of home, and sometimes more. Sometimes parked just inches apart, they serve as home base for the visitors attracted to the area's beaches, theaters and vistas.

"I've got a microwave oven, shag carpeting and even a waterbed which I fill up when I get to the campground," said George Domain of Bridgeport, Conn., as he proudly patted his $26,000 motor home. "I don't mind spending money for this because, contrary to popular belief, you can take it with you — if it's on wheels."

On the rear bumper of Domain's camper was a sticker reading,

"Camping — Roughing it is the first step to adventure."

"I guess you can say they're roughing it. We don't allow them to use their air conditioners," joked Cora Davidson, who with her husband, Archie, operates the crowded camp.

Cora, 66, who says she's been "babying would-be campers" since her father opened the camp in 1923, agrees it is not for people looking for north woods adventure.

"Today, people want to camp in luxury, but that's a trend that started years ago," she says. "They thought my father was a kook when he put in electricity in 1927. No one could understand why tents needed electricity, but that was just the start."

Merit Taste Key To Success!

'Enriched Flavor' cigarette sparks whole new taste era in low tar smoking.

A few years ago, most smokers agreed: low tar meant low taste.

Then along came MERIT and a whole new taste idea called 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And the "low tar, low taste" theory was exploded. Exploded with proven taste in a new low tar cigarette.

No other new cigarette in the last 20 years has attracted so many smokers as quickly as MERIT!

It's clear: MERIT taste is changing attitudes towards low tar smoking.
