Texan nominated

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter said Friday he would nominate Alan N. Bloch, a Pennsylvania lawyer in private practice, to be a U.S. District Court judge in Western Pennsylvania.

He also chose Jerry L. Buchmeyer, a lawyer in private practice in Dallas, to be a U.S. District Court judge for the Northern District of Texas.

Bloch, 47, is from Mt. Lebanon, Pa. He would replace Herbert P. Sorg, who has retired. Buchmeyer, 45, is from Dallas. He would replace William M. Taylor Jr., who has retired.

Airline struck

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—More than 1,300 World Airways pilots, flight attendants and mechanics struck the nation's largest charter airline Friday, threatening rescue flights for thousands of Southeast Asian refugees.

"Hopefully crew members will agree to continue those flights," said Brian Cooke, World senior vice president. "Hopefully they'll have enough compassion to do that."

The members of Teamsters Union Local 2707 began the strike after the midnight Thursday deadline after rejecting a contract offer. Small picket lines formed early Friday at the airline's headquarters here.

Questioning set

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—The U.S. attorney's office here has notified federal court that prosecutors plan to quiz Raymond Granlund, a Texas oil broker convicted in the Florida Power Corp. daisy chain oil scandal.

Attorney Chris Hoyer has filed a notice in U.S. District Court indicating he will take a deposition from Granlund in Houston, Texas on Aug. 15.

Hoyer was the chief prosecutor in two "daisy chain" criminal trials. The first involved former Florida Power executive Richard E. Raymond and four Texas oilmen, and the second involved Granlund. Raymond was acquitted, but the others were convicted.

Self-rule supported

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—President Anwar Sadat said Friday he is trying "to put Palestinians on the threshold of self-rule," and said other Arab nations should help him accomplish it rather than spending their time trying to amend a 12-year-old U.N. resolution.

In a nationally televised speech marking the first anniversary of his National Democratic Party, Sadat said Egypt does not oppose efforts to amend Security Council Resolution 242 — the cornerstone for Mideast peace talks — but said it was not worth the effort.

Sale announced

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP)—A group of West German investors agreed Friday to take over the Furr's, Inc., supermarket chain in Texas and New Mexico and pay off the company's $56 million in debts to its 5,000 creditors.

Furr's has been operating under Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings since May 26. The agreement in principal, which was announced at 12:45 p.m. Friday in New York, must be filed in bankruptcy court at Fort Worth on Aug. 21 and submitted to a vote of creditors.

Recession taking hold, jobless rate shows

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The nation's unemployment rate edged up last month to 5.7 per cent of the work force, the government reported Friday, but the number of jobs in the economy continued to surge, indicating the recession is only beginning to take hold.

The July rise, up from 5.6 percent the previous month, marked a full year that the jobless rate has hovered in the 5.7 to 5.9 percent range — the level most economists now regard as "full employment." The June figure had been a 58-month low.

Friday's report showed some weakness in the manufacturing sector: Industry payrolls grew only a slim 44,000 job slots. But total employment, which encompasses a broader measure, soared by 456,000 new jobs — the second such monthly increase in a row.

The relatively buoyant report appeared on the surface to fly in the face of assertions that the economy is in a recession. A new internal White House forecast predicted this week the jobless rate will leap to 8.2 percent by late 1980.

However, Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, told a congressional hearing that the jobless rate has climbed that rapidly before, and could do so again. In 1974-75, unemployment soared to 9.1 percent — from 5.4 percent — in nine months.

Norwood said the jobless rate typically does not begin to reflect the impact of a recession until well after more sensitive economic indicators. By contrast, output figures — as measured by the "real" gross national product — plunged sharply last quarter.

The July rise in the jobless rate was accompanied by an unusually sharp jump in the size of the civilian labor force — the total of job-holders and job-seekers combined. The labor force swelled by 531,000, outstripping the growth in new jobs.

For all the apparent vibrancy in the nation's job situation, there still were some signs that deterioration may have begun:

—The jobless rate for adult men rose to 4.1 percent in July, from 3.9 percent in June — putting an end to months of relative stability in this key indicator.

—The number of jobs in the manufacturing sector continued to decline in July — a trend that has persisted since last March.

—The proportion of unemployed persons who lost their last job, rather than simply could not find a new one, rose to 43.7 percent — the second jump in a row.

—The length of the average workweek for rank-and-file production workers was unchanged in July after failing to rise in June as well.

At the same time, however, apart from the rate for adult men, jobless rates for most other major categories of workers remained unchanged or declined.

The jobless rate for teenagers continued unchanged in July at 15.3 percent. Joblessness among blacks declined to 10.8 percent, from 11.3 percent in June.

Despite the strength in the overall employment figures, analysts cautioned it was too early to draw any firm conclusions from the job statistics.

Norwood told the congressional hearing that the traditional economic indicators were showing "clear signs of difficulty," but said it was hard to gauge the severity of the recession.

And several analysts raised the possibility that the survey on employment may be exaggerating the actual growth in jobs.

The figures were depressed by the April Teamsters' union strike, and have been rebounding since then in part to make up for the interruption.

The July rise left the actual number of persons out of work at 6.1 million, down from 6.4 million a year ago.

First Cambodian refugees to arrive in Midland today

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

They are coming with the clothes on their backs and $10 in their hands. Nothing more.

The first Cambodian refugee family was to arrive in Midland before day-break today, bringing to reality a project started in Midland only two weeks ago.

Today's arriving family, consisting of a man and his wife, will be the first of seven families, totaling 37 persons, who will be starting new lives in the Tall City.

And there is a chance three more families may come. Some of the other families are expected to arrive next week, said Joanne Peterson, coordinator for the Midland Resettlement Program.

The U.S. effort to help Cambodian refugees stranded in Thailand represents the handiwork of the Episcopal Church, said Mrs. Peterson. When the Thai government threatened to begin sending Cambodian refugees back to their homeland, "the Episcopal Church in the United States made an agreement with Thailand that we would resettle large numbers of them (the Cambodians), if Thailand would keep them (the refugees) until we could get them processed," she said.

THE DALLAS DIOCESE of the Episcopal Church has been one of the biggest participants in the program, according to the local coordinator, J.B. Foshee, resettlement officer for the Northwest Diocese, which includes Midland, asked Tall City member churches to participate, she said.

Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and St. Nicholas Episcopal Church

"This is a real venture in faith, but I know Midland can come through."

decided to join in the effort. But the two churches can only sponsor one family each.

As the result of a meeting Tuesday, two more sponsors were found, said Mrs. Peterson. The Quaker Meeting is taking this first family under its wing.

St. Ann's Catholic Church is the fourth group sponsoring a family. "The families are all coming from Prasat-New Refugee Camp in Thailand," said Mrs. Peterson. They apparently only arrived there in May, but the Thailand government was on the verge of sending the refugees back to Cambodia when the U.S. agreed to take them, she added.

Church World Services is arranging the families' transportation to the U.S. and giving each one $10 to take care of expenses on the trip.

Mrs. Peterson said she was notified late Thursday the first family would be arriving Friday in San Francisco. They would be met by a representative of Church World Services and scheduled on the next flight to Midland. The couple was to land at 6 a.m. today at Midland Regional Airport.

ALTHOUGH THE first couple will be taken by the Quaker Meeting, headed by Peter Clark, all families will be taken to the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois Ave., where they will stay several days.

"We have a holding committee that will look after the Cambodians and work with them," Mrs. Peterson said. "By keeping them in one location, we can take care of their immediate health needs and get them Social Security numbers. We'll care for them and let them rest up while they get over their initial shock."

Meanwhile, six more sponsors need to be found for the other families. Being a sponsor entails finding the family housing and jobs for the working members, obtaining food, clothing and other essential items.

Churches or persons wanting to be sponsors may telephone the Holy Trinity Church, 683-4207, or Mrs. Peterson, 7809.

Until Friday, only seven families had been scheduled for Midland, and the resettlement group still was seeking three sponsors. But a Dallas coordinator called Friday afternoon and questioned the Midland group about taking three more families to make the total number 49.

If the Midland group decides to go ahead, it means three more sponsors will need to be located quickly.

"We have a list of people wanting them (refugees) for jobs," Mrs. Peterson remarked. "But we need more jobs so we can match up the people's abilities with the job."

"The real problem is in finding housing," she emphasized. "We expect them to be self-sufficient within 90 days," Mrs. Peterson said, basing that figure on examples set by the refugees in other cities.

The local resettlement committee has received "sketchy bio-data on the families," she said, adding that most of the refugees will know little English, if any.

A FUND FOR donations to help the Cambodians has been established at The First National Bank. Mrs. Peterson said persons also can make checks payable to the Midland Cambodian Refugee Fund and send them to Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, 1412 W. Illinois Ave., or St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, 2900 Princeton Ave.

"The sponsors would appreciate any help from the public in equipping the refugees with houses and household goods," she said, noting the Cambodians will have nothing with which to being housekeeping.

That includes no appliances, no furniture, no towels or linens, she said. Those who wish to donate items to specific sponsors may contact, in addition to Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Peter Clark, 3616 Shell St., 697-1828; St. Ann's Catholic Church, the Rev. Cliff Blackburn, 682-6303; St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, Mrs. David (Susan) Randle, 3407 Humble Ave., 694-3790.

This project by the Midland churches was started only two weeks ago and "we weren't expecting them (refugees) this soon," the coordinator noted.

"This is a real venture in faith," she added. "But I know Midland can come through."

Midlander Toni Pacetti's sign makes it clear which side of the stadium she'll root for during tonight's pro football game in Irving.

Even in Cowboy country....

by MIKE KARDOS
News Staff

Popularity of the Dallas Cowboys in the Midland area runs strong, almost verging on a fever, but a few renegade football fans in the Tall City hold another team closer to their hearts.

The Denver Broncos "hung the moon" for Toni Pacetti, a 20-year-old Midland College student.

For Ms. Pacetti, a certain strange use of logic swayed her loyalties to the "Orange Crush" — and away from the Cowboys.

A graduate of Central High School in San Angelo, she recalled that the CHS Bobcats lost a berth in a post-season bowl game at the hands of the Permian (Odessa) Panthers.

The same type of fate has befallen the Broncos — at the hands of the Cowboys.

Thus, she said, her fondness for the Broncos. To top it off, she quipped, "my dad doesn't like Roger Staubach."

Along with a dislike for the Cowboys themselves, Ms. Pacetti said she hasn't much use for the well-known Dallas cheerleaders.

"I don't think it's fair that they publicize the Dallas cheerleaders and not the other cheerleaders," she said.

She added she's against the Cowboy public relations office's tendency to hype every aspect of the Dallas Cowboy football organization.

Ms. Pacetti, please note, does not stand alone in Midland in holding the Denver Broncos in high regard.

Her 24-year-old fiance, Mike Hicks — born in Denver, wouldn't you know — also thinks well of the "Orange Crush."

Both will get their chance to be proven right...or wrong...when the Cowboys meet the Broncos at Irving's Texas Stadium at 8 p.m. today.

At least two Midlanders will be rooting for the Broncos to "Crush" the Cowboys.

Gas supply 'improving'

NEW YORK (AP)—Gasoline supplies are improving, but a sudden increase in consumption could put Americans back on gas lines this fall, analysts said Friday.

A sharp rise in demand could also imperil the oil industry's attempt to meet the government request that stocks of heating oil be built up in preparation for the winter.

"August is the crucial month for gasoline, because it's the big driving month, but we've also got to worry about heating oil," said Mel Pine, a spokesman for Mobil. "Gasoline is starting to calm down now, and the next problem is heating oil."

"The behavior of the U.S. motorist in the coming weeks is a critical factor in the overall supply situation," said Robert M. Heine, an economist at Conoco Inc.

The analysts do not expect a sudden jump in gasoline consumption, feeling that high prices and fears of shortages will keep demand down. But August is important, officials say, because it is traditionally the last month of the heavy-driving season. Should supplies remain adequate during August, coming months should pose little or no problem in gasoline supplies.

But if the improved supplies cause Americans to suddenly resume their old driving patterns after several months of conservation, the fragile supply chain could crumble again, analysts say.

Pleasant fall weather could also crimp supplies. Last year, the driving season didn't end on schedule because of unusually mild fall weather in many parts of the nation. That put a severe strain on gas supplies that contributed to this summer's shortage.

Oil spill within 30 miles of coast

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP)—Oil from the massive Mexican spill has crept to within 30 miles of the South Texas coast, a reconnaissance flight over the northern Mexican coastline showed Friday.

The latest movement of the oil is on schedule with official predictions that patches from the slick will spill into U.S. waters Sunday and could wash ashore on South Texas' sandy beaches Tuesday.

Carl Posey, a spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said a NOAA plane took aerial photographs Friday that show thick strips of tarry oil on the Mexican shoreline.

The oil has been spewing for two months, and officials predict it may be mid-September before the well can be tapped.

A team of about 150 persons is standing by in a combined effort to protect the South Texas coast.

More than 15,000 feet of boom equipment has been gathered to be used to corral the runaway oil.

On Saturday, divers aboard a University of Texas marine science laboratory boat will go into the oil for further study. Posey said the divers will try to determine how much oil is floating beneath the surface.

Officials fear some of the crude is inching northward undetected below the water line.

The divers will try also to bring back shrimp from the area of the slick. Scientists say the oil could become a major hazard to the multi-million dollar South Texas shrimping industry.

Fishermen competing in a South Texas offshore tournament have reported finding softball-sized tar balls far off the South Texas coast. Some of the fishermen are fishing as far as 100 miles off shore.

The Friday flight over the Mexican coast showed at least one effort by the Mexicans to barricade the oil. But observers on the flight spotted oil in one inlet.

Vance to make trip to Ecuador

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will attend the inauguration of Ecuador's new president next week and plans to use the occasion for an informal summit discussion with Latin American leaders on Nicaragua and unrest in other parts of Central America.

Reliable sources said Friday that Vance will join first lady Rosalynn Carter, who will represent her husband at the inauguration of Jaime Roldos, in Quito on Thursday. The sources said Vance will return to Washington Saturday.

According to the sources, Vance decided to make the trip because the occasion, which will mark Ecuador's transition from military to civilian rule, will be attended by presidents and other top officials from several democratic Latin American countries.

The sources said Vance is especially interested in discussing economic reconstruction aid for Nicaragua with the leaders of oil-rich Venezuela and its partners in the five-nation Andean Pact of South America.

Under Venezuela's leadership, the pact members played a major role in efforts to force the ouster of former Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza. On a visit to Venezuela and other countries of the region last week, Viron P. Vaky, assistant secretary for inter-American affairs, reportedly found them anxious to discuss ways of aiding the new Sandinista-dominated government in rebuilding that strife-torn country.

In addition, the sources said, Vance wants to sound out the views of Latin leaders about how to deal with the potential spillover of turmoil from the Nicaraguan revolution into the neighboring, military-dominated countries of El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras.

Concern that Cuba, which provided training and arms to the Sandinistas in their fight against Somoza, might now try to foment accelerated guerrilla warfare in these countries has triggered a debate within the Carter administration about resuming U.S. military aid to Guatemala and El Salvador. Such aid was halted two years ago.

Defense Department and Central Intelligence Agency officials, fearful of spreading Cuban influence in the region, have argued for a resumption of military assistance. But the State Department, which wants to put the emphasis of U.S. policy on trying to establish good relations with the Sandinistas in Nicaragua, has advocated a go-slow approach in drawing closer to the region's rightist military regimes. The sources said the meeting ended in a decision to continue holding the military-aid proposal in abeyance, but to keep it under continuous review as a policy option.

Reliable sources said the question was debated anew at a White House meeting on Thursday, with both sides sticking to their essential positions.

The sources said the meeting ended in a decision to continue holding the military-aid proposal in abeyance, but to keep it under continuous review as a policy option.

Rearrangement slated for Ector jail inmate

A 23-year-old man currently being held in Ector County Jail in Odessa is scheduled for rearrangement Monday in U.S. District Court in Midland on a charge of threatening the life of President Jimmy Carter.

William Rodney Ethridge, address unknown, is scheduled for rearrangement at 2 p.m. Monday before U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle.

Ethridge was charged March 15 by Secret Service agents after he allegedly wrote a letter from his Ector County Jail cell threatening the life of Carter and threatening to blow up the U.S. Department of Justice building in San Antonio and the Midland Federal Building if he was not released from the Ector County facility.

He currently is being held in lieu of posting a $200,000 bond.

Rearrangement of Ethridge is only one of the items scheduled for federal court activity in Midland beginning at 9 a.m. Monday, according to U.S. District Clerk Bobby Pieper.

Several other cases are scheduled for activity beginning Monday, in addition to pretrial conferences, docket call, hearings and naturalization proceedings.

New envoy took unusual route to diplomatic row

By CHRISTOPHER DICKEY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two months ago, Saul Arana, 29, was trying to hold down a part-time job as a housewares clerk in an area drug store chain. But the war in his Nicaraguan homeland was growing, he was marching and protesting here at every opportunity, and there just were not enough hours in the day.

"The manager said why don't you take some time off and then you can come back," Arana reminisced with a smile.

Arana will not be going back. A week ago, he was appointed the highest-ranking envoy from the new Sandinista-backed Nicaraguan government to the United States.

In the world of lost causes usually swirling around his poor neighborhood — where refugees from both right- and left-wing dictatorships seem to be forever futilely pasting protest posters on walls — Arana is a new and rarely found hero.

Since he came here in 1973, he has been one of the most prominent leaders in the neighborhood's ever-boiling political melting pot. Like so many others, the jobs at which he made money — at the drug store or teaching math at the University of the District of Columbia — never was his real vocation. His business was fomenting social change and supporting the revolution that might someday take him home.

If there was a protest march — for tenant's rights, against a new immigration law, against any of the world's oppressive right-wing regimes — Arana would be there. If the demonstration was against Nicaragua's Somoza dynasty, Arana could be seen leading the chanting support of the Sandinistas, his tall, bulky frame towering above his companions.

Only two weeks ago, he was arrested after an attempted takeover of the chancery he now legally controls. Arana was almost as much a fixture on the protest and picket scene as his predecessor, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, was on embassy row's champagne and caviar circuit.

Now Arana is inside the embassy offices, not marching in front of them and the transition has not been completely comfortable. "I know I have to attend meetings," he said Tuesday, looking slightly chagrined. "But...I like to be carrying a sign."

"I don't want to change my personality," Arana said, glancing out through the chancery doors. "I want to be involved with what I've been in the past."

He still wears his hair long, still dresses in open shirts and casual slacks — when he can. "You have to dress properly when you go to the meetings. I sometimes wear the clothing of my friends."

Arana drives his old Buick instead of the embassy limousine and lives with his wife and 4-year-old daughter in an apartment rather than in the palatial embassy residence. "I love to live in a barrio," he said, laughing easily. "I don't have to drive in from Maryland."

Uninhibitedly contrasting himself with his protocol-obsessed predecessor, Arana said that if there is ever enough time, "probably someday you're going to see me painting the embassy, fixing a lamp or whatever is needed."

There is the problem of finances, too. Arana is not being paid for his new duties. "There is no money," he said.

"I hope that if I have the time I will continue to teach in the Latino program at U.D.C. Arana said, smiling. "I love to be a professor. This summer was only my second semester. I hope that in September I get again my job."

But the drug store, Arana said, has seen the last of him.

NBC hires Frost to quiz Kissinger

The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — NBC has hired David Frost — the man who paid Richard Nixon more than $600,000 for a series of TV interviews — to quiz former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger on a special one-hour program Oct. 11.

The subject will be "the most turbulent years in American foreign policy," NBC said.

The program, which NBC News president Lester Crystal predicts will give "important insights into a critical period in our lives," will coincide with the scheduled publication of the first volume of Kissinger's memoirs, "White House Years," covering 1969-72.

Frost is said to be pouring over a manuscript of the volume with NBC researchers.

Why pay Frost to interview Kissinger when NBC could give the assignment to one of its own news staff? Could it be the network's interest in box-office appeal is obscuring its judgment?

Let's face it. If Kissinger were on ABC, Barbara Walters would get the assignment. On CBS, the interview would go to Walter Cronkite.

Does NBC News, whose nightly newscast has dropped to third in the Nielsen ratings behind ABC, feel it has no one of sufficient ability, stature and drawing power to take on Kissinger?

Crystal says "Frost's skill and expertise as an interviewer are well-known" and referred to the England-born showman-TV personality's 1977 Nixon interviews, during which Frost sometimes showed emotion and became so overwhelmed by Nixon as to be near tears.

According to Crystal, those interviews demonstrated Frost's "grasp of complex matters and his ability to translate them effectively to television viewers."

At the time, however, NBC was not so enamored of the Frost-Nixon combo that it was willing to pay Frost's price. It joined the other networks in turning him down, forcing him to sell the interviews in syndication.

NBC News has frequently boasted about the quality and performance of its staff, but this is the big time.

It appears that the program, which Frost says will cover "the ending of the Vietnam War; the controversies currently raging over United States policy in Cambodia; Kissinger's relationship with world leaders, including Nixon; the various crises in the Middle East; new strategic policies, and the triangular balance of power engineered among Russia, China and the United States," is too important to be trusted to NBC News correspondents.

Science and Christianity may get wider vision of 'truth, coherence'

A Sunday morning service is held in the First Baptist Church in Dallas, the world's largest Southern Baptist Church. The main sanctuary seats 2,550 and is always filled. The church's own television equipment carries the service to other buildings in the church complex and to homes across five states. (AP Laserphoto)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Scientists and theologians from around the world say that they sense "the prospect of a new and more comprehensive vision of reality" both in science and Christianity.

In different ways, "it is a vision of a wider truth and coherence which lies within our reach" say representatives of the two fields.

But this prospect, they add, depends on both sides freeing themselves from "sterile conflicts and protective armor" that have crippled past relationships.

A report issued at the close last week of a 12-day World Conference on Faith, Science and the Future traced a history between the two fields of initial harmony, then battle, mutual misassumptions and finally a 20th century "uneasy truce."

"Now recent decades have witnessed the appearance of tracks across the no-man's land separating these two armies," the report adds.

"The process cannot be forced or hurried but the goal slowly becomes more visible as we peer into the mists which shroud the future."

The report on relationships of science and faith was drawn up by a section headed by Lutheran theologian Philip Hefner of Chicago and physicist D. Enilo Ajakaiye of Nigeria.

It was one of 10 sectional reports on various issues, including technology, political power, energy shortages, urban life, population problems, genetic manipulation, hunger, economics, social ethics, nature and God.

The conference, sponsored by the interdenominational World Council of Churches at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, sought to point ways toward a just, sustainable society on a planet of shrinking, sometimes despoiled resources.

Modern technology "while surely part of our glory, is also part of our tragedy," one report says. "As we peer into the future we catch a glimpse of much that fills us with fear and dread, but we perceive also that the future is God's."

The report on relations of science and faith says both have had to move out of "ivory tower" distortions in which science assumed it always meant progress and religion often was confined to tradition and personal subjectivity.

Yet "both science and faith share a deep sense of the mystery that underlies them both, a mystery rooted in the nature of man and the realities of God," the report says.

In fact, it notes that scientific advances, especially in molecular biology and modern physics and chemistry "provide consonance to the Christian perspectives enshrined in the Bible."

"Science has arrived at mysteries meaning and direction..." representatives of the two fields say.

"Since the Christian hope is directed toward the perfection of the whole creation, science and technology are incorporated into responsibility for the continuation of life and keeping the future open."

Concerning methods by which both fields attain their conclusions, the report notes that science, like religion, necessitates involvement in a community to verify its premises, which can only be dealt with, if at all, by theologians.

At the same time, the report adds, "Christian theology is confronted with basic challenges to its traditional formulations, posed by new understandings from science."

Yet religious values give "the work of science and technology a basis, a

Musical minister becomes singing missionary for church

By RITA GILLMON
Copley News Service

When Connie Haines became a minister in the Unity Church she thought she would give up singing and become a minister "somewhere in the backwoods."

"But it has turned out that I am singing more than ever," she said in a recent interview. "I have become a sort of singing missionary for the church."

As a teen-ager, Haines sang with big bands — Tommy Dorsey's and Harry James' among them — but has always felt a religious dimension to her life.

"I had an out-of-the-body experience when I was 9 years old," Haines said. "The doctor expected me to die and said if I lived I would be an invalid. I was enveloped with beauty and love and heard Jesus say I would be well and follow him. I expected to go to China and be a missionary."

Haines did not go to China, but she did do a lot of traveling with the bands as a young singer.

"One of my missions is to change the image of entertainers. When they are working so hard at perfecting a talent, you know they aren't out carousing."

Haines finally realized her ambition to study for service in the church after the age of 50. She went to Unity Village in Lee's Summit, Mo., rather than to a Southern Baptist school, the heritage in which she was raised.

"I see Unity as a bridge between fundamentalism and new thought. We are teaching the philosophy of Christ, what it is He taught. The Religious Science church is more intellectual and covers a wider range of philosophical teaching, but we stay more with Christ's teachings."

Her missionary programs include slides of her life and her personal testimony as well as her music. She will travel thousands of miles this year visiting Unity and Religious Science churches and even a few Baptist Episcopal churches. Each of her programs is done to benefit the congregation she visits.

"In many ways I would prefer a small congregation of my own. I love leading Bible study and it would be nice to really get to know a group of people and grow with them."

Haines said her satisfaction in the present hectic schedule comes through the people who have told her they are going into the ministry because of her testimony.

"If you can change your life at 50, so can I, they will tell me. At least eight people have told me that. They will reach thousands of people."

She said Unity teaches that God's love dwells in each person and that this God-center is the source for power, guidance and direction.

"When we know that we house God within us, it is easier to behold the Christ in others, even if they appear to be giving us a great deal of trouble. We are not judging or looking at the outer person."

In my religious journey through life, I feel I've gone from God-fearing to God-loving. Too many people are so worried about sin, there is no room for love."

Disputes persist despite dialogue

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctrinal disputes persist in the Roman Catholic Church despite a dialogue between bishops and theologians, says Cardinal William Baum of Washington, D.C.

In a special report to the spring meeting of the nation's Catholic Bishops, Baum, head of a committee on doctrine, cited problems over interpreting Jesus' incarnation as both human and divine.

"Without the incarnation," he said, "there is no anthropology, no social doctrine" on which the church can stand.

Mormons' attitude converts authority on neuroradiology

Mormons don't drink coffee. That's all Anne Osborn knew about the Church of Jesus Christ of latter-day Saints when she started medical school.

Today she says they have changed her life totally.

An honor graduate of Stanford University and Stanford University School of Medicine, Osborn, 35, is possibly the world's leading authority in neuroradiology, but she recently turned down an appointment to a prestigious Eastern medical center. She wanted to remain associate professor in radiology for the University of Utah College of Medicine.

Osborn proudly tells about her research with brain scanning at Utah University.

"When I was in medical school I saw a doctor who used his intellectual and medical gifts to bless his patients. He cared about them, and he was a Mormon," she said.

This experience and watching the effect of their faith on other Mormons convinced her to join them.

"I was raised in a main-line Protestant church," said Osborn, who was born in Tampa, Fla. "The minister was haranguing the congregation about the social Gospel all the time without helping them find the foundation from which that should spring," she said.

In the Mormon church women do not take the priesthood, although all worthy men are eligible. However, she does not feel this is an obstacle to her free-hearted participation in the church.

"That is a patriarchal office. But women are free to learn and grow and exercise leadership in the church," said Osborn, who teaches and preaches regularly for the church. She is also a member of the National Board for Sunday School.

The fundamental teaching of the church is that the seed of Godhood is in every man and every woman. It is our exaltation that we work out as man and woman together. Men need the women just as much as we need them," Osborn said.

Like many other Mormons, she keeps a year's supply of food in her home for emergencies and bakes her own bread from wheat she grinds.

Bible and church schools enter final weeks

Bible and church schools continue in the city during the final weeks of summer vacation for Midland school children.

Schools are planned next week at Westside Church of Christ and Hope Lutheran Church.

Hope Lutheran's vacation church school will begin Monday and continue daily through the following Friday, with class sessions scheduled from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. each day for boys and girls aged 4 through 12. The church is at 2003 North A St.

According to the Rev. David C. Baker, pastor, theme of this year's school is to be "Fruits of the Spirit," focusing on love, joy, patience, kindness and gentleness.

Each day's schedule calls for scriptural stories, singing, activities related to the story and crafts and refreshments.

On Thursday evening, before the school closes on Friday, a special program and ice cream social is planned for students and their parents and families.

Purpose of the evening is to enable parents of the students and other interested persons to take part in the church school program in order to know what the students have been accomplishing during the week.

The Westside Church of Christ will hold its annual Bible school Monday through Friday at 4410 W. Illinois Ave.

According to Owen Cosgrove, minister of the church, there will be classes for children of all ages. Theme of the school is to be "Jesus, My Lord."

The Bible school will feature special assemblies at each class session in addition to regular Bible classes.

A "Bible drill" will be held daily at 8:45 a.m. for the benefit of students arriving early. Actual class sessions will begin at 9 and conclude at 11 a.m.

The school will be open to all children of the city and surrounding area, and free transportation to the school may be arranged by dialing the church office, 694-3614, or 694-1732.

Kelview plans Bible conference

Kelview Heights Baptist Church is planning a Bible conference next week, with services to be under the leadership of two well-known speakers.

The Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor of Kelview Heights Church, announced the conference will begin Sunday and continue through Tuesday.

Services will be at 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday, at 7 p.m. Monday, and at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. Tuesday. All services will be open to the public.

The public also has an invitation to attend a noon luncheon at the church Tuesday.

Featured speakers for the conference will be Dr. John Rawlings and Dr. Tom Malone Sr., Johnson announced.

Malone is founder-pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church in Pontiac, Mich., and now is in his 36th year as head of the Midwestern Baptist College which he also established.

Rawlings serves as pastor of one of the 10 largest churches in the world, the Landmark Baptist Temple in Cincinnati, Ohio.

He has pastored there for the last 28 years. He served several years as president of the Baptist Bible Fellowship International.

Kelview Heights Baptist Church is located off North Big Spring street, near Scharbauer Drive.

Rev. Melton to fill pulpit

The Rev. C. B. Melton of Lubbock will be the speaker Sunday morning at St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main St.

He will fill the pulpit in the absence of the Rev. Robert D. Ford, pastor, who is conducting a weekend revival at Loraine.

Melton is a former pastor of St. Mark's United Methodist Church. Currently, he is serving as treasurer of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist denomination.

St. Mark's Church is announcing that August will be "short sleeve month," with informality to be the keynote at worship services.

Men are requested not to wear coats or neckties to services during the month, and the entire congregation will dress more informally at the four morning worship services during August.

The worship events themselves will be more informal, less structured, with no worship bulletins to be used.

Juanelva Rose
Requests for favorite hymns will be made by the worshippers.

St. Paul hosts missionary

St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, will be host to a missionary speaker at the Sunday evening worship service.

Juanelva Rose, a United Methodist missionary to Taiwan, will be the pulpit guest.

The public is invited to hear her message during the worship hour beginning at 7 p.m., said the Rev. James C. Holman, host pastor.

Miss Rose, a native of Tulsa and a graduate of Tulsa High School, holds a bachelor of music education degree from West Texas State University, Canyon.

She holds a master's degree from Eastman School of Music at Rochester, N.Y., and earned a Ph.D. degree from the University of California.

Miss Rose currently is chairman of the music department at Tunghai University in Taichung, Taiwan. She teaches classes in music theory and in piano and clarinet.

She has served on Taiwan for the Board of Global Ministries of the United Methodist denomination for the last 14 years.

No federal funds for state schools

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that federal job funds may not be used in state parochial schools because it violates the Constitution's free religion provision.

U.S. District Judge John W. Reynolds ruled Thursday that the Labor Department stop using funds available under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act to pay employees of church-related schools in Wisconsin.

RELIGION

Reynolds left open the possibility that the department could change its regulations to accommodate church-school employees involved in nonreligious activities.

The ruling directly affects 10 "prime sponsors" of CETA programs involving about 150 persons statewide.

But Wisconsin Civil Liberties Union attorney Michael Campbell said, "It applies to all prime sponsors in the country. We anticipate going back in court if we find CETA people being used in church schools elsewhere."

Michael Bolger, an attorney for Roman Catholic schools here, called Reynolds' decision "pretty sweeping. It appears to have national implications."

"Obviously, we are very disappointed," he added. "I am sure there will be an appeal."

The Rev. John P. Hanley, superintendent of Milwaukee Archdiocese schools, insisted steps had been taken to prevent CETA recipients from holding jobs of religious nature.

"CETA never benefited our schools," Hanley said. "We were simply trying to help unemployed people get a job."

Trend is toward closer, more personal religion

By ROBERT DI VEROLI
Copley News Service

College students are somewhat more traditional in their religious beliefs and practices today than they were a decade ago, according to campus minister.

But they also say the anti-institutional trend, in this case against the church, is about as strong as ever among students.

This, they say, reflects trends in the general society in both directions and also toward a more interior, personal kind of religion.

BUT ALTHOUGH many campus and other ministers see a somewhat friendlier attitude toward religion today, few would call it a revival since disaffiliation still seems to be the norm.

The disaffiliation among Protestant and Jews is enormous.

Among Catholics it's getting to be," says the Rev. Bernard Campbell, Roman Catholic campus minister at University of California at San Diego.

Campbell says alienation from the institutional church is in the long run a blind alley.

"I don't really think there's a choice between institutional and non-institutional religion. There's only a choice between good and bad institutions," says Campbell.

THE MOONIES, the Eastern mysticism and evangelical movements which are enjoying some success among students, says Campbell, are institutions no matter how they pitch their appeal.

Groups like the Moonies, says Campbell, seem to have a special attraction for the children of the intelligentsia.

"They're not country boys, but the sons and daughters of faculty members, board president and the real supernaturalists," he says.

Another UCSD campus minister, the Rev. Leslie Atkinson, thinks college students today are much more private about their religion than students were a decade ago.

"THEY'VE BECOME much more internal about it," says Atkinson, a United Presbyterian clergyman. "It's not exactly a do-your-own thing type of situation, but a much more inward looking kind of phenomenon than a few years ago."

"They're also in a different place today. Five years ago we were still on the tag end of a lot of social activism and I find none of that now."

The Rev. Laurence Dolan, University at San Diego campus pastor, says it's hard to say whether college students are more religious today than they were a decade ago. But he says those who are religious are especially interested in prayer and community.

"Much of the attraction of the cults, like the Unification church and others of that nature, resides in their community living and sharing and dedication to common ideals," says Dolan.

"OUR KIDS at USD are very much into that community thing. The retreat movement, for example, is growing every year and their attendance at mass is also very good. On Sundays there's standing room only. So I think students' religiosity today is being expressed along more traditional lines than the extreme social activism of the sixties."

"Community is very important for the kids of today. They're seeking people they can share deep conversation, prayer and recreation with and in general mutual support and encouragement for leading good spirit-directed, God-filled lives."

The Rev. Ed Hoffman, United Methodist campus minister at San Diego State University says, evangelical and mainline Protestantism are registering gains among college students today.

"I'd call it a resurgence of interest in religion rather than a revival, though, but it's very evident to me," says Hoffman. "I think it's also reflected in the rapid growth of enrollments at seminaries across the country."

THE REV. Joseph Young, Episcopalian pastor at UCSD, says the church should look upon the secular college campus as a mission field. Its chief antagonist, says Young, is a humanism that preaches faith in science and technology as the means for creating an earthly paradise to be inhabited by the perfect man.

Weather dampens salvage plans

PARADISE, Mich. (AP)—Foul weather on Friday put a damper on plans to hoist the engine of the sunken 131-year-old freighter "Indiana" from 118 feet of water in Lake Superior.

But severe thunderstorm warnings did not deter U.S. Navy divers from working to get things ready for the salvage job. Several key parts of the ship have already been recovered, including a two-ton propeller.

Steve Gelwich, a Coast Guard radioman at Sault Ste. Marie, 65 miles southeast of the operation, said severe weather hampered communications with the salvage workers.

However, he quoted Navy Lt. Commander Robert R. Wells as saying divers were cutting to free the engine.

Some 50 Army, Navy and Smithsonian Institution personnel are working to reclaim the artifacts from the Indiana, which was 10 years old in 1858 when it sank in a fierce storm while carrying a load of iron ore from Marquette.

The Indiana's steam engine power plant is one of the earliest known.

"There's a lot of preliminary work needed to separate the shaft from the engine," according to John Stine, a museum specialist from the Smithsonian in Washington, which expects to display the recovered artifacts.

"We have to tie down the lower end (of the shaft) so it doesn't swing all over the world, then remove a small portion of the deck to raise the engine. The boiler will be last."

Two men diving teams worked Thursday in half-hour shifts on Lake Superior's sandy bottom sawing the 9 1/2-inch iron shaft away from the engine, Stine said. "The weather will be up a little tomorrow so it will slow us up," he said. "The water has to be flat enough for the crane to go down. We don't want to jar the engine; we want a nice steady lift." Engine parts weighing from a few pounds to several tons now rest aboard the Army Corps of Engineers derrick barge "Co-

County grand jury indicts nine

Eleven indictments by a Midland County grand jury met Wednesday and returned the indictments against nine individuals. The grand jury, which returned three separate indictments on charges of attempted murder against 20-year-old Ricky Baeza, 705 N. Lincoln St.

Baeza was indicted in connection with shooting incidents last Sunday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church's family fair at the church parking lot, 1301 Cherry Lane.

Specifically, the indictments allege that Baeza attempted to murder Jose Galindo, 25, 1303 S. Jefferson St.; Henry Sanchez, 24, 1811 E. Spruce Ave., and Sammy Sanchez, 21, address unavailable.

Six men, including Baeza, were injured in the shootings about 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

Baeza, earlier admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital for treatment of a gunshot wound, currently is in Midland County Jail in lieu of posting bonds totalling $30,000 on the indictments. Bond was set at $10,000 on each charge.

The grand jury also indicted Sammy Tucker Jurado, 18, Route 3, Midland, on a charge of murder Wednesday in connection with the shooting death Tuesday night of Felix Bermea, 32, Route 3, Midland.

According to deputies for the Midland County Sheriff's Department, Bermea, Jurado's uncle, was shot at least five times at his home about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Deputies said the shooting followed an apparent argument. A .22-caliber revolver believed used in the shooting was recovered by deputies.

Jurado is in the county jail in lieu of posting a $25,000 bond.

Bertha Chatman and Ted Castellon were indicted on one charge each of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Ms. Chatman is free on $7,500 bond, but Castellon remains in the county jail in lieu of posting a $5,000 bond.

Gary Montgomery and Ricky Hall were indicted on one charge each of burglary of a building with intent to commit theft. Both are in the county jail in lieu of posting a $7,500 bond each.

Indicted on separate charges of theft by taking over $200, but less than $10,000 were John Michael Evans and Eldon DeWinn Worley.

Gentle Ben takes command of PGA title race

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw, seeking the major title he needs to confirm his stature in the ranks of golf's premier performers, stroked out a smooth 3-under-par 67 and took command Friday in the second round of the 61st PGA National Championship.

"I'd give my eye teeth to win," said the man the other touring pros call "Gentle Ben."

"I think I've matured. I think this may be the time," he said after posting his 36-hole total of 136, four strokes under par on the famed Oakland Hills Country Club course, 7,014 yards of rolling hills and undulating greens in suburban Detroit.

Crenshaw, so often a challenger but not yet a winner in golf's great events, held a one-stroke lead over Australian David Graham, Rex Caldwell and 25-year-old Jay Haas, tied at 137. Graham scrambled to a 68, Haas birdied the final hole for a 69 and Caldwell matched par-70 in mild, breezy weather.

TOM WATSON, the first-round leader, again fell victim to some erratic action off the tee and slipped to a 72 that left him at 138, two shots back.

"Some days you have it, some days you don't," said Watson, a 4-time winner this season but in a slump the last month.

"I just didn't drive it very well. I let four of them get away to the right."

"But I'm still excited about playing. We're only halfway through. I'll just go to the practice tee and try to get my rhythm a little better than it was today and take it out there tomorrow and see what happens."

He was tied, at 2-under-par and two off the pace, with Alan Tapie, Jerry Pate and Bruce Lietzke.

Tapie chipped in from 50 feet for a birdie on the last hole and a 65, which tied the competitive course record. Pate, a former U.S. Open champ who seems to play his best in the major tournaments, and Lietzke, golf's most successful cross-handed putter, each had a second consecutive 69.

The group at 139 included Hubert Greend, 49-year-old Don January, Leonard Thompson, Ron Streck, Artie McNickle, Eustralian Graham Marsh and Rod Funseth. Thompson had a 67 and Funseth 69. Green, January, Marsh and McNickle all had 70's and Streck included a hole-in-one in his round of 71.

JACK NICKLAUS, who is seeking a record-matching fifth PGA title and an end to the most frustrating slump of his career, birdied the 18th for a 72 that left him at 145.

"I played the last nine holes pretty well," Nicklaus said. "I could shoot 65 or 66 and get right back in it. And it is possible to shoot 65 or 66."

But he wasn't alone in his difficulties on the course Ben Hogan called "the Monster."

Arnold Palmer improved to a 74 but had a 155 total and failed to make the cut for the final two rounds. So did Tom Weiskopf, 71-150, and Hale Irwin, who won his second U.S. Open title a couple of months ago. Irwin had 75-148.

But Sam Snead made it. The 67-year-old marvel who first played here in the 1937 U.S. Open, shot a 71 and, at 144, led Nicklaus by a shot.

Lee Trevino was 73-143, defending champion John Mahaffey 74-146 and South African Gary Player, who won the PGA the last time it was played here, was 70-143. Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller shot 75-145.

CRENSHAW HAS been second in four major championships — including the British Open only two weeks ago — but has yet to win one of the Big Four events.

"I'm a firm believer that you have to knock on the door before it finally opens," he said. "I've had a chance to win in the majors before. But I can't say I should have won."

"It's a matter of experience."

"If I'd had another year's experience, I think I'd have won the British. I just made a stupid mistake. I took one wrong club and it cost me the tournament," said Crenshaw, winner of six Tour titles.

That was on the 17th hole of the final round where, from a bad lie, he tried to reach the green, hooked his shot badly into deep, deep rough and made double-bogey 6.

He tied for second with Nicklaus behind Spain's Severiano Ballesteros, who is not competing here.

"No golfer in his 20's uses his head all the time," said Crenshaw, 27. "It's hard not to make the mistakes, the mental mistakes. That comes with maturity and experience."

"I like the way I'm playing. I have confidence in my game. I just want to get it in position for those last nine holes of the final round."

"And that should do it."

CRENSHAW, LONG noted as one of golf's finest putters, scored three of his five birdies on putts in the 15-20 foot range. He came out of a greenside bunker to about a foot for birdie-4 on the second hole and lofted a 2-iron shot to within five feet on the ninth for another.

His two bogeys, on the first and 17th, came after he missed the greens.

"I have to be pleased with my position and the way I'm playing," he said. "I played really, really good. I missed some decent birdie chances but I made the ones I should have."

Watson played the front side 3-over par. All three bogeys were the result of tee shots that drifted to the right. He made a couple of 12-foot birdie putts on the back nine but took another bogey after missing the 13th green.

"My driving wasn't nearly as good as the day before," he said, "but I did manage to make a lot of good par-saving putts."

Asked about the swing change that had helped him to an opening 66, Watson grinned and replied:

"Obviously it was nearly as effective today."

Ben Crenshaw bends and watches his attempt at a birdie putt miss on the 11th hole in the PGA tournament Friday. He took a par, but went on to seize the second round lead. (AP Laserphoto)

San Antonio rips Cubs in first game of series

By RICHARD VINCENT Sports Writer

Things were flowing at Cubs Stadium Friday night, especially beer, hits and runs.

The crowd of 1,652 enjoyed not only two-bit beer night, but a show of offense that would've definitely violated Salt II.

It took over three hours to play, but 29 hits and 22 runs later, the San Antonio Dodgers came away with a 13-9 victory over the Midland Cubs in the opener of a five-game set.

Tonight at 7:30, the same teams square-off. Righthander Doug Harrison survived a five-run first inning to secure the pitching victory, although he wasn't around at the finish. Lefty Brian Hayes came on in the sixth.

For the Cubs, Lee Smith was tagged with the setback as he allowed four runs in slightly over one inning. Starter Mark Parker served up a homer in each of the first four innings before making way for Smith in the fifth. Darrell Turner, who entered in the sixth, finished for the Bruins.

San Antonio's Ron Roenicke was the game's hitting star as he slammed a pair of solo homers, had three hits and knocked in five runs. Right behind him for the Dodgers was Gary Weiss who had three hits. Midland's Mike Turgeon paced the Bruins with a double and two triples that chased in a pair of runs. Gary Krug and Dan Rohn also each drove in a pair of runs.

The offensive pyrotechnics began early as Weiss homered giving the visitors a 1-0 bulge.

Midland roared back with five runs in their first as three singles, a double and triple did the job.

That set the tone for the night as they were ten extra base hits, thanks to winds blowing out of the ball park.

Roenicke's second shot, a two-run blow in the fourth, gave the Dodgers a 7-5 cushion.

But Midland grabbed a pair of runs in the fifth to tie the count 7-7 as Krug's sacrifice fly scored one and Turgeon's triple brought in another.

The Cubs scored their last runs in the sixth as Rohn's booming triple tallied Brian Rosinski and Bill Hayes, both of whom singled.

Although they weren't really threatened, San Antonio pushed across two insurance runs, one in the eighth and one in the ninth.

Miami nips Saints, 14-7

MIAMI (AP) — Second-year veterans Guy Benjamin and Jimmy Cefalo combined on passes on 21 and 7 yards in a three-play, fourth-quarter drive that gave the Miami Dolphins a 14-7 victory over the New Orleans Saints in a National Football League exhibition game Friday night.

Veteran players saw only limited action as Saints Coach Dick Nolan and Miami Coach Don Shula looked at most of their rosters during the exhibition opener for both teams.

Russell Erxleben, the Saints' first-round draft choice, set up Miami's quick score with a weak 19-yard punt that gave the Dolphins possession at the New Orleans 33. Erxleben, counted on for double duty by the Saints, also missed two field goals in the game.

Benjamin, coming into the game at the start of the second half, hit seven of 12 passes for 80 yards and one interception. The former Stanford star, who hit six of eight passes as the Dolphins third-string quarterback last season, found Cefalo slanting from the right in the end zone with 10:51 left in the game to break a 7-7 tie. Fullback Larry Csonka, making his first Orange Bowl appearance since he defected to the World Football League in 1974, delighted the crowd of 44,708 by gaining 20 yards on four first-half carries. Csonka, a 32-year-old free agent let go by the New York Giants, was one of Miami's most popular players during three 1,000-yard seasons, beginning in 1971.

Denver, Dallas to test rookie crops tonight

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, the highest-scoring team in the National Football League in 1978, will be on display Saturday night in their second exhibition game against the Denver Broncos, a crack defensive club trying to find a quarterback with some scoring magic.

It's Denver's preseason opener while the five-point favorite Cowboys have the advantage of playing a game, a 20-13 NFL Hall of Fame loss to the Oakland Raiders.

"It's a great way to start the season—against a class team," said Denver Coach Red Miller. "If you beat a crummy team you don't learn anything."

Miller hopes to learn something about his quarterback situation. Norris Weese will start and work at least a half while Craig Morton is questionable with a hip strain.

Both Weese and Morton have had exceptional training camps in their battle for the No. 1 quarterback spot.

There is also a battle royal for the No. 3 post between veteran Craig Penrose and rookies Fred Mortensen of Arizona State and Tom Sorley of Nebraska.

Mortensen has looked particularly bright in the early going.

Dallas has a fullhouse in the backfield and Coach Tom Landry will take a hard look at the impressive Ron Springs of Ohio State. Tony Dorsett's job is safe but veterans Alois Blackwell and Doug Dennison are being hard-pressed by Springs, who scored a touchdown against the Raiders last week.

At fullback Scott Laidlaw, Todd Christensen, Larry Brinson and Robert Newhouse are involved in a wild scramble.

Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach was expected to share time with Danny White and Glenn Carano in this annual Salesmanship Club game which will draw between 55,000 and 60,000 for an 8 p.m. kickoff in Texas Stadium.

The Cowboys own a 4-1 record over Denver in the few games they've played, including preseason and a 27-10 Dallas victory in Super Bowl XII.

"We know one thing about Denver," said Dallas offensive coordinator Danny Reeves. "They play just about the toughest defense in the league. It will be a good test for our offense. We really don't have all our offense in yet but we're getting there."

Camps have moments

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Training camp, a time when veterans look to hold onto their jobs and rookies try to steal them away, has provided some of the New York Giants lighter moments over the years.

Take, for instance, the case of Joseph E. Whelan, better known to the Giants as Jose Whelan, free agent punter from Boston College, who loved training camp so much he refused to leave.

Whelan checked into Giants camp, signed his information card "Jos. E. Whelan," leading Coach Allie Sherman to believe his name was Jose. Anyway, Jos. E. or Jose, was cut just three days into camp as Sherman trimmed the team from 100 to 75 players.

TWO WEEKS later as Sherman patrolled the dining room he asked public relations director Ed Croke, "Who the hell is that guy sitting over there?"

"I walked over to him to ask him his name," Croke recalled. "He said his name was Joseph Whelan. I told him he got cut two weeks ago. Whelan said, 'I know, but nobody told me I had to leave. The food's great, I got an air conditioned room, a television, I love it here. Besides, I have nothing better to do this summer.'"

Whelan was gone the next day.

Veterans often get itchy when the coaches bring in a young phenom to challenge for their job. Placekicker Pete Gogolak was no different the summer of 1973 when Coach Alex Webster brought in Ben Nitka to the Monmouth College, N.J., camp.

"The guy had played pro soccer and had a really strong leg," Croke said. "Gogolak was a smart guy and he began to get worried. He didn't like the competition."

NITKA GOT to talking to Gogolak one day about training routines and Gogolak mentioned a great way to strengthen the kicking leg was to run in the ocean at 6 a.m.

"Nitka took Gogolak's advice and ran every morning," Croke said. "He'd come to practice barely able to walk, but Gogolak told him, 'It's good for you. You're doing the right thing.'"

Gogolak was safe. Nitka was sent packing.

Even pool great Willie Mosconi figured in hustling one of the Giants.

Tight end Freeman White was an excellent pool player who delighted in taking his teammates money.

"We were bringing in Willie Mosconi to give a demonstration," Croke said, "and we decided to have a little fun with it."

THE GIANTS dressed Mosconi in a work shirt, a pair of jeans and gave him a broom, posing as the pool room maintenance man.

"White comes in and starts shooting and Mosconi says, 'What's so hard about that? I can beat you.' White didn't know who the old guy with the broom was so he took him on."

Mosconi scratched the first couple of shots giving White confidence, setting him up for the sting. Then he ran in 130 balls in a row. White was standing with his mouth open before Mosconi revealed his identity.

The money was returned. Back in the '60s and early '70s, the Giants used to hold an annual training camp party for the players, complete with food from a well-known New York steakhouse and a band to provide entertainment.

"We claimed this guy on waivers from Pittsburgh the same day as the party," Croke laughs. "He walks into training camp with 'My Father's Mustache,' playing and steak and beer all around."

"The guy said, 'Holy cow, I heard about New York, but this is terrific. What an organization!' The next night they ate slop on a shingle." The 1965 training camp was an important one for Sherman. He wanted the players to like him. He had Croke arrange to get a contemporary band for the annual rookie show at Fairfield.

"I CALLED a booking agent and got a group called, 'Full Moon Special Delivery.' It must have taken them an hour to set up their electrical equipment. Sherman thought it was his big moment to get close to the players."

"Well, the first five notes you could have heard in Bridgeport. A professor, who happened to be the president of the college, was giving a final exam at the time and he sent for the cops: The players — especially Joe Morrison and Bob Lurtsema — were booing the police."

Lopez closes out books on Sunningdale bookies

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — British bookies quit taking bets today on Nancy Lopez to win the Women's European golf championship.

The 22-year-old black-haired superstar from New Mexico was 11-under-par and three strokes ahead after two rounds. The Sunningdale course is playing slow after torrential rains, and Lopez is out driving every other woman in the field.

"She's about 20 yards stronger off the tee than most others," said Joyce Kazmierski of Williston, Fla., who was second.

After two rounds over the 6,174-yard par 36-38-74 course, Lopez had scores of 68 and 69 for an aggregate of 137.

She was followed by Kazmierski at 140; Mardell Wilkins of Mission Viego, Calif., 141; Micky Walker of Britain, 142, and Sally Little of South Africa, 143.

Lopez, going for a first prize of $16,500, modestly admitted she is now the strongest driver on the women's tour.

"I wouldn't have said that last year," she said. "I'd have put myself among the first four or five. But I'm driving the ball 20 or 25 yards farther this season."

"The leader of the band got up and said, 'Is my music bothering you?' The players yelled back, 'Hell no!' And they kept playing. Sherman disappeared. He didn't want any part of it any more."

Then there was the time a couple of belly dancers graced the Giants summer party. Croke and others became a bit uptight because a couple of owner Wellington Mara's kids, then in their early teens, were hanging around.

"We had to get them out of there. They were kind of young and she was doing it all," he laughed.

A COUPLE of years back, defensive end Roy Hilton, at 6-foot-6, got a kick out of manipulating 5-9 running back Leon McQuay's socks, so every-time McQuay pulled them on, they ripped.

"Finally, McQuay just couldn't take it anymore," Croke recalled. "And he charged after Hilton, who punched him in the mouth. McQuay picked up a chair with his back to Hilton as John Hicks ran in to break it up. McQuay lifted the chair and hit Hicks right in the head. He was out like a light."

Things have quieted down a bit this year, although Coach Ray Perkins plans a rookie show for the first time in 10 years. And last week, the rookies were required to sing their school fight song at dinner.

"Hey man, the coach here is a rookie, too," bellowed veteran John Mendenhall.

Victoria captures win over Elcor

The rain made Friday a long day. Lopez was on the course for more than five hours, including 30 minutes at midday when play was suspended because of flooded greens.

"It lasted forever," Lopez said. "After so long, and in these difficult conditions, you just can't concentrate as well."

But at the end of her tough round, she birdied the last three holes. On the soggy 17th and 18th greens she hit putts from 10 feet.

Victoria captures win over Elcor

TYLER — Midland Elcor lost its chance to become the Senior Teenage League state champion here Friday night when they dropped a 4-0 decision to Victoria in the finals.

Victoria scored three runs off losing Midland pitcher Terry Willis in the first inning. Willis went on to strike-out 11 batters. Victoria, however, was unscored upon in the tournament.

Brian Cantrell, John White and Doug Schmidt all hit doubles for Elcor in a seven-hit attack, but no runs were produced. Victoria had only six hits—Wagner, who struck out only three, got the win.

Rangers attack Cleveland, 8-3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Richie Zisk and Pat Putnam drove in three runs each to support the three-hit pitching of Ferguson Jenkins as the Texas Rangers defeated the Cleveland Indians 8-3 Friday night.

Jenkins, 11-8, struck out eight, walked two and departed with the bases loaded and none out in the ninth. Sparky Lyle relieved, let one run in with a wild pitch and another on a groundout by Toby Harrah before retiring the side.

Texas jumped on Rick Wise, 11-6, for five runs in the third inning on an RBI double by Buddy Bell, a two-run single by Zisk and Putnam's 14th home run of the season, a two-run shot.

The Rangers made it 6-0 in the fourth on doubles by Bell and Zisk, who has hit safely in 15 straight games since the All-Star break.

Cleveland, which has lost two in a row after a 10-game winning streak, got its first run in the fifth on Cliff Johnson's eighth home run of the season.

Texas added insurance runs on an RBI single by Dave Roberts in the seventh and a sacrifice fly by Putnam in the eighth.

Baltimore blanks Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — John Lowenstein's 11th homer of the season, a second-inning drive off Luis Tiant, gave the Baltimore Orioles and Scott McGregor a 1-0 victory over the New York Yankees Friday night.

A crowd of 51,151 turned out at Yankee Stadium to honor the memory of catcher Thurman Munson, who perished Thursday in a plane crash. After the Yankees took the field, players from both teams lined the top step of their dugouts for a brief pre-game memorial for the second Yankee team captain in team history and the first since Lou Gehrig.

After a prayer was offered by Cardinal Terence Cooke, archbishop of New York, the fans stood and cheered their departed hero a full nine minutes. Outfielder Reggie Jackson was seen sobbing openly, as was Tiant, who ordered a towel from the dugout to wipe his eyes before throwing the game's first pitch.

Brewers jump on Sox

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Gorman Thomas drove in three runs with a pair of homers and Cecil Cooper lined a bases-empty shot as the Milwaukee Brewers snapped a four-game losing streak with a 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox Friday night.

Jim Slaton, 11-6, gave up seven hits, then departed in the ninth after surrendering a two-run homer to Butch Hobson. Bill Castro finished up.

The Brewers scored three runs in the fourth off Steve Renko, 8-6, on a double by Cooper, an RBI single by Sixto Lezcano and Thomas' 26th homer of the season.

The Red Sox scored an unearned run in the sixth on Rick Burleson's single, a fielder's choice, a walk to Fred Lynn and a wild relay throw to first by second baseman Don Money on Jim Rice's possible double play grounder.

However, Cooper hit his 18th homer and Thomas his 27th, the latter off reliever Win Remmerswaal in the Brewers' sixth, for a 5-1 lead.

Twins rip California

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Danny Goodwin's RBI double capped a two-run first inning Friday night and helped the Minnesota Twins beat California 4-1 to pull to within three games of the Angels in the American League's West Division.

Rob Wilfong added a sacrifice fly in the second and Roy Smalley equalled his major league high with his 19th homer of the season — snapping a hitless streak at 19 at-bats — in the seventh to back the combined nine-hit pitching of Jerry Koozman and Mike Marshall.

Koozman, 12-10, struck out eight and walked only two to snap a personal four-game losing streak. The 35-year-old left-hander lost his shutout bid in the eighth when Carney Lansford tripped and scored on a groundout by Dan Ford.

Marshall took over with one out and two on in the eighth. He got Joe Rudi to hit into an inning-ending double play and then set California down in the ninth to earn his 21st save.

The Twins' other first-inning run scored on an error.

Jim Barr, 7-8, allowed only eight hits, but lost his fourth straight game.

Royals, Tigers split

DETROIT (AP) — Darrell Porter hit his 100th career home run, a two-run shot in the fourth inning Friday night, and Hal McRae drove in two runs with a single and a homer to send the Kansas City Royals to a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers in the opener of a two-night doubleheader. The Tigers took the nightcap by a 4-3 margin.

Porter's homer off Pat Underwood, 6-2, followed a double by Al Cowens and wiped out a 2-1 deficit. McRae, returning to action after being on the disabled list since June 11, singled home the Royals' first run in the second inning and completed the scoring with a seventh-inning homer.

Kansas City got its other run in the sixth on George Scott's sacrifice fly.

Steve Kemp hit two solo homers for Detroit, boosting his season total to 18 and matching his career high, set in 1977. A second-inning single by Aurelio Rodriguez delivered the other Tigers run.

Steve Busby, 5-6, made his first start since July 3, went the first six innings and allowed just three hits with six strikeouts and seven walks before giving way to Steve Mingo.

Dan Quisenberry and Al Hrabosky finished up.

Bell's homer sinks Jays

TORONTO (AP) — Kevin Bell hit a three-run homer while Jim Morrison and Lamar Johnson added solo shots Friday night as the Chicago White Sox snapped a seven-game losing streak with an 8-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays in Tony LaRussa's major league managing debut.

LaRussa replaced Don Kessinger, who resigned the Chicago job Thursday night.

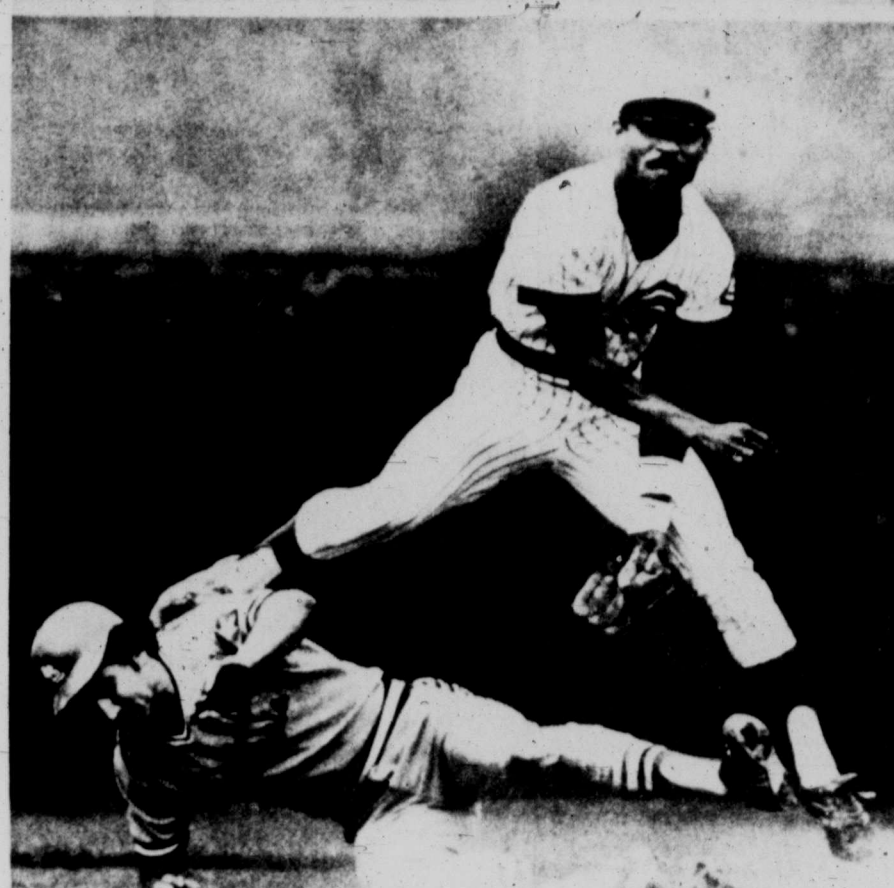

Steve Trout, 6-4, got ninth-inning relief help from Ed Farmer and got batting support from six Chicago extra-base hits.

Morrison led off the game with a homer into the left field seats off Balor Moore, 2-3. Toronto took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the inning on a two-run homer by Roy Howell, his 10th.

Bell homered in the second, giving Chicago a 4-2 lead, then the White Sox added three in the fourth on doubles by Wayne Nordhagen and Morrison, a pair of walks and a sacrifice fly by Greg Pryor.

Johnson's homer in the fifth gave Chicago its final run.

Toronto scored twice in the fourth on three singles, and got one in the seventh on a run-scoring grounder by Bob Bailor.

St. Louis Cardinal Keith Hernandez, bottom, is forced out at second base by Chicago Cubs' Ivan DeJesus during game Friday in Chicago. Hernandez, however, broke up the double play. The Cubs won, 4-2. (AP Laserphoto)

Padres help out Astros

CINCINNATI (AP) — Rookie Jim Wilhelm's run-scoring single knocked in the winning run and Rollie Fingers' squeeze bunt provided insurance as the San Diego Padres beat the Cincinnati Reds 6-4 Friday.

Bob Shirley, 5-11, the San Diego starter, pitched no-hit ball for four innings and got relief help from Bob Ochwinkel, Fingers and Mark Lee. Lee got his second save.

Run-scoring singles by Jay Johnstone and Dave Winfield gave the Padres a 2-0 lead in the sixth inning.

Expos run string to five

MONTREAL (AP) — Warren Cromartie's eighth-inning single drove in Ellis Valentine with the winning run as Montreal defeated the New York Mets 10-6 Friday night, the Expos' fifth straight victory.

Valentine led off the inning with a single against reliever Dale Murray, 4-6, and moved to second on a sacrifice by Larry Parrish. Pinch-hitter Tommy Hutton walked and, one out later, Cromartie drilled the ball sharply to right. Valentine narrowly beat right fielder Gil Flores' throw to the plate.

Rodney Scott walked, loading the bases, and Andre Dawson stroked a single up the middle, delivering a pair of runs. After Tony Perez walked, Gary Carter produced the fourth run with an infield hit.

Pirates take twinbill

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bill Robinson and Bill Madlock drove in two runs each to back the five-hit pitching of Jim Bibby and lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 5-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Friday night and a doubleheader sweep.

In the opener, Dave Parker snapped a seventh-inning tie with a three-run homer off Tug McGraw that gave Pittsburgh a 6-3 triumph.

Bibby, 8-2 with the fifth victory in his last five starts, had a two-hitter until the Phillies scored an unearned run in the eighth on three singles and an error.

Madlock's run-scoring triple gave Pittsburgh a 1-0 lead in the second inning off loser Larry Christenson, 2-7, and Parker drove in another Pirates run in the third on a force out.

Bitner stings Cardinals

CHICAGO — Larry Bitner hit two doubles and drove in two runs to pace the Chicago Cubs to a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Friday afternoon.

Rick Reuschel picked up his 10th victory in 17 decisions this year, but had to have relief help from former Midland Cubs' pitcher Bruce Sutter in the eighth inning. Sutter picked up his 24th save of the year, tops in the National League.

St. Louis Cardinal Keith Hernandez, bottom, is forced out at second base by Chicago Cubs' Ivan DeJesus during game Friday in Chicago. Hernandez, however, broke up the double play. The Cubs won, 4-2. (AP Laserphoto)

SWC coaches hint improvement

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Everybody had a case of August optimism here Friday when the nine Southwest Conference football coaches gathered and predictably promised improved teams this season.

"Everybody has to be excited and optimistic about the coming season. If they're not, then they're already dead," observed Texas Christian Coach F.A. Dry, who promised even his Horned Frogs would be improved, even though preseason predictors say TCU will again be near the bottom of the SWC standings.

A sampler of August optimism from the press conference:

"We will have a good football team. I'm not ashamed to say it," said Texas Coach Fred Akers, whose Longhorns are ranked nationally in many preseason polls and considered the favorite in the SWC.

"I think there's a whole lot of teams that can win it. I don't think there's any question we will be competitive," said Houston Coach Bill Yeoman, whose defending champion Cougars are again expected to be one of the conference's top teams this season.

"We could win it. Some good things would have to happen and we might have to have some help from some other teams. Crazier things have happened. We're going to have a good football team," said Southern Methodist Coach Ron Meyer, who had one of the nation's best recruiting seasons last year to go with the already talented, but still young, 1978 Mustangs.

"When we walk on the field every time, we'll have a chance to win," modestly observed Texas A&M Coach Tom Wilson, whose Aggies are expected to be among the SWC's top two or three teams.

Injuries are hurting baseball

By MICHAEL WILSON
The Washington Post

Major league baseball is hurting. The season is almost two-thirds over but already more players have disabling injuries than at anytime since Abner Doubleday's day.

As of July 30, 50 players — 7.8 percent of all major leaguers — were on the 15-21-or-60-day disabled lists. Bodies have been falling in both leagues at a faster rate than did Skylab.

Division races almost surely will be decided by which teams can field the healthiest nine. If the rate of injuries continues, a new league award may have to be established for most valuable team physician.

Some interesting facts to note: —Through July 30, 131 players had appeared at one time or another on a disabled list as compared with 113 during the entire 1978 season. That means about 21 percent of the 650 players on the 26 rosters have been disabled in 1979.

—As many as 55 players have been on the disabled list simultaneously as compared with a high of 40 in 1978.

—The injured include 14 past All-Stars and 30 current regulars.

—Only the Chicago Cubs, Montreal, San Diego and Minnesota have no disabled list entries.

—Of the 50 currently disabled, 30 are pitchers. This represents about 13 percent of all major league pitchers.

This list statistic is alarming. Jim Palmer, Frank Tanana, Chuck Rainey, Doug Rau, Wayne Garland, Pat Zachry and Mark Fidrych lead the notable hurlers.

Houston and the New York Mets have three pitchers apiece on disabled lists. Atlanta, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, California, the Chicago White Sox, Cleveland, Detroit and Oakland each have two.

Baltimore Oriole team physician

Leonard Wallenstein said he thinks a peppier baseball this season has largely contributed to the pitchers' injuries.

"It is my opinion that the increased liveliness of the baseball makes it easier for batters to hit more home runs. That in turn puts extra pressure on pitchers to exert more energy to throw more sliders, changeups and curve balls, all of which are very unnatural motions creating extra strain on the elbow and shoulder joints."

Dr. Wallenstein may have hit upon a legitimate theory. Major league batters have 320 more home runs this season than at the same time last year, 2,195, to 1,875.

Robert Kerlan, California team physician, said the astonishing number of injuries is so preplexing that he and the other Angel team physician, Louis Yocum, don't even like to keep count of the players coming into their office.

Dr. Yocum said all the Angel injuries have been legitimate and not the fault of poor conditioning.

"I have a feeling people are starting to look at us (doctors) as having a large role to play in the prevention and treatment of so many injuries," Kerlan said.

He perhaps has reason to feel a bit paranoid. California fans might want to blame someone for losing Tanana, Rod Carew, Rick Miller and Chris Knapp to disabling injuries in a four-week span.

"To top that off, Nolan Ryan popped his elbow in a Yankee game last week and nobody knows why," Kerlan said.

The 1977 and 1978 world champion New York Yankees have been mired in third and fourth place of the American League East, largely because of injuries to seven key players: Rich Gossage, Ed Figueroa, Jim Beattie, Reggie Jackson, Mickey Rivers, Don Gullett and Juan Beniquez.

E. R. West Engineering, Inc., recently won the Division II city championship of the Midland Softball Association. The team won six straight in the city tournament and had a league record of 27-0. They finished the season with a 56-8 record. They are, front row from left, Mack Gipson, Max Emfinger, Don Purcer, Gary Doan, Jim Rosser, Chris Johnson and Fred Koontz (coach). Back row: Denzil West, Buzz Cupp, Steve Doan, Theron West, Bill Cole and Danny Doan. Not pictured are Glen Bryan and Gaylon Doan.

Munson legend is top mystery

By PETE ALFANO
Newsday

NEW YORK — His final seasons in uniform were sullied by more than he dirt around home plate. Thurman Munson had become a reticent man at 32, torn between a yearning to be near his home and family in Canton, Ohio, and his loyalty to the Yankees.

There were requests to be traded and contract squabbles with owner George Steinbrenner. He became sullen and mostly uncommunicative with the media. And Munson never understood or could forgive Reggie Jackson for the remarks he made in the spring of 1977 that belittled Munson's role as a team leader.

Munson was the first Yankee captain since Lou Gehrig. And after all of Steinbrenner's maneuvering, trading and signing of free agents, he was — until his death in a private plane crash Thursday — the only starter in the Yankee lineup who was raised in the team's farm system. He thought that should have counted for something.

MUNSON COULD be surly and abrupt even in his early years with the Yankees, but teammates and observers attributed this behavior to his competitive nature. After a loss, he might brush past the autograph seekers as he walked briskly to his car. He might spend an inordinate amount of time in the trainer's room, waiting for the reporters to tire of waiting.

"He is a very intense person," teammate Graig Nettles once said. "He has a burning desire to be the best."

The early-and-mid-70s were more relaxed times, not as rewarding on the field for the Yankees, but more peaceful for their catcher. In quiet moments, he volunteered information about growing up on a farm in Ohio and of his passion for a game.

"I started playing as a kid and I was 'littler' than most," he once said. "This may sound corny but I remember seeing a lot of horses back in Ohio and baseball reminded me of a stallion just running free. There was a freedom to the game. No matter what your problems were and what you had on your mind, when you played baseball you forgot about it."

MUNSON GREW up on a farm in Randolph, Ohio, before his family moved to Canton when he was 8. He once said he got his first glove when he was 5 years old, "a Hutch, a good old mitt." Munson's father worked for the man who owned the farm and Thurman had his share of chores, too. But the hard work took a back seat to his recollections of playing baseball.

"When I finished work, I'd play ball mostly," he once said. "I loved to play and I'd come home at night and my collie, Fritz, was waiting for me. It's funny how you forget all about the hard times, all the work. Ever notice how people's visions of things only include the good moments? I remember playing ball, but I forgot about picking potatoes."

As a high school athlete at Canton-Lehman, Munson was a standout in football and baseball. He counted 80 collegiate scholarship offers by the time he was a senior. He chose Kent State where he was an all-America catcher.

And remember, he was not built like the prototype athlete. He was squat, more deserving of the nickname "Pudge" than Carlton Fisk, his regal-looking counterpart on the Red Sox. Even as a 23-year-old rookie without the longer hair and walrus mustache that masked his round face, he never looked the part of a ballplayer.

BUT THERE were no doubts once anyone saw him play. He had ample talents to blend with his fierce competitive nature. He was the Yankees' No. 1 selection in the June free agent draft in 1968. He caught only 99 games in the minors before he played his first game in pinstripes in the final month of the '69 season.

He was the American League Rookie of the Year in 1970 when he batted .302. He won the Most Valuable Player award in 1976, becoming the first Yankee to win both awards. In 10 seasons, he batted over .300 five times. He ran well, especially for a catcher and he was durable, averaging 140 games a season. Gradually, the wear and tear of the position weakened his knees. He played a bit in the outfield and in recent days — with his knees acting up again — he played first base and was a designated hitter.

A Yankee spokesman said manager Billy Martin was in tears when he was informed of Munson's death.

"I've lost a dear friend," Steinbrenner said, "a pal and one of the greatest competitors ever known. We spent many hours together talking baseball and business. He loved his family. He was our leader."

Munson's talks with Steinbrenner were not always cordial. The disillusionment began with the owner's signing Jackson, a free agent who spurned bigger offers to become an even bigger name in New York. Munson had been promised by Steinbrenner that no one on the team would earn more, but initially, Jackson did. Munson demanded their salaries be equalized and the owner relented.

THEN JACKSON stung Munson and the Yankees by proclaiming in a magazine article during spring training of 1977 that he "was the straw that stirred the drink. Munson thinks he can be... but he can only stir it bad."

During August of that season, Munson began growing a beard in defiance of Steinbrenner's code. But there were some lighter moments, too. While visiting Disneyland during this period, he took a ride on the simulated bobsled run, cramped in a small bobsled behind a teen-age couple. Fran Healy, the reserve catcher, met Munson at the end of the run. He turned to the couple and said, "Pardon me, is that your son in the back seat?"

And much earlier in his career, when he was hitting .380 and his wife visited him in New York, Munson suddenly slid into a slump, getting one hit in 18 at bats. "Get the hell home," he told his wife. Diane Munson took the next plane back to Canton.

Jackson's World Series heroics helped the Yankees win the championship in 1977 and perhaps it convinced Munson it was time to go home also. He had real estate holdings and a comfortable home in Canton.

He wanted to be near his wife and their three children. He did not like the daily theatrics surrounding the Yankees. The Indians were his first choice. The Pirates were acceptable, too.

"I just want to be home," he said then. "I've talked to a lot of guys around 40 who look back and say, 'Gee, I wish I spent more time with my kids, my family. And they never will. I want to be the guy who does.'"

DEATH FRIGHTENED Munson as it does most people. He was hit in the head by a pitched ball late last season in Boston. A few days later, he experienced intolerable headaches while the team was in Detroit. He was sent to a local hospital for a brain scan. "My first reaction (when I felt the pain) was that I didn't want to die," he said then. "I never experienced anything like that. This wasn't a headache, it was tremendous pain."

Despite his gruffness, he was well-liked by his teammates who always considered Jackson the intruder. "As far as I'm concerned," Lou Piniella said, "and I'm sure the rest of the team feels the same way, the hell with these four games with Baltimore. You find out how unimportant things are that always seemed important. I'm going to be at the funeral and I don't care if there is a game that day."

Thurman Munson always was proud of his achievements, although he felt they were never properly recognized. He also thought of himself as the little kid, "littler than the rest." He knew he sometimes was misunderstood. "I like to kid around a lot," he once said, "but I do it in a kind of grouchy way."

Bill Barker shoots his age 57th time

Bill Barker keeps plugging away at the Midland Country Club golf course. Barker, 86, shot his age for the 57th time Friday with a round of 84.

Barker was playing with Jack Nobles, Hugh Munn and Dick Booker.

The feat is supposed to be as rare as a hole-in-one, but it is commonplace to Barker.

Marble Hill akin to Watergate

By LISA LEVITT

MADISON, Ind. (AP) — The Marble Hill nuclear power plant could be something akin to Watergate for the nuclear industry. There are the charges of cover-up and of bugging — and the denials — all set in an atmosphere of suspicion fueled by Three Mile Island.

The Ohio River Valley plant has been in the middle of a tug-of-war since June when a former construction worker leveled charges of shoddy workmanship and deliberate cover-up by Public Service Indiana, owner of the plant, and Newberg Construction Co., its builder.

Since then the controversy has mushroomed — blown out of proportion, say PSI and Newberg; just the tip of the iceberg, say Save the Valley, one group opposing the plant, and Rep. Joel Deckard, R-Ind., who has called for a congressional probe of the plant.

This week, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission plans to complete an investigation of the plant and submit its findings to the Justice Department, asking it to investigate possible criminal charges.

"WE WOULD HAVE to consider very seriously whether we could allow construction to continue (if) there had been past cover-up by the utility," said Jan Strasma, an NRC spokesman in Chicago.

Meanwhile, concrete pouring for structures that might leak radiation during a nuclear accident has been halted for the second time. The first stoppage was for defective concrete work, the current one for allegedly failing to take sufficient precautions to prevent defects.

Despite the current concern over nuclear power — following the near disaster at the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania — this is the first time the NRC has specifically asked for an investigation of a nuclear power plant involving an alleged cover-up. And the NRC has never permanently halted construction of a nuclear plant.

Spokesman Strasma is cautious about the prospects for Marble Hill. He said: "The outcome of the Justice Department inquiry may have some impact on the nuclear industry, but we did not hand them a complete case. We handed them an incomplete case which they may or may not follow through with."

Marble Hill's problems began in June with a deposition by Charles Edward Cutshall, 22, who worked at the site as a concrete finisher's helper for about two months until he quit in April and headed for Texas.

BEFORE HE LEFT, Cutshall gave Save the Valley the deposition detailing improperly patched honeycombs or air pockets in the concrete walls of the containment building that would house one of the twin nuclear reactors — patching that he said was ordered by supervisors to hide the defects from inspectors.

"He (Cutshall) told us he believed in nuclear power generation. He only wanted to make damn sure they were as safe as they could be," recalled Save the Valley chairman Robert Gray.

The NRC knew of problems in April, but Mr. Cutshall's allegations focused on the extensiveness of the honeycombing and an intentional cover-up, which we had no knowledge of," Strasma said.

A subsequent NRC inspection revealed that 170 of 550 voids were improperly patched, and concrete work was stopped for 12 days.

After the first work stoppage, Newberg fired two workers and transferred a supervisor who had failed to comply with company standards for "vibrating" concrete, a process that forces the concrete tightly between steel reinforcement bars to prevent voids.

THE DISMISSALS weren't unusual. Newberg vice president Francis W. Durocher said that in the last year about 300 of the 1,600 workers on the project have quit or been fired because they didn't want to maintain Newberg's standards.

But Gray has another version. "We talk to these workers, and they say it's a slave-driver job. Why is it a slave-driver job? Because they're pushing it. They're not apparently allowing enough time for the workers to do the proper job," Gray said.

The $1.8 billion plant, 30 miles up the Ohio River from Louisville, Ky., was started in August 1977 and is 15 percent complete. It is scheduled to begin operation in late 1982, a pace that Strasma said is one of the fastest in recent years for a nuclear project.

"Sure we're pushing the job," Durocher said. "It's common to push a construction job. But we're not sacrificing any standards. We're proud of this job. It's as good as any and better than most."

GRAY SAID THAT statement sent chills through a community that once generally supported the project as preferable to another coal-fired plant but now is growing "deeply disillusioned." "In fact, the word is 'scared,'" he added.

Gray has also said he believed that his telephone and those of other opponents of the power plant were bugged. PSI said such charges are so ridiculous that they do not deserve comment.

Both PSI and Newberg have acknowledged the defects mentioned by Cutshall, but PSI President Hugh A. Barker insists the damage did not pose a hazard. "What has been substantiated is that there were bad patches made of some honeycombs. That's all. Nothing has been substantiated to say that there has been any unsafe structural result either in terms of strength or radiation," Barker said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Women subject to liver diseases

Dear Dr. Solomon: After experiencing several painful attacks, I learned that I have gallstones. My physician jokingly mentioned that I meet only one of the three usual requirements for this condition because I'm female, not overweight and 24 years old. He also referred to my condition as a liver disease. Can you explain what he meant? — Mrs. L. Y.

Dear Mrs. Y.: Gallstones are classified as a liver disease because they are composed of the constituents of bile, which is manufactured in the liver. They usually are made from the cholesterol in bile, which has come out of solution and hardened. The stones then appear in the gallbladder, which is an appendage of the liver.

contraceptives, which contain estrogen, as well as pregnant women, are at high risk for gallstones. The common denominator in all these instances is an increase in the estrogen level.

Other liver diseases also affect more women than men, at least during the childbearing years, and estrogen level could be a major factor. For example, of all patients suffering from primary biliary cirrhosis (a scarring of the liver), 90 percent are women. In addition, 60 to 70 percent of patients with chronic hepatitis of unknown cause are women. On the other hand, certain types of hepatitis (an inflammation of the liver) are caused by viruses and are not sex-related.

Gallstones are the most common liver-related disease in women. They cause trouble when they become stuck in the walls of the gallbladder, which then tries to push them out by muscular contractions. The pain from these attacks is often excruciating.

Even chronic alcoholism seems to discriminate against women. In this connection, the Canadian Liver Foundation has warned that women cannot consume as much alcohol as men without risk to their livers.

The typical gallstone patient has long been stereotyped as "female, fat and 40." The reason for the increased susceptibility of this group, however, is unknown. Dr. Burton Combes, professor of internal medicine at the University of Texas Health Science Center and a liver specialist, now feels that hormones, especially estrogen, may be implicated in the high incidence of cholesterol gallstones as well as in other liver diseases in women.

Hormones seem to be involved in many pregnancy-related liver diseases. Heavy vomiting experienced by some women during the early stages of pregnancy can lead to liver trouble. And an itching and jaundiced condition, which sometimes occurs in late pregnancy, may also be related to excess estrogen. These conditions generally improve after the woman gives birth.

Studies done in the United States and Europe have shown that women throughout the childbearing age have an increasingly high incidence of gallstones than men of corresponding ages. It has also been established that both estrogen and obesity tend to increase the amount of cholesterol in bile. Moreover, women taking oral

Women are protected by their sex from one liver disease, hemochromatosis, at least until menopause.

The Favorite May Lose
By Alfred Sheinwald

Since a long shot sometimes beats the favorite, get a bet down on both.

South took the king of spades and led a club to finesse with the jack. West won and continued spades, after which the bad club break doomed declarer.

South's play was an overwhelming favorite to make the game, but the play that actually works is leading a heart toward dummy's king—a mere even chance.

START WITH ACES
South should bet on both chances by taking the ace of spades and the ace of clubs to begin with. Then he leads the jack of diamonds to dummy's queen and returns a club.

When East discards, showing that the clubs are sour, South can go up with the king of clubs and lead a heart.

If East could follow suit on the second round of clubs, South could safely finesse with the jack. Even if that delayed finesse lost, the clubs would surely break 3-2, and South could be sure of five clubs, three diamonds and two spades.

Ancient Roman stadium found buried

ROME (AP) — An imposing ancient stadium is buried "almost intact" under Rome's Circus Maximus, the Roman sports arena where chariot races like those portrayed in the movie "Ben Hur" used to take place.

The presence of the well-preserved super structure, which collapsed in a stampede burying 16,000 spectators during the era of Roman Emperor Diocletian who reigned in the years 284-305, has been confirmed by Dr. Paola Ciancio Rossetto, a consulting archeologist working for the Rome city government.

"We only have to dig about 10 meters (about 30 feet) from the street level to get to the stadium," she said, adding that the arena should be 1,800 feet long and 375 feet wide, or three times the size of Rome's Olympic Stadium, which accommodates 90,000 people.

A popular tourist spot, the circus now is practically barren. All that is visible are some remains of seats and of the substructure of the stairways.

The original structure dates from the time of Tarquinius Priscus about 600 B.C. who is said to have organized a series of races and boxing matches after a war victory.

Though primarily designed for chariot races, the circus was used also for athletic contests, wild beast fights and ceremonies for returning war heroes. It was altered and enlarged several times and the accommodation varied from 150,000 to 385,000.

The last games were held in 549 A.D. The obelisks now in Rome's Piazza del Popolo and outside the St. John Lateran's Basilica once stood in the circus.

At the center underground are a gigantic column and an arch of triumph which stood midway between the two obelisks, the archeologist said.

She said her research and on-the-spot survey indicate that the two structures are in an "optimum state" of preservation. But Dr. Ciancio Rossetto said excavation must begin soon to prevent deterioration. She said the old stadium is covered with 20 to 25 feet of mud and a layer of underground lake about four feet deep.

However, Professor Lucos Cozza, superintendent of the municipal department of monuments and excavation, disagrees. "They can't go wrong underground. If anything, the mud should protect them," he said in an interview.

Cozza said the government cannot afford the estimated cost of excavation — anywhere between $1.5 million and $3 million — not counting restoration expenses and maintenance costs.

"In my view, if we have the money it should go for the upkeep of the hundreds of important archeological sites that have been already excavated throughout Italy," Cozza said.

He said that because the circus covers such a wide area in downtown Rome, any excavation work is also bound to involve massive interruption of gas, electricity and water services.

"We certainly would like to have it excavated someday — it would be a grand sight — but I can't even predict when that would be. This requires a political decision," Cozza added.

Without knowing the state of preservation, Napoleon once toyed with the idea of excavating it and in the late 1950s there was a serious debate whether the site should be unearthed to commemorate the 1960 Rome Olympics. The men who controlled the purse strings said no.

U.S. archivist to leave post following criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — The archivist of the United States, the subject of recent criticism because of the way valuable government documents are stored, says he will retire at the end of August.

James B. Rhoads, who has been chief custodian of billions of documents since 1968, announced his departure plans Thursday. He coupled his announcement with a complaint that the Archives and Records Service has been operating on insufficient funds.

Rhoads, 50, had been criticized by congressmen and others because archives has been storing priceless documents in an abandoned downtown department store adjoined a fire and safety hazard.

The General Services Administration, parent agency of the archives, announced it was closing the building. The facility has been used for storage because the main archives building is overcrowded.

Last December, a fire in an archives warehouse in Maryland destroyed millions of feet of irreplaceable newsreel film from the 1930s and '40s. The blaze was blamed on spontaneous combustion.

GSA Administrator Rowland G. Freeman III said Rhoads' deputy, James E. O'Neill, will serve as archivist until a permanent successor is chosen.

Indian woman to get $300,000

By EDWARD C. NICHOLS

jury's $300,000 award to an Oglala Sioux woman will mean stricter accounting for police, especially on or near reservations.

The decision "will certainly put these communities, and law enforcement agencies, on notice that they're going to be held accountable for their actions against Indian people," said Vernon Bellecourt, a veteran AIM leader reached for comment in White Earth, Minn.

AIM members have been in court before — often as defendants in criminal actions. In Jo Ann Yellow Bird's case, an Indian took the offensive.

She won a $300,000 damage award Thursday when an all-white jury of four women and two men decided the City of Gordon and one of its former police officers, Clifford Valentine, had violated Mrs. Yellow Bird's civil rights.

She had sued for $8 million, accusing the city, Sheridan County and six law enforcement officers of violating her civil rights, causing the death of her unborn child and assaulting her after a bar brawl Sept. 15, 1976, in the small Nebraska town of Gordon, 13 miles south of the Pine Ridge reservation in South Dakota.

Mrs. Yellow Bird said she was "not satisfied" with the award. But her husband, AIM activist Robert Yellow Bird, called it a victory, saying, "I'm sure if Jo Ann were a white woman, this never would have happened."

"Selective law enforcement in Sheridan County will now change," he said. "We're all brothers. Maybe it's time to start walking hand in hand and start straightening the problems out in our society."

Mrs. Yellow Bird's attorneys, though disappointed, said the decision was important. "The main purpose in bringing this suit was to stop abuses like this," said Jennie Rhine.

What happened that September night and afterward was disputed in 3½ weeks of testimony in U.S. District Court here.

Mrs. Yellow Bird said she was kicked in the stomach by police officer Robert Barnes, threatened with being shot by Valentine, thrown in the drunk tank and denied speedy medical attention. She said the kick and her subsequent treatment caused her baby to be delivered stillborn 15 days later.

Defense testimony depicted Mrs. Yellow Bird as drunk, "hollering and running like a wild woman," attacking Barnes, refusing medical attention and demanding to go to jail with her husband.

Valentine was the only one of six individual defendants in the case found liable. His whereabouts was unknown.

Chrysler seeks unprecedented freeze on wages and benefits

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp., plagued by slumping sales and record losses, asked the United Auto Workers union Friday for an unprecedented two-year freeze on wages and benefits for more than 100,000 workers.

The union said it could not respond immediately, and called a special meeting of leaders in the UAW's

Chrysler division to consider the proposal by the No. 3 automaker — the nation's 10th largest industrial company.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser said he thought there could be no response until after contract settlements with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. But, Fraser said, "Our leadership has never turned its back on its duty and responsibility."

The wage freeze request was made in a statement by Chrysler President Lee A. Iacocca, whose company has lost $466 million in 18 months — including a record second-quarter loss this year of $207.1 million.

If Chrysler were spared having to pay a 10 percent increase in wages and fringes benefits, the savings to the company could amount to an estimated $280 million a year.

Iacocca, who broke precedent in personally attending Friday's bargaining session, declined to meet with reporters. But he did say as he crossed the driveway from the bargaining room to his building, "I'm always optimistic."

In the current slump affecting the entire auto industry, Chrysler has fallen to a domestic market share of only 9.7 percent. For 1976, it was 16 percent.

Automakers reported Friday that domestic auto sales in July were nearly 10 percent below July 1978 figures, although sales rebounded in the last third of the month.

Chrysler said its sales for the month tumbled 27 percent to 68,081 from 92,884 in July last year. However, boosted by large factory discounts offered to dealers, sales of Chrysler's full-size New Yorker and Newport were up 13 percent in the last 10 days.

Chrysler and the union are seeking $1 billion in government aid for the company. The union wants the aid in the form of government ownership of stock representing a 30 percent stake. The company is seeking advance tax credits — a loan, in effect — for the years 1979 and 1980.

General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy protested Friday that any government help should be spread over the entire auto industry and not given to Chrysler alone.

"The federal assistance should not violate the fundamental principles of the American system of free enterprise," Murphy said. "More can be accomplished if the government releases its regulatory hold on business than by involving itself in ownership."

Fraser angrily criticized Murphy for having "no concern for the welfare of many more than a million people dependent on the survival of Chrysler."

In his one hour and 40 minute presentation, Iacocca outlined the company's plans for the 1981, 1982 and following years, even showing the union bargaining committee pictures of the 1981 models — another first for labor negotiations.

In the past, the union has given weaker companies concessions — in 1954 Studebaker workers threatened with mass layoffs took wage cuts of 10-15 percent. But a Big Three automaker has never asked for concessions, much less a wage freeze.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
Sealed proposals addressed to the Mayor and City Council of the City of Midland, Texas, for the construction of approximately 1,300 linear feet of concrete curb and gutter, 4,524 square yards of 6" caliche base, 2,789 square yards of 1-3/4" HMA surfacing and 4,818 square yards of double penetration surfacing will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas, until 5:30 p.m. on the 17th day of August, 1979, and publicly opened and read aloud at 3:00 p.m. on the same day.

Bid envelopes shall be plainly marked "Proposal for Project No. 176." Complete copies of plans, specifications and contract documents may be examined and/or obtained at the office of the City Engineer, City Hall, Midland, Texas.

A bid bond or proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, hereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed that the City of Midland is given the right to retain such an amount as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws his bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid or, if successful in securing the award thereof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and acceptable to the City of Midland.

The City of Midland, Texas, reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals or bids, to waive technicalities, to make any investigation deemed necessary concerning the bidder's ability to perform the work covered by the plans and specifications, and to accept what in the judgment of the Mayor and City Council is the most advantageous bid.

Jurors see McDonald home

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Jurors in the murder trial of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald on Friday walked through the red-brick house where his pregnant wife and two young daughters were stabbed and bludgeoned to death 9 1/2 years ago.

The Army put a seal on the house in 1970, shortly after the slayings of Colette MacDonald, 26, and daughters Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2. The dwelling at 544 Castle Drive was then officers' quarters at the large Army base.

MacDonald, now 35 and practicing emergency medicine in California, was a Green Beret doctor then. He says four intruders, one of them a candle-carrying woman chanting, "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs," slaughtered his family and wounded him.

The government says he fabricated the story, possibly basing it on the Charles Manson family cult murders in California the year before.

MacDonald, dressed in a charcoal gray pin-striped suit despite the 90-degree heat, went into the house first with his attorneys and prosecutors.

Brian Murtagh, a U.S. Justice Department attorney, snapped a picture as Army agent Lon Pike broke the seal and unlocked the blue front door.

The seven-man, five-woman jury, which is hearing the case in Raleigh, followed once the attorneys were through. Most stayed less than 10 minutes in the three-bedroom, 1 1/2-bath home. Some went up to a window at the front of the house, boarded until a few hours before the jury's arrival, and stared at the white jewelry box and deer figurine still standing in the window of Kimberly's room.

The jury was instructed not to talk with anyone. Reporters were not allowed in or near the house.

"I feel terrible," MacDonald said after touring the house. It was the first time he had been inside since he was discharged from the Army in late 1970, he said. He was cleared of Army charges then but indicted by a federal grand jury in 1975.

MacDonald and attorney Bernard Segal said a number of things in the house had been moved. "They've represented to the court that this is an intact crime scene. It's about 5 percent of what it was," MacDonald said.

Segal said much of the furniture has been removed, giving a different sense of space in the house. "It's just a sad place to be in," he said.

Murtagh said he thought the jury would get a "sense of special perspective" by seeing the house. The government admits that many things were moved. Hundreds of items taken from the house, from bedding to a piece of flooring bearing a bloody footprint, have been introduced as evidence in the case.

"About the only impression you could really say that you get is that people were once living there and it stopped. Time stopped," Murtagh said.

The prosecution is almost finished with its case.

Senators jockey for chance to express opinions of SALT

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Numerous senators elbowed for position in the debate over SALT II Friday as the Senate completed business and began its August recess.

Twelve senators signed a letter to President Carter advising him that they were "gravely concerned" over attempts by some colleagues "to tie arms procurement to arms control" by holding SALT II "hostage" to increased defense spending.

Linkage between approving SALT and spending more on arms — an idea proposed by several key senators — is "an unacceptable price to pay," these senators wrote.

Most of the signers were liberal Democrats, but they were joined by Larry S. Pressler, R-S.D., and Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn.

At the other end of the spectrum, a sharp critic of the treaty, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., called a news conference to denounce talk of linking SALT and spending as "a charade which seriously jeopardizes our country."

Hollings charged that "senators see a political way out of their dilemma by saying they will vote for defense later if they can vote for SALT now." In fact, he said, senators aren't really ready to raise defense spending. He noted that on Thursday the Senate Budget Committee voted against a proposal to meet the Carter administration's commitment to raise defense spending in real terms by 3 percent next year.

Hollings promised to introduce an amendment to the budget resolution next month that would add $2.6 billion in defense outlays to meet that 3 percent target.

"Even Italy's got the 3 percent," Hollings said in an interview. "Canada's up to 4.8 percent. France... is over 6 percent."

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter welcomed the debate over defense commitments and SALT II as "healthy and constructive," but that Carter could not "make defense decisions in terms of trading for votes" on the treaty.

In another development, the chairman and the ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Frank Church, D-Idaho, and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., announced they would jointly introduce a package of alterations to the treaty.

They released these recommendations Friday at a news conference whose contents were "embargoed" for publication on Sunday. The Washington Post chose not to accept these ground rules and obtained information on the Church-Javits proposals from other sources.

The two senators suggested that the Senate amend its "resolution of ratification" to SALT II to add the following:

—A reservation declaring legally binding the oral Soviet pledge given at the Vienna summit meeting to restrict production of the controversial Backfire bomber to 30 planes per year.

—An understanding that the United States retains the right to give its allies "nuclear and conventional weapons required for their common defense" under SALT II.

—An understanding that the protocol to the treaty, which limits U.S. cruise missile deployment, cannot be extended beyond its expiration at the end of 1981 without a two-thirds vote of the Senate.

As Church and Javits pointed out, these are "consensus" proposals that have already gained wide approval in the Senate. All of them were proposed by Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., on the second day of SALT hearings.

Biden Friday announced his support for the treaty, rejecting what he called the "mindless machismo" of hardline treaty critics and warning against "a symbolic strategic splurge" as the price for the treaty.

COME IN NOW AND MAKE A DEAL ON A JEEP CHEROKEE CHIEF!

We admit it! We're overstocked, and we have to make way for 1980. But our misfortune is your good fortune. Now's your chance to pick up a Cherokee Chief for a ridiculously low price. But you have to hurry, this sale will end when our supply runs out. Remember, the Chief has better ground clearance than the Blazer and Bronco. And gives you an integrated steel roof standard, which you can't even get on the competition. So don't let this opportunity to get this rugged, great looking vehicle at unprecedented savings. Come in today!
