Some of Midland's top executives may have been missing from their desks recently, but it's all for a good cause.

United Way has a "loaned executive" program in which local businessmen help solicit businesses for the annual drive. Bill Modisett's story on loaned executives appears on Page 11A in today's issue of The Reporter-Telegram.

Fiscal cutbacks may mean the end of programs designed to teach children how to avoid being victims of crimes.

"The prop just stopped dead — there was no indication anything was wrong. All at once it just stopped," said 45-year-old pilot John Dittmer on Saturday.

Resting on his back in the cab of a pickup, Dittmer, 1210 W. Louisiana Ave., dabbed at a cut on his forehead. In the weeds nearby, wings torn off, propeller splintered and broken, lay the one-piece plane Dittmer had crash landed minutes earlier on the southeast corner of A Street and Wadley Avenue.

Four years in the making, the $5,000 plane was the second of its design to be built. The original, constructed by its designer, Leon Davis of Stanton, had set a world endurance record for small experimental aircraft three years earlier, one of the owners of the plane commented later. "We really didn't intend to take off this morning," said Bob Lutker, 50, one of the three men in the partnership which had the plane built.

In fact, said Lutker, the plane had never been flown before the unplanned Saturday flight. The morning had been spent making practice taxi runs down the runway at Midland Air Park, said Lutker.

"When the plane lifted off, there just wasn't enough runway left to land," Lutker explained.

Passing over Wadley Avenue about 12:45 p.m., Dittmer flew south, avoiding the houses that cluttered the landscape below, the pilot recounted.

A 90-degree turn headed the aluminum-skin aircraft east, and a second turn directed the unexpected flight north — back toward the airport.

As he made the second 90-degree turn, explained Dittmer, the engine stopped.

"I glided a couple of blocks, buried the nose to try and keep the glide speed up, but it just kept coming down," said the pilot.

"I was afraid I was going to hit the roadway (Wadley Avenue)," Dittmer added.

Lutker, 2204 W. Wadley Ave., and the third member of the airplane partnership, Herb Strum, 67, 3117 Thomas Ave., watched from the airport as the ill-fated flight nosed toward the ground.

"We saw it start down, and then it disappeared into a housing area," said Lutker.

"I was afraid he was going to hit the houses," said Lutker.

Water projects big part of bond issue

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Two projects included in the city of Midland's $16.83 million bond election Sept. 4 add up to almost half the bond figure, but don't actually require voter approval, say city officials.

Expansions to the water treatment plant and the city's water system are estimated to cost $7.8 million — $3.6 million for the treatment plant and $4.2 million for the water system.

Each project in the bond issue will be voted on separately.

The proposal for expanding the water supply includes drilling five additional wells in the Paul Davis Well Field north of Midland, expanding the gathering system to connect these wells, installing a booster pump to handle the increased load, replacing the control system and building a pipeline to connect McMillen Well Field northwest of Midland to Paul Davis.

When completed, these additions should supply the city's needs through 1990, said John Lowe, director of public utilities.

McMILLEN WELL FIELD was drilled in the early 1950s, and the reservoir there had been depleted by 1963, said Lowe. At that point, the water supply was switched to the director said.

The present transmission line's capacity could easily go up to 27 mgd, instead of installing another line. "Duplicating that line would be about $40 a foot, and there's about 140,000 feet," said Lowe.

A booster pump station about midway between the well site and Mid-

Paul Davis Well Field which has been in operation since 1958. The last expansion made to it was in 1962 to give the city a maximum capacity of 19 million gallons of water per day, according to Lowe.

Drilling the new wells would up the capacity to 27 million gallons per day, land would give the added power to pump the water into Midland, he added.

The control system in the central pump station was installed in 1958 and now is outdated, according to Lowe.

"The manufacturer has been out of business 15 years," Lowe said, making it difficult to get replacement parts for the machinery.

Although McMillen has not been used as a water supply, it has served as a gigantic storage tank for water to be used during the summer when usage increases, according to Lowe. The facility can hold 500 million gallons of water.

AN INTERCONNECTING line between McMillen and Paul Davis could keep McMillen stored to capacity with little effort, he said.

"This (line) would allow us to recharge McMillen in the winter months. You can't build a storage tank of this size (McMillen) for that small amount of money." Cost of the line is estimated at $250,000, he said.

When filled, 5 to 10 million gallons of water could be taken out each day in the summer during high peak usage, instead of having to drawing the maximum from the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

U.S. holds Soviet craft at airport

NEW YORK (AP) — A Soviet jet remained grounded Saturday, more than 29 hours after it was to have flown to Moscow, as U.S. officials refused to let it go because they were uncertain the wife of Bolshoi Ballet defector Alexander Godunov was leaving of her own free will.

The Soviet Union protested the action. The official Soviet news agency Tass said the United States was making the woman, ballerina Ludmilla Vlasova, "an object of new provocative actions."

Sixty-eight passengers remained aboard the Aeroflot airliner, which late Saturday night was still parked at a Pan American World Airways gate at John F. Kennedy International Airport.

The jet was to have left at 5 p.m. Friday, with 112 passengers. Forty-four American passengers were allowed off after 10½ hours, but witnesses said the remaining 68 — all Soviet citizens — were asked to stay on board. Food was taken to those who remained on the plane.

The U.S. government was insisting that ballerina Ludmilla Vlasova leave the plane and assure them personally that the decision to return to Moscow after her husband's defection was her own.

The chief U.S. negotiator at the airport, Donald McHenry, told reporters early Saturday evening. "We don't intend to change our position. We will continue to pursue our objective," which was to talk to the woman in a "non-coercive environment" off the plane.

His Soviet counterpart, Evgeny Makeyev, said, however: "She's not getting off the plane because she doesn't like the way she's being treated by Immigration" officials.

Makeyev said the situation was "ridiculous. This is a good example of how you (U.S.) interpret the so-called human rights. She doesn't want to stay in the United States."

One of the Americans who left the plane, Judi LeMond, of Indianapolis, said Miss Vlasova was friendly with the Americans on board and smiled and winked at them as she walked by.

"I don't know of any city that could have this flexibility — to be able to turn on a well field and get extra water in the summer," Lowe said.

He pointed out another advantage to utilizing McMillen. "If for some reason we ever lost CRMWD, we could get 27 mgd from Paul Davis and 5 mgd from McMillen to provide the city's needs."

During peak usage this summer, the city has used as much as 27 million gallons in one day, according to Lowe. Last summer, the usage went over 30 mgd for several days.

If McMillen was abandoned, Lowe said it would mean a loss of about $2.5 million in equipment.

And there remains a long life expectancy from Paul Davis. When tapped in 1958, it had 400,000 acre feet of water. Lowe estimated there is still 300,000 acre feet remaining.

Shattered policy

LOS ANGELES — Andrew Young was not fired from his job as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations because he is black. He was fired because he interfered in a very delicate area of American foreign policy, and then lied about it. Besides, he goofed.

In the aftermath of his meddling, this nation's foreign policy in the Mideast is a shambles. All of the beneficial results of the Camp David summit are threatened and may go down the tube. The moderate Arab states are looking at us with puzzlement wondering what we will do next, as our president cruises down the Mississippi on the Delta Queen, using taxpayers' funds as he pre-campaigns for the 1980 nomination.

Young, of course, has pleaded with black leaders not to let his dismissal polarize the black community into a camp against the Israelis and against the Carter administration, but he is too late. He should have thought of that when he was big-mouthing around the U.N. He's like the little boy who set fire to the barn and then prayed it wouldn't burn down.

In the first place, most blacks know that Andrew Young's color had nothing to do with his ouster. Second, this sudden militancy dramatically proves that Young was considered to be serving Black America more than he was serving all Americans. It confirms the suspicion that he let his race govern his thinking when he dealt with the issue of Rhodesia.

Why should we have a lawsuit regarding illegal aliens in connection with education? If a person is in the United States illegally, should he not be sent back to his own country? — Mayme K. Martin

We are newcomers to West Texas and would like to know how and why illegal, undocumented aliens are permitted to stay in this state, let alone, to file suit through our courts for free education for their children.

Why aren't the immigration officials notified of their "illegal" status and have them sent back to their own country? — M.D.

ANSWER: According to the civil action suit filed June 26, 1979, in U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas, Midland-Odessa Division, against the Ector County Independent School District, the plaintiffs (illegal aliens) are permitted by the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution to file a suit.

The suit document states "Plaintiffs are undocumented aliens and fear reprisal from whatever source and, but for the issuing of a protective order protecting the identity of the plaintiffs, they would not be able to avail themselves of due process of law."

The document goes on to state that "The named Plaintiffs are suing herein under pseudonyms because they fear that they may subject themselves by being clearly identified, to being reported to the U.S. Immigration Service for possible deportation or other legal proceedings being brought against them or their families. The named Plaintiffs sue herein on behalf of themselves and on behalf of the class of individuals similarly situated."

Beginning in December 1978, R-T Staff Writer Guy Sullivan did a series of articles on the problem of illegal, or undocumented aliens, and their impact on the Permian Basin.

Agent Buryl Williams of the U.S. Border Patrol's Big Spring station, stated then that for every alien he and fellow agents apprehend and return to Mexico,

"there must be 100 to 500 to find."

As far as spotting illegal aliens, Williams said, "It's nearly impossible. We find a lot of counterfeit visas (permanent resident cards) and other altered documents such as birth certificates and even Selective Service cards." He went on to say that the counterfeit document business appears to be booming.

But, we'll return to the case of the undocumented aliens in Ector County, who obviously have been successful in avoiding deportation. In suing the school district, legally they are permitted to file such a suit under the 14th Amendment and in the process be protected from having their identities revealed.

Is there a place in Midland which purchases old magazines? — Mrs. C.E.T.

ANSWER: Yes, the company which recycles newspapers, also purchases old magazines. This is B&D Manufacturing Co., 3101 W. Front St. The only requirement is that you have the magazines separated and bundled from any other paper you might have.

ATTENTION MRS. G.C.: An Answer Line reader responds to your request for the recipe for the original "Artillery Punch."

Jim Hoover of Midland found this recipe, actually entitled "Artillery Punch," in a 1945 edition of "Calvert's Party Encyclopedia." He has tried it and finds it "delicious."

The recipe calls for one quart Calvert's extra, one-half pint gin, one-half pint brandy, one and one-half ounces Claristone or Benedictine, one bottle red wine, one pint dark rum, one quart strong tea, one pint orange juice and one and one-half pints lemon juice.

Combine ingredients in large punch bowl; add block of ice, sugar for sweetness, if desired. Decorate with lemon peel and serve in punch cups. Makes 25-30 cups.

Program helps deal with 'dirty old man'

By MIKE SLATON
Staff Writer

The "dirty old man" mumbling and shuffling around the playground in his wrinkled overcoat — a comic character that has provided many a laugh. His real life counterpart is not nearly as funny — especially for a 7-year-old child.

In the past two years the Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department has presented an educational program in Midland elementary schools designed to help children deal with the "dirty old man." The program is called "The Dangerous Stranger."

But the Dangerous Stranger program faces possible cutbacks in the 1979-80 city budget. According to two officers with the Crime Prevention Unit, the Dangerous Stranger program and other programs directed towards elementary school children, may be eliminated primarily because of lack of manpower.

Dangerous Stranger program started with the 1977-78 school year and was presented at four of Midland's public schools, the officers said.

WITH HELP FROM two parents, the program was expanded to seven of the 19 public elementary schools in Midland last year, according to the officers.

Presented in conjunction with Helping Hands, also an endangered program, Dangerous Stranger stresses such things as not speaking with strangers and not taking rides or candy from strangers.

Helping Hands is a program that has been developed through the Parent-Teacher Association at each school, explained the Crime Prevention Unit officers.

The program involves parents, they added. It attempts to provide a neighborhood network of "helping hands" — parents who keep a picture of a red hand in the windows of their home to give children a place to go if they are in trouble.

The police department is involved with the Helping Hands program to the extent of helping various PTA's set up the program, said the officers.

In April, as part of the police department budget proposal, the Crime Prevention Unit asked for two additional men and other support equipment.

THE PROPOSAL subsequently was turned down by the city manager's office, according to the officers.

Had the budget been granted according to the proposal, it would have continued the three present programs.

These programs are Home Security Surveys, Drug Education with Teen Challenge and Helping Hands-Dangerous Stranger.

The proposal also outlined four new programs for which implementation plans, literature and films are ready, according to the officers.

The programs, designed for elementary schools, include lessons on vandalism, shoplifting, babysitting and the extension of the Dangerous Stranger and Helping Hands programs from seven to all 19 elementary schools in Midland, according to the budget proposal.

The officers contended that adding one person to the Crime Prevention Unit's staff would enable the department to continue the present programs and open the way for adding some others.

Midland youth critically injured in fall from truck

ODESSA — A 15-year-old Midland youth was listed in critical condition late Saturday in Odessa's Medical Center Hospital after falling out of a furniture delivery truck here Friday afternoon.

Gary S. Rohre underwent surgery Friday night for head injuries received in the accident about 3:45 p.m.

Rohre was a passenger in a 1979-model van driven by Stewart Russell Glenn of Midland. Stewart told police he had slowed the van to retrieve a loose receipt when Rohre apparently slipped off the seat and fell out of the vehicle, striking his head on the pavement. The van had no doors, police said.

Without the additional staff, the two officers said, only the drug program and the home security surveys are assured of being continued.

As for the Helping Hands-Dangerous Stranger program, said the officers, "We are going to try to continue the program, but we can't commit ourselves."

Patty DeFrance, president of the City Council PTA, said the possible consequences of the budget refusal was disappointing.

"FROM A MOTHER'S and a PTA standpoint, I hate to see the loss of their (the Crime Prevention Unit's) services," she said.

Pease Elementary school principal Mammie Williams echoed Mrs. DeFrance's opinion, saying the school system benefits from the Crime Prevention Unit's programs.

"It would be an injustice if they (the programs) were cut," the principal said.

In explaining the decision to refuse the budget proposed by the Crime Prevention Unit, Assistant City Manager Fred Poesaid the cut was a "matter of economics."

"It comes down to evaluating everything and deciding the areas in which you want to put a specific emphasis," said Poe.

The Crime Prevention Unit budget was considered along with requests for new personnel by all city offices, explained Poe.

"It is a matter of deciding where the economic line is," said Poe. "It is a matter of deciding what the people want and what they are willing to pay for.

"The decision (to turn down the budget request) was not an easy one," he said.

The budget for 1979-1980 will be before Midland City Council in a public hearing at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

BUYING AN OLDER HOME

People buy older homes for many reasons. Median prices of older homes are 10-15% less than the price of new homes, such homes are in established neighborhoods, they tend to be more spacious, the landscaping is mature, and the taxes are apt to be lower. Also there are a lot more older homes on the market for sale than new ones which gives you a larger field to choose from. (Last year, three times as many older homes were sold than new ones.)

Here are a few older-home hunting tips. First determine what kind of neighborhood you want to live in. What kind of house does your family want. How many rooms-one story, split level, etc. Are you willing to do any renovation if the house needs it? How much can you make as a down payment? What kind of monthly payment can you afford?

Now find a Realtor who serves the area you're interested in. He or she has many listings at his fingertips. He'll show you listings of the homes that meet your standards and then make appointments to visit them.

Recent price cuts may signal break, 'beginning of the end'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The series of new price cuts that shoppers are enjoying could signal a break in the inflationary spiral that people have been waiting for, a Carter administration economist says. But other economists aren't so optimistic.

The spate of price reductions might mark "the beginning of the end" by triggering even more reductions, said the administration analyst, who asked not to be identified.

"But it is too soon to tell if this is it," he added quickly in commenting on cuts announced last week by two nationwide restaurant chains, the nation's No. 2 automaker and a car rental company.

Other economists in and out of government cautioned against viewing the reductions as a definite trend. They said there actually had been few price cuts. And they said special market factors — such as an oversupply of new cars — may have played a part.

The analysts did agree, however, that the price changes are in the right direction — down — and that they can only help the psyche of an inflation-weary nation.

Some economists believe they may do more than that. Robert Gough, a chief economist at Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass., talked specifically of the decision by McDonald's Corp. to lower prices on hamburgers and cheeseburgers by a nickel.

"I think they are doing something to show that, here is a big American corporation trying to make a contribution by extending a price cut," Gough said. But he also noted that most economists are predicting that the oncoming recession likely will not help reduce inflation as much as past recessions.

"But if companies follow the example of McDonald's, we (economists) could be proved wrong, and that would be great," Gough said. The decreases will translate into millions of dollars in savings for consumers. The impact will be even greater if the cuts underline the psychological expectations that economists say have helped fuel inflation.

George Eads, a member of President Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, pointed out that all of the companies that announced price cuts last week have something to gain from the move.

Revolution on horizon

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — This little Central American nation, with a 47-year tradition of military rule and a growing far-left opposition, appears polarized beyond the talking point. Fears are widespread that a revolution is on the horizon.

"There are plenty of moderates around, but they aren't well organized," said one Western diplomat. "Everyone is sucked up in this thing."

Public hearing set Tuesday for proposed school budget

A formal public hearing on the proposed $28.4 million budget for the Midland Independent School District will be held Tuesday during the regular meeting of the Midland school trustees.

The 1:30 p.m. meeting will be in the board room of the school administration office, 702 N. N St. In addition to the public hearing and adoption of the budget, trustees are scheduled to hear a report on achievement test scores for the district broken down by ethnic groups and consider items for a proposed bond election.

Trustees have already set next year's school tax rate at $1.26 per $100 valuation, a six-cent increase over the current year's rate.

They are expected to approve without much change the budget which trustees and staff members have been working on most of the summer, but must hold the public hearing on the matter before they can formally adopt the plan.

The report of the California Achievement Tests results broken down by ethnic groups should stir some interest on the board.

A report this year on an earlier set of tests showed minority students as a group scored far below Anglo students in the district.

After hearing the earlier report, the board made improving those scores a top priority item in the five-year accreditation plan they are writing now.

A report on items to be included in the proposed school bond election may be given by the trustee committee that has been working on the matter.

The election is expected to be called for sometime in October, but most trustees admit to being worried about passing any bond issue this year.

Other items on the agenda include hearing appeals of transfer requests, accepting a gift for the bus plus program in the Bowie-Jones-Milam cluster and approving final amendments to the 1978-79 budget.

Texas State Department of Public Highways and Transportation employee Jose Correa, 47, 305 Cloud Ave., tightens one of the bolts on the 25 yield signs that were erected Thursday and Friday on ramps entering Interstate 20. (Staff Photo)

Right of way law for frontage roads changes

The right of way law for Texas freeway frontage roads will change Monday. Ignoring that change could literally become a matter of life and death, according to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Passed in the recent session of the Texas Legislature, the new law provides that frontage road traffic shall yield right of way to traffic entering on an on-ramp or leaving an off-ramp on controlled access highways.

The new law is especially critical in the Midland-Odessa area, said Charles R. Muery, district six public affairs officer for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation in Odessa.

In this area the frontage roads for Interstate 20, the only highway in the area affected by the change, carry traffic in both directions, said Muery.

Because of this, ramp traffic entering and leaving the freeway crosses opposing streams of traffic on the frontage road, he said.

Many ramps on Texas highways already are arranged to accommodate the new law, according to the highway department.

In those areas "yield" and other signs are in place for the change in right of way.

In other areas, such as Midland-Odessa, the signs were arranged to require the ramp traffic to yield, said Muery.

In this area, he added, almost 300 signs were erected Thursday and Friday.

The cost of the change was about $30,000, he said.

Most of the ramps on I-20 are affected by the change, said Muery.

"The wise motorist should be alert for any changes in signs on the frontage roads he may drive regularly and should be aware that all ramp traffic will legally have the right of way over frontage road traffic," he said.

"He should also be aware when using freeway ramps that other drivers may not be aware of this law change and may overlook the new signs," he added.

Slight chance for more rain in forecast

Thunderstorms which dauntingly teased West Texas and then blasted away with crop-damaging hail and wind-driven rain last week may reappear again tonight and Monday.

That's the caution from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Probability of rumbling thunderclouds forming in the Midland area and letting loose with rain and hail is 20 percent, said a weatherman.

The high temperature today and Monday is to be in the low 90s; low tonight is to be in the low 60s.

Winds are to be southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph today and tonight.

Skies over much of West Texas were fair Saturday, and the weather service in Midland reported only a trace of rainfall since midnight Friday. Precipitation so far this year is 12.18 inches.

Rainfall so far this month is 2.15 inches.

Saturday's high temperature reading was 88 degrees, far cooler than the record high of 103 degrees for Aug. 25 set in 1936. The record low for Aug. 26 is 56 degrees set in 1966. Saturday's overnight low was 60 degrees.

The water treatment plant is handling up to 5.5 million gallons of sewage a day, near its capacity of 6 million gallons. A $3.6 million addition in the city's $16.83 million bond issue would expand the plant, making it capable of handling Midland's sewage to the year 2000. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

Water projects big part of Sept. bond issue

The sewage plant — was designed to handle Midland's needs until 1983. But that day is only about three years away, and the plant already is experiencing some difficulty in handling the load, said Lowe.

The plant was constructed to handle up to six million gallons per day; it now is processing about 5.5 million gallons a day, he said.

The $3.6 MILLION proposed addition should handle the city's load up to the year 2000 with a 120,000 population, he said.

If passed in the bond issue, the director said work could begin on the addition in February or March with completion time estimated at 2 to 2½ years, bringing it in just under the 1983 deadline.

A permit for the addition already has been approved in Austin, and some engineering work has been completed.

"The handling of solids has been a problem," Lowe said. "But it should be eliminated in the expansion. We have a scheme to take care of it in a better way."

The new section has been described as "power intensive" and would save the city about $100,000 in power costs each year, Lowe estimated.

Although users will be paying the additional sewer costs, design of the new addition will help to hold down those costs, he said.

The city had an option of seeking federal funds to help pay part of the costs. But Lowe said it would take 11 years to get those funds and get the expansion built, putting it to 1990 before completion.

And with inflation, the city would still pay about $3.6 million as their share, even with federal aid, Lowe said.

This plant last was expanded in 1974 to include secondary effluent treatment to meet state discharge requirements.

THOSE REQUIREMENTS have been lessened this time with the approval of the city's amended permit, according to Lowe. Plans call for a land application technology which would utilize primary treated effluent used for irrigating crops to achieve the desired disposal of effluent, he said.

If the city does not get the expansion, it can cause problems with Austin and stunt the city's growth, he noted.

"That plant can handle a certain volume," Lowe said. "If it runs over, you are going to have problems with Austin."

"One way to stop the increased load is to stop tie-ins to the system. This means simply that people can not move here."

"Or there are alternates, like cutting back on flushing," he said with a smile.

Since money for both projects would come from revenue bonds, the city does not need the voter's approval, the Midland City Council was told recently.

"But you like to get the voter's approval on what you're doing," Lowe explained.

A 10 percent increase on water and sewer rates already has been approved by the council and should become effective with the start of the city's fiscal year Oct. 1.

Approval of the water and sewer projects would not affect those rates until about 1983, the council said.

Even so, Lowe maintained Midland still has low rates in comparison to similar cities.

And waiting is not going to lessen the cost, he said. "It's costing us $50,000 to $60,000 for every month we wait to get started (on the water treatment plant)."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Task force regroups to clean up more oil

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — With officials complaining that the multimillion dollar tourist business has already dropped as much as 60 percent, a task force Saturday regrouped to clean more oil from blackened Texas beaches in time for the Labor Day weekend.

In the latest onslaught from a runaway Mexican well, a thick, 6-foot-wide band of oil coated more than two miles of tourist beaches Friday at Port Aransas. Those same beaches were also hit last week when more than 50 miles of scenic Padre Island were stained.

And officials see no letup in South Texas anytime soon as a Mexican well that blew out in the Bay of Campeche continues to spew oil.

Tourist-dependent businesses at both ends of Padre Island have been crippled by the oil at what is traditionally a peak pre-Labor Day vacation time.

Coast Guard Capt. Roger Madson, commander of the task force, said Saturday that beefed-up cleanup crews will be used next week in an attempt to get the beaches clean in time for Labor Day.

EDITOR'S REPORT

who are fuming against the president and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and are calling upon the Jews to be more "sensitive" to black issues, are doing Mr. Young no good at all. They are muddying the waters at a time when they should be helping to settle them.

If I were Andy Young I'd be angered to think my people wanted me to stay in the administration as a token black man. President Carter hired Mr. Young because he thought he would be a good diplomat. It turns out that he wasn't, and the affair is nothing more than that.

The simple truth is that Mr. Young met secretly with delegates of the Palestinian Liberation Organization at the very time that the U.S. was conducting ultra-sensitive negotiations over Resolution 242 in the United Nations, the law that will recognize Israel's right to exist as a separate state. Then he denied having done so.

This is the same man whose utterances have shocked the western world. He has said:

- That Cuban armed forces were a stabilizing influence in Africa.
- That the United States has tens of thousands of political prisoners.
- That the Ayatollah Khomeini would one day be recognized as a saint.
- That the execution of hundreds of political prisoners in Iran was no different than the execution of a man in Florida's electric chair (a man who had been granted five years' worth of appeals).
- That two guerrilla leaders waging war on Rhodesia, one supported by the Cubans, the other by the Soviets, should be a part of the Zimbabwe Rhodesia government.

Andy Young, quite simply, did not turn out to be a good diplomat.

The Palestine problem will, I am confident, be settled one day, but as of now, we seem to be going about it

Mexico sharply criticized for refusal

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Mexico was sharply criticized Saturday for its refusal to accept technical help in containing the world's largest oil spill during a Texas House Committee hearing on the environmental impact from runaway Mexican crude.

"One of the great tragedies of this oil spill is that the level of international cooperation in areas of science and technology has not been up to the level experienced (in other major spills)," Texas A&M Professor Roy Hann told the House Committee on Environmental Affairs.

"Many overtures were made by business and by government to provide technical assistance at the scene," said Hann, who added he would have been a member of a United Nations' team.

So far more than 2 million barrels of oil have spewed from an offshore well that blew out June 3 in the Bay of Campeche, 500 miles south of Brownsville.

Armed inmates take guards hostage

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A group of armed city jail inmates took three guards hostage at the city jail Saturday, then demanded the right to present their grievances over closed-circuit television.

Authorities said at first that Paul Dawkins, a reporter for KLAS-TV, had been selected by the inmates to receive their demands through the special two-way television exchange. But when Dawkins began dealing with the inmates, they decided they wanted someone else.

"They just would not talk to him after they got down there," police spokesman Lt. J.O. Smith said. He said the inmates asked, instead for a specific deputy public defender, but Smith declined to name him.

Little fanfare for Mondale's arrival

PEKING (AP) — Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping) greeted Vice President Walter Mondale, at the airport Saturday as he began a week-long visit, but there was little fanfare for the highest-ranking U.S. official to arrive here this year.

Mondale and his wife, Joan, were the guests of Foreign Minister Huang Hua at a private dinner Saturday night in Peking's Summer Palace, and planned to tour the city with their daughter on Sunday. Mondale and his wife were to be Deng's guests Sunday night at a banquet in the Great Hall of the People.

Maryland state police seek eight fugitives

JESSUP, Md. (AP) — Maryland state police stood guard Saturday at the last known addresses and favorite hangouts of the eight fugitives still missing in the mass escape by 30 prisoners from the House of Correction.

Within two days of the Wednesday night escape, police had returned 22 of the fugitives to the minimum-security facility here.

But the lapse in time also has made police believe that those still at-large have fled to the cities of Washington and Baltimore. Therefore, they have called off extensive ground and air searches.

"We're just using routine patrol now," said Sgt. Robert Ervin of the Glen Burnie barracks. "The feeling is they are no longer in the area. They are probably in the big cities by now."

The inmates escaped from a recreation room by sawing through a barred window, jumping to a roof and then to the ground.

Unwanted execution delay granted

CARSON CITY, Nevada (AP) — Convicted killer Jesse Bishop received an unwanted delay in his execution from a U.S. Supreme Court justice Saturday, but in a separate ruling the Nevada Pardons Board refused to commute his sentence.

The condemned man called the Supreme Court order a "farce" that was only "prolonging the suffering" for him and his family.

Justice William H. Rehnquist issued an indefinite stay in Washington and ordered the state to submit answers to a series of questions by midnight Tuesday, said Nevada Attorney General Richard Bryan. The death warrant expires at midnight Monday.

The announcement came as Bishop, with his hands and feet manacled, was meeting with the Pardons Board on another request to put off his execution in the gas chamber on Monday.

Broken stubs of what had been the propeller stuck from the nose of the plane as it faced a construction site about 500 feet away.

"It came in at about a 60- to 70-degree angle," said Dittmer. "That (angle of descent) would generally kill you."

Before the dust had cleared, Dittmer had unbuckled his shoulder harness and climbed out of the plane.

"There was evidently no danger of fire, but I got out immediately," said the pilot.

Dittmer walked away from the crash with a few cuts and a strained back. An ambulance was at the scene shortly after the crash, but Dittmer was not transported to hospital.

Instead, he rested in the cab of a pickup for a short time before curiosity apparently got the better of him. Along with his two partners, he began to inspect the wreckage of their handiwork.

As the crowd began to drift away, Dittmer, Lutker and Strum examined the scarred ground where the plane had landed.

Squatting over the marks, one of the group pointed to a spot parallel to and a few feet away from the flat, unobstructed area where the plane first touched down.

The silence was nearly audible as the three partners considered what might have happened had the plane hit that clump of weeds where a bright red fire blue was nestled.

It's a burp; It's a pain; No, it's—

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

It's enough to drive Midlanders to drink — but so potent that it may keep residents off the highway after imbibing too much.

It's more powerful than past laws prosecuting drunken drivers. It's more complex than most legislation.

And it is confusing more Texans than Jimmy Carter and the "national energy plan". "It" is Texas Senate Bill 844 which becomes effective Monday.

According to Midland County Attorney Leslie Acker, this bill could affect an average of 350 to 400 Midlanders who are charged each year with driving while intoxicated.

But the bill's language is so complex that the Department of Public Safety, most county court officials and even the bill's sponsor, State Sen. Gene Jones of Houston, are not exactly sure what the bill means.

In the final days of the 1979 State Legislature, SB 844 was approved hurriedly in the House without a record vote. As a result, very few lawmakers can interpret the bill.

Simply explained, SB 844, or the Adult Probation Law, can automatically suspend one's license when the driver has been convicted of driving while intoxicated, even though the court places the offender on probation, Acker explained.

In the past, the county attorney said, a Texas driver could plead guilty to a DWI charge, and the judge could fine the driver and place the offender on probation.

Probation for DWI ranges from six months to two years, according to the law.

If the drinking motorist didn't violate the probation, the judge often would drop the DWI conviction and not suspend the license, according to Acker.

The Adult Probation Law would eliminate this past practice, Acker contends.

But he, other county attorneys and the DPS are waiting for an opinion from Attorney General Mark White.

Chances are that the attorney general could make a ruling similar to Acker's explanation of SB 844, he said.

Whatever the attorney general's ruling may be, many drunk-driving Texans are not taking any chances on the bill's final interpretation.

Last week, the scales of justice in Dallas were overloaded with thousands of Dallas' citizens pleading guilty to DWI charges.

A Dallas County judge said he expected more than 2,000 defendants to beg the court's mercy Thursday and Friday for their inebriated driving habits. This rush for repentance isn't confined to the Dallas area when one considers that 80,000 Texans are arrested each year for DWI and 60,000 are convicted, according to an Austin DPS spokesman.

The spokesman said he doesn't expect all 60,000 persons to lose their licenses because the courts still have several other courses they can take to avoid final convictions for DWI.

"The courts can reduce the charge to a lesser offense," the spokesman said. "I think they will reduce them to public intoxication and fine (the offender) $200."

Persons convicted of public intoxication would not lose their licenses, he noted.

The other alternative is to defer judgment in the case. A defendant could be placed on unadjudicated probation and, if he does not violate the terms of his probation, a final conviction is never entered against him, according to Leslie Acker, Midland county attorney.

But not all is lost if one loses his or her driver's license under the new law. The court could grant an occupational license which allows a driver to operate a motor vehicle during certain business hours.

"It is going to take a while before anybody will know with certainty what SB 844 will mean," Acker said.

In the meantime, he who drives home drunk Saturday night could very well end up walking to work on Monday.

Self-examination should be regular

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been told that breast self-examination should be done monthly. When is it best to do this? — Mrs. C.L.F.

Dear Mrs. F.: Breast self-examination is best done about a week following the menstrual period, when breasts are not tender or swollen. After the menopause, breasts should be checked on the first day of each month.

Most breast cancers are found by the women themselves, and the earlier they are found and treated, the better the chance for cure. Bear in mind that most breast lumps do not signify cancer, but are strong indications that you should see your doctor for a diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor tells me there is no cure for arthritis but he will treat me for the condition. If there is no cure, what is the treatment for? — Ms. A.G.

Dear Ms. G.: The object of treating patients with arthritis is to make them more comfortable by relieving pain, reducing inflammation, preventing joint damage and deformities and keeping the joints movable. Treatment approaches thus may consist of bed rest, medication (aspirin is the treatment of choice to combat inflammation), exercise, heat and surgery, among others.

Patients suffering from arthritis should be on their guard against "cures" that are completely worthless. These include the use of copper bracelets, garlic, the drinking of apple cider vinegar and mineral baths.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Have the various educational programs, such as those dealing with the risks of smoking and obesity, affected the rate of heart attacks in this country? — Mr. R.S.

Dear Mr. S.: For the past 10 years there has been a decrease of about two percent per year — a total of 20 percent — in deaths from heart attacks in the United States. However, from 1940 to 1967 we experienced a 40 percent increase, so the rate is still higher at present than it was at the beginning of the 1940s.

Nevertheless, the downturn is encouraging. It is probably largely attributable to a reduction in the adult smoking rate, and lower fat intake and cholesterol levels, as well as better control of blood pressure.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Dope allegations against 'Ham' Jordan called 'false, sensational'

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials have labeled as "false and sensational" allegations that presidential aide Hamilton Jordan sniffed cocaine at a New York City night spot last year.

As required by the Ethics in Government Act, the Justice Department is conducting a preliminary investigation into the charges made by the owners of Studio 54, a popular discotheque.

Lawyers for owners Steve Rubell and Ian Schrager, both indicted on felony charges including tax evasion, told the Justice Department that Jordan visited the Studio 54 in April 1978 and used cocaine in a basement room.

"Mr. Jordan states flatly that the allegation is untrue," deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum said late Friday.

He said, "The allegation comes from persons indicted and awaiting trial for criminal tax evasion.

"These criminal defendants have a clear interest in making false and sensational charges in an effort to bargain for leniency."

The New York Times, which first reported the FBI inquiry into the charges, said Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti personally informed President Carter of the investigation.

The newspaper said that in a "series of interviews," it could find no one to back up Rubell and Schrager's story.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Adamson noted that the Ethics in Government Act requires the attorney general to order a preliminary inquiry whenever serious allegations are made against top government officials.

Rubell and Schrager also said that Jordan was accompanied to Studio 54 by White House press secretary Jody Powell.

Powell denies ever going there, and Jordan said he was there for about an hour in July or September 1978, but not in April.

"I remember going there sort of as a spectator sport and having a drink," Jordan said.

Granum said Jordan denies using cocaine at Studio 54 or anywhere else.

The club was raided by federal agents on Dec. 14, 1978, and owners Rubell and Schrager were indicted on tax evasion, conspiracy and obstruction of justice charges on June 28.

The Times quoted Justice Department officials in New York as being dubious about the quality of the information backing up the charges. If the charges are motivated by hopes of reduced charges for Rubell and Schrager, "no deal will be made," one official told the paper.

Disco raid bags 99

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ninety-nine persons were arrested or cited early Saturday when police raided an after-hours private disco club which authorities said featured music, drugs and gambling.

Sgt. Greg Corrales said an estimated 200 persons were in Kelsey's Disco key club in the Bayview District when 30 police officers arrived at 3 a.m. But about half of them escaped by scrambling out windows and every available exit.

Corrales said the club's operator, Willie Kelsey Sr., 58, was booked for investigation of keeping a gambling house, possessing narcotics for sale and possessing stolen property.

Forty-five occupants were booked for investigation of visiting an establishment where gambling occurred and where narcotics were used. Fifty-three others were cited and released.

Police reported seven guns, and numerous knives and razors were found on the floor. Authorities said they also confiscated quantities of suspected cocaine, PCP and other dangerous drugs.

FARM-RANCH ROUNDUP

Midland County Farm-and-Ranch Tour to include catfish farm

The annual Farm-and-Ranch Tour of Midland County will get under way shortly after dawn Tuesday, when many Midlanders will be beginning their work day in air-conditioned offices.

On tap will be tours of a catfish farm, poultry outfit, cotton fields, pasture grasses, pecan orchard, vineyard and an alfalfa operation.

The six-stop bus tour will highlight Midland County's $13-million farming and ranching business, which, next to oil and gas, is Midland's second largest industry, said Charlie Welch. He is chairman of the farm and ranch committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the tour.

Tour in Dawson County too

LAMESA — Cotton farmers and businessmen in Dawson County will be in a caravan Thursday afternoon when they will drive along and walk into cotton patches in the annual Dawson County Farm Tour.

The tour, which begins at 1 p.m. Thursday at Forrest Park Community Center, is being sponsored by the Dawson County Sub-Committee on Crops, according to Joe E. Wise, county extension agent. Bob Hale is chairman of the sub-committee.

Conservation workshop at Sul Ross

ALPINE — Subjects ranging from poisonous plants to water quality were discussed in the recent annual Environmental and Conservation Workshop on the Sul Ross State University campus here.

Midlanders participating in the workshop, which included tours to Big Bend National Park, Black Gap Wildlife Area and grassland management research areas, were Louise Goode, Karl Kitto, Ernie Johnson and Tracy Chandler. Discussion included ideas for teaching conservation in schools.

Cotton projections good

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates for crop production in the United States through Aug. 15 project cotton production at 13.7 million bales, about 26 percent above the same levels in 1978.

The 90 percent "confidence interval" for cotton production ranges from 11.8 to 15.6 million bales.

Cotton suggestions sought

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The public has until Oct. 15 to submit recommendations on the 1980 Upland cotton and extra-long staple cotton programs to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Comments should be forwarded to USDA, ASCS, P.O. Box 2415 Washington, D.C., 20013.

DOE ignores captured Nazi plans for synthetic fuel plant

By ROB WOOD

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)—Texas A&M University scientists say they have found in captured Nazi German documents enough information to build a synthetic fuel plant soon, but the Department of Energy has shown no interest in the project.

For two years the scientists and researchers have pored over hundreds of thousands of pages searching for the answers to how the German war machine overcame the blockade that deprived it of all oil supplies.

Dr. Kurt Irgolic, head of the research project, said in a recent interview, "We have now the information to redesign one of those German synthetic fuel plants, with only a few changes necessary because of new technology learned since the end of World War II.

"WE BELIEVE the plant can produce fuel from coal at a price not much higher than what gasoline will cost soon. The plant can produce 30,000 to 50,000 barrels of liquid a day."

Irgolic said the scientists had asked the Department of Energy for funds to hire more researchers so the job of checking the captured documents could be done quickly.

"But, the department turned us down and said they knew all about the German documents. Maybe they know of documents, but there is no way they could have done the study of the material we have accomplished. With additional funds we could cut the time of research by several years," he said.

"IT IS UNWISE to ignore the knowledge the Germans accumulated. Do you realize that from 1938 to 1945 they produced 130 million barrels of synthetic fuel."

The documents, Irgolic said, contain detailed information on the action of catalytic agents, the development of gas generators that were fitted to vehicles, the coal liquefaction process and the blue-prints for constructing the plants.

The 400,000 documents were captured at the end of World War II and years later Texas A&M received permission from the federal government to probe the tons of material in an effort to solve an energy problem that has been growing year by year.

THE DOCUMENTS were stored in various vaults around the United States and in England.

Irgolic said, "Seventy percent of the German war effort was powered by synthetic fuel and much of it was made from virtually the same type of coal that is found in major deposits in Texas and other parts of the country."

Expressing some impatience with the federal government, Irgolic said, "If we are really serious about making synthetic fuels in a relatively short time, then here may be the answer. There is really no time to wait. If the United States wants synthetic fuel, then take this plan for one of the most successful German plants and redesign it with modern know-how."

HOUSTON: know-how." The blueprints now available, Irgolic said, is much better than anything being done now.

"The urgency is now. It is a question of timing. If we had 20 years before we needed synthetic fuels, then we could take our time, but we seem to be in such an awful mess with imported oil, one should not pass the chance to seriously look into the possibility of using the German plans," he said.

IRGOLIC, a scientist at the A&M Center for Energy and Mineral Resources, said private companies now are reluctant "to put hard-earned money into something they cannot be sure of. Some have said it will take seven to eight, maybe 10 years, before synthetic plants can be built.

"Use the plans we have and the time element will be much shorter." The A&M researchers say the Germans developed methods of using such things as sawdust and bark of trees to produce fuel.

If funds are available to hire more researchers, Irgolic said, the studies could be completed in perhaps three years. Otherwise "it will take us 10 years to go through all of the remaining documents."

LEs play vital role in success of United Way

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

LEs are important to Midland's United Way campaign — about $400,000 worth of importance.

LEs are "loaned executives," those individuals donated to the annual United Way campaign by companies and businesses that want to see the drive end on a successful note.

Those firms realize the importance of the agencies coming under the umbrella of the United Way, so they lend part of their expertise and experience to the drive.

Loaned executives — or LEs — are management individuals recruited by the local United Way agency from businesses and companies who assist the agency each year by contacting other firms to solicit contributions and to set up United Way contribution programs within the companies.

JAN WOOTEN, chairman of the pilot campaign for United Way and sales administration manager for Drilco Industrial, and Jim Patten, chairman of the United Way's industrial employees and office manager for Coquina Oil Corp., are former loaned executives who now serve the United Way in other capacities.

They're high on LEs. But then they realize the importance of the loaned executives program to the agency.

What would the local United Way agency be without LEs?

"I think they (the United Way) would be definitely 30 something percent less effective," remarked Patten.

"I think it's (the loaned executives program) a very integral part of the campaign itself," observed Ms. Wooten.

Loaned executives, they said, are selected from recommendations received from Midland businesses and the LE alumni association. The number of loaned executives chosen for a particular campaign may vary from year to year, depending on the number of new companies in Midland the agency needs to contact and the total number of businesses to be reached by each LE.

THIS YEAR THERE are 42 LEs, they said. Each of those will be contacting six to eight businesses or companies in Midland to talk about the importance of contributing to the United Way and to set up contribution programs.

What type of individual makes a good LE?

"We try to select people who are fairly strong in communication," said Ms. Wooten.

Patten added, "They have to be a civic-minded individual who believes in what the United Way supports."

The United Way wants loaned executives who are self-motivating and dependable, they said.

And the LEs have to be hard workers because days are long for them, said the duo.

The program for loaned executives actually starts after they are selected and their training begins. LEs are taught how to contact businesses and how to set up United Way contribution programs for those firms.

DURING THE PILOT campaign — held prior to the start of the general campaign — the LEs contact companies that have agreed to hold drives early "as pacesetters in the community," said Patten.

This process gives the LEs an opportunity to "get their feet wet" in the United Way campaign and to build confidence at meeting employees and employers.

After the LEs have learned the process, they make numerous calls on key people in companies and arrange to set up presentations to employees and to start contribution programs.

"He (the loaned executive) does a lot of calling before he's ever actually going into the businesses," noted Ms. Wooten.

Once meetings are arranged, the LEs determine whether a company wants them to handle the employee rally or whether the company wants to do it "in-house." After that is determined, the LE gets the appropriate equipment for the presentation or conducts the rally himself. He or she then establishes a time period during which contributions will be collected.

"From then on it's just pretty much a follow-up activity," noted Patten.

"It takes more time on the follow-up," added Ms. Wooten.

THE LOANED EXECUTIVES also usually prepare a recapitulation sheet following the campaign in which problem areas are discussed and suggestions are given for making the next year's campaign smoother and more successful.

Ms. Wooten and Patten agreed that the response to the United Way system of contributions has been good from companies and businesses.

That's because giving once to charitable organizations is simpler and more orderly than being contacted at numerous times throughout the year for contributions, they added.

"It saves them (companies) time, too," noted Ms. Wooten.

United Way collects contributions for 19 Midland agencies, they noted.

Loaned executives put a lot of time and effort into the campaign. Each person spends about 60 to 80 hours contacting and working with businesses and companies, the two said. LEs primarily work within the commerce and industry sector.

PATTEN NOTED, "The emphasis is on the firms, companies and organizations that have a fairly large employee pool."

But it pays off. Last year the loaned executives collected about $400,000 or about a third of the total campaign.

Getting LEs into the program for a second year also is important, they noted. Their experience and expertise makes for a smoother campaign. But this year there are only four loaned executives with prior LE experience, they said.

"It's to our advantage to have LEs returning not only for their experience but also their assistance in training new LEs," Ms. Wooten noted.

That training is completed now. It was held this week. Beginning Monday, the LEs will start their pilot program.

The general campaign kicks off Sept. 22 and report meetings are scheduled for Oct. 4, 11, 18, 25 and Nov. 1 and 8.

LEs will be working hard over the next couple of months, just like the other United Way volunteers.

But they can rest after Nov. 15. That's when the awards luncheon will be held at noon in Texas Electric Service Company's Reddy Room.

And odds are, partly because of the LEs, that awards luncheon will be a victorious one.

Jim Patten, standing, loaned executive coordinator for the United Way campaign this year, prepares some of this year's LEs for the campaign this week. From left are

What would the local United Way agency be without LEs?

"I think they (the United Way) would be definitely 30 something percent less effective," remarked (Jim) Patten.

"I think it's (the loaned executives program) a very integral part of the campaign itself," observed Ms. (Jan) Wooten.

Judge says Opec action one of most momentous cases in antitrust history

By CHARLES MAHER
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Some thought the antitrust suit against the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was an open-and-shut proposition, little more than a joke. But not the judge who decided the case in favor of the oil cartel.

"I'll be frank to say I was undecided half way through the arguments," U.S. District Judge A. Andrew Hauk said Friday. "I was still arguing with myself."

In an interview in chambers, Hauk said the suit "was perhaps one of the more momentous cases filed in the history of the antitrust laws because it put into issue whether a sovereign nation could be sued under the antitrust laws."

The answer, Hauk decided Thursday, was no. OPEC won the suit after an often-fascinating four-day trial that was made the more so by the judge who tried it.

ANDREW HAUK is a baldish, bespectacled character who is apt to interrupt proceedings to tell a story, toss off an aphorism or even say hello to a courtroom visitor.

Some lawyers, perhaps many, consider him a tyrant. But one New York attorney here for the OPEC trial called Hauk one of the most interesting judges he had seen in 20 years of practice.

And James H. Davis of Los Angeles, the lead lawyer on the losing side, said the day after the trial: "I thought he was, and still think he is, a fine judge."

The question in the OPEC suit, brought by the International Association of Machinists, was whether the 13 nations of the oil cartel had violated U.S. antitrust law by getting together to set the price of petroleum shipped to the United States.

But the defendants in the OPEC case were sovereign nations. And Hauk determined, among other things, that they could not be sued under the Sherman Antitrust Act.

THE FINAL argument had scarcely ended when Hauk ruled from the bench. He likes to do it that way. If he spends days ruminating about a decision, he said, parts of the case start to slip away from him.

As bizarre as the case may have seemed, the plaintiffs had a scheme that was at least arguably plausible. They wanted an injunction to prevent U.S. purchasers of OPEC oil from passing on to American consumers any increase in oil prices traceable to price-fixing agreements.

One scenario was that U.S. companies would then refuse to keep paying the high OPEC price and OPEC would perhaps stop shipments. But some OPEC nations would start hurting because they would need revenue from U.S. sales to complete many government projects. And, sooner or later, one OPEC member would agree to accept a lower price and the cartel would start to crumble.

The suit raised serious, close issues with which the judge was still grappling late on the fourth day of the case. And he admitted to being tempted to go the other way.

"There's always a temptation to say, 'I'll decide it the way it will shake the world,'" he said.

"I'll tell you this: I prayed the night before that I might make the right decision. And I think I did."

"I think it's much better to decide the case under the law. You can sleep better. If you decide because of the clamor of the day, because people hate OPEC, because they're mad about gasoline lines and because they have to pay so much, you're surrendering to the cries of the mob."

THAT'S THE serious side of Hauk. There is a decidedly more whimsical side.

One of his first acts at trial was to give the defendants a nickname: the Opeckers.

"My wife thinks it's a terrible name," he said.

Such offhand remarks, sometimes unrelated to the testimony or argument at hand, came frequently from the bench. Items:

"Every time you decide a case, you make a temporary friend and a permanent enemy."

"This guy (a witness) doesn't know from Shinola about any contracts for OPEC oil."

"They can call me mercurial. They can say I shoot from the hip. But I say decide the case. And then go home and sleep like a baby."

Hauk, appointed to the federal bench by President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1966, was once a lawyer for Union Oil Co. and for a time had stock in the company. The OPEC suit, if successful, could have had at least an indirect effect on American oil companies.

But lawyers for the plaintiffs considered the former oil company connection unimportant.

"I thought he would be fair," said Davis, the plaintiffs' lead counsel. "No one objected," said Richard I. Fine, a friend of the court on the union's side. "I didn't consider it relevant."

When it was finally over Hauk took off his robe ("my black onyx sack"), drove home bleary-eyed and went to bed. And, by his account, slept like a baby.

Panel wants five changes made in final rationing bill

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is taking its bid for broad standby gasoline rationing powers to a congressional conference committee.

The administration has delivered to the House-Senate panel a list of five key changes it would like to see included in the final rationing bill.

The panel will try to reconcile House and Senate differences and fashion a compromise bill once Congress returns in September from its summer recess.

Most of the administration proposals would scrap amendments added to the bill during House floor debate.

Leading the list is a provision that would allow major exemptions to the president's order that thermostats in commercial and public buildings be dialed up to 78 degrees in the summer and held to 65 degrees in the winter.

Would the president veto the bill if this provision is retained?

"It would certainly be considered," said Mary Ann Novak, who represented the Energy Department at a meeting with key congressional energy aides.

It was at this private session Thursday that the list of administration-sought modifications was presented.

Although nearly 20 changes were proposed, most were of a minor, technical nature.

However, participants at the meeting said Friday five of the administration proposals were substantive. In addition to the thermostat measure, these included:

—Elimination or reduction of a "trigger" that would prevent the president from ordering rationing unless there was a 20 percent oil shortage, or if a shortage of that proportion appeared imminent.

—A similar elimination or reduction in the requirement for a 10 percent shortage before the president could order lesser steps to deal with shortages.

—Dumping House amendments requiring that the government establish special set-asides of diesel fuel for farmers and heating oil for homes.

—Doing away with a provision in the legislation allowing either house of Congress, acting by itself, to veto any rationing plan the president tries to impose.

A leading Democrat on the panel said that while Congress might be able to accommodate Carter on the thermostat issue, other "conditions" set by the White House will be extremely hard to meet.

"We've advised them that we'll do what we can, but I don't see how we can give them what they say they must have," said the Democrat, who asked not to be identified by name.

The lawmaker said that what he sees as inflexibility on the part of the administration has gotten work on a compromise rationing proposal off to a rocky start. The House killed an earlier version of Carter's standby gas rationing proposal last May.

Although the president has said repeatedly that he has no intentions of imposing rationing, he has made the standby bill a major part of his new energy program.

Congressional energy experts say they see no way of mustering enough votes to eliminate or reduce the 20 percent shortage rationing "trigger" in the bill as the White House wants.

The trigger was put in to make sure rationing was imposed only in the gravest of shortages — like another Arab oil embargo.

Dave Finegan, a House energy staff aide, said some middle ground would likely be sought on the triggering mechanism.

One possibility is retention of the 20 percent level as a guidepost while giving the president greater flexibility in invoking rationing before a shortage reaches that magnitude, he said.

Port will help Texans 'keep what we've got'

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — The chairman of the Texas Deepwater Port Authority says a major objective of a state-owned offshore crude oil terminal south of Freeport will be to help Texas "keep what we've got."

Bob Casey, a former Houston congressman, said oil supplies moving through the $1.2 billion project will underwrite the health of the state's vast oil refining and chemical industry.

The terminal will not, Casey will not, be in competition with LOOP, a similar but privately-owned project now under construction off the Louisiana coast.

"What we're interested in is keeping what we've got and keeping plants from moving over to the LOOP area because of assured supplies and lower transportation costs," Casey said Tuesday.

The Texas authority had just voted tentative acceptance of a Department of Transportation license for a Freeport terminal capable of receiving up to 2.5 million barrels of foreign crude a day.

An engineer told the authority the terminal could be in operation the last half of 1982, a year earlier than most estimates, if all goes well.

"We will not be in competition with the owner-owned LOOP that is being built primarily to serve the Mississippi Valley," Casey said.

"Our objective is to service an area from Lake Charles, La., to as far south as Brownsville, particularly to Corpus Christi. And we've had inquiries from Oklahoma, depending on pipeline connections."

Casey acknowledged, however, there are reports the Mississippi Valley, because of LOOP "is taking over the limelight in refining and chemicals from us."

"The estimates of new plants LOOP has generated is astounding," he said.

Casey said LOOP's owners already have pledged that project's capacity while the Texas authority's immediate task is to negotiate agreements for oil companies to use the Freeport terminal.

Major prospects for signing such agreements were members of the Seadock consortium that spent $20 million in planning a Freeport terminal before closing shop last year because of what it termed onerous federal regulations.

Without such use agreements, the state authority cannot sell some $1.2 billion in revenue bonds and construction cannot start until the first bonds are sold.

Both Casey and Gerald Jackson, general manager of the authority, said use agreements totaling at least 1.4 million barrels a day are needed before the DOT license can be finalized.

Both are confident an authorized two-tier tariff arrangement will provide sufficient incentive.

Companies which sign the agreements will pay fees up to 25 percent cheaper than the rates "spot" customers will be charged.

Savings on transportation costs also offer a major incentive for using the offshore facility that will receive oil from supertankers unable to enter U.S. ports, Casey said.

He estimated savings of 8 to 10 cents a barrel over current lightering and transshipment operations.

A study financed by the port authority indicates even larger savings on the longrange.

Cost savings for lightering, with oil being transferred from large tankers to smaller tankers at sea, were projected to increase from 12 cents a barrel in 1984 to $1.40 by the year 2000.

For transshipments under which supertankers transfer cargoes to smaller vessels in Caribbean ports, the projected savings are 38 cents a barrel in 1984 and increasing to $2.50 by 2000.

Casey, who had been talking in terms of mid-1983, was surprised when Tom Hines, a Brown & Root Inc. engineer, said the Freeport facility could be in operation by the third quarter of 1982 if the first bonds are sold in the first quarter of 1980.

"That's faster than I've been telling everybody," Casey said. "I'm not complaining. I'm very pleased."

The DOT gave the Texas authority until May 15 to formally accept the license.

"We'll know long before then whether this vitally needed port is to be built," Casey said.

Big contract announced

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Atwood Oceanics Inc., of Houston, Texas, has signed a contract worth more than $7 million to drill three offshore oil wells in the Bay of Bengal, India Oil Ltd. announced today.

India Oil, jointly owned by Burma Oil of Britain and the Indian government, signed the contract Friday with Atwood President John Macan in New Delhi, Indian Oil Chairman C.R. Jagannathan said.

Under the contract, the drilling ship Chancellorsville will drill an exploratory well in the Mahanandi basin, about 30 miles off the coast of the Indian state of Orissa. Under the contract two other test wells also will be drilled, the company said.

Reed rig survey shows 11-unit Basin increase

Drilling activity in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico showed an increase of 11 operations from the last tally, as Reed Rock Bit Co., reported 275 rigs making hole in the two-state area.

The previous weeks survey showed 264 active rigs and a year ago at this time the Reed survey counted 283.

Lea County, N.M., the leader in drilling activity, reported an increase as 35 units were spotted making hole.

Eddy County gained one unit from the last count as 29 rigs were reported turning to the right.

Pecos County, the West Texas leader, reported 16 rigs going and a decrease of one from the previous count.

Andrews County reported a gain of three as 14 rigs were counted, while Ward County followed with 13.

Yoakum County was the scene of nine rigs, having gained two from the last count.

Complete drilling activity in the two-state area, as recorded on the Reed survey, is listed in the table below.

Chevron president takes swipes at energy plan

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Carter's latest energy proposals include mistakes that will lead America into serious energy problems in the next decade, the President of Chevron U.S.A., Inc., said.

Donald L. Bower told the Channel City Club here last week that while some of the president's program was praiseworthy, it must be corrected by the Congress, or it "will inevitably head this country into a serious energy supply gap during the 1980's — possibly worse than anything we have seen thus far."

A principal error, Bower said, was in setting an 8½ million barrels-per-day ceiling on crude oil imports.

"That limit for this year and next year will not be a problem because imports should continue below that number. But... that ceiling will cause a shortfall in the United States for at least two, three or four years, beginning in 1981 or '82. And possibly throughout the decade," Bower warned.

His company's economists, he said, estimate that the effect of such a shortfall could result in a slowing of the growth rate of the Gross National Product of .5 percent to 1 percent per year, which would have a significant effect on job opportunities.

"Our estimate is that by 1985 the U.S. will require at least 10 million barrels a day of imported oil to satisfy the requirements of the economy. That figure includes the assumption of good increases in coal production and use, as well as a successful conservation effort," he said.

"Where is this energy to come from if imports are held at 8½ million barrels per day?" he asked, and responded that the only place it can come from is increased production of conventional oil and gas.

The president, he said, has skirted or avoided mention of this. "He cannot seem to bring himself to utter the words, 'increase American oil production,'" Bower said.

He noted that the president has set a 1990 goal of additional import savings of 4½ million barrels daily of crude oil of which nearly half is synthetic fuels. "I doubt that such a level can be attained that quickly, given the long lead times involved and the many remaining obstacles," Bower said. He added that even if the 1990 goals can be reached, "the Administration apparently has made no plans for this energy gap of the '80's beyond asking for rationing power."

Bower said that in the first half of this year Chevron spent almost three dollars on capital and exploratory expenditures for every dollar it earned in profits over the next three years. Bowers called Carter's figure unrealistic for the task ahead, pointing out that the oil industry two weeks ago paid the Federal Government more than $1 billion in bonus money "just for the right to search for oil and gas on acreage in the Gulf of Mexico."

He praised President Carter, however, for repeatedly trying to persuade Congress and the American public "to face up to our energy peril."

Bower was critical of Congressional and public attitudes which prefer to think, "not of what to do about the facts of a shortage, but of conspiracy theories." A majority in Congress, he said, has for six years, "preferred to ignore increasingly urgent warnings and increasingly manifest warning signs — and to look the other way: To sidestep, to delay, to postpone construction action."

Shell starts line repair

WALNUT GROVE, Mo. (AP) — A Shell Oil Co. crew began work Saturday to repair an oil pipeline that burst open and spilled crude oil into a creek.

Authorities said Friday "thousands and thousands of gallons" of oil spilled into Asher Creek, although an exact estimate on how much oil was lost was not immediately available.

The Missouri Highway Patrol issued a warning to farmers in the area asking them to keep their livestock away from the creek and the Sac River, into which the creek empties.

Mort Parsons, Shell's district superintendent in Cushing, Okla., where the pipeline originates, said a crew had contained the spill in the creek by early today. He said the cleanup crew would clean up oil from around the pipeline today and inspect it to determine the extent of damage to the line.

Shell Oil Co. officials in Cushing, Okla., shut off the cross-country pipeline at a pump station, but oil continued to spurt from the 22-inch line several hours after the 7 p.m. break because of the distance from the rupture to the pump station.

New, unique Diaper Gymnastics! For tots 19 months to 3 years of age, this outstanding program was developed by Gilmore Williams, owner and director of Midland School of Gymnastics, while he was associated with Memphis State University. This instruction develops motor skills: coordination, physical integrity and controlling fear of falling, which can cause falling, even injury. Shown above is Nicole Williams, 2½ years, working out on the trampoline. Call for details at 682-7980.

Local school has baby gymnastics

Midland little people, 19 months to 3 years old, have an opportunity which is totally unique. Nowhere else in Texas can be found a program which teaches the rudiments of acrobatics and gymnastic skills to such small children. Classes will be held from 9-10 a.m. Monday and Wednesday for six weeks. Mothers will be instructed along with their babies, and will pass along the teaching so as to maintain a one-to-one ratio of teacher to student. Williams teaches through the mother until the child learns to respond to instruction from another. Williams also announces his European Acroport classes. This includes cheerleader stunts, trampoline, tumbling and Adagio stunts. (Partners, balancing and complementing each others' movements). Adagio (also known as "double stunts") leads into the building of today's most popular cheerleader pyramids. Worldwide competition now is held in European Acroport.

Gilmore Williams is very well-known in gymnastic circles. A member of the Advisory Board for the United States Sport of Acrobatic Federation, Williams wrote Gymnastics for Cheerleaders, setting today's standards. He has published two books and made a film on Cheerleader Gymnastics. If you, too, wish to give your child the advantages of fine physical training, call Midland School of Gymnastics, 2817 Industrial, phone 682-7980.

Profits for Sears down; K-mart's up

CHICAGO (AP) — Sears, Roebuck and Co. reported a 3.6 percent decline in profits in the second quarter while K-mart, another retailing giant, posted a 10.6 percent increase.

Sears, the nation's largest retailer, said net income was $193.6 million or 60 cents per share, compared with $200.8 million or 63 cents per share in the same 1978 period. Sales were $4.25 billion compared with $4.49 billion in the year-earlier period.

Sears began a deliberate scaling down of its promotion program about one year ago to cut costs, but the move also has dampened its profitability in the last two quarters. Spokesman Earnest Arms said Sears was adjusting its strategy and has begun to increase its promotions somewhat again.

Meanwhile, K-mart, based in Troy, Mich., noted somewhat slower second-quarter sales in women's wear, automotive and camera departments and said it was adjusting its merchandising plans for the remainder of the year in "anticipation of a less buoyant economy."

K-mart's net income was $89.7 million or 71 cents per share, compared with $81.1 million or 65 cents per share in the year-earlier quarter.

Second-quarter sales reached $3.038 billion, compared with $2.77 billion in the second quarter of 1978.

Saks will open Dallas office

DALLAS (AP) — Saks Fifth Avenue, based in New York, and Marshall Field & Co., based in Chicago, will enter the Dallas market through a $135 million office, hotel and retail center scheduled to open in north Dallas in the summer of 1982.

The two companies announced Thursday they have signed letters of intent to be anchor tenants in the new complex, which is planned for 42 acres at the northeast intersection of Dallas Parkway and the LBJ Freeway.

The center will be called The Galleria. Gerald D. Hines Interests, a Houston-based development firm which built the Houston Galleria, will develop the Dallas Galleria also.

Saks will have a 120,000-square-foot store on three levels. Field's will have a 200,000-square-foot store.

The center also is to have three office towers of about 400,000 square feet, a luxury hotel of between 400 to 500 rooms, an athletic club and recreational facilities. The center will have about 300,000 square feet of smaller space in an enclosed mall.

Officials estimate construction will begin in about a year.

Detroit Edison workers to get $10,000 each

Detroit Edison employees will receive $10,000 each in settlements ending an 8-year-old class-action, racial discrimination lawsuit, attorneys for the plaintiffs say.

The $4.5 million consent judgment Thursday was "the largest per capita employment discrimination judgment in U.S. history," said Howard L. Simon, Michigan executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The suit was filed in 1971 by the ACLU and Stanford University attorney William Gould on behalf of Edison employee Willie Stamps and the Association for the Betterment of Black Edison Employees.

Houston OKs record budget

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston school trustees have approved a record $321.8 million budget that will require an 11 percent tax hike.

After adopting the budget, the board indicated September action will be taken to boost the current 90 cents per $100 valuation tax rate to about $1. It would be the school district's first tax hike in 17 years.

Sears case remains unresolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six years ago, the federal government launched its most ambitious assault ever on alleged race and sex discrimination in the job market. A principal target was Sears, Roebuck and Co., one of the nation's largest employers.

Today, the government's discrimination case against the No. 1 U.S. retailer remains unresolved and its future is uncertain.

The case has provoked dissension within the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the agency that is handling the case. It has prompted a fighting-mad defense and a unique counter-offensive from Sears, which claims it has one of the best equal employment records. And, it has brought frustration to company employees waiting for action on their job bias complaints.

EEOC officials say the agency simply bit off more than it could chew — a view reinforced by the commission's decision in 1977 to no longer bring nationwide charges against big firms because of the difficulty of putting together a case.

A major problem with such cases is that a company's employment practices vary around the country. Under current policy, job bias charges are being limited to alleged discrimination by a large employer in a specific community.

Details of the EEOC's complaint against Sears have been kept secret under orders from a federal judge. But leaked documents disclose that Sears is accused of a nationwide pattern of race and sex discrimination.

Specifically, it is charged with failing to hire enough minorities relative to the number of applications, assigning minorities and women to less desirable and lower-paying jobs, and paying women less than men, in some cases, for the same work.

Japanese automakers are gearing up for 'small car war'

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese automakers are gearing up for an anticipated "small car war" with American manufacturers to meet the demand for lighter, roomier and more fuel-efficient vehicles in the 1980s, industry spokesmen say.

"We're looking at everything — gasohol, gas turbines, electric cars, you name it," said Yukihito Eguchi, a spokesman for Nissan Motor Co., which markets Datsun cars.

Eguchi and other Japanese car manufacturers said they see themselves locked in a battle with their U.S. counterparts, whose big car sales are on the skids amid gas shortages and talk of energy conservation.

"We're on a direct collision course with the United States. It is generally envisioned we will have a war with the Americans over small car sales," he said in an interview Thursday.

Fuel-saving compacts made in Japan have been selling so well in the United States that stocks are at a record low with less than a 2½-month supply left, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association said.

The association said the rush is on to get fresh shipments off the assembly lines and into the American market as the drive on both sides of the Pacific to develop a revolutionary engine gathers momentum.

Despite Japan's lower export performance last year with 4.13 million cars, trucks and buses going overseas, more than two million passenger cars alone went to the United States, Japan's biggest and most important market abroad.

Total car exports registered a 5.5 percent drop over the year.

Former roustabout takes energy secretary oath

By JOANNE OMANG
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Charles W. Duncan Jr., who once worked as an oil company roustabout, reached the top of that field Friday when he was sworn in as secretary of energy.

President Carter, just back from his Mississippi riverboat tour, praised Duncan in the White House ceremony as "a superb manager of sound judgment of great intelligence" who had compiled "an admirable record" as deputy secretary of defense.

Duncan, 52, flanked by his wife and two children, responded that Friday was "the most significant day of my life."

He joined the audience of energy industrialists and military leaders in a standing ovation for outgoing Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, who received the National Security Award medal from President Carter.

The president was effusive in his praise for Schlesinger, who resigned last month under heavy criticism from most sides of the energy debate. Carter commended Schlesinger's "competence, intelligence and utmost integrity" and said he had "served our nation well in one of the most difficult jobs available."

"It was not Jim Schlesinger's first choice . . . to be secretary of energy," Carter added, noting that Schlesinger had twice asked to resign before Carter would let him go. "I can see he has an expression of anticipation and relief on his face now," Carter joked.

Duncan studied chemical engineering at Rice University and worked for two years as a roustabout and chemical engineer for the Humble Oil Co. of Texas. He rose rapidly through the ranks of his parents' Duncan Coffee Co., and as president merged the firm with Coca Cola Co. in 1964. He moved to Atlanta as president of coke in 1971, and there he met Gov. Jimmy Carter.

He left Coca Cola in 1974 to return to Houston as an investment banker, but Carter pulled him to Washington in 1977 to fill the No. 2 job at the Pentagon.

The last two and a half years there, Duncan said Friday were "the most interesting that I have spent." He thanked Defense Secretary Harold Brown, who was in the audience, for being "my mentor and my friend."

Duncan's remarks provided little clue as to any shifts of direction that may occur under his regime. He echoed Carter on the need to reduce dependence on foreign oil and to increase energy conservation, and pledged "to maintain an active and open dialogue with all elements that have an interest in energy."

Carter, who went directly from the airport to the ceremony, said his cruise down the Mississippi River had left him "re-inspired with the commitment of Americans to deal in a competent way with the future." He said he had written all 6,000 chief executive officers of America's counties, cities and towns to urge them to push efforts at conserving energy.

Inviting all those present to a reception after the ceremony, Carter joked that the energy industry representatives would be expected "to come with a pledge of support" for Duncan in his new role.

Commission approves Mound Lake brine order

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has approved an interim order that permits the Cities Service Co. to continue disposal of produced oil field brines into Mound Lake in Terry County.

The interim order contains eight terms and conditions:

1. Waters in the lake shall at all times comply with the water quality standards established by the Texas Water Development Board or its successor.

2. Sufficient collecting tanks and skimming pits must be maintained to prevent any oil from entering the lake. Only pits which are absolutely necessary for the proper skimming of oil will be permitted and pits must be maintained so that there is no danger of lateral seepage of overflow at any time.

3. There shall be no discharge of unskimmed salt water, raw crude oil, waste oil, basic sediment and water, or other similar materials into the lake.

4. Samples of discharged brine must be taken at random times each 30 to 40 days from each discharge facility, analyzed by a qualified analyst and a report filed quarterly with the Commission's district office showing the oil content. Oil and grease content of produced salt water discharged into the lake shall not exceed an average of 35 milligrams per liter over any three-month period and shall never exceed 72 milligrams per liter.

5. Total brine discharged into the lake shall not exceed an average of 75,000 barrels per month for any 12 month period.

6. In the event of an upset in disposal operations, the affected facility shall be shut down and the discharging of salt water into the lake discontinued until the upset condition has been corrected.

7. Any upset or unauthorized discharge into the lake shall be reported immediately to the Railroad Commission.

8. Adequate security shall be provided to prevent unauthorized use of discharge facilities or disposal into the lake.

"The Commission is of the opinion that permitting the discharge of produced brines into Mound Lake is necessary to prevent the physical waste of oil and gas and that such discharge can be accomplished without causing pollution by requiring compliance with the water standards established by the Texas Water Development Board," states the interim order.

In their findings of fact, the hearing examiners reported disposal of salt water into Mound Lake will have no adverse effect on usable quality water or wildlife in the area. Brines disposal into the lake will allow for the recovery of additional oil from the Mound Lake (Fusselman) field, they concluded.

The examiners further reported no other disposal operations are economically feasible in the area.

Less gas sales expected

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Initial sales of Mexican natural gas to the United States likely will be much less than originally discussed, if current negotiations result in a contract, the Foreign Ministry here says.

When sales were first discussed in 1977, plans called for the export of two billion cubic feet a day by pipeline to Texas. But now, according to the Foreign Ministry in a statement issued Friday, the shipments would be in the order of 300 million cubic feet a day. The reason given is that Mexico will need the natural gas for its own development.

Negotiators for both countries have met six times since February trying to agree on price, amounts, price-increase clauses and the length of the contract. Mexico's assessments of its own needs have increased in two years because of a campaign to develop energy-intensive, export-oriented industries in this country, where 40 percent of the work force is unemployed or underemployed.

No agreements have been announced so far, but negotiators are trying to work something out in time for an agreement to be signed when President Jose Lopez Portillo meets President Carter in Washington late next month.

Another factor that could limit the amount of gas the United States would get is that the gas is largely a by-product of oil production, and Lopez

Portillo has repeatedly said Mexico will develop its oil potential slowly so as not to "deform" the economy.

About 1,400 cubic feet of gas are produced with each barrel of oil. Mexico has proven reserves of 26.1 billion barrels of oil and 89.9 trillion cubic feet of gas, for a total thermal equivalent of 40.2 billion barrels of oil.

Oil Industry Notes

HOUSTON — L. D. Sipes Jr., president of the Houston Division of Sipes, Williamson & Aycock, Inc., a Midland and Houston-based petroleum engineering consulting firm, announces the addition of Wright M. Guthrie to the firm's Houston office as staff engineer.

Guthrie

Prior to joining the company, Guthrie was the chief petroleum engineer for Newmont Oil Co., Houston. His responsibilities included supervision of West Texas and New Mexico properties and appearances before the Railroad Commission of Texas and the New Mexico Oil Conservation Commission. He has also been associated with Butler, Miller and Lentz and Amoco Production Co.

HOUSTON — Bill Van Meter, president of Natomas North America, Inc., announced that David H. Roberts has joined the company as senior vice president, Exploration.

Roberts

Roberts is responsible for all domestic exploration efforts — both onshore and offshore. Prior to joining Natomas Roberts was district manager in Oklahoma City for Exxon Corp., USA. He had been with various affiliates of Exxon Corp. 25 years and held management positions in both domestic and overseas operations.

HOUSTON — Richard A. Lindsey has been promoted to region manager and Rycholon Hodges has been appointed region sales manager for AMF Tuboscope's Northwest Region. Both men are stationed in Casper, Wyo.

Lindsey joined Tuboscope in 1966. He was a resident of Casper at the time of his promotion.

Hodges was a sales representative in Corpus Christi. He has been with the company since 1975 when he started work in the Southwest Region in Houston.

FINDLAY, Ohio — Marathon Oil Co. for the second time this year has raised its estimates of 1979 expenditures for capital projects and exploration programs. The increased outlays will fund an expanded capital projects program designed to further strengthen Marathon's production, transportation, and refining and marketing capabilities.

Capital expenditures for the year now are expected to amount to approximately $425 million, including $20 million paid to the federal government for domestic offshore lease acquisition. This compares with an initial 1979 estimate of $500 million, exclusive of lease acquisitions, and is more than $10 million higher than last year's expenditures.

ENID, Okla. — Champlin Petroleum Co. has named Paul D. Fritz superintendent of its Enid refinery. Since joining the company in 1973, Fritz has held the refining posts of manager of technical services at Corpus Christi and manager of operations at Enid. He has moved to Enid from Corpus Christi where he was plant manager of the firm's petrochemical complex.

OKLAHOMA CITY — Gary White has been named marketing manager of Geosource Inc., Oklahoma City-based manufacturer of accessory equipment for the drilling industry.

He is responsible for advertising, product pricing and marketing research for the division's manufacturing and sales operations. Before joining Geosource Division, White was a loan administration officer at Liberty National Bank in Oklahoma City.

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — Gulf Oil Corp. announced it is donating its biomass technology for converting cellulose into ethyl alcohol to the University of Arkansas Foundation and is providing a grant of $500,000 toward the first year's operation of the project.

Since 1971, Gulf has invested almost $9 million to develop ethyl alcohol and industrial chemicals from materials containing cellulose such as municipal solid waste, pulp waste from paper mills and agricultural waste. The work initiated by Gulf will continue under the auspices of the University of Arkansas.

Keeping tabs on dividends?

Dividends Per Share
$1.25

Keep tabs on TAB.

Texas American Bancshares (TAB) has boosted its dividend rate 79% since January 1976. This includes eight hikes in our quarterly dividend and a 5% stock dividend paid to shareholders in March 1978.

This is a tangible way for our shareholders to enjoy our strong earnings performance.

Our policy is to review our dividend rate on a regular basis in light of our earnings performance, capital position, and future outlook. Our goal is to provide a satisfactory return to shareholders balanced against the internal growth of capital necessary for future expansion.

Our payout as a percent of earnings, at a relatively conservative range of about 25%, helps assure the stability of our dividend and provides flexibility for further increases.

If dividend growth is one of your investment yardsticks, we invite your comparison of our performance with those of other bank holding companies in Texas and across the nation.

Texas American Bancshares, with total assets of $2.6 billion, is a Fort Worth-based bank holding company with eleven member banks located in key areas of the state. Acquisition of one additional bank is pending.

Our member banks include The Fort Worth National Bank, Bank of Fort Worth and Riverside State Bank in Fort Worth; Southern National Bank, Galleria Bank and Gulf Southern National Bank, all in Houston; Texas American Bank in Dallas; Citizens National Bank in Denison; American National Bank in Amarillo; Commercial Bank & Trust Co. in Midland; and Levelland

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK Texas insurance battle spreading

BY BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Insurance industry officials are saying that the "war" between the industry and attorneys seems to be spreading, and perhaps building towards another major confrontation in 1981.

During the 1979 session of the Legislature, the Texas Trial Lawyers Association and insurance interest clashed frequently, with the TTLA failing in its efforts to pass what is described as an "insurance reform" act.

One of the major points of dispute was the use, or non-use, of investment income received by insurer by the State Board of Insurance in setting insurance rates.

Basically, the TTLA contended that such income isn't considered—and that therefore rates are set too high—while insurers contended such income is considered, directly or indirectly.

And testimony by several experts differed as to what extent investment income is considered in rate-making.

Now, it appears, that dispute is being renewed, with some SBI personnel being caught in the cross-fire.

Port Arthur Rep. Frank Collazo (although not an attorney) has called on the board to fire Gaylon Daniel, staff actuary, "for making a recommendation" to increase auto insurance rates.

Collazo contends the 8.9 percent rate increase recommended by the SBI staff (the industry is seeking 21.7 percent) isn't in the "best interest of the people," and concludes that Daniel should be fired preparing the material used in making that recommendation.

Insurers also have been irritated at some editorials which have commented that "serious questions" are being raised about the accuracy of the information used in setting rates.

Those questions, they contend, are coming from TTLA, and already have been answered before legislative committees.

They also charge that TTLA intends to push the investment income issue again during the interim, using planned interim studies by the House Insurance Committee as a vehicle.

Whatever happens on those studies, TTLA seems certain to be back before lawmakers in 1981, as noted by the group's intervention in the auto and worker's compensation hearings held by the SBI.

Meanwhile, there are hints that an effort may be made to defuse that timebomb (or to at least contain its explosion) by getting the SBI to hold a hearing on rating formulas, but there has been no formal announcement on that by the board.

The Texas Credit Union Commission has approved regulations regarding deposit accounts and community charter credit unions, and has instructed the Credit Union Department to look over the Credit Union Act for possible changes with any recommendation to be passed on to the appropriate legislative committee.

Credit Union Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons says it is unlikely any broadening of powers for credit unions will be sought, but rather "house-cleaning and regulatory authority."

The regulations on deposit accounts define three types of such programs, and set out requirements for each.

The three types are transaction deposit accounts, certificates of deposit and remote withdrawal accounts—with the latter accounts having attracted the most attention (and generally opposition) from other financial institutions.

Parsons says the new regulations are intended to clear up confusion over different types of programs, and to provide some uniformity, although existing programs are "grandfathered" as they have been carried out, and to establish reserve requirements for the various accounts.

The changes for community charter credit unions (credit unions which use a geographical area rather than employment or other common factor for membership) also are intended to clarify practices and requirements, Parsons says.

Granlund released

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Raymond F. Granlund has been released on bond while the ailing 75-year-old Houston oilman plans to appeal his conviction in an oil price-fixing scheme.

U.S. District Judge W. Terrell Hodges sentenced Granlund to three years in prison Friday, saying anything less "would be a deprecation of the seriousness of the matter."

Hodges said Granlund, who suffered a heart attack and a stroke in November, will be eligible for parole immediately.

Granlund and five other men were convicted of using paper trades to inflate the price of oil sold to Florida Power Corp. during the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

Storms KO electricity

WESTBORO, Mass. (AP) — Fast-moving thunderstorms knocked out electric power to 5,000 north-central Massachusetts homes Saturday and caused the lightning death of a vacationing Connecticut man.

Petersham Police Chief Leo LaPointe said William F. Whiteside, 21, of Trumbull, Conn., was struck by a thunderbolt at 5 p.m. as he sat inside a cabin off Glasheen Road, playing cards with a brother and sister.

Whiteside, identified as a U.S. Air Force member, was blasted from his seat on a couch as the entire cabin shook from the force of the lightning.

Production is answer

The Joint Economic Committee of Congress, of which Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas is chairman, warns that the nation will see a drastic decline in its standard of living in the 1980s if it does not improve its productivity — the output of goods and services measured against the hours of labor needed to produce them.

The committee report thus offers the nation and its representatives in Washington some rather difficult choices if the United States is to pull out of its economic difficulties. Does Congress have the fortitude to make some of the necessary decisions? We soon will find out.

The lagging rate of growth in the U.S. has been worrying economists for years now. It is one of the major causes of inflation. It is frustrating efforts of American manufacturers to compete with Japan and other countries which have better productivity rates and can market their goods at lower prices.

Sen. Bentsen has made the productivity question pertinent to the debate on economic policy due to begin when Congress gets back on the job after its recess.

With the chill of a recession running through the economy, congressional minds are turning toward the traditional response — a stimulative tax cut. The approach of the 1980 elections, quite naturally, makes the idea all the more appealing.

"We need policies not just for the next election, but for the long term," Bensten said, pointing to the worrisome forecast for the 1980s. Sen. Jacob Javits of New York, the ranking Republican on the committee, echoes the same attitude, urging more attention to tax policies which go beyond an immediate stimulus of business to attack the underlying problem of productivity.

A general cut in the federal income taxes would contribute to the latter goal if Americans put the extra money into savings or investments. This would enhance the pool of capital needed to modernize plants and tools and thus improve efficiency and productivity.

But taxpayers most likely would see most of the benefit from such a tax cut going into a game of catch-up with rising prices.

Talk of an anti-recession tax cut comes as the inflation rate is running beyond 13 percent and the federal budget is heading into a deficit of $30 billion or more.

Sens. Bentsen and Javits seem to be hinting, as much as politicians dare, that a popular across-the-board tax cut could do the country more harm than good in the long run. They are verging toward the idea that tax adjustments which contribute directly to capital formation and investment are the best prescription. The capital gains tax thus would be a candidate for reduction. Congress also has before it a bill to encourage investment in new plants by allowing more rapid depreciation write-offs.

The committee report points out very definitely that three things must happen in the 1980s if the nation is to achieve a "decidedly better" economy with full employment and an inflation rate of less than 5 percent. The goals can be achieved, however, if Americans face up to the problem and make the hard decisions which are necessary. The goals are: (1) A substantial increase in the rate of capital formation; (2) a substantial upgrading in the skills of the disadvantaged, unskilled, structurally unemployed persons, and (3) a sharp reduction in the U.S. dependence on foreign oil through development and production of new domestic oil and gas, synthetic fuels and solar energy, and through conservation.

The report concludes that "if capital formation increases and labor skills are upgraded, the nation's productive capacity is increased and unemployment is reduced."

It's up to Congress. What will the lawmakers do with it?

Secretary may have to defend self

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Congressional approval of the SALT II agreement may well stand or fall on the credibility of Defense Secretary Harold Brown. Now we have discovered a skeleton in Brown's closet that clanks and rattles, raising disturbing doubts about the defense secretary's veracity.

Confidential Pentagon documents show that when Brown was secretary of the Air Force, he and his closest associates deliberately misled the American public on a $2 billion cost overrun. Then they tried to defuse a congressional investigation of the scandal by doctoring evidence submitted by a Pentagon whistleblower.

The $2 billion overrun on the C-5A transport plane was first exposed by an Air Force cost analyst, A. Ernest Fitzgerald, in November 1968. In recent columns, we have told how continuing problems with the Air Force's flying turkey may cost the taxpayers another $2 billion to bail out the C-5A contractor, Georgia-Lochhead.

But it all began with Brown. Here's the sequence of events as we have been able to reconstruct it:

In mid-1968, Brown's budget director, Duward L. Crow, assured the House Appropriations Committee that "historically no program we have had can compare favorably with the C-5A."

Then, on Nov. 13, Fitzgerald started the Joint Economic Committee — and his Pentagon superiors — by testifying that the Air Force's own figures showed that the C-5A contract was costing Uncle Sam $2 billion more than the original estimate.

That same day, Brown's undersecretary, Townsend Hoopes, called a meeting of top Air Force brass to discuss what to do about "Fitzgerald spilling his guts," according to the minutes of the session. Their discussion was phrased this way in the minutes:

"Upshot: Stand fast until we get transcript (of Fitzgerald's congressional testimony)...In meantime, prepare bland responses to have in hand."

The first "bland response" appeared six days later in the form of an official Air Force press release. It provided false figures indicating that, while there had indeed been a cost overrun on the C-5A, it amounted to less than $1 billion.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., asked Congress' financial watchdog, the General Accounting Office, to investigate the C-5A overrun. He suggested that the GAO ask the Air Force for solid evidence to back up its press release. He also asked Fitzgerald for evidence that would support his charges.

Another top-level Air Force meeting was held on Dec. 2, at which it was decided to give GAO investigators the figures on what had already been spent, but to withhold projected costs and any information about them "unless Dr. Brown disagrees."

The withheld figures, of course, would have revealed the gargantuan overrun. To complete the cover-up, the Air Force also decided that "backup data" used to compile the press release "will not be given to GAO."

On Dec. 9, Fitzgerald's boss, Assistant Air Force Secretary Thomas H. Nielsen, urged Brown in a memo to

INSIDE REPORT: SALT-selling generals insure against job loss

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The unexpected hostile reception given recently-retired Lt. Gen. Edward L. Rowny after he finished reading his tightly reasoned criticism of SALT II to the Senate Armed Services Committee Aug. 1 again illuminated the pitfalls of a career military officer unburdening his conscience.

Rowny's treatment was so unexpected because it was handed out by the committee chairman: Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi, a great champion of the military during 32 years in the Senate. Under administration prompting, Stennis peppered Rowny with unpleasant questions whose only purpose could be to undermine his credibility as a witness.

Stennis' questions, however hostile, were delivered in tones of a courtly southern gentleman. Other pro-SALT senators were considerably harsher toward the general who for nearly seven years was Pentagon representative at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT I). Having retired from the Army in order to reveal his misgivings did not protect Rowny from senatorial scolding.

In contrast, general officers on active military duty voiced the administration's SALT line by monotonous repetition of boiler plate. Their public endorsement of a treaty whose faults they have underlined in secret memoranda has been a major White House weapon in seeking to build momentum for SALT II ratification during the current congressional recess. Why were these officers willing to give blanket endorsement of the treaty while spelling out deepening U.S. military weakness? Because, they confide to friends, the alternative would be to resign as Rowny did. But such resignations would have so shattered the administration that it is doubtful they would have been demanded. That senior generals were unwilling to risk their careers helps explain the diminished credibility of the officer class.

Actually, Carter did not enjoy a Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) that could be depended upon until six weeks before the SALT hearings. Replacement of the Army chief of staff (June 22) and Marine Corps commandant (June 30) eliminated two SALT critics. Whatever its ineptitude elsewhere, the Carter administration displayed exquisite timing in sanitizing the JCS just in time. Indeed, Carter's five JCS appointments clearly were tuned to SALT.

Scholarly Ed Rowny was the spoiler. Unable to support the treaty he had tried to improve and unable to oppose it without retiring, he left the Army. At retirement ceremonies June 29, Rowny warned against "military advice tempered by personal ambition or lack of intestinal fortitude." We later reported that such criticism of JCS members is rampant within the military.

One JCS member — Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, chief of naval operations — was incensed. Hayward told Rowny he should write a letter to the Washington Post in response to our column making clear he was not referring to JCS members. Rowny denied that was his intent, but no letter was written. Although Rowny has declined to discuss the incident with us, it is common knowledge within the Pentagon.

When Rowny appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he was administered a tongue-lashing by Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, who questioned how he dared differ with his superiors. Better informed hectoring was dispensed at the Senate Armed Services Committee by Sen. John Culver of Iowa. Muskie and Culver were to be expected, but not John Stennis.

Stennis had been conferring with Lloyd Cutler, the president's new counsel, just before questioning Rowny. The chairman's questions pointed out Rowny had never been confirmed for his post by the Senate, had not been personally selected by this president, had served under 29 separate JCS members — that, in effect, he was a loose cannon.

Rowny was obviously puzzled, and so were some senators. But lawyers perceived the hand of super-lawyer Cutler trying to discredit a witness. Stennis concluded by asking why Rowny, if he were so concerned, had not brought complaints about the SALT negotiations to him as armed services chairman. Rowny later testified that would have been an impermissible breach of military channels.

While pro-SALT senators harassed Rowny, defense community insiders were more concerned by generals whose testimony followed the administration's boiler plate with unerring faithfulness — especially Gen. Richard H. Ellis, commander of the Strategic Air Command (SAC). Aviation experts could not believe their ears when Ellis, in support of the treaty, equated the Soviet Backfire bomber with the markedly inferior U.S. F-111.

The SALT-selling generals privately respond to defense community critics by claiming to have generated congressional interest in rehabilitating the rusting military machine at the relatively small cost of ratifying SALT II. But suspicion persists that payment for the treaty will be vague and unredeemable promises for defense spending. The only certainty now is that these officers have insured themselves against losing their jobs or being subjected to the senatorial harassment of Gen. Rowny.

Well, well, grandparents finally are going to get their very own day — officially.

Congress this year has boosted the status of National Grandparents Day to put Grandmother and Granddaddy right up there with Mom and Dad.

So, starting Sunday, Sept. 9, National Grandparents Day becomes a continuing day of observance, like Father's Day and Mother's Day.

A joint House-Senate resolution has established it on the first Sunday after Labor Day, which perhaps is an appropriate time.

Whether or not grandparents sought such an observance is immaterial at this point. It has been established by act of Congress — and that's that.

We always thought that every day was Grandparents Day, particularly when they are with their grandchildren.

Should airline pilots be required to retire at age 60?

WASHINGTON — If skies are dark, lightning bolts shoot and thunder crashes, I look into the cockpit of the passenger plane I'm boarding, hoping that the captain has creases around his eyes and gray at the sides. I want to see experience, not some wide-eyed, hopeful youth.

Once, after a wild, even hairy, ride through storms over Florida, I alighted safe and sound in Miami, relieved and grateful to whoever piloted us through that atmospheric terror. A little later, I saw the captain come down the stairs. My, oh my, he looked like Santa Claus with his shock of all-white hair and ample belly. A closer look revealed a man in his late 50s, who had a jolly laugh to go with his appearance.

I admit there might be certain romantic notions about wizened old pilots at work here, but I think most passengers appreciate the assurance of a pilot who has made thousands of takeoffs and landings and who probably began his career in World War II or the Korean war.

Well, hundreds of those pilots approach, are at or have recently passed the mandatory retirement age of 60. Many of them now argue that there should be no age limit for pilots, that medical examination should be the sole criterion for their fitness to fly. Keeping with the times, they have formed a "pilot's rights" committee and have lobbied Congress for an end to the Federal Aviation Administration rule that requires all pilots for commercial airlines to retire at 60.

These senior pilots — some of whom are already retired — claim that the FAA rule on age 60 retirement, written in 1959, is outdated by current medical knowledge. They maintain that a pilot, healthy and aware, can do a first-rate job at 60, 65 or even 70.

It is obvious that when many of them make upwards of $100,000 a year for flying overseas routes, and between $60,000 and $75,000 for domestic runs, they want to keep earning that kind of money as long as they feel able.

They succeeded in persuading the aviation subcommittee of the Public Works Committee to agree, just before the congressional recess, to a compromise age, 61-1-2. This bit of foolishness was enacted in the haste and the humidity of Washington, and will be tended to by the full committee when it returns after Labor Day. Sixty-one and a half?

Now the Air Transport Assn. and the FAA object to any change in the mandatory retirement age rule. This industry association and the FAA state that there are significant differences of opinion in the medical field as to whether the effects of aging can be reliably detected by medical examinations.

The airlines, who obviously would like to have fewer $100,000 pilots on the payroll, take the view that until more conclusive evidence is available, they must stick to the 60 rule as a safety obligation to their customers, the passengers.

When the FAA adopted the 60 rule in 1959, it was after a study had been done on the aging processes and the ability of medical science to predict the consequences of aging. The FAA recognized that: (1) the probability of incapacitation increases with age, and (2) medical science could not predict the likelihood of incapacitation with enough accuracy to allow pilots to fly past age 60.

The FAA then raised the issue of whether medical science can develop tests which would safely allow pilots to fly commercially after age 60 — the same issue being raised now, 20 years later.

It could be that hundreds of the 37,000 airline pilots working now, who are 55, 50 or even younger, wouldn't rate as high in exacting medical tests as some of the oldsters. Should these younger pilots be required to retire?

Apparently some of the 55-year-olds now flying have some apprehension about a straight medical fitness rule, rather than the age 60 rule, because "pilot's rights" group hasn't enlisted many of them to their proud, gray colors.

No question that a person over 60 is more susceptible to a heart attack than a younger person. It's not good for passengers or a pilot for him to have a heart attack on take off, landing or anywhere up there.

There is also the more subtle deterioration of the older body which can affect a pilot's judgment, reasoning and ability to solve sudden problems, say, in an emergency. Again, some pilots at 50 might score less on this kind of test than a man 10 or even 15 years older.

What is needed is a new, thorough study of the aging pilot population, with respect to the true extent of aging and how it affects ability to pilot in all situations, including emergencies.

There have been times, after a foul weather situation, that I have applauded the pilot when the plane sets down in a safe landing. Other passengers have also spontaneously applauded. Usually when that captain comes out of the cockpit, he has gray hair, crinkled skin around the eyes and the look of assurance.

Grim comparison

To The Editor:
Indulge me for just a moment. It won't take very long. Get a pencil and some paper. Now, write down the names of 62 people that you know personally, have seen on tv or read about. They can be either sex, but they must be living. You may list relatives, acquaintances, friends, anyone; but you must have 62 names on your list. Do this now and then return to this part of the letter.
Now look over your list carefully. Study it. Give it your full consideration. That's a long list and a lot of people named. I'm sure you'll agree that putting it together took longer than you imagined it would.

Let's make a comparison with your list and another one. Did you know that last year in Texas 62 people were killed over the Labor Day Holiday? That is the same number of people that you have named on your list. It's a pretty grim comparison and the list isn't fun anymore, is it?

What if the 62 people on your list were killed during this next Labor Day Holiday? What effect would that have upon you and your life? How would you react to the deaths?

You would be stunned and probably would find it difficult to comprehend the shock of losing 62 friends, relatives and acquaintances in the short time frame. By now you have my point.

It is the same story you hear each holiday. But consider just one thought, if nothing else. What are you going to do to help stop traffic accidents during this Labor Day Holiday? Will you attempt to influence others toward a safer holiday or will you let the list climb to 62...? Think about it.

False facts

To The Editor:
Mr. Hathaway's letter last week in this section amused me in that a seemingly well versed citizen could be so misinformed about a subject as prominent as nuclear power, and yet assume a certain amount of self confidence with which to proclaim false facts dealing with that subject. Mr. Hathaway's claim that "more people have been killed in Ted Kennedy's car than in all nuclear power accidents since the dawn of time" is not only a silly and extra-topical observation but is completely false. If Mr. Hathaway will do some looking around into the area he will find a moderate amount of deaths to count, some of which are in the U.S., most of which are in the Soviet Union.

The fact that Mr. Hathaway submitted his short yet inaccurate statement for publication shows that he believed it was true. But unless Senator Kennedy owned the super large, extra roomy luxury style Oldsmobile the observation lacks truth and should be revised or better still retracted.

Trashy neighbors

To The Editor:
My grandmother received a letter from the city which stated that she had ten days to get her alley cleaned up. Well, our city put the trash container behind her house and her sweet neighbors have taken advantage of it. They put their garbage, their old lumber, their cut down trees, etc., on her land, not in the container.

Her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren began the clean-up with several neighbors watching from their back doors. We asked the neighbors to help keep it clean, but most of them didn't understand English and others made excuses saying they only rented.

It's kind of sad knowing these young families just watched this old woman lift their junk into the back of our truck for us to haul off. I suppose they were afraid of being charged for part of it.

What else can be done. Nothing...nothing but a little consideration for others, and a responsibility of each and every family to see that their trash carrier gets their trash into the container. Maybe it won't be so hard on those who have the containers on their property.

Nuclear caution

To The Editor:
Re: Last week's oh-so-clever non sequitur comparing the Chappaquiddick and nuclear plant accident rates.

Nuclear technology is in its infancy, as is proven by the fact that the NRC officials have yet to figure out what went wrong on Three Mile Island. We have much to learn and, unfortunately, our errors may lie dormant and erupt years later in the form of an increased cancer rate. (Yes, I know that there are many suspected causes of cancer, but I also know that there is one proven cause, and this is excessive exposure to radioactive elements.) I once spent a night in a cancer hospital in a room with four pre-school patients. I suggest that those persons so eager to rush into a nuclear-powered society do the same. Since they won't be able to sleep, they will have ample time to reflect on our national priorities. What are we doing to ourselves and our children? If we must err, let us err on the side of caution.

To The Editor:
Re: Mr. Mark Noles' letter to the editor in last Sunday's newspaper concerning Jeanne Dixon.

It is true that so much of the time Christians will remain silent on controversial issues because of the popularity attached to some people, places or practices. Such is the case here.

For those who are followers of Mrs. Dixon, let it be said that her sincerity is not in question, neither is vital to the continued growth and prosperity of our community. For this reason I write this letter in support of the bond issue as presented by the Midland City Council.

It is most evident to all of us that Midland has grown and will continue to grow in the years ahead in all areas of our community, notably residential and commercial.

We must have the foresight to deal with growth and the willingness to act in a positive manner to secure the future of our community. We, today, have several areas which are in need of help to maintain our progressiveness. Particularly the sewer system improvements and water system improvements which the first two issues seek to address. We are rapidly approaching our total capacity in both these areas. Specifically our total water capacity at present is 32 1/2 million gallons per day from the Paul Davis & McMillian Water Fields and the Colorado River Municipal Water District. However, we have in the past had peak usage of 32 million gallons per day which is close to our total capacity. This alone could have a negative effect on housing starts and hinder efforts to bring new industry to Midland. With passage of the bond issue we could increase our capacity of 45 1/2 million gallons per day and sustain present and future needs through 1990. It is important to note that passage of the revenue bonds would require no additional tax dollars and no rate increase for four years while also allowing us to broaden our tax base as new families move into our community.

Inflated salad

To The Editor:
I had occasion today to buy some lettuce and found it to be 89 cents a head at a heavily-patronized supermarket. As that price seemed to be definitely on the high side, I asked what it cost last week and was told 39 cents a head — in short, a 128 percent increase in a week and strongly suggestive of plain old-fashioned greediness.

Perhaps President Carter was right when he called in the leaders of the food distribution industry to explain the seemingly inordinate rises in the cost of food. Midland, rich and prosperous as it is, has lots of people who simply cannot afford lettuce at 89 cents a head.

Absolute power

To The Editor:
The unconstitutionality of the government's crude oil price controls can be illustrated by a simplified example of the real situation. Although more severe in some cases, consider the following:

Let us say the value of crude oil is $10 per barrel, but that the government mandates that it be sold for $5 per barrel. Out of each 2 barrels of oil produced, the producer and royalty owner receive the value of one barrel and the government for its vote buying purposes receives the value of the remaining barrel. The producer must pay in addition to his and the royalty owner's development and operating expense the same expenses for the share which the government takes for its vote buying schemes. This results in the combined effect of confiscation of property and involuntary servitude.

The taking of property is not illegal if the government exercises its powers of eminent domain under due process of law; however, in this case it is required to provide just compensation. In most cases, just compensation could not be considered to be less than the greater market value or replacement cost.

Instead of taking property legally, the government lays false claims to authority to regulate or control prices under its powers granted by the Interstate Commerce Clause. The intent of the Interstate Commerce Clause was to grant the federal government power to prevent the movement of contraband items across state borders and to prevent the taxation of items of interstate commerce by state and local authorities. Letter exchange

To The Editor:
It is my great pleasure to have an opportunity of sending this letter in the hope that it will be published in your valuable newspaper. I am a teacher in Hankook High School in Seoul, Korea, and we have around 3,000 students. I teach English at this school. Through my teaching career, I have noticed that many students of our country are crazy about having their own pen friends in foreign countries.

They would like to have friendship with the foreign school boys and girls through communication. I think the exchange of letters between the young in different countries would also help them learn much better each other's country. It would also help the students in improving their writing ability. Furthermore, I surely believe that this correspondence will stimulate and promote international understanding, and well as the true foundation for world peace.

If any schoolboy or schoolgirl in your country wants to be a pen friend with a Korean schoolboy or schoolgirl please inform us of his or her name, address, age, sex and hobby.

We will, in turn, pass this information to our students and they will write the letters to their liking. We are sure that it will bring the students involved a great pleasure and a wonderful experience.

President's job

To The Editor:
Far be it from me to quote the Bible to President Carter. He can probably recite from memory all of the 4th Chapter of Proverbs. That chapter (as well as Chapters 1, 2, 3) is mostly about wisdom, in case you'd forgotten. Perhaps verse 7 is the most widely known and most often quoted:

"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding." "Learning" and "instruction" are praised. Over and over "wisdom" and "understanding" are made goals to be sought over all other goals.

This is not some advice to a drop-out about finishing high school or college. Solomon, the king, is advising his sons. So, while the sense and substance of Proverbs can profit any person of high or low degree, even now, centuries later, how much more profitable for the Chief of State!

Voters have been patient. After all, over and over, in his campaign, Carter emphasized his lack of knowledge of and about "Washington." He bragged about it as if that were a virtue in itself. We knew it would be "on the job training." But, we did expect him to devote his time and energies to learning that job and doing that job. The president's job is being head of the administrative branch of the government of the United States of America.

After three years in office he still doesn't understand his job. He doesn't understand the difference between a candidate and a president.

Discrimination?

To The Editor:
There are 150 illegal alien children who are attending schools in Ector County, Texas. They do not have to pay any school tuition since U.S. Dist. Judge D.W. Suttle made a decision that this is discriminating.

These students who are from foreign countries can spread some strange diseases among our people by endangering their lives and medical science might not know how to cope with something so dangerous. Is this not all true?

Tilling the soil in St. Lawrence

ST. LAWRENCE — Rain clouds were looming over St. Lawrence the day Reagan V. Brown showed up to give his folksy speech, doctored lightly with agricultural homilies and generously peppered with seasoned jokes.

It was threatening to rain. "Well, (I) tried to bring in the rain. Almost did," Brown, Texas' agriculture commissioner, said as he was shaking hands in the country.

St. Lawrence, a Glasscock County farming community 45 miles southeast of Midland, actually did get some drizzling spin-off from hail clouds which, like a bomb bay, opened up and hailed-out lush cotton acreage to the north and west in Martin and Midland counties.

Brown, who seems to run by the clock since he travels broadly in giving a basic laugh-in speech that changes more in jokes than in its bare substance, came to St. Lawrence via airplane to Midland. He came forth to speak at the annual St. Lawrence Cotton Growers Association.

The turn-out was decent, though crock-fulls of diced barbecue pork slowly cooked by chefs Ralph Halfmann and Joe Schwartz and cut out of five community-raised hogs, were left over. There was enough good food to feed far more than the 500 or so who turned out.

Brown, once seated, ate of the fare, that included the pork, which rivaled expertly-cooked beef or cabrito and was cooked all day over burning mesquite; pinto beans, mashed potatoes, cole slaw, bread, chopped watermelon and cantaloupe, iced tea and punch. There was no beer right at hand to complement the barbecue community-grown beef cattle and hogs, and barbecuing beef. The women folks work up the mashed potatoes, cook the beans, prepare the slaw, dessert and so on.

"Every year," noted Schwartz' wife, Rose, "we make more and more (sausage) and sell out earlier and earlier."

The founders, pioneers and late-comers at St. Lawrence came here with the idea of serving the land well and reaping the benefits. Eventually, the land will fall into the care of their sons and daughters.

The young farmers here already are tilling the soil by day and occasionally running jackrabbits by night just for entertainment. By name, five of them are Gary Halfmann, 18, who farms 320 acres; John Schwartz, 19, 640 acres; Wayne Hirt, 19, 520 acres; Kenny Batla, 21, 800 acres; and Aaron Braden, 20, 900 acres.

And the young gals, perhaps promising farmers' wives, include teenagers such as Trudy Hoelscher, Theresa Schraeder, Crystal Overton and Connie Schwartz.

At that St. Lawrence Cotton Growers Association meeting last week, the Texas agriculture commissioner recognized the gals as accomplished boll-weevil scouts.

"Their job," association executive director Clifford Hoelscher said later, "was to monitor the movement and progress of the boll weevil, the boll worm, the tobacco bud worm and all cotton insects...in selected fields throughout the area" in the name of research to head off the damaging insects.

They did well.

POSITIVE THINKING

Gain an inner state of rightness

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

This is about a salesman who spent years shifting from one job to another, never managing to handle any one of them really well. He never quite made a decent living for himself and his family. Then with dramatic suddenness he became an outstandingly successful producer.

I learned of this man's story from his son. I asked the son to put his father's experience in writing, thinking it could be of help to the readers of this column. He writes:

"My father was a traveling salesman. One time he sold furniture, another time hardware, and sometimes it was leather goods. He changed his line every year.

"I would hear him telling my mother that this was his last trip in stationery or in bed lamps or in whatever he was selling at the moment. Next year everything was going to be different. He would be on easy street, for now he had a chance to go with a firm that had a product which practically sold itself. It was always the same old tune.

"My poor father never had a product that would sell. Lovable man though he was, he was always tense, always afraid of himself, always whistling in the dark. He was inept. His ways of doing things were full of mistakes.

"Then one day a fellow salesman, a much older man, gave my father a copy of a three-sentence prayer. He told my father to repeat this prayer just before calling on a prospect.

"My father tried it and the results were miraculous. He sold 85 percent of all the calls he made that week. And every week thereafter his results were wonderful. Some weeks his percentage sold actually ran as high as 95 percent of his calls.

"The old salesman had recommended the prayer to several other men of simple faith like my father. In all cases these men began having much better results. This is the prayer the old salesman used:

"I believe I am always divinely guided. I believe I will be led always to take the right turn of the road. I believe that God will always make a way where there is no way."

In this experience of a simple salesman we see how terribly a person's hopes and desires in life can be foiled and frustrated by an error-slanted state of mind. It is one of the great sources of human unhappiness.

Doctors, psychologists, industrial engineers sometimes speak of certain persons as being accident prone. Such persons repeatedly get hurt under conditions where average people rarely do. They have no physical defects that would account for this.

Apparently there is something in their psychology, some condition in the unconscious mind, which mysteriously pushes them into sudden, clumsy or rash actions that result in injuries.

Vastly larger numbers are afflicted with a similar, but more general condition. They are error prone. They have a strong continuing tendency to say or do the wrong thing, make the wrong decision, make mistakes at every turn. They tend to defeat themselves by doing things that are inappropriate, foolish, out of place.

I think all of us at one stage or another have this error tendency in some degree. The successful person is the one who overcomes it. In the example related here, it was by means of an old salesman's three-sentence prayer that several men learned to draw upon a higher power.

They were men of simple faith, we are told — had been all along; but they had not learned how to apply their faith to their work from day to day. The prayer enabled them to do so. How? By prompting them to remember God, affirm their faith in His providence and look to Him for guidance — and in addition to think straight, act confidently and always be sincere.

The more a person bears in mind that he is a child of God, the more he will think and act in accordance with that realization and accordingly have an inner state not of error but of rightness. Where inner rightness is in a person he will not be error prone.

County commissioners to set 1980 tax rate

Adoption of the 1980 budget and setting the tax rate for Midland County will be among the 17-item agenda Midland County Court of Commissioners will consider in Monday's meeting.

The meeting will convene at 1:30 p.m. in the Commissioners' Courtroom of the Midland County Courthouse.

In addition to setting this year's tax rate, the commissioners will consider a resolution providing a discount for early payment of taxes.

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith has asked the commissioners to discuss Senate Bill 682.

County Commissioner Win Brown will ask the commissioners to discuss splitting Precinct 26 in half.

Information concerning the Midland Senior Center and lease re-negotiations with the City of Midland for County Park will be presented by Wayne Kohout.

The Commissioners also will consider a resolution recognizing Frances Williams and her work as County Librarian. Mrs. Williams will retire Sept. 1.

County property improvements and an office space request will be presented for the commissioners' approval.

Lamesa police seize 2,646 cans of beer

LAMESA — A raid on alleged bootleggers recently netted Lamesa police, Dawson County sheriff's deputies and the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission 2,646 cans of beer, including six packs and 12-ounce cans.

The raid was coordinated by Lamesa Police Chief Lee Bartlett.

Six people were arrested.

Lamesa is a "dry" city in an equally dry county.

Heavy hail loss reported by Dawson County farmers

LAMESA — The whisking hail storm last Monday brought a pre-mature harvest to 50,000 acres of cotton stalks, stripped leaves and bolls from stalks and exacted a $15 million damage.

Most of the hail hit in northern Dawson County.

About 20,000 acres of cotton were destroyed and an additional 30,000 acres sustained heavy damage.

Gasohol becoming big U.S. business

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasohol, the mixture of gasoline and a substance similar to vodka, is becoming big business as Americans seek a way out of their reliance on imported oil.

And while most analysts doubt that it will play a big part in the nation's supply of motor fuel, several large oil companies are now getting into the gasohol business.

In recent weeks, Phillips Petroleum, Standard Oil of Indiana, which sells Amoco gas, and Texaco have joined a number of small independent oil companies in setting up programs to sell gasohol on a small-scale experimental basis. Sources in the oil industry say other large oil companies are thinking about following.

Right now, most gasohol is sold in the Midwest, but it is also being test-marketed in other parts of the nation, particularly in the Northeast. In all, industry analysts estimate that several hundred of the nation's more than 170,000 gas stations are selling the fuel.

Gasohol is not the 50-50 mixture of gasoline and alcohol its name implies. Rather, it is made up of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol alcohol. The latter, with slight modifications, could make an excellent ingredient for a vodka and tonic.

Gasohol can be used as a substitute for unleaded gasoline without any modifications in the automobile that burns it.

Lamesa police name new juvenile officer

LAMESA — Cora Brown, a four-year veteran with the Lamesa Police Department, has been promoted to head of the department's new juvenile division, said Police Chief Lee Bartlett.

Bartlett cited Ms. Brown's rapport with young people, her experience and her "all-round ability to get along with the young generation" in naming her to the post.

"...We will have a better system of handling juvenile offenders than we have had in the past several years," the chief said.

Her new work, which does not call for an increase in salary, will be in conjunction with her role as the city's crime prevention officer.

Midlander type to command fate, certainly commands own life

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

William "Willie B." Wilson is a rare sort who seems to command the winds of fate. He is not one to drift, though certainly he could afford the luxury.

He's an individualist, and a wealthy one at that.

His past tells much of his present: His profile in part reads like this:

- Astate oil operator and rancher.
- Internationally-rated and robust polo player.
- Pilots his own aircraft.
- Runs three miles a day.
- Disregarded eyeglasses after eye exercises.
- Commands a vocabulary of 130,000 words.
- Is a disciple of the intellectual and mystic Rosicrucian Order, which teaches the mastery of life.

— Shuns idleness.
"I think I've always been pretty much the captain of my own destiny," Wilson said in the comfort of his downtown office...in a building that bears his name.

Wilson's life started 65 years ago, in 1914 in Sutton County, in a ranching land—a "sea of grass"—broken up by creeks, tributaries of the Devil's and Llano rivers and in recent years by oil derricks and oilfield pump jacks.

"I HAVE GREAT freedom about what I do," he says.

Like an opportunist looking for the greatest advantage and benefits in life, Wilson steers his life headlong toward success in the Horatio Alger spirit.

And if something in life goes amuck, Wilson, like the existentialist, figures it is of his own doing: deed, misdeed or omission.

"Wherever we live," he said, "we create our own problems."

To avert problems and to further mold his life, Wilson, first of all, works at keeping himself healthy.

Without his wherewithal in body, mind and spirit, he could accomplish nothing other than to draw on his past laurels and investments, which are many and substantial.

"As far as my body, I'm very careful about my health."

He runs three miles a day; vigorously plays polo on fast, powerful polo ponies; watches his intake of foods and beverages, doesn't smoke tobacco and rarely drinks alcoholic beverages.

Now, about the latter drinking bit: He only "imbibes" champagne from the victory trophy cup in the wake of a strenuous match of polo—the sport of kings. ("I don't like cocktail parties.")

WILSON'S SUCCESS as a businessman, sportsman, rancher, investor, oil operator and an individual who is master of his own fate can be traced to his personal philosophy: a man should control his own destiny.

And in areas, he reflects conservatism. Politically, he is dismayed by the deluge of governmental "red tape" and the sprawling federal bureaucracy.

"The days are gone when the only government person in town was the sheriff."

And the populous, perhaps buried in apathy or feeling a sense of helplessness, is doing virtually nothing about controlling a burgeoning government.

"If the people of the United States will stand for that, they will stand for anything."

Much of America's problems could be averted, said Wilson, by individual achievement, such as vocabulary building.

"THE BASIC PROBLEM with the United States is the lack of vocabulary. The people need a vocabulary to understand what's going on" in the world, he said.

"We don't have high intellectual standards today that they had in the days of (Thomas) Jefferson. They understood philosophical concepts."

That was almost two centuries ago.

But earlier in this century, education was held in esteem and standards were strictly enforced.

"When I was in school, everybody could read."

Today, said Wilson, the vocabulary and "learning" have "been ruined by modernized educational methods."

Outside of public school and college, Wilson has been his own teacher and stimulus to more knowledge. His extensive vocabulary puts him in the upper 99th percentile in word knowledge.

"Anything I do, I really become engrossed in it," said Wilson.

And, being the sensible, rational person he is, Wilson begins with the basics and strives for the zenith.

"You can't learn trigonometry until you learn arithmetic."

Willie B. Wilson is a practical man of resilience and stamina and a youthful fellow who figures years are more for measuring seasons than his life on Earth.

Witness to that is his affinity for polo, which, if done properly, is both an expensive and potentially hazardous sport.

"It's a very dangerous sport. It's the most dangerous game there is," said Wilson, who has survived collisions and other mishaps known to be fatal to riders and their mounts.

Wilson, at 6-foot-2 and hovering at a trim and virile 185 pounds, runs three miles a day in a successful effort to make his life even more productive and worthwhile.

Just about everything he does is done well and with enthusiasm.

"Naturally," he said, "when I get started on something, I get engrossed."

Seemingly engrossed with her husband is his wife, Monetta, who is a successful interior decorator.

"I don't feel that I'm enslaved in any way," she said. "I can't see myself staying home, scrubbing the floors and doing the dishes."

She doesn't.

Three of Wilson's five sons—Word, Bill, and Duke—manage his investments, which include the W. Wilson Corp., Wilson Systems and the Wilson Ranches. And Willie B. Wilson oversees all the properties. Son Michael Hagan Wilson, about 20, is not yet settled down, and teen-aged son Byron Wilson is "very interested in polo," said Wilson.

Willie B. Wilson seems quite comfortable and content, though not complacent, in his role in life. Though he easily could, he has elected not to take the leisurely route.

He challenges feats and wins.

William "Willie B." Wilson is an individualist who has the wherewithal—including money, health, intellect and freedom—to do what he pleases. But he's far, far away from idleness. (Staff Photo by Ed Todd)

"The mind is so much stronger than people give it credit for," said Wilson.

And using that asset, Wilson has been able to reach life's pinnacle: freedom.

"To me, the epitome of life is the freedom of man. I think man can be very free."

Pope may ski highest of alps

CANALE D'AGORDO, Italy (AP)—A welcome of flowers and an invitation to ski down the highest mountain in the Dolomite Alps await Pope John Paul II when he makes a one-day pilgrimage Sunday to this tiny northern Italian town, the birthplace of his predecessor, the "smiling" pope, John Paul I.

"We couldn't have done any better if the guest were our Lord himself," said a municipal worker, busy giving a last coat of paint to a makeshift stand where the pope will celebrate an open-air Mass.

'Beef pups,' 'uncured pork strips' soon to hit food store

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Names such as "Beef pups," "uncured pork strips," "uncured sausage with salami flavoring added" will become part of history on Sept. 20. That's when nitrite-free processed meats will no longer have to be called by such fanciful names. Instead, according to a new Department of Agriculture regulation, they will be permitted to use the common or usual name of similar products cured with sodium nitrite use.

So beef pups will become "uncured hot dogs," the pork strips will be "uncured bacon" and the sausage with salami flavoring added will be "uncured salami."

According to Ellen Haas of Community Nutrition Institute, this regulation will give all nitrite free products easier access to the market and will make it less difficult "to measure consumer acceptance."

In addition Haas said, the regulation is important for small business people who "have been hassled by USDA" when they tried to get approval to market nitrite-free meats.

One small processor in Iowa, Ray Kennedy, has spent six or seven years fighting with USDA over marketing of a product he wanted to call Bakon. Pleas to his congressman and senator, a foot-high file of correspondence with USDA attest to his problem and several others like it.

More recently a California meat processor was unable to get USDA approval for his products through a state laboratory had certified them as perfectly safe.

All that should change with the new regulation which will require nitrite-free products to carry the following statement as part of the product name: "Uncured (product)," "No Nitrate or Nitrite Added."

In addition, if there is no alternative method of curing, such as canning, pickling or drying, the label must also carry the warning: "Not Preserved — Keep Refrigerated Below 40 Degrees Fahrenheit At All Times."

According to Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Foreman, "The department will have available a consumer information publication on how to handle nitrite-free meats safely and is producing public service television and radio announcements with a similar message."

A free copy of a publication on handling nitrite-free meats is available by writing to: U.S. Department of Agriculture, FSQS Publications, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Taiwan captures LL crown

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Although Dai Han-Chao pitched a no-hitter, Taiwan needed two extra innings Saturday to defeat the pinstriped kids of Campbell, Calif., 2-1, for the Little League Baseball World Series championship.

By RANDY ISENBERG

Rick Daugherty was the city's powerhouse bowler this past week with his first game 279 score enroute to a 240-228-747 series, 933 four-game block. Rick's scratch team, bowling in the Air Park Scratch League, rolled team games of 669, 600 and 608 enroute to a 2423 four-game, three-man team series.

The AP Scratch League team of THE TAIWAN players won two days after Typhoon Judy passed through their rural home community of Tu-Tzu Town, causing minor damage and no injuries, but prompting a precautionary evacuation due to a dam overflow.

Campbell, which flirted with the biggest upset in the 33-year history of the tournament, held its own for six regulation innings and one extra frame before first baseman Hou Chi-Mou singled home an unearned run to win it in the bottom of the eighth before an excited crowd of about 30,000 persons.

Campbell, physically the smallest team in the eight-team field, made one exceptional defensive play after another behind the pitching of Bob Fraka, who at 5-foot-2, 106 pounds, was the biggest player on his squad.

IN THE bottom of the eighth, shortstop Lu Chang-Kuen took first after he was struck on the batting helmet by a pitch from Fraka, who promptly jogged over to give Lu a sportsmanlike handshake.

Lu took second on a wild pitch before Fraka yielded a walk. Lu took third on another wild pitch and scored on the two-out single to center by Hou.

The victory was cheered by several thousand Chinese Americans, who came here from most of the major cities in the northeast to wave the Taiwan flag, ring gongs and root for their team.

Campbell, accustomed to the underdog role since it started play in the western regional, scored an unearned run in the first inning to take a 1-0 lead. Catcher Matt Allison walked and was forced at second by third baseman Dave DeCarlo.

WITH TWO out, Fraka hit a bloop to shallow left. Shortstop Lu and left fielder Yin Ching-Lung collided and Yin dropped the ball. Yin also threw wildly past home plate on the play as DeCarlo scored the only run.

But Dai, a 5-foot-3, 135-pounder, took control after that and finished with 17 strikeouts, allowing only one other walk.

Tanner moved to finals

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Top-seeded Roscoe Tanner defeated Bernie Mitton 7-5, 7-5 Saturday to advance to final of the $200,000 Association of Tennis Professionals Championship tournament.

Tanner will play in today's televised final against the winner of the match between Pat DuPre and Peter Fleming, scheduled later Saturday.

Down 1-4 in the first set, Tanner broke Mitton's serve in the seventh and 11th games to help win the first set.

Tanner, from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., also used his powerful serve to overcome Mitton, who admitted he was a little surprised by his early lead.

"Maybe I started thinking too much," Mitton said. "I got too tentative."

Facing elimination in the second set with Tanner serving for the match, the unseeded Mitton broke back to tie the second set, 5-5.

Tanner turned around to break Mitton's serve and then held his own to win the match.

"It's not just the serve anymore," said the finalist in this year's men's singles at Wimbledon. "I can put more pressure on my opponent than by just serving an ace."

THE MONTREAL (AP) — Evelyn Ashford, who took this year off from school to see if she could be competitive with the best sprinters in the world, convincingly proved Saturday that she was, winning the women's 100-meter dash at World Cup II.

The victory by the 22-year-old American was her second in less than 24 hours — and marked the second time she had upset the world record holder.

In the 100, she outlegged Marlies Gohr of East Germany, who had not lost in two years. Friday night in the 200, Ashford defeated world record holder Marita Koch of East Germany in the American record time of 21.83 seconds, the second fastest time in the history of the event.

Ashford also holds the American record in the 100 of 10.97. Only she and Gohr, 10.88, have cracked the 11-second barrier.

Saturday, Ashford and Gohr matched strides for about the first 50 meters, before the young American, who has strengthened herself by running on the beaches, in shallow surf

Daugherty lights up a 279

Rick Daugherty was the city's powerhouse bowler this past week with his first game 279 score enroute to a 240-228-747 series, 933 four-game block. Rick's scratch team, bowling in the Air Park Scratch League, rolled team games of 669, 600 and 608 enroute to a 2423 four-game, three-man team series.

The AP Scratch League team of THE TAIWAN players won two days after Typhoon Judy passed through their rural home community of Tu-Tzu Town, causing minor damage and no injuries, but prompting a precautionary evacuation due to a dam overflow.

Campbell, which flirted with the biggest upset in the 33-year history of the tournament, held its own for six regulation innings and one extra frame before first baseman Hou Chi-Mou singled home an unearned run to win it in the bottom of the eighth before an excited crowd of about 30,000 persons.

Campbell, physically the smallest team in the eight-team field, made one exceptional defensive play after another behind the pitching of Bob Fraka, who at 5-foot-2, 106 pounds, was the biggest player on his squad.

IN THE bottom of the eighth, shortstop Lu Chang-Kuen took first after he was struck on the batting helmet by a pitch from Fraka, who promptly jogged over to give Lu a sportsmanlike handshake.

Lu took second on a wild pitch before Fraka yielded a walk. Lu took third on another wild pitch and scored on the two-out single to center by Hou.

The victory was cheered by several thousand Chinese Americans, who came here from most of the major cities in the northeast to wave the Taiwan flag, ring gongs and root for their team.

Campbell, accustomed to the underdog role since it started play in the western regional, scored an unearned run in the first inning to take a 1-0 lead. Catcher Matt Allison walked and was forced at second by third baseman Dave DeCarlo.

WITH TWO out, Fraka hit a bloop to shallow left. Shortstop Lu and left fielder Yin Ching-Lung collided and Yin dropped the ball. Yin also threw wildly past home plate on the play as DeCarlo scored the only run.

But Dai, a 5-foot-3, 135-pounder, took control after that and finished with 17 strikeouts, allowing only one other walk.

Tanner moved to finals

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Top-seeded Roscoe Tanner defeated Bernie Mitton 7-5, 7-5 Saturday to advance to final of the $200,000 Association of Tennis Professionals Championship tournament.

Tanner will play in today's televised final against the winner of the match between Pat DuPre and Peter Fleming, scheduled later Saturday.

Down 1-4 in the first set, Tanner broke Mitton's serve in the seventh and 11th games to help win the first set.

Tanner, from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., also used his powerful serve to overcome Mitton, who admitted he was a little surprised by his early lead.

"Maybe I started thinking too much," Mitton said. "I got too tentative."

Facing elimination in the second set with Tanner serving for the match, the unseeded Mitton broke back to tie the second set, 5-5.

Tanner turned around to break Mitton's serve and then held his own to win the match.

"It's not just the serve anymore," said the finalist in this year's men's singles at Wimbledon. "I can put more pressure on my opponent than by just serving an ace."

HPMGA sets entry deadline

The tournament is fought by handicap, and there is an $18 entry fee. Trophies will be awarded to flight winners and a free barbecue will be held Saturday at 6:30 p.m. Refreshments will be provided throughout the tournament. A putting tournament will be held Sunday during the tournament.

Orantes turns net court into private playground

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Defending champion Manuel Orantes of Spain turned the court into a private playground and Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia rallied after a brief letdown Saturday in advancing to the semifinals of the 52nd U.S. Pro Tennis Championships at Longwood.

Orantes, bidding for a third consecutive title here, crushed fifth seeded Johan Kriek of South Africa 6-1, 6-0 in a 49-minute quarterfinal.

Smid, seeded seventh, defeated fellow Czech Pavel Slozil 6-3, 6-6, 2. Slozil was seeded third on the basis of performances this year, demolished Kriek, a 21-year-old now living in Austria.

With Kriek managing to get his first serve in only 10 of 32 times, Orantes breezed through the first set.

TEE TIME Hogan Park opens new headquarters

BY REX WORRELL
Hogan Park Golf Course

Hogan Park Golf Course began operations from a new location on North Fairgrounds Road Aug. 24, a mile east-southeast of the old pro shop which had been the HPGC headquarters since the course opened in 1958.

Play on the course will not change much as the front nine and back nine will remain exactly the same with the exception of where golfers start and finish each nine.

The new order of play, using old hole numbers will be front nine: start on No. 6, then play 8, 9, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and finish on No. 6. The back nine will start on 13, followed by 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 10 and 11 and finish on 12.

We will continue using the present scorecards with the old numbers until the new scorecards arrive, which should be around Sept. 1. There remain a lot of unfinished and unorganized situations relating to the operation from the new pro shop and snack bar. I am sure that with the golfers' patience, and the determination of the golf staff, plus a little bit of time, everything will work out for the best.

It's a delight for the staff to report to work at the new location and I'm sure all golfers and citizens of Midland can and will be proud of the new golf facility.

GOLF COURSE superintendent Robert

Campbell has indicated the new nine hole course will be playable some time during the first part of October. He has also asked for us to be patient and for all sightseeing to be done on foot...no cars, please...

Last reminder for the fourth annual Buffalo Trail Council Boy Scouts Pro-Am at HPGC Aug. 27. There are still a few amateur spots left and you can sign up by calling the golf shop. Entry fee is $25.

The Hogan Park Men's Golf Association will hold club championships over the Labor Day weekend. Entry fee is $18 for golfers with annual green fee permits and $30 for those without annual permits. There will be a barbecue and refreshments Saturday evening and a long drive contest Sunday. Deadline for entry is 6 p.m. Aug. 30, so sign up early...

Eyvonne Massey, HPGC snack bar manager, is looking forward to meeting all Hogan golfers. She is in the process of hiring personnel for cooking and if any of you are interested in the job, please contact her at the Hogan snack bar.

We are happy to welcome Eyvonne to the HPGC staff and feel certain you will give her the welcome West Texans are noted for...

WE HAD an eagle last week by Jerry Fisher, using a five iron on No. 4. Players in Jerry's group were Greg Carlton, Greg Shelton, and Al

Copeland. It was also indicated by witnesses that the shot was not very artistic, but it was definitely and exact shot...

We will be opening the Hogan driving range as soon as cart paths are put in by the South Texas Construction Co. So bear with us, it shouldn't be much longer...

Dean Leyerly of Hughes Tool Company and Charlie Newton of Western Catholic Inc. are checking on some reject cones to be used as tee markers. We appreciate their efforts and ask any of the rest of you who may know where we can acquire some cones to please let us know...

The pairings for the HP Women's Association Playday to be held on Thursday are:

Inflation plans no holiday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a drop in grocery prices last month, American shoppers can expect inflation to boost food prices once again, the Agriculture Department's chief economist says.

Last month's decline in grocery prices marked the first time since early 1976 that they fell two months in a row.

But "due to inflation in the general economy, everything is going to be slightly higher" for the rest of the year, economist Howard W. Hjort said Friday.

Labor Department figures show the price of food — both meals eaten at home and those at restaurants — was up 0.1 percent from June to July.

Broken down, the figures show the price of meals eaten at restaurants and other eateries was up 0.6 percent, while the price of food eaten at home declined 0.1 percent.

Grocery shoppers will soon be paying more for coffee because the Brazilian crop has been damaged, Hjort said. Price rises can also be expected for potatoes due to a smaller U.S. crop, he said.

Prices of fresh fruits and vegetables and meat should decline, the economist said.

By the end of 1979, average food prices are expected to be about 11 percent above last year's averages, he said. In July, they were averaging 10.2 percent higher than a year ago.

The primary source of food price increases last month was the rise in the share of the retail price that goes to middlemen, Hjort said.

The middlemen's share has climbed 20.6 percent on an annual basis for the first seven months of 1979, he said, compared with a general inflation rate of 12 to 13 percent on an annual basis.

That means, he said, "retail food prices are higher than can be justified by the increase in prices of things (middlemen) have to buy."

His remarks were criticized by the Food Marketing Institute, the grocery industry's trade organization.

"Grocery prices are the one bright spot in the economy," said institute Vice President Robert A. Dobkin. "Yet, we wonder what kind of politicking makes the Carter administration continue to criticize the food industry so unfairly."

DIRT, SQUIRT & QUIRT Farm, Ranch Tour scheduled Tuesday

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent - Agriculture

Rainfall from scattered thunderstorms continued to dot the area last week. Unfortunately, some of them have been of a rather violent nature and some damage has resulted to crops in the Greenwood and Valley View communities.

Some moderate hail damage occurred in the Greenwood community the first of the week, and the cloud that came through Midland Thursday afternoon resulted in hail and heavy damage to several farms in the Valley View community. Some of these same farms had received heavy hail in July.

Otherwise, crops and ranges are coming along well in other areas of the county, and the cotton crop promises to be good if fall conditions are favorable and we escape further hail damage.

THE ANNUAL MIDLAND County Farm and Ranch Tour sponsored by the Midland Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the County Extension Service and the Soil Conservation Service is scheduled Tuesday. The tour brings rural and urban people together in a look at agriculture in Midland County.

This year the tour stops will include a catfish operation, an 18,000-laying hen farm, two cotton operations to observe new techniques in parasite (nematode) and weed control, a look at a new pasture grass (Kleingrass) and site for a grass nursery to test other possible new improved grasses, and one of the many pecan orchards coming into production in the county (Butler Estate Orchard).

The tour route will give participants a look at some of the finest cotton crops in several years, lush alfalfa fields, the experimental grape vineyard that John Crosby is developing, some excellent rangelands and livestock.

The tour will depart the parking lot at Cub Stadium (Hogan Park) promptly at 8 a.m. Anyone desiring to take the buses should contact the Chamber of Commerce (683-3381) for reservations. In the event buses are filled, persons may accompany the tour in private vehicles. Ladies are welcome.

DURING AUGUST and through the first part of September the pecan has a tendency to shed immature nuts. This is commonly known as "August drop." This occurs during the water stage of nut development. During this stage the immature nut is particularly susceptible to drop from conditions which may occur during the earlier part of the season. There is no specific factor which can be traced as the actual cause of this drop. However, some precautions can be taken to reduce the severity of August drop.

Any stress or shock to the tree can cause immature nuts to shed. A typical stress situation in this part of the country is lack of, or too much, moisture. During the water stage, a uniform supply of soil moisture is essential August drop to a minimum. Excessive fluctuations of soil moisture will cause stress and shock to the trees, causing premature drop. Irrigation should be planned to establish uniform soil moisture during this part of the growing season.

Hot, drying wind is another stress factor often encountered as a possible cause of August drop. Maintenance of adequate soil moisture can serve as a deterrent under these conditions.

Any damage (insect or physical) to the shuck during the water stage will also cause nuts to fall. Insects, both sucking and chewing, such as yellow pecan aphids and stink bugs, should be controlled to a maximum to prevent nut drop.

Attil another factor which plays an important part in the August drop phenomenon is crop load. If the tree has retained an unusually large crop set, the chances for August drop are increased.

RINGING THE BELL

Amin small timer on scale of horror

The Black Experience: In the sliding scale of horror, the regime of Idi Amin may not rank the worst in recent years — especially when Amin's eight years is compared with Pol Pot's three years in Cambodia.

In the latter case of genocide, Pol Pot, with the help of China, managed to exterminate up to two million people before the Chinese-backed government was ousted with the help of the Vietnamese. In Uganda perhaps 100,000 to 300,000 were killed before Tanzania launched the invasion that ousted Amin.

Unlike Cambodia, there was no systematic slaughter of the literate, no attempt to do away with the intellectuals, no attempt to return to the glories of a feudalistic past, according to our sources.

THE NEW SOUTH: In commemorating the 25th anniversary of the 1954 court decision outlawing public school racial separation, the board of directors of the NAACP went to Columbia, S.C., where they held a dinner with Sen. Strom Thurmond as the guest of honor. The senator was re-elected last fall, with heavy black support, and South Carolina blacks praised the senator as a driving force behind the influx of more federal dollars to the state's black neighborhoods...Could this indicate a gradual change in Dixie's racial climate? Thurmond's willingness to break bread with the national directors of the leading civil rights organization is more than a social incident. It was a political tour de force on both sides, according to belling sources.

RECENT GREAT quotes: "Black people all over America must come to the aid of our black colleges and universities to make sure that they survive, for their survival ensures our survival." (L. Farrakhan).

On to San Antonio: Baptists from over the nation will meet in San Antonio, for the 99th session of the National Baptist Convention. The sessions will be held in the Convention Center Complex, with the host church being Mt. Sinai and Dr. L.G. Mills as host pastor and general chairman of the local entertainment committee. Some 14,000 persons attended the 75th session of the Congress this summer in Chicago, it is reported. The NBPB publishes some 1.5 million Bible Study and other religious periodicals every three months.

Texas State Guard unit slates disaster exercise at Big Spring

More than 50 members of the Texas State Guard are expected to participate in an emergency disaster training exercise in Big Spring Sept. 9.

The drill of the 403d Military Police Battalion of the Texas State Guard will simulate the battalion supporting Howard County and Big Spring Civil Defense Director W.D. Berry in the aftermath of a tornado strike on the former Webb Air Force Base housing area.

The 403d Battalion consists of the battalion headquarters and Co. A in Andrews, Co. B in Monahans, Co. C in Big Spring, Co. D in Midland and Co. E in Odessa.

The state guard primarily gives military support to civil authorities during times of emergency. They train year-round to perform such duties as crowd and traffic control, light search and rescue, first aid, evacuation, emergency communications, housing and shelter management.

The Big Spring exercise will help guardsmen perfect procedures for working with other emergency agencies.

During the exercise the guard will practice working with local civil defense officials to seal off the area, protect from the threat of looters, evacuate the injured, treat them at a first aid station and send them to the hospital, and work on communications procedures.

The exercise will start with a briefing at 1 p.m. at the National Guard Armory and end at 5 p.m. after two hours in the field and a one-hour critique.

Midlander's work on exhibit at MC

Paintings and graphics by Warren Taylor are on view in the McCormick Gallery at Midland College.

Taylor recently joined the MC faculty as an art instructor. He will be teaching painting and drawing classes for beginning, intermediate and advanced art students at MC.

Taylor works in acrylics, oils, watercolor and graphics. He displays a humorous and startling style in still life studies of shells, oysters, lemons and other commonplace items. His works usually have a strong side-light approach that serves to heighten the contrast of color and objects.

ENTERTAINMENT

The exhibit in the McCormick Gallery will be open to the public between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays during the current week, and from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays beginning Sept. 4. The show will hang through Sept. 12.

A native of Kansas, Taylor holds a bachelor of fine arts degree from Bethany College. Earlier this year he earned his master's degree in painting and drawing from Fort Hays State University. He previously was a public school teacher in Hutchinson and Lindsay, Kan.

Dallas Symphony Orchestra plans all-Beethoven concerts

DALLAS — The Dallas Symphony Orchestra is planning a series of all-Beethoven concerts during September to initiate the DSO's 80th anniversary season.

The Beethoven series will offer the composer's nine famous symphonies, five piano concertos, violin concerto and major overtures. The series is billed as the DSO's anniversary gift to the public.

Leading off the concert events on Thursday will be the orchestra and guest violinist Elmar Olivera, under the baton of Maestro Eduardo Mata, performing Beethoven's Violin Concerto in D Major. Also programmed are the "Leonore" Overture and the Symphony No. 4.

Second concert on Sept. 1 will offer Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 and Symphony No. 6. Mata will conduct. Third event on Sept. 6 will feature famed pianist Rudolf Firkušny and the orchestra in the Beethoven piano concertos No. 1 and 4. Rainer Miedel will be guest conductor for the event.

Miedel also will be on the podium for the Sept. 8 concert, and Firkušny will be the guest artist in a performance of the piano concertos No. 2 and 5. Also programmed for the event is the "Ruins of Athens" Overture.

Pianist Emanuel Ax will be guest artist with the orchestra in a pair of concerts on Sept. 14 and 15 which will present the Piano Concerto No. 3. Also to be performed on the dual programs are Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 and Symphony No. 8.

The DSO's music director and principal conductor, Eduardo Mata, will be on the podium to conduct all-orchestral concerts on Sept. 20 and 22. The events will present Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and Symphony No. 3.

Climaxing the month-long Beethoven emphasis will be concerts on Sept. 28, 29 and 30, featuring the composer's monumental Symphony No. 9. The orchestra, under the baton of Maestro Mata, will be joined by the Dallas Symphony Chorus under the direction of Stewart J. Clark. Guest vocalists in the performance will be soprano Maria Coronada, tenor Gene Bullard, contralto Miriam Abramowitch and bass-baritone Malcolm King.

Additional details on the Beethoven concerts and information on ticket availability may be obtained by contacting the Dallas Symphony office, P.O. Box 12098, Dallas 75225, or telephone 214-692-0203.

Mrs. C.E. Bissell and anthropologist Dr. Fred Wendorf do some historical "shop talk" during a reception at Museum of the Southwest at which Mrs. Bissell was the honored guest. She and her late husband, Col. C.E. "Bud" Bissell, gave their extensive and valuable collection of Indian artifacts to the museum several years ago, and the recent reception was to honor their contributions to research into Texas pre-history. Dr. Wendorf, who is Henderson-Morrison Professor of Pre-history at Southern Methodist University, worked closely with Col. Bissell on numerous anthropological research projects in past years. 'Pops in the Park' concert to be today in Odessa park

ODESSA — The Odessa "Pops in the Park" concert by the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra will be at 8:15 p.m. today in Freedom Park here.

The concert program will be a repeat of the park program played by the orchestra Saturday night in Midland's Wadley-Barron Park.

The orchestra, under the baton of music director Dr. Tom Hohstadt, will play a series of light, "listenable" show tunes and movie theme music. Also programmed is the famous "Water Music" orchestral suite of G.F. Handel and the third act prelude from Richard Wagner's "Lohengrin."

The pops concerts in Midland and Odessa are traditional end-of-summer events in the two cities, and serve to remind the public of the upcoming symphony subscription season. The orchestra's 1979-80 season will begin in October.

Tonight's concert will be open to the public without charge. Freedom Park is located on East University Avenue, near the Odessa YMCA.

Stars want faces off dollar bills and out of circulation

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For a change, some Hollywood stars want their faces taken out of circulation.

Specifically, they want a Colorado mail order company to stop offering unauthorized $1 bills with the stars' likenesses showing where George Washington usually appears. And they want $30 million in damages.

Actor Jack Lord, comedian Carol Burnett, singer Don Ho, actor Dennis Weaver and former "Charlie's Angels" co-star Kate Jackson lead a sparkling cast of celebrities who are suing the company for pasting their faces on the bills, which sell for $2 apiece.

"The Personality Dollar Bills appear to be genuine U.S. Federal Reserve notes in $1 denominations," Monroe said Thursday.

'Stars in Palo Duro Canyon' extravaganza in third season

CANYON — Dance, the first of all the performing arts, began outdoors. Now, in late summer, in colorful Palo Duro Canyon near Amarillo, the art returns to the open air.

"Stars in Palo Duro Canyon," a special outdoor extravaganza, will be presented for the third season as an exclamation point to the summer's performances of the famous outdoor musical drama, "Texas."

Backed by the ageless rocks of the canyon, with the dancers' drapery moving in the wind, the series of dance evenings offer new dimensions and experiences for the audiences. Ballet works to be offered will range from "Hansel and Gretel" to a classic Pas de Deux, and from a can-can number in an Old West saloon to a modern work titled "Discomania."

From Aug. 30 through Sept. 16, dancers from many parts of the world will be performing in the dance spectacular. They will be part of "Stars in Palo Duro Canyon," produced by the Lone Star Ballet of Amarillo which will have presentations in Pioneer Amphitheater in the canyon.

The theater is the home of the musical drama, "Texas" which has just completed its annual summer season. The drama, by noted playwright Paul Green, has played to more than 1,500,000 people in the last decade and a half.

Artistic director for the Lone Star Ballet is Neil Hess, well-known for his choreography for the "Texas" show each summer. His dancers of the Lone Star Ballet have produced the famous "Nutcracker" ballet for eight Christmas seasons in Amarillo.

An integral part of the series of dance performances will be the presentation of the story of Palo Duro Canyon in a sound-and-light spectacular based on a Paul Green script.

Tickets for the series of special entertainments are $3.50. Performances begin at 8 p.m. daily except Wednesdays, from Thursday through Sept. 16. Tickets may be reserved through the "Texas" box office, P.O. Box 268, Canyon 79015, or telephone 806-655-2181.

'Ghost Road Light' Big Thicket legend

By JAMES R. KING

SARATOGA, Texas (AP) — There seems to be little middle ground in these parts when it comes to a discussion of the "Ghost Road Light," a luminous ball which some people have seen hovering near this Southeast Texas town in the heart of the Big Thicket.

"I've been here 42 years and I've never seen the light," says Sheriff Billy Payne of nearby Kountze, whose job it is to control lovers, sightseers, beer-drinkers and pot-smokers who come here hoping to see the light.

"It's a hoax," the sheriff says flatly.

But hundreds of other witnesses, including law enforcement officers, have reported seeing it on the lonely dirt road between here and the ghost town of Bragg, seven heavily wooded miles away. It only appears at night — and only some nights — those who have seen it say. Most witnesses said it was very humid when the light appeared.

"I saw it in the middle of the road. Then it went into the woods and burst into sparkles," said Mildred Bracken of nearby Honey Island. "Then it went out like that," she added with a clasp of her hands.

Other witnesses say the light, described in varying colors, has darted, jumped, floated and sometimes hovered stationary among the tall loblolly pines standing close along both sides of the road. Some say it has chased them.

"It came down the road traveling right toward me and then went off the road through the woods and disappeared," said Harold Nicholas, 49, of Saratoga. "It was about the size of a person's head, maybe a little larger. It was real bright. It was orange and looked like the light of a train. It made no noise."

H.K. Pitts, 48, of nearby Warren, was a deputy sheriff in 1965 on patrol along the remote road when he said he spotted the Ghost Light.

"It was 2 or 3 in the morning. I was driving slowly, easing along with my lights out, when I saw what appeared a light approaching the back of my patrol car."

Pitts said even though he only saw a single light, he assumed it was from an approaching car. But when he turned around to investigate, he found no car. He found nothing.

"It disappeared," he said.

There have been several scientific theories offered to explain the light — a college professor from Beaumont once surmised it was caused by swamp gas; others say it could be auto headlights being refracted by the moist atmosphere.

Rob Riggs, assistant publisher of the Kountze News-Visitor and officer of an Austin-based research group, the Institute of Applied Harmonics, has written articles in his newspaper theorizing the mysterious light is caused by disturbances in the earth's geomagnetic field.

But no rational explanation for the phenomenon has ever been proven, and in the absence of a scientific solution, legends have flourished.

Some witnesses say the headlight theory is unlikely because the road is "as straight as an arrow" and they claim they have seen the light when there were no other vehicles in the area.

The road used to be a railroad track between Bragg and Saratoga, until Santa Fe abandoned the run in 1934 and removed the rails when the town of Bragg itself was abandoned. The only remaining building is the old Bragg Hotel, which is in an advanced state of ruin.

Before the tracks were lifted, one of the engineers was murdered.

"Some people say the light is the murdered engineer haunting the area," said Archer Fulgim, retired publisher of the Kountze News.

Kountze Mayor Winfred G. Birdwell said the legends have been passed down by generations and "everyone who came along added a little bit to it."

He said the road is near the site of the "Keyser Burnout," where a Confederate colonel unable to round up deserters in the Big Thicket near Honey Island land "set the woods on fire."

Another legend holds that the light is the spirit of a group of Mexicans who helped build the railroad and then were supposedly slain by a foreman who didn't have enough money to pay their wages.

"That's just a bunch of publicity stuff," scoffed County Commissioner

T.S. Hooks. "I saw it one night. It's the reflection from car lights. You can go out there and see for yourself."

Hooks tried without success to have the trees along both sides of the road chopped down to discourage "pot smokers and a little bit of everything else" he said goes on along the Bragg Road at night.

GEOPHYSICISTS

Earn more, advance rapidly, work with newest technology at Aramco. Interviews here August 27, 28.

While demonstrating your expertise as a processing geophysicist, geophysical interpreter or seismic stratigrapher, you'll have many opportunities for career advancement. Plus a lot more money, a fine education for the children, long vacations, world travel. For an interview with Aramco's Bob Shannon at The Hilton, August 27, 28, call (915) 683-6131.

Aramco, the world's largest oil-producing company, is also the oil firm involved in the development of the energy resources of Saudi Arabia.

Some of the projects are the world's largest—staggering in scope, complexity and imagination. Nowhere else is advanced technology being applied so widely.

Excellent combination of benefits

The large number of talented people needed can earn many benefits. There are financial incentives that include a substantial tax-protected expatriate premium for overseas assignment. (For example, if you are earning $30,000 in the States, your equivalent salary in Saudi Arabia might be $42,000, depending on family status.) You get 40 days' paid vacation every 12½ months. Plus good family and bachelor living conditions, and excellent schools for children.

Also keep in mind that your employment in the progressive, expanding work environment of Saudi Arabia could lead to good career advancement opportunities.

You might be exactly right for one of these challenging jobs.

You'll need at least a bachelor's degree in geology, geophysics or other related science. Oil company experience helpful but not required, as is a well-rounded exploration background.

What our geophysicists will do

We are currently planning a new office building and data processing facility in Dhahran to be completed in the fall of 1981. In it will be housed the very latest equipment available. You'll be working with the most modern technology available with the leader in program development for static corrections. Initially, you'll work in Crofton, England, a suburb of London. After the completion of the building, you'll move to Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, where you'll work with some of the most highly qualified professionals in the industry. Plus you'll be responsible for your own work, and you'll present it to management yourself, not through committee. Take a look at our specific disciplines.

Processing Geophysicists selection, quality control.

Sr. Processing Geophysicists—5 to 10 years' experience; responsible for one or more processing teams, results analysis, new process recommendations, plus the opportunity to work with field recording crews.

Geophysical Processing Supervisor—over 10 years' experience; responsible for processing newly acquired data as well as reprocessing older data in a particular geographical area.

Interpretation Geophysicists
Jr. Geophysical Interpreter—3 to 5 years' experience; work closely with processing geophysicists, produce both time, depth and isochron maps to understand the "growth history" of prospects.

Sr. Geophysical Interpreter—5 to 10 years' experience; develop prospective areas and drillable locations, coordinate all available data: geological as well as geophysical.

Geophysical Interpretation Supervisor—over 10 years' experience; work closely with Area Geologists, Area Geophysicists, and Field Operation people to finalize prospect development.

Seismic Stratigrapher—work with area people to delineate the stratigraphic implications of the seismic sections. 3-D surveys and swath or multiple-line shooting.

Can you grow professionally in these jobs? You bet you can—faster and higher than you probably could in the States, depending on the amount of drive and initiative you put into your work.

Interested? Call Bob Shannon at (915) 683-6131 for an interview at The Hilton. If you can't make the interview, send your resume in confidence to: Aramco Services Company, Department MRT0826RSB, 1100 Milam Building, Houston, Texas 77002.

The Gallery OF HOMES

13 BETTER WAYS

1. BACKLOG OF BUYERS. As a leading Broker in your community, your Gallery Broker traditionally has access to buyers for homes as they come on the market. Some of these buyers may be waiting for your home - right now!
2. NEWCOMER PIPELINE. Local industries, satisfied customers, and other spheres of influence recommend Gallery to newcomers who are house-hunting in your community.
3. PRICING ASSISTANCE. When you list your home with us, we spread the word. Through local newspaper advertising and in 100,000 copies of our own nationally-circulated listing magazine, Glimpses from the Galleries.
4. NATIONAL ADVERTISING. Gallery of Homes advertises regularly on major TV and radio networks - also in national magazines. With Gallery and you go with a name people know and trust.
5. INVITING OFFICES. Gallery real estate offices are like no others. The warm, uncluttered, living room atmosphere helps make buying or selling a home an enjoyable experience.
6. YOUR HOME IN GLORIOUS COLOR. We showcase your home in our offices by placing a full-color photo of it in our famous Gallery illuminated shadowboxes. Next to an in-person visit, there's no better way to show off the beauty of a home!
7. FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE. Only you can set the price of your home. But we can be a big help. By telling you what similar homes in your area are going for, and by giving you our recommended price.
8. BUYER SCREENING. Before showing your home to a prospect, we check his or her income, downpayment capability, real needs and motivation. That way, we keep you from being bothered by "sightseers" and other unlikely buyers.
9. FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE. To help qualified buyers obtain money at the lowest possible rates, we keep up to date on the lending institutions. Buyers appreciate our assistance, especially when money is tight!
10. RELOCATION SERVICES. Through Gallery's extensive relocation services (covering more than 5,000 communities), we offer you access to out-of-town buyers who may be interested in your home.
11. THIRD PARTY NEGOTIATING. Prefer to avoid any kind of face-to-face negotiations with a buyer? We'll handle them for you - in accordance with your instructions.
12. FULL TIME SERVICES. Our sales counselors are ready to serve you at your convenience. If evenings or weekends are best for you, we're more than happy to accommodate.
13. TRAINED PROFESSIONALS. Gallery sales counselors are the cream of the crop. They're among the best-trained and most dedicated professionals in Real Estate. This can be highly reassuring when you're making a transaction as important as the sale of your home!

We invite you to stop by and find out more about us. Or simply give us a call. We do our homework. We bring People Home.

SO THIS IS WHAT VITAMIN'S BEEN TALKING ABOUT ALL MORNING.

IT'S ABOUT TIME HE GOT BACK ON HIS TROLLEY...

THIS, MY DEAR, MAY BE YOUR LAST OPPORTUNITY TO TRAVEL IN A CIVILIZED FASHION.

MOM--WE'RE NOT OVERDOING THE SIGHTSEEING BIT, ARE WE NOW?

NO--I'M FINE--ENJOYING MYSELF.

THE RIDE ON THE ANTIQUE TROLLEY GIVES THE TRACYS A GLIMPSE AT CENTRAL WASHINGTON'S FAMOUS APPLE ORCHARDS.

BUT TRACY'S MIND SEEMS ELSEWHERE--

YOU'RE NOT MUCH AT VACATIONS, ARE YOU, DEAR?

I WAS JUST WONDERING HOW BONNIE'S FRIEND, DETECTIVE SAMPSON, IS DOING ON THAT ROBBERY SHOOTING," SAYS TRACY.

hints from Heloise

DEAR FRIENDS:

Ohhh, I just got back from a wedding reception and saw what I thought was the most fantastic idea! After the wedding, everyone was following each other to the reception which was held in a relative's home.

Our little caravan found the street with all the cars but no one knew the street address.

We were all taking odds on which house it was and who was going to find out when I spied a big white wedding bell stuck to a mail box.

This must be the place. Then to show the guests that it was around in the backyard, they had stuck several stakes in the ground with big bells and ribbon on them to show us the path.

Nothing is worse than trying to find the right house, especially at night when all it takes is something stuck out by the curb for all to see.

What do you think?

Heloise

THE CANINE CORPS

DEAR HELOISE:

I have blue tweed carpeting that is wall to wall and the dog had an accident on it. The color faded, leaving an unsightly yellowish spot.

One day, I took two shades of blue crayon and just kept going back and forth on the spot and it disappeared. No one would ever know it was there.

If it should reappear after a time, I'll just crayon it again.

PEGGY'S PAINTERS

DEAR HELOISE:

Save old blouses and shirts for children to use as covers-ups when finger painting.

Protects clothing and allows the youngsters more freedom in their activities.

Peggy Smith

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Needing a narrow coffee table, yet quite long, we came up with the idea to use a leaf from a table that we no longer have around.

The leaf was covered with a plastic topping and we attached wrought iron legs and put molding around the four sides. Sprayed the molding black, same as the legs. Voila! A lovely table.

W.T.S.

DEAR READER:

This is your column. If you'd like to share a hint, ask a question or make a suggestion, write me care of this newspaper.

Hugs, Heloise

BRIGHT, BRIGHTER, BRIGHTEST

DEAR HELOISE:

My room needed a little class and something to hold books so I got two identical small soft drink bottles and some fish tank gravel.

I filled the bottles with the colored gravel and now I have bright bookends.

Lois Powell, Age 13

And I have a bright hint from a bright young reader.

Love, Heloise

NO ONE'S LOST IN THE SHUFFLE

DEAR HELOISE:

My family enjoys playing cards but my brother and sister have a hard time holding the cards.

So my grandmother made a card holder using two tops off of potato chip cans and two buttons.

She took the tops and put them back to back with a button on each outer side. Then, she sewed the buttons together, going through the plastic.

It worked great and beat buying those expensive ones in the store.

K.K., Age 12

A GRANNY IDEA!

DEAR HELOISE:

When our grandchildren visit, sometimes we have rainy days so they cannot go outside to play.

I save all the coupons in the newspapers and magazines so when this happens I have them cut them out very carefully and put them in separate envelopes, which takes quite a long time.

Then we sort out what we want and go to the market and buy their "special" choices and they give them to the checkout person.

This is such a simple, happy way to entertain them.

Mrs. H. Biryon

TRICK OF THE WEEK

DEAR HELOISE:

For those mothers who sew, here's a hint for you...

My children think I'm a bore when I sew, so when I'm finished and have scraps left from stretch material I use it to make "jewelry" for them.

For my little girls, I make rings, bracelets, necklaces, etc. For my little boy, a head band to put feathers in. It's very easy — just cut the scraps in narrow strips of the desired length and sew the ends together.

Now my kids look forward to my sewing so they will have some new jewelry.

DIRTY WORLD

The FAMILY CIRCUS

Wives are special people too

By SANDI BREEDEN
Lifestyle Writer

It has always been said, and perhaps it is true, it takes a special kind of man to be a law enforcement officer.

Likewise, it takes a special kind of woman to be married to that special kind of man.

Patsy Painter is one of those special kind of women. Her husband is Gary Painter, an eight year veteran law enforcement officer, a year being spent with the Midland Police Department.

Although they have been married only six months, Patsy is very familiar with the life of a law enforcement officer, having been secretary to Police Chief Wayne Gideon for four years.

"I'M SCARED WHEN he works, and when he works midnights, I can't sleep," said the attractive wife, mother and secretary. "I trust Gary and know that he has been well-trained, but when you're working with the public, especially at night, anything can happen."

Patsy said the public does not bother them, but she added the public does not have the correct image of policemen.

"The public thinks of policemen as super human. They're not supposed to have feelings," she stated.

Whether it is the danger of the job many women find exciting or just trying to keep from getting a ticket, it is a fact many women are very attracted to law enforcement officers; to an extent they will go after him and he won't have to do anything but enjoy the attention.

Women who offer themselves to Painter in exchange for getting rid of a ticket do not bother Patsy. "I know he will not accept because of his respect of himself and for his uniform. I think most policemen are that way," she added.

Her six-year-old daughter Sandy likes having a policeman for a daddy. "She is very proud of Gary," she smiled. "She likes to run around telling everyone her daddy is a policeman."

LIKING A POLICEMAN for a daddy appears to be popular, at least in Midland.

Hoping he comes home the same way he left, Patsy and Sandy Painter tell their husband and daddy goodbye as he leaves for work. Gary Painter, a eight year veteran in law enforcement, has worked for the Midland Police Department for a year. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

"The public thinks of policemen as super human. They're not supposed to have feelings."

Terry and Lee Lowe

A side of policemen the public usually does not see is the officer being what is most important to him; a husband and daddy. David Wilkes, lieutenant for the Midland Police Department, watches as his wife and children play Monopoly. Wilkes has been in law enforcement for 10 years, all with the Midland department. Trying to stay in the long

When he walks out the door looking so proud in the uniform that was not so easy to get, she smiles goodbye knowing she may never see him alive again.

As he opens the door to the car that is making him a prime target, she prays that John Q. Public will be nice to him and not injure or kill the man she shares her hopes and lifelong dreams with.

As the patrol car pulls away from the curb and he waves that final goodbye she softly returns to the house that is theirs and she hopes continues to be theirs and not hers, the widow of a law enforcement officer.

Joey and Darlene Heineman have a three-year-old daughter, Courtney, who is proud of her daddy too.

"Courtney is aware her daddy is a policeman," said the mother of a four month old son as well. "When we are out, every time she sees a patrol car she says, 'that's my daddy,' she laughed.

Darlene also works and is president of the Police Auxiliary, which she says "is the 'Goodwill Ambassador' between the public and law enforcement officers."

Heineman has been a policeman for five of the eight years they have been married and Darlene said there is little difference in him now and before he became a policeman. "He always wanted to be a policeman," she said.

PERHAPS HAVING A policeman for a father has helped Darlene's attitude about worrying.

"Sure I worry, we all do, but my husband has proved by his actions many times he is capable of handling different situations and I know he will be careful.

"Sometimes it is hard for officers to enforce the law because of other laws that tie their hands and keep them from doing their job," she said.

"This affects the public's outlook on the officer because they don't stop and think why certain matters were handled the way they were."

Rita Wilkes is also very proud of her husband, David, a lieutenant for the police department.

"I AM VERY proud of his work. He likes it and I wouldn't have him doing anything else, as long as he likes it," she stated.

The Wilkes have been married 13 years, and he has been a policeman for 10 years, all with the Midland Police Department.

Even with three children, Rita says the public does not bother them.

"A lot of policemen live in this neighborhood, so really there's no problem," she said.

Although she has never worked outside their home, Rita said her husband's job does not dominate their lives. "He usually quits being a policeman when he gets home," she said.

SHE ADDED THAT his wearing a gun does not bother her. "He didn't have a gun before he became a policeman, but it doesn't bother me when he comes home wearing one," she stated.

The soft spoken woman refers to women who throw themselves at officers as "groupies" and says she does not worry about her husband dealing with them.

"I don't know whether it's the uniform or what, but there seems to be women who will throw themselves at policemen," she said. "But either you trust your husband or you don't. The job doesn't matter."

Another policeman's wife thought she might become the widow left with lifelong dreams and hopes dumped in her lap when her husband was stabbed recently.

"While I was in the waiting room at the hospital not knowing whether Terry would live, a lot of things went through my mind," said Lee Lowe, wife of police officer Terry Lowe who was recently stabbed while on duty.

"I KEPT THINKING 'I'm only 21, what will I do if he dies'. I kept thinking of all the things we had planned to do."

Lee said she would not ever encourage her husband to leave law enforcement however, because "I wouldn't want him to tell me to quit being a secretary."

Lowe has been in law enforcement for three years, two spent as a deputy sheriff in Colorado and one with the Midland police department. Lee said the attitude of Midlanders has always been a positive one and their reaction to Lowe's being stabbed reinforced that feeling.

"When we moved into a neighborhood in Colorado, everyone was friendly and very sociable, but after the first time Terry brought the patrol car home, they wouldn't speak to us," she stated.

LEE SAID SHE would not allow a police scanner in the house. "I don't want to know what's going on," the lively blonde said.

"My mother-in-law keeps a scanner in her house and she heard when Terry got stabbed and she is the one that called and told me," she said. "If I had heard it on the scanner, I probably would have killed myself getting to the hospital."

There has been a positive side to the stabbing according to Lee.

"I can now understand why on his day off he wants to go have coffee with the other officers," she smiled. "Before, it would bother me because I would wonder why on his one night off, he wanted to be with the other officers."

"There is a great brotherhood between the officers that I didn't really understand before Terry got stabbed."

Merle Brown at one time wanted to be a law enforcement officer herself. "That was when we were first married and Gary told me one officer in a family is enough," she laughed.

HER HUSBAND IS Sergeant Gary Brown, who is a five year law enforcement veteran, with four of those years with the Midland department.

The Brown's have no children now, but they are expecting one in November. Merle says her attitude about worrying might change after the baby is born.

"Right now I don't worry. I never have worried," she said. "However, that might change after the baby is born."

The lively woman said she never worries about her husband dealing with the women who throw themselves at officers. "I don't worry any more than I would if he was in another profession," she said.

"I ALWAYS SAID there were two people I would never marry," said Kathy Stratton, wife of Captain Richard Stratton, a 10 year veteran of law enforcement. "That was a preacher or a law enforcement officer," she smiled.

When the Stratton's were married, he was going to college to become a veterinarian. "He got a job as a dispatcher at the police department while he was going to college, then he became a patrolman and has been in law enforcement since," she said.

"I wish my husband was not a law enforcement officer," she said, "but he likes his job, and he is good at it, and as long as he is happy, I'm happy," she smiled.

SHE SAID THEIR two sons, J.W. and Sam, are proud of their daddy too. "They like having a law enforcement officer as a daddy," she said.

The Stratton's do not discuss his job with the Midland Sheriff's Office, where he has worked for two years.

"Law enforcement officers have a lot of pride in their work," she said. "Because of the type work they are in, confidentiality plays a big part in their job," she stated. "If they lose the confidentiality, they are not worth much as an officer."

Kathy also does not worry about women throwing themselves at her husband.

"He's tempted," she said, "but so am I. If you can't trust one another, what do you have?"

Relationship goes to pot

DEAR ABBY: My husband and our children recently visited my brother and his family who live in a very affluent suburb of a large Midwestern city. We all had a wonderful time—especially the children. We have a daughter, 14, and a son, 12. They have three boys, 10, 12, and 15.

After returning home our son told us (in confidence) that his 15-year-old cousin had offered him some pot. Our son refused. He said he never actually saw his cousin smoke pot, but he was sure he had. I then asked our daughter if she knew anything about it, and she reluctantly said her brother was telling the truth.

After much debate, my husband and I telephoned my brother and his wife and told them what our children had told us. Their reaction was unreal! They said their son had never smoked pot and our children were lying! Now my brother and his wife are angry with us.

Should we have called? If not, how can we restore our once-good relationship with them? If our children had smoked pot, we would want to be alerted. — NAME WITHHELD.

DEAR WITHHELD: You shouldn't have called. Perhaps time and the realization that you meant well will improve your relationship. Your children shouldn't have betrayed their peers, and you shouldn't have violated the confidence of your children.

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a dentist who makes a pass at every new girl he hires to work in his office. He's 49 and thinks he's irresistible. I think he's entering his second childhood.

Recently he took up with a new employee (24) and started seeing her out of the office. I found out about it and threatened to divorce him, so he promised to give her up as a girlfriend, but he increased her salary so much that she couldn't afford to quit her job. She's a divorcee with a child and needs the money, and he says she's the best desk girl he's ever had and that he can't run the office without her.

Now I am uncomfortable. She is uncomfortable.

and my husband still has both of us. — DENTIST'S WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: If you husband gave her up, how do you figure he still has both of you? No need for you to feel uncomfortable. She's working because she needs the money, and your husband needs her in his office. Trust them—unless you CATCH them, that is.

DEAR ABBY: How do I politely decline an invitation to a party without lying? Is there any really socially acceptable excuse?

Supposing I just don't like parties? Or what if I feel I would be bored, etc.?

It would be a lie to say, "I'm unable to attend." — STAY-AT-HOME-TOM

DEAR TOM: If you want to be scrupulously honest, you may have to be brutally frank. But since you don't like parties, say so—and you'll not be bothered with invitations, which is what you want, right?

Regulations to boost meat products

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — New federal labeling regulations are expected to boost a potentially major market for meat products that do not contain suspected cancer-causing nitrates.

The change allows makers of meats not treated with sodium nitrite or nitrate to use traditional names such as frankfurters, bacon and bologna to identify their products.

For example, nitrite-free products that look and taste like frankfurters can be sold under the name "uncured frankfurters." Under present regulations such nitrite-free franks would have to be labeled "uncured cooked sausages."

The change comes as the Agriculture Department and the Food and Drug Administration are reviewing a 1978 study that found sodium nitrite could cause cancer in laboratory animals.

USDA has already reduced the legal amount of nitrite in bacon because of a cancer threat from a byproduct of the chemical's reaction to frying and certain proteins.

The new regulations announced Monday by the Agriculture Department require that labels indicate clearly the general need for nitrite-free products to be given the same special care required for fresh meat.

The labels must use "uncured" as part of the name and bear the phrase: "No Nitrate or Nitrite Added."

If the product has not been canned, pickled, dried or otherwise treated, the labels also must carry this warning: "Not Preserved — Keep Refrigerated Below 40 Degrees Fahrenheit at All Times."

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said the label change will help producers meet consumer demand for nitrite-free versions of old favorites. At the same time, she said, it should end the confusion the old rules caused shoppers.

The new rules, which go into effect Sept. 20, apply to meats transported across state lines.

As often happens when nitrite is mentioned, the Debate continues over pregnancy screening method

Newsday

The Food and Drug Administration is about to propose regulations controlling the use of a new pregnancy screening method that scientists say could prevent the largest number of childhood disability cases since polio vaccine.

Yet, despite the promise it holds, there is a dispute over whether mass distribution of alpha-feto-protein screening test kits in laboratories would do more harm than good right now.

DRUG COMPANIES, with a reported multimillion dollar market at stake, think there should be few or no restrictions on its use. "We favor making this test available to any licensed clinical laboratory equipped to do this type of test," said A.F. Zobel, of Hoffmann-La Roche Inc. The firm is one of several which has developed the kit and seeks FDA approval for its use.

However, consumer groups and doctors think it would be a tragic mistake to market the kit widely at this time. They warn that the test is complex and that, if it is to be accurate, it must be restricted to qualified laboratories monitored by the federal government.

THEY ALSO want a follow-up program insuring that pregnant women have access to more definitive testing, should their reading turn out to be positive and, eventually, an abortion, if they wish. In addition, they want testing limited at first to a five-year pilot program so proper guidelines can be written from this experience.

"The public is not ready for it (the kit)," says Dr. Ervin E. Nichols of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists. "The profession is not ready for it. And the laboratories are not ready for it."

The issue is one of the hottest to come before the FDA, which at the outset favored unrestricted use, then bowed to public pressure and agreed that some regulation was in order. The agency is expected to propose these rules this fall, possibly as early as next month. But no one is sure just how strong or how weak they will be.

The two birth defects that the kit is aimed at wiping out are anencephaly and spina bifida, congenital diseases characterized by neural tube (brain or spinal cord) defects. Babies born with anencephaly have abnormal development of the brain, head and spinal cord and usually die shortly after birth.

MANY SPINA BIFIDA babies survive but have an open (unenclosed) spine and, hence, a defective nervous system. They may suffer from paralysis from the waist down, poor bladder and bowel control and hydrocephalus (water on the brain), which can lead to mental retardation. Only about one or two infants in 1,000 births in the United States are born with these crippling conditions. But that translates to about 3,000 to 6,000 children out of about 3 million newborns a year, and doctors say the protein test can de-chemical called alpha-feto-protein in the mother's blood serum. The high level is thought to occur because the open spine or holes in the brain allow the protein chemical — found only in the blood of the fetus — to leak into the amniotic fluid and then through ity of the protein). If none of these conditions are found, then amniocentesis is done as a final check. If this test is positive, the mother has the choice of abortion or giving birth in a specialized center.

AFTER SEVERAL

consumer. She wrote Donald Kennedy, then FDA commissioner, that his agency had failed to invite any parents of children with the birth defect to a fall, 1978, hearing on the screening kits.

A BLITZ of telegrams and letters followed, mostly from parents of handicapped children. Kennedy eventually yielded and ordered a second hearing in February, 1979. At that meeting and thereafter, tight restrictions were urged not only by consumer and medical groups but by two other branches of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. These were some of the concerns:

"My prediction is you will spew out 10 pregnancies that are healthy because people won't go through the trauma of one test after another. So to prevent one defective birth, we will lose maybe 10 healthy babies."

teet up to 90 percent of those cases. According to scientists at the federal government's Center for Disease Control, the test has the potential for eliminating the most cases of childhood disability since the development of polio vaccine in the 1950s. Before the vaccine's development, there were about 21,000 paralytic polio cases reported during the peak polio year of 1952.

A PRECISE diagnosis of spina bifida and anencephaly prior to birth can now be made using amniocentesis, a procedure involving withdrawing some amniotic fluid from the womb with a hollow needle. However, this is an invasive method with some risk of damage to the fetus. And it cannot be used as a widespread screening method.

But in the early 1970s, British scientists discovered a noninvasive test, which, though not definitive, could be used for screening. They found that anencephaly and spina bifida are associated with high levels of a the placenta into the mother's bloodstream.

THE TEST, a simple one involving withdrawing just a few drops of blood, is just a preliminary screening and can involve as many as three other steps before the mother really knows whether she is carrying a defective baby. Here is the way it works:

If the blood sample, which should be drawn between the 16th and 18th week of pregnancy, shows a high protein reading, a second blood test is made. About 5 to 7 percent of pregnant women have this high count initially. Another elevated count means the chances that the mother has a defective baby are still only 50 to 1 and leads to more definitive screening.

THIS INVOLVES an ultrasonic examination — taking a picture of the fetus by recording sound waves — that might show if the fetus is defective or if the high reading is caused by premature death or by twins (because more than one fetus increases availabil-

British centers launched screening programs, the U.S. government funded a few pilot projects — including one begun in 1976 by Dr. James Macri and others at Nassau County Medical Center and the State University at Stony Brook. On the basis of 21,000 women, Macri says the tests detected 90 percent of those mothers with babies carrying either one of the two birth defects. While these developments were going on, several drug firms developed screening kits in the United States and applied for licenses to market them. That was in October, 1978. Shortly thereafter, the FDA's bureau of medical devices, which has jurisdiction over such screening tests, recommended the kits be approved with few controls.

But before the FDA could take final action, a parents group began raising a fuss. Carol Buchholz of East Rockaway, N.Y., a director of the Spina Bifida Association of America, complained that the agency was ignoring the voice of the —THE HEALTH SERVICES Administration told Kennedy it did not feel the nation had an adequate network of ultrasound and amniocentesis centers to do the testing should the screening program become suddenly available. It recommended deferral of the program.

—The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said doctors were not familiar enough with the technique and implications of the lab results to carry out their responsibilities. The American Society for Human Genetics questioned whether enough of its members were prepared to give the sensitive guidance to parents about the hard choices they might face.

—THE HEALTH RESEARCH Group, medical wing of Ralph Nader's organization, warned of the potential unreliability of many commercial laboratories that would likely perform the tests if it were licensed for unrestricted marketing.

Along with the parents of children with spina bifida, Nader's group wants to see a pilot screening program run by a few regional labs stringently monitored for quality control by the U.S. Center for Disease Control.

Industry kept a low public profile. But behind the scene, some drug firms met with FDA officials and pointed out that the delay would deprive many parents of the fruits of modern science. They saw no reason why there should be special regulations.

THE KEY QUESTIONS remain just how limiting those regulations will be and whether the FDA will approve a pilot program or allow mass marketing. "FDA has accepted the fundamentals of our position," says Robert Leflar of the Health Research Group. "But whether it will actually issue restrictions that are sufficient to protect the public health is not year clear."

Welcome wagon, newcomer greeter-type ladies come in all sizes and degrees of enthusiasm. One variety drives up in her station-type wagon, merrily brings your doorbell and then carries in a basket trimmed with plastic flowers and gingham ribbon from which she slowly extracts all sorts of useless, plastic, thing-a-ma-bobs while she tells you how much the local merchant-donors would like to meet you.

Another variety dresses like a high fashion model, speaks like a Radcliffe graduate and scrutinizes your home and you as though you were being voted into a private club. Of course, that variety always comes when you are in the midst of unpacking and are grimy dirty. They are almost as disgusting as the Avon lady who comes smelling and looking like a rosebud when you have been scrubbing floors or bathroom fixtures.

I HAD ONE GAL visit me one time, who was offering her own service (on the side and for a small fee), to take me to the merchants she especially recommended and who would give me extra deals if she were along. I still don't know why I didn't take the time to report her. Another sweetie came "slightly on the sauce" and so relaxed that she was ready to spend the afternoon.

We were greeted by three different ladies here in Midland. All of them were most helpful and none of them brought me a load of junk. What they did bring was interesting, helpful literature and coupons for some very nice gifts and generous discounts.

THE MAJORITY OF MERCHANTS I did visit were friendly and welcomed me to the city. A few seemed to act as though the coupon redemption was a bother, but that impression was left by their clerks and a wise sponsor would instruct his help as to how he wanted the situation handled. I probably will not bother to return to those establishments, so instead of helping business, it hurt them. At one well-known dining room downtown, the hostess remarked when given the coupon, "I wish they'd tell us what to do with these things". I was tempted to tell her what to do with it, but reconsidered.

I don't know what the original welcome wagons took with them to greet the latest Conestoga arrivals—perhaps grits, cornmeal or fatback. Come to think of it, in these days that would be more useful than one more yardstick or plastic thing-a-ma-bob.

The color of a home's decor

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

You may not believe this if you are in the process of searching for a home-furnishings product in a special color, but consumers determine the colors of products found in the marketplace.

That's what color stylists say. And they base their opinions on the fact that a color which sells will be offered repeatedly and in more products. One which does not sell well will be offered less frequently.

Manufacturers today attach a great deal of importance to choosing the right colors for the products, because a number of surveys have shown that color is one of the most important factors influencing the purchase of home furnishings.

In fact, to be a success in home-furnishings products, a color must go with a number of other popular home-furnishings colors.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — They travel by van to inner cities and present plays with a message that urges young people caught up in crime and drug addiction to better their lives.

Henry Holt, an inner-city man from New York who founded the "Youth for Better Living" program, said in a telephone interview:

"These young people, many of whom are crime offenders and some who are heavy into drugs, just by association with clean-cut people, they stop crime involvement, they stop drug using. I tell you, I've never seen anything like it in my life.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Professional counselors can help those with problems

By Midland's staff of Family Services

Someone who is deeply enmeshed in a personal problem often asks "How can talking to a professional counselor help me? I know what I need. I need more money, or a better husband, or a long vacation. A counselor can't help me to get any or all of these things, so what's the use?"

Actually a person with a problem (or with a whole series of problems, which is more usual) may not be able to judge at all what is the cause for all that unhappiness. By himself, he can look at his troubles from only one angle: his own. Often the events of his childhood and youth that have shaped his feelings and attitudes are the ones which have caused his problems in the first place. They also make it impossible for him to look at what's happening in the present either realistically or objectively.

self to fail at anything. He may even regard as failure something that everyone else would consider a huge success. Until, with the help of a counselor he finds out that he is really expecting the impossible from himself, he won't be able to stop driving himself beyond all reasonable limits.

There's the woman who was always expected to be the best little girl in the block. Her room had to be immaculately clean, her dress perfectly pressed, and as one such young lady once put it: "When I lost a library book, I felt I wasn't going to heaven." When this "perfect" little girl grows up, she will probably find that she cannot meet her own standards, particularly with three small children, two dogs, and a husband who was not the best little boy in the block. A counselor can help her to see what she reasonably can expect of herself, to understand that by most standards she's not a slob, but a perfectly fine housekeeper and mother.

What's more, the man who feels he's a failure or the woman who feels she's a slob may, because of a sense of guilt, provoke punishment from those around them. After all, when they were children, and they did something "bad" they were punished. The man may provoke his boss or the wife her husband, without realizing they are doing this. If they can't persuade someone to punish them, they may punish themselves. The man may get ulcers or the woman may fall down the cellar stairs, because she "forgot" to turn on the light.

Family counselors know that people often follow patterns of behavior all their lives, without even knowing that the pattern exists. People also accept certain ideas as facts without being aware that they are doing this. For instance, you can lose a library book and still be a fine person. And getting a B on a test (or not being promoted quite as fast and as far on your job) does not mean you are a failure.

A counselor can help a person discover whether he is unconsciously following a pattern of behavior which is leading him into unhappiness and, perhaps, into repeated disaster. A counselor can also help a person to accept himself and to trust himself, which in turn will make it more possible to accept and to trust others.

Family counselors can't solve anyone's problems for him. They don't come fully equipped with credit cards entitling those who seek help to larger incomes, better spouses and long vacations. But by helping people in trouble to learn more about themselves and their feelings and ideas, they can also help these people to find their own directions. And the only way to clarify feelings and ideas is to put them into words. That's what talking is all about.

Family counselors can't solve anyone's problems for him. They don't come fully equipped with credit cards entitling those who seek help to larger incomes, better spouses and long vacations. Mary Travers prefers the songs of the sixties

By ANDREW O'CONNELL

Associated Press Writer REDDING, Conn.

(AP) — Mary Travers has not caught disco fever. She still sings the kind of ballads she performed in the 1960s when hers was the alto voice in Peter, Paul and Mary — songs of change in a voice like a cello.

Her blond bangs still hang below her eyebrows, she calls herself a determined optimist and she has a big red-and-white flowered mailbox across the street from her house.

That her heart does not beat to a disco rhythm doesn't bother her a bit. She says disco music echoes the national mood today as well as Peter, Paul and Mary's songs did in the 1960s.

"SUCCESS HAS TO DO with time," she said, sipping a gin and tonic on a sofa in her beloved, centuries-old country home. "Peter, Paul and Mary were an enormous success because they echoed their time successfully."

If the group appeared on the scene today, it would be completely different, she said.

"We'd be three kids with synthesizers."

Ms. Travers, 42, is in a good position to assess the reciprocal effects of popular music and culture, since she helped eight of Peter, Paul and Mary's 11 record albums gross $1 million each in sales during the 1960s. Recently she has been speaking to college students around the country about the relationship of music and society.

THE TALL SINGER IS DIRECT and articulate, and has a voice that is sometimes astonishingly deep.

Disco, she says, is slightly hysterical.

"People are afraid. It's all too big," she explained. "There's rising inflation. We haven't licked unemployment. We've had gas lines. We're not sure where our energy is coming from. We're not in control of our foreign policy. The domestic situation is in chaos and we have no leadership."

It adds up to a pretty grim picture, but Ms. Travers, who calls herself an "optimistic humanist," says she believes things will change in a few years.

"I BELIEVE IN 1983 to 1985 you'll see something like the '60s. Inflation will stop and the economy will turn around. And there is something in the American spirit about being generous when things are good."

Besides speaking on campuses, which she has done six or seven times a year for about two years, Ms. Travers is currently working on her sixth solo album, planning another Peter, Paul and Mary album for release next spring, devoting some of her energy to combating the nation's nuclear-energy policies, and refinishing the floors of her house on her hands and knees.

"I DO MORE THAN SING," she said.

Some of those other things include the use of her voice, such as singing at anti-nuclear energy rallies.

"I think there are aspects of the peaceful uses of nuclear energy that are useful," she said. "It obviously has worked very well for the military in submarines. But as a fuel on land there's a big overall problem, which is where to get rid of the waste — not to mention the safety problem."

In addition to singing at rallies, she continues to give concerts and play in clubs. And last summer she and Peter Yarrow and Paul Stookey put together Peter, Paul and Mary's first album in eight years. PP&M — as she calls the group — broke up in 1970 after being together 10 years.

"WE DID A DEC-ADE," she said.

It may be that Ms. Travers will continue to be thought of by the record-buying public as someone who burned brightly in the 1960s and was dimmed by the current trend of popular music. If so, Ms. Travers isn't likely to be faded.

"The music I used to make and make now are very similar. They're positive songs that say you can have an effect. I believe that without question."

Rats can become alcoholics

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Researchers say rats can become alcoholics, and a study of the effects of liquor on rodents may shed some light on human drinking problems.

Armed with a $500 private grant, a team at Eastern Montana College has found that some rats take a strong liking to alcohol-spiked water and become dependent on it.

"The thing that excites me the most is that the rats have been given independent access to alcohol," said researcher Howard Simmons, director of an alcohol and drug treatment service here. Nothing was done to induce the drinking behavior, such as adding sweeteners, he said.

The research shows that 10 percent of the imbibing rats indicated a clear dependency on alcohol within one week, said Simmons, noting that is the same percentage usually attributed to the human population.

"The fact that we're getting animals to drink under these circumstances at all is significant," he said.

One-third of the 50 rats only sip now and then at water with 1 percent alcohol content, said Simmons. The majority imbibed water that is 15 percent to 20 percent alcohol, he said. But the heavy drinkers consume a mixture that is 50 percent alcohol.

Post-mortem analysis will be conducted on the rats to determine what damage, if any, occurred to their livers, lungs and brains, he said. And future generations of the rats will be studied for insight into human problems with alcohol, said Simmons.

The project began last fall when the team, headed by Ellen Garber, assistant professor of psychology, received an EMC Ford Foundation Venture Fund grant. Research began three months ago and is expected to continue for at least three months.

AT WIT'S END

Dressing in white takes certain personality

By ERMA BOMBECK

I don't know what happens to people who wear white suits, white dresses or white shoes after Labor Day. I personally am too cowardly to try it, but I suspect the "fate factor" is akin to going on a vacation in old underwear, facing the back of the elevator, or removing the label on a pillow under penalty of law.

MY ONLY EXPERIENCE is a friend who once wore white on Mother's Day. It was a T.S. situation (Too Soon).

There was unseasonal snow. A dog threw up on her in church. And three pigeons from the air mistook her for a capitol dome. She never defied the calendar again.

It takes a certain personality to wear white all year long. It never bothered Mark Twain, who said, "At age 71, the continued sight of dark clothing has a depressing effect on me." It didn't bother F. Scott Fitzgerald. It doesn't bother Steve Martin, and it certainly didn't bother Carole Lombard or Marlene Dietrich. (But then Carole and Marlene never slipped into a white terrycloth robe for a nap one afternoon and awoke to find three kids showing a home movie on their backside.)

ALL I KNOW IS I'm tickled to death the "white season" is a short one, running those 14 pale weeks between Memorial Day and Labor Day.

I have never worn anything white that doesn't wrinkle when exposed to air. There should be labels on white dresses that read, "CAUTION: This dress does not sit down. Please wear erect at all times." You doubt it? How come you never see a bride sitting down?

NO ONE HAS EVER been able to explain the spot mystique. Wearing white clothing is like wearing a dinner napkin. You could be driving a car minding your own business. When you emerge, there will be a grass stain on your jacket. Surgical nurses gave up whites when they were unable to explain wine spots on them. I daresay if anyone in this country was really serious about finding an oil vein, they would do well to send out 5,000 women in the field wearing white shoes.

European women taking over important political positions

By JENNIFER PARMELEE AP Writer

PARIS (AP) — Staking claim to the political inheritance of Catherine the Great and Queen Elizabeth I, European women are emerging from their silent majority to take important posts both in their own governments and in the newly elected European Parliament.

But on the whole their political status remains uneven across the continent. Portugal's Maria de Lurdes Pintasilgo and Britain's Margaret Thatcher have become prime ministers. European voters, about 52 percent of whom are women, recently elected 66 women to the new 410-seat European Parliament.

THE ELECTION OF France's Simone Veil to the presidency of the Parliament, the first popularly elected multi-national assembly in history, was yet another sign that the growing political clout of European women reaches into the highest national and international councils.

The European Parliament is a political arm of the European Common Market and is considered a step toward a United States of Europe.

Many of the women elected to the Parliament hold sharply differing views on their role as women and on what being a woman has meant to their political careers.

Woodwards observe 25th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Woodward, 4514 Monty, who will mark 25 years of marriage on Tuesday, celebrated the event with a party held Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jess W. Thompson, 3310 Cimmaron Ave.

Other hosts for the event were the couple's three children, Terry R. Woodward and Joyce L. Wood, both of Midland, and Ella K. Wood of College Station, along with Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Vest, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Applin and Ella Teague.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodward were married Aug. 28, 1954 in the First Baptist Church at Alpine.

Mrs. Woodward is the former Katherine Teague. Since their marriage, the couple has lived in Spokane, Washington, Frankfurt, Germany, and San Antonio. They moved to the Tall City in 1957.

Mrs. Woodward is employed by Thompson Office Supply and her husband by Texaco, Inc. Both are members of Wilshire Park Baptist Church, while Woodward is a member of the Masonic Lodge.

"We were not elected because we were women or men," she said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I am there because of my age and hard work."

"The questions we must deal with in Parliament are not 'feminine' or 'masculine' questions. On the issues of education, agriculture or economics, why would we answer any differently than men?"

MRS. WEISS DOES NOT see herself as a token woman, nor does she promise to push for feminist causes while in office.

"Women have all the legal rights they need," she said. "I admit that the law is in advance of social custom, but one must have a little patience. You cannot imagine how far we have come since the days when I began to fight for women's rights."

Yet it is precisely these twin issues of feminism and tokenism that remain a bone of contention among many women in politics, especially in the European Parliament with its vast spectrum of politics, languages, age and dress.

In contrast to Mrs. Weiss and Mrs. Veil, for example, is Emma Bonino of Italy's Radical Party who also is a newly elected member of the European Parliament. She expresses delight at the opportunity to promote women's and minority rights on an international scale.

SHE HAS PROMISED European women to fight for their causes, as well as to introduce resolutions on arms control and nuclear energy in her role as a champion of the Radical Party.

"This Parliament probably won't solve these problems, but I'm here to oppose their politics," said Miss Bonino, 31. "I hope to stir up some trouble."

PARIS: some trouble. One primary concern of the women in the European Parliament is that of the job market. There are 33 million women in the Common Market labor force, and one out of every 15 is unemployed — a sharply higher rate than that for men. Common Market studies also show that despite legal guarantees women's salaries also lag way behind those of the men.

ALLEGED SEXISM IN European schools is another likely topic to be raised before the Parliament, and a commission of the Common Market has already resolved to battle the documented under-achievement of schoolgirls between ages 10 and 18.

European women in politics face a deep-seated resistance, as was evident in the results of a recent poll that asked 9,000 European men and women why more women were not elected to the European Parliament.

In reply, 37 percent of the men and 39 percent of the women said that there were too few women qualified to be candidates. An even more surprising 47 percent of the men and 46 percent of the women said simply that "people would rather vote for a man."

The poll did not surprise Francoise Gaspard, who battled for eight years to become mayor of her traditional town of Dreux.

"They say I am a woman devoured by ambition," she said. "Whenever a woman stirs up something, people blame it on her sex."

Parents: School volunteers who care a lot

By PATSY GORDON
Lifestyle Writer

The quality of education our children get makes a difference in the quality of life he or she will have. And this affects the entire community.

The education of a child requires time, effort and responsibility on the part of the school and of the home. Both need each other.

ONE OF THE primary goals of the 1979 Midland Independent School District Volunteer Program is to improve the quality of education through encouraging more parent interest and involvement, according to the three members of the coordinating team of the volunteer program. They are Betty Edgar, general chairman; Nell Furgeson, co-chairman, and Sally Kelly, Partners-In-Reading representative.

In the summer of 1977, a group of citizens representing a wide cross-section of Midland formed an organization called the Midland Alliance. Their goals included a safe and orderly transition to the court-ordered integration plan and the creation of additional programs and services in the schools to insure educational excellence.

AFTER THE OPENING day of school that year, it was apparent that the first goal had been achieved, said Mrs. Edgar, and emphasis then was placed on the second one.

With the encouragement, cooperation and support of the Midland public schools, the City Council PTA and the Junior League of Midland, Texas, Inc., the latter which committed $30,000 to a Partners-In-Reading program, and other interested citizens, a citywide volunteer program was established. From this, more than 450 volunteers were recruited to help in the schools during the 1977-78 school year.

IN THE NEXT school year, the school volunteer program was sponsored by the City Council PTA, again with the help of the Midland school system, the Junior League and an added supporter, the Human Relations Council.

THE GOALS in the 1978-79 year were: to establish active volunteer programs in every elementary school, to gather all volunteer activities under one umbrella for the sake of efficiency, to eliminate confusions and to encourage a more uniform approach to parent involvement. More than 1,900 volunteers were involved to make it a year of progress, said Mrs. Edgar.

Recruitment forms for school volunteers will go home with students on Wednesday, the first day of classes for the 1979-80 year. Parents are urged to carefully read the forms, check their areas of interest and return it to the school.

BASED ON the results of the spring evaluation of the volunteer program, the primary goals established for this year are: to give more recognition to the differences in the needs of schools by providing a more individualized approach in the areas of recruitment and training and to encourage more parent involvement through better home-school communications and leadership training.

"I THINK one of the main benefits of the volunteer program is to overcome something that happened in the last several years. It seems parents and schools have been at war with each other when they should be working together. The education of a child takes the parents and school together," said Mrs. Edgar.

"The greatest responsibility of education is carried out in the homes, but there are some areas where responsibility can be carried out in schools. The volunteer program is one of these, where parents and teachers can get back together," she added.

For those parents volunteering on a regular basis or working with children in any way, an orientation workshop will be conducted, as well as any other workshops pertinent to their area of service.

To help the parents in knowing what the areas of volunteer participation in the schools are, a list is provided below.

—ROOM MOTHER—Arrange two parties a year with the help of other parents and serve as chairman.

—HALLOWEEN CAR NIVAL—Serve as chairman of your child's homeroom booth and work with other parents in the booth.

—PARTNERS-IN-READING—(3-6 grades)—Volunteers read on a 1 to 1 basis with a child who needs extra help and encouragement for 30 minutes twice a week or 45 minutes once a week. This can be with the volunteer's child or another child.

—S.P.A.R.K.—This is a project sponsored by the Human Relations Council and recruitment is carried out by the school volunteer program. Volunteers share knowledge of a particular subject (hobby, career, travel or other special interest) by giving a talk, demonstration or slide presentation. A booklet is available to teachers who can request a particular subject by calling the council.

—CARVER CENTER—An educational enrichment center for grades K-3—Volunteers accompany class to center and assist teachers in working with small groups at learning centers, such as art, social studies and cooking. Each class goes three times a year. Or the volunteer can work at the center one day every other week, preparing materials and/or helping the children at learning centers.

—HEAD START—Volunteers assist with the Pre-School Head Start, a federally funded program, one-half day once a year.

—LIBRARY—Volunteers assist librarian with returning books to shelves, etc. and during classroom visits, or serve as a story teller for special occasions or on a regular visit.

—SUPERVISORY—This includes being adult safety patrol by helping students in grades K-3 to cross busy streets, accompanying classes on field trips, assisting with motor development program testing and assisting teachers and principal with May Field Day.

—ART, MUSIC, DRAMA—Volunteers assist with special class projects in these three areas or work with preparing and/or presenting educational skits.

—SCHOOL NEWS-LETTER—Volunteers assist with editing, writing, reproduction and distribution. A workshop will be held beginning at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 18.

—CLASSROOM—Volunteers assist teacher by working with small groups of students, with filing, record keeping, etc., and/or prepare materials to be used for bulletin boards or crafts.

—PRINCIPAL'S OFFICE—this includes clerical work, assisting school secretary or parent contact (calling parents of absentee students.)

—HELPING HANDS—This is a project of the PTA through the cooperation of the Midland Police Department. Parents volunteering for this very needed program display a Helping Hand sign their window at home to indicate that a child on his or her way both going to school and returning home can find help if he is approached by strangers or has other serious problems.

Some schools don't have this program, said Mrs. Edgar, and will depend on the response from the volunteer request form. "If it is good, these schools, through the PTA, will go about setting up Helping Hands in their area." Sally Field is trained in this special interest and can be reached at 682-9903 for more information on Helping Hands or Partners-In-Reading.

The three-person coordinating team of the 1979 Midland Independent School District Volunteer Program, Betty Edgar, Nell Furgeson and Sally Kelly, from left, are correlating materials for the Partners-In-Reading program. Parents are urged to sign up for school volunteer work when the forms are brought home by their son or daughter next Wednesday, the first day of school, and return them to the respective schools as soon as possible. (Staff Photo)

Two Special Olympics winners are honored

Jerry Flack, 18, and Bridget Dickens, 15, were honored at a luncheon sponsored by the Levi-Strauss Community Involvement Team to recognize their recent achievements. The luncheon was held in the company's cafeteria.

Jerry and Bridget represented Midland at the International Special Olympics held recently in Brockport, N.Y. and both came home with medals.

The Community Involvement Team sponsored Bridget at the international meet with trip expenses and clothing and spending money totaling $475.

The CIT, in March, bought T-shirts for Alamo Junior High School's Special Olympics teamwear in the local and regional track and field competition. It also donated $100 toward the awards banquet held after the contest in the Midland Hilton. These contributions amounted to $216.80.

In April, the CIT donated a $50 gift certificate as a prize for the Hike-Bike-A-Thon sponsored by the Mid-

Death requests should be accepted with reluctance

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors should be reluctant to accept the requests of sick persons for "death with dignity," because their desire to die may change, be based on needless fears or be a quest for attention, two physicians say.

ther exploration or clarification," they wrote.

The doctors, David L. Jackson and Stuart Younger, described six cases they encountered in the intensive care unit at University Hospitals of Cleveland.

In recent years, doctors have paid increasing attention to patients' wishes for quiet death as the development of respirators and other advances allowed them to keep people alive long after they lost consciousness.

Now, two Cleveland doctors say this view "may be somewhat naive and, in certain clinical situations, potentially dangerous."

In today's New England Journal of Medicine, the doctors said that before pulling the plug, doctors should make sure the patient who seeks death really means what he says.

"Physicians who are uncomfortable or inexperienced in dealing with the complex psychosocial issues facing critically ill patients may ignore an important aspect of their professional responsibility by taking a patient's statement at face value without fur-

An 18-year-old woman with chronic asthma resisted treatment with a respirator. But after she was questioned by doctors, she said she was afraid of the hospital equipment. Her fears were calmed and she was discharged eight days later.

The doctors said they hoped their experience would help other physicians cope with situations in which "superficial and automatic acquiescence to the concepts of patient autonomy and death with dignity threaten sound clinical judgment."

Couples fun tourney held

The time was 5 p.m. one Saturday. The place was Hogan Park Golf Course. The occasion was the Hogan's Hazards having their monthly couples' Fun Tournament.

There was a strange hush on the course. What was it? The Hazards had pulled three holes when the realization came that there was not any mowing machines running.

How does one play golf without this accompaniment. Some were able to do quite well.

The first place team was composed of Mel Mattina, Wayne Piette, Wilma Allenson and Dorothy Koons.

Tied for second place were the following: J.D. Guidry, Don Allen, Char Richter, Ginny Piette, Jack Parkins, Peggy Mattina, Bill Larsen and Frances Stahl.

Winning the booby prize were Bill Davis, Jeanne Allen, Arby Koons and Barbara Larsen.

Closest to the pin was Mattina. The tournament chairman was Betty Reimers.

A board meeting of the Hogan Park Women's Golf Association, Nine-Hole Division, was held recently in the home of President Mary Davis.

At this meeting, it was decided the Hogan's Hazards, Nine-Hole Division, will conduct their Club Championship tournament Sept. 19 and 20.

Any woman interested in playing nine holes are invited to join the group.

For more information, call Mary Davis at 694-7551, Rita Boe at 697-1962, Peggy Parkins at 694-4560 or Mrs. Larsen at 682-1590.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Ordinarily, a bus or tram in Czechoslovakia is allowed to take one mother with a baby carriage at a time, leaving long lines of waiting mothers and babies at a Kosci housing development.

Now, city officials have inaugurated the first baby-carriage bus in the country. Operating every half hour, it is an unusual contribution of this east Slovak town to the International Year of the Child.

Britain exporting new wine

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

I thought I knew the various types of wine on the market today, but the British have begun exporting one I have never heard of.

Called Perry, it is a light, sparkling wine made 75 percent from pears and 25 percent from apples. It contains only 8.4 percent alcohol and is apparently being directed mainly at the women's market.

Juice 1 medium lemon
Block of ice
1 fifth sparkling Burgundy
1 fifth Perry
1 fifth dry Champagne
1 cup sugar

Mix strawberries and lemon juice in saucepan and simmer 10 minutes. Force through sieve and cool. Put ice block in punch bowl and add berry mix. Just before serving add wines. If desired, decorate with orange slices. Makes about 3 1/2 quarts.

I found Perry light and refreshing served chilled. I also found it helps make an attractive summer punch.

AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I recently spilled a can of paint on our concrete patio. I have washed the stain several times with water, but aside from lightening it a little, the paint is still there. Is it possible for this to be removed?

A. — Yes, but it won't be easy. Use a regular paint remover and follow the instructions carefully. The chances are you will have to repeat the procedure three or four times.

Q. — I want to refinish an old cabinet that apparently has several coats of varnish on it. There is no sign of any peeling or lifting of the surface. Can I put more varnish over the old or should I use lacquer?

A. — You can apply new varnish over old, but first you must be sure to dull any remaining gloss.

"AN EDUCATION WITHOUT MUSIC IS INCOMPLETE"

Goddess protects workers, but 'bars' women from site

TOKYO (AP) — Workers digging the longest undersea tunnel in the world believe a jealous goddess protects them while they work — as long as no women enter the worksite.

It's a man's world in the Seikan Tunnel, which, when completed in 1982, will link the cities of Aomori and Hakodate in northern Japan and cut travelling time from Tokyo to Sapporo from 17 hours now to a little less than six.

The tunnel will enable Japan's famed "bullet" trains to travel at speeds of 110 miles per hour on a track 750 feet below sea level.

The working men believe the tunnel is protected by a goddess called Sanjin, who becomes jealous when women are admitted inside.

On the two occasions when women visited the site, flooding occurred soon afterward. Fearful of incurring more divine wrath, the men had the tunnel closed to women sightseers after the last visit in 1971.

They also believe it is taboo to whistle in the tunnel, for fear of summoning evil spirits.

On the first day of each month the workers pray to an image of the goddess enshrined in front of the tunnel, asking for her blessing while they work.

"Personally, I don't believe in the goddess," said a spokesman for the Japan Railway Construction Public Corp., which is handling the project. "But, if it makes the men happier, it's okay."

How the goddess entered Japanese mythology no one seems to know. She is believed to give birth to 12 children every year and is worshipped by hunters, lumbermen and charcoal workers.

Offerings of sake, Japanese rice wine and fish are said to make her happy. Her messengers in this world are supposed to be wolves, snakes and monkeys.

War begins on blight in suburb

BOLINGBROOK, Ill. (AP) — Blight — the peeling paint, broken windows and unsightly weeds that visually mar urban areas — is under attack here with a successful three-month crackdown on home eyesores.

In May, officials of this young, sprawling suburban Chicago community of 36,000 announced they would begin enforcing ordinances against blight. Tickets were issued and fines levied.

Since then, junk has been removed from sight, yards have been improved, and the village has gotten a stack of mail from people around the country who would like to see their communities try the same thing.

"WE'VE RECEIVED letters and requests from 205 communities" for copies of the ordinance and recommendations about starting similar programs, said ordinance supervisor Marianne Kozlik in an interview.

In three months, Bolingbrook has issued 634 warning tickets and 86 citations, with fines ranging from $10 to $50. It has taken four persons to court and other cases are pending.

"One was where a gentleman had a boat parked in front that's been there for nine years and never operated... There's no way this boat could have ever made it in water," Mrs. Kozlik said. "It was really a large accumulation of debris."

AFTER A JUDGE levied $10 fines on three tickets and $30 in court costs, the residents removed the boat, she said.

In another case, a man was ticketed because scores of birds had taken up residency in an unfinished room addition he had begun six years earlier. The violations have been corrected.

One woman was cited for tall weeds across her entire yard. She said sod had been ordered and paid for four years ago but never delivered. "We didn't believe her — but it was true," said enforcement officer Betty Tuttle. Two weeks later, the sod was planted.

In general, response has been tremendous, even among those ticketed. Most correct the problems quickly, without being ticketed. Although there are some chronic offenders, one resident, Renee Krall, said the program is "getting citizens more conscious and concerned."

REAL ESTATE AGENTS love it. And 17 of 18 residents interviewed by a local paper "thought it was the most marvelous thing they ever heard," Mrs. Tuttle said. "The 18th person just was not sure."

An atypical problem occurs where someone cannot afford extensive — and sometimes expensive — repairs. But a prican cause slowdown. Someone vate housing group has provided a $5,000 fund to ter you may realize it was for help, and only $500 has been spent so far. The quire careful handling in order to achieve best results.
