Big oil protesters disappointed in turnouts

By The Associated Press.

A nationwide protest against the oil industry and rising energy costs drew hundreds of demonstrators from New Jersey to California, but the turnout in some areas disappointed organizers.

More than 1,000 retired persons, many of them traveling by bus from neighboring states, carried signs outside the headquarters of the American Petroleum Institute in Washington, D.C. And a crowd about the same size in Chicago's Loop heard actress Jane Fonda and her husband Tom Hayden blast big oil companies and politicians.

But in Cleveland, where organizers had hoped 1,000 persons would turn out for a demonstration on a municipal mall, only 150 showed up. One organizer blamed the low turnout on the difficulty of getting working people to come downtown during the day.

And in Trenton, N.J., a rally outside the Statehouse drew only 11 persons carrying signs. They were joined by about 30 elementary school students touring the capitol.

"Sure I'm disappointed at the turnout," said Samuel Scozzaro, chairman of the New Jersey Senior Citizens Federation and state rally coordinator. "I thought we'd have 150 people. I don't know why they didn't show up." An Associated Press spot check showed most demonstrations drew fewer than 500 persons and were low key and peaceful. In Madison, Wis., however, about 150 persons protesting Exxon Corp. recruiting on the University of Wisconsin campus pelted recruiters and police with tomatoes. Capt. Robert Hartwig of the campus police said there were no injuries or arrests.

"I Don't Want to Choose Between Heating and Eating," said one sign. "They're playing right into OPEC's hands," said an oil industry spokesman.

Other demonstrations were reported in West Virginia; Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Minnesota, Montana, Washington, Oregon, and in several cities in California and New Jersey.

Much of the protest focused on the spiraling cost of fuel and charges that politicians are failing to do anything to stem it.

"I Don't Want to Choose Between Heating and Eating," said one sign in a group of 600 protesters in Hartford, Conn., which included a large contingent of elderly people.

Oil company offices were the targets of several demonstrations and the industry responded with statements of its own. Charles J. DiBona, president of the petroleum institute, said the protesters were advocating policies that would reduce U.S. energy production and cause more reliance on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"They're playing right into OPEC's hands," DiBona said.

Secretaries at Conoco in Houston wore their support for the oil industry Wednesday as other organizations across the nation were protesting big oil and high oil prices. (AP Laserphoto)

State files lawsuit against SEDCO

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Mark White filed suit today against a Texas firm and a Mexican drilling company alleging that an oil spill in the Bay of Campeche has caused more than $10 million damage to Texas waters and beaches.

White said the suit was filed in a Houston federal court against SEDCO Inc., a Dallas drilling equipment firm founded by Texas Gov. Bill Clements, and Permargo, the Mexican drilling firm. The suit seeks to recover damages from a runaway Mexican oil well.

White said he did not name the Mexican oil monopoly, Pemex, in the state's lawsuit because of negotiations between the U.S. State Department and the Mexican government over possible payment for damages.

White said the state has sustained loss of tax revenues due to the impact of the oil spill on tourism and seafood industries and the general economy of the coastal area.

White also said he had no plans to take a deposition from Clements, SEDCO is now headed by the governor's son, Gill.

"I have assured him at least twice that I will treat this as any other lawsuit and not because of his connection with the company. I do not know of any personal liability he would have in this suit," White said.

White is a Democrat; Clements is a Republican.

Three spill-related damage suits totaling more than $355 million already have been filed against the three organizations by Texas fishermen, shrimpers and businessmen who claim their livelihoods have been affected by the remnants of the oil spill washing ashore along the Texas coast.

SEDCO filed a federal court suit in Houston seeking to limit its liability from oil spill damages to $300,000, and the Houston judge set an Oct. 23 deadline for any suits against SEDCO.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a five-part series on the items included in Tuesday's $10.2 million school bond election.

By SUSAN TOTH
Staff Writer

Included in Tuesday's $10.2 million school bond election are $431,000 for new vocational facilities and $844,600 for capital improvements in most of the district's schools.

The vocational facilities will include $148,500 for coordinated vocational-academic education programs at Goddard Junior High School, $108,000 for additional vocational and industrial arts shops at San Jacinto Junior High School, $26,000 for a horticulture greenhouse at Midland Freshman School and $148,500 for a building trades facility to serve both

United Way at 50 percent

Midland's United Way campaign for 1980 fell short of its objective for this week, with a total of $515,774, or 50.7 percent of goal, being reported as of 10 a.m. today.

This week's objective was 70 percent of the $1,017,000 goal, campaign chairman W.F. "Bill" Orloff said.

A complete figure of pledges to date was expected to be reported at a noon meeting of volunteers.

Orloff said he appreciated all the hard work which had gone into the campaign, but encouraged all volunteers to renew their commitment to and efforts for the campaign in order to successfully end the campaign by Nov. 8.

The next volunteer report meeting is scheduled for Oct. 25 at noon in the Texas Electric Service Co. Reddy Room. The objective for the meeting is 90 percent of goal.

Trial witness tells of bloody scene

By BILL MODISSETT
Staff Writer

Jurors seated in the murder trial of 17-year-old Kelly Joe Chambliss of Midland this morning were told of the bloody scene that confronted Deputy Benny Fishback on July 18 when he arrived at a location 10 miles east of Midland.

Fishback was the first official to arrive at site at which Army Sgt. J.B. England was fatally shot.

Fishback also was the first witness called today by the state in Chambliss' trial.

The deputy said he received a call on his police radio about 4 a.m. July 18 about a man lying in the roadway on Interstate 20. When he arrived, Fishback testified today, he found England, 39, sitting up against his van, which Fishback said had North Carolina license plates.

England had been shot, Fishback recalled, and his shirt and top portion of his pants were soaked in blood. His upper dental plate and glasses were laying on the ground beside him.

According to the deputy, two couples had stopped their vehicles to render aid to Sgt. England. One of the women — who told Fishback she was a nurse — was attempting to treat the sergeant for shock and to keep him from choking on his own blood, he said.

England could not speak, but through sign language the sergeant indicated he had been shot about 20 minutes earlier, Fishback said.

The sergeant was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital by ambulance, Fishback added.

Fishback said he found $214 in cash and an Army identification card in England's wallet.

The money was turned over to Deputy John Kleinmans when Kleinmans arrived at the scene.

Fishback, in describing the scene at the time of this arrival, said the high schools.

The beefed-up vocational programs reflect a greater emphasis school trustees feel must be placed on giving non-college-bound students a salable skill when they graduate.

"It's ridiculous to keep training students to get BA degrees when they (don't earn) as much as welder, plumber or electrician," Trustee Johnny Warren noted.

"WE HAVE INDUSTRIES moving in here who will need trained workers, and we have a responsibility to give our students an opportunity to fill those jobs," he said.

Part of the junior high school programs will be directed at low-achievers who might otherwise not finish school, according to Schools Superintendent Dr. James Mailey.

The CVAE shops at Goddard and San Jacinto initially will include a building trades program and later will add small engine repair, Mailey noted.

The new horticulture greenhouse will eventually serve both freshman schools and will replace the program now housed in the Bunche Elementary School building.

The building trades project, aimed eventually at allowing students in the program to build a complete house during the course, will serve both high schools and probably will be built on a neutral site, Mailey said.

The capital improvements — $844,600 worth of fix-up projects — will spread over most of the schools in the district.

PLANNED MAJOR PROJECTS include:

- $145,000 for changing light fixtures in 16 elementary schools.
- $160,000 for replacing heaters in 11 elementaries.

- $210,000 for reroofing four schools.
- $134,700 for new lockers at five schools.
- $44,000 for parking areas.
- $30,000 to resurface tennis courts at four schools.
- $36,200 to re-cover 6,580 seats at the stadium.

The projects, which offer something for almost everyone in the district, include such other improvements as building two rest rooms at West Elementary School and a new faculty restroom at Travis Elementary. Both those schools also will be reroofed from the bond funds if the all-or-nothing package is approved by voters Tuesday.

Absentee voting picks up as deadline approaches

Absentee voting for Tuesday's $10.2 million school bond election has been increasing as the last day for casting early ballots approaches.

A total of 641 Midlanders had cast ballots by noon today, school officials said.

Absentee voting in the school administration building, 702 N. N St., ends at 5 p.m. Friday.

While there had been no long lines at the absentee booth yet, a school spokesman said, 96 ballots were cast Thursday.

Any registered voter may cast an absentee ballot if he or she plans to be out of the county on election day, has medical or religious reasons for not voting in person Tuesday, is 65 years old or older or if he or she is confined in jail.

Poll workers assigned to precincts other than their own also may vote absentee.

Polls will be open Tuesday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Who pays for the electricity to light the ball parks in Hogan Park? It's a common thing for these lights to be on at 4 o'clock in the morning, when I go to get starting time to play golf. What a waste of energy.

I have called the city offices about this more than once and they tell me the city police are supposed to turn them off when the ball diamond is not in use.

Regardless of whose job it is, this kind of waste should be stopped. — Edgar Runkel

ANSWER: A check was made with the City Parks and Recreation Department concerning the lighting situation.

The lights in the Hogan Park area are on automatic timers, regulated to turn off at midnight, unless otherwise set. If there is a malfunction in only one of the lights, the timers do not operated correctly, causing them to stay on past the designated time.

Such a malfunction is corrected as soon as it gets noted, officials said.

Certificates failing, top bankers say

CHICAGO (AP) — Savings institutions are being bled so badly by surging interest rates that even their new vehicle to attract deposits — the 6-month money market certificate — may be failing, some of the nation's top bankers say.

The 6-month money market certificate offers savers nearly double the interest as passbook accounts. The certificates were designed to help savings institutions retain old deposits and attract new savings by offering as much interest as Treasury bills.

They did this just after their creation in June 1978, said John E. Krout, chairman of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

"But money market certificates have become increasingly ineffective in shielding thrift institutions from a severe deterioration in savings and time deposit flows," Krout told the Mortgage Bankers Association conference on Wednesday.

That deterioration, called disintermediation, is a problem for the housing industry since savings institutions are — by tradition and charter — primary mortgage lenders. When savings dry up, so do mortgages.

From April to September, a record $4 billion in deposits flowed out of mutual savings banks, Krout said. Savings and loan associations were not hit so hard, but they too had a weakened savings flow.

"It can be argued that the money market certificate did not prevent disintermediation, as present savings trends demonstrate, it only delayed its arrival," said William O'Connell, executive vice president-elect of the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

Much of the problem facing thrifts is linked directly to the federal regulation that limits interest on passbook accounts to 5.5 percent. That is slightly higher than commercial banks can offer on the same accounts, but it is far lower than the 13 percent inflation rate.

The problem also is linked to the severe competition facing the thrift institutions' money market certificate.

Commercial banks and Treasury bills offer the same interest on similar certificates. Money market funds, sold by brokerage houses and mutual funds, carry even higher interest, with no $1,000 minimum.

Money market funds increased three-fold since the beginning of 1979 and could double again, before the year ends, many economists say.

Meanwhile, during the six months ending Sept. 30, money market certificates at mutual savings banks grew 60 percent slower than they did between January and April, Krout said.

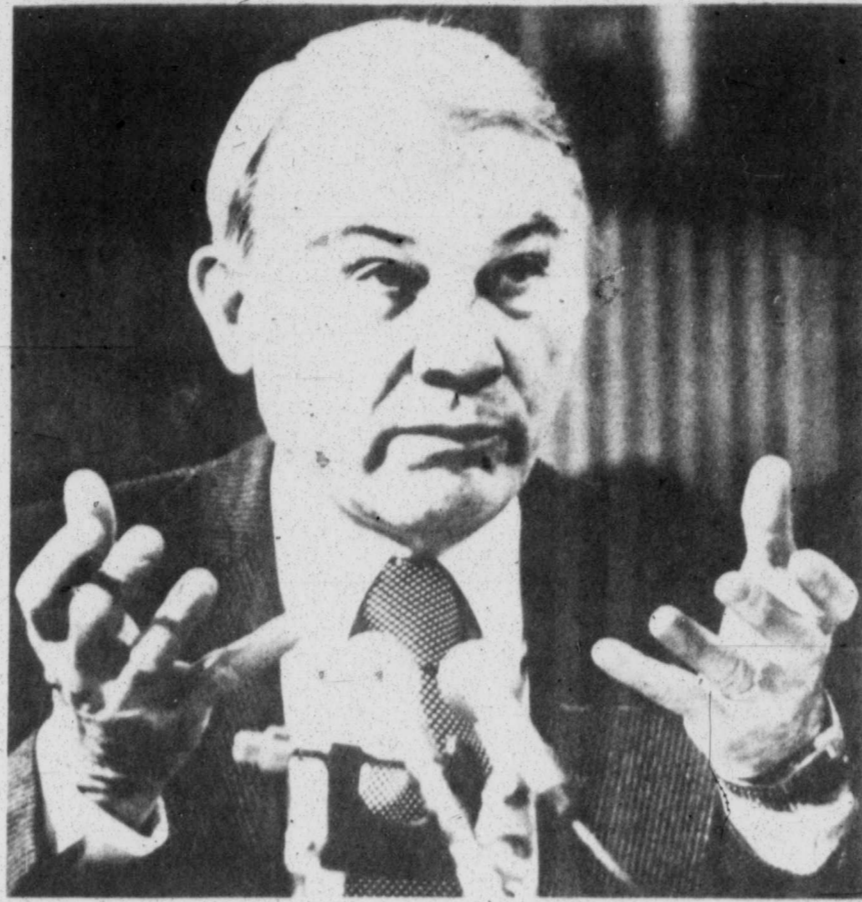

O'Connell said money market certificates also have significantly boosted costs at thrift institutions, whose ceilings on mortgage interest rates are set in half the states. Many thrift institution mortgages carry interest rates far below the inflation level.

Commercial banks can't offer more interest on money market certificates. But they make far fewer mortgages and invest heavily in consumer and business loans with interest rates above 14.5 percent.

Efforts are underway to cope with the developing problems.

Congress is considering legislation to abolish ceilings on passbook accounts. Thrifts are pushing for tax incentives for savers.

Moreover, some savings institutions are diversifying, entering the consumer loan field, for example, where interest rates are higher.

Testifying before the Joint Economic Committee Wednesday were Treasury Secretary William Miller and Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker, right. Miller told the panel, which is hearing testimony on the inflation-plagued economy, that inflation represents "a clear and present danger" to American prosperity and must remain the target of tough federal economic measures. Volcker urged Americans to accept "a lower standard of living." (AP Laserphotos)

Drop in housing sales predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The construction of new houses and the sale of existing homes have remained strong into the fall, but housing experts see a precipitous drop on the horizon.

What will soon turn things around, analysts say Wednesday, are mortgage interest rates soaring to 14 percent or more and a severe shortage of loan money.

The predictions came as the government and private industry announced surprisingly strong housing figures for September.

The Commerce Department said new housing construction rose 4.2 percent last month to an annual rate of 1.88 million units. Much of the strength was attributed to a 25 percent jump in starts on new apartment units, many of them federally subsidized.

—And Jack Carlson, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors, said sales of existing homes rose nearly 3 percent in September to an annual rate of 3.95 million units. "This could be our second best sales year ever, second only to 1978," Carlson said.

Meantime, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker warned that Americans will have to accept a lower standard of living if inflation is to be controlled.

Volcker told the congressional Joint Economic Committee that if people "try to catch up with the existing standard of living or try to increase their standard of living, ... up goes the price level some more."

The September housing figures came as a surprise to many analysts.

Housing experts had expected both starts and sales to fall off sharply by now because of the economic downturn that began in the year's second quarter.

But demand has remained strong despite record high mortgage rates, now in excess of 11 percent nationwide.

Carlson attributed the continued housing demand to the maturing of the "baby boom" generation, which is in the age range for many first-home purchases, and to inflation, which has driven people to buy real estate as tax shelters.

What could dampen the demand is the Federal Reserve's Oct. 6 announcement that it was raising a key interest rate and changing the way it controls monetary growth.

The board's policy change comes as savings and loan associations are reporting a decline in deposits and, thus, a loss of money they could lend as mortgages.

The National Association of Home Builders is so concerned about the Federal Reserve's action that it announced Wednesday it is calling a "summit conference," probably next month, to discuss the situation.

"This policy could lead to a deeper and more prolonged national recession," the industry group said in a statement. It also predicted "a catastrophic drop in new home construction, as much as 1 million units lower than 1978."

New construction last year totaled 2 million units, slightly below the level experts say is needed to meet demand and replace worn-out housing.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, who testified with Volcker, said "housing is nervous" because of uncertainty in the money markets resulting from the Federal Reserve credit-tightening policies.

But he added that if the policy works to dampen inflation expectations rapidly, "then housing does not have to go into a tailspin." He added, "But it's a worry."

Experts including Carlson and Richard Marcis, deputy director for economic research at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, predict housing starts will fall to a range of 1.5 million to 1.6 million next year.

Marcis said the bank board, which oversees savings and loan operations, believes housing starts this year will total 1.71 million.

He suggested that new construction this month might hold near September's annual rate of 1.88 million units "but will be off sharply after that."

In Chicago, meanwhile, various economists at a Mortgage Bankers Association conference predicted housing starts next year will fall to the range of 1 million to 1.4 million.

New York bank vice president Leonard J. Santow, also addressing that conference, said "every major bank" is already rationing its loan money as a result of the Federal Reserve action.

Within the next two weeks, he said, banks will further reduce loans to homeowners, consumers and small businesses. Adding that large corporations will race to test their lines of credit, tying up money that could go to other types of loans, Santow added, "Within one month, you will find it very hard to borrow."

Budget compromise delayed by military spending debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military and social spending are holding up a House-Senate compromise on the fiscal 1980 budget — with no resolution in sight.

Members of a conference committee charged with resolving differences between House and Senate budget proposals were pessimistic Wednesday and tempers were short.

At one point, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said in response to a House proposal: "The easiest way to deal with it is to act as if it had not been made."

Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., countered: "I could say the same thing about your offer."

The conferees were to resume the discussion today. Absent agreement by evening, they were under instructions to go back to their chambers to seek renewed authority for the effort.

Senate conferees apparently are unwilling to back off from the demand for a 3 percent increase, after inflation, in military spending.

"We've gone down a couple hundred million bucks, but no further," Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said after the session ended.

House negotiators, meanwhile, remained adamantly opposed to Senate-proposed cuts in social programs.

The 3 percent "real" increase in defense spending is part of a commitment Carter made to the NATO allies and is considered an important element in the administration drive to win Senate approval of SALT II pact.

The House version of the budget calls for $548.2 billion in spending, with a "real" increase in defense spending of about 1 percent. The House compromise offer was for an increase of about 2 percent.

The Senate's spending package proposes $546.3 billion in outlays and recommends committees be required to cut $3.6 billion from social programs.

Both the House and Senate compromises, unveiled Wednesday, would boost the federal deficit above $30 billion, the red-ink figure for fiscal 1979. The 1980 fiscal year began Oct. 1.

'Foster son' says he will write a book about life with Hoffa

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — The self-described foster son of missing Teamsters Union leader Jimmy Hoffa has been released from prison and says he'll write a book about his life with Hoffa.

Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, 45, who lived with the Hoffas for several years after his own parents died, left the Eglin Federal Prison Camp Wednesday afternoon, went to nearby Fort Walton Beach and caught a plane to New York City.

O'Brien insisted during an interview in August that he knows nothing about what happened to Hoffa, who he said he "loved like a father."

O'Brien entered the minimum-security prison in the Florida Panhandle on Feb. 28 under sentences totaling a year and a day. Prison officials said he earned early release through good behavior.

In December 1977, a federal grand jury in Detroit accused O'Brien of using a falsified withholding statement to obtain financing for a $35,000 condominium in a posh Detroit suburb. O'Brien was then a southern organizer for the Teamsters and lived in Plantation, Fla., west of Fort Lauderdale.

He also was accused of violating the Taft-Hartley act by accepting a new $3,000 car and repair services from Ritter Chevrolet Inc. of Detroit while he was trying to organize the firm's employees in 1973. O'Brien was convicted in May 1978.

Marxist guerrillas call for uprising

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Marxist guerrillas called for an uprising to oust El Salvador's new military government as 22 dead were reported in two days of fighting.

The leftists announced a protest march Saturday in defiance of the junta's ban on demonstrations. The Christian Democrats, two other leading political parties and other influential non-communist organizations said they would take part.

"Get the Romero sympathizers out of power! Power to the people!" the guerrillas demanded at a news conference Wednesday, two days after President Carlos Humberto Romero was deposed in a coup led by two colonels.

Three armed guerrilla commanders, their faces covered with red and black bandanas, said their Revolutionary Army of the People would fight to make El Salvador a Marxist-Leninist state.

They said 17 civilians were killed in battles between their forces and the army Tuesday in San Salvador suburbs and Wednesday in the nearby town of San Carlos. The San Salvador morgue confirmed 22 dead in at least three clashes since Col. Jaime Abdul Gutierrez and Adolfo Arnoldo Majano took power on Monday.

One of the guerrilla commanders, who identified himself as Alejandro, said the fighting was "the first step in the popular insurrection" and that "popular municipal governments are being organized to defy the new government."

Gutierrez and Majano fired the generals Romero left behind in the government, promised redistribution of wealth and moderate democracy and appointed three civilians to their junta—a university rector, the secretary of a liberal opposition party and a prominent industrialist.

But the leftists charged the new government was a continuation of the military regime that has ruled Central America's smallest and most densely populated country for 47 years with the support of the land-owning oligarchy. "We are going to unmask the origin of the coup that overthrew Romero," said another guerrilla chief, who identified himself as Jorge Melendez.

Carter to fight order concerning Taiwan treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will fight a federal judge's order that he must ask Congress' permission before going through with plans to single-handedly end this country's mutual defense treaty with Taiwan, according to administration officials.

The scheduled Jan. 1 termination of the treaty cannot come about, U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch ruled Wednesday, unless the action is approved by two-thirds of the Senate or by a simple majority of both houses of Congress.

Carter's surprise announcement last December that he was terminating the 25-year-old treaty came as the United States recognized the People's Republic of China and ended formal ties with Taiwan.

"We are recognizing simple reality," Carter told a national television audience.

The administration maintained after Gasch's ruling that Carter was well within his constitutional powers when he decided to end the treaty.

"We feel that the president was acting entirely properly," said Mark T. Sheehan, a Justice Department spokesman.

He said the ruling would be appealed "as promptly as we can" in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

In Taipei, both civilian and military officials declined immediate comment on the ruling.

Gasch's decision came on a suit filed by Sen. Barry Goldwater and 21 other present or former members of Congress.

Goldwater immediately praised the judge's decision, saying it "means that no American, not even the president, can break the law of the land."

Goldwater of Arizona, a one-time Republican, presidential nominee, said he hoped "the president will now submit a proper request for legislative approval of his policy on its merits, rather than continue to battle Congress over an issue of constitutional power."

The treaty provides for the United States to aid the island nation if it is attacked from the mainland. The pact contains an option that allows either party to end it on a year's notice.

Sheehan noted the one-year termination provision. "We gave our notice on Dec. 23, 1978, to go into effect on Jan. 1, 1980. . . . We are confident the matter can be resolved before the termination date."

Nor would Gasch's ruling have any immediate effect on our relations with the People's Republic of China, said a State Department official who asked not to be named.

Carter's decision came as a blow to the Nationalist Chinese, who have maintained a bastion on the island of Taiwan for three decades, dreaming of some day recapturing the mainland.

But in a joint communique with the Peking government, Carter said in December that the United States "acknowledges the Chinese position that there is but one China and Taiwan is part of China."

At the time, U.S. military experts said they believed mainland China had neither the intention nor the ability to invade Taiwan successfully.

And Defense Department officials said the establishment of ties with China would bring a new stability to East Asia. But they also said China gave no guarantees it would withhold any attack on Taiwan. The United States is continuing to supply major military weapons to the island government.

Gulf Coast can support Texans, refugees: study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas Gulf Coast fishing industry has plenty of scope to expand and provide jobs for both longtime residents and Indochinese refugees, concludes a study prepared for the Commerce Department.

The study cautions, however, that the industry in its present state, especially shrimping, has little room for growth.

"There is severe economic competition for existing fisheries along the Texas coast," the study said. "The solution is to develop new and underutilized fishery industries—not only to create expanded employment opportunities for Indochinese, but to stimulate economic growth of the region for all residents."

About 16,000 Indochinese refugees have settled on the Texas Gulf Coast, the study said.

Tensions erupted in August when a Seadrift fisherman named Billy Joe Aplin was shot to death. Two Vietnamese were jailed.

The report on the Gulf Coast economic and social climate, prepared for the Commerce Department's Office of Minority Business Enterprise, carries no official weight.

It found "immense economic potential" for developing soft-shell crabs, offshore finfish and aquaculture industries.

Conflicts between the Indochinese and the long-time residents are a serious obstacle to achieving that potential, the study said.

Downtown Lions endorse upcoming school bond issue

Members of the Downtown Lions Club Wednesday endorsed the $10.2 million school bond issue which will be before the voters Tuesday, after hearing Parker Humes discuss the issue as the program highlight at their meeting in the Midland Hilton.

The club also observed "Lion Paul Murray Day," honoring the veteran member as "the best salesman our club has ever had in total sales of tickets for the club's annual pancake jamboree."

A framed certificate of outstanding service was presented to the honoree by Jerry Speck, second vice president. The certificate, among other things said, "Lion Paul Murray is an enthusiastic promoter of Lionism, is a constant booster of the Midland Downtown Lions Club, and has served the club with vigor in the performance of Tail Twister duties, in the capacity of a director of the club, and as a leader in ticket sales for the Annual Pancake Jamboree."

Murray accounted for more than $1,600 in Pancake Jamboree ticket sales this year alone, and has approached that figure in previous years.

Murray also received a plaque, with his picture embossed thereon, presented by Morris Hulsey, the club's first vice president.

Mrs. Murray was a special guest at the luncheon.

Humes, who was introduced by Frank Marlow, club secretary, emphasized in his talk the absolute need for each of the items included in the bond issue in order "to bring our schools up to adequate."

He explained that the various items were being presented in one package, because, as in the past, improvements are designed to benefit the entire city rather than any one section.

Humes touched on each of the bond issue items and said repairs and improvements demand prompt attention at most of the city's older school buildings.

He explained the need for a new elementary school is due to steadily increasing enrollment in the lower grades and because of faster than normal growth, due mainly to industrial expansion within the next two to three years.

The need for expanded vocational education and agricultural education facilities was also cited.

The speaker detailed the improvements and new facilities planned for Midland High School, including physical education facilities, library, band hall, practice areas for physical education and other school activities, and overall expanded campus, which still would be the smallest campus of any school in the area.

He stressed the fact that not one penny of the bond money would be spent for parking at Midland High.

He also made it clear that "we are not going to throw any homeowners out in the cold" in land acquisitions for the expanded campus at Midland High.

He said the school system is attempting to deal fairly and squarely with all property owners in the area, cooperating with them to the fullest, even to moving their homes to other locations agreed upon by the homeowners involved, if necessary.

Bill limiting interest groups' $$$ studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would impose an overall limit on the amount of money a House candidate could receive from special interest groups is headed for an uncertain fate in a House-Senate conference.

There was no word on when the conference might take up the measure, which squeezed past the House on a 217-198 vote Wednesday.

The contribution limits, which would be the first imposed on special interest giving, were added to legislation dealing with the Federal Election Commission. The Senate previously passed that bill without the House amendments.

Even though the House amendment applies only to House elections, it must win Senate approval to take effect.

The legislation, which opponents said could have a major impact on future House elections, would prohibit House candidates from receiving more than $70,000 every two years from special interest groups. The limit would rise to $85,000 if the candidate had to face a runoff election.

The bill also would limit the amount any one special interest group could contribute to a House candidate to $6,900 for a primary and general election combined. The limit would rise to $9,000 in case of a runoff election.

House incumbents in 1978 received 33 percent of their contributions from special interests — groups formed by professional associations, labor unions and businesses to support candidates. Twenty-two House candidates in that election received more than $100,000 from special interest groups.

Supporters said the bill would prevent congressional candidates from becoming overly dependent — and thus beholden — to special interests. But opponents claimed the bill was "an incumbent protection measure" that would deprive challengers of funds needed to overcome advantages enjoyed by incumbents.

Passage came after an emotional debate in which House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., urged members to heed the words of James Madison and not let the government be destroyed by special interests.

"Beware the special interest groups. When you yield to the special interests, you yield the rights of the American public," O'Neill said.

And House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, argued: "A seat in the House ought not to be like a seat on the New York Stock Exchange — up for sale to the highest bidder."

But Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., an opponent of the measure, said the bill's proposal would limit — but not prohibit — campaign contributions by special interest groups. "It is not outlawing prostitution, but simply setting lower price limits," he said.

And Rep. David Livingston, R-La., said the bill would "make it harder for an unknown candidate, a person who does not have personal wealth, to be elected."

The fight for passage was led by most Democrats, and supported by the AFL-CIO, the League of Women Voters and Common Cause. The legislation was opposed by most Republicans, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Businessmen, and by various conservative groups.

Court dismisses appeal attempt by Lester Roloff

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An Attorney General Mark White's request, the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals has dismissed an attempt by Roloff Evangelistic Enterprises, Inc., to overturn a May 1979 contempt judgment.

White said in his motion on behalf of the Texas Department of Human Resources the appeals court did not have jurisdiction in the case, and Roloff could not prevail even if the court had jurisdiction.

White's petition traced the history of the state's legal battle against Roloff.

It said on Oct. 22, 1976, a Travis County district court entered a permanent injunction to prohibit Roloff from operating child care facilities in Texas without a license.

Roloff was ordered to allow the Department of Human Resources to inspect the Rebekah Home for Girls, Anchor Home for Boys and the Lighthouse for Boys. The South Texas homes are run by Evangelist Lester Roloff, who has refused to get the license required by the state.

The same judgment awarded civil penalties to the state.

UAW may allow Chrysler to delay pension payments

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union may let financially troubled Chrysler Corp. postpone $200 million in pension fund payments this year and is offering to postpone some contract gains.

The pension postponement, part of an package of concessions laid on the bargaining table Wednesday, has a string attached: the company must agree to some other union demands.

Chrysler is asking for $750 million in federal loan guarantees. Chrysler chairman Lee A. Iacocca was scheduled to testify today before a House subcommittee considering aid to Chrysler.

Asked if the package called for any "make-up" of wage or fringe benefit increases later, UAW President Douglas A. Fraser replied: "There's an element of that."

Fraser said the package contained several options, including one calling for a contract of less than the traditional three years.

Earlier this year, Chrysler put off for a year payments of $230 million into all 11 of its pension funds, something it could do on its own. The union's permission was needed for the latest action on the UAW fund.

"This deferral in no way jeopardizes the security of the pension plan, nor does it in any fashion jeopardize the claims on the pension fund by the retirees, current or future," Fraser said.

The deferral would permit Chrysler's payments to the fund to lag on obligations by a year, but no more, from now on.

The UAW fund holds about $850 million and has been mentioned as a possible source of capital for Chrysler. Fraser said that would happen only if the federal government gave "absolute guarantees" for the money.

The fund last year made payments of $114 million to 42,380 retired workers or their surviving wives and his bands.

The company paid $262 million into all its pension funds last year, $167 million of that to the UAW fund. The total size of all 11 funds was not immediately available.

Chrysler has 110,000 UAW members in the United States and Canada, some 30,000 of them on indefinite furlough. The Canadian members are not affected by the proposed $200 million deferred pension fund payment.

Convicted killer ordered to testify in Wood case

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A convicted contract killer has been ordered to appear before a grand jury investigating the May 29 assassination of a federal judge, despite objections from the man's attorney that the panel is on a "fishing expedition."

Charles Voyde Harrelson, 41, sentenced to a 15-year prison term in 1973 for a 1968 murder-for-hire, and his wife, Joan Starr Harrelson, are among 36 witnesses subpoenaed to appear this week before the grand jury.

The subpoenas do not mean the witnesses were involved in the two attacks, only that the grand jury feels they can shed light on the cases.

U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd denied Wednesday that this week's session is a fishing trip, calling Wednesday's session "worthwhile."

"It absolutely is not a fishing expedition. We have specific directions and specific goals," he said. Boyd then added, "But you can't catch a shark if you don't go fishing."

Dallas attorney Charles W. Tessmer, representing the Harrelsons, attempted Wednesday to have the Harrelsons' subpoenas quashed. He claimed the subpoenas were "a fishing expedition," "uncertain, indefinite and overbroad" and "unreasonable and oppressive."

But U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears denied the motions, saying, "You're complaining that this is a fishing expedition. It might very well be. Under my impression of the law, unless a fishing expedition becomes overly oppressive, they can do a little fishing."

Tessmer and federal officials said the Harrelsons would return Friday, but Tessmer added that he hasn't decided whether his clients should testify.

"They want to know where my client (Harrelson) was at the time of the (Wood) shooting," said Tessmer. "We have records to show where he was."

Wood, known as "Maximum John" for his stiff sentences in drug cases, was put down outside his townhouse the morning of May 29 by a sniper firing a single .243-caliber bullet.

Harrelson was convicted in 1973 in the 1968 contract slaying of Hearne businessman Sam Degella Jr. after a mistrial in 1971. He was discharged from parole in 1978. Harrelson was also acquitted of murder charges in the 1968 slaying of Houston carpet company executive Alan Berg.

Famed defense attorney Percy Foreman represented Harrelson in all three trials.

Approached by reporters outside the grand jury room Wednesday,

Harrelson coldly said, "Why don't you leave me alone?"

Caruana, according to the FBI, answers directly to the head of the New England crime syndicate. He was reportedly a close friend of slain El Paso defense attorney Lee Chagra, Jimmy Chagra's brother.

Krutschewski, who also uses the name "Peter Blake," remained jailed Wednesday on charges of conspiracy to violate federal drug laws and it remained doubtful whether he would appear before the grand jury.

During his trial this summer, Jimmy Chagra testified that Krutschewski was his "very good friend."

Chagra had also listed Peter Blake as the owner of a plane another witness testified was used on a trip to Mexico to establish a marijuana smuggling operation.

Wood was scheduled to preside over Chagra's trial and defense attorneys had tried in bitter courtroom battles to have the judge "remove" himself from the case. Chagra has denied any involvement in the slaying.

Kerr escaped with only minor injuries when his car was riddled by bullets in an early-morning ambush as he drove to work only a few blocks from Wood's townhouse.

FBI Special Agent Gregg Van de Loo has testified that a former Bandido is "a prime suspect" in the attack, although there have been no arrests.

In a document released in court Wednesday, Van de Loo said an informant claimed Bandidos had asked the informant to take part in the Kerr attack.

Kerr identified Bandidos, FBI document says

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, who escaped an assassination attempt last Nov. 21, identified his assailants in a police lineup as members of the Bandidos motorcycle club, an FBI agent says in a document released in court.

FBI Special Agent Gregg Van de Loo also said in the document that a confidential informant claimed he was asked by Bandidos to participate in the assassination attempt.

The document revealed in a pre-trial hearing Wednesday was an Aug. 8 affidavit in which Van de Loo requested a warrant from U.S. Magistrate Joseph F. Leonard Jr. to search a San Antonio residence for the rifle used in the attempt on Kerr.

Kerr, 38, was involved in a massive federal crackdown on an international drug smuggling ring centered in El Paso when he was ambushed near his

San Antonio home. That investigation had focused on the motorcycle club.

A gunman firing a .30-caliber automatic carbine from a back window of a stolen van riddled Kerr's car with more than a dozen bullets, but Kerr escaped serious injury by ducking behind the dashboard.

He received 24-hour protection from federal marshals after the attack, but departed the Justice Department in August for another federal job in an undisclosed location.

There have been no arrests in the case. Federal grand juries in San Antonio and El Paso, which are investigating drug smuggling, the Kerr attack and the May 29 assassination here of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., have subpoenaed numerous Bandidos and their associates.

Armed with the search warrant, FBI agents searched the residence of Daniel Adam Thomas Jr. on Aug. 8.

But they did not find the carbine the informant had claimed was beneath a mattress there 13 days before.

Other weapons were found, however, and Thomas, a Bandido associate, was charged with federal firearms violations.

U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears denied attempts Wednesday by defense attorney Charles Butts to suppress key evidence. Butts claimed there wasn't enough legal reason for Leonard to issue the warrant.

Several members of the Bandidos, including Steven "Boo-Boo" Barbour, Timothy Kenneth "Timkin" Larson and Richard Paul "Rick the Dick" Ricks, participated in a police lineup viewed by Kerr last March.

Kerr had undergone hypnosis in an attempt to enhance his memory of the attack.

Kerr positively identified Barbour, a convicted murderer, as the driver of the van, the document says, and selected Ricks and Larson as those who looked like the gunman.

Ricks, Kerr's primary choice in the lineup as the gunman, is one of several Bandidos subpoenaed to appear this week before the federal grand jury here.

In another hearing, Van de Loo called Larson "a prime suspect" in the Kerr attack.

Larson, 34, who says he is no longer a Bandido, was recently sentenced to three years in prison on a federal firearms violation. He has denied any involvement in the Kerr attack.

Van de Loo also said in the document, "Confidential informant has stated that he was asked by 'Pan-head,' 'Boo-Boo' and 'Mario' to participate in killing Assistant U.S. Attorney Kerr."

Kennedy encourages new ceiling

WASHINGTON (AP)—A higher ceiling on legal Mexican immigration to the U.S. would whittle down the eight-year wait that is keeping some families apart, says Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

There is a "serious and unfortunate backlog" of immediate relatives of permanent resident aliens waiting for entrance visas, he said Wednesday at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing.

Kennedy, the committee's chairman, is the sponsor of a bill that would authorize an increase in the 40,000 visas that can be issued each year for Mexico and Canada to be evenly split.

The bill would allow any part of the new quota not used by one border nation to be shifted for the other to use the next year.

Since immigration from Canada is well below its current quota, at least 60,000 of the proposed 70,000 total could be expected to go to Mexico.

Kennedy said the proposal also "contributes substantially to the undocumented alien problem."

The bill would allow the number of visas to rise but does not specify an amount.

David Crosland, acting commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said raising the limit on immigration from 40,000 to 70,000 for the border nations would be acceptable to the administration.

President Carter mentioned a 50,000 total in his 1977 message to Congress.

Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., said the measure would set a precedent for other nations to be treated the same way. He said nations such as Taiwan and the Philippines also have substantial backlogs of family applicants.

"The piecemeal addition of a few tens of thousands of people in the category of refugees, a few tens of thousands of people from one particular country of emigration, and then a few tens of thousands of people who originate from the next point of pressure, is not the way to build a coherent and logical immigration system," Huddleston said.

Man who claims he worked for secret police granted asylum

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A man who claimed he worked 20 years for South Africa's secret police has been granted political asylum in Sweden, a Swedish newspaper reported today. The man said he could confirm reports about police persecution and torture in South Africa. "I beg them to forgive me, all who have been jailed, tortured and separated from their families with my direct or indirect support. I carry their suffering in my soul," Alexander Lambert was quoted as saying. There was no immediate comment from Swedish or South African authorities. Lambert, 42, told his story to a leading editor of the mass-circulation Dagens Nyheter. He said he was surprised when South African passport authorities gave him and his family permission to go to Sweden. He said he told the authorities they were going on vacation. On the way to Sweden, he told his wife for the first time that he was a long-time agent of South Africa's secret police, BOSS. He also told her he would not return to South Africa. Lambert told Dagens Nyheter. He was interrogated by Swedish police and gained asylum for himself, his wife and their six children. Lambert, labeled as "colored" in South Africa, meaning of mixed race, had no previous contacts with Sweden. He said he was only a rank and file member of the secret police force. According to Dagens Nyheter, Lambert's first task was to spy on his police colleagues. He passed on political discussions, whereupon critical voices reportedly were dismissed from the force. Lambert also said he infiltrated the meetings of the African National Congress, and saw people being tortured in South-West Africa, also known as Namibia. Once he met a "Capt. Hanson," who told him about the death of black consciousness leader Steve Biko in police detention in September 1977. "As you were the first one to make your black brothers conscious, you will be the first one to die for it," Hanson said he had told Biko. Lambert claimed that another prisoner, Joseph Mduli, was tortured to death by a "Lt. Taylor." According to official reports he was killed by accident.

A doctor, whose 1976 death was widely debated, suffocated to death, according to Lambert. He screamed under torture, so interrogators tied his trousers around his neck and left him to die, Lambert said. Officially the doctor committed suicide. Lambert said he did not witness any of these deaths himself, but was informed about them. He said he began to doubt his work in the early 1960s. A political prisoner named Robert Sobukwe made him an opponent of South Africa's racial segregation system. Lambert said from now on he will work in Sweden for the oppressed South Africans he previously worked against, he told Dagens Nyheter.

Passenger boardings at Midland Regional Airport set record for year

Passenger boardings at Midland Regional Airport for the fiscal year just ended, 1978-79, set a record with 437,275, according to Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation for the city of Midland. The previous record had been set the prior fiscal year of 1977-78 with 410,873. Banks noted the boardings exceeded the master plan forecast — which had put the total down to about 320,000 — by 117,275, or about 50 percent. Comparing the record with other years, Banks said boardings in fiscal year 1974-75 were 229,404; 1975-76, 239,279, and in 1976-77, 296,862. Considering Midland's rate of growth, Banks said he expects the record to be broken again this next fiscal year when 500,000 persons board planes at Midland Regional Airport. "The fuel situation, lower fares and deregulation (of the airline industry) have helped somewhat. There are a lot more people flying because of that," he said. "Midland has a strong economic situation and the city is growing," Banks added. When the master plan was drawn up in 1974, Banks said the planners had no way to forecast what the situation would be by 1979 with the statistics they had. This accounts for the extremely low estimate on boardings. By the time boardings hit 500,000 — which Banks pointed out is above the national average — he expects the numbers to level off.

Scientists thrilled with quake data

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — Seismograph needles jumped, tiltmeters tilted, creepmeters snapped and scores of scientists headed for the desert to see what they could learn from the Imperial Valley's earthquake.

On first examination, he said, little was found that might qualify as a precursor — a change that might have warned the quake was coming.

That was Monday afternoon when the Imperial and Brawley earthquake faults snapped loose, from the Mexico border northward through Southern California. The quakes caused an estimated $18 million in damages and nearly 100 minor injuries.

About the only possible exception was found Wednesday. Scientists spotted evidence of minute changes in the tilt of the ground a few hours before the tremor. Heaton described that as "very maybe. I don't think we would have predicted an earthquake on it, but I'm interested."

By midweek, piles of data from instruments scattered all over the earthquake-prone valley were being examined, and scientists were thrilled.

The next step, he said, is to compile and compare the data from various instruments. "Then we'll line them all up, stare at them for awhile and scratch our heads. If it's something real coming from the fault, we should be able to see it."

"We had a big earthquake and now we've got lots of data and lots of new things to try to understand," said seismologist Tom Heaton of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Even if no precursors were measured, he said, the new information is valuable and will undoubtedly produce many scientific reports.

"It would be nice if we learned to predict earthquakes, but that's not the only reason people study them," he said.

Precise measurements of quakes could help engineers design more earthquake-resistant buildings. And scientists are always searching for new clues to the nature of earthquakes and the way they develop.

Monday's quake measured 6.5 on the Richter scale and set off at least 29 sizeable aftershocks and uncounted smaller tremors.

Almost as soon as alarms were tripped by seismographs in college and government laboratories around the state, excited scientists were gathering up instruments for the trip to El Centro.

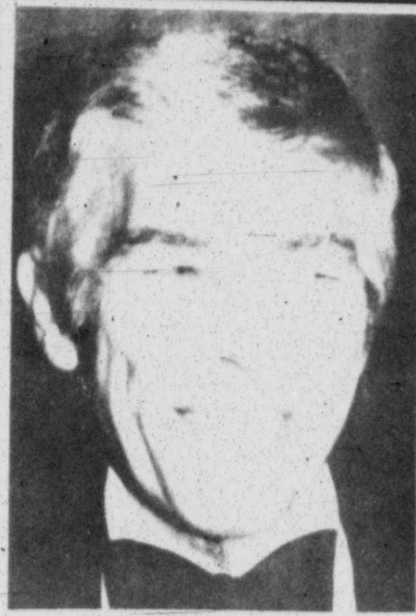

"Everybody gets excited — that's what our business is," said research engineer John Lower of the California Institute of Technology. "We started running as soon as we got the epicenter and the magnitude."

"It is like old home week for everybody in the trade," said Caltech's Ralph Gilman.

The Imperial fault, which generates frequent tremors, is one of the most heavily instrumented areas. Around Southern California, more than 150 seismometers measure even tiny tremors and automatically feed their readings into a computer at Caltech.

Since the quake, survey markers were resurveyed to determine how far the earth had moved along either side of the fault.

Creepmeters, which measure fault movements that aren't produced by earthquakes, were monitored. The jolt was so strong that a number of them "destroyed themselves," Gilman said.

NEW YORK (AP) — You can get a piece of the Rockefeller estate if you have $10 million to spare.

The Rockefeller brothers' 4,085-acre Virgin Island property on St. Croix is up for sale. The block of land is one of the largest in the Caribbean, and constitutes one-tenth of the entire island.

Included in the Estate Fountain River is the famed Fountain Valley Golf course. The estate also encompasses 2½ miles of coastline on Davis Bay. A spring-fed lake and more than a dozen wells provide fresh water for the estate.

The two surviving Rockefeller brothers, David and Laurance, bought the property independently of their three brothers, now deceased. They began assembling it in 1963.

The estate is being offered through the Sotheby Parke Bernet International Realty Corp. The asking price is $10 million.

Laurance Rockefeller will continue to operate two Caribbean properties through Rockresorts Inc. They are the Little Dix Bay Hotel on Virgin Gorda, British Virgin Islands, and Caneel Bay on St. John, U.S. Virgin Island.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor James Coburn was paid a record $250,000 per syllable to speak two words for a beer commercial. Actress Sophia Loren's husband received the largest fine ever imposed. And the United States ranks third among the world's richest nations.

These are among facts gleaned from the 1980 edition of the Guinness Book of World Records, on sale today. The book itself sets a record with 704 pages, the largest edition ever.

The words that made Coburn richer are Schlitz Light, the name of the beer he pitched on a television commercial, according to the book.

The Italian courts tried to make Carlo Ponti, Sophia Loren's husband, a little bit less rich when they fined him $26.4 million for violation of tax laws.

And the richest nation in the world is Abu Dhabi, on the Arabian peninsula, where the annual per capita income is $70,000. Five years ago the record per capita was $8,500 in the Pacific island of Nauru. The difference lies in oil.

NEW YORK (AP) — Anchorman John Chancellor says he's happy he can finally pronounce his name correctly on NBC Nightly News.

At the end of the show lately, he's been pronouncing his last name "Chancellor," with a prolonged accent on the "o."

"It's true the pronunciation may strike people as different, but it happens to be correct," Chancellor said. "It wasn't until last week, when we changed to a one-anchor format that I began to have a chance to give my name correctly, because in the past, I was always introduced by someone else, who used the conventional pronunciation, something like 'Chancel-ler.'"

Chancellor's former co-anchor, David Brinkley, now does commentary on the network news program.

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II went partying to celebrate the first anniversary of his pontificate.

He slipped out of his Vatican apartment accompanied only by a private secretary Wednesday night to attend a dinner party organized by a group of Polish priests and nuns, sources said.

The pontiff made the unannounced trip to the Pontifical Polish College atop the Aventine Hill in central Rome, where he used to stay during his Rome visits before he became pope.

Aftershocks shake Californians

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern California residents, shaken by two significant earthquakes this week, are going about their business a bit uneasily as aftershocks rumble from the desert to the sea.

A quake measuring 4.1 on the Richter scale and centered in Santa Monica Bay jolted a five-county area Wednesday, rattling windows and triggering several minor rockslides.

There were so many phone calls that telephone service was stalled briefly in Los Angeles, but no damage or injuries were reported.

The epicenter of the 1:52 p.m. tremor was eight miles south of Malibu, said Melinda Brinza of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. It was felt as far east as San Bernardino and Riverside, 70 miles away.

"There was a sudden jolt, like a truck had run into the side of the building right here on the ninth floor," said banker John Hainer, who was at work in a downtown high-rise.

About 7½ hours later, Caltech reported a 3.1 aftershock, centered a mile north of the first quake. Officials said no damage was reported.

The Malibu tremor was apparently unrelated to Monday's 6.4-magnitude quake that devastated the Imperial Valley, 150 miles to the southeast.

Along the fault which caused the Imperial Valley quake, slippage left a trail of humped and broken earth a foot or two across and more than 30 miles long through empty desert, plowed fields and roads. Scientists call the break a mole track because it looks as if a giant mole had tunneled just below the surface.

Aftershocks continued Wednesday in the Imperial Valley. The most severe was a 5.1 jolt at 4:45 p.m.

Near the epicenter of the Santa Monica quake, the Pacific Coast Highway was closed briefly while crews inspected Malibu's perennial slide area at Big Rock beach, sheriff's deputies said. Several minor rockslides were reported on Malibu Canyon Road, deputies said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage.

Train derails after auto mishap

COTTONDALE, Fla. (AP) — Eleven cars of a Bay Line Railroad train derailed near here after the train was struck by an automobile, the Florida Highway Patrol says.

Troopers say the car was driven by Rex E. Corbin, 29, of Youngstown, Fla. Corbin walked away from the Wednesday night crash, but was hospitalized in nearby Marianna. He was listed in stable condition early today.

Police said Corbin was driving along a rural road which crosses the railroad tracks when his car skidded 90 feet before slamming into the 11th car from the rear of the 100-car train.

The train's crew didn't realize there had been an accident and continued on at about 25 mph. The train went about four miles before the car Corbin hit and all those behind it derailed.

'Yah... shall we go now?'

HOUSTON (AP)— Princess Margaret, after denying she ever called the Irish "pigs", watched researchers at the famed Houston medical center do experimental operations on a calf and took one brief glimpse at open-heart surgery, and said, "Yah... shall we go now?"

The younger sister of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II ended a three-day visit to Houston Wednesday afternoon and headed for Los Angeles, San Francisco and Cleveland.

She is touring the United States in an effort to raise $4.5 million to help improve the historic Royal Opera House of London, where the royal ballet performs.

Chicago Sun-Times columnist Irv Kupcinet reported Tuesday the princess told Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, "The Irish, they are pigs."

Then, Kupcinet quoted the princess as saying to the mayor, "Oh, Oh, you are Irish."

The mayor's ancestors came from County Mayo.

Lord Nigel Napier, a spokesman for the princess, said Wednesday the princess had authorized release of a statement that denied the remark.

He said, "There is no truth in the allegation made whatsoever. I was not sitting at the same table with the princess, but she said she did not make that remark."

"I was there when the mayor said goodbye to the princess and it was in the nicest possible way. There was no ill feeling. I say again there is no truth in the report."

Mrs. Byrne said the princess did not call all the Irish people "pigs" and was referring only to the Irish Republican Army terrorists during a conversation about the slaying of Lord Louis Mountbatten.

Lord Mountbatten, a cousin of the princess, was killed by an IRA bomb. Mrs. Byrne attended the funeral in behalf of President Carter.

The mayor also speculated the dinner guests might have misinterpreted an earlier conversation in which she and the princess talked about "Irish jigs." She denied leaving the party early.

Kupcinet said he got the story from someone "who was seated right next to the mayor." He declined to reveal the source's name.

During her last day in Houston, the princess toured the cancer and heart research and surgical centers.

She met with Dr. Denton Cooley, famed heart surgeon, and Dr. John C. Norman, director of the cardio-vascular research center of St. Luke's Hospital. The princess watched as scientists placed an experimental new heart valve in a calf, a medical procedure that some day soon may be used on human beings.

She then went with Cooley into the viewing area above an operating room where open-heart surgery was underway. The doctor told her to look at the television monitor showing each move of the operation.

The princess said, "Yah... shall we go."

London Times headed for graveyard

LONDON (AP) — The Times of London, the Gibraltar of British journalism for nearly two centuries, appeared headed for the graveyard today after a holdout union walked out of last-ditch negotiations aimed at resolving a 10½-month shutdown.

"We have broken down... If the Times means what they say, it is closure," said Les Dixon, president of the National Graphical Association, after leaving the bargaining table early today.

Further word on the fate of the papers was expected after a meeting today of the Times Newspapers Ltd. and the parent group, Thomson International.

Man wanted in premier's death extradicted to Italy

ROME (AP) — Italian leftist intellectual Franco Piperno, wanted for alleged complicity in the kidnap-slaying of former Italian Premier Aldo Moro was extradicted from France to Italy today.

Piperno was brought to Italy in secrecy by a private jet that landed at a small military airport on the outskirts of Rome. From there he was taken under heavy guard to Rome's Rebibbia prison.

In its extradition bid, Italy listed 46 charges against Piperno, ranging from armed insurrection to stealing automobile license plates.

A French court agreed to the extradition request on Wednesday but cited only two of the charges against him — complicity in the Moro kidnapping and complicity in his assassination.

Piperno, a university professor and a leader of the leftist "Autonomy" movement, denied any involvement in the Moro case.

Moro, a former premier and president of the ruling Christian Democrat Party, was kidnapped in Rome in March 1978 by the terrorist Red Brigades. Moro was slain 54 days later after the government refused to free jailed leftists in exchange for him.

About a dozen suspected terrorists are in jail in connection with the Moro case and a dozen more are being sought.

Piperno was arrested in a Paris cafe in August.

U.S. governors jog in China

PEKING (AP) — Four American governors donned their jogging togs today at 6 a.m. and ran along Peking's main boulevard as early morning cyclists started.

The four governors who brought their passion for fitness to China were Thomas Judge of Montana, Richard Lamm of Colorado, William Milliken of Michigan and Albert Quie of Minnesota.

Leaving the Peking Hotel, they ran for 45 minutes in the brisk fall air along broad Chang'an Avenue and past Tian An Men Square and the Great Hall of the People.

A few Chinese and foreign joggers were also out.

Quie said the early-morning exercise reminded him of getting up early to break horses on his ranch.

The other three governors in the visiting trade and cultural delegation — George Ariyoshi of Hawaii, Robert Ray of Iowa and Richard Snelling of Vermont — joined the vigorous four later in the morning for a sightseeing tour of the Summer Palace, the Great Wall and the Ming Tombs.

The delegation arrived Monday for a 14-day visit to promote trade, economic and cultural relations between their states and China.

They met Wednesday with Acting Premier Deng Xiaoping after conferences with a number of other officials. They go Friday to Jilin and then visit Shanghai.

Martial law imposed

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Park Chung-hee proclaimed martial law today in South Korea's second largest city of Pusan after the worst anti-government rioting since he seized power in a coup 18 years ago.

Park's martial law command immediately slapped a 10 p.m.-4 a.m. curfew on the southern port city of 3 million, banned all gatherings, closed down colleges and imposed censorship.

The police chief in Pusan, 200 miles south of Seoul, was replaced, and Lt. Gen. Park Chan-keung, head of the Pusan area garrison, was named martial law commander.

Park's cabinet held a midnight session and in a statement afterward, Park called for civilian cooperation in maintaining order and a crackdown on "unruly moves threatening the foundation of constitutional rule."

About 3,000 college students and other citizens destroyed 21 police posts in Pusan, wrecked other public buildings and destroyed six police vehicles, authorities said. More than 200 persons were arrested, and 56 policemen and a large number of civilians were injured.

The demonstrations began with campus rallies early Tuesday, calling for the overthrow of the government and denouncing the expulsion two weeks ago of opposition leader Kim Young-sam, who represents a Pusan constituency, from the National Assembly. For the next 36 hours, mobs hurling rocks and firebombs battled police in the streets.

The protests coincided with the seventh anniversary of the political system introduced by Park which enables the president to stay in office indefinitely and gives him vast powers, including selection of one-third of the 231-member National Assembly.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown currently is in Seoul for the annual U.S.-South Korean security consultative talks, and informed sources said he was carrying a letter from President Carter to Park about the Korean political situation.

Chinese, French premiers ill

PARIS (AP) — The Chinese and French premiers were both ill today, but Hua Guofeng was expected to go to Brittany as scheduled, while Raymond Barre went to a hospital and cancelled all engagements for the rest of the week. It was not immediately known if the two illnesses were connected.

Hua, on a relations-cementing trip to Western Europe, was to have held a news conference this morning at his hotel.

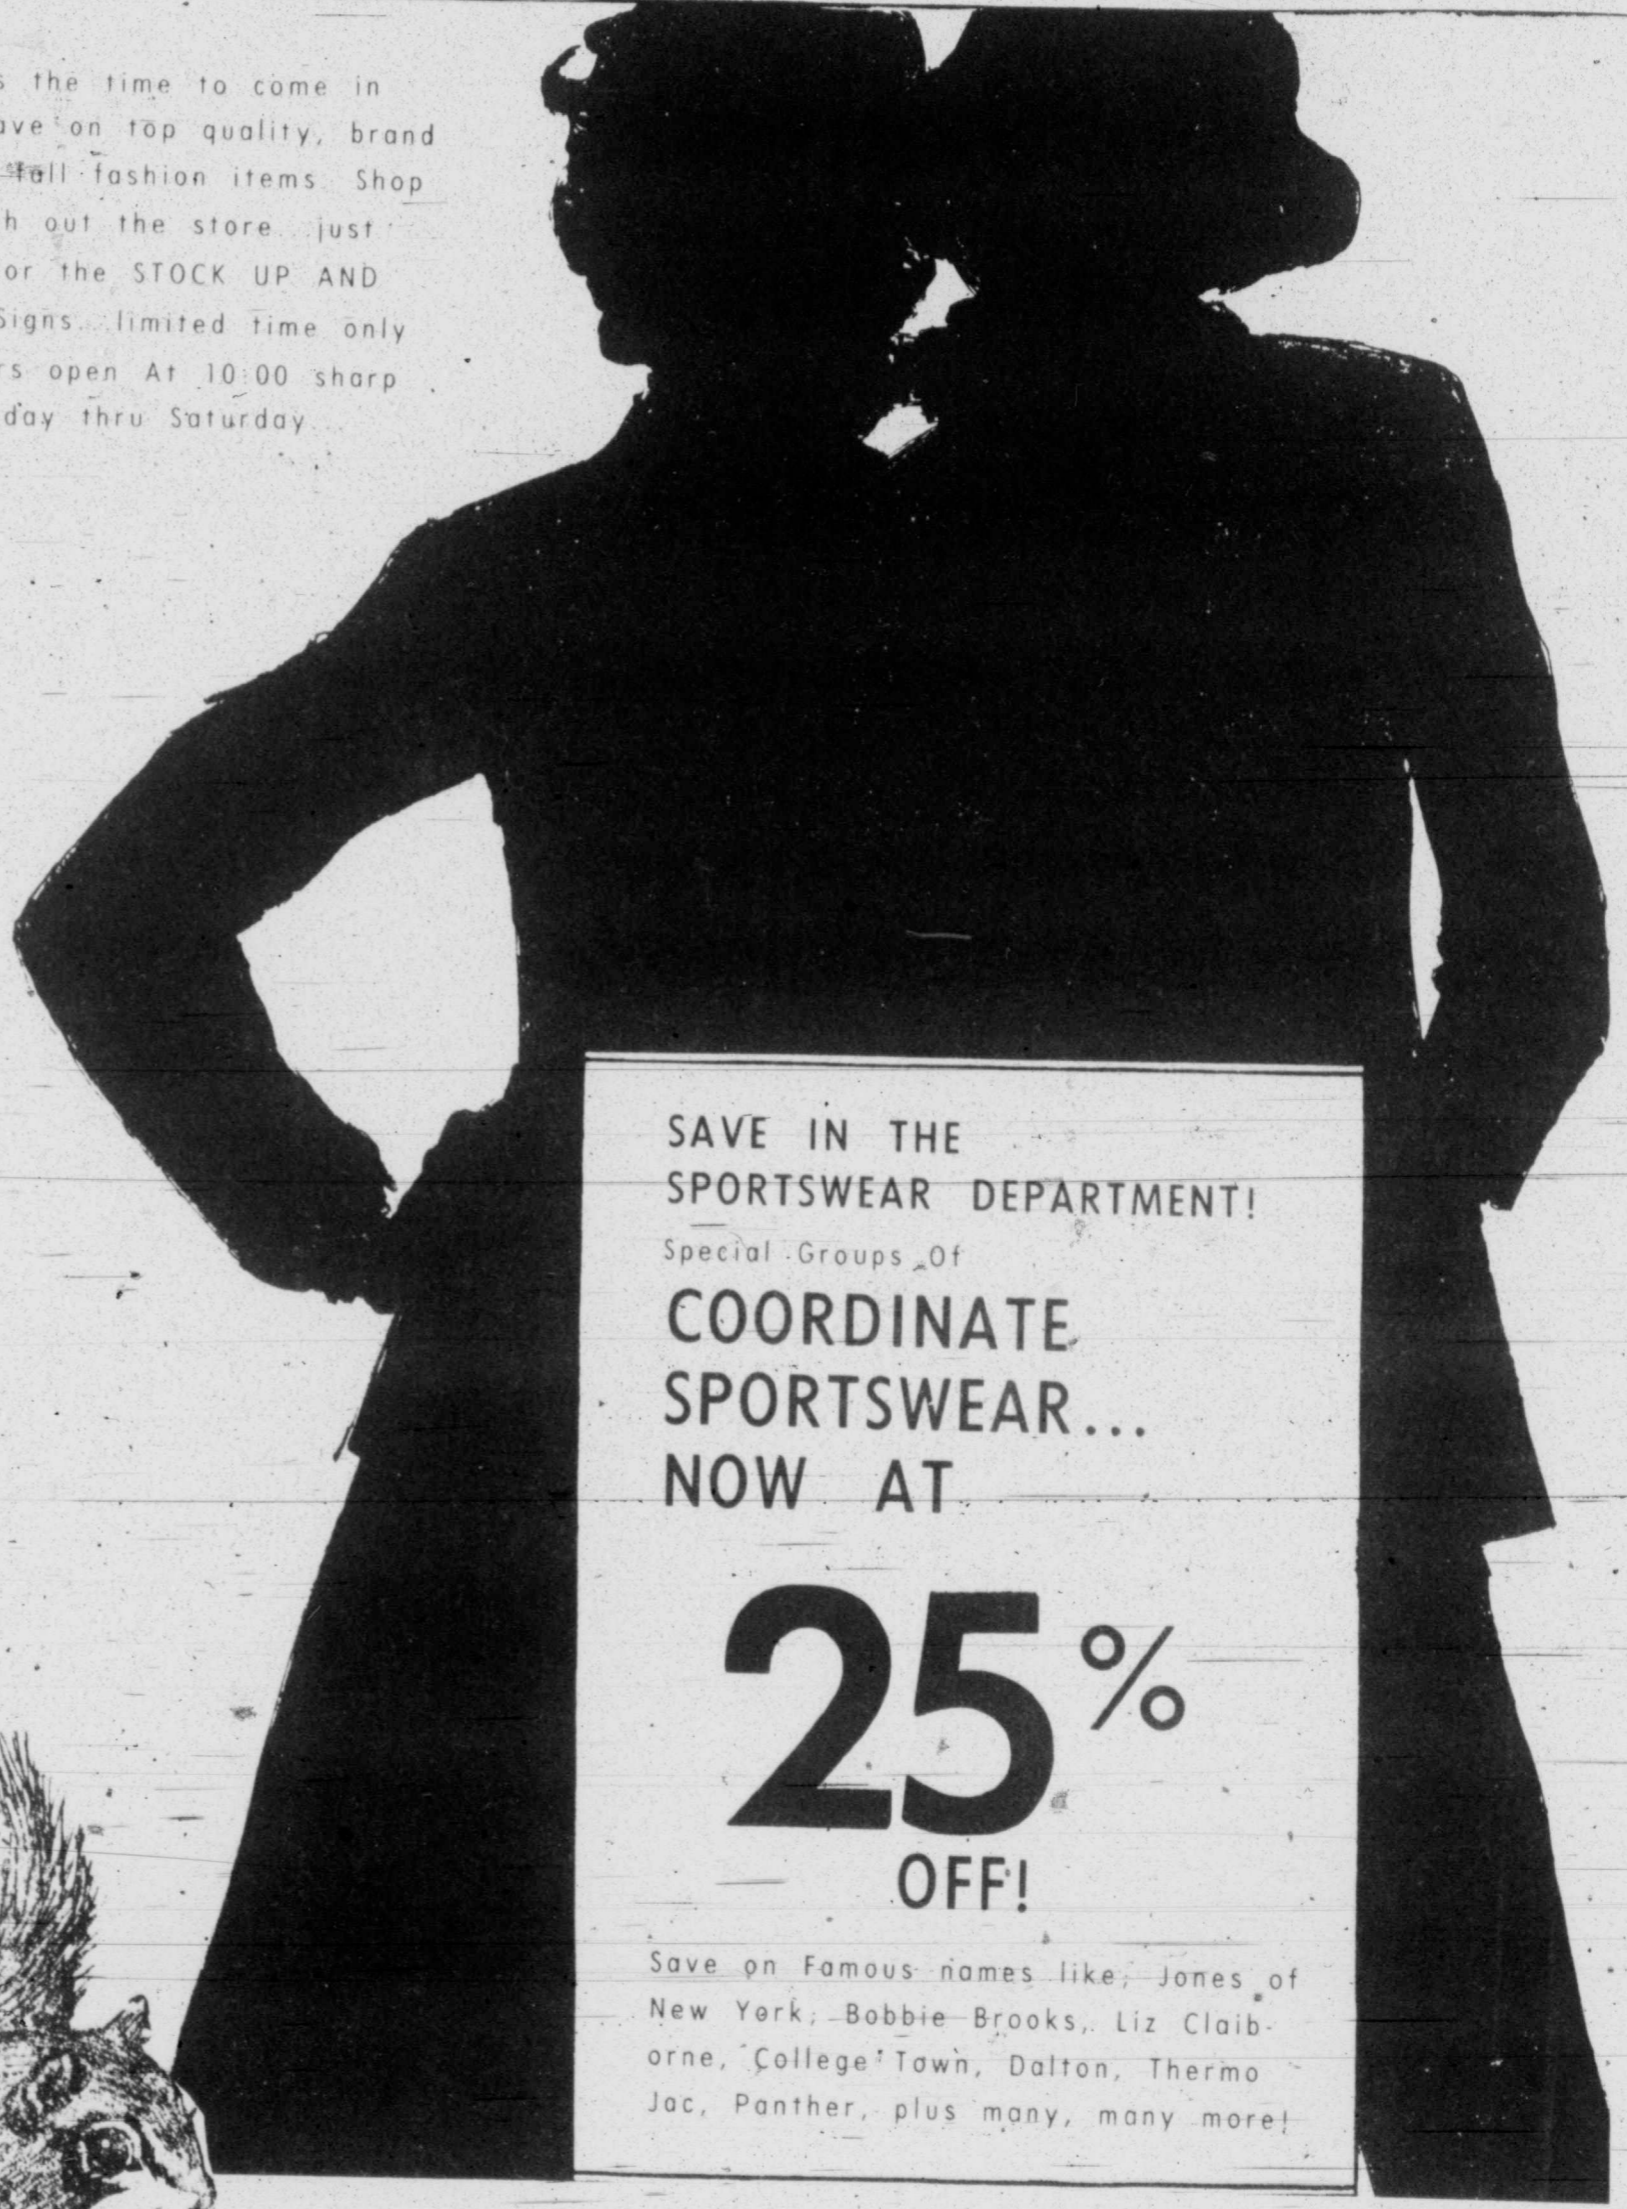

But Foreign Minister Huang Hua appeared instead and said the 57-year-old premier and party leader was "slightly indisposed" and his doctor prescribed a morning rest.

Yao Wei, the delegation press officer, said later Hua had "a cold and slight fever" but was expected to resume his regular program with a scheduled trip to the Brittany region of northwest France today.

Meanwhile, Barre's office announced the 55-year-old French premier was admitted to a hospital today for a general checkup. It said he had been ill for several days but gave no details.

However, Barre hosted a lunch for Hua on Tuesday and attended the regular weekly Cabinet meeting Wednesday.

...ANYONE WHO WOULD LIKE TO DONATE suitable reading material to junior high school students?

Dorothy Johnston, reading teacher at San Jacinto Junior High School, has set up a "behavior objective" project for her classroom.

Students will get points for achievement and at the end of six weeks will use their accumulated points to improve their grade or buy a book.

Books of high interest are needed for the project, as most of the students do not have reading material in their home, related Ms. Johnston.

DEAR ABBY
Mom likes fun, but not games

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Here's a neat one for you. Mom was widowed many years ago and has since built herself a very successful career as a realtor. She's 60ish, slim and attractive, but she's allowed her business to usurp her social life.

Recently, in showing a property, she met a widower her age who lives just a few blocks from her. He's tall, good-looking, gray-haired and well-dressed. He lives alone in a big house and has several foreign cars. I've met him, and he's really a great guy who looks and acts like he's not exactly hungry.

Well, this gentleman has been giving Mom a big rush and providing her with lots of fun and laughter. Recently he sent Mom a semi-serious invitation in the mail inviting her to "spend several naughty days with me at one of California's most romantic spots—Carmel."

I said, "Mom, get with it and go!" Mom said, "No way; it's just not my lifestyle."

What do you say, Abby? — TODAY'S DAUGHTER
DEAR DAUGHTER: Don't try to redesign Mom in your image. It's not easy for some people to "get with it" when they've gotten along nicely WITHOUT it for years.

DEAR FRIEND: I've been a faithful reader for many years. The few times I disagreed with you, you subsequently printed a retraction or, at least, admitted the opposition had a good case. In this instance, I don't think you will, but I had to write anyway.

I refer to your attitude about a citizen's right to have a gun in his home. I'll admit some folks are not well-advised to defend themselves against an armed intruder (children, those unfamiliar with weapons, and the senile). All others have a DUTY to resist evil.

If a burglar should call on me, he would find that my home and business are protected by a "silent intruder alarm." The installation record is not on any company's books; I put it in myself. I would have the advantage of surprise and, though I can't consistently shoot out the "0" ring at 62, I could probably wear my Navy marksmanship medals to his funeral, incidentally saving the state a bundle, too. In the apartment house where you probably live, the ratio of security people is about fifty to one. Out here in the jungle, the ratio is several thousand to one.

Fortunately, your attitude was not so prevalent in 1945, or we might have had an Auschwitz or Buchenwald in Milwaukee or Louisville. As the late Joseph Goebbels said to Heinrich Himmler, "Es geht zu denken" ("It makes one think"). You give it some thought, too, sweetheart, and you just might change your mind.

In any case, you've helped a lot of people and I still love you, even though I'll bet you won't print this. — BOB STICKLER

DEAR BOB: You lose. P.S. Accede to the federal requirements of gun registration and you can have an arsenal if it makes you feel any more "American" — or secure.

DEAR ABBY: I'm planning my wedding and want to provide a nursery where the guests can leave all children under 4.

Do you think that would hurt the feelings of the relatives with small children?

*I don't want screaming babies, fussy or restless tots, or children dropping hymnals, all of which I've seen happen time and time again!

Small children are wonderful, but not when they cry and talk during a wedding ceremony which should be a sacred occasion.

Would it be proper to include a note with my wedding invitations notifying the guests that such a nursery is available for all children under 4? — BRIDE-TO-BE
DEAR BRIDE: It's not only proper, it's a great idea.

Junior League supports local programs in prenatal, postnatal care

Volunteers from the Junior League of Midland, Inc. are continuing their educational and supportive programs in prenatal and postnatal care in Midland.

Prenatal clinics designed to benefit indigent pregnant women are conducted each Thursday morning at Midland's three city-county health department clinics.

Curriculum used in the prenatal clinics includes fetal development, nutrition, Lamaze instruction, infant feeding and home safety.

The League hopes to give women the opportunity to benefit from an increased knowledge and awareness of good prenatal care, thus reducing the incidence of birth defects and improve the outcome of pregnancy in Midland County, according to a League spokesman.

The prenatal clinics are operating at Main Clinic, 2200 W. Illinois Ave.; East Clinic, 1109 E. Parker Ave.; and South Clinic, 301 E. Florida Ave.

The program was expanded this year to include an educational program for all indigent perinatal patients at Midland Memorial Hospital.

'Ultrasuede animals' almost extinct

By ERMA BOMBECK

A lot of us go through life thinking we have a marriage based on trust, faith, and affection.

Well, I'm here to tell you you have to be on your toes every minute. Everyone knows how I've lusted after Ultra-Suede. The first time I heard Ultra-Suede in motion was in an auditorium in Columbus, Ohio. I'll never forget the sound of those 800 women rustling into their seats if I live to be a thousand. It sounded like 1,500 corduroy knees rubbing together.

"What is that?" I asked the chairman. "Ultra-suede," she said. "Everyone's wearing it."

I made my decision that day to go right out and finance a skirt. When I told my husband of my decision he was shocked.

"You'd never live with yourself if you knew how many Ultrasuedes gave their lives just to hang on your back."

"What are you talking about?"

"Ultrasuedes. Haven't you seen them? They're little wrinkle-free, drip-dry animals about 15 inches long who used to be indigenous to Beverly Hills, Lord, I remember how they used to roam in herds... their Hunter-Green, Tawny Beige, Electric Blue, and Fire Island Red coats glistening in the sunlight. Then people began to kill indiscriminately and make suits and tailored dresses out of them. Now they're in the process of being protected under federal law."

I hesitated. "How come I never heard of Ultrasuedes before?"

"I don't wonder," he sighed. "They're almost extinct. In a few years we'll have children growing up never knowing that an Ultrasuede once roamed this earth... free."

"I've never seen a bumper sticker saying, 'SAVE THE ULTRASUEDES!'"

"That's because whales, seals and whooping cranes have higher-paid lobbyists."

"And I've never seen PBS do a documentary on them... or Animal Kingdom, for that matter."

"I hope Marlin Perkins never hears you say that. Of course, if you insist on feeding your vanity with poor defenseless animals, that's your business."

The case of the endangered Ultrasuedes would have been closed had it not been for a visit with Mayva. She talked one of her kids into believing an overbite made him look like John Travolta and bought an Ultra-Suede suit for herself instead. I made the mistake of asking her when she was getting it out of fur storage.

I see a new species about to become endangered. They're called husbands.

Is Education First With Us?

The people of Midland will answer this all-important question at the polls on October 23rd. We have a record of answering and anticipating school needs in this city, and we now must decide where our priorities really are.

By the time it can be constructed, we will desperately need the proposed new northwest elementary school. We can't afford to "get caught" in the way Odessa did by failing to plan for the future—they now are forced into half-day classes in 8 elementary schools. Midland must plan better than that!

We voted overwhelmingly for two equal high schools—and Midland High must be renovated, its library and administrative areas and its vocational and athletic facilities expanded, if a quality program is to be provided.

General plant improvements to other school facilities are badly needed. The bond issue will provide to $2,159,900 of these essential improvements.

Lee High, our "new" High School, is nearly 20 years old. Over one million dollars is ear-marked for updating and improvements to Lee.

Separated twins' second birthday marked unafraid

By VERN ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Separated Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen celebrate their second birthday today, and their mother says it lacks the uncertainty of their first, which the Hansens feared might have been their last.

The blonde twins — joined at the tops of their heads at birth — were separated May 30 in 16½ hours of pioneering surgery at the University of Utah Medical Center.

"Last year their birthday was fine, but we weren't sure they would have another one. So this birthday is really a great joy for us," Patricia Hansen, 22, said Wednesday from the family's Ogden home.

Tonight the twins sit down to cake and ice cream and will open presents. Mrs. Hansen says about 25 friends and relatives will visit.

"They'll get some little dresses and shoes, and some new bonnets and some puppets," she said.

Lisa and Elisa are the first Siamese twins successfully separated when the area of cranial involvement was so extensive. Portions of their brains were connected and they shared some blood vessels.

They still face surgery to reconstruct their skulls. The tops of their heads are covered only by skin.

David Hansen, 24, said doctors will "take bone from their ribs and form a sort of framework over their brains. They say it will fill in completely to form a hard covering."

The twins continue to undergo physical therapy aimed at strengthening muscles unused before they were parted.

"They don't really crawl because they still have some weakness on one side," Hansen said. "But they scoot all over the place with one hand and one leg."

The Hansens have received about 1,000 letters from well-wishers all over the world. Especially meaningful are letters from parents of other Siamese twins or handicapped children, Mrs. Hansen said.

The twins' favorite playmate is their 5-month-old little sister, Sharylyn.

"They'll hold her bottle for her and hug her and kiss her," Mrs. Hansen said. "It's a lot like having triplets."

David Hansen, who has 10 brothers and sisters, and Mrs. Hansen, who has seven, plan a large family of their own.

Is she expecting? "I'd better not be. We've really got our hands full right now, but there will be plenty of time for more in the future."

Driver tried to scare 'em — and did!

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A bus driver for Irving schools came up with her own method of keeping unruly students in line — she pulled a pistol and waved it in the student's faces while demanding order, according to police.

Irving school authorities said they learned about the Wednesday incident after the driver delivered her first busload of students to Irving's Nimitz High School and left to pick up some more.

Dallas officers intercepted the bus and arrested the 21-year-old driver, confiscating a loaded .357 Magnum revolver from a box beside the driver's seat, police said.

The money-making project at Henderson Elementary School this year was selling decorative decanters filled with gourmet popping corn. The school's Parent-Teacher Association needed to raise $5,000 for the purchase of folding chairs for the cafeteria and "we were successful," reports Brenda Mendoza, PTA spokesman. The following students won money prizes for their efforts on this project. From left front are Veronica Saucedo, kindergarten; James Maddox, first grade; Missy Ward, second, and Jeff Johnson, third. From left back are Robert Taylor, fourth, Jeff Burns and Derrick Niblett, third graders. Burns was the top setting, winning $25 and Niblett was second top seller. He won $10. All other students pictured won $10. The top selling room, Mrs. Harris' third grade, won a pizza party. (Staff Photo)

He takes up wife's fight for sexual equality

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Marilyn McCusker had to fight to get her job as a coal miner. And when she died in a mine accident two weeks ago, her husband, Alan, realized his wife's struggle was only a battle in a larger conflict.

"They say that because I'm a man, I'm not deserving of survivors' benefits," said McCusker, who's become a soldier in the war for sexual equality.

After filing a sex discrimination suit against the Rushton Mining Co., Mrs. McCusker received a job and retroactive benefits through an out-of-court settlement two years ago.

Mrs. McCusker, a 35-year-old former nurse's aide, was buried alive at Rushton Mining's portal in Osceola Mills when a rock and dirt ceiling she was helping reinforce gave way.

She was the first woman in modern times killed while working in an underground mine.

Now her husband is a 28-year-old miner's widower with one child. McCusker went on leave from work before the accident to build the couple's new home.

"When Marilyn sued, it was with the understanding that it was for full benefits. That's what this whole thing was about," McCusker said Tuesday in a telephone interview from his home in Coalport in the heart of Pennsylvania's soft coal region.

McCusker decided to fight when a Pennsylvania Mines Corp. official told him his son is eligible for about $130 a week in benefits but because McCusker is capable of returning to his job as a carpenter he's ineligible.

"I just quoted the law to him," said Ron Brooks, a claims agent for Pennsylvania Mines, parent firm of Rushton Mining.

"I'm supposed to see a lawyer on Friday," McCusker said.

He's up against an old state law that says widows, rich or poor, healthy or sick, can collect survivor benefits. But it denies benefits to able-bodied men whose working wives die on the job.

"The only thing he'd be entitled to is a $1,500 burial fee," said Connie Mills, a legal assistant in the Harrisburg office that administers Pennsylvania's worker compensation laws.

"Section 307, paragraph seven of the Pennsylvania Workmen's Compensation Law. I'm not saying it's fair, but it's the law," she said. "At one time women didn't work. His law is coming down to us from those times."

McCusker could get unexpected help. Proposed amendments would substitute "surviving spouse" for "widow" in the present laws, said an aide to the Senate Labor and Industry Committee chaired by Philadelphia Democrat Herbert Arlene.

But action on the proposal is not in sight, said the aide, who asked not to be quoted by name. Arlene was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

The costs of providing expanded coverage could stand in the way, the aide said. "We once had a bill that changed just the name of the law, and it went down in committee because some people thought it would cost too much for all the printing."

Beef can be stretched nutritiously

By MERLE ELLIS

One of the best beef buys in the meat case these days is a bottom round roast. It is always the least expensive of any of the cuts, from the round and, therefore, one to become familiar with if you're at all concerned about saving money.

The beef round (the hind leg of the beef animal) is usually merchandised in three separate parts. The top round, which is the most tender muscle of the round, is usually sold as top round steaks or London Broil. The eye-of-round is not nearly as tender as the top, but is often sold for more money as both steaks and roasts. Steaks from the eye often are called "breakfast steaks" and sold at a premium. The real bargain in the round is the bottom. It is not as tender as the top, but is every bit as tender as the eye and always for considerably less money.

The bottom round usually is merchandised in two ways. Steaks cut from the bottom round often are called Swiss steaks, which lets you know that they are basically a touch cut that requires moist heat cooking. Roasts from the bottom round fall into the pot roast category, again letting you know that moisture is needed in the cooking process to tenderize an otherwise tough cut of meat.

"Do not be put off, however, by the fact that the bottom round is tough. Remember "there is no such thing as a tough piece of meat — if you cook it right." Somebody said that once.

The bottom round roast is almost always less expensive than the same piece cut into Swiss steaks, in some cases, considerably less expensive. One market in my neighborhood this week was selling Swiss steak for $2.99 per pound while bottom round roast was going for $1.99 a pound.

It's well worth the dollar a pound you save to take home a bottom round roast and cut your own Swiss steaks.

THERE ARE DOZENS of things to be done with a piece of bottom round besides Swiss steak and pot roast. It is the perfect piece, for example, for paupiettes.

According to Larousse Gastronomique, paupiettes are "thin slices of beef or other meat-stuff with some forcemeat, rolled into paupiettes (i.e. into the shape of big corks), wrapped in a thin rasher (slice) of bacon and braised in very little liquid."

There are hundreds of good recipes for paupiettes. You may find them hiding out in your favorite cook book under the title of: roulades or omeaux sans etes or simply beef rolls; but they're there and with a good buy on bottom round, you can make some marvelous meals very inexpensively.

Bottom round is excellent for beef rolls in any language because it is a soft, tough, lean muscle that can easily be sliced thin and pounded even thinner, to receive whatever stuffing you choose to use, without falling apart.

Here is one recipe for bottom round beef rolls that has become a favorite around our house.

BEEF ROLLS IN BEER

- 8 1/2-inch thick slices of beef bottom round
- 8 tps. prepared mustard
- 1 onion, peeled and cut into 8 wedges
- 4 slices of bacon, cut in half
- 1 large dill pickle, cut in 8 wedges
- 1 carrot, chopped
- 1 celery stalk chopped
- 1/2 cup flour
- salt and pepper
- 3 tbsps. cooking oil
- 1 cup beer
- arrowroot

TRIM ANY EXCESS fat from the meat. With a mallet, rolling pin or heavy pan, pound each piece of meat a few good whacks to make it nice and thin. Spread each piece with a teaspoon of mustard. Near one edge of each piece, place a strip of bacon, a wedge of onion and one of pickle. Roll up jelly-roll fashion and secure with string.

Put flour, salt and pepper in a bag. Add meat rolls two or three at a time and shake, coating well.

Heat oil in a heavy skillet or electric frying pan over moderate heat until it begins to sputter. Add the meat rolls and brown well on all sides. Reduce heat to low, add celery, carrots and beer. Cover and simmer for about 1/2 hour, until tender. Turn the rolls once or twice during cooking and add a bit more beer or water if they need it.

Remove the rolls to a warm serving platter. Strain the cooking liquid and return it to the pan over high heat. Thicken with a little arrowroot dissolved in water. Cook until the sauce is the desired consistency and pour over the meat rolls.

This dish is good with mashed or boiled potatoes and sauteed cabbage. Freeze any leftover beef rolls in their sauce. They are every bit as good, perhaps better, the second time around.

Wheatburger Pie a California creation

By CECILY BROWN-STONE

AP Food Editor

One of the best things about eating in the United States these days is that interesting regional styles of cooking have spread all over the country. Cooks in New England, for example, often welcome West Coast innovations.

This came to mind recently when we tried a Wheatburger Pie from California that stretches a pound of ground beef by adding wheat germ to the meat for the "crust," then fills it with such good things as ripe olives and jack cheese. Although a couple of our tasters allowed as how they would appreciate more beef flavor in the "crust," the others thought the dish was just right "as is."

WHEATBURGER PIE

1 pound lean ground beef

1/2 cup wheat germ

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon pepper

1/2 teaspoon dried crushed oregano

1 teaspoon minced garlic

1 large egg

1/2 cup milk

1/2 cup ketchup

1-3rd cup minced scallion

One 6-ounce can or two 3 1/2-ounce cans whole pitted ripe olives, drained and halved or quartered

8 ounces jack cheese, coarsely grated

Minced parsley

Mix together well the beef, wheat germ, salt, pepper, oregano, garlic, unbeaten egg and milk. Press evenly over bottom and sides of a 9 by 1 1/4-inch pie plate. Spread with ketchup; sprinkle with scallion and olives; top with cheese. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 25 minutes. Let stand at room temperature for 5 to 10 minutes so some of the juices at bottom will be reabsorbed by the "crust." Sprinkle with parsley, cut in wedges and serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

Note: In testing this recipe we used regular vacuum-packed wheat germ from a 12-ounce jar.

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE

By FRANK CORMIER

When Jody found girls,
Castro lost a follower

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world may have lost a great revolutionary when young Jody Powell discovered girls.

Back in the late 1950s, before Fidel Castro met with success and proclaimed himself a communist, the bearded Cuban was viewed by a great many Americans as a heroic figure, a freedom fighter holed up in the Sierra Maestra Mountains as leader of a guerrilla band bent on overthrowing the corrupt dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista.

Down in Vienna, Ga., Powell and a small group of fellow high school sophomores got carried away with the romantic notion that they, too, could become heroes if they could join up with Castro's forces in the mountains.

President Carter's future press secretary and his friends owned hunting rifles, which they judged adequate for guerrilla warfare. Moreover, one of their number had a car, which they planned to use to get as far as Miami.

Reminiscing recently, Powell said the hardy band innocently assumed that getting to Cuba would be no trick if they could reach Florida's most populous city. And if they harbored any misgivings about a language barrier, he couldn't recall them.

Fortunately, he added, the group's interest in Castro waned as the boys took an increased interest in the girls of Dooly County.

With Carter traveling more, his bodyguards are wrestling with the logistics of providing him with armored limousines. In past administrations, presidential cars were flown around the country in Air Force transports. But Carter, trying to portray himself as a fuel-saving economist, rarely authorizes such flights.

So when the president visited Albuquerque, N.M., last week, he used a car brought in from San Francisco — one of a fleet the Secret Service maintains in major cities for use by the VIPs it protects.

Because the armored vehicles are super-gas guzzlers, Carter's car was not driven from San Francisco. Instead, it was trucked to Albuquerque.

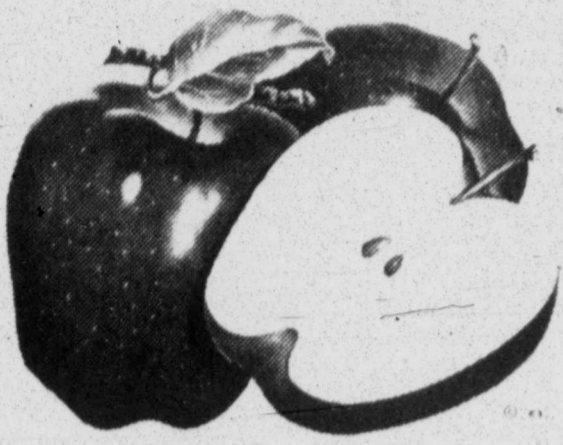

When the president was about to emerge from a party last week at the townhouse of Democratic National Chairman John C. White, his bodyguards could not start the silver 1977 Lincoln he was using.

Passers-by were treated to the sight of bodyguards jump-starting the presidential limousine.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., an expected challenger for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination, accepted an invitation to address the San Diego convention of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department last Thursday.

Then Carter, rather belatedly, accepted a longstanding invitation to appear at the same convention on the same day.

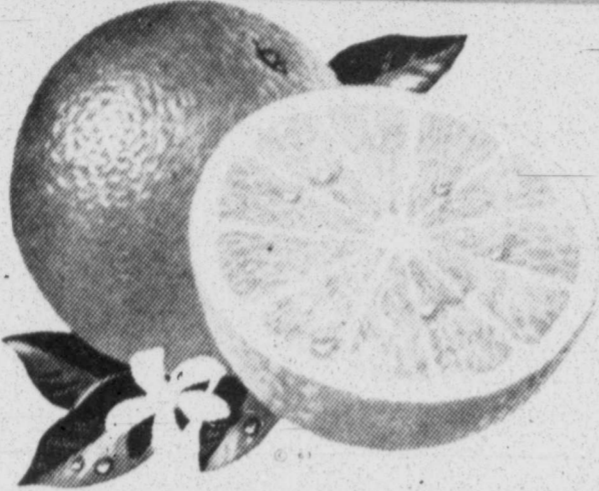

Brown first passed word to union officials that he did not care to introduce the president at the event, then decided not to appear at all.

Skeptical Midwestern farmers are now sold on benefits of gasohol

CUMBERLAND, Iowa (AP) — A bib-overalled farmer drove up to the Farmers Cooperative Association, walked over to a shiny fuel pump, pushed his straw hat back on his head and laughed.

"How much is a gallon of that corn likker, anyway?" he asked.

Gasohol had arrived — barely. Now, 16 months later, 625 Iowa gas stations sell the fuel.

In a town meeting Tuesday in Dolt, Ill., President Carter touted use of the fuel — a mixture of 90 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent grain alcohol — as a means to save gas.

"People were pretty skeptical.

They asked a lot of questions and were pretty leery," said co-op manager Delmar South, who fielded the "corn likker" challenge and other queries the first weeks he sold gasohol.

"Most of 'em like it now. We pretty nearly never sell unleaded. We sell almost all gasohol," South said.

On June 15, 1978, South's was one of five stations which started a state-sponsored 90-day marketing test to see whether gasohol would sell in competition with less-expensive gasoline.

Four of the stations were in rural communities like Cumberland, population 385. The fifth was in a town of 31,000.

Only five stations were used because "we had no idea how the consuming public would respond," said Doug Getter of the Iowa Development Commission, the agency which promotes gasohol sales.

The public responded by buying out some stations' supplies.

"When we got the test results, we were elated. It demonstrated a very clear and very strong demand for the product," Getter said.

"Once we proved there was demand, it didn't take the oil jobbers (who supply independent service stations) long to pick up the slack and see the benefit of making it available," he said.

Consider the following:
— Service stations selling the fuel are found in almost every city in the state.

— Gasohol sales have leaped from 600,000 gallons in November 1978 to 4.6 million gallons last month.

— Sales are so strong, the state transportation department fears losing $60 million in taxes because gasohol is exempt from the state's 10-cent-per-gallon motor fuel tax.

"It just exploded on us. It went much faster than we anticipated," said Duane Halverson, petroleum vice president for Felco Land O'Lakes cooperatives.

Four of the test stations were Felco co-ops, Halverson said Felco now has 135 gasohol outlets in four states — Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

"Gasohol is extremely popular in Iowa and the Midwest, for two reasons," Halverson said.

"One, farmers have a lot of money tied up in land and equipment. At the same time, theirs is a very seasonal business where they must be able to move quickly. They don't want to worry about fuel supplies. Anything that helps reduce those worries, they'll support."

"Two, they see it as a chance to increase their market for corn, which can be used to make the alcohol," he said.

"Gasohol is not without critics, including researchers who say it takes more energy to produce the grain alcohol than it provides. Others say that without tax exemptions, gasohol couldn't be priced competitively with gasoline.

The Iowa Legislature exempted gasohol from state fuel taxes for six years — from July 1, 1978 until June 30, 1983 — and raised questions on whether the fuel should be subsidized.

The Iowa Department of Transportation estimates the exemption will cost the state $60.4 million in lost tax revenue, said spokesman Greg Barcus.

Halverson said the tax exemption is needed now, but not forever.

Cambodia may get $35 million in U.S. aid

WASHINGTON (AP)— A House subcommittee, overriding concerns that some relief supplies for the starving millions in Cambodia will go to Vietnamese troops occupying the country, is advocating $35 million in U.S. aid.

The money approved without dissent Wednesday by the Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs would cover about a third of the $110 million United Nations officials say is needed for the war-torn nation.

The funds still must be approved by the full House, the Senate and the president.

Millions of Cambodians are believed to have died and millions more are suffering from hunger and disease, officials have said. President Carter already has made $7 million available for an international relief program, but additional funds must be approved by Congress.

"We need the fastest possible public signal to the international community" that the United States intends to contribute to the relief effort, Richard Holbrook, assistant secretary of state for East Asia, told the House panel.

Rep. C.W. Bill Young, R-Fla., argued that Congress should wait until the Vietnamese and Cambodian governments indicate they want the aid before appropriating the money. He also said there should be guarantees the money will go to the needy and that distribution will not be based on political considerations.

Young said the United States should seek a "specific commitment that the 170,000 Vietnamese troops currently in Cambodia will not be the recipients of this aid."

Holbrook said that while some relief supplies already have been diverted to those soldiers, holding back the assistance will only mean "we increase the starvation."

Russian arms sales drop says CIA report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russian arms sales to non-communist countries in the Third World dropped sharply last year, according to a CIA report.

The study said the slide from $5.2 billion in 1977 to $1.8 billion in arms sales agreements in 1978 "may signal a movement of some major customers into alternative arms markets."

The study did not identify Soviet Third World customers who may be shifting away from Russia as a supplier, but it is known that Iraq and Syria have been exploring wider arms sources in Western Europe.

While Russian arms sales volume plummeted in 1978, the CIA report said Moscow committed an unprecedented $3.7 billion in economic aid to non-communist Third World countries.

Color photographs, paintings on display in the MCT lobby

Color photographs by Robert C. Haslanger and paintings by Pat Garren currently share honors at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The dual art show opened two weeks ago in conjunction with the opening of Midland Community Theatre's stage attraction, "The Passion of Dracula."

The photos and paintings will continue on display through the run of MCT's next show, "Three By Two," opening this Friday night, and will hang through late November in the Theatre Midland lobby.

The art works are available for purchase through the Midland Community Theatre business office.

Haslanger's photography exhibit includes classic landscapes, detailed composition studies and cowboys at work on one of the West's last large ranches.

The collection of color photos offers spectacular studies of scenery in the remote and scenic Sangre de Cristo mountains of northern New Mexico, and the lower canyons of Rio Grande River in Texas.

Haslanger has had several one-man shows in Houston and Austin since 1974. His photographs have appeared in commercial publications and advertising campaigns and he currently maintains a commercial office in Austin.

He regularly conducts photographic workshops, the most recent one having been held in September at Vermejo Park, N.M. Prints of his striking photographs are found in homes, office and commercial establishments throughout the U.S.

Oil and watercolor artist Pat Garren maintains a studio in picturesque Buffalo Gap, near Abilene. Although her deepest affection is for the semi-arid regions of West Texas, she likewise is fascinated with the stark rugged of the New Mexico Indian country. That fact is reflected in several of her paintings which are skillful interpretations of Ruidoso and Taos where she has spent considerable time.

Ms. Garren says that although she likes certain effects that can only be achieved with oil, she is more at home with watercolor inasmuch as most of her formal training has been in that medium.

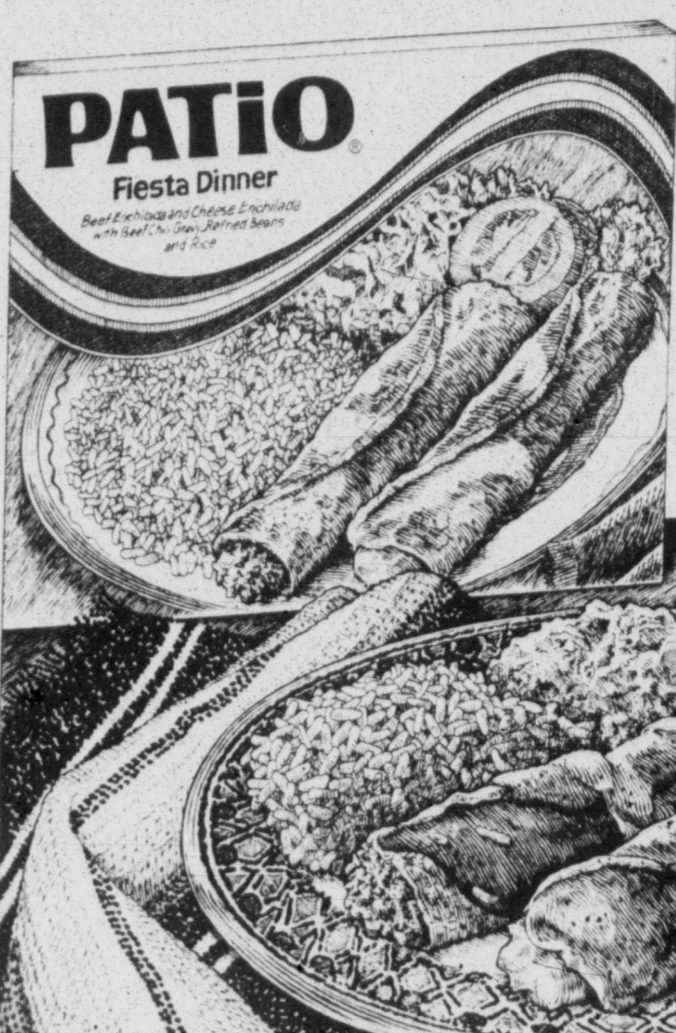

Ms. Garren began formal art study in 1972 with James Hall of Ruidoso, and she subsequently had art studies with Robert Gartland of Oklahoma, a member of the American Watercolor Society. Both artists encouraged her to paint professionally, and she began painting seriously five years ago.

More recently she has had study with watercolorist Clay McCaughy at the Hill Country Arts Foundation at Ingram, near Kerrville.

She has had one-woman shows in numerous cities in this region, and she exhibits her work at Fort Worth's Chisholm Trail Gallery, the McCloud Gallery at Eastland, the Territorial Gallery in Roswell, N.M., and the Gift Horse Gallery at Ozona. Her works are in private collections in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Florida, Kansas, Pennsylvania, Virginia and New Jersey.

Ms. Garren was educated in the Abilene public schools and at Texas Christian University. She lived in Midland for several years where she taught English at San Jacinto Junior High School and then at Robert E. Lee High School. She is the mother of two daughters, aged 12 and 8, and teaches classes in watercolor and oil painting at her Buffalo Gap studio.

Higher court denies two Midland appeals

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has denied a motion for rehearing by James William Stewart, convicted of murder in Midland County.

The appeals court also granted a state's motion for rehearing in a Midland forgery case.

Stewart had requested a rehearing of his case on grounds the appeals court had not properly disposed of his claim that the trial court erred in refusing to allow him to call witnesses at the guilt stage of the trial to testify to his general reputation for truth and veracity.

Stewart sought to call the witnesses because his testimony and the testimony of a police officer called by the prosecution differed on statements Stewart made about the shooting death.

The appeals court ruled the general rule that no evidence except contradictory evidence is permissible.

"It is not permissible to bolster the testimony of the witness by proof of his good reputation for truth and veracity," the court ruled.

In the case of Walker Cadd Jr., the appeals court granted a motion by the state for rehearing and affirmed Cadd's conviction for forgery.

Electric street lights now 100

WASHINGTON (AP) — Electric street lighting celebrated its 100th anniversary this year.

On Sept. 2, 1879, Charles F. Brush of Cleveland was granted a patent for arc lamps that could be used for street lights. Brush, who became known as the "father of electric street lighting," according to IPO Inc., a non-profit, public, educational group dedicated to preserving the patent system, successfully demonstrated his invention in Cleveland with the result that the city became the first municipality to use arc lighting for thoroughfares. His system soon spread around the world.

Brush was awarded more than 50 patents, most of them in the electrical field.

United plans 195 layoffs

CHICAGO (AP) — United Air Lines said Wednesday it will lay off 100 pilots and 95 pilots-in-training as of Dec. 1 because of cutbacks in the company's flight schedule for the coming year.

United, the nation's largest airline, also said that an additional 50 pilots could be furloughed during 1980.

Ed Williams, a United spokesman, said the layoffs coincided with the reduced flying planned for the rest of this year and next year because of higher fuel costs, higher fares and an expected downturn in ridership.

United said that once it had "fully analyzed" its schedule for next year, as many as 50 more of the company's 5,800 pilots could be furloughed next year.

Williams said a decision on staff reductions in other employee categories such as flight attendants or ground crews had not been made.

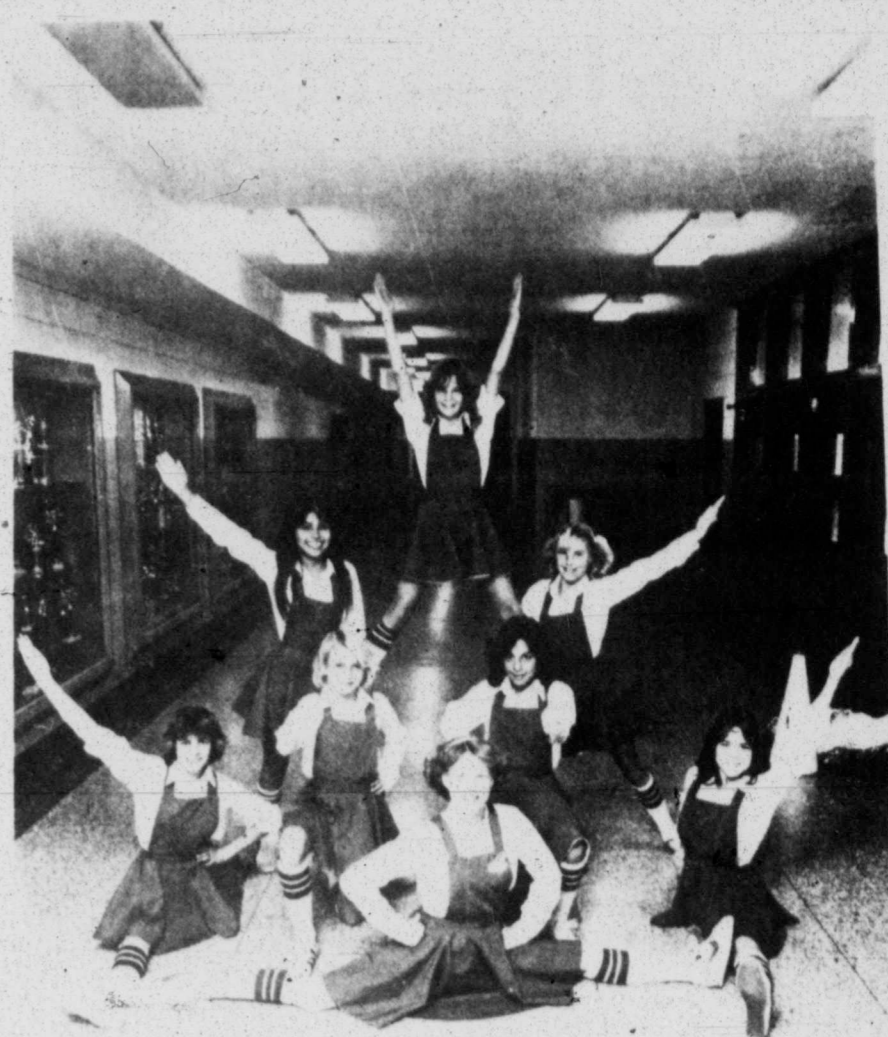

He said 150 was the maximum number of flight officers that would be furloughed.

Japan buys famed Western art

By JIM ABRAMS
KOFU, Japan (AP) — Yamanashi prefecture (state) in central Japan has long been able to boast of Mount Fuji and lush hills of grape vineyards. And now it has Jean Francois Millet, too.

The landlocked farming prefecture raised eyebrows in the art world last year when it purchased two famous paintings by the 19th century French artist, Millet — "The Sower" and "The Return of the Flock" — for $715,000 U.S. — to decorate its new $8 million art museum which opened in November.

The museum, surrounded by 14,000 transplanted trees in a suburb of the capital of Kofu, a city of 180,000, also houses works by Courbet, Corot, and the British painter Joseph Turner, all artists connected with Millet's Barbizon school of pastoral painting.

In the courtyard looking out on Mount Fuji is Henry Moore's sculpture "A Human Figure in Four Reclining Positions," a $250,000 showpiece.

It also picked up a Chagall painting this year and in late August announced that it had obtained three more Millet works, including "The Portrait of Pauline One," for $1.1 million.

Fourteen of Millet's 26 existing woodcut sketches have made their way to Yamanashi.

"The paintings are a source of immense local pride," said Yoshihiko Otoguro, general affairs director of the museum, in an interview.

"The concentration of art and culture in the big cities has left people out in the country starving for cultural outlets. Now that all the highways are built and the schools all have swimming pools, it is natural that money be spent on such projects," he said.

Otoguro admitted that the high purchasing power of the yen has eased Yamanashi's plunge into the big money world of art. But he added that the public load has been substantially lightened by contributions of works and money from local people "tired of having Yamanashi treated as a country backwater."

He said that the museum decided to concentrate on the Barbizon school — named after a village near Paris where Millet once lived — after it chanced upon the first two Millet works at a New York gallery.

Moreover, the people of Yamanashi have an affinity for the rural scenes depicted by Millet and Corot. Abstract works just would not fit us," he said.

Otoguro said some 280,000 people, four times the number expected, viewed the European masters and the 300 Japanese works on display in the first nine months of operation.

Boosting local pride by shelling out taxpayers' yen for expensive Western art is not unique to Yamanashi. Fukuoka, an industrial city in western Japan, last year paid $1.55 million for Joan Miro's "A Dancer Listening to Music at a Gothic Church," and the Hiroshima City Museum opened last November with works by Matisse, Renoir, and Delacroix.

Five or six more preeminent art museums will open their doors in the next year, and Otoguro said they are all determined to find a drawing card masterpiece.

The flow of Western art to Japan also has been accelerated by yen-powered investors taking advantage of the bullish market and the government trying to ease international pressures.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Reconstructive surgery now popular after mastectomies

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently underwent a mastectomy and am thinking of having plastic surgery for cosmetic reasons. I realize that any surgery has some risks, but are there any special risks attached to this? — Ms. K.L.

Dear Ms. L.: Breast reconstruction after mastectomy is becoming increasingly popular. However, there are both surgical and psychological risks of which you should be aware.

Probably the most important thing for you to realize is that although reconstructive breast surgery generally improves the patient's appearance, it cannot restore her cosmetically to her pre-mastectomy condition. Women who expect to look exactly as they did before their mastectomy will be seriously disappointed and, possibly, depressed.

However, the surgery will permit you to discard the external prosthesis and to wear normal clothing. In addition, when expectations are not unrealistic, the restoration of a more normal physical appearance and texture can help alleviate any depression or withdrawal from social and sexual contact that may have occurred.

The surgical risk of the operation involves the possibility of skin necrosis, or the death of skin covering the prosthesis. If this happens, additional, more complicated surgery must be performed.

Dr. Reuven K. Sayderman, of the college of medicine and dentistry, New Jersey-Rutgers Medical School, says that about 20 percent of the 90,000 women who undergo mastectomy in the United States each year would benefit from consultation with a plastic surgeon concerning breast reconstruction. Women who benefit most from the procedure are those with realistic expectations of what the surgery can — and cannot — do.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know that many Japanese who survived the atomic bomb later developed leukemia. Is radiation the cause of the disease? — Mr. C.W.E.

Dear Mr. E.: There is as yet no clear knowledge of what causes leukemia. In patients with the acute form of the disease, scientists suspect that a virus is involved. For chronic myelogenous, as well as acute, leukemia, ionizing radiation is known to be a cause, and this was borne out by the Japanese experience to which you refer. For chronic lymphatic leukemia, however, radiation does not appear to be a causative factor.

that usually are filled with traffic and with exhaust fumes to match. Is it possible that exercise under these conditions is doing me more harm than good? — Curt.

Dear Curt: Possible? Yes. Probable? Better talk with your doctor. Automobile exhaust may be a source of lead poisoning. Lead is a highly toxic mineral and the body can tolerate only about 0.0003 ounce without the person suffering ill effects. If you think you might be taking lead in, see your doctor. He can do a test to determine if you have too much lead in your body.

(If you have medical problems, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Michigan city being 'renewed'

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Downtown redevelopments are changing the face of this second-largest city in the Wolverine State, according to Mayor Abe Drasin.

Decaying warehouses and dingy commercial buildings are being replaced on the Grand River's west bank by parks and the Gerald R. Ford Presidential Museum. The east bank will become a new business district, anchored by renovated and new high-rise hotels, a convention center and a performing arts hall.

The 63-year-old Pantlind Hotel will be undergoing a $14 million major renovation this fall and will be named the Grand Plaza East by its new owner, the Amway Corp., which has also announced plans to erect another 25-story hotel on an adjoining site.

Akers assures that Horns have minds on Arkansas

By JACK KEEVER

Texas' Jam Jones (24) goes all out for this pass from quarterback Donnie Little as Oklahoma's Sherwood Taylor (31) defends in Saturday's 16-7

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers says the Longhorns have got their minds where they belong — on the upcoming game with Arkansas, not last Saturday's 16-7 victory over Oklahoma.

Asked at the Longhorn Club meeting Wednesday if Texas players had been able to put the Oklahoma game out of their minds and concentrate on Arkansas in practice, Akers said: "Yes, our players have won that battle. Our full attention is on Arkansas."

Akers told the club No. 10 Arkansas has the "best kicking game we will face this season."

Texas moved up two places to No. 2 after beating Oklahoma and will play Arkansas at Little Rock before a capacity crowd of 53,555 and a regional television audience.

It will be Texas' third road game against an undefeated opponent, including Missouri, which it defeated 21-0, and Oklahoma.

The club's largest crowd of the season greeted Akers with a standing ovation and he said of the Oklahoma victory: "Everything was just great if you were orange. Texas' colors are burnt orange and white.

"I've heard it said that all you have to do to have good morale is win," Akers stated. "I don't believe that. I don't think our team is satisfied with just winning. I think they're disappointed if they win and don't show improvement."

"I don't think we're close to reaching our potential," he added.

Asked what he could do for an encore after Oklahoma, Akers replied, "Let me say this. We signed on to play 11 (games) — 12 hopefully. It may be a one-game season for a lot of folks but not for me or our players. There's nothing deadlier than last week's news."

He said Texas had "better expect a real dogfight (against Arkansas). They have an explosive offense and are more balanced, much more so than Oklahoma. Their offensive line is among the better ones in the entire nation. They're throwing at an extremely high completion rate... and apparently their defense has jelled."

Akers said Texas coaches could only "wait and see" if tight end Lawrence Sampleton's shoulder injury responds to treatment so he can play against Arkansas.

The 6-foot-6, 230-pound sophomore starred as a freshman in Texas' 28-21 victory over Arkansas last year.

Akers was applauded by Longhorn Club members for refusing to wait on the conclusion of last Saturday's Baltimore-Pittsburgh World Series game to start the Texas-Oklahoma football game at Dallas. Kickoff was at 3:30 p.m., CDT. ABC-TV did not join the nationally televised football game for full coverage until the second quarter.

Akers told the club he had agreed to "10 minutes leeway," but he added, "We couldn't afford to go out there, warm up and go back in the dressing room and sit for 45 minutes or an hour — no way. If it had been me, I'd have cut the baseball game off."

Akers was then asked about kickoff time for the regionally televised Texas-Arkansas game this Saturday. "Kickoff at 3:10," he said as club members roared with laughter — "unless basketball season starts early."

Roger still likes run

money. He circulates in the dressing room and tries to make it appear that he's one of the guys, but he doesn't even know the players' names. He either calls them by the wrong name or, when he can't even think of a name, he just calls 'em Tiger."

Dutton said, he got away. "But I know there are other players like me. About 90 percent of them would leave if they had the chance."

Dutton added he thought about leaving the Colts for two years before making the move. "Then as things developed, they started bad-mouthing me and it got into something I didn't expect. I didn't intend to badmouth anybody."

When the Cowboys adopted the third down Shotgun, offense three years ago, many considered it a gimmick that wouldn't last, just a bit of Tom Landry window-dressing. But it is an integral part of the Dallas offense now and quarterback Roger Staubach is sold on the Shotgun.

"Third-and-five is the toughest down in football and being back in the tailback spot like that is an advantage in that situation. You are back there where you can see and pick up the keys more quickly."

Staubach not only had a great night passing against the Rams, but someone observed that he ran "like the Staubach of five years ago," which naturally prompted Roger to bristle over a very sensitive subject that must be approached cautiously.

"I still get my 40 carries a season in. I run more than you think. The big difference is that now I maneuver around the pocket to get open, which I think is what I should do. Picking up 25 or 30 yards running gives me personal satisfaction. I still like to run... as long as I can get up afterward."

Coetzee rebels at White Hope tag

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Gerrie Coetzee of South Africa doesn't want to be known as a white hope, but just a fighter who wants to be a world champion.

"Being called 'Great White Hope' means more money for me," said Coetzee, who will fight American black John Tate Saturday for the World Boxing Association heavyweight title. "But I don't really like it," the 24-year-old Coetzee said Wednesday. "I want white people, brown people, black people to accept me as their champion."

So Coetzee promised that if he beats Tate and becomes the first white man to win a heavyweight title since Ingemar Johansson in 1959 that he will work for full racial equality in all South African sports.

"One has only to look at what Muhammad Ali achieved for his religion by using the world title as a platform," said Coetzee. "It is possibly the best platform in the world to launch such a message."

The fight, which has been protested against by U.S. civil rights groups because of South Africa's apartheid policy, will be staged before an integrated audience at the Loftus Versfeld rugby stadium in the capital of Pretoria 30 miles from here.

"Ticket prices run from about $345 to about $12. A crowd of at least 70,000 is expected by the promoters for the bout that will be seen live in the United States on NBC at 3:30 p.m."

The WBA title became vacant when Ali retired earlier this year. The World Boxing Council recognizes Larry Holmes as champion and most boxing observers consider Holmes the best heavyweight in the world, ate is well aware of this.

"Every day when I get up to train I think about people in the boxing world not having accepted me, and it motivates me," he said.

The 24-year-old from Knoxville, Tenn., wants a crack at Holmes and universal championship recognition, but he's not looking past Saturday.

"I'm just an old country boy and I've been taught to cross one bridge at a time," he said. "I haven't beaten Gerrie yet. When I do, then I'll talk about Holmes."

Tate earned his title shot by stopping South African Kallie Knoetze in eight rounds last June 2. But he said he has not been lulled into a false sense of security by the victory.

"They're two different kind of fighters," said Tate. "Kallie likes to take you out with one punch. Gerrie is the type of guy who likes to box. He can't

Hogs up in arms over TV schedule

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — Irate television viewers in southwest Arkansas and northeast Texas are signing petitions and making telephone calls about Saturday's football programming.

The viewers, spurred by the city of Texarkana, Ark., want the Arkansas-Texas football game televised in their area instead of the Grambling Jackson State game.

The city was passing out petitions and urging residents to telephone and write ABC TV, the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Federal Communications Commission.

A Shreveport, La., ABC affiliate is scheduled to carry the Grambling-Jackson State football game Saturday instead of the Southwest Conference game between Arkansas and Texas.

The city filed a petition seeking an injunction on Wednesday to block the broadcast. The action was filed in Federal District Court for Western Arkansas in Texarkana.

A hearing on the petition is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. Friday in Little Rock before U.S. District Judge Richard Arnold.

Texas Athletic Director Darrell Royal said Wednesday he had contacted ABC about the programming plan and said he understood that no final decision had been made about what game KTBS would carry.

But ABC officials said Wednesday KTBS would be carrying the Grambling-Jackson State game.

The protest, which began with a special city board meeting Tuesday, grew Wednesday. The Wake Village, Texas, city council met Wednesday and endorsed the endeavor. The Texarkana, Texas, city council was to meet at noon today over the issue.

take you out with either hand but he's a boxer. I've trained for 15 rounds."

Coetzee, also 24, agrees that he's a boxer with a punch but expects the fight to go the distance.

Both men are unbeaten as pros. Tate has won 19 fights with 16 knockouts. Coetzee has knocked out 12 of his 22 victims, earning his title bid with a one-round knockout of former champion Leon Spinks last June 24.

Weaver promises he won't hit any walls

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver says his emotions won't boil over as he thinks about the Pittsburgh Pirates' defeat of his Orioles in the World Series.

"I won't hit any walls," said Weaver Wednesday night after the Pirates had scored a 4-1 victory to capture the series title. "But I won't necessarily go home and relax, either. It'll stay with you for awhile."

It was Weaver's fourth World Series as the Orioles manager and his third time around as a loser. This time, there was the added stigma of his team having blown a three-games-to-one lead, something only three other teams in baseball history have done in a seven-game series.

Asked if the series defeat left him with an empty feeling, Weaver replied: "Certainly. No doubt about it. We got this far and we had three shots to beat them. I certainly have an empty feeling."

Stargell, Tekulve act wows Baltimore

"Our hitting stopped," said Weaver, famous for his lineup switches and righty-lefty percentage plays. "We went stale one game too soon."

"We had just about every move we wanted to make, but when the ball players don't come through, your moves don't look quite as good."

It remained for Phil Garner, who hit 500 in the Series to lead the Pirates' batters, to sum up the team's feeling: "Willie Stargell gets younger every year. If he ever retires, we'll all go with him."

"Garner finished the season with a 24-game hitting streak, the last 14 games of the regular season, three playoff games and seven Series games. He was the only player to hit in all seven Series games."

Tekulve said he always believed the Pirates would come back and win.

"That's been the nature of this ball club... It's been a lot of hard work and a lot of pain, and if we were going to go down we were going to kill ourselves trying," he said.

It was a very trying Series. The first game was postponed by rain. The second was played despite snow and rain earlier in the day. The weather was cold except for the final two games in Baltimore.

One last thing on Stargell. He showed his leadership in the eighth inning when Tekulve came in to try and get the Pirates out of a jam.

Stargell walked over to the reliever and told him to show people why Tekulve was the best relief pitcher in baseball.

"If you're not ready, I'll pitch and you play first base," Stargell told Tekulve.

It broke the tension for Tekulve. He smiled, then went on to break the Orioles' hearts.

Houston improves

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers defense has shown marked improvement this season with 31 quarterback sacks and 17 interceptions and defensive coordinator Ed Biles says give the Oilers offense its share of the credit.

The Oilers have been ahead in seven games this season as compared to last season when they had to rally for all 10 regular season victories.

"Forcing a team to play catch-up football is a big help toward getting a lot of sacks and interceptions," Biles said. "Teams are taking chances against us this year they wouldn't have taken last year."

Biles also is pleased with another statistic gleaned from last Sunday's 27-16 victory.

"We stopped them four out of five times in short-yardage situations," said Biles. "It's extremely difficult to hold a National Football League team to less than a year, especially in a situation where they need that yard."

The played an above-average game in Baltimore but I'd still like to think we can improve.

Weaver picked manager of year

Baltimore's Earl Weaver was named The Sporting News 1979 major league manager of the year Wednesday in a poll of all 26 major league baseball managers. Houston's Bill Virdon finished a close second.

The St. Louis traded second baseman Mike Tyson to the Chicago Cubs for relief pitcher Donnie Moore, a 14-game winner for Midland's Cubs in 1975 and a former pitching star at Lubbock Monterey. Tyson, 29, a Cardinals seven years with a lifetime batting average of .244, hit .221 last season and would have been eligible to become a free agent at the end of October. Moore, 25, a right-hander, has been used primarily in relief in the majors. The 6-foot, 175-pounder had a 1-4 record with one save this year and has a 14-13 major league record.

The University of San Francisco basketball program has been placed on one-year probation by the NCAA, keeping the Dons out of postseason play and off NCAA-controlled television games. Probation was imposed because two members of the coaching staff violated NCAA regulations "primarily related to benefits provided enrolled student-athletes and recruiting."

Levy protests Broncos' trick

Marv Levy wants somebody to speak to the Denver Bronco who played a "low, crummy" trick on Kansas City twice during the Chiefs 24-10 loss Sunday, contending on two occasions, after the Chiefs had picked up consecutive first downs, a Denver player barked out a "sharp command" as the Chiefs were going through their offensive snap count. "Each time it resulted in our drawing offside penalties. It was the same player each time. It's just a low thing to do. It's a crummy thing to do. They played well enough to beat us. They didn't have to do that."

The "John Newcombe Revival" continued on Wednesday night when the three-time Wimbledon champion scored a 6-4, 6-4 upset over Vijay Amritraj to enter the quarterfinals of the Australian Indoor Tennis Championships. Vitas Gerulaitis beat Terry Rocaert 6-1, 6-2.

San Diego raises rent on Padres

San Diego is raising the Padres' rent by 86 percent and says the National League baseball club must agree to the new lease by Monday or face eviction from San Diego Stadium. Hungary trounced Finland 3-1 Wednesday in a Group 6 match of the European Cup of Nations soccer tournament. Greece leads the group standings with seven points in six games, followed by Hungary with six points in six games. The touring Cosmos of the NASL beat the Malaysian national team 5-0 in an exhibition. Washington D.C. was awarded the 1980 Soccer Bowl Wednesday by the NASL. The Perdido Bay Country Club withstood the attack of Hurricane Frederic five weeks ago. It will be tested again this week as 160 golfers tee off today in the $200,000 Pensacola Open. The violent storm destroyed 15 homes near the course as it swept through the coastal region near the Florida-Alabama border on Sept. 12. But the course is said to be in good condition, minus a lot of small trees and a few bridges, as the fall pro tour visits here for the 28th time. Last year's winner, tour veteran Mac McLendon, will defend his title he won with a blistering 16-under-par performance.

MHS YOUTH CENTER CHATTER
Youth Center fetes
25th anniversary

By BECKY WILSON, AMY DAVENPORT
 ANGELA TOMPKINS and TRACY BEEBE

Rasco says: "Hey, hey, hey! Hear what I have to say. Happy anniversary, baby — got you on my mind."

"Guess what, Bulldogs. Today is the 25th anniversary of the Midland Youth Center in its present location. According to records I was able to find, it is really the 35th anniversary of the Center. This extra 10 years includes the time it was called the Midland Youth Canteen."

"THIS BEING MY FIFTH year at the Center, I would like to say a sincere and heartfelt thanks to the people who started such a wonderful place for the youth of the city 35 years ago and to all the past and present board of directors members. Without these special people it could not be."

"My thanks also go to all the concerned students who have gone through the Center during these years and the present students who are keeping the Center alive."

"My very special thanks go to Kathleen Crossland, head cook, who has been with the Center 23 of the 25 years in this location."

"The following 100 Clubbers have received 15 points each for being the only four who showed for cleaning up on Saturday after the Victory Dance: Tami Tompkins, Joe Tompkins, Garry Arnett and Terrie Woodruff. My sincere thanks."

"I also thank the Junior Council members who were present: Gerard Alcala, Chris Burchett and Russell (Howie) Wickman."

ATTENTION, 100 CLUB! There will be a cleanup at 7:30 p.m. Friday (that's tomorrow). We hope you all made it to the setup at 4 today to pick up a few extra points.

Hey, all hungry Bulldogs, you better be proud of Mighty Purple Pack because Friday night they really gave Big Spring a "Bum Steer" with a slaughtering victory score of 31-zip. "Them bones, them bones, them DOG bones!"

Follow our Pack to Abilene Friday night and watch us pluck those Eagles.

All Bulldogs will be behind you, JV Football Team, so dig in with your claws and rip Abilene apart: Same to you, volleyball players. Kill the Punky Panthers! We're all behind you, so win, win, win!

DON'T FORGET, PackBackers: There will be a pep rally Friday; don't be late. Watch the bulletin board in the Trophy Room for Abilene departure times. Remember to bring a sack lunch if you are going to Abilene. We will NOT stop! And remember, too, PRIDE makes a difference!

Duncan Fraser, we hope you get well quick and lead us to more Bulldog victories.

Once again — Happy anniversary to the Midland Youth Center. And always remember, PRIDE makes the difference.

Your faithful chatterers,
 Becky, Amy, Angela, Tracy

P.S. — Good luck, Rebs, with Cooper, and have a great Homecoming!

Humidity level said
 vital for art works

CHICAGO (AP) — Humidity must be maintained at proper levels if valuable art works are to be protected from mold, staining and becoming brittle, says the Humidifier Institute.

A Rembrandt etching or a Toulouse-Lautree lithograph can be irreparably damaged if the humidity level — in homes or museums — is not maintained in a constant percentage range.

According to the institute, museum curators recommend that in the proper environment, for fine prints and paintings, the lowest relative humidity should be about 50 percent and the highest, about 65 percent.

"If the humidity descends below this level for a short period of time, the art work will survive," said a spokesman. "But if the humidity continues at 45 percent or lower, damage will result."

This is likely to lead to slackening of the canvas, embrittlement and framing warpage, it was pointed out.

On the other hand, if humidity higher than 65 percent is maintained, there is a danger of mold growth, weakening of the adhesives, staining of the paper, blurring of the ink, waviness of the paper and encouragement of fungi and bacteria.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE
Vicious Ace of Spades
 By Alfred Sheinwold

Sometimes I think the ace of spades is trying to make a monkey out of me," a reader complains. He submits today's hand as evidence.

East took three heart tricks and then looked for a way to get to his partner's hand for the rest of the hearts.

"I led a diamond to dummy's weakness," East reports. "But South took three diamonds and six clubs so fast it made my head swim. My partner then waved the ace of spades under my nose and said 'I'd have a better chance to guess right if I tossed a coin. How do experts guess in such situations?'"

NO GUESS

They don't guess. On the third round of hearts an expert West plays his lowest remaining heart. If his side entry is in the lower side suit (diamonds in this case). But if West's entry is in the higher side suit (spades), he plays his highest heart.

An expert West would play the ten of hearts at the third trick, and an expert East would return a spade so fast it would make your head swim.

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds. You are too strong for a raise to two spades but not strong enough for a jump to three spades—bid a side suit (even if you must "invent" one) and raise partner's suit at your next turn to show the in-between strength.

Soviets become all-out spenders

By NIKKI FINKE

MOSCOW (AP) — One of the most popular Western songs in the Soviet Union goes: “Money, money, money — it’s a rich man’s world.”

Though the lyrics are aimed at Westerners, they could easily apply to Soviet society as well. Here, too, a fat wallet and house full of appliances are signs of prestige.

Now a campaign is under way to urge Russians to stop spending too much.

“The press should help people learn to spend their money intelligently — not to indulge in mere consumerism, but to enrich their lives,” said the magazine Zhurnalist in a recent issue.

But despite the government’s best efforts, the average Soviet worker wants to use his wages to live in material, not spiritual, comfort. The problem is that often the things he wants to buy are not available.

“Why, when there is supposed to be a general increase in prosperity, can’t I buy a color television? They don’t supply enough of them to our stores. People experience the same difficulties in buying cars and certain other goods,” a metalworker complained to a Soviet journal.

“What does prosperity mean, and why do we consider that it is increasing, if there aren’t enough goods?”

Although Soviet salaries are substantially lower than Western wages, they are commensurate with the price of consumer goods here.

The average Soviet earns the equivalent of almost $3,000 annually, and his wages have been climbing about 3 percent or 4 percent a year. In addition, most households have two wage earners.

Add to this the fact that bread has not changed price since 1954, rents since 1928 and milk and meat since 1962.

The Soviet state keeps the price of staples down only by paying enormous subsidies to producers, about $46 billion a year.

Just within the last year there have been two official state price increases. These affected mostly luxury items but also the price of automobiles — a rise that hit consumers hard.

The car-price boost meant three or four more years of saving for many Soviet families, most of whom have already waited five years or more to purchase the popular Soviet-made Fiat sold here.

Soviet consumers are getting choosier with more money in their pockets — a trend that has officials fretting.

Through trial and error, many consumers find that the cheaper Soviet goods, while they may look good on store shelves, break down or rip open within a few weeks of normal use.

Newspaper articles abound with angry complaints about coffee grinders that don’t grind, vacuum cleaners that don’t vacuum.

Many Soviet families dream of owning a piano. But recently an economic journal reported that a Moscow store selling two different models for the same price — 675 rubles — still had stock in hand.

The reason was simple: one of the pianos was poorly made. The result was that “one was snapped up, and the other gathered dust.”

The magazine went on to report that out of total Soviet store inventories, some 15 percent of the merchandise is never bought.

Black and white televisions are cheaper, but everyone saves for color sets. Small refrigerators went down in cost, but everyone yearns for larger models. Synthetic fabrics were a bargain, but everyone prefers real cottons and wools.

So what are the Russians doing with their money? Saving it.

A Soviet weekly reported this month that in 1977 — the most recent statistics available — Soviet people had 120 million savings accounts with an average balance of 972 rubles (about $1,500) — or half a year’s salary.

Explained one angry reader to an industry gazette: “Not even sewing machines or refrigerators are for sale in our town. That’s probably why we see no advertisements for appliances. The only ad we see is: ‘Keep your money in the savings bank.’”

And it seems that Soviet experts think it’s just as well, while urging consumers to resist a “keep up with the Joneses” mentality.

“As our standard of living rises, we acquire new notions of what is prestigious,” complained a teacher in the education newspaper, Uchitelskaya Gazeta.

“There is prestige in opening up a fat wallet in front of your friends at the cafe, or laying out 200 rubles for brand-name jeans. There is prestige in knowing the price of any imported rag but not knowing what a loaf of bread costs.”

And a sociologist told the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda that the “corrupting influence” is not prosperity, but the prosperous.

“Let’s not be hypocritical,” he said.

“It is the natural desire of every person to earn more money and live better. Money in itself is neither good nor evil. The question is what it represents to the person who possesses it.”

Midland stations win five awards

Three Midland radio stations received five awards Tuesday during the Texas Association of Broadcasters annual luncheon held in Austin.

KCRS won the best local newscast award and second place in the educational category.

Its sister station, KWMJ-FM, won the best local commercial award.

KNFM received a first place for the best local commercial in the humorist category and best local station promotional announcement.

The radio stations competed with other stations in their population category with the Midland stations being in the 60,000-100,000 division. The education award was an open classification.

Jessica Savitch is the name

NEW YORK (AP) — One name you're likely to hear in any discussion on the future of NBC's "Nightly News" is that of Jessica Savitch.

"I try very hard not to think about it," says Ms. Savitch, a most likely prospect to become the first woman since Barbara Walters to anchor a network's evening news program on a regular basis. "The only time I do is when I'm asked, and I'm asked a great deal.

"I would probably welcome the challenge and the opportunity to do 'Nightly News,' and I have to say I'm flattered when I hear my name mentioned that way.

"But I'm only 31 years old, and there are a lot of things I'd like to do and learn."

Barbara Walters spent 12 years with NBC News before she was hired by ABC in the fall of 1976 to co-anchor that network's evening news with Harry Reasoner. Ms. Savitch has, however, covered a good deal of ground since joining NBC News in Washington barely two years ago.

She currently is principal reporter and anchor for weekend editions of "Nightly News," as well as "NBC News Update," reports on weekends, has substituted for Tom Brokaw and Jane Pauley on NBC's "Today" program, and recently sat in for Tom Snyder as host of the network's "Tomorrow" interview show.

Pottery workshop scheduled

Reservations are now being accepted for a two-day pottery workshop scheduled Oct. 27 and 28 at Midland College.

Conducting the workshop will be internationally known potter David Leach of Britain.

Leach is the son of the late Bernard Leach, who is credited as the leader of modern pottery techniques in the Western world. The younger Leach was born in Japan where his parents were living while his father was studying pottery techniques there. In 1930, young Leach started as an apprentice at Leach Pottery in St. Ives, Cornwall, England. He now has his own pottery works at Lowerdown, in Devon. He has had major exhibitions of his innovative work throughout Britain and in the United States, Japan, Australia and the Netherlands.

At 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 26, Leach will present a photo slide show and lecture in the Allison Fine Arts Building at MC. The event will open without charge to the public.

Workshop sessions are scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 27, and Sunday, Oct. 28. Enrollment is limited to 50 persons, with registration on a first come, first served basis. Fee for the workshop is $30 per person. The Oct. 27 workshop will begin at 9 a.m. and the Oct. 28 session at 10 a.m.

Deadline for enrolling in the workshop is this Friday. Checks for registration fees should be made payable to Mid-

Is there life after 'Gilligan's Island'?

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Is there life after "Dobie Gillis" and "Gilligan's Island"? Indeed there is, says Bob Denver, though it may be something of a gypsy existence these days.

Denver, 44, earned a bit of fame in the 1950s and 1960s, first as Dobie Gillis' beatnik sidekick, Maynard G. Krebs, and later as the title character in "Gilligan's Island," the continuing saga of a group of people shipwrecked on a desert island.

Maynard G. Krebs would be proud of Denver's approach to his latest calling: Instead of running back and forth between home and stage, Denver, 44, and wife, Dreama, 29, live on the road. Out of a suitcase. All the time.

They've been married about two years, and have been traveling the dinner theater circuit since the wedding.

"Our marriage is getting better and better," says Denver, who is appearing through Oct. 28 at the Derby Dinner Playhouse in Clarksville, Ind., across the Ohio River from Louisville.

He and his wife are featured in a production of "The Star-Spangled Girl," a play by Neil Simon detailing what happens when an all-American girl moves in next door to two fellows trying to publish a "protest" magazine.

Arts and crafts exhibition opens at MC

The annual Fall Regional Art and Crafts Exhibition sponsored by Midland Arts Association has opened in the McCormick Gallery at Midland College, on view to the public daily through Nov. 2.

Visiting hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. each Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Fridays. The gallery will be open between 1 and 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. There is never a charge for admission.

More than 270 entries — including paintings in all media, sculpture, jewelry, pottery and ceramic art, graphics and drawings, and photography — were accepted for the show which annually attracts entries from artists from as far away as Hobbs, N.M., Plainview, Abilene and Marfa.

Adjudicating this year's show was Laurence D. Miller III, director of the Laguna Gloria Art Museum in Austin. Miller selected 22 works for cash awards and chose six works to receive honorable mention.

CASH AWARDS of $100 went to the following: Brian Hendershot of Midland for an untitled photo; Carla Alexander of Odessa for a watercolor, "Judicature"; Warren Taylor, Midland, for an acrylic, "Still Life With Snails"; Pam Price, Odessa, for an oil, "Cape Hunting Pups"; Robert Poindexter of Odessa for a pastel,

"Comp. XIV"; Carol Louise Barnes of Midland for an untitled pencil drawing; Terry Bumpass of Hobbs, N.M., for a ceramic, "Desert Drum," and Steve Luttrell of Midland for a sculpture, "Attraction." Cash awards of $50 each went to the following:

Pam Griffin of Midland for an oil, "Where Is the Figure?"; Sara Gilstrap, Midland, for a ceramic, "Dinner, Lunch and Toast"; Robert Poir, Midland, for an untitled sculpture; Marilyn Pritchett, Midland, for a basket, "Sundance Pot"; Dorothy Peterson, Midland, for a watercolor, "House at Escabosa"; Dale Hamlet of Portales, N.M., for a watercolor, "October Valley";

Ruth Brady of Hobbs, N.M., for a watercolor, "North of Abiquiu"; Katie Walne, Midland, for an oil, "Greenhouse View."

Also, David Richardson of Lubbock for a photograph, "Girl in Blue Square"; Joan Coulter of Hobbs, N.M., for an acrylic, "Vigil As Death Stalks"; Delmos Hickmott of Odessa for an untitled drawing; Thom Luce of Midland for a photograph, "Once I Built A Railroad"; Candace Burnside of Plainview for an oil, "River Children"; Leslie D'Allesandro of Midland for a graphic, "Landscape."

SIX HONORABLE mention awards were given, as follows: Doris Spires of Midland for an oil, "The Last Snow"; Jean Posey of Midland for a fiber work, "Water's Edge"; Susan Randle of Midland for a graphic, "Astral Flight"; Prudie Leirbrock of Midland for a watercolor, "Reverie"; Karen Beal of Midland for an oil, "Ava," and Margaret Marcum of Midland for a watercolor, "Santa Fe Souvenir."

After adjudicating this year's show, Miller paid tribute to the Midland Arts Association and its members, saying "it is because they believe in the importance of artists and their work to our daily lives that exhibitions like this one are made possible."

"There is work in this exhibition that would hold its own" anywhere in the United States — it's good work and I encourage viewers to carefully look at the entire exhibition, then form their own judgements about individual works.

"There is work in this exhibition that has not yet matured, missed the mark or lacks technique. But, for the viewer, that's not bad because the exhibition then becomes a didactic experience — an opportunity for learning.

Buck Rogers too much like Riddler

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Gorshin spent a couple seasons in the mid-1960's as The Riddler on TV's "Batman," and he's back to night to conclude a two-week guest run in another series drawn from the comics — "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" on NBC.

There is, in Gorshin's mind, a connection.

"My first inclination when they suggested 'Buck Rogers' was negative," says Gorshin, perhaps best known as a master-impressionist.

"The part was too much like Riddler.

"It was a comic book character, as Riddler was. He was a villain, as Riddler was. He was in outer space, as Riddler was not.

"Then I thought, what the heck, I got a big boost from 'Batman,' so why not do 'Buck Rogers?'"

Indeed, Gorshin is convinced taking the role in "Batman" was a big step forward in his career.

"I could feel the impact almost overnight," he recalls. Gorshin says he was recognized on the street, and soon became a headliner in nightclubs in Las Vegas and around the country.

"Since then, I haven't done that much acting," he says, "though I'd like to do more."

In "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century," NBC's new space adventure series starring Gil Gerard, Gorshin plays Kellogg, an evil character who runs a so-called Legion of Death. "He fancies himself as a genius," Gorshin says, "a man who is capable of doing things others can't."

"He disintegrates in the second episode," the actor says. "I asked Bruce Landsbury, the producer, 'I don't suppose this character will ever reappear?' He said, 'Oh, sure, anything can happen.'"

Art exhibit featuring sea shells at Texas Tech

LUBBOCK — "Inner Dimensions of the Sea Shell," an exhibit on view through Nov. 11 at The Museum of Texas Tech University, is an unusual display of 50 pairs of photographs which practically turns sea shells inside out.

A color photo of an actual shell is juxtaposed to an X-ray photo of the same shell. Shells which are usually admired for the beauty of their exterior surfaces are shown to have exquisite interior structures with architectural and topological subtlety.

Radiologist William A. Conklin has combined professional training along with his hobby of shell collecting and his photographer's eye in this unusual collection.

Conklin's photographic work has been displayed at the Smithsonian Institution and at other museums and galleries. The exhibition at the Tech Museum is a traveling show being circulated to museums by the Association of Science-Technology Centers. In Lubbock, the display is sponsored by the West Texas Museum Association.

The Tech Museum's exhibits are always free. Visiting hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each Monday through Friday, and 1 to 4:30 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays.
