Marketing Co-op Will Include Alfalfa Barn

A new incentive to members of the Muleshoe Truck Growers Association was created at a meeting here Friday night when it was suggested that a barn for storage of alfalfa be constructed and operated as a part of the co-operative.

The suggestion met with the unanimous approval of those who attended the meeting. It was explained that the alfalfa barn could be operated at no additional cost through the expediency of having one manager for both the barn and the sweet potato house.

S. E. Goucher, a member of the board of directors, said Saturday that while only a small number of farmers attended Friday night's meeting, sufficient interest was shown to warrant further steps toward permanent organization of the co-operative.

Goucher said that about 15 farmers were really interested in the venture and that these 15 had promised to contact other farmers within the next few days in an attempt to increase the number of interested farmers to at least 25. These members will report their progress at a meeting of the board of directors at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Muleshoe business men and the Farm Security Administration are eager to cooperate in financing the co-operative, but must have the assurance that enough farmers are interested to guarantee the plan's success, Goucher said. The co-operative has been incorporated and the charter and by-laws were read and approved at Friday night's meeting. Funds are available for purchase of the land needed for the buildings. A three-acre site just north of Muleshoe has been selected and will be surveyed soon, preparatory to purchase by the co-operative.

J. C. Smith, county administrative assistant of the AAA, is preparing questionnaires which will be sent to farmers of this area as a means of determining to what extent truck crops will be planted this season.

Directors of the co-operative say that time is the most important thing now toward permanent organization and urge all interested parties—farmers and business men—to get busy at once and devote their efforts toward helping set the co-operative plan in motion.

O. E. S. To Hold '42' Tournament

At the regular meeting of the O. E. S., held March 3, it was decided to hold a "42" tournament, to begin on Friday, March 13. The tournament will continue for three consecutive Fridays, March 13, 20 and 27, and will be held at the High School Gym. Everyone is invited to attend. Members will start promptly at 8:30 P. M. There will be a small admission fee the proceeds to go for a worthy cause.

On Tuesday, March 24, the local chapter will entertain with a memorial service. Invitations have been sent to six neighboring Chapters. Members of the Muleshoe Masonic Lodge are also invited to attend this service. Attention is called to the O. E. S. school of instruction which will be held in Plainview on April 6.

RED CROSS NEWS

Thirteen Red Cross members were present last Wednesday and nine on Thursday at the sewing rooms. Many garments have been finished and turned in and a report will be made on these soon. More material has arrived and there are plenty of garments to be made. Everyone who can sew or knit is invited to be present on sewing days.

Engineering Aids County Farmers

Contour lines, terrace lines, irrigation ditches and other general agricultural engineering problems have been foremost in County Agent S. T. Logan's program during February. Altogether 18 farmers were aided directly in this work on a total of 3,170 acres of cultivated land, and five county owned farm levels have been kept busy by farmers having already learned how to do their own engineering work.

Recent snows have given adequate moisture to start farm plowing, so all hands and the cook will be required to meet this engineering demand the next few months.

County One Of Leaders In Use Superphosphate

Bailey county ranks well up toward the top in Texas in the amount of superphosphate used for alfalfa on irrigated farms, according to figures released recently by J. C. Smith, county administrative officer of the ACA.

According to Smith, the AAA has delivered two cars of 20 percent superphosphate (160,000 lbs.) in Bailey county under the Conservation Services and Materials Program of the 1942 Agricultural Conservation Act. The superphosphate was furnished by A. Shreveport, La. fertilizer works.

Since the shipment of the first two cars, however, demand for the superphosphate has been so great that an additional car of 100,000 pounds has been offered. Arrival of this car will make a total of 260,000 pounds of the material unloaded for use in Bailey county.

The superphosphate was shipped on consignment at a cost to the user of $1.05 a hundred, or $21 a ton. The producer received the material without any initial cash outlay, the price of the superphosphate being deducted from his 1942 conservation payment. It is recommended that 240 pounds of the superphosphate be applied under the 1942 program, making a net cost of 87 cents an acre to fertilizer.

Producers have either received or requested enough superphosphate to fertilize 1,100 acres of alfalfa. It is estimated that this figure represents about 90 percent coverage of all alfalfa in the county. The 260,000 pounds received here will be applied to 67 farms.

Producers who have used superphosphate in the past report that the material will double yields in a majority of the cases in this area.

P.-T. A Elects New Officers

At the monthly meeting of the P. T. A. last Monday, the following officers were elected for the next year: Mrs. Ray Griffiths, President; Mr. P. C. Windsor, vice president; Mrs. Ed Johnson, secretary; Mrs. Maude Young, treasurer.

After the business session, Jimmie Alman's tap dancing students, from Muleshoe, Farwell and Clovis, gave a 45-minute program which was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

A card from Elmer Witterding this week states that he is now a member of an ordnance battalion and is at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland for training. Elmer states that he is getting along fine, but adds "Boy, they really believe in giving it to you in a hurry here!" Stay right in there, Elmer!

New Hospital and Clinic, $24,000 Firm, Completed; Opens This Week

The Green Hospital and Clinic, constructed and equipped at a cost of $24,000, opened its doors for business this week as one of Muleshoe's most imposing concerns. Located on Highway 214, six blocks south of the heart of the business district, the new hospital and clinic is of brick and the construction and houses an impressive array of the most modern equipment and furnishings.

In addition to Dr. L. T. Green, Jr., others on the staff are Dr. D. D. Lancaster, V. H. Glisson, business manager; Mrs. Allen, R. N., day supervisor; and Miss Stanley, R. N., night supervisor. Dr. Green has established his office at the building, while Dr. Lancaster will maintain his office downtown.

The hospital opened with eight beds available, but the capacity can be increased to 15 beds if necessary, Dr. Green said.

The front section of the hospital is 74 by 32 feet. It includes the lobby, office, examining room, laboratory room, X-ray room, laboratory and Dr. Green's living quarters. A projection, 48 feet in length, includes the nursery, kitchen, nurses' quarters and patients' rooms.

The equipment, all of which had not been installed Monday, includes practically every item essential to the successful operation of a modern hospital. The furnishings are of a well known make and include adjustable beds.

The building is heated by floor furnaces and each patient's room is equipped for individual control of temperatures. The lighting system is direct.

A pleasing color scheme is carried out with the walls in cream color and all furnishings in blond maple. The floor is asrock tile with a dark brown border.

Dr. Green said plans would be made soon for landscaping of the grounds and completion of drive-ways, including the one leading to the ambulance entrance on the north side of the building. Use of the hospital is open to any ethical medical doctor, which means the maintenance of an open staff at all times, Dr. Green explained.

Construction of the building began last November. Higginbotham-Bartlett Lumber Co., of which Clarence Goins is local manager, held the construction contract.

Mrs. Presley Dies At Fort Worth

Word was received here this week of the death of Mrs. Levi Presley, former resident of Muleshoe. Mrs. Presley died of pneumonia at her home in Fort Worth, February 25.

Mr. and Mrs. Presley had many friends in Muleshoe and they are well remembered here by the older residents of the community. Mr. Presley was county attorney of Bailey county for several years, and was editor of Muleshoe's first newspaper—The Bailey County Bugle. The Presleys left here in the fall of 1928, moving to Fort Worth, where they have since resided.

Public Sales Keep W. D. Wanzor, Auctioneer, Busy

W. D. Wanzor, local auctioneer, has been one of the busiest men in these parts the past few weeks. Wanzor has averaged a public sale a week since the first of the year, and in his own words, "they've all been good ones."

Recent sales held by Wanzor include the one at the C. E. Grant place in the southwest corner of the county Monday, and one at the Bewley place in the Lazbuddie community Tuesday.

At the Bewley sale, Wanzor said one sow and seven pigs were sold for $101. A cow and a calf brought $90.

In addition to the public sales he holds each week, Wanzor is official auctioneer for the Muleshoe Livestock Auction sale held every Thursday. E. J. Killough is manager of this sale, and M. A. Gibson is clerk.

Wanzor has been crying sales the past 16 years. He came here from Oklahoma in August, 1940, and is considered one of the best auctioneers in this area. He has a son 21 years old, who has been crying sales the past four years.

Farmers' Spring Offensive Is Underway

Agriculture's spring offensive is underway.

All over Texas farmers are planting the crops which will supply America with the record supply of food needed to win the war. America's armed forces, workmen, and people as a whole, as well as her Allies, will need vast amounts of food if they are to carry on to victory.

Calling attention to the launching of this spring offensive, the farmers of Texas will observe Plant for Victory Week, March 1-7, as proclaimed by the Texas USDA War Board.

"This form of offensive is just as important as any military drive," B. F. Vance, chairman of the board, declared, "for without the food which agriculture will produce this year, our armed forces will be slowed down, our producers of munitions will be slowed down, our people's morale will be lowered."

Recognizing the importance of agriculture's part in the war effort and the contribution the national farm program is making to the success of that effort, President Roosevelt, Vice President Wallace and Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard will address the farmers of the nation on a nation-wide broadcast 8:30 p. m. to 9 p. m., Monday, March 9, Vance announced.

Throughout the state county USDA War Boards are sponsoring meetings of farmers to listen to the broadcast and to discuss local problems affecting agriculture's war program.

During Plant for Victory Week, county USDA War Boards will make special efforts to get scrap iron off the farms and into the factories and to encourage the repair of farm machinery so that it will be in good shape for the production job ahead. At the same time they will re-emphasize the importance of meeting all production goals.

S. C. Beavers is ill at his home here. Although his condition was reported improved Wednesday, he will not be able to be out for several days yet.

Snowfall Brings 1.15 Inches Of Moisture To Area

Winter closed in on this section last Saturday in a way to remind us of the old days. Friday night, rain from the east turned to snow before morning, and the ground was well covered by nine o'clock. However, this had melted considerably by mid-afternoon, when the wind shifted to the north and by Saturday night snow was falling so that it was impossible to see more than a few feet. Sunday morning came with a six inch covering of wet snow.

The government weather station here reported a total of 1.15 inches of moisture, which was welcomed by farmers and ranchmen. Although there was an excellent sub-moisture, the ground was beginning to harden on top. Farm operations will get under way in real earnest as soon as the ground is dry enough.

Two Deadlines Yet On Cotton Crop Insurance

Two deadlines up and two to go is the status of cotton crop insurance in Texas, Donald L. Cothran, state cotton crop insurance supervisor, said this week.

Remaining deadlines in the state are March 16 and March 31.

Federal cotton crop insurance protects farmers against all unavoidable hazards such as drought, hail, wind, rain, boll weevils, and other insects. It does not protect growers from losses due to defective or poor seed or bad farming practices, damage to quality, loss by theft, or failure to irrigate when insurance is written on irrigated basis, Cothran explained.

Either 50 or 75 percent of the normal production may be insured, he said, with Federal Crop Insurance Corporation making up the difference in what the crop is insured for and the actual production.

"The important thing about cotton crop insurance is that each farm will carry its own risk. If previous losses have been avoidable, premiums will be high. If they've been low, premiums will be low. There is no overlapping of crop failures," he explained.

Premiums may be paid in cash or cash equivalent on or before maturity date or may be deducted from loss payments, if any are made, cotton loans, if available, or from AAA payments.

"People don't carry tornado, life, health, liability and accident insurance just once in a while and hope to collect the year they happen to have it. They take it for protection, and that's the same principle with cotton crop insurance—protection every year, not just now and then," Cothran said.

Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Ray returned from a two weeks visit in Houston last week, accompanied by Mrs. Ray's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Hunt, who will be guests in the Ray and Wagon homes for a few days.

Mrs. Clinton Bristow left Sunday for Abilene, where she will visit her mother, Mrs. Josie King, for two weeks.

THE 1918 METHOD

During a recent "down-town discussion" on the radical labor element in the United States and its policy of striking for this or that every day, one good citizen dismissed the "arguers" with this question: "Just what do you think the administration can do about it, short of using Hitler methods?"

In answer, we say that the Woodrow Wilson method of 1918 did very well, and there was little, if any, complaint as to such a system being the act of a dictator.

To striking machinists of a Bridgeport, Conn. arms plant, Mr. Wilson stated facts and remedy in a few words. The machinists struck because they did not like the decision of the War Labor Board, a board noted for its liberal dealings with labor.

"To strike against the award (of the Labor Board) is disloyalty and dishonor. The Smith & Wesson Co. of Springfield, Mass., engaged in government work, has refused to accept the mediation of the National War Labor Board and has flouted its rules of decision approved by presidential proclamation.

Having exercised a drastic remedy with recalcitrant employers, it is my duty to use means equally well adapted to lawless and faithless employments. Therefore, I desire that you return to work and abide by the award. If you refuse, each of you will be barred from employment in any war industry for a period of one year. . . . Furthermore, Draft Boards will be informed of your refusal.

LOOKING BACKWARD

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO (From files of March 4, 1927)

While playing Friday evening, Mack Lee ran a four-foot stick, somewhat larger in diameter than a pencil, through his lower lip and on up between the upper lip and teeth.

Leta Mae, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Evans, died Thursday evening at 9 o'clock in the Plainview Sanitarium following an attack of appendicitis.

On Sunday morning at 8 o'clock, the derrick of the Humble northwest of Muleshoe, caught fire and was burned to the ground. The giant steel derrick crumpled under the terrific heat of what is rumored to have been a pocket of natural gas encountered somewhere between 1,200 and 2,000 feet, igniting from a large heater in the derrick room.

J. C. Buchanan, bookkeeper at the E. R. Hart Lumber Co., took sick Saturday and was rushed to Clovis, where he was operated on for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Phipps of the Baileyboro community announce the birth of a baby girl.

TEN YEARS AGO (From files of March 3, 1932) Mr. and Mrs. Ira Robinson well known citizens of Muleshoe, have taken charge of the local Ritx Theatre and for the present will run two shows weekly.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Disch of Lazubdie announce the birth of a daughter, Carolyn Grace.

Funeral services were held for James Edward Brunk, 62 years old, who died Feb. 26 at his home nine miles northwest of Clovis, N. M. He was a former resident of Bailey county, having lived near the present site of Muleshoe for nine years before moving to New Mexico in 1918.

Mrs. R. L. Wallace of Muskogee, Okla., arrived Sunday to spend some time visiting in the home of her brother-in-law, J. F. Wallace and family.

Arthur R. Husted and Miss Minnie Dorsett both of the Progress community, were married Saturday afternoon by Justice of the Peace J. F. Vaughan.

A baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. George B. Baker Thursday of last week. How would you define a modern bride anyway? A modern bride is a featherless biped, who is willing to begin housekeeping with one skillet, one can opener, one kettle and at least two bridge tables.

As Lise followed Corinne into the house to change into a bathing suit she wondered how far she could trust her—how much Corinne really knew.

They paddled slowly up the shore of the lake. The nose of the boat slid into the sand. Dropping her blouse and slacks in the canoe and adjusting her rubber cap, Lise stepped out into the shallow water followed by Corinne. Walking out to her knees, Lise made a long, shallow dive and swam away, revelling in the refreshing coolness of the water.

"Don't go so far, Lise!" called Corinne. "Stay here with me! I'm afraid to go out there!" Lise turned back. "Great, isn't it, after this heat?" said Corinne, stretching on the sand. "Wish we'd brought our lunch!"

But the thoughts of the girl were of the rock she had stepped on at the edge of the beach. Had Finlay returned and left a note for her? And how was she to get it?

Lise waded out and plunged in again. Swimming in a wide circle she left the water opposite the quartz rock at the edge of the beach and casually walked past it. Her heart suddenly picked up its beat. The corner of an oilskin wrapper was visible. The letter was there!

She rejoined Corinne who said: "You know, this morning I asked Jules if he was going to bring charges against Finlay for murder when he went south. Do you know what he said?" "I can't guess."

"He said it wouldn't be necessary." "Meaning?" "Why, that Finlay would disappear, I suppose. Lise, I'm afraid to stay here. I'm going to make Felix Blondell take me back with him. I want to get out of this and you should, too!"

Lise sat up. Her dark face was suddenly taut and desperate. "You remember what Jules told me about Felix Blondell?" "Yes, it was rotten! And I think he meant it. He's as hard as stone. When Blondell comes, you sleep with a pistol under the pillow!" "I will and I'll use it!"

"I believe you would. He's vile when he's drunk and you know how they'll drink. He's due to get here." Lise was planning how to see the note unobserved. At last she had an idea. She rose, took her blouse and slacks from the canoe and releasing the neck band of her bathing suit, she slipped on her hips.

"What are you doing?" demanded Corinne. "My swim suit's not dry. I'm going to spread it out on that hot rock." Lise slipped the suit to her knees, stepped out, got into her slacks and put on the blouse. She took the suit to the rock and spread it to dry. When Corinne rose, turning her back, and went to the canoe, Lise reached under the rock and hid the wrapped note inside her blouse, which was tucked into her slacks.

On the way back to the post Lise could feel the wrapped note inside her blouse with every stroke of her paddle. It comforted her. Hurrying to her room, she opened it and read:

"Dearest Girl: "We're back but they've been hunting us so hard that we haven't been to daylight. At least twenty canoes have been combing the shores looking for us. We move only at night. I can't write what I want to say. This note might be found. I can't tell you where I am or meet you now. Next week look for instructions. Pack your things with clothes and wait for the word. Courage! All will come out if you are brave and I know you are. I'm still living those last moments on your beach. I love you, Lise Demaris! If Blondell comes, tell me to hear from me, sleep with and always carry your gun. Try to be patient and wait for my message. It will be soon. Courage, brave heart! I love you!"

"Garry." She threw herself on her bed and cried for sheer joy. He hadn't forgotten! He loved her.

CHAPTER XVII The yellow orange of a moon that hung above the indigo ridges beyond Waswanipi was full. The moment had arrived. Wabistan had learned that the medicine-lodge was to stand in front of the great Medicine-Stone in a clearing on a certain island. It was one of the many places where the old sorcerers had invoked the spirits. Here, early in the summer Kinebik had conjured up the sepulchral voices that had warned the awoke Montagnais that the strangers' "Eye with Three Legs" had sickened the children. Behind the medicine-lodge and surrounding the clearing Wabistan said there was a thick stand of spruce and hardwood.

"He set his tent close to de scrub," Blaise explained, "so he go in and out and dey not see him." "You say the mob will all be in front but not near the tent?" asked Red, as they ate their supper in their hidden camp.

"All in front but he will not let dem come near," said Blaise. "De spirit is shy and will not talk if Montagnais are close," he added with a grimace.

"And the Indians leave their canoes at the clearing?" "Ah-hah." "So we land on the opposite side of the island, behind the tent?" "Yes."

"Then Garry and I wait at the edge of the clearing to back you and Wabistan up when the trouble starts?" "You are in de bush by Jack pipe. It will be black dere. Dey will not see you but you see and hear dem."

"The moon will be shining right into that clearing. They'll see the faces of Wabistan and his friends. That will start trouble." "Ah-hah! Dere will be moch trouble, but Wabistan has friends."

"So there's just a small chance we see the sun rise?" laughed Red. Blaise nodded gravely. "Small chance, ah-hah!"

"Red," said Finlay. "His whole show is going to depend on the breaks we get. Blaise thinks it can be done. I'm not so sure, but it's worth trying. If it doesn't work, we're in a trap. We'll never get off that island. But unless something happens pretty quick we can't last much longer on this lake, anyway."

"You're right, chief," admitted Red. "So far we've managed to dodge them—played in fools' luck!" went on Finlay. "But luck changes. If Blaise does win, we may be able to hang on until that plane shows up. Then we'll crawl into those old red blouses, take a long chance and hop on Isadore for a show-down."

"It Blaise is wrong, God help us! But what a dog-fight it'll be here in the moonlight!" "It's one of the boldest and cleverest ideas I've ever heard of," said Garry. "We may have trouble justifying it at headquarters but we're committed now."

"I'll say it's an idea. But it may lose us our jobs, chief, and you close to promotion!" "Our jobs won't be important if they bury us, Red. Tonight three more may be snuffed out on the Chibougamau Trail." "We'll take plenty with us when we go, then!" snarled Malone, biting savagely at the sturgeon steak he lifted from his tin plate.

The Waswanipi wilderness dozed under the spell of the full August moon. One by one, dark shapes of canoes crossed a shimmering ribbon of moonlight border for the island of the Medicine-Stone.

Long since Wabistan and his son had left. Garry and Red stood on the shore, silent. Finlay was wondering if the plane from the south was anchored to the buoys in front of Isadore's—wondering if he would ever again look into Lise Demaris' dark eyes, when Blaise touched him on the shoulder.

"All right! We go!" "Remember, we don't use our guns unless we're trapped!" warned Finlay. The two moved nearer the clearing and stood in the velvet gloom of a thicket of young spruce.

"Must be fifty or sixty! Where's Wabistan?" "I don't see him, but he's there somewhere with his friends. He'll talk when the time comes!" Near the Medicine-Stone stood the conjurer's tent.

"There's the medicine-lodge!" muttered Red. "Small, isn't it!" "Red, I think I see Batoche—the bird with the hat pulled over his eyes!"

"The Isadore mob's all there, backing up Kinebik!" "We've got to close," whispered Garry. "If anything starts, we're in for far away."

Inch by inch the two worked nearer to the clearing drenched with light. "Look!" Red nudged the man beside him. "They're passing a bottle!" Suddenly, silence dropped like a blanket over the clearing. The faces of the Montagnais were turned to wards the tent and the canoe.

"Kinebik's in the tipi, Red! See it shake!" Shortly there rose the muffled beating of the conjurer's caribou-hide drum accompanied by a low singing. The shell-rattle joined in and the beat quickened. The listeners in the clearing strained forward where they sat. Louder crooned the voice of the shaman in a rhythmic chant. The sorcerer was a superb mimic. His voice ran the gamut of the voices of the night.

The voice again ceased, and the audience sat in awed wonder. Then from the tent drifted a musical sob. Creatures in torment shrieked their agony. Demons and fiends screeched and howled in a mad cacophony of horror. At last a voice rose through the oaves to a wisp of chill that the blow as it died, blew the moon-bathed forest.

A silence so tense that it vibrated in the ears like sound, followed. Then a sepulchral voice startled the cowed Montagnais. A spirit was speaking!

"Montagnais, I come from the spirit places at the call of my brother, Kinebik. I have traveled far from the land where the sun sleeps. My brother's heart is sick. The little children are bewitched by the Evil Eye of the white men and die. Drive these white strangers from Waswanipi or the women will walk in the tips of the Montagnais through the Long Snows!"

"The voice was all like the hum of bees low muttering moved through the motionless groves. Then a voice snarled: 'Kill the white men, the friends of Wabistan!'"

Red's fingers clamped on Finlay's arm. "That was Batoche!" Suddenly the painted walls of the medicine-lodge visibly shook and swayed. The conjurer was about to invoke another spirit voice. A low cough was cut off short and the skin tipi was again motionless.

"That was a voice so shrill, so penetrating that it tortured the ears, quavered over the clearing. It soared thinner and thinner. Then it descended to moan and roar like a darch drifter on the barrens, later to drop lower until it boomed with the sudden thunder of ice split by frost.

Then the voice cut high and clear through the silence. "Montagnais, I have heard the voice of Kinebik, the Wabeno, who speaks with the split tongue of the snake. It was no spirit who talked. The voice was his own. He is a false shaman who destroys the young men with the whiskey of Tete-Blanche."

There were startled murmurs of dissent. The voice went on. "The white men were sent by the Fathers at Ottawa. Isadore fears them for he has broken the law and given whiskey to the Montagnais. If the white men come, the red coats will come and the Montagnais will be punished. The children are no longer sick. There was no Evil Eye. It was the lie of Kinebik, Isadore's servant. Why does he not answer? He is here in the tipi. He is afraid and is silent for he knows he has lied. Even now Tete-Blanche is here with whiskey to destroy the young men!"

The clearing was in a chattering uproar. In the murk Finlay and Red waited the outcome with drawn guns. Old men shouted for silence as three figures moved among the excited youths talking rapidly. Then the voice of Wabistan, who stood surrounded by friends, broke through the bedlam.

"My people, the true spirit has spoken and has gone! Why has not Kinebik answered? Have his words choked in his throat? Follow me and we will learn!"

The old man strode boldly to the medicine-lodge. Crawling into it from the rear he re-appeared, dragging a limp shape. Wabistan rolled the body on its back. The moonlight shone full on the glazed eyes and the swollen face with protruding tongue of Kinebik.

"The chief turned to those who had caught courage to follow. "Look, Montagnais, the lies of Kinebik have choked him! The spirit has punished him for speaking with a split tongue!"

Two men pushed through the circle of gaping Indians and bent over the conjurer. One of them, with white hair and features knotted with rage, turned to the group and cried in Montagnais: "Montagnais, you are fools! Kinebik was strangled! It was the plot of the white men! They are here on the island! Hunt the men who killed Kinebik!"

"No!" shouted Wabistan. "It was the good spirit that choked the lies in Kinebik's throat!" Instantly a milling mass of Indians surrounded Kinebik's body. There were cries of, "Kill the white men!" answered by shouts: "It was the work of the spirit! Kinebik was a false shaman!"

In the gloom at the edge of the clearing two men with coked pistols listened. "Wabistan is safe!" said Finlay. "He doesn't need us now! Tete-Blanche will soon start to hunt us! We'd better meet Blaise where he can be!"

"They moved swiftly across the island but Blaise was not at the canoe land under the steep shore. Finlay was cold with apprehension. "What could have happened, Red? He should be here!" "He's in trouble," said Malone. "They'll follow the shore path soon, nosing for our canoe!" muttered Garry. "If they reach us, don't fire unless we're cornered. It will draw the rest and we've got to get Blaise. God bless his foxy old bones! It was magnificent! He snuffed that shaman out without a sound!"

"Listen! They're moving now! Along the shore! They're in trouble. Red, you're right. They will be able to follow while they're in trouble!"

"Brush snags!" "The boat's in the water!" "Directly behind!" "With raised!" "Blaise, I see!"

Blaise, "I see!"
