Palestinian team gives up hostage effort

By The Associated Press

A Palestinian delegation many regarded as the best hope for winning freedom for the U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran gave up its efforts today and left the Iranian capital, a Palestine Liberation Organization official announced in Kuwait.

Word of the PLO's apparent failure to end the 9-day-old impasse came as Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime and the Moslem militants holding the embassy and 98 hostages reaffirmed their determination to face down the United States in the tense confrontation.

Tehran Radio said the Iranian people, heeding the call of the student militants, began a five-day hunger strike today to press the Iranian demand for the extradition of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the United States.

The official radio, monitored in London, also reported that Khomeini's Revolutionary Council had met and discussed the possibility of U.S. military intervention or economic reprisals to end the embassy standoff.

One Council member, identified as Dr. Bahonar, said that if the United States, which exports large amounts of food to Iran, begins a trade blockade, the Iranians might strike back with an oil embargo, the radio report-

In another move, Iran's new foreign affairs chief, Abolhassan Bani Sadr, summoned all foreign ambassadors in Tehran for a meeting today and urged that their governments pressure the Carter administration to extradite the shah, an Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

PLO sources reported over the weekend that the three-man delegation sent by PLO leader Yasser Arafat was engaged in intense talks at the Foreign Ministry with Iranian officials and representatives of the stu-

But Salah Khalaf, No. 2 man in Arafat's Fatah guerrilla group, told reporters in Kuwait today that the delegation had left for Damascus,

He said the PLO envoys had told the Iranians that "despite the fact that we side with the Iranian revolution on any confrontation or battle, and despite our high regard for the Iranian revolution, we believe America cannot be fought through occupation of its embassy but rather through a serious and radical confrontation.'

Khalaf did not say how the Iranians responded to the PLO's efforts. He insisted that the Palestinians were not engaged in mediation. PLO officials had said previously that acting as an intermediary requires both sides' agreement and they were acting without U.S. sanction.

Carter to stop buying Iranian oil, sources say

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is ordering an end to direct purchases of oil from Iran in response to the takeover of the U.S. Embassy and the seizure of some 60 American hostages in Tehran, White House officials said

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said they expected the announcement to be made this afternoon.

Carter's decision followed top-level secret meetings earlier today and

The White House advised state and congressional leaders of the decision. Its impact on U.S. oil supplies was not immediately clear. However, following the Arab oil boycott of 1973-74, Western countries agreed on pooling arrangements in the event of future crises. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter, while declining to comment on any presidential decision, said: "There is a mechanism that has been established which we have made clear is in effect.'

In addition to the oil imported directly from Iran, the United States obtains Iranian oil by transshipment from refineries in other countries.

If all oil now supplied by Iran is cut off, the loss might amount to 7 percent to 8 percent of U.S. imports. That amounts to about 3.5 percent to 4 percent of the total U.S. oil comsumption.

The Energy Department estimates the total imports of Iranian oil at 700,000 barrels a day and another 200,000 to 300,000 barrels of heavy fuel oil refined in the Bahamas, Virgin Islands and elsewhere.

Earlier today, Carter met with key Cabinet members and other top advisers, but his spokesman said the meeting was not "prompted by any new developments in Iran."

in two days, as the stand-off between the United States and Iranian authorities over some 60 American hostages moved into its second week.

Powell told reporters that Carter met with members of his Cabinet for about an hour, beginning about 9:30 a.m. Then, members of the Special Coordinating Committee on Iran moved to the White House situation room for another one-hour meeting, without the president.

Powell said he could offer no details on the meetings.

Carter also had summoned key subordinates to a meeting on Sunday. Energy Secretary Charles Duncan was among the officials involved in all the meetings. His presence reflected Iran's important position as an oil supplier. However, a complete list of participants was not released.

Powell said he was unaware of any change in the president's plans to visit Philadelphia on Tuesday for a town meeting and Harrisburg, Pa., later in the day for a political dinner.

U.S. officials, meanwhile, said they could not forecast when the hostages will

"I have no prediction to offer you on the time of release," State Department spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters Sunday.

'Nor do I have any expectations on this at all, so far as tomorrow, the next day or whenever." While White House and State Department officials declined to say what was discussed at the top-level meeting Sunday, Duncan's presence indicated oil supplies were on the agenda. Patricia Bario, a deputy presidential press secretary, said the session involved "another assessment of the situation and what is possible that can be done."

Kissinger focuses remarks on prevention of takeovers

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger says after the crisis in Iran is over, the United States should come up with a plan to insure that it never happens again anywhere in the

"We must develop a policy to prevent this and convey to other countries they are not free to violate the diplomatic immunity of Americans and Americans cannot be picked up and held hostage with impunity,'

Kissinger said during a weekend visit to Texas. "At any moment there are tens of thousands of Americans around the world who are subject to blackmail of this nature," Kissinger said.

The former secretary of state said he did not know how long the crisis would last, but said the United States must not "let itself be blackmailed"

by militant Moslems holding U.S. hostages in Tehran. "If we once accept this position we will never be able to do what is right," he

"I would hate to think we are without recourse," said Kissinger, who was here to attend a fund-raiser Saturday for Sen. John Tower, R-Texas. However, Kissinger declined to say what he thinks President Carter ought to do about the present crisis.

"I believe that in a situation that is this sensitive, outsiders should not offer tactical advice. There is only one man who can handle this crisis, and that is the president of the United States," Kissinger said.

Residents of two states, Canada...

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) -Firefighters this morning reported they had contained a potentially disastrous fire aboard a chemical-loaded train that derailed over the weekend and forced the biggest peacetime evacuation in Canadian history. Authorities had urged 220,000 residents to flee a 60-square-mile area of this city in Toronto's western suburbs because of the spreading smoke and sickening fumes. Police said they believed most complied. The greatest threat was from an upended car filled with 90 tons of liquid chlorine that lay only a few feet from some of the eight burning cars of propane gas. But by late this morning fire officials said the nearby cars had been coated with ice, though some flames still licked from cracks. Poisonous chlorine was leaking slowly and vaporizing, but Ontario Environment Ministry official Maris Lusis said the amount would have to be 100 times greater to pose a serious health threat. The remaining fires at the site were contained, said city Fire Chief Gordon Bentley.

"It's a very, very lazy dormant flame," he said. "We are completely happy with the situation as we see it at the present time."

But it was not known when the evacuated residents might be able to return to their homes, and chemical experts said the fires could continue until Tuesday.

No deaths or injuries were reported in this city 10 miles west of Toronto, but police, firemen and evacuees complained of nausea, headaches and watery eyes from the fumes, which spread more than six miles from the site of the fire. There were no reports of damage to nearby buildings.

The evacuation began early Sunday. It was expanded during the day as the fumes and smoke from the burning cars were carried by the wind. Late Sunday night 3,000 residents of Oakville, 10 miles to the south, were urged to evacuate. Dennis Amyot, regional director for Emergency Planning Canada, said it was the biggest peacetime evacuation in the country's history.

Most of the evacuees took refuge with relatives in the Toronto area. Schools, shopping centers and the International Center near the Toronto airport were opened for those with no place to go. Five federal agencies and the Red Cross helped care for them, supplying sleeping bags, blankets, warm meals and transportation and gas masks for the hundreds fighting the fire. "We always hear of it happening

down in the States or somewhere else but not in your own backyard," said Reg Dickie, a courier driver who left his home half a mile from the accident scene. "We left in such a hurry that our supper was still on the table," said Al Levian, a warehouse owner. About 1,000 patients from local hospitals and nursing homes were among those evacuated. The seriously ill were transferred to Toronto hospitals and others were moved to private

...flee as toxic chemical fumes...

HOLLAND, Mich. (AP) - Nearly 1,000 families were evacuated early today after a railroad tank car carrying highly toxic hydrogen fluoride derailed near a mobile home park and overturned, police said.

"The tanker is lying on its top, so the turret is buried. At this point we don't know if it's leaking or not." Ottowa County Sheriff Robert Dykstra said early today. "Our main concern will be when the car is righted. If it's leaking, and we get strong winds, we'll be in trouble.

Dykstra said it was not known what caused the derailment just after midnight of four cars of the Chesapeake and Ohio train.

He said evacuated families were being housed at the Holland Civic Center and were not expected to return to their homes until noon.

The Du Pont Chemical Co. tank car, which overturned about a half mile northeast of this western Michigan city, was enroute to a Du Pont plant in Montague, said Ray Conageski, senior superintendent of production at the facility.

Conageski said hydrogen fluoride, which is highly toxic and corrosive, is used in the aluminum industry and for synthesis of organic chemicals. The chemical can cause cellular poisoning and respiratory problems and can be fatal, Dykstra said.

No injuries were reported, but several deputies complained of irritation while they evacuated the area.

"When it went over, a release valve popped open and we had a small burst of gas," said Glenn Timmer, Ottawa County emergency services director.

"You can almost taste it," said Deputy Brad Grayson. "I've been evacuating people for the last hour and I've been experiencing a burning sensation in my throat.'

Sheriff's department officials had to move from their original command post directly downwind of the derailment, he said. The area was sealed off. Chemical specialists from Du Pont were on their way from Illinois to the site, the sheriff said. An 81-year-old woman who complained of headaches was taken to a hospital, according to Deputy Gene Koopman, director of the Red Cross effort at the Civic Center. "There were a lot of senior citizens in the trailer park," he said, and "we have a large number of people on prescription medication." He said deputies escorted a bus back to the area so officials could get the needed medi-

...escape multiple train derailments

MOLINO, Fla. (AP) - Disaster officials and Army demolition experts today were trying to decide whether to blow up six burning cars from a derailed train, a move one official said could form a fireball three-quarters of a mile wide. Army experts flew over the sparsely populated area to determine whether debris from a man-made explosion would endanger buildings or other property.

The experts met with disaster officials today to decide what to do about the burning propane-filled cars, which one civil defense official called a "potential time bomb."

Officials said the idea behind blowing up the cars would be to end the uncertainty. Charles Castner, a spokesman for the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, said if explosives were used more people would have to be moved from their homes.

Castner said a man-made explosion might produce a fireball three-quarters of a mile wide in this sparsely populated community near the Alabama state line.

No injuries were reported early Sunday when two L&N locomotives and 29 cars spilled off the tracks near when it hit a section of track washed out by heavy rains. Twenty-two other cars were endangered by the burning tankers, but Castner said those cars were moved Sunday night, isolating the burning cars.

Disaster officials said they were thinking about waiting for the tankers to burn out in a few days, blasting the propane free with explosives set under the tanks or using a Department of Defense air strike to destroy all the cars at once.

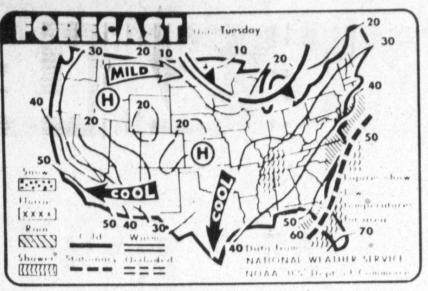

"It's not hurting anything - the woods are wet," said Assistant Fire Chief Ike Terry as a cold drizzle fell Sunday night.

We are sitting on a potential time bomb," said Escambia County civil defense director Buck Renfroe, announcing the evacuation of 70 families within twohmiles of the wreckage. "It can go off at any minute, and it can cause skyrocketing explosions at any

The southbound train reportedly derailed when it hit a washed-out section of track that cuts through a tree farm.

Nine of the derailed cars contained hazardous materials, including six filled with propane gas, authorities said.

4 dead

house fire

in boarding

By LINDA WEINSTEIN

PIONEER, Ohio (AP) - Sprinklers

could have saved the lives of 14 women killed in a fire that roared through a home for the aging and retarded, says the mayor of this Ohio town. But the owner, who died trying to save a boarder, apparently couldn't afford one, he says — and it wasn't required.

"They'll probably be crucified, the ones that are left," Mayor Bruce Kidston said of the family of boarding home owner Gladis Coats. "Gladis paid her bill this morning.

Twenty-eight people, ranging in age from 27 to 70, were living in the home when fire, perhaps started by a small boy, broke out early Sunday. Those who escaped were not injured, but more than a dozen died.

"Some of them were found in their chairs, some in their beds. Apparently, they were taken by surprise," said David Norris, Mrs. Coats' son-in-law and police chief for this northwestern Ohio town of about 950 people.

As townspeople and relatives took survivors into their homes, Kidston, a waterworks contractor, said a sprinkler system "would have saved lives, everything." He said he presumed the Coats' "couldn't afford the $30,000 to $50,000 cost of a sprinkler system.'

"My mother-in-law got rock bottom money," Carol Coats said. "She wouldn't ask for more money.

The home, called Coats Nursing Home, became a boarding house after state laws were changed in the mid-1970s to require sprinkler systems in nursing homes, said Dr. John J Ackerman

Veterans Day 'overshadowed'

By PEGGY ANDERSEN Associated Press Writer

Americans gathered as usual on the 11th day of the 11th month to honor the nation's combat veterans, but traditional activities were overshadowed by recent events in Iran. The bitterness of many Vietnam veterans, underscored by a recent poll showing more than half their countrymen believe they were "suckers" to take part in that conflict, also cast a pall over some observances.

"We've been thrown in the dump like an old pair of shoes," Marine Sgt. Raymond Puller, 39, said at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Washington, where he is re covering from the 35th operation on a leg shattered during his third day in Vietnam in 1971. "And to think I enlist-

The VA commissioned the recent Louis Harris and Associates poll that indicated only 20 percent of the American public believes sending U.S. troops to Vietnam was the right thing to have done. Nearly two-thirds of those polled believed U.S. involvement in that conflict was a mistake, while the remainder had no opinion or were uncertain.

Regardless of their position on the war, a majority of those surveyed expressed positive feelings about Vietnam veterans - and the survey showed increased symediately ation of pathy for their plight. In 1971, 48 percent of those polled felt Vietnam veterans were treated worse than those who served in previous wars, compared to 64 percent this nowadays." The World War I Doughboys marked Veterans Day together a day earlier than the rest of the country. That's because the 11 men aged 80 to 89 are traditionalists. So they insist on beginning their Veterans Day celebration on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month - the official end of the war.

And right at 11 a.m. Sunday, the celebration began with services at the Central United Methodist Church.

Several hundred people gathered along Ashmun Street to watch the Doughboys' motorcade of small carts. However, the brisk 30-degree temperature did not deter the enthusiasm of 83year-old flag bearer Frank Lee.

Cuban danger remains

Wisely, the Carter administration has announced its support of the junta that overthrew El Salvador's dictatorial president, Carlos Humberto Romero. Now the administration must decide how best to shore up a government facing repeated assaults from the radical left.

Hardly a day has passed since Romero's ouster on Oct. 15 without urban disorders ranging from violent demonstrations to acts of terrorism and all-out gun battles between Marxists and Salvadoran security forces. Scores of persons have been killed in these clashes. Conditions in the capital city of San Salvador border on a state of

Indeed, El Salvador's Marxist factions seem determined to bring down the new government before it has a chance to implement its promised political, economic and social reforms. Their reasons are obvious enough. Enactment of these reforms would threaten the Marxists' base of support among El Salvador's rural and urban

It is, therefore, fair to say that the prospects for a Marxist takeover in this tiny Central American country diminish in direct proportion to the success and longevity of the politically moderate junta.

This much is plainly apparent and well understood in Washington. What is less clear is how the United States can help the newgovernment to survive both the immediate challenge in the streets and a long-range threat posed by a Marxist tide in the Caribbean-Central American re-

Too close an embrace might well prove counterproductive in a country where even political moderates resent the Yankee giant to the north. Doing nothing, on the other hand, risks the loss of what may be El Salvador's last chance to avoid a Castro-style future.

These circumstances place a premium upon discretion in any security assistance program mapped by Washington. The junta has quietly requested quantities of tear gas to cope with the disturbances in San Salvador. This request should be promptly hon-

Beyond this, the Carter administration would be well advised to await signals from the junta before promoting additional assistance to Salvadoran military and police forces. In a situation as politically charged as that in El Salvador, too much aid can be as damaging as too little.

Economic assistance, currently running at about $7 million per year, should be increased once the new government gains sufficient breathing space to permit planning for an expanded aid program.

Ultimately, the success of these efforts depends on an effective strategy for countering Cubandirected subversion throughout the Caribbean and Central America. So far, the Carter administration is reacting carefully and correctly to developments in El Salvador. But until and unless Washington finds appropriate means, and the necessary will, to contain Cuban influence, countries such as El Salvador will be hard pressed to preserve a democratic option with or without American aid.

This is carrying law bit too far

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - When the wife of a presidential candidate is dragged off by police on the complaint of a 6vear-old boy, it is-carrying law and order too far even for Phil Crane. Particularly if his wife is the victim.

Crane is an arch-conservative congressman who is second to none in support of his local police. It is his avowed intent to install his wife in the White House -- if he can keep her out of the slammer.

We were astonished to learn from the newspapers that the aspiring first lady, Arlene Crane, had been arrested in the case of a black Labrador dog named Sam. The latter is a frisky but friendly animal who is more disposed to play with children than to bite

But on a recent Saturday evening, he allegedly lunged for a tennis ball and grabbed a 6-year-old's wrist instead. So why did the dog catcher pick up Arlene instead of Sam? Here's the tale that we pieced together from the available witnesses:

The 6-year-old went crying to his mother, Mrs. Robert Schmidt, about his unhappy encounter with Sam. As evidence of the assault, the boy displayed his wound.

The authorities later described it as "a gash about an inch long," with 'several puncture wounds." But the first dog catcher on the scene, Karen Deskins, said it was "more like a scratch." It became a matter for official concern, she explained, because "the skin was broken. Deskins, finding the Cranes not at home, left a notice at their house that 'an animal allegedly belonging to you has bitten a person." Later that Saturday night, the Cranes returned,

He appeared at the Cranes' door, scowling fiercely, a pistol on his hip, at 10:45 a.m. He had come, he said, for Sam. *

Arlene Crane, clad in pajamas, blinked at him through a crack in the doorway. "It's not my dog," she said. True, the dog belonged to her 19-year old daughter, Catherine

Mrs. Crane offered to speak to her daughter, to search for the proof that Sam had been inoculated for rabies and to deliver the dog on Monday. She reminded the dog catcher that it was Sunday morning.

"I can't help it if your dog bit someone after hours," he growled.

Mrs. Crane spoke up in Sam's defense. "He doesn't bite," she said. She refused to surrender Sam, and the dog catcher stalked off muttering something about a warrant.

Mrs. Crane summoned her daughter who immediately drove Sam to an animal hospital. It was closed on Sun-

Not long afterward, Mrs. Crane appeared before Virginia magistrate Raymond Shaw. She asked him to wait until her attorney arrived.

dominant factor in setting American foreign policy at least since World War II. It is also publicly acknowledged that the Carter administration is almost entirely a Trilateral organization with 19 key advisors, five cabinet members, and the president and vice president all members or for-first meeting in Tokyo in 1973. It was founded and funded by David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase-Manhattan Bank. He chose virtually all of the members who are bankers, industrialists, media executives, political leaders, and academics from Japan, North America and Europe.

Its stated goal is to encourage policies which lead to interdependence and international cooperation and there is nothing sinister nor disloyal about that or the commission itself.

But, you must understand, that what the Trilateral Commission thinks is best for you and what you may think is best for you are probably entirely different.

The Trilateralists are internationalists. They are not interested in preserving the sovereignty and independence of the United States. Their published writings make it clear that they view independent nation states as out-moded and an impediment to their visions of a new world order.

Secondly, it is also clear that the trilateralists view the world in a strictly amoral, materialistic way They are interested in stability, order and good business, not it seems human rights. In one of their published statements, the Commission says, "The aim must be effective cooperation beneficial to all countries, whatever their political systems or stage of development." In other words, they have no aversion to the Soviet Union and its Gulag. Human beings, in their view, are merely e conomic units.

These people, keep in mind, are not your ordinary bankers and businessmen. These are people whose interests are global, whose wealth is so great they lend money to nations. These are people who are intelligent, hi, ghly educated, highly sophisticated, and who look upon us ordinary mortals in a paternalistic sort of way. Because they are so sure they know what's best for us, they have no hesitati on at all about manipulating us.

If you doubt their power to manipulate us, simply look at Jimmy Carter. Do you think a not very successful one-term governor of Georgia could really become president without the help of the Establishment. The role of Esta blishment media in publicizing Carter; Carter and Mondale's membership on the Trilaterial Commission; Carter's circle of Establishment advisors at the very time he was publicly campaigning against the Establishment have all been document-

Since the days of old J.P. Morgan, the Establishment has always stacked the deck in its favor by supporting candidates on both sides of the ferice so that no matter which way the yokels voted, they would elect a candidate acceptable to the elite. In 1976, the Establishment candidates were Carter and Gerald Ford.

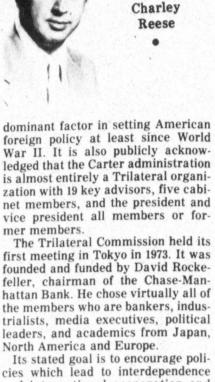

So far, I've identified Republicans John Connally, George Bush, Howard Baker and John Anderson and Carter as establishment candidates. On the Democratic side, I'm not yet sure about Ted Kennedy. On the Republican side, I know for sure Phil Crane is non-Esta blishment and I'm pretty sure Ron ald Reagan is not.

It will be fun to see if we yokels can outsmart the elite this time.

Pilot just enjoys flying

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) Bill Fay says he still enjoys flying, even after traveling 37,599 miles in airplanes in one week.

'I just like to fly," he said Friday when asked why he took 37 flights through 3f cities during the past week in an attempt to break the record for the longest continuous time that a person has spent flying on airplanes.

The rules of the Guinness Book of World Records stipulate that when not in an airplane, a passenger must be in an airport waiting for one.

Fay, a resident of New Bedford, Mass., said his flights cost only $431 because he took advantage of a special airline offer that allows unlimited travel from seven to 21 days for that price.

The current record holder is Charles Shattuck, 62, of East Hartford, Conn., who flew 25,-348 miles in five days last

Hunter wanted deer, found $1 million gold certificate

BAYFIELD, Colo. (AP) - Don Stewart went hunting the opening day of the deer-elk season but instead of bringing back a buck he brought home what a local banker believes to be an 1840 $1 million U.S. gold certifi-

Stewart said the U.S. Treasury Department is checking the authenticity and current value of the document.

Stewart, 41, a self-described loner who lives with his 83-year-old father in a small home in this community of 650 residents, says he plans to give any proceeds from his find to the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center.

"It appears to be extremely old paper. You could tell that and the engraving of George Washington in the lower lefthand corner really looks authentic," said Ernie Johnson, officer at the Pine River Bank here.

Stewart found the certificate Nov. 3 in a metal cylinder in a canyon in La Plata County

"I saw this silver thing" that at first look that a bullet, Stewart said. He dug in the sandstone with a knife and said the Treasury agent told him there were 10 gold certificates that had been issued but were never cashed and had been considered part of a robbery

The certificate is about 31/2 by 61/3 inches. In what appears to be quill script, it written "Number 71" in the upper lefthand corner.

One million is printed in both numbers and words twice on each side of the certificate.

It reads, "The Bank of the United States Promises to Pay" and the payee is not filled in. It is dated Dec.

Ooops!

SAN ANTONIO, Texas AP) - It never hurts to have the law on your side, especially when you wrote the law.

A case in point: A local couple went to a local restaurant-bar last Friday and parked their car in an open lot frequented by patrons. When they returned a

A private guard armed with a rifle materialized and informed them that a building contractor working nearby had restricted the parking area for his own equipment. The couple, needless to say, was incensed.

Do you know you are in violation of a city ordinance?" the woman indignantly asked the guard.

"How do you know?" the guard countered. "Because I'm the city attorney," responded Jane Macon, citing the ordinance by number and quoting a section that requires private lots to post warning signs before cars can be towed

Case dismissed.

"I'm just doing my job," the guard said apologetically and told Mrs. Macon and her attorney husband, Larry, where the car could be found.

The Macons found their car in a storage lot and paid $30 - more than twice what the city wrecker service is permitted to charge - to retrieve it. Over the weekend,

Mrs. Macon called the contractor's attorneys. An apology was promptly issued and the $30 returned. The lot was promptly marked with warning signs. Case closed.

Talk is cheaper than you think.

How to save up to 60% on Long Distance.

If you're one of those who thinks a Long Distance call is a luxury, read on.

The trick to saving money while keeping in touch with family or friends is knowing when to call, and calling One-Plus.

Call between 11pm and 8am. Before you groan about how you can't stay up late or see straight in the morning, think about it. You'll be saving up to 60%! If you're a night person, you probably don't start counting sheep until after 11 pm

anyway. And if you've got friends and family to call out west, it'll be a perfectly civilized 9 or 10 pm when their phone rings. If you like to see the sun rise, and you know folks back east, it'll be an hour later on their end.

Call out of state anytime before 8 am and you can talk all day if you want and still save 60%. In-state calls are also greatly reduced. Just remember to dial One-Plus.

Reach out on the weekend and save up to 60%.

Now this is a stroke of good luck: a really cheap Long Distance phone call just when you may want it most. Call any time between 11 pm Friday and 5 pm Sunday and really save. For instance, dial One-Plus and you can call to Atlanta almost worth making a new friend in Atlanta

Even on weeknights, save up to 35%.

Sometimes you can't wait for the weekend. Or you don't want to. But you can still save plenty Sunday through Friday from 5 pm to 11 pm. Think about what a bargain it is to call someone 1900 miles away, talk it up for ten minutes, and only run a tab of about $2.00. There's just no other way to get close to a faraway friend or relative so quickly, so cheaply.

On weekdays it's still a bargain.

Here's a surprise. From 8 am to 5 pm. a Long Distance chat still doesn't cost very much. A five minute call out of state, to anywhere in the continental U.S. is only about $2.50 when you dial One-Plus. Think of how good the sound of your voice would be to a friend (not to mention your mother!

Exotic fare of Turkey is tour feature

By TOM HOGE AP Wine and Food Writer

One of the nice things about traveling is the chance you get to try the food of another region; or better still, another nation.

To give travelers an opportunity to sample the best cuisine of faraway lands, Wynne Oz, wife of a Turkish executive based in the United States, has organized a series of tours all over the world which she calls Gourmet Adventures.

To make sure you get the best cuisine, Mrs. Oz has enlisted the help of noted gourmets. For instance, if you take the Paris tour, visits to restaurants and wine tastings have been mapped out with the aid of the famous food author Simone Beck. In my opinion, one of the most interesting tours in this world of Oz takes you through Turkey. "French cuisine may be the world's greatest, but Turkish cooking is still my favorite," said Mrs. Oz, who lived for 12 years in that exotic land by the shores of Bosporus. For six centuries or more, the Ottoman Empire ruled much of the world. and in Istanbul great chefs trying to please the sultans created a cuisine that rivaled the epicurean fare of Rome and Paris. Turkish food embraces a wide variety of dishes, from hors d'oeuvres like grapevine leaves stuffed with currants and nuts to dolmas, a mixture of ground lamb, rice and onion stuffed into eggplant, tomato or green pepper shells. Here's a dolmas recipe. 1 pound ground lamb 1 large onion, coarsely grated

1/4 cup rice

2 cup tomato juice

1 cup chopped parsley

Salt and pepper to taste 6 small eggplants

1 cup vegetable oil

The Internation Group has equal numbers of foreign born and American women. The group strives to promote cultural exchanges for better understanding of one another.

Mrs. Duggan carried out as her theme "The Year of the Child," using Hummel and Goebel children figures around the center of the serving table and in various party rooms.

Mrs. Duggan had collected these dolls since she was a child living in Poland and Germany.

Mrs. Maya Grimes introduced R.E. Slaydon Jr., gemologist, who had charge of the program entitled "How to Choose a Jewel." Australian opals were shown and discussed.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The congressional Joint Economic Committee has scheduled hearings beginning this week on America's illegal "underground economy" that does as much as $700 billion in business a year, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says.

Bentsen, D-Texas, said the hidden economy "ranges from clearly criminal activities such as prostitution, narcotics smuggling and loan sharking to 'off the books' employment, skimming receipts and the covert rentals.

For every way to use electricity in the kitchen, there's a way to use it more efficiently.

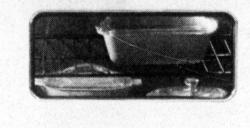

Keeping your heating and cooling costs down are the biggest ways to save electricity, but there are lots of little ways, too.

Your kitchen is a good place to start. Here are a few ways to save.

Use flat-bottomed pans. The flatter the pan the better its contact with the cooking unit. A tight-fitting lid on your pan will reduce cooking time.

Use less water. By cooking vegetables with the least amount of water possible, you'll improve their appearance and nutritive value, and you'll save electricity.

Reduce cooking time. Thaw meats before cooking them. This will save cooking fime and energy.

Make efficient use of your oven's heat by cooking several foods at the same time.

Use your oven timer and keep the oven door closed. Opening the door unnecessarily causes heat loss and extended cooking time.

'Have you ever tried to read a newspaper at a thirty degree angle?"

"WHY CAN'T YOU BE POLITE LIKE YOUR FRIEND, MATTHEW?"

"HE'S GOT HIS BAG AND I GOT MINE."

By DAVID GOELLER

ACCOKEEK, Md. (AP) - Maryland's oldest residents, the Piscataway Indians, fought the government in order to bury their chief, Turkey Tayak, in their ancestoral lands. Now they're fighting again even at the funeral - over a successor to the 83-year-old chief.

The great spirit teaches us to respect each other. as brothers," says the traditional burial ceremony. "If you have any hard feelings today against anyone, please leave them at the gate.

But after the burial on Sunday, as Billy Redwing Tayak was ordained as the new chief, a shouting match erupted at the gravesite between rival tribal factions. On one side are Indians who say Tayak cannot be chief because his mother was not an Indian. On the other are the Tayak family who say Billy was named chief in his father's will.

The body of the Piscataway's 27th chief, who died last Dec. 8, was buried in an unmarked grave in an old burial ground, now Piscataway Park, located along the Potomac River across from Mount Tayak gave the land to the federal government in the 1960s to keep it safe from development. He died in the belief the National Park Service would permit his

But officials told Tayak's survivors that burials were prohibited in federal parks. In the months before Maryland's congressional delegation got Congress to authorize his burial in the park, the family kept Tayak's body in a cemetery crypt.

About 200 people attended the ceremony, conducted by Chief Bill Eagle Feather, a Rosebud Sioux who described himself as "the last living traditional chief in the U.S. from South Dakota.'

A steel casket, draped with a painted deerskin with a single feather on it, was borne in a two-mile procession that made four ceremonial stops representing the principal compass points.

As Tayak's body, wrapped in black, was taken from the casket and placed in the grave, women chanted and mourners dropped bits of evergreen

And while Tayak's family filled in the grave, Eagle Feather sang the death song of the Plains Indians. Afterwards, he conducted "chechpe woonye," a flesh offering ceremony. Using a double-edged razor blade, he cut bits of flesh from the upper arms of a dozen people and buried the offerings in a small red cloth bag in the grave.

The trouble started during Billy Tayak's ordination, when a group of about 12 Indians began chanting "Billy's not chief" of the 500-member tribe.

Lilly Proctor of Camp Springs, Md., a spokeswoman for the dissidents, said Tayak cannot be chief because that title traditionally passes through a mother's bloodline.

"Billy's mother wasn't an Indian," she said. "Turkey told us that years ago. He said Billy couldn't be Billy Tayak says his father named him chief in his will. He said he doesn't recognize the dissidents as Piscataways When the ordination ended, cries of "welcome, Chief Tayak" mixed with "He's a fraud, a Mickey Mouse Indian.

Mark Tayak, 21-year-old son of Turkey Tayak, said, "I want him to be buried in peace. Put no bloodshed on my father's grave."

Hawaiian parents want children back in school

HONOLULU (AP) - While some parents picked up garbage left around Hawaii's schools since a strike by public workers closed them three weeks ago, others said they would take their children back to school this week - classes or no classes.

More than 5,000 parents volunteered after a plea from Gov. George Ariyoshi to clean schools that were closed when janitors walked off the job and officials feared possible health hazards. However, the state Board of Education shelved the volunteer plan Friday when members could not agree on whether to accept it, and Ariyoshi called for pressure on board members to open the 230 schools.

Board officials announced Sunday they would hold a special meeting Tuesday. More than 160,000 students have been at home since the schools were

Despite the board's rejection of the volunteer plan, some parents did some clean up work this weekend, and some announced plans to begin Tuesday taking their children to school, even if no classes are held. School Superintendent Charles Clark said he would have no choice but to send students home until there is an official reopening of schools. The strike by the 7,700 members of the United Public Workers Union had disrupted garbage collection, forced state hospitals to cut operations, delayed the fixing of traffic lights and resulted in trash being strewn around public parks and beaches.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE

Never Be an Arbiter

A bridge writer has many wonderful opportunities to get a punch in the nose. One of them came from today's hand East played the deuce of spades at the first trick Reading this as a discourag ing signal. West shifted to

TRUST

"Couldn't he play the ten of spades instead of the deuce?" West pleaded. "When he played the deuce he said he couldn't possibly hold the queen. Shouldn't I trust my own husband?"

Then we got 15 minutes back and forth about who would trust whom. It was fascinating, but it wasn't bridge.

I decided that the husband should play the ten of spades at the first trick. The wife would then lead a low spade to the queen, and a diamond shift would defeat the con-

ANSWER: Most experts would bid one club. The hand is much too strong to pass, and an opening bid of one spade leaves you stuck for a rebid if partner bids two of any new suit. You can comfortably handle any response to one club.

Airlines treat passengers like 'cattle,' says expert

LONDON (AP) — Most of the airlines flying the North Atlantic treat their passengers like cattle, feed them "unadulterated rubbish" and force them to use filthy toilets, says British food expert Egon Ronay.

"The lot of air passengers ... is dismal," says the new edition of the Egon Ronay Guide to eateries in Britain. They are "herded like cattle, kept uninformed during frequent delays, racked in their tight seats, ... fed unspeakable food and often ignored by flight staff and are heavily overcharged into the bargain, as Sir Freddie Laker has proved."

overcharged into the bargain, as Sir Freddie Laker has proved."

Ronay said he and five of his inspectors checked 14 airlines flying between North America and Britain for several weeks, including flying economy class three times on each carrier.

economy class three times on each carrier.

They graded the lines in this order: 1 Delta, 2 Air Canada, 3 TWA, 4
British Caledonian, 5 National, 6 Air India, 7 British Airways, 8 Braniff, 9
Aer Lingus, 10 Laker Airways, 11 Northwest Orient, 12 Pan American,

"Only the truly captive situation of the passengers explains how airlines can get away with serving unadulterated rubbish," said the guide of air-

"Contempt for the passenger herd is the only conceivable reason for hanging on to the basic misconception of what should be served.

"The anachronistic preoccupation with meat (or fish) and two vegetables should be demolished.

"Mass cooking, then freezing, then thawing, followed by heating up— Escoffier himself could not win against such odds. ... Why not good cold food and a hot beverage or fewer but carefully thought out dishes?" "The nadir of our suffering was reached at New York's Kennedy Airport, where the food offered at the buffet of the Pan American terminal was generally execrable," Ronay added.

He reported that one thing on most of the planes was worse than the food

"the scandalous state of the toilets."
Most airlines, he continued, "simply do not arrange for constant attention to them (could this be below the dignity of the glamor girls?). Our experience of filth and discarded bits and pieces does not bear description."

He said advertising campaigns "have given stewardesses an inflated role of glamor girls and sex traps." He said airlines should pay less attention to glamor and more to providing friendlier service by "what are supposed to be waitresses."

Grading the 14 lines on a scale of 100, the guide awarded Delta 77 points and praised its handling of passengers, serving of food, cleanliness of toilets and high quality of service.

El Al, the Israeli line which placed last, was criticized for its "ruthless and searching" security checks "which left our inspectors white and templing with rage."

trembling with rage."
"While one can understand the need for stringent precautions, do they really have to be so rough and humiliating?" Ronay wrote.

Lee Silverman, El Al's London spokesman, commented: "Our security checks are the envy of many other airlines. It's a pity every airline does not pay as much attention to security as we do."

Gift of 20 tons of rockfish will feed poor for month

SEATTLE (AP) — A fisherman's gift of 20 tons of rockfish that couldn't be sold for lack of a market will grace the Thanksgiving tables of Seattle's needy — and provide enough protein to feed the poor here for a month.

"It beats popcorn and fruitcake, which is all we had for a time," Holly Brodski, an emergency food and shelter coordinator for the city's Department of Human Resources, said Sunday. "To find somebody willing to donate protein is unusual."

She said the fish, to be distributed through local "food banks," would probably supply the protein requirement for needy families for a month. The food banks, neighborhood centers where donated food is distributed to all who say they need it, were started in the early 1970s during major layoffs at Boeing Co. plants in the area.

It was not immediately known how many persons currently are served by the food banks.

The donation came from Soren Sorensen, owner of the Blue Water fishing boat, which brought in 250,000 pounds of bottomfish after two weeks off the coasts of Oregon and Washington. He was unable to sell his full catch to commercial processors.

Henry Haugen, an attorney for the Fishermen's Marketing Association of Washington, said Sorensen made the donation one week before the start of fish tariff hearings. Haugen said Sorensen's plight is an indication of the problems of the West Coast trawler-fishing industry.

The donated fish weighed 40,000 pounds before it was processed by being cleaned and frozen into blocks. Normally, such blocks are cut up and used in fish sticks used in fish sticks.

Public money of about ten cents a pound will have to be found to pay for the processing, and the fish will be stored in the food banks' freezers, Ms.

But she said she expected no problems. "We'd figure it out," she said. "We don't turn it down."

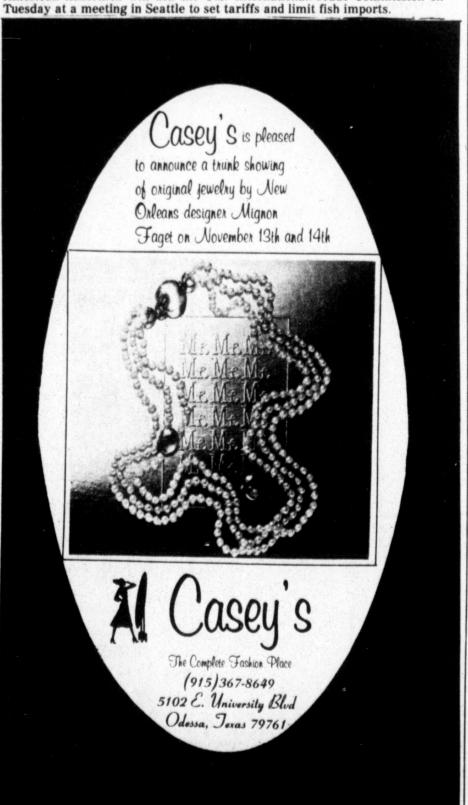

The last time that volume of food was donated, the city got a rail car load of canned tomatoes, she said.

Sorensen got about 20 cents a pound for the fish he was able to sell, Haugen said. The wholesale price of rockfish in Los Angeles last year was $1.25 a pound and its about 55 cents now, he said.

Haugen said foreign fishermen continue to control the bottomfish market because of their lower prices and the large quantities they export. He said American fishermen will ask the U.S. International Trade Commission on

She'll remember that night, and her assailant By JANE SEE WHITE

NEW YORK (AP) - Susan Heeger remembers July 11, 1978. Her attacker's laughter and her own panicked screams resound in her memory. The knowledge that her assailant was a New York City policeman is, she says, no comfort.

Susan Heeger, a 26-year-old former creative writing teacher at the University of Virginia, a fresh-faced blonde, was arrested for prostitution

Last Friday, a federal jury awarded Ms. Heeger $10,000 in damages, finding that she was arrested without probable cause and that the police used excessive force in making the arrest.

"It's changed me. I don't go out alone after dark any more. I'm basically paranoid and I wasn't like that before," she said Sunday. Ms. Heeger came to New York in May, 1978, took a part-time publishing job and devoted her mornings to writing fiction. That July night, she went to a movie, took a subway to her neighborhood and, alone, set out to walk three blocks to her apartment. "I was apprehensive, but I have women friends who go out alone all the time," she said. "I can't afford taxis. It was choice between taking buses and subways and walking or never going out alone after dark. I didn't want to live that way - but I do now.' She neared a parked, battered car, heard rowdy voices and detoured down a side street. It was dark, deserted. She began to jog toward a lighted intersection. "Suddenly there was a car next to me and a man's voice said, 'That's right, that's right - keep running.' At first I thought he was making fun of my fear. Then I realized he was following me.

"I was grabbed from behind by the hair and pulled down. I was screaming, lying on the sidewalk on my back. He had his knee in my stomach. He was unshaven, wearing a T-shirt and jeans. He was leering at me and grinning. I thought he was kidnapping me. I kept screaming for the po-

Susan didn't know that the man was Frank Costantino, a plainclothes cop. Costantino later said a prostitute had identified Ms. Heeger as the woman who had robbed her in jail the night before.

"The man who pulled me to the sidewalk never showed me identification," she said. "When the regular police came, they told me to shut up and do what I was told.

Finally it became clear to Ms. Heeger that Costantino thought she was a prostitute and it became clear to Costantino that Ms. Heeger was not a prostitute. The prostitute who had identified her said Ms. Heeger wasn't the woman who had robbed her after all.

The next day, Ms. Heeger called the New York Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union. Eager to overturn a state law enabling police to arrest women suspected of loitering for the purpose of prostitution, the NYCLU took her case.

"This is not an isolated case. My attorney found at least eight civilian complaints filed by women picked up unjustly for prostitution," she said. 'Maybe the police will treat prostitutes a little better from now on although I guess that's probably a bit much to hope for.'

Griffith Switch grocery store closes for 32,000th time

GRIFFITH SWITCH, Texas (AP) - Back when the Edwards Grocery Store was established in 1934, this town was nothing more than a wide place in the road with a grocery store and a cotton gin.

Today, it is a wide place in the road with a cotton gin. The grocery store has closed its doors for the 32,000th - and last time, and residents of this small town, located halfway between Venus and Maypearl, mourned its passing at a close-out sale Saturday.

"Us farmers visit and talk about the crops," said Joe Lee, who was a baby in diapers when the store first opened. "It's the only time we see our neighbors. People don't visit no more.'

Even the owners, John and Mary Sue Edwards, who were married eight miles up the road at Mountain Peak two days before they opened their store, say it was as much a community center and clearinghouse for neighborhood news as it was a clapboard grocery. "When it rains, the men gather here and talk. The women go to the hair place (in Venus or Maypearl) and gossip," said Edwards, 66. But Mrs. Edwards, 63, said, "The men gather here and gossip."

They have run the store, pumped gasoline, made pork sausage and tended to other chores, seven days a week, for 45 years, and now they are "We will miss it, but we have worked ourselves down," Mrs. Edwards said. Edwards wants more time to hunt quail with his four bird dogs, and Mrs. Edwards wants to "sew, knit and visit - things I haven't had time to do." They both want to spend more time with their children and grandchildren. When their store opened Dec. 8, 1934, they sold flour in 50-pound bags, and sugar and beans were stocked in bulk. They didn't sell meat because the customers in this rural area about 45 miles southwest of Dallas produced

For years they ate lunch separately so one of them could always be in the store. But now it is part of this town's history.

There has been crying and everthing else going on down here. I tell them not to get me started, because I'll boo-hoo," said Mrs. Edwards. Her husband, meantime, was hawking the last of the store's goods.

"You're pretty dirty and need to bathe more often — and I've got lots of soap," he told a woman pushing one of the store's four shopping carts across the worn plank floor. When another customer asked for 10 pork chops, he pretended to misunderstand. "How many pork chops did you say you wanted, Ruby? Twelve?" Okay. Give me 12.

"John is going to drive you crazy," a customer told Mrs. Edwards, trying to discourage their retirement.

'No he won't," she said. "I'm not going to let him in the house." The Edwards, who live in a neat frame house behind the store, had a few goods left after the sale. But it didn't bother Edwards.

Movie on Nazi death camp filming under tight security

"Someday I might want to reopen," he said.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) - The TV movie "Playing for Time" starring Vanessa Redgrave in the role of a Nazi death camp survivor, has started filming behind tight security at a former Civilian Conservation Corps camp near here.

The CBS-TV movie casts Miss Redgrave, a supporter of the Palestine Liberation Organization who once described Jewish demonstrators as "Zionist hoodlums," in the role of death camp inmate Fania Fenelon. CBS refused to fire Miss Redgrave despite vocal opposition from Jewish groups and individuals in the United States and abroad, including Miss A CBS spokesman said shooting began Wednesday at the bedraggled former CCC camp, now part of the Fort Indiantown Gap military reservation about 15 miles from Harrisburg.

"Playing for Time" recounts Miss Fenelon's experience at the infamous Birkenau death camp, where she escaped execution by playing in an all-woman orchestra.

Miss Redgrave, who is English, has insisted that her support for the PLO does not make her anti-Semitic. Security guards kept reporters, photographers and others from entering the filming location. "We're a closed set," said the CBS spokesman, who asked not to be identified. The movie set was provided by the state under a program to promote movie making in Pennsylvania. "It's an old CCC camp, built in the 1930s," said Maj. Clint Tennill, a press officer for the state National Guard, which operates Indiantown

He said the Syzygy Production Co. of New York has a contract giving it use of the area until Dec. 30.

"They were licensed for that area. It was provided to them at no cost," Tennill said. The Indiantown Gap site was picked because its shabby old CCC buildings resemble structures at Birkenau and Auschwitz. They have been unused since World War II except as warehouses, and were scheduled to be

The CBS spokesman said Miss Redgrave is on location along with about 100 other members of the cast and crew. "We're using local people as extras," he added. "We're shooting six days a week. Its a hectic sched-

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Her signature appears on millions of $1 bills. but today Romana Acosta Banuelos is back to making money the way she did for years before becoming U.S. Treasurer - making tortillas, tamales and other Mexican food specialties.

Mrs. Banuelos was the highestranking Mexican-American appointee of the Nixon administration. Now she runs Ramona's Mexican Food Products Inc., which she began 30 years ago in suburban Gardena. She also is active in banking and community affairs and glances occasionally at the 3rd Supervisorial District of East Los Angeles.

Mrs. Banuelos seemed the ideal political appointment when President Nixon chose her for treasurer in 1971. But the nomination ran into immediate controversy culminating in televised Senate hearings after immigration officials found illegal aliens working in her plant.

Mrs. Banuelos, who believes political enemies were behind the immigration raid, satisfied the Senate that she was unaware of the illegal workers and was confirmed unanimously. Raymond Farrell, then head of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, later termed the raid "a put-up job." But she shows no bitterness over the controversy and says she enjoyed her three years in Washington. "It was fantastic, exciting and very educational," she said in a recent inter-

Her company, which will this year gross more than $12 million, had its beginnings in a small shed in front of the house where she was raising two sons who are now vice presidents of Ramona's

Mrs. Banuelos' second husband, Alejandro, invented some of the food processing machinery used at the plant.

Ramona's - the company got that name because everyone kept mispronouncing Romana - now has more than 400 employes. But Mrs. Banuelos, 53, still watches over the making of the tamales, burritos, chile rellenos and other products that are sold in markets and on trucks throughout Southern California and in several other states

She resigned as U.S. Treasurer in 1974 because "there was nothing for me to do," Mrs. Banuelos says. "I'm a very energetic and active person with a lot of plans, so there was no reason for me to stay there. Also, the company suffered while I was gone, quite a bit.

Mrs. Banuelos became a Republican after working for former California Gov. Edmund "Pat" Brown's first election as a Democrat

'We felt we had participated in his election," she recalls. "Then Brown was asked at a banquet in East Los Angeles if he intended to make any Mexican-American appointments. His response was 'Yes, if there are any who are qualified.' It was the same story we had heard before. If we were qualified to vote for him, there should have been someone who could be appointed.

Nixon, says Mrs. Banuelos, made more Mexican-American appointments that any other president, including Carter.

Mrs. Banuelos' choice for president is John Connally, who was treasury secretary when she was treasurer.

Sunday wasn't for Karras

By The Associated Press

Alex Karras wouldn't have appreciated the goings-on in the National Football League Sunday.

Karras was the monsterous Detroit defensive tackle who frowned on place kickers trotting on the field at the last moment with clean, fresh uniforms to decide the outcome of

But it was those kickers who turned around three NFL games Sunday. Washington's Mark Moseley and Mike Woods of San Diego booted lastminute field goals to secure victories, the Redskins edging St. Louis 30-28 and the Chargers topping Cincinnati 26-24. But Toni Linhart missed two usually routine extra points and that was the difference in the New York Jets' 14-12 loss to Buffalo.

Redskins 30, Cardinals 28

St. Louis erased a 27-7 deficit with three fourth quarter TDs, but Moseley's 39-yard field goal with 36 seconds to play salvaged the victory for Washington.

The winning three-pointer came despite a bad snap from center which was salvaged by holder Joe Theismann. "Joe has great hands," Moseley said. "I know he'll get the ball down. My leg already was in motion by the time he did.

Chargers 26, Bengals 24

San Diego hung on to its share of the American Conference West lead by overcoming an early 14-0 deficit to overhaul the Bengals. Woods kicked field goals of 22, 42, 34 and 32 yards, the last one with 19 seconds left, for the Chargers' victory.

The four field goals was a San Diego club record and Woods now has a string of six straight after being picked up by the Chargers following his release by St. Louis.

Bills 14, Jets 12 Linhart, cut earlier by Baltimore after missing some short field goal tries, cost the Jets dearly against Buffalo. Both teams scored two TDs. but the Bills' got the game's only extra points from Nick Mike-Mayer. "It finally comes down to Buffalo's kicker made his two and our kicker didn't," said Jets Coach Walt Michaels. "Really, the game would still be going on if he'd made those two kicks out there."

Bucs 16, Lions 14

Tampa Bay stayed two games in front of Chicago in the NFC Central, rallying in the final 31/2 minutes to erase a 14-6 deficit.

First Neil O'Donoghue kicked his third field goal of the game, a 28yarder, and then Doug Williams threw a 23-yard TD pass to Larry Mucker following Dana Nafzinger's recovered fumble for the deciding

"We didn't play well, but we won," said Bucs Coach John McKay. "We couldn't have won a game like this two years ago. That's how muc and confidence we've gained."

Seattle, limited to minus seven yards in total offense a week ago, erased that memory with a 427-yard game against Cleveland as Sherman

Miami moved into a first place tie with New England in the AFC East, bottling up Baltimore while Bob Griese tossed TD passes of 18 and 14 yards to Nat Moore.

Eagles hope to derail Pokes' spread offense

IRVING, Texas (AP) - It has long been a mystery to the Dallas front office and coaching staff why more National Football League teams haven't gone to the Cowboys' two-minute spread offense.

"The other teams know you are going to pass so there is no surprise element," says Cowboys special assistant Ermal Allen. "The quarterback has an extra second to read the defense. We set a goal for our team of scoring at least 40 per cent of the time by a field goal or touchdown, I'd hate to see where we would be without our two minute offense.

The Philadelphia Eagles hope they can get far enough ahead in their game against the Cowboys Monday night so the deadly Dallas two-minute offense can't catch them.

The Eagles are 10-point underdogs in what amounts to a must game for them if they hope to catch Dallas in the race for the National Conference Eastern Division flag. Dallas leads Washington by 11/2 games and Philadelphia by two games in the division race.

The Cowboys spend long, dreary practice days with quarterback Roger Staubach set back in the shotgun offense orchestrating the team downfield against the clock.

"It's no accident when good things happen to us because we work so hard on the two-minute offense," says wide receiver Drew Pearson. "Maybe we ought to be in it all the time."

Dallas beat the New York Giants last Sunday out of the two-minute offense. The Cowboys downed St. Louis in the season-opener and tripped Chicago in the final 120 seconds using the spread.

Without a productive two-minute game, Dallas could be 5-5 instead of 8-2.

"You have to have a mobile quarterback like Roger for it to work," says Allen. "And you have to work on it all the time. Teams are always trying something new to defense it. Still I'm surprised other teams haven't started using it.'

Pittsburgh had good success blitzing the Cowboys' two-minute offense two weeks ago.

"We like for teams to blitz it because that gives us one-on-one coverage," says Allen. "We had seven dropped passes in that game. That will take care of any offense."

The Cowboys have beaten the Eagles nine consecutive times and Philadelphia has never won in Texas

Oilers' Reggie Jackson is back with big plays

Sports Editor

HOUSTON - After catching 55 and 35 yard touchdown passes from quarterback Dan Pastorini, wide receiver Ken Burroughs was asked if it felt good to be back as the Houston Oilers' Reggie Jackson - the guy who makes the big plays in the clutch.

"Ken Burroughs has never been away," responded the 6-foot-3, 10year veteran from Texas Southern. 'When Dan is on, I'm on and today Pastorni's arm wasn't bothering him and he showed he could throw long with anybody in the game.'

THE 31-17 win over an Oakland team, which had dominated the Oilers by winning 10 of the previous 11 meetingsin the American Football Conference, was a dramatic turnabout from Houston hung on to outgut Miami last Monday, but showed a sad 11yard net passing offense. Sunday was another day, another game, and most of all, another game plan, one with a Pastorini, who was feeling no pain.

The Oilers where looking for big trouble from fast-closing Oakland, which lost its first three games, but brought a record of five wins in the last six starts coming into Houston.

And big trouble is what they encountered for a full half. It was 14-14 and anybody's game.

THEN IN the third period, the Oilers, continuing in hot if somewhat hopeless pursuit of division-leading Pittsburgh, got the break that turned the game around when Mike Reinfeldt intercepted a Ken Stabler pass and returned 33 yards to the Oakland 18 to set up fullback Tim Wilson's six-yard touchdown run.

However, in the first half, a Houston score was only an invitation to Oakland to retaliate, but Pastorini hit Burroughs on a 35 yard TD play down the middle to take care of that comeback and give Houston a 28-14 lead with 6:32 left in he third period.

After that it was just a question of turning out the lights and sending the fans home as the Oilers went on to their eighth win in 11 starts.

HEAD COACH Bum Phillips had to be happy about the offense which saw. Earl Campbell rush for his customary 100 yards and Pastorini pass for 200 yards on eight compeltions in only 13

"It was their greatest win of the season and most important because it was the last one," beamed Bum, but realistically was a big win because it actually meant two ball games because if the race comes down to a tie, it means we would be ahead of Oakland, just like it was when we beat Miami last week.

"Yes, we were pleased with Renfro (Mike, the wide receiver from TCU who has been out most of the year). He has good moves, he has as good moves of any receiver that we have had and is a great competitor."

done something wrong.

the Oilers offense Sunday, catching two passes for 83 yards and giving the Raiders something to worry about other than Campbell and Burroughs. In fact, the freed Burroughs caught three passes for 109 yards and two touchdowns. 'They were in a strong zone,' Pastorini said of the game-breaking 35-yard pass to Burroughs, "and I didn't think the cornerback could stay with him, so I told him to run a post and as it turned out he couldn't. Burroughs had him by 10 yards."

PASTORINI HAS been under a lot of critisism from Houston fans but his solid performance Sunday doesn't mean he is out of the woods phsysi-

"I had a viral infection in March and it was so bad it deadend my arm. It takes eight months to a year to heal, but today it didn't bother me." With Pastorini healthy and Renfro ready to go after knee surgery, plus Campbell and Burroughs, Pastorini admits, "We realized today that we have a few more offensive weapons than we thought."

Burroughs noted that even though Pastorini's arm seemd to be sound again, he still must work in his timing. "That's something that just doesn't come over night. Maybe he will have it back by the time the Oilers play the Cowboys Thanksgiving Day in what might be the preview of an all-Texas Super Bowl, if somebody will just take care

Harris wants out of Miami

MIAMI (AP) - Wide receiver Duriel Harris has sounded off again. This time, he says he wants out.

The fourth-year Miami Dolphin told The Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel on Sunday that he will ask Coach Don Shula to be traded at season's end. Harris set club records with 10 receptions for 180 yards against Green Bay three weeks ago. After quarterback Bob Griese threw to him only twice in a 9-6 less to Houston last Monday night, Harris criticized Griese's conservative play-calling and said the Dolphins offense "choked up.

"After the Houston game, I only said what I felt to be the truth," Harris said. "I'd have been better off to keep quiet. "They (the coaches) were really on me during films all week. And, I didn't feel as at home among the players," he said. "It was obvious they felt I had

Harris said he decided during the week that he might be better off with

Because your head is unique, the way your hair grows is equally unique. Really quite different from every one else's.

Precision haircutting is a technique for cutting the hair in harmony with the way it grows. Your hair eventually grows out but it doesn't lose its shape with a precision haircut. Consequently your haircut will look as good after five days as it does after five minutes. And because the hair falls naturally into place you won't have to keep fussing with it. Usually a shake of the head does it.

At Command Performance we shampoo. precision-cut and blow dry your hair for fourteen dollars, whether you're a gal or a guy. And no appointments are ever necessary.

We also offer permanent waves, coloring, frosting and conditioning. But we really shine with precision. And so will you

Allison captures Texan 250

Bobby Allison finally got a visit free and clear - to the Texas World Speedway's victory circle, which has virtually been the private property of Texan A.J. Foyt for the past four

Allison, a NASCAR star visiting from Hueytown, Ala., overhauled a fading Foyt in the 108th lap Sunday to capture the USAC Texan 250. Foyt, 44, finished fourth to clinch his second consecutive USAC national stock car

BUT 18 months ago here, Allison was claiming he had been cheated out of a victory in a 250-mile race narrowly won by Foyt. Allison bitterly protested the race, claiming a scorer's mistake gave Foyt the victory.

"I felt I had won that race. They came up with various reasons to score it the way they did," he said Sun-

But he was smiling when he continued: "After a couple of things that have happened to me in the past, I was still looking to see if they didn't have victory lane barricaded. I even further embarrassthought maybe they might have ment as they were hooked it behind a red semi and were whipped 37-2 by the Calhauling it down tuston.

"It's kind of rewarding after coming down here and racing hard several times," Allison said.

FOYT, OF Houston, has won nine Indy and stock car races at the Texas World Speedway since 1976. He led 92 of the first 107 laps Sunday after starting his famous orange Camaro in the pole position.

He clinched the USAC title midway through the race after point contenders Rusty Wallace and Joe Ruttman were forced to withdraw when their cars blew engines.

But Foyt slowed on the 108th lap. Allison shot past and coasted in for the victory in his Matador. The first place finish was worth $7,010. There was no exglanatin for the loss

TOKOROZAWA, Japan (AP) -Willie Wilson of the Kansas City Royals singled home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning Monday, giving the American League All-Stars a 6-5 come-from-behind victory over the National League.

It was the AL's second victory against one defeat and one tie in a nine-game Japan tour.

Playing before 21,000 spectators at Seibu Stadium, the NL scored three runs in the top of the first inning on a triple by Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals and a double by George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds.

Joel Youngblood of the New York Mets drove in another NL run in the second following a double by Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies... But the AL loaded the bases on two hits and a hit batsman and scored its first run in the bottom of the second when Roy Smalley of the Minnesota Twins grounded into a double play. The junior circuit added two runs in the fourth on a solo homer by Cecil Cooper of the Milwaukee Brewers and a triple by Smalley. In the top of the sixth, Bill Madlock of the Pittsburgh Pirates doubled home the NL's fifth run from second, giving the NL a 5-3 lead.

In the eighth, Ken Singleton of the Baltimore Orioles smashed a gametying two-run home run against the NL's third pitcher, Gene Garber of the Atlanta Braves.

With one out in the ninth, pinch-hitter Bobby Murcer of the New York Yankees singled to center. The AL put runners on second and third as center fielder Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates bobbled a ball hit by Rick Burleson of the Boston Red Sox. Then Wilson's decisive hit gave the AL the victory.

Auburn holds keys to Sugar bowl tilt

No. 5 Houston its first setback 21-13 and seem certain to rise in The Associated Press ratings — and No. 12

Pittsburgh, a 24-17 winner over West Virginia.

By The Associated Press

With invitation time one week away, the lineup for a couple of major bowl games rests on the shoulders of a team that can't even go to a bowl.

The Tigers of Auburn University are ranked 16th in the nation by The Associated Press - they defeated Mississippi State 14-3 Saturday — but are on NCAA probation and therefore ineligible for postseason action. Instead, they will have to be content with having a good deal to say about who goes to the Sugar and Orange Bowls ... and possibly the Cotton as well.

Unranked Georgia has thrown a monkey-wrench into the Sugar Bowl's plan to have No. 1-rated Alabama return to New Orleans as the Southeastern Conference's representative.

Although Alabama is 9-0 to Georgia's 5-4, both are 5-0 in SEC play — Alabama nipped Louisiana State 3-0 in the rain Saturday night while Georgia pounded Florida 33-10 - and Georgia can make it to the Sugar Bowl by defeating Auburn next Saturday, regardless of what Alabama does against Auburn on Dec. 1. That's because Alabama went last year.

If Georgia wins — the Bulldogs are 5-0 against SEC teams but 0-4 outside the conference - that could free Alabama to meet second-ranked Nebraska in a national championship Orange Bowl showdown. Or

Although second-ranked Nebraska is unbeaten following Saturday's 21-12 come-from-behind triumph over Kansas State, the Cornhuskers must still face Iowa State next weekend. Then comes the annual Big Eight confrontation with Oklahoma on Nov. 24. The sixth-ranked Sooners walloped Kansas 38-0 and remained tied with Nebraska for the lead and a trip to Miami.

Suppose Alabama Coach Bear Bryant, who has been known to arrange a bowl matchup or two in the past, asks the Orange Bowl to wait a week?

"In that case, I think there would be a lot of sentiment to invite Florida State," says one member of the Orange Bowl's selection committee. "There's still some animosity against Bryant anyway."

The Orange Bowl is miffed at Bryant because he and Notre Dame's Ara Parseghian arganged a match on their own several years back. In addition, the Bear likes to keep his troops at home as late as possible and that led the Orange Bowl to put in a rule that the teams must hit town at least five days before the game. Seventh-ranked Florida State is just as unbeaten as Alabama - the Seminoles trounced 19th-ranked South Carolina 27-7 - but the Orange Bowl, like all bowls, has a natural aversion to teams whose followers are within easy driving distance. They prefer the tourist trade, folks who will spend both time and money

As an opponent for the SEC representative, the Sugar Bowl is considering the Nebraska-Oklahoma loser, eighth-ranked Texas - the Longhorns handed

Texas' victory jumbled the Southwest Conference race. Houston and ninth-ranked Arkansas are tied with 5-1 records — the Razorbacks wiped out a 17-0 third-quarter deficit and knocked off No. 17 Baylor 29-20 - while Texas is 4-1. If all three win their remaining games, Arkansas goes to the Cotton

The Rose Bowl has no such trials and tribulations, but that doesn't mean it doesn't have a problem here and there ... like in the San Francisco Bay area and Ann Arbor, Mich.

Fourth-ranked Southern California apparently clinched its 10th Rose Bowl trip in 14 years by defeating No. 15 Washington 24-17. But the losers' could be back in the race if the Pacific-10 Conference, headquarterd in the San Francisco suburb of Walnut Creek, rules that Arizona State used ineligible players in beating Washington last month.

Third-ranked Ohio State will become the Big Ten's representative in Pasadena if the Buckeyes defeat Michigan in their regular-season windup at Ann Arbor next week, or if Purdue beats Indiana. This past weekend, Ohio State trimmed Iowa 34-7 while No. 14 Purdue bounced No. 10 Michigan 24-21.

If the race ends in a three-way tie - Ohio State is 7-0 and 10-0 overall to 6-1, 8-2 for Michigan and Purdue - the trip goes to the team with the best overall mark. If it's a two-way deadlock, head-tohead competition decides and Ohio State doesn't play Purdue

At any rate, bowl invitations can go out at 5 p.m. CST, next Saturday. Not long thereafter, most of the berths should be filled

After receiving a call from a concerned citizen, police searched the area and found Midland Suzuki Shop, 2601 N. Big Spring St., and Hanging Tree Gallery, 3201 N. Big Spring St., damaged by gunshots, police officials Five shots were fired through a plate glass window in the front of the motorcycle shop, police said. No one was in the building at the time. Jessie Moore, general manager of the business, said five bikes were damaged by the shots. Moore said it appeared the shots may have been fired by a .38- or .357caliber weapon.

"They laid down a pretty good pattern - about a four foot circle - in the window," said Moore.

Police reports indicated that the Hanging Tree art gallery and frame shop had also been the target of the shots

The extent of damage to the business was not clear from an official report, but police did notify the owner, the report indicated.

chants closed their shops and schoolchildren stayed out of class in the occupied West Bank today to protest the arrest of Nablus Mayor Basam Shakka following comments by him expressing understanding for Palestinian terrorist attacks.

In Cairo, the Egyptian government strongly condemned the arrest as well as an Israeli decision to build new settlements in the West Bank. A foreign ministry statement said the actions could have only adverse re-A spokesman for the Israeli-govern-

Nablus were closed, the spokesman said, and students at Bir Zeit University near Ramallah demonstrated against Shakaa's arrest.

After the mayor's arrest Sunday morning, his lawyer appealed to the Supreme Court, claiming that a court order issued last week preventing his expulsion should also prevent other actions against him by Israeli author-

The Israelis offered no reason for Shakaa's arrest or imprisonment in a maximum security facility near Tel Aviv. No charges were filed, but the deputy defense minister said the government was preparing a list of offenses for the Israeli Supreme Court to justify his expulsion.

Shakaa's arrest came days after Maj. Gen. Danni Matt, the occupation chief of the West Bank, reported the mayor told him to expect more terrorist attacks like one in which 34 Israelis were killed last year as long as the occupation of Arab lands continued. He denied that he endorsed the attack, but said he understood the motives behind it.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori said this was "the straw that broke the camel's back."

Shakaa defied a government order last June and led a demonstration against Jewish settlements in the West Bank. The charge against him for that violation was frozen as a gesture to the United States, but it was not dropped.

Shimon Peres, leader of the opposition Labor Party in Parliament, and other Israeli politicians expressed satisfaction with the government's action against Shakaa. But the Arab mayor of Hebron, Fahad Qawasmeh, said it was evidence of "a clear policy

The ultra-orthodox religious party Agudat Israel had threatened to leave the Begin coalition if it were defeated on the abortion issue. The withdrawal of its four Parliament members would bring down the government. Its leader said a decision would be announced Tuesday.

The defeat came on a breathtaking roll-call vote cutting across party lines. The Knesset deadlocked 54-54 with two abstentions on the government bill, which would have removed from the abortion law a clause permitting abortions for social and economic reasons.

"The bill has not been accepted,"

Knesset Speaker Yitzhak Shamir announced, raising cheers from the opposition Labor party at the end of a raucous debate

The new crisis was the latest in a series of political troubles plaguing Begin's government - concerning settlements in occupied Arab territories, a Cabinet reshuffle and the resignation of Moshe Dayan as foreign minister. Dayan, who does not belong to any political party, voted against the government on the abortion bill.

Kidney transplants not just for young

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would age rule out a kidney transplant for a 52-yearold man? - Fred.

Dear Fred: The May 1979 issue of the NAPHT News, a publication of the National Association of Patients on Hemodialysis and Transplantation, located in Great Neck, N.Y., carries an article about a patient who received a kidney transplant at the age of 64. The title of the article, "You're Never Too Old," would appear to answer your question. A subheading on the article reads: "If any readers are worried about a transplant, I can offer them hope."

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has been living and working in West Africa for the past six months. She writes that there are many cases of yaws among the young people. Wasn't this disease supposedly on its way to being eradicated? What is yaws and how is it contracted? — Lisa.

Dear Lisa: Yaws is a disease that has made a comeback after being all but eliminated. This children's disease, with its potentially crippling and mutilating effects, is easily curable. Although there is no effective way to prevent yaws by immunization, a single injection of penicillin causes a dramatic cure, with facial and body sores disappearing in a few which is biologically related to the spirochete that causes syphilis. The two organisms cannot be distinguished microscopically, making it necessary for the diagnosis to be made on the basis of a physical examination and medical history. Unlike syphilis, though, yaws is not a venere-

In the late 1950s, as many as 100 million people were thought to be infected with yaws. A campaign, sponsored in part by the World Health Organization, and involving mass treatment with penicillin, eliminated about 99 percent of the cases. Recently, however, there has been a resurgence, and there are now an estimated two million cases of yaws throughout the world.

The spirochete of yaws is spread by skin-to-skin contact, generally among children under 15 years of age. Two to eight weeks after contact, an ulcer usually appears on a leg. Although it soon disappears, within about three months a number of sores appear on the face and body. These, too, disappear after a few months, leaving no scars. Several years later, the disease returns; this time the sores scar and disfigure the skin and cause painful, crippling bone infections.

In addition to the fact that yaws is not a venereal disease, it differs from syphilis in other ways as well. Chronic infection with yaws provides some protection against syphilis because the organizms are so closely related. Untreated yaws, however, rarely result in death because the disease does not damage the arteries, heart or brain, as syphilis often does.

Texaco hits Atlantic gas

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) - Texaco said today it has struck more natural gas off the mid-Atlantic coast. It is the biggest gas discovery reported so far in the Baltimore Canyon

The Texaco strike, about 105 miles east of Atlantic City, is the fourth natural gas discovery in a very small area off the New Jersey coast. One oil strike and 16 dry holes have resulted from nearly 20 months of exploratory drilling in the Baltimore Canyon Trough.

Texaco said its leased semisubmersible rig Ocean Victory made the discovery in the same 15,699-foot hole where a significant gas strike was made on Oct. 22.

Committee members want to strengthen tax legislation

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) - Eleven of the 20 members of the Senate Finance Committee want to strengthen the "windfall profits" tax that they voted earlier to chop in half.

But, as the Senate prepares to begin debate on the tax, oil-state senators are drafting amendments that would reduce the tax bite even further.

The Senate is likely to start debate late Tuesday on the tax, which would finance President Carter's long-range energy program and aid to lower-income Americans struggling with rising fuel costs. The House has a light agenda this

Assuming its Rules Committee grants clearance, the House will consider late in the week a version of Carter's plan to hold down hospital costs. The president views that legislation as a major component of the fight against inflation.

Two months behind schedule, the Senate will decide sometime during the week whether to give up its fight for additional spending cuts and agree to the compromise 1980 budget passed by the House.

The House has rejected Senate demands that committees be forced to slash spending by an additional $3.6 billion. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, has not disclosed whether he will surrender and thus end the battle over the $547.6-billion

The "windfall profits" tax on the oil industry is expected to tie up the Senate for at least a week. Carter proposed the tax to soak up about half the extra money that will flow to the oil industry over the next decade as a result of his decision to phase out federal price controls on crude oil produced in this country.

The House changed the tax slightly in June and passed a version that from 1980 through 1990 would bring in close to the $298 billion Carter had The Senate Finance Committee, concerned that a tax that is too stiff would rob the oil industry of money needed for exploration and production, exempted several categories of oil, cutting the revenue projection to about $138 billion. Several of those e supported by some of the 11 moderate and liberal Finance Committee members who now are pledging efforts to strengthen the tax once again. The group, led by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., reported to the Senate that some of the exemptions are not justified because "they do not enhance production and ... they significantly reduce badly needed revenue. The group of five Democrats and six Republicans will concentrate on trying to increase the tax on "new" oil from the 60 percent rate voted by the committee to 70 percent. That would bring in an additional $25 billion. Another amendment is aimed at retaining the tax well into the 1990s. On the other hand, conservatives

Both the House and Senate already have passed legislation to help the nation's poor pay their heating bills this winter. The Finance Committee bill would earmark close to $65 billion for such aid over the next decade.

In addition, the measure would set aside $32 billion during that period for tax credits to encourage conservation and switching from oil to other fuels. Another $15 billion would go for transportation improvements.

Gas pipeline explodes

WEST MONROE, La. (AP) - A natural gas pipeline exploded, digging a crater 70 feet wide and 20 feet deep, and forcing the evacuation of three subdivisions in this northern Louisiana city of 14,000. The pipeline was the only object heavily damaged and no injuries were reported, officials said, adding that the explosion occurred near the spot where a pipeline ruptured eight years ago.

"It sounded like a jet. It shook the house so bad that it knocked the light fixture off the carport," said Elizabeth Jones who lives nearby. "I heard the explosion and I knew what it was because it had happened before," she said. "I knew we needed to leave immediately. If it did ignite, we would certainly go with it if we didn't go out.' The 20-inch Eastern Texas Gas Line Co. high-pressure pipeline runs about half a mile from the Jones' house.

Carol Wright said the blast was touched off shortly before 9 p.m. "Most of the people left of their own accord," she said. "They described it to me as being like a jet aircraft was sitting on top of their houses.'

Hunger strike added to efforts by Iranian protesters

By The Associated Press

The Iranian people began a five-day hunger strike today to press their demand for the extradition of the deposed shah, Radio Tehran reported as the occupation of the American Embassy in Tehran went into its ninth day with no indication of an end to the stalemate.

Iran's new foreign affairs chief summoned all foreign ambassadors in Tehran for a meeting today in what appeared to be a diplomatic counter-offensive against the United States.

Tehran sources reached by telephone from Bonn, West Germany, had said beforehand they expected the Iranian official, Abolhassan Bani Sadr, to urge that their governments pressure the Carter administration to send the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran.

Reached again afterward, the sources declined to give details of the meeting. One of them, a European diplomat, said the ambassadors "were given the opportunity to present their views," but he said there appeared to be no progress in negotiations to obtain the release of the 98 hostages held by militant students at the embassy since Nov. 4.

An official Iranian broadcast, monitored in Kuwait, said the students called for a fast taken up "by the country as a whole to underline the strength and unanimity of the Iranian demand for the extradition of the shah to stand trial in

Meanwhile, Syrian troops drove about 40 demonstrating Iranians from the grounds of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, Sunday, and police in Washington, D. C., drove several hundred anti-Iranian demonstrators away from Iran's embassy in the U.S. capital. In Denver, Colo., an Iranian student was held for the fatal shooting of a teen-ager and the wounding of two others who police said smashed a picture window in the Iranian's apartment.

Palestinian sources said representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Pakistani, Syrian and Turkish ambassadors in Tehran were negotiating for the release of the hostages in the American Embassy, and a Saudi Arabian newspaper reported all or some would be freed by Tuesday. But a spokesman at the Iranian Foreign Ministry, reached by telephone from New York, said there was no indication of that.

Foreign diplomats who saw the hostages Saturday said they appeared to-be in good health. But Bani Sadr told French radio interviewers the 62 Americans and 36 non-American hostages — believed to be mostly Pakistani and Indian employees of the embassy — held captive since Nov. 4 would be freed only if the U.S. government surrendered deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi for

"No compromise, no negotiation is possible," he said.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the Carter administration continues to hope that efforts by nations, individuals and agencies would have "a cumulative effect" that would impel Iranian authorities to release the MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (AP) - Hundreds of men, women and children poured into a hastily-assembled camp in the Toronto International Center after authorities urged 220,000 residents of Mississauga to evacuate an area threatened by fumes from burning, derailed tank cars loaded with dangerous chemicals.

The center near Toronto's international airport, usually the site of bingo games and trade shows, was opened to the evacuees Sunday evening when it became clear that other facilities in schools and shopping malls couldn't handle all those who could not find shelter with relatives or friends.

Emergency operations at the center, which officials said could hold Red Cross aided by a team of Boy Scouts operating ham radios.

Evacuees registered, helped themselves to a hot drink and settled down to wait for word that they could return to their homes.

An area was soon set up for children, the snack bar remained open, and people sat around the bingo tables, smoking cigarettes, drinking coffee and trading stories.

Reg Dickie and his family had had to move three times through various stages of the evacuation.

Dickie, a courier driver who lives about half a mile from where the derailment occurred, said he was notified of the hazard about 11:30 a.m.

"We first went to a friend's house. but then we both were evacuated to Erindale school," he said. "But a couple of hours ago, they evacuated Erindale, so here we are.

"We always hear of it happening down in the States or somewhere else, but not in your own backyard.' Les Potter, 54, settled into a game of cribbage with Al Levian, 37. "I came here to play bingo," said Potter, "and when I heard my home was in the evacuated area, I decided Levian, owner of a warehouse, said police came to his door and told him and his wife, Karen, to leave. "We left in such a hurry that our supper was still on the table.'

Andrew Franjic said he and his wife, Terry, son Mark, 11, and daughter Susie, 5, had spent Sunday afternoon looking at Christmas displays in downtown Toronto. When they returned home, their street was blocked off by police who told them to get everything they needed from home and get out.

Mrs. Franjic said they weren't too worried about their home, located several hundred yards from the fire. Muriel Whitehurst, 23, who lives about half a mile from the derailment, said she spent most of the day at her father's until he was told he should leave his house. "He's a bit stubborn, so he's still there," she said. "He's got my cat and a guinea pig and he said he just might put that out on the front porch.

Mrs. Whitehurst, whose husband was out trying to round up some sleeping bags, said the first explosion after the derailment was "the most incredible thing I've ever seen in my

Advisers called to White House for hostage talks

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter summoned Energy Secretary Charles Duncan and other top advisers to the White House as the standoff between the United States and Iranian authorities over some 60 American hostages moved into its second week

U.S. officials said they could not forecast when the hostages will be

"I have no prediction to offer you on the time of release," State Department spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters Sunday.

"Nor do I have any expectations on this at all, so far as tomorrow, the next day or whenever.

While White House and State Department officials declined to say what was discussed at the top-level meeting Sunday, Duncan's presence indicated oil supplies were on the agenda. Patricia Bario, a deputy presidential press secretary, said the session involved "another assessment of the situation and what is possible that can be done."

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who had spent the day in the Virginia countryside, joined Duncan at the White House. Then Vance, without any announcment, met at the State Department with officials from the Energy, Commerce and Treasury departments.

Iran ships about 500,000 barrels of oil a day to the United States, accounting for about 3 percent of American petroleum consumption. However, any interruption in Iranian supplies could unsettle world oil markets. Spokeswoman Bario said there was no threat of such a cutoff and that 'nothing dramatic" caused the president to call in Duncan, Vance and the Meanwhile, with no break in the stalemate, the State Department peared to be taking a tougher line toward the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the Moslem cleric in effective control of Iran. An official who asked not to be named said Khomeini and his aides had "ample authority" to get the hostages released and to curb demonstrations by Iranians in the United States and other countries. Although careful not to provoke the Khomeini regime, the administration last week recommended that Americans still in Iran return home and stopped the shipment of spare parts to Iran's air force. But the United State still sells some $500 million a year in badly needed grain and other agricultural products to Iran. Administration officials were unwilling Sunday to discuss any move the United States might make in that

On Saturday, President Carter instructed the Justice Department to begin deportation proceedings against Iranian students illegally living in the United States. Department officials said there would be no actual deportations until next month. Spokesman Carter acknowledged that efforts by a number of countries and others - the Vatican sent an emissary into the embassy on Sunday - had failed to produce a breakthrough. But he said the United States hoped the "cumulative effect finally will be felt by the authorities in

He said he could not offer "any new reading of what is an old and unhappy record" - that despite a number of efforts, the hostages are still prisoners in the embassy.

Iran's new foreign affairs chief, Abalhassan Bani Sadr, told French radio interviewers "no compromise, no negotiation is possible" over the Iranian demand that deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi be returned to stand trial for his life.

2,000 persons, were handled by the ...flee as toxic chemical fumes...

HOLLAND, Mich. (AP) - Nearly 1,000 families were evacuated early today after a railroad tank car carrying highly toxic hydrogen fluoride derailed near a mobile home park and overturned, police said.

"The tanker is lying on its top, so the turret is buried. At this point we don't know if it's leaking or not," Ottowa County Sheriff Robert Dykstra said early today. "Our main concern will be when the car is righted. If it's leaking, and we get strong winds, we'll be in trouble.

Dykstra said it was not known what caused the derailment just after midnight of four cars of the Chesapeake and Ohio train.

He said evacuated families were being housed at the Holland Civic Center and were not expected to return to their homes until noon.

The Du Pont Chemical Co. tank car, which overturned about a half mile northeast of this western Michigan city, was enroute to a Du Pont plant in Montague, said Ray Conageski, senior superintendent of production at the facility.

Conageski said hydrogen fluoride, which is highly toxic and corrosive, is used in the aluminum industry and for synthesis of organic chemicals.

The chemical can cause cellular poisoning and respiratory problems and can be fatal, Dykstra said.

No injuries were reported, but several deputies complained of irritation while they evacuated the area.

"When it went over, a release valve popped open and we had a small burst of gas," said Glenn Timmer, Ottawa County emergency services director. "You can almost taste it," said Deputy Brad Grayson. "I've been evacuating people for the last hour and I've been experiencing a burning sensation in my throat." Sheriff's department officials had to move from their original command post directly downwind of the derail-

The area was sealed off. Chemical specialists from Du Pont were on their way from Illinois to the site, the sheriff said.

An 81-year-old woman who complained of headaches was taken to a hospital, according to Deputy Gene Koopman, director of the Red Cross effort at the Civic Center.

"There were a lot of senior citizens in the trailer park," he said, and "we have a large number of people on prescription medication." He said deputies escorted a bus back to the area so officials could get the needed medi-

Kissinger focuses remarks on prevention of takeovers

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger says after the crisis in Iran is over, the United States should come up with a plan to insure that it never happens again anywhere in the

"We must develop a policy to prevent this and convey to other countries they are not free to violate the diplomatic immunity of Americans and Americans cannot be picked up and held hostage with impunity,' Kissinger said during a weekend visit to Texas.

"At any moment there are tens of thousands of Americans around the world who are subject to blackmail of this nature," Kissinger said. The former secretary of state said he did not know how long the crisis would last, but said the United States must not "let itself be blackmailed"

by militant Moslems holding U.S. hostages in Tehran. "If we once accept this position we will never be able to do what is right," he

"I would hate to think we are without recourse," said Kissinger, who was here to attend a fund-raiser Saturday for Sen. John Tower, R-Texas. However, Kissinger declined to say what he thinks President Carter ought to do about the present crisis.

"I believe that in a situation that is this sensitive, outsiders should not offer tactical advice. There is only one man who can handle this crisis, and that is the president of the United States," Kissinger said.

...escape multiple train derailments

MOLINO, Fla. (AP) - Derailed propane tank cars burned and exploded while officials considered whether to use explosives or a military air strike to destroy the cars in a wrecked Louisville & Nashville

Officials decided Sunday night to let the propane-laden cars in the milelong train burn. They announced that an Army team from Atlanta would make a decision today on how to handle the blaze several miles south of this tiny rural community near the Alabama border.

No injuries were reported early

Sunday when two L&N locomotives and 29 cars spilled off the tracks near Pretty Boy Creek.

Disaster officials said they were thinking about waiting for the tankers to burn out in a few days, blasting the propane free with explosives set under the tanks or using a Department of Defense air strike to destroy all the cars at once. "It's not hurting anything - the woods are wet," a fire department spokesman said as a cold drizzle fell Sunday night.

"We are sitting on a potential time bomb," said Escambia County civil defense director Buck Renfroe, announcing the evacuation of 70 families within two miles of the wreckage. "It can go off at any minute, and it can cause skyrocketing explosions at any

The southbound train reportedly derailed when it hit a washed-out section of track that cuts through a

Nine of the derailed cars contained hazardous materials, including six filled with propane gas, authorities said. The spilled cargo also included acetone, alcohol, sulfur, beer and pineapple concentrate.

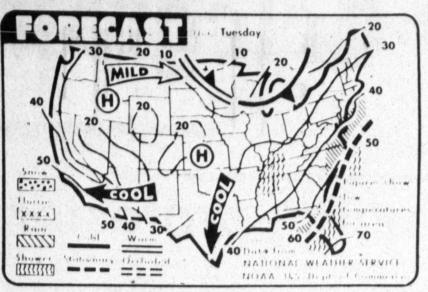

"The liquid petroleum is boiling," Renfroe said. "When the liquid evaporates completely and vapor hits the red-hot area, it explodes."

About 6,000 people live in the area, but the nearest home is about a quarter-mile from the wreck site. Mary Gilbert, a Red Cross official, said about 115 evacuees checked into Molino Elementary School for the night. Others were staying with friends and relatives or at motels.

DA uncertain of charges to be filed against Iranian

DENVER (AP) - While the governor urged Colorado residents to "stay calm," District Attorney Dale Tooley said it could be Wednesday before he decides what charges, if any, to file against an Iranian held in the shooting death of a 15-year-old high school boy

Two other youths, who police said were looking for "some Iranians to hassle," were wounded in the shooting Sunday, which followed several days of demonstrations in Denver and Boulder over the seizure of American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in

Doctor says body in grave is Oswald's

SEATTLE (AP) - Despite an author's claims to the contrary, the body in Lee Harvey Oswald's grave is that of the man accused of assassinating President John Kennedy, says the doctor who performed the autopsy on Oswald.

'There is overwhelming circumstantial evidence that it was Oswald," said Dr. Earl Rose, chief medical examiner in Dallas in 1963 when Jack Ruby shot Oswald. But Rose said he would not object to exhumation of the body to verify the identity.

"It's the American way, to explore every possibility," he said.

Rose, in Seattle on Saturday to attend a meeting of the National Associationof Medical Examiners, said Oswald's wife and mother identified

British lawyer-author Michael Eddowes has written a book in which he claims the Russian secret police substituted a look-alike for Oswald when Oswald was in Russia prior to the Nov. 22, 1963, Kennedy assassination.

Afshin Shariati, 21, a student at Loretto Heights College, was being held in the city jail. Tooley said Shariati would be advised of his rights at a hearing today.

"We're investigating a possible homicide, a possible burglary and several other matters," Tooley said. Shariati was arrested Sunday after

Paul Moritzky was found dead near Shariati's third-floor apartment, where a window had been smashed. Steve Roane, 17, and Michael Lopez, 16, both of Denver, also were struck by gunfire, police said. Lopez was wounded in the arm and hospitalized, while Roane was treated for a leg wound and released.

Gov. Richard Lamm called a news conference at halftime during the Denver-New England professional football game to urge Colorado residents to "not react with lawlessness" to the shootings. Police Detective Doug Hildebrant said the three youths who were shot, along with several others, apparently had decided Saturday night they would "find some Iranians to hassle. Hildebrant said the youths apparently were searching for mailboxes in the apartment complex, where several Arabs live, for an Iranian name. Apartment manager Steve Gerhart, 25, said Shariati, who recently married an American woman, had lived in the apartment for more than a year. He said Shariati had been "very polite. I've never had any trouble with him at all."

Moritzky's mother, Annette, said her son, a sophomore, had not "expressed any concern about this Iranian thing.

"I think Paul was dragged into this," she said. "He was such a wonderful kid. He was a bright student. He was a wonderful football player. And last night he was going to a football party. I really didn't want him to, but. . "He was supposed to be home by midnight. I didn't wait up for him.'

4 dead in boarding house fire

By LINDA WEINSTEIN

PIONEER, Ohio (AP) - Sprinklers could have saved the lives of 14 women killed in a fire that roared through a home for the aging and retarded, says the mayor of this Ohio town. But the owner, who died trying to save a boarder, apparently couldn't afford one, he says - and it wasn't required.

"They'll probably be crucified, the ones that are left," Mayor Bruce Kidston said of the family of boarding home owner Gladis Coats. "Gladis paid her bill this morning.

Twenty-eight people, ranging in age from 27 to 70, were living in the home when fire, perhaps started by a small boy, broke out early Sunday. Those who escaped were not injured, but more than a dozen died.

"Some of them were found in their chairs, some in their beds. Apparently, they were taken by surprise," said David Norris, Mrs. Coats' son-in-law and police chief for this northwestern Ohio town of about 950 people

As townspeople and relatives took survivors into their homes, Kidston, a waterworks contractor, said a sprinkler system "would have saved lives, everything." He said he presumed the Coats' "couldn't afford the $30,000 to $50,000 cost of a sprinkler system."

"My mother-in-law got rock bottom money," Carol Coats said. "She wouldn't ask for more money. The home, called Coats Nursing Home, became a boarding house after state laws were changed in the mid-1970s to require sprinkler systems in nursing homes, said Dr. John J.

Since the facility was not under state jurisdiction, no laws were violated by the lack of safety devices, Ackerman said. Kidston said no local fire regulations had been violated.

Mrs. Coats, in her early 60s, had escaped from the blaze, but ran back into the house to escort two people to safety. Her body was found at the bottom of a flight of stairs, her arms wrapped around a female boarder she was trying to carry out, Norris said. Her husband, Gene, was hospitalized for shock, Norris said.

Kidston had said the fire was started by a 4-year-old boy who lived in an apartment connected to the two-story brick and wood building. But later Sunday, Norris said, "We may have been too hasty. Mrs. Coats had telephoned that the boy set a couch on fire, but Norris said electrical and heating connections could have started the -blaze. The state fire marshal's office, health department and highway patrol were investigating on orders from Gov. James Rhodes

Meanwhile, residents of the town set up a temporary morgue in an elementary school.

"Mrs. Coats ... ran a very needed establishment here," Kidston said. "A lot of people lived here for a lot of years. They had nowhere else to

Ronald Reagan early favorite

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Ronald Reagan, the 10th and presumably final Republican to declare his candidacy for the party's 1980 presidential nomination, is entering the contest as the clear early favorite.

The former California governor, who formally launches his third bid for the presidency on Tuesday, retains a comfortable lead in popularity polls over the rest of the GOP field.

Reagan has kept this lead intact while doing almost no campaigning playing the part of the sleeping giant while other Republican candidates battled for attention in early-primary

But the time for lying low has ended, and the one-time film star is using his declaration of candidacy to kick off a five-day, 12-city campaign

Reagan strategists hope the grueling campaign schedule will dispel any concerns by voters that age may be slowing the candidate down. If he wins the nomination and the race, Reagan, who will be 69 next February, would be the oldest person ever elected president.

His entry rounds out the list of major-party candidates seeking to unseat President Carter. The Democratic field was filled last week as Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Reagan's successor, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., both entered the starting gate.

Carter is expected to formally declare Dec. 4 his candidacy for a sec-

Ms. Brown was not injured in the accident, reports indicated.

Veterans Day 'overshadowed'

By PEGGY ANDERSEN Associated Press Writer

Americans gathered as usual on the 11th day of the 11th month to honor the nation's combat veterans, but traditional activities were overshadowed by recent events in Iran The bitterness of many Vietnam veterans, unders cored by a recent poll showing more than half their countrymen believe they were "suckers" to take part in that conflict, also cast a pall over some observances.

"We've been thrown in the clump like an old pair of shoes," Marine Sgt. Ray mond Puller, 39, said at the Veterans Adminisington, where he is recovering from the 35th operation on a leg shat-tered during his third day in Vietnam in 1971. "And to think I enlist-

The VA commissioned the recent Louis Harris and Associates poll that indicated only 20 percent of the American public believes sending U.S. troops to Vietnam was the right thing to have done. Nearly two-thirds of those polled believed U.S. involvement in that conflict was a mistake, while the remainder had no opinion or were uncertain. Regardless of their position on the war, a majority of those surveyed expressed positive feelings about Vietnam veterans - and the survey showed increased sym-

Doughboys hold usual ceremony

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — A quiet note of sadness was sounded as the 11 remaining World War I Drum and Bugle Corps members celebrated Veterans Day together for the 61st straight vear.

"I think we're getting to the end of our ropes,' said 84-year-old Asa (Ace) Brabant. "Some of us just wear out too easy nowadays.

The World War I Doughboys marked Veterans Day together a day earlier than the rest of the country. That's because the 11 men aged 80 to 89 are traditionalists. So they insist on beginning their Veterans Day celebration on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month - the official end of the war.

And right at 11 a.m. Sunday, the celebration began with services at the Central United Methodist Church.

Several hundred people gathered along Ashmun Street to watch the Doughboys' motorcade of small carts. However, the brisk 30-degree temperature did not deter the enthusiasm of 83year-old flag bearer Frank Lee.

"I'll always enjoy this. This drum and bugle corps has kept some of us alive, believe me," Lee

Even though Brabant expressed fears that the Doughboys may not be a group too much longer. he agreed with Lee when he said the corps "has kept our minds and bodies alive.

Cuban danger remains

Wisely, the Carter administration has announced its support of the junta that overthrew El Salvador's dictatorial president, Carlos Humberto Romero. Now the administration must decide how best to shore up a government facing repeated assaults from the radical left.

JAMES N. ALLISON (1902-1975)

Hardly a day has passed since Romero's ouster on Oct. 15 without urban disorders ranging from violent demonstrations to acts of terrorism and all-out gun battles between Marxists and Salvadoran security forces. Scores of persons have been killed in these clashes. Conditions in the capital city of San Salvador border on a state of

Indeed, El Salvador's Marxist factions seem determined to bring down the new government before it has a chance to implement its promised political, economic and social reforms. Their reasons are obvious enough. Enactment of these reforms would threaten the Marxists' base of support among El Salvador's rural and urban

It is, therefore, fair to say that the prospects for a Marxist takeover in this tiny Central American country diminish in direct proportion to the success and longevity of the politically moderate junta.

This much is plainly apparent and well understood in Washington. What is less clear is how the United States can help the new government to survive both the immediate challenge in the streets and a long-range threat posed by a Marxist tide in the Caribbean-Central American region.

Too close an embrace might well prove counterproductive in a country where even political moderates resent the Yankee giant to the north. Doing nothing, on the other hand, risks the loss of what may be El Salvador's last chance to avoid a Castro-style future.

These circumstances place a premium upon discretion in any security assistance program mapped by Washington. The junta has quietly requested quantities of tear gas to cope with the disturbances in San Salvador. This request should be promptly hon-

Beyond this, the Carter administration would be well advised to await signals from the junta before promoting additional assistance to Salvadoran military and police forces. In a situation as politically charged as that in El Salvador, too much aid can be as damaging as too little.

Economic assistance, currently running at about $7 million per year, should be increased once the new government gains sufficient breathing space to permit planning for an expanded aid program.

Ultimately, the success of these efforts depends on an effective strategy for countering Cubandirected subversion throughout the Caribbean and Central America. So far, the Carter administration is reacting carefully and correctly to developments in El Salvador. But until and unless Washington finds appropriate means, and the necessary will, to contain Cuban influence, countries such as El Salvador will be hard pressed to preserve a democratic option with or without American aid.

CHARLEY REESE Trilaternalists view world in materialistic manner

By CHARLEY REESE Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. - Clear your mind of any notions of conspiracies, assume the best of motives, and then understand that in the 1980 election a major issue will be whether the United States government will be-run for the benefit of the American people or for the benefit of a powerful elite.

A liberal professor, Carroll Quigley, wrote in his history, "Tragedy and Iope," the following passage:

'There does exist, and has existed for a generation, an international Anglophile network which operates, to some extent, in the way the radical right believes the communists act. In fact, this network, which we may identify as the Round Table groups, has no aversion to cooperating with the communists or any other groups, and frequently does so. I know of the operation of this netowrk because I have studied it for 20 years and was permitted, in the early 1960s, to examine its papers and secret records."

Sometimes called the Eastern Establishment, the network he is referring to is a group of immensely wealthy people and their entourage of supporters whose most public organizations are the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commis-

It is documented fact that the Council on Foreign Relations has been the dominant factor in setting American foreign policy at least since World War II. It is also publicly acknowledged that the Carter administration is almost entirely a Trilateral organization with 19 key advisors, five cabinet members, and the president and vice president all members; or former members.

The Trilateral Commission held its first meeting in Tokyo in 1973. It was founded and funded by David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase-Manhattan Bank. He chose virtually all of the members who are bankers, industrialists, media executives, political leaders, and academics from Japan, North America and Europe.

Its stated goal is to encourage policies which lead to interdependence and international cooperation and there is nothing sinister nor disloyal about that or the commission itself.

But, you must understand, that what the Trilateral Commission thinks is best for you and what you may think is best for you are probably entirely different.

The Trilateralists are internationalists. They are not interested in preserving the sovereignty and independence of the United States. Their published writings make it clear that they view independent nation states as out-moded and an impediment to their visions of a new world order.

Secondly, it is also clear that the trilateralists view the world in a strictly amoral, materialistic way. They are interested in stability, order and good business, not it seems human rights. In one of their published statements, the Commission says, "The aim must be effective cooperation beneficial to all countries, whatever their-political systems or stage of development." In other words, they have no aversion to the Soviet Union and its Gulag. Human beings, in their view, are merely economic units. These people, keep in mind, are not your ordinary bankers and busin essests are global, whose wealth is so great they lend money to nations. These are people who are intelligent, highly educated, highly sophistica ted, and who look upon us ordinary niortals in a paternalistic sort of way. Because they are so sure they know what's best for us, they have no hesitation at all about manipulating uss. If you doubt their power to mani pulate us, simply look at Jimmy Carter. Do you think a not very success ful one-term governor of Georgia could really become president without the help of the Establishment. The role of Establishment media in publicizing Carter; Carter and Mondale's me mbership on the Trilaterial Commission: Carter's circle of Establishment advisors at the very time he was publicly campaigning against the Elstablishment have all been document-

Since the days of old J.P. Morgan, the Establishment has always stacked the deck in its favor by supporting candidates on both sides of the fence so that no matter which way the yokels voted, they would elect a candidate acceptable to the elite. In 1976, the Establishment candidates were Carter and Gerald Ford.

So far, I've identified Republican's John Connally, George Bush, Howard Baker and John Anderson and Carter as establishment candidates. On the Democratic side, I'm not yet sure about Ted Kennedy. On the Republican side, I know for sure Phil Crane is non-Establishment and I'm pretty sure Ronald Reagan is not.

It will be fun to see if we yokels can outsmart the elite this time.

This is carrying law bit too far

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - When the wife of a presidential candidate is dragged off by police on the complaint of a 6year-old boy, it is carrying law and order too far even for Phil Crane. Particularly if his wife is the victim.

Crane is an arch-conservative congressman who is second to none in support of his local police. It is his avowed intent to install his wife in the White House -- if he can keep her out of the slammer.

We were astonished to learn from the newspapers that the aspiring first lady, Arlene Crane, had been arrested in the case of a black Labrador dog named Sam. The latter is a frisky but friendly animal who is more disposed to play with children than to bite them.

But on a recent Saturday evening, he allegedly lunged for a tennis ball and grabbed a 6-year-old's wrist instead. So why did the dog catcher pick up Arlene instead of Sam? Here's the tale that we pieced together from the available witnesses: The 6-year-old went crying to his mother, Mrs. Robert Schmidt, about his unhappy encounter with Sam. As evidence of the assault, the boy displayed his wound. The authorities later described it as "a gash about an inch long," with "several puncture wounds." But the first dog catcher on the scene, Karen Deskins, said it was "more like a scratch." It became a matter for official concern, she explained, because "the skin was broken." Deskins, finding the Cranes not at home, left a notice at their house that "an animal allegedly belonging to you has bitten a person." Later that Saturday night, the Cranes returned,

found the notice and telephoned the listed number. They were advised to call the animal warden on Monday.

So far, it was a routine incident. "It happens every day," said Deskins. But on Sunday morning, another dog catcher, Russell Curtis, was working the day watch. He appeared at the Cranes' door, scowling fiercely, a pistol on his hip, at 10:45 a.m. He had come, he said, for Sam:

Arlene Crane, clad in pajamas, blinked at him through a crack in the doorway. "It's not my dog," she said. True, the dog belonged to her 19-year old daughter, Catherine

Mrs. Crane offered to speak to her daughter, to search for the proof that Sam had been inoculated for rables and to deliver the dog on Monday. She reminded the dog catcher that it was Sunday morning.

"I can't help it if your dog bit someone after hours," he growled. Mrs. Crane spoke up in Sam's defense. "He doesn't bite," she said. She refused to surrender Sam, and the dog catcher stalked off muttering something about a warrant. Mrs. Crane summoned her daughter who immediately drove Sam to an animal hospital. It was closed on Sun-The dog catcher returned, meanwhile, with a policeman in tow. "I have got three warrants for your arrest," Curtis announced. Mrs. Crane was incredulous. "I'm not going with you,"she said and started to close the door. The two men threw their shoulders against the door. She screamed.

Her husband, who had overheard the commotion, rushed to the scene. He offered to accompany the dog catcher in her place. Curtis would not submit to the arrest. While she was changing into her clothes, the daugh-

"That's it!" snapped Shaw. He steered her into a back room. "I'm not going to talk to you," he said. "You're going to jail."

The dog catcher took out a pair of handcuffs and started toward her. "It'll take a bigger man than you to put those on me!" shouted the congressman's wife. She then sat firmly on her hands.

Witnesses say the magistrate then ordered: "Call for a matron. Take her to jail." A spokesman for Fairfax County, Va., confirmed that a woman deputy was summoned. But Shaw said he didn't recall any request for a

At this point, the intimidated Mrs. Crane complied with the magistrate's instructions. She had already signed three papers, without reading them, when her attorney appeared.

She returned home in a state of hysteria. Her husband said it took five hours to calm her down A hearing is scheduled this week.

Carter foreign policy is root cause of the Iranian crisis

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - State Department hand-wringing in advance of the predictable attack on the U.S. embassy in Tehran reached a peak Nov. 1, three days before the embassy takeover, when the department rejected a proposal from White House and Pentagon aides that the coming crisis required immediate emergency plan-

A high official replied in effect: "No thanks, we're handling this our own way." But in fact, despite the torrent of anti-American abuse then pouring forth over Iran's national television network — inspired by the Ayatollah Khomeini — American policy was mired in dangerous inaction resulting from strict Carter administration policy guidelines. These guidelines discourage U.S. moves that might be construed as opposing the global left-ward drift and the growing power of the Third World.

This central idea of President Carter's foreign policy, producing systematic American retreat, is a root cause of the Iranian crisis, but it is not confined to Iran; it has helped revolutionize the entire Caribbean area, cost the U.S. important South American allies, and given free rein to Moscow's use of surrogate Cuban troops. Some officials believe it may even have played a part in the assassination of South Korean President Park Chung Hee, because of the non-stop criticism here of Park's dictatorial methods.

Asplayed out in Iran, the drama of Carter's accommodation policy has had particularly demeaning features. The State Department was so worried about Iran's anger over the deposed shah getting into this country for treatment at a New York hospital that it has asked to inspect his medical reports to see how ill he is. The point: to disprove possible charges by the ayatollah that he was admitted to the .S. on false pretenses.

Indeed, before the take-over of the U.S. Embassy high State Department officials privately expressed hope to Americans helping the shah's treatment that a second operation would be performed on the shah. That would be new evidence revealing genuine, not cosmetic, illness. When Khomeini demanded the right to name his own panel of American doctors to examine the shah's medical records at New York-Cornell Hospital the State Department did not immediately say no. The refusal of that extraordinary request came only after the hospital gently suggested that "normal medical ethics" should be followed.

This consistent appeasement of the ayatollah by the State Department, described as "craven" by one highlyrespected American diplomat, is the natural result of a foreign policy based on conviction that anti-American tendencies in the Third World are immutable and must be accommodated. It has made a travesty of the traditional U.S. policy of offering political or humanitarian asylum.

Before the shah went to Mexico last June 10, Tehran's revolutionary government warned his admission would affect official relations. The Mexican government correctly rebuked Iran. It said no country can "dictate our policy.

Moreover, Mexican diplomats say privately that the Mexican Embassy in Tehran was given security reinforcement to minimize the risk of an occupying mob. When the shah's cancer and gall stones finally compelled the Carter administration to admit him to the New York hospital for medical help, the State Department rejected all suggestions to increase security measures at the Tehran embassy Also rejected were last-minute proposals for airlifting embassy employes out of the country. The official reason given was that that would be a show of weakness. The real reason, some officials believe, was that it would have been provocative to the

The dispatch of former Attorney General Ramsey Clark as the president's personal emissary fits the pattern of attempting to deal with the ayatollah on his own derms. But Clark's designation brought no overt criticism; the danger to the American diplomatic hostages was too grave. Conservatives were silent about Clark, who praised the ayatollah after meeting him in Paris last January as a "brave man" for starting the anti-shah revolution.

But even if he succeeds (and the prospect looks bleak at this writing). many politicians worried about American setbacks are not happy about the political symbolism of Clark. Clark visited Hanoi at the height of the Vietnam War with an international group investigating war "crimes": not Hanoi's, but American crimes. These politicians, whose numbers are growing, say Clark is not entirely representative of this country's true feelings about the world, just as they say Carter's accommodation policies are undermining his country every-

Israelis arrest Palestinian mayor

JERUSALEM (AP) - The Israeli government generated new tension in the West Bank by arresting an influential Palestinian mayor for deportation and announcing plans for more Jewish settlements in the occupied territory.

The arrest Sunday of Bassam Shakaa, mayor of Nablus, provoked the resignations of his town council and a group of other West Bank mayors and touched off demonstrations and school and business strikes in the area inhabited by 700,000 Palestin-

The Israelis offered no reason for Shakaa's arrest or imprisonment in a maximum security facility near Tel Aviv. No charges were filed, but the deputy defense minister said the government was preparing a list of offenses for the Israeli Supreme Court to justify his expulsion.

Shakaa's arrest came days after Maj. Gen. Danni Matt, the occupation chief of the West Bank, reported the mayor told him to expect more terrorist attacks like one in which 34 Israelis were killed last year as long as the occupation of Arab lands continued.

Deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori said this was "the straw that broke the camel's back."

Shakaa defied a government order last June and led a demonstration against Jewish settlements in the West Bank. The charge against him for that violation was frozen as a gesture to the United States, but it

Shimon Peres, leader of the opposition Labor Party in Parliament, and other Israeli politicians expressed satisfaction with the government's action against Shakaa. But the Arab mayor of Hebron, Fahad Qawasmeh, said it was evidence of "a clear policy of intimidation."

Adding to the new tensions was the Israeli Cabinet's general policy decision Sunday to establish additional Jewish settlements and enlarge existing outposts in the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Golan Heights.

Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor said the government was considering a Defense Department plan for 31 new settlements and an Agriculture Department plan for 16 new sites. Cabinet sources said the Defense Department proposal stood the better chance of approval. The decision to expand the settlements and Shakaa's arrest also were likely to complicate the negotiations with Egypt and the United States to work out a plan for Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Both the United States and Egypt are strongly opposed to the Jewish settlements in the two occupied terri-

The Cabinet decision to build new settlements apparently was taken to head off the resignation from the government of militant advocates of PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) - The Colorado Civil Air Patrol says the search for a missing plane has shifted from southern Colorado to New Mexico because of the "first real concrete evidence" since the aircraft vanished Oct. 30.

Talk is cheaper than you think.

How to save up to 60% on Long Distance.

If you're one of those who thinks a Long Distance call is a luxury, read on.

The trick to saving money while keeping in touch with family or friends is knowing when to call, and calling One-Plus.

Call between 11pm and 8am.

Before you groan about how you can't stay up late or see straight in the morning, think

You'll be saving up to 60%! If you're a night person, you probably don't start counting sheep until after 11 pm

anyway. And if you've got friends and family to call out west, it'll be a perfectly civilized 9 or 10 pm when their phone rings. If you like to see the sun rise, and you know folks back east, it'll be an hour later on their end.

Call out of state anytime before 8 am and you can talk all day if you want and still save 60%. In-state calls are also greatly reduced. Just remember to dial One-Plus.

Reach out on the weekend and save up to 60%.

Now this is a stroke of good luck: a really cheap Long Distance phone call just when you may want it most. Call any time between 11 pm Friday and 5 pm Sunday and really save. For instance, dial One-Plus and you can call to Atlanta making a new friend

Even on weeknights, save up to 35%.

Sometimes you can't wait for the weekend. Or you don't want to. But you can still save plenty Sunday through Friday from 5 pm to 11 pm. Think about what a bargain it is to call someone 1900 mile's away, talk it up for ten minutes, and only run a tab of about $2.00. There's just no other way to get close to a faraway friend or relative so quickly. so cheaply.

On weekdays it's still a bargain.

Here's a surprise. From 8 am to 5 pm. a Long Distance chat still doesn't cost very much. A five minute call out of state, to anywhere in the continental U.S. is only about $2.50 when you dial One-Plus. Think of how good the sound of your voice would be to a friend (not to mention your mother!) right in the middle of the day.

KNIK, Alaska - Joe Redington, who was talking about dogs, as he always does, was sitting in a room that smelled like dogs and a dog was on a bed in the corner.

He was in the tiny one-room cabin down by his dog lot, where he keeps 150 Alaska sled dogs. Just about every nickel he earns goes to feed them. "I was always doing something with dogs," he said.

Soon, the chilling winds of autumn would give way to the snows of winter, Joe Redington's time. Already he was jumping the gun, hooking up a team of dogs on an old sled, making practice runs over gravel and mud. Time to get started, time to train.

Redington is a legend in these parts, a man who said he once had been given a choice between his first wife and his dogs. He took the dogs.

THIS YEAR, at age 62, Redington took a dog team up Mt. McKinley, the highest peak in North America. It was a 38-day endurance test - for the simple challenge of being the first to do it - but when he talks about it Redington might just as well be describing what he ate for dinner.

He had a tough time on that old mountain, he says. Translated, that means there aren't many around who could have done what he did - or who would have wanted to, for that mat-

Redington is known as the father of the Iditarod, a 1,049-mile sled-dog race from Anchorage to Nome, considered by some to be the last of the great races and one that he helped to

A TEST OF STAMINA for both man and dog team, the Iditarod is an endurance race over some of the most barren land on earth, where a trail can be lost, where a storm can lash out menacingly and make a oncestrong person call it quits. One of Redington's great sorrows is that he has never won this race, not in the six years he has run it. The best he has finished is fifth, and the years keep gliding by for Redington, a tough man whose life has been a string of adventures, whose story is a good, but improbable, movie script. Someone short and stocky would have to play the part, someone who would look natural with dirt under his fingernails, a cap of some sort perpetually atop his head.

REDINGTON LIVES in a clearing on the shores of Knik Lake, once a stop-off on the trail that led to Nome during the gold rush days, about 60 miles outside Anchorage. He and his second wife, Vi, live in a trailer, their temporary home for the last 10 years. Redington has never had time to build anything more permanent between commercial fishing in the summer and sled dogs in the winter.

Not too long ago, he moved two more trailers onto the land, and one is reserved for color slides he has collected over the years. The lot itself is ton made it home on his own. an incredible hodgepodge of trucks, old cars, new cars, cars crammed with odds and ends because there is no other place to put them, spare tires, oak barrels, hub caps, dog sleds and a few dozen cats.

"You know," he said, "one of these days I'm going to have to clean this place up.

Some things are more important than others.

Redington was born in Kingfisher, Okla. When he was 10, he and his father and brother joined a band of gypsies traveling through the central United States. They used to sell what race. looked like fresh-churned butter, but wasn't. It would turn the texture of water when it was placed on something hot. They would hit the small towns and hope they could get out before someone tried to spread it on hot biscuits.

THE THREE ONCE bought a car for $12 in Jersey City, N.J., and crossed the country looking for field work. Twenty-five thousand miles later, they sold the car for $13 in Mexico and began riding the rails.

By the time he enlisted in the Army in 1940, Redington had seen every state except Florida. He also had tried once to get to Alaska, during the Depression, but hadn't been able to raise the $34 it took to book passage out of Seattle.

So he went off to war, serving in the Pacific, and was discharged almost six years later. He moved to Pennsylvania, where his family had settled, and sold farm machinery and jeeps in order to earn enough money to get to

In 1948, he drove up the Alcan Highway. At the Alaska border someone gave him a husky puppy, a premonition of the direction Redington's life

HE HOMESTEADED 101 acres in Knik, moving in when there was nothing but a dirt road back to the property from Wasilla. But after five years he moved to Flat Horn Lake, 35 miles to the west.

"It just got too heavily populated here," Redington said deadpan. Today, Knik is nothing more than a spot in the road.

And all the while, he was learning more about his passion, dogs. He was hired by the Air Force to do rescue work in the mountains, bringing out airplane crash survivors, and the dead, by dog team. When helicopters took over the work in 1957, Redington took up flying.

That is another part of the legend. He has been in so many crashes that he can't remember them all.

Twice has he been rescued. He becomes angry when he discusses those

"I WASN'T LOST. I knew where I was. They didn't know where I was. I didn't want to be rescued," he said. It has been said that Joe Redington would rather crawl on his belly for a month than have help getting out of a tight spot.

In 1975, Redington was forced to crash land in a remote part of the state in subzero weather. The plane was vertical to the ground, nose down, so Redington cut enough trees out of the way to lower the tail to earth. Then he cut a swath of trees for the runway and took off. Almost immediately the engine cut out and he crashed again.

This time, he winched the plane 100 yards to a frozen lake, lowered it down a 12-foot embankment, repaired the landing gear and took off again. Six days after the first crash and three forced landings later, RedingNow, back to dogs.

IN 1958, THE Iditarod dog race was taking shape, but very slowly. It needed someone who could make the race go, and Redington decided to move back to civilization.

The Redingtons abandoned their home on Flat Horn Lake, leaving everything behind, and returned to the original homestead in Knik. Redington began knocking on the doors of just about every business in Anchorage, attempting to raise a purse of $50,000 as prize money for the

In 1973, when the first race from Anchorage to Nome was run, Redington was not among the entrants. He had spent so much time begging for money that he didn't have time to train a dog team. But he has been in every one since.

He watched the race gain respect. In 1977, Redington was given the humanitarian award by the Alaska chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

REDINGTON HAS taken his share of grief along the trail. In 1976, he and his dog team dropped through a river's thin ice. It took him eight hours to dry his dogs and himself and he suffered minor frostbite. He had to quit 131 miles from the finish line.

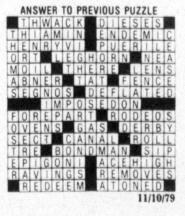

Another time, he slipped off the icy trail and his leg was punctured by a piece of wood. The leg swelled to twice its normal size, but Redington went on for 800 more miles to finish

As for the assault on McKinley, that was an idea that had been stewing in his head for 10 years. This year, he finally put it together.

Redington, as usual, was careful about being too descriptive, wasting words, making it sound difficult. He would just mention that "every night it was 20 below and the winds were 100 m.p.h. or better, so you know it was a pretty good breeze.

WITH HIM WERE famed mountaineer Ray Genet, fellow Iditarod racer Susan Butcher, who lives in the cabin by Redington's dog lot, and photographer Rob Stapleton. There were others but they fell by the way-

Stapleton later described the moment when they made it to safety, bone weary, with Miss Butcher crying from exhaustion in the snow.

Mandarin phrase book leaves much to chance

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent

PEKING (AP) - So many people are going to China these days, the place is getting to be like the Cats-

It's only a matter of time before the Hotel of the Nationalities begins booking big name acts into the ballroom, instead of deputy chairmen quoting production statistics, and hires tumblers to yock it up with the guests in the dining room between the nine-color dimsum dish and the sea slugs with sticky rice.

Already a number of Mandarin phrase books are on the market, dedicated to teaching the tourist "clear and concise Chinese" in a matter of a few hours or between the first martini and the in-flight movie on the way over.

Mastering a few words in Mandarin is not a bad idea before scrutinizing the inscrutable East.

Certainly the first-time visitor to Old Cathay should have in his instant Oriental vocabulary the words bijyou, bing and ping. Don't leave home without them.

Bi-jyou is beer, and Chinese beer is quite refreshing, if a trifle gaseous, after a long morning savoring the delights and statistics of the Evergreen Commune. Bing, as in Crosby, is ice, a necessary ingredient for concocting martinis with thoroughly adequate Chinese vodka. Ping, as in Ping-Pong, is hot water. Getting bing and ping confused can only delay the cocktail hour, as one of our press group, Andy Andersen of the Omaha World-Herald, found out one thirsty night in Kunming. His imprecise diction caused relays of room boys to go shuttling down the hall with tall thermos bottles of boiled water instead of

"Wo chi gou le" is a handy expression to unload on your hosts in self-defense during those endless Chinese banquets, which no tourist can es-

It means, "I have had enough," and can also be used when your guide asks if this morning you would prefer to see a textile factory, an agricultural commune, the revolutionary museum or an experimental sheep castration station

One could also answer, a trifle petulantly: "Ching ni mintyan dzaucheng bu yau jyausying women."

This, spelled phonetically like all the expressions employed here, has nothing to do with jealous women but means, "We would like not to be disturbed until noon tomorrow." In modern, up-and-doing China it is a rather useless expression, since the room boys will be pounding on the door at 8 a.m. no matter what you tell the telephone operator or hang on the doorknob short of an anti-person-

One of the Mandarin phrase books I have at hand has an even more useless expression: "Hau fan-gwar dzai nali?" — "Where is there a good Chinese restaurant?" It is followed, interestingly enough, on the next page by the phrase: "yisheng wode dudz bu shufu" — "I feel sick in the stomach, doctor."

The people in the People's Republic are smiling and friendly but not much on small talk. For openers, you might try "Ling bwo bwo you jyou jin shan de dzau pyan" — "My uncle has a picture of San Francisco," but I never quite figured out where the conversation should go from there.

Perhaps "kwo chyu de sz miao syandzai dou bian chen bwowugwan"-"Buddhist temples are now museums" - might change the subject nicely but at the expense of being trotted off to another museum, where no rock is left unturned or unexplained for the tourist's edifica-

So beware of come-on phrases like: "jintyan chyu tsangwan sywesyau ma?" - "Visit a school today?" and instead politely answer, "wo syuyau che tung yau": "I need some aspirins." The guide's reaction, of course, will be "women de gung gung -chiche dzai wu fen jung nay lai":

"our bus will be here in five minutes. There is no short shrifting the culture in the People's Republic.

"Jer ching cha feichang hau" -'the green tea is excellent" is a charming acknowledgement of the covered mugs of steaming tea that greet the traveler at every pause in the day's program, but one wishes the guide book also had included the question: "How do you get the leaves to sink to the bottom?' One of the phrase books I have collected offers "chi-ywe lyoushr syingchiwu dzai jyan" — "see you Friday, July the 6th," without indicating whether this nails down an actual rendezvous or if it is to be used as one of those all purpose sarcasms like "over my dead body" or "In a pig's eye."

Anyhow, it reminded me that when my brother moved to Massapequa, out on Long Island, a new Chinese laundry opened in the shopping center. The proprietor, lately arrived on the docks in a barrel of soybeans, knew only one word of English! "Thursday." If you turned in your wet-wash in Wednesday night, you got terrific service.

After traveling twice to China, I still find that the most useful phrase of all is the one that I have employed to good advantage in many languages in many climes:

"Wo di pengyui fu chien." My friend will pay.

Kidney transplants not just for young

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would age rule out a kidney transplant for a 52-yearold man? - Fred.

Dear Fred: The May 1979 issue of the NAPHT News, a publication of the National Association of Patients on Hemodialysis and Transplantation, located in Great Neck, N.Y., carries an article about a patient who received a kidney transplant at the age of 64. The title of the article, "You're Never Too Old," would appear to answer your question. A subheading on the article reads: "If any readers are worried about a transplant, I can offer them hope.'

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has been living and working in West Africa for the past six months. She writes that there are many cases of yaws among the young people. Wasn't this disease supposedly on its way to being eradicated? What is yaws and how is it contracted? - Lisa.

Dear Lisa: Yaws is a disease that has made a comeback after being all but eliminated. This children's disease, with its potentially crippling and mutilating effects, is easily curable. Although there is no effective way to prevent yaws by immunization, a single injection of penicillin causes a dramatic cure, with facial and body sores disappearing in a few

According to Dr. Donald R. Hopkins of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, new cases of yaws are most pronounced today in West Africa, although they are probably occurring in other parts of Africa and Asia as well. The disease is caused by a spirochete. which is biologically related to the spirochete that causes syphilis. The two organisms cannot be distinguished microscopically, making it necessary for the diagnosis to be made on the basis of a physical examination and medical history. Unlike syphilis, though, yaws is not a venereal disease. In the late 1950s, as many as 100 million people were thought to be infected with yaws. A campaign, sponsored in part by the World Health Organization, and involving mass treatment with penicillin, eliminated about 99 percent of the cases. Recently, however, there has been a resurgence, and there are now an estimated two million cases of yaws throughout the world.

The spirochete of yaws is spread by skin-to-skin contact, generally among children under 15 years of age. Two to eight weeks after contact, an ulcer usually appears on a leg. Although it soon disappears, within about three months a number of sores appear on the face and body. These, too, disappear after a few months, leaving no scars. Several years later, the disease returns; this time the sores scar and disfigure the skin and cause painful, crippling bone infections.

In addition to the fact that yaws is not a venereal disease, it differs from syphilis in other ways as well. Chronic infection with yaws provides some protection against syphilis because the organizms are so closely related. Untreated yaws, however, rarely result in death because the disease does not damage the arteries, heart or brain, as syphilis often does.

Old election spoiler happy

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) -James Nedley, who ran for first selectman at the age of 95 because "the politicians were making a mess out of my marvelous town," is delighted to think of himself as a spoiler.

Nedley got only 2 percent of the vote in Tuesday's election. But he was ecstatic because "I upset the entire Republican Party.'

The official results showed Democrat Ruth Sims winning re-election by 10,827 votes to 10,653 for Republican Albert Varner Jr.

Nedley, who ran as an independent, got 342 votes, and in an election decided by 174 votes, Nedley's 342 looked important.

"I was the spoiler. There's no question about that," said the long-time Republican. So ebullient was Nedley that he challenged reporters to a fistfight as a demonstration of his physical prowess.

"But they refused. Ha," Nedley said. "Tell me, do I sound like a 95-year-old man?"

Asked when he first became disenchanted with the Republican Party, Nedley said, "During the Roosevelt administration. Reminded that Franklin Roosevelt was a Democrat, Nedley replied, "That's Teddy Roosevelt, m'boy."

Joe Redington, 62, once was told to choose between his sled dogs and his wife. He took the dogs. As winter nears, he is already training the dogs for the Anchorage-to-Rome dog sled race.

Political turmoil snags reserves

By NORMAN KEMPSTER The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - With the trauma of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo still fresh in its memory, Congress vowed in 1975 that the United States never again would be vulnerable to energy blackmail. The lawmakers established a Strategic Petroleum Reserve in which 500 million barrels of oil -later increased to 1 billion barrels would be stored to be used to cushion the impact of any future interruption of supply

If all had gone according to schedule, the government today would have 350 million barrels squirreled away in salt domes in Texas and Louisiana enough to take much of the sting out of Iran's new threats to cut off the 750,000 barrels of crude it ships to the United States every day

But the program is stalled by some of the same political and economic pressures it was supposed to act as a hedge against. For more than a year, turmoil in Iran and political manipulations elsewhere have combined with purely economic pressures to restrict the total world oil supply so severely that reserve purchases were impossi-

And, in its earlier phases, a variety of other problems had delayed development of the reserve.

As a result, the reserve today consists of only 91.7 million barrels of crude, about four months worth of shipments from Iran and less than an 11-day supply if all imports were cut off. The last purchase for the reserve was made Nov. 8, 1978.

THE UNITED STATES and the other major oil importing nations agreed at the Tokyo economic summit last June that no country would buy oil for stockpiles if the purchase would place undue pressure on prices in the world market, a condition that has existed consistently since then.

A White House official said recently that the chances are little better than 50-50 that market conditions ever will permit a resumption of purchases for the stockpile.

Nevertheless, the need for an oil reserve becomes greater every day.

"The United States needs that storage capacity so we aren't forced to make foreign policy decisions (under duress) or try to impose a military solution in the event of an oil disruption," Harry A. Jones, director of the reserve program, said in an interview. "We need to free our foreign policy from the pressures of the oil market.

All of the oil currently in storage is of foreign origin but none of it was purchased directly from a member government of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The Department of Energy said that about 70 percent of it was bought from American companies with foreign sources of supply while the other 30 percent was purchased directly from the Mexican government.

But program officials are not optimistic about the prospects of obtaining foreign oil in the future. Members of OPEC are beginning to talk about stretching out their own supplies of crude by scaling back production rates. This strategy assumes that oil left in the ground will continue to increase in value.

ADMINISTRATION officials concede that it may be difficult to convince Saudi Arabia, by far the largest OPEC producer, to continue pumping more oil than is called for by its own long-range economic plan to offset a worldwide shortage, if the United States is — at the same time pumping crude oil into the ground.

Undersecretary of Energy John M. Deutch recently told Congress that the government is exploring various ways of filling the reserve with oil from domestic sources such as the Elk Hills, Calif., and Teapot Dome, Wyo., naval reserves and the North Slope of Alaska.

The Elk Hills and Teapot Dome fields were set aside years ago to guarantee adequate oil supplies for the Navy in the event of war. Deutch said that by diverting oil from Elk Hills to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the government would build up its capacity to meet a sudden shortage. He said the maximum production of Elk Hills is about 200,000 barrels a day while the strategic reserve could pump up to 3 million barrels a day if it were filled to at least 500 million barrels.

Other countries besides the United States are building up their reserves. Under the International Energy Agency oil-sharing agreement, paritcipating nations are now supposed to have sufficients reserves to meet a 60-day cutoff in supplies, and this requirement is being raised to 90 days. Participating in the program are the United States, Western Europe (except France), Canada and Japan.

While placing domestic oil in the reserve would improve the nation's ability to deal with a large-scale cut in imports, it would do nothing to increase the country's total crude oil stocks, something that filling the reserve from foreign sources would do. The government also could not solve its most pressing problem — the unavailability of oil at reasonable prices - by using domestic produc-

THE UNITED STATES produces only about half the oil it uses so there is no excess capacity. Therefore, if domestic oil is sent to the strategic reserve, the customers who otherwise would have bought that petroleum will be forced to buy oil from foreign

Department of Energy officials said there are additional problems with using Alaska oil for the reserve. The heavy Alaska crude is of such low quality that it would degrade the oil now in the reserve if the two were mixed, one official said. However, he said, there are unused storage sites that could be devoted entirely to the Alaska product.

The strategic reserve plan has proved to be expensive. A total of $6.95 billion has been apropriated so far and some estimates put the ultimate cost at up to $25 billion.

The program has been plagued with pilferage, fraud and questionable relationships between contractors and subcontractors. There also are several government contracts for unloading oil at private terminals that must be paid even though the government has no oil to unload.

Nevertheless, if the program someday were completed at present estimates - $25 billion for 1 billion barrels of oil - the average price per barrel would be $25, well below the current spot market price and just over the formal Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries bench-

"Oil is cheaper now than it will be tomorrow," a White House official said. Thus, the sooner the reserve is filled, the less the oil will cost.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY figures show that the average cost for the 91.7 million barrels of oil now in the reserve was $14.66 a barrel, a relative bargain at today's prices.

But the cost of construction for storage facilities is skyrocketing. The program's annual report said last February that the estimated cost for the first 500 million barrels of capacity has more than doubled since the program began. In 1976, the department estimated construction costs for 500 million barrles at $766 million. The most recent estimate for a slightly increased 528 million barrel capacity is $1.5 billion.

The report attributes much of the cost overrun to a much higher rate of inflation than anticipated. But it also admits that "the (original) plan cost estimates were based on feasibility studies which did not completely describe the required facilities...additional capital costs which were not originally included or were underestimated have been incurred in infrastructure, primarily oil pipeline and terminal facilities.'

There also are a few more reasons why costs are rising:

The property manager for Parsons-Gilbane, the prime contractor for construction of oil-storage facilities at West Hackberry, La., recently. pleaded guilty to stealing and selling 18 truckloads of government-owned equipment, including 253 sections of 40-foot pipe. He is serving a five-year prison sentence for the $400,000 theft. A spokesman for Ralph M. Parsons Co., the Pasadena, Calif., firm that is a partner in Parsons-Gilbane, said that $280,000 of the $400,000 was recovered.

- At the Bayou Choctaw, La., site, according to Department of Energy testimony to Congress, a top official of Parsons-Gilbane, also prime contractor there, accepted delivery of supposedly new valves worth several hundred thousands dollars from a subcontractor. The valves proved to be used and were not suitable. The Parsons-Gilbane official later went to work for the subcontractor. No criminal charges have been filed.

THE PARSONS spokesman said that Parsons-Gilbane required the subcontractor to make good on the contract and that new valves were supplied.

- According to a House energy and power subcommittee staff report -confirmed by Department of Energy officials - the Strategic Petroleum Reserve purchased 367 drill bits but only 90 can now be found. The rest apparently were stolen. The report also said that another contractor approved junking used bits even though they were worth at least half of their original value of $300,000. Some of the junked bits later were leased by the government for another phase of the

- The same House staff report. again confirmed by the Department of Energy, said that Parsons-Gilbane, as prime contractor for a pipeline between a Mississippi river terminal at St. James, La., and a storage site at Weeks Island, awarded a contract at a fixed price of $27 million to Banister Pipelines American. The work was not completed and Banister since has submitted contract termination claims of $31 million - $4 million more than the original price for a completed job.

Concerning the charges of fraud and theft, Jones admitted:

"Our security at first was not good enough. We have good security now. Like any program of this size, there always will be somebody in there pilfering.

"It has been a very complex construction project," Jones said. There is no doubt we could have done it better if we had not been in

In effect, the program was caught between haste and delay. If the storage facilities had been completed sooner, the government might have been able to obtain enough oil to fill it at reasonable prices. But Jones said construction proceeded as fast as pos-

Although no one realized it at the time, the program was destined for trouble because it was a good idea that came too late.

Texaco hits Atlantic gas

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) - Texaco said today it has struck more natural gas off the mid-Atlantic coast. It is the biggest gas discovery reported so far in the Baltimore Canyon area.

The Texaco strike, about 105 miles east of Atlantic City, is the fourth natural gas discovery in a very small area off the New Jersey coast. One oil strike and 16 dry holes have resulted from nearly 20 months of exploratory drilling in the Baltimore Canyon Trough

Texaco said its leased semisubmersible rig Ocean Victory made the discovery in the same 15,699-foot hole where a significant gas strike was made on

The natural gas flowed at a rate of 14.2 million cubic feet a day, by far the highest flow rate of the four gas discoveries in the area, Texaco said.

The first discovery was reported between 15,500 feet and the bottom of the hole. Its latest discovery was found "below 13,-000 feet," the company said.

Texaco said it has not completed its tests of the hole.

Diesel spills from ship

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) -About 100,000 gallons of diesel oil have spilled from a Japanese fishing vessel grounded in the Pribilof Islands since Friday, and some of the oil reached the area's famed wildlife breeding grounds, a Coast Guard spokesman

Lt. Cmdr. T.B. McCarty said Sunday "practically all" of the first 40,-000 gallons spilled either had evaporated or washed to shore near the famous fur seal and bird breeding grounds. He said an estimated 120,000 gallons of oil remained on board the Ryuyo Maru No. 2.

An Anchorage-based Coast Guard operations officer said about 30 oil-covered sea gulls were found dead near Saint Paul Island's English Bay where the ship is grounded

He said there were sightings of about four oiled fur seals and "several" other oiled birds, but he did not know if the animals were dead. Efforts were unsuccessful Sunday to reach anyone on the island via the island's only telephone. A boarding crew attempted to assess how extensive the Ryuyo Maru No. 2's hull and fuel tanks were damaged. However, the crew members were hampered by a break in a refrigeration line which sent ammonia into the ship's hold, he said. McCarty said

m should be solved today Crowley Environmental Services of Anchorage has been hired by the owner of the ship, Hokkaido Fisheries Ltd., to clean up the oil spill and the firm has begun work in Salt Lagoon off Tolstoy Point, McCarty said.

But, he said, cleanup was not as important as assuring that the remaining oil did not spill out of the ship, causing a bigger threat to the environmentally sensitive area.

Various birds and marine mammals use the rocky outcroppings of the Pribilofs throughout the year for nesting and bearing young. Saint Paul Island is the site of the annual harvest of about 25,000 young male Pacific fur seals. The federally sanctioned hunt has been condemned by some environmental groups.

Crippled oil tanker burns

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) - Authorities watched a crippled tanker burn in the Gulf of Mexico today as a ribbon of crude gushing from the vessel washed out to sea.

The oil formed a streak 17 miles long Sunday, but Coast Guard observers said favorable winds spared the coastline from further pollution.

"It's being blown out into the Gulf and it's breaking up out there," said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Richard Griggs. "We're placing additional equipment to try to salvage some of it, and it looks like it might work."

Some oil from the tanker fouled beaches last week after winds shifted and blew it to shore. Authorities have employed containment booms to combat the slick.

Efforts to douse the blaze on the tanker Burmah Agate were abandoned during the weekend.

"This oil has a low flash point, and foam has been useless to put it out," said Paul Preus, a supervisor of salvage operations for the tanker's owner, Burmah Oil Co. of London, England. "So we are using the technique called 'off-loading by burn-

Griggs said commercial fireboats poured water on the tanker early Sunday to keep the structure of the ship cool and minimize periodic explosions.

The Burmah Agate has been aflame near the entrance to the Galveston Ship Channel since Nov. 1, when it collided with the freighter Mimosa. The Mimosa also caught fire, but that blaze was extinguished and the ship was towed to port.

Authorities believe 32 sailors were killed in the collision, but only 16 bodies have been recovered.

The Burmah Agate carried 390,000 barrels of crude oil - a cargo that officials said could fuel the blaze for up to three weeks.

Committee members want to strenghten tax legislation

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) - Eleven of the 20 members of the Senate Finance Committee want to strengthen the "windfall profits" tax that they voted earlier to chop in half.

But, as the Senate prepares to begin debate on the tax, oil-state senators are drafting amendments that would reduce the tax bite even further.

The Senate is likely to start debate late Tuesday on the tax, which would finance President Carter's long-range energy program and aid to lower-income Americans struggling with rising fuel costs.

The House has a light agenda this week. Both chambers were in recess today for Veterans' Day.

Assuming its Rules Committee grants clearance, the House will consider late in the week a version of Carter's plan to hold down hospital costs. The president views that legislation as a major component of the fight against inflation.

Two months behind schedule, the Senate will decide sometime during the week whether to give up its fight for additional spending cuts and agree to the compromise 1980 budget passed by the House.

The House has rejected Senate demands that committees be forced to slash spending by an additional $3.6 billion. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, has not disclosed whether he will surrender and thus end the battle over the $547.6-billion

The "windfall profits" tax on the oil. industry is expected to tie up the Senate for at least a week.

Carter proposed the tax to soak up about half the extra money that will flow to the oil industry over the next decade as a result of his decision to phase out federal price controls on crude oil produced in this country.

The House changed the tax slightly in June and passed a version that from 1980 through 1990 would bring in close to the $298 billion Carter had

The Senate Finance Committee, concerned that a tax that is too stiff would rob the oil industry of money needed for exploration and production, exempted several categories of oil, cutting the revenue projection to about $138 billion.

Several of those exemptions were supported by some of the 11 moderate and liberal Finance Committee members who now are pledging efforts to strengthen the tax once again.

The group, led by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., reported to the Senate that some of the exemptions are not justified because "they do not enhance production and ... they significantly reduce badly needed reve-

The group of five Democrats and six Republicans will concentrate on trying to increase the tax on "new" oil from the 60 percent rate voted by the committee to 70 percent. That would bring in an additional $25 billion. Another amendment is aimed at retaining the tax well into the 1990s. On the other hand, conservatives the Finance Committee will be approved by Congress this year.

Both the House and Senate already have passed legislation to help the nation's poor pay their heating bills this winter. The Finance Committee bill would earmark close to $65 billion for such aid over the next decade.

In addition, the measure would set aside $32 billion during that period for tax credits to encourage conservation and switching from oil to other fuels. Another $15 billion would go for transportation improvements.

Energy experts can't answer policy question

Unable to reach agreement among themselves, many of the nation's leading energy experts have abandoned hopes of making clear policy recommendations on a question that most Americans are confused about and would like help calculations," said Terry in understanding:

Given the choice between a new coal-fired power plant and a new nuclear plant, which is more dangerous? Which poses greater risks to public health and safety and to the environment? The risks can be described, the experts say. But a technical judgment as to which power source is more desirable cannot be made.

This is the conclusion of a panel of 61 prestigious energy experts brought together by the National Academy of Sciences to try to reach a consensus on the question of coal versus nuclear hazards.

After three years of haggling, the group has thrown up its hands and declared the task impossible, according to a stillunreleased draft of their final report, a copy of which has been obtained by the Los Angeles Times.

In the final analysis, the draft says, the public will have to choose between energy sources based on individual values and beliefs about social ethics — not on advice from technical experts.

The experts themselves, one panelist said in an interview, are most deeply divided over coal and nuclear hazards along philosophical rather than technical grounds.

For example, some say this generation should not knowingly impose risks to inhabitants of earth (should there be any) tens of hundreds of vears in the future. Others say we are willynilly doing many things that affect the future in ways we don't understand. Why stop one activity and not another? The nuclear accident at Three Mile Island did not clarify matters.

"It probably affected people's gut feelings,' said Frank von Hippel of the Princeton Center for Energy. "But the debate stemmed from gut feelings in the past.

Three Mile Island came close to meltdown, von Hippel said. "There was a large release of radiation from the core to the containment building, but not to the environment. So the last barrier (in nuclear design) worked. What are the implications of that?'

Some, like von Hippel, are appalled. Others, like Alvin Weinberg of the Institute for Energy Analysis in Oak Ridge, Tenn., are encouraged.

"A Three Mile Island was to be expected," Weinberg said. "The thing people overlook is that it was an accident in which no one was hurt. That's an enormously important thing." Despite such differences, the experts agree the risks of different energy sources can be analyzed and looked at side by side. And while coal and nuclear certainly are not the only energy options available to the American people, they loom large in the immediate future because utilities believe they are proven power-sources while alternatives, such as solar and conservation, are

"There are no definitive answers in risk assessment," said John Holdren, professor of energy and resources at the University of California Berkeley. "It's a matter of comparing apples, oranges, bananas and grapefruit."

Uncertainties in calculating risks are enormous, Holdren said. The best estimates can be 500 times too high or 500 times too low. Some risks — such as the threat of climate modification due to buildup of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere - cannot be assigned dollar costs. (Many experts fear such a buildup from expanded coal use could alter earth's temperatures, leading to melting of polar icecaps, the drowning of coastal cities, and dislocations in agricultural zones.) Uncertainties about the future are comby uncertainties about the present. The effects of chronic radiation are fairly well know. But less is known about the long-term impacts of coal emissions or about the effects of low-level radiation. Nevertheless, estimates can be made. William Ramsay of Resources for the Future in Washington, D.C., a foundation-supported research group, said that the total number of fatalities expected - if U.S. electrical requirements for 1975 had been supplied by coal alone would range from 200 to 9,000. The wide range reflects uncertainties in air pollution effects on human health Many more illnesses would occur: 100,000 to 10 million asthma attacks, 10,000 to 1 million cases of lower respiratorytract disease in children. 60,000 to 6 million cases of chronic respiratory disease in adults. Expected deaths from nuclear-reactor accidents, using the same assumptions, could lead to 50,000 deaths, in the socalled "worst-case" accident. Fatalities stemming from low-level radiation depend on how far into the future the impacts are calculated. If effects are tallied over many centuries to come, there might be from 30,000 to 200,000 "excess deaths" - deaths directly attributable to the use of nuclear power in this coun-

To get a handle on the task of risk assessment. experts examine each energy source through its total "fuel cycle." This means they look at what coal does to human health and the environment from the time it is when it is transported and burned, and when its wastes are buried. The same can be done for uranium in the nuclear-fuel cycle. Using this method. some interesting comparisons emerge. For mining accidents, numbers are known Coal is clearly more hazardous than nuclear fuel. Ten to 20 times as many miners die in coal-mine accidents than in uranium-mine accidents, although safety records are improving in both fields.

Because, pound for pound, less uranium is required than coal to generate the same amount of electricity, coal turns out to be more destructive: In making enough elec-

ple, coal injures 40 to 100 miners, uranium 10 to "For every 1,000 coal miners who die of black lung disease, 50 uranium tricity for a million peo-miners die from lung cancer. For every 200,000 acres of land mined for coal, only 20,000 are mined for uranium, nationwide

During transportation, coal is more hazardous than nuclear primarily because more material has to be moved. There are numerous collisions and deaths each year at railroad crossings.

As for processing, uranium is more hazardous and costly than coal. Increased cancer and mutation rates are byproducts of uranium milling operations.

Things get murkier when nuclear and coal reach the power-production phase of the fuel cycle and affect health.

But coal seems to be more hazardous, given the present state of knowledge. Energy experts worry a lot about coal emissions. Not enough is known of the smallest particles - the ones that escape even the best control technologies - when they penetrate deep into human lung tis-

Some coals contain large traces of uranium and releases radon, a dangerous gas, during combustion. Toxic heavy metals are also released. Coal emissions are mutagenic - that is, they produce genetic changes in cells - and carcinogenic - that is, cancer-producing. The National Academy of Science reports said that burning coal may well cause more cancers per unit of energy produced than nuclear energy production, but no one knows for sure.

It is known that air pollution from coal combustion increases respiratory illness and diseases. But correlations are not well understood.
