Suit dismissed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Friday dismissed a suit by 16 conservatives in Congress who challenged the Carter administration's expenditure of money to win approval of the SALT II treaty.

U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. said the six senators and ten House members had no standing, or right to sue. The judge said they failed to meet the standing test because they could not show they were directly harmed by the administration's action.

The lawmakers said the administration's public information program to influence senators subjected them to artificially induced pressure to ratify the SALT II treaty.

Verdict misread

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Misreading a jury's verdict, a judge announced in his courtroom Friday that a jury had awarded $720,000 in damages to the wives and children of three men killed here five years ago while repairing an oil pipeline.

Minutes later, the judge said he had made a mistake. The jury had awarded damages, but the absence of a finding that West Texas Gulf Pipeline Co. was negligent will bar recovery of the money, District Judge J. Neil Daniel said.

When the judge corrected himself and polled the jurors to determine their intent, attorney Warren Burnett of Odessa turned to the stunned wives and turned his thumb down.

"We get nothing, absolutely nothing," Burnett said solemnly.

The wives and children began to cry as Daniels dismissed the jurors.

All families involved are collecting the maximum Workman's Compensation benefits of between $100,000 and $150,000 per family.

Reactor shut down

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A reactor at the Peach Bottom nuclear plant was shut off Friday after an electrical malfunction, a utility spokesman said.

The shutdown proceeded normally and there was no release of radiation, said Ron Harper, a spokesman for Philadelphia Electric Co. which operates the plant.

A momentary loss of power to various instruments and controls at the plant created a "temporary instability in reactor water level and pressure," Philadelphia Electric said in a prepared statement.

The plant, near York, is owned by Philadelphia Electric, Public Service Electric and Gas Co., Atlantic City Electric Co. and Delmarva Power & Light Co.

The unit is expected to return to service this weekend. Another reactor unit at the plant continued to operate as usual.

Position filled

DENVER (AP) — William E. Hallett, 37, a Chippewa Indian, was installed Friday as Commissioner of Indian Affairs by James A. Joseph, undersecretary of the Department of the Interior.

Hallett becomes the 42nd commissioner, a post which has been vacant since the position of assistant secretary of Indian Affairs was established in 1977.

Iran reports attack by Iraqi forces

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iraqi forces firing heavy artillery attacked an Iranian border post Friday but withdrew a short time later, Iranian reports said. Iranian revolutionary guards killed or wounded a number of infiltrators, Tehran Radio reported.

Iraqi diplomats at their embassy in Kuwait denied the report, with a spokesman calling the Tehran broadcasts "fabricated and untrue." Official Iraqi news media in Baghdad made no mention of Iran's claims, but the spokesman in Kuwait said, "The report is designed to draw attention away from the dilemma in which the policy of the Iranian ruler finds itself."

An Arab League spokesman at the United Nations in New York backed Iran's claim. League representative Clovis Maksoud told a news conference he would describe the incident "as unfortunate border skirmishes that have already been terminated."

Tehran Radio implied that the United States masterminded the attack because America had "failed in the face of Iranian resistance" to gain the release of 50 American hostages held in the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

A later broadcast quoted the Foreign Ministry as saying the Iraqis drove three miles into Iranian territory but then pulled back and peace was restored in the area. A Tehran Radio Turkish-language broadcast said several persons were killed and several were wounded in a clash between revolutionary guards and "a group of armed people" from Iraq, but did not say if it was referring to the same border incident as the Foreign Ministry.

Relations between the two countries have been strained for years, with each accusing the other of border provocations.

Reports in southwest Iran said the attack was launched against the small border post of Shalamchah, 12 miles northwest of the city of Khoramshahr in Iran's southwest corner.

The heightening of tensions with Iraq added to the problems of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini as he sought to overcome restiveness among Iran's minority groups and to deal with a possible showdown over the holding of the American hostages.

Khomeini ridiculed President Carter's "futile" attempts to organize an international economic boycott to pressure Iran into freeing the hostages, who spent their 41st day in captivity Friday.

But Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who flew home from Europe on Friday, said he was encouraged by the "solidarity" of U.S. allies in support of the American plan for an embargo of some kind.

Four Americans killed in Turkey

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Unidentified terrorists fired on a bus carrying five Americans home from the Cakmakli NATO munitions base Friday evening, killing three civilians and one serviceman, authorities said.

One was dead at the scene and three died later in hospitals, bringing to seven the number of Americans slain in political violence this year in Turkey.

The state radio said the four were shot at 5:45 p.m. (9:45 a.m. CST) in Florya, a resort town near here, by a terrorist who fired from a Turkish-made sedan and then fled the scene.

U.S. officials in Washington said the car had been following the bus, and that the Americans were shot as they tried to flee on foot. The Anatolia news agency quoted police officials as saying there were four terrorists, one of them a woman.

The serviceman was a non-commissioned officer and the three civilians worked for Boeing Services International, the U.S. officials said. They were unable to account for the fifth American on the bus.

The victims were identified as Elmer Cooper, Robert French, Jim Clark and James Smith by the Anatolia News Agency. It said Clark died at the scene of the shooting, Smith at the American Hospital in Istanbul and French and Cooper at the Cerrahpasa University Hospital.

The Cakmakli Base is a North Atlantic Treaty Organization munitions depot run jointly by U.S. and Turkish military authorities several miles away from Istanbul.

A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Ankara said further details on the victims would be withheld pending notification of next of kin.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Thomas Reston condemned the killings "in the strongest terms. Civilized people everywhere are outraged by such cowardly acts of violence."

Alan Flanigan, at the State Department's Turkish desk in Washington, said the U.S. Ambassador had received a formal statement of regret from Turkey's deputy prime minister and acting foreign minister, Ekrem Ceyhan.

He said Ceyhan called the ambassador and told him "that he personally, and the Turkish government, were deeply grieved, that they regretted this terrorist action had taken place, and that the government had given urgent instructions to all Turkish security organizations to search out and find the terrorists who acted against the four American citizens."

Political violence has plagued Turkey in recent years, and observers have said the killing of more than 2,500 people by rightist and leftist factions led to the defeat this fall of Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit by Suleyman Demirel.

Shah's spleen enlarged; Surgery unnecessary

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Shah of Iran is suffering from an enlarged spleen, but his condition is not critical, according to two New York doctors who flew here Friday to examine him.

Robert Armao, the shah's official spokesman, said the doctors had ordered a non-surgical course of therapy.

Drs. Benjamin Kean and Hibbard F. Williams of New York Hospital examined the shah at Lackland Air Force Base, where deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi has been recuperating for nearly two weeks from cancer surgery. Kean and Williams operated on the shah in New York in October.

Both doctors returned to New York, but said they would "make further evaluations from time to time."

Earlier Friday, Kean presented an affidavit to State District Judge Albert White saying he had been advised that in the past few days the shah's condition had deteriorated.

The shah was flown to Lackland to continue his recuperation nearly two weeks ago. Militants in his homeland are holding 50 Americans hostage, demanding the former monarch be returned there for trial.

Lawyers for the shah are fighting a subpoena to have him give a deposition in a civil suit in Fort Worth involving Bell Helicopter and its former employees.

The 69 former Bell employees suing the helicopter firm once trained Iranian pilots. They claimed they were fired after they organized a union to enforce the terms of a contract to train Iranian military pilots.

The Bell case, filed in 1976, has been dormant since 1978 and the shah's lawyers claim that the subpoena, served on the shah last week in San Antonio, was only an annoyance. They said he has no evidence to present and is not a party to the suit.

Reports that the 60-year-old former monarch had taken a turn for the worse led Williams and Kean to fly down to Texas. Williams, chief of medicine at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, was said to have been requested by President Carter to examine the shah.

There also were published reports that the shah might have to undergo additional surgery.

Newest increases in oil price hurts ailing housing market

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest oil price increases should further hurt an already-reeling housing market, sending short-term interest rates higher and making mortgage money even tougher to come by, a group of housing experts said Friday.

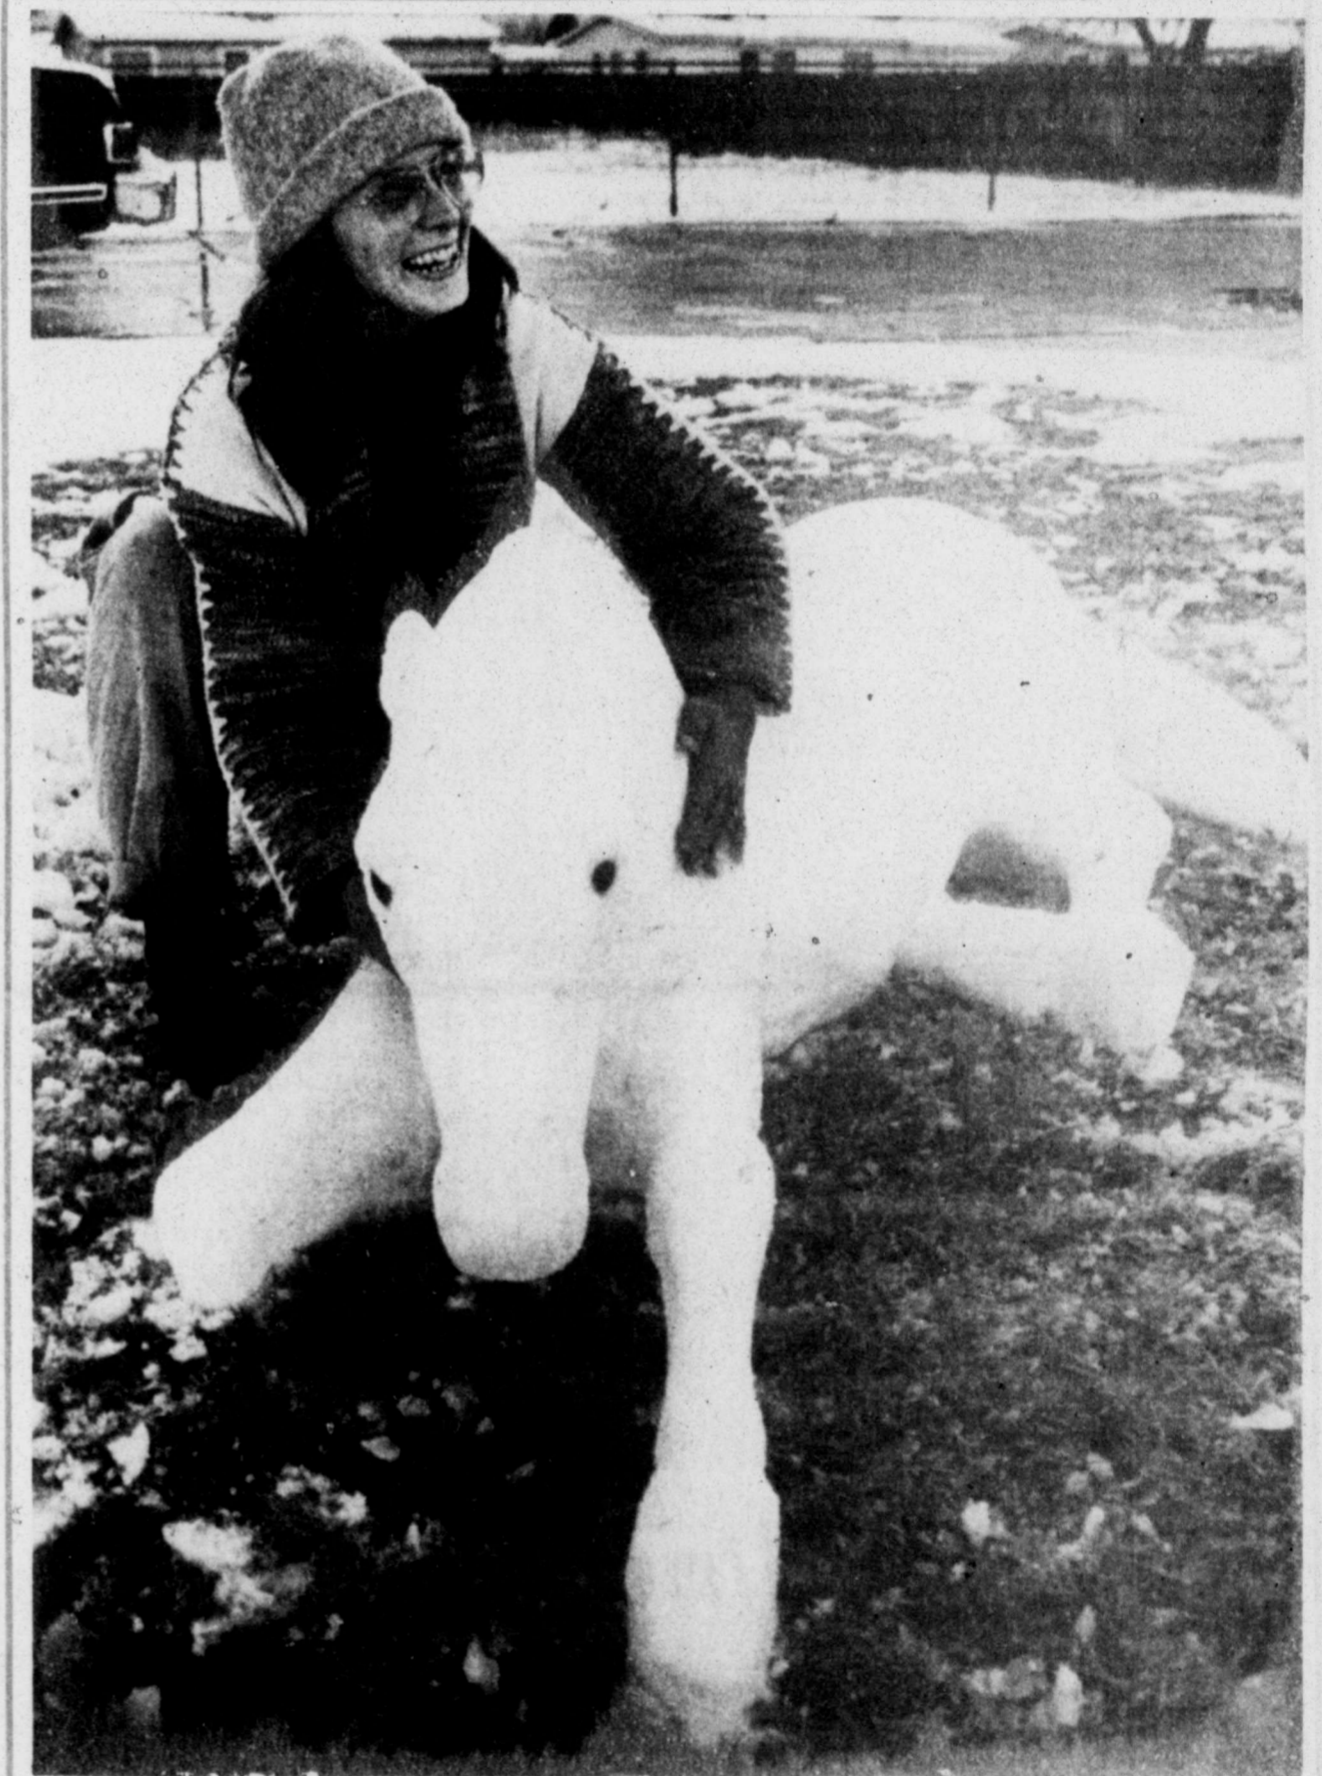

The number of houses on which construction is started could fall lower than predicted and homes will become even less affordable amid continued inflation, the experts agreed.

They spoke at a conference on the outlook for housing sponsored by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board that came a day after four members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — including Saudi Arabia — announced a per-barrel price increase.

OPEC meets in Caracas, Venezuela, next week and even larger increases by other members of the cartel could emerge.

The escalating oil prices will fuel inflation and should compel the Federal Reserve Board to maintain its tight money policies, said Jay Janis, Home Loan Bank Board chairman. That policy has forced short-term interest and mortgage rates to record levels since Oct. 6.

A tight money future is even more likely in light of galloping gold prices and new reports on unemployment and wholesale prices, Janis said. The government reports show rising wholesale prices and a declining unemployment rate in November — both signs the economy remains stronger than expected.

Leslie D'Allesandro gives her snow-sculpted artist produced two ponies out of Thursday night's horse a hug around the neck Friday. The Midland snowfall. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Her artwork 'snowy, showy'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Let it snow, and Leslie D'Allesandro will put aside her art pencil and paper, wrap up snugly, duck outside and pick up a shovel. And with her bare hands, she'll transform ordinary snow into sculptured works of art.

Friday afternoon, she turned two piles of snow into pony-size snow horses gracing front yards.

"As a matter of fact," said Ms. D'Allesandro, as she viewed her latest creation in her new-found friends' front yard, "sculpture is not my forte, and I only do it when it snows...and it doesn't snow that often in Texas."

She's a Yankee from New Jersey "where it snows a lot," and her forte is what she calls "color pencil on paper," which she terms "representational art."

"Some people call it graphics, but I like to call it 'fine art.'"

In a matter of about two hours, the 28-year-old artist made frigidly fine horse art out of the snow with her son's shovel and her bare hands at her house on Midland's west side, where she has a gallery. And in another two hours, she carved another well-dimensioned snow horse at Richard and Johni Smedley's place just a few blocks over.

Her arty yard work was reminiscent of her childhood days, when snow art was a seasonal happening for her. In Texas, it's not.

Why does an artist toil over something so temporal as snow art? Tomorrow, or in another day soon to pass, it'll be gone.

"Art is fleeting," said the snow sculptor, as if explaining the "why" of her equestrian creation. "I don't know the reason why I do it. Must be because I get a lot of reaction from the kids."

Last winter, Ms. D'Allesandro turned grounded snow into a Doberman pinscher look-alike.

Just like this season, she got rave reviews, from neighbors and passers-by, over her outdoor art: from "That's something! to 'romantic!'"

And the most frequently-asked question that's posed to her is: "How did you do it?"

Simple. "It's like the old cliché," she mused: "I got this old pile (of snow) and carved away everything that wasn't a horse."

Done.

Just after she had formed the snow horse in her front yard, Ms. D'Allesandro was invited to create a similar shape by Smedley, who happened by her neighborhood, liked what he saw and especially liked it for his 5-year-old daughter, Evan, who's flying from Beverly Hills, Calif., this Sunday for a Christmas-time visit with her dad and step-mom.

The lass has never before seen snow, "she like horses," and Smedley wants to surprise her...if only the horse doesn't lose its shape and turns into a glob of slush before dughter arrives. "I hope it lasts 'til Sunday," said Smedley, who appreciates the arts. "I may build a tent over it" to help it weather the sunshine and relative warmth of the day.

Yet another reason he commissioned the seasonal sculptor was for art's sake.

"I'm a patron of the arts, and I don't divulge those things (fees)," he said, but the sculptor confided that her price was an affordable $20. It was the first time she had been paid to sculpt in the snow. She instantly became a professional sculptor and, to boot, gained new friends.

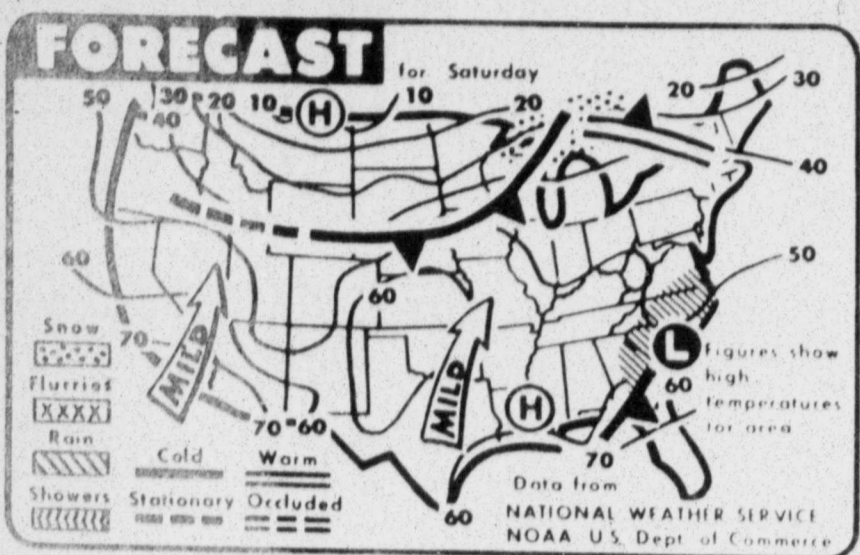

Too, she's doing more than her part to help this niche of America appreciate art inside and out.

With pencil on paper, she'll draw "anything and everything, and satisfaction is guaranteed," Ms. D'Allesandro pledged.

"You want it drawn (or carved out of snow), and I'll draw (or sculpt) it. I don't do Rembrandt or Picasso," she allowed, "but I want everybody to have art in their home and not pay a lot of money for it."

And if time and snow permit, she might help you deck out your front yard with horse art or whatever your pleasure might be.

Prime lending rate continues fall

NEW YORK (AP) — The prime lending rate continued to fall Friday, with Citibank cutting its rate to 15 percent from 15 1/2 percent.

But analysts said interest rates may level off for a few weeks before resuming their decline early next year.

Clements urges care with bonds

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday Texas cities should exercise great care in issuing revenue bonds to raise money for low-interest home loans to their citizens.

allowing them to issue bonds and lend the proceeds to homebuyers. Interest rates could be as low as 9 percent, compared with the current 11 1/2 percent.

Christmas dance begins at 9 p.m.

The 10th annual Cowboy Christmas Dance featuring Nashville country-western artists Norman Wade and Tag Lambert will be held from 9 p.m. today to 1:30 a.m. Sunday in the Midland County Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80 East.

On another matter, Clements differed with Comptroller Bob Bullock's prediction that a decline in the economy could cut state revenue and force the Legislature to pass new taxes in 1981.

"I am not in accord with him that we need a tax increase or that the surplus will be as small as he says," said Clements, who two weeks ago predicted the 1981 Legislature would have a surplus of "several hundred million dollars."

Figures reveal 'weaker' economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nosedive in automobile production during November resulted in an 0.5 percent decline in overall industrial production last month, an indication of a weakening economy, government figures showed Friday.

The Federal Reserve Board reported that production of autos and light trucks were down 8 percent, "reflecting lower sales and large dealer inventories."

The Commerce Department said the decline in auto output will continue well into 1980.

The drop in industrial production, following an unchanged performance in October, could mark the beginning of a slide toward the recession that many economists have been predicting for months.

However, a one-month decline that is attributed primarily to weakness in the auto industry is inconclusive.

The Federal Reserve said auto assemblies were running at an annual rate of 7.2 million in November, 20 percent below average during the first half of the year.

There also was bad news for the auto industry in a separate Commerce Department report which said auto sales will decline further in 1980 because of a slowing economy and consumer resistance to large and mid-sized models.

"Quite apart from fuel supply concerns, economic factors are also exerting a depressing influence on passenger car sales," the department said in an outlook report for the industry.

It said the "current high rate of inflation is depleting the real purchasing power of the average buyer," while consumer indebtedness already is high.

"Assuming the recession will be mild and petroleum supplies will be stable and adequate, car sales are expected to continue their decline through the early months of 1980 and then recover slowly during the balance of the year," the report said.

The department projected 1980 auto sales at 9.8 million, down from 10.6 million in 1979 and 11.3 million in 1978. Domestic-made car sales are projected at 7.7 million auto sales year, down from an estimated 8.3 million in 1979 and 9.3 million in 1978.

The report said the share of the market held by imported autos should decline slightly in 1980 to 21.4 percent of total sales, down from a record 21.7 percent in 1979.

While the decline in industrial production in November was a negative measure of the economy, some other statistics for November — especially a 1.8 percent rise in retail sales and a drop to 5.8 percent in the unemployment rate — reflect underlying strength in the economy.

The consensus among most economists is that the economy will sink into a moderate recession in the first quarter of 1980 at the latest, and that it will last until mid-year, after which a slow recovery will begin.

One factor contributing to the recession forecasts is the steady upward rise in world oil prices, which increased about 70 percent in 1979.

Several major oil-exporting nations announced price hikes of more than 30 percent Thursday.

But there were some encouraging statements from Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, who said in Brussels that the $6-a-barrel increase by his country was the limit for the time being.

He also said the Saudis will continue to pump oil at a peak level of 9.5 million barrels a day "at least through the first quarter of 1980," a level the Carter administration says will go a long way toward helping ensure an adequate oil supply next year.

Wilmington 10 leader awarded early parole

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Ben Chavis, leader of the Wilmington 10 firebombing defendants and the last to win release from prison, was paroled Friday two weeks ahead of schedule. He said he would continue to try to prove his innocence.

Gov. Jim Hunt said he granted parole for Chavis because of his "excellent record" while an inmate at Orange County Prison and "to permit him to be home with his family at Christmas."

Chavis, 31, who spent nearly four years in prison, had been scheduled for parole Jan. 1, 1980.

After his release, Chavis, wearing a gray business suit with a gold and silver cross around his neck, went to Raleigh-Durham Airport, where he boarded a flight for Washington, D.C.

He was joined at the airport by his mother, Elisabeth Chavis, a sister, June Davenport, and his three young children.

Chavis told his supporters that he would continue to seek to prove his innocence and to fight for civil rights.

"The quest for freedom is a long struggle," said Chavis. "We're going to march again and we're going to keep on struggling until freedom is realized."

He had said previously that he would refuse parole and would settle only for a pardon. He said Friday, however, "I've changed my mind... because I feel like I can do more for the civil-rights movement outside prison."

Chavis said he would have no comment on Hunt. He said he did not know how long he would be on parole and how it was up to the state Paroles Commission. He said no restrictions were placed on his travels or other activities.

DEATHS Roy Newcom

BROWNWOOD — Roy Newcom, 74, of Lake Brownwood and formerly of Midland, died Friday in a Brownwood hospital following a brief illness.

Survivors include his wife; a son, Doyle Newcom of Lake Brownwood; a daughter, Mrs. Spencer E. (Peggy) Smith of Midland; a sister, Mrs. Ella Carver of Marianna, Ark.; three half sisters, Esther and Margaret Davis, both of Arkansas, and Ruby Smith of Ohio; a half brother, Boyd Witherspoon of Sandusky, Ohio; four grandchildren and one great-granddaughter.

Meanwhile, the nation's second largest bank, Citibank, announced a reduction in its prime lending rate to 15 percent, down from 15 1/2 percent, indicating some further easing of the upward pressure on interest rates.

Other banks were expected to follow suit, in auto production, and overall production of durable goods materials, including steel, was off 1.3 percent.

He joined his supporters in signing "We Shall Overcome," the anthem of the civil rights movement.

"I feel good. I'm glad I'm out of prison," Chavis said. "No, I don't feel bitterness. I am the same Ben Chavis I was when I went to prison."

Chavis, an ordained minister of the Church of the Black Messiah in Wilmington, completed a masters at Trinity at Duke University Divinity School while in prison. Hunt cited his straight-A record in granting parole.

Officials of the United Church of Christ in Washington said Chavis would resume his work as director of the Washington office of the church's Commission on Racial Justice.

Chavis' release marked another milestone in the case of the Wilmington 10, whose imprisonment brought worldwide protests from those who considered them political prisoners.

The nine black men and one white woman were convicted in 1972 in connection with the firebombing of a white-owned grocery store in Wilmington during racial violence in 1971. They entered prison on Feb. 2, 1976.

The sky was to begin clearing off early today, and temperatures in the 50s today should "do in" any remaining snow in the area. The low tonight is to drop into the mid-30s. Sunday's high is to be near 60.

Only a trace of moisture fell over the city Friday.

Friday's high temperature reading was 38 degrees, which was no match for the record high of 77 degrees for Dec. 14 in 1933. The record low for a Dec. 15 is 17 degrees in 1951. The overnight low here was 32.

Fair, warmer weekend likely

Weather in the Midland-area promises to be fair, somewhat warmer and minus snow and sleet this weekend.

Only slush and a few patches and mounds of snow, including the remains of snowmen, may be left to remind Midlanders of the snow and sleet that visited the area late in the week.

Neither snow nor freezing temperatures are in the weekend forecast, said a weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

MC offers spring course in anthropology

If you have ever read a National Geographic magazine, heard of Margaret Mead, or read about the Neanderthal man or the Midland man, then you know something about the field of study called anthropology.

Midland College is offering area residents a chance to expand that knowledge with a course in Cultural Anthropology during the spring semester.

The course, which is to be taught by Carol Ward, is being offered on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 8:20 p.m. The course carries three hours of college credit.

"If you are interested and curious about other people, their history and customs, then you will have an opportunity to find out how these studies are done in a logical and scientific manner," Ms. Ward said.

Anthropology is the comparative study of mankind in relation to the distribution, origins, evolution and races of human beings, the cultures they have created, both past and present, and their physical characteristics. The anthropologist gathers, analyzes and reports data on such things as the human physique, social customs, language, folklore, physical environment, culture and artifacts.

The Midland College course will concentrate on examining the basic concepts of culture by using examples of people from all over the world. Culture will be traced from the primitive hunter and gatherer to modern industrial cultures.

Students will be challenged to examine and analyze their own cultures and determine their own relationships to that culture. The course includes films and opportunities to gain first-hand knowledge of data-gathering techniques.

Ms. Ward, a Lee High School graduate, earned BA and MA degrees in anthropology from Texas Tech University. She has done research in Meso-American archaeology and Native American Studies. She conducted a cultural field study of the Navaho Indians of the Kayenta, AZ, area while living on the reservation in 1977.

She also has served as a Social Services planning consultant to the Uintah Basin Association of Governments in Roosevelt, Utah.

In addition to her part-time teaching assignment with Midland College, she is CETA Management Information System Manager for the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

Persons interested in the course should pre-register for the spring semester at the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building not later than Jan. 3. Registration is Jan. 9-10 with classes beginning Jan. 14.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 106 or 251.

Relatives of Peace Corps hostage hopeful Salvadoreans will free her

ROXBURY, N.J. (AP) — Relatives of a Peace Corps volunteer held hostage by leftist militants in El Salvador are standing by in their Morris County home, in frequent contact with the Peace Corps and the U.S. State Department.

Gary Loff, brother of 24-year old Deborah Loff, the hostage, said Thursday: "I'm just praying and hoping for the best."

The Roxbury High School student said he was "shocked" when he heard of the plight of his sister.

Loff said a Peace Corps representative told his mother, Carol Loff, about her daughter's captivity Wednesday afternoon. Shortly afterward, Mrs. Loff received another call from the U.S. State Department.

The teen-ager declined to discuss conversations his mother had with the governmental agencies, his sister's reported condition or anything about her Peace Corps service, except to say she worked in an open air market.

"She loves it (the work) very much, and she loves the people very much,"

he said. Miss Loff was being held with 12 unidentified persons in office buildings in San Salvador by militants demanding a reduction in municipal taxes, a spokesman for the group said Thursday.

A woman identifying herself as Miss Loff told The Associated Press in a telephone call: "I am all right." She explained she and the others, identified only as Salvadoreans, were seized Wednesday by February 28 Popular League militants occupying administrative offices of the capital's two principal food markets.

Miss Loff was a 1972 graduate of Roxbury High School. The Daily Record of Morristown reported she worked seven years at a bank in this Morris County community where employees described her as a pleasant co-worker.

Another brother, Roger, 21, an English major at Western Washington University, was on his way home from Bellingham, Wash., Loff said.

Her father reportedly lives on Long Island.

The districts were created by the Legislature during its recent session.

The School Tax Assessment Practices Board will become the State Property Tax Board at the first of the year.

Oil tax compromises accepted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Friday took a giant step toward passage of the "windfall-profits" tax by accepting a compromise package that is likely to result in a tax totaling $178 billion.

The compromise, worked out in private negotiating sessions over three days, was announced by Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and quickly accepted by the Senate on a 78-13 vote.

Approval of the compromise effectively ended a filibuster by Republicans and oil-state Democrats, and it likely will allow Senate passage of the tax bill as early as Saturday.

Just three hours before the compromise was announced, it had appeared the Senate might not be able to complete work on the bill before the Christmas holidays. After a third effort to limit debate on the bill had failed, tempers flared and some Republicans were accusing Byrd of poor leadership.

But with the compromise, the mood changed abruptly, and the Senate erupted in a flurry of congratulations and praise. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., manager of the tax bill, credited Byrd with a "truly magnificent and noble job."

The Byrd amendment is likely to be the last major change in the tax bill before it passes the Senate. That would mean a tax on the oil industry in the 1980s of $178 billion — still considerably below the $277 billion voted by the House.

The Byrd amendment would impose a "minimum" windfall tax on three categories of oil that the Finance Committee had voted to exempt to encourage increased oil production.

That would result in a 20-percent tax on increased production from "tertiary" recovery methods, such as chemical injection; 20 percent on "heavy" oil, found mostly in California, which is so thick that extra expense is required to pump it, and a 10-percent tax on newly discovered oil, which generally is any from fields that were discovered after 1978.

The tax on the first two categories would apply to future price increases above today's level of $17 per barrel. On newly discovered oil, the tax would apply to prices above $20.

The Byrd amendment was hammered out after the third effort of the week to break a filibuster had failed by a 56-39 margin — four votes short of the 60 required.

The filibuster had begun after a test vote showed the Senate was likely to accept Byrd's original amendment. Several alternatives had been considered in private negotiations but none could win acceptance.

Republicans had insisted through the negotiations that no tax at all be imposed on newly discovered oil on grounds there could be no windfall since the cost of finding and producing such oil could not be determined. They settled for a 10-percent tax.

The 10-percent tax, said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., would cost producers of newly discovered oil — which would sell for $30 a barrel or more — only about 60 cents a barrel. The tax would be applied on price increases that remain after state severance taxes are paid.

The windfall tax is part of President Carter's plan to reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil by encouraging greater domestic production. His decision to remove federal price controls on U.S. crude oil will cost consumers $1 trillion over the next decade.

The misnamed tax would not apply directly to profits but to price increases above current levels. Like any tax, it would ultimately reduce profits of the oil industry.

The compromise was reached and accepted only after lengthy sessions which disrupted the holiday season. Tempers were wearing thin.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., hinted that private negotiations were not succeeding because each Democratic senator was, in effect, given veto power over any compromise even before GOP members were given a chance to consider it.

When Byrd delayed a roll call so Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., could have time to vote, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, cautioned that such "abuse of Senate procedures" would make it difficult for Republicans to provide the degree of cooperation necessary to keep the Senate operating in the closing days of the session.

And for the second time this week, Byrd found his personal leadership under attack from a Republican. Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., announced that he would oppose Friday's effort to limit debate in protest of Byrd's parliamentary tactics Wednesday night.

Packwood said that action "could be a dangerous trend" for minority's rights in the Senate.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., had assailed Byrd earlier in the week as a "mealy-mouthed" senator with no character who proved that "a wheel-dealer does not a leader make."

Gas tax, rationing considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Predicting new gasoline shortages, President Carter says he thinks he can curb consumption, possibly through rationing or a higher gas tax, "without hurting our economy."

Forecasting reduced supplies of petroleum at ever higher prices, Carter promises a decision "before long" on a new plan to discourage the nation's voracious appetite for gasoline.

The president made the statements at a meeting Thursday with representatives of the Gamett newspaper and broadcasting organization. The White House released a transcript Friday.

Noting that "gasoline is obviously the easiest energy supply to curtail as far as waste is concerned," Carter said this can be done by rationing, a tax hike or unspecified "voluntary action on the part of governors and states."

Reporting that "we are exploring opportunities," Carter promised a decision "before long — I don't know the time schedule yet."

But he expressed confidence, without elaborating, that "we can do it without hurting our economy."

His remarks could be taken as a hint that the president leans toward rationing rather than a federal tax hike of up to 30 cents a gallon — an increase some economists argue would have an unacceptable inflationary impact. Or he could be thinking of re-bating the higher tax in a way that might reduce the effect on living costs.

Noting that many oil-producing countries talk of reducing rather than increasing oil production, Carter said U.S. gasoline consumption has dropped recently by 1 percent or 8 percent.

In saying larger reductions are needed, Carter offered succor to backers of a higher gas tax by reporting that higher prices at the pump provide twice as much incentive for conservation as officials had been estimating.

There was a guess earlier that if you increase the price of gasoline 10 percent, you would only have a 1 percent reduction in consumption," he said.

With the shorter and shorter supply in prospect, there is no doubt in my mind that prices will be going up. It would be a mistake for me to mislead the American people.

"I don't know of any instance where there is an inclination among the Arab producing countries to increase production. So we are going to see shortages, and it's a very serious problem for us in not having an adequate national energy policy."

Odessa College receives TESCO grant to study solar water heater

ODESSA — An $11,000 grant earmarked for funding further study about how to construct and operate solar water heating has been donated to Odessa College by the research and development group of Texas Electric Service Company.

Presentation of the funds was made Thursday by W.M. (Bill) Griffin, Odessa Texas Electric manager, to James O. (Jim) Reese, president of the Odessa College Foundation for Excellence, who was instrumental in the college receiving the grant, and to Dr. Phillip Speagle, Odessa College president.

With the funds, the college plans to purchase four solar water heating units, one for the Student Union, another for the gymnasium, a third for the child development center and a fourth for the cosmetology lab.

In addition, 11 metering devices will be purchased with the money. Approximately half of the metering devices will be used on campus to meter the amount of energy being generated by the solar unit, and the amount of backup energy in the form of electricity needed.

The other metering devices will be available to individuals in the community to use in measuring the effectiveness of solar units that are installed either in homes or in businesses, according to Norman Witcher, who heads the solar energy program at Odessa College.

The solar water heating units will be installed by students in the college's solar power program, explained Witcher.

Odessa College is launching a two-year, associate degree program in solar power beginning with the 1980 spring semester. The college has been offered one course in solar power the past

1 1/2 years and the class has proven popular.

In explaining the reason for Texas Electric's contribution to the college, Griffin said, "Texas Electric is vitally interested in learning more about solar energy and its feasibility. The company wants to learn about all forms of energy conservation and solar is one of the possibilities."

"But put it this way," he added. "There are more ways to get ahead than working from 8 to 5 and I'll bet there are some working people here right now."

"Are there spies here?" said attorney Michael Abramovic, who is attempting to line up Chicago attorneys behind Daley. "None that I can identify. We don't run in the same circles."

"Who knows what that woman (Mrs. Byrne) will do next?" said one masked man who claimed to work for the federal government. "After watching her in action the last couple of weeks, I certainly wouldn't put reprisal above her."

Since her election, Mrs. Byrne has fired a number of political appointees left over from the administration of Michael Bilandic, who followed the elder Daley as mayor and was defeated by Mrs. Byrne in last February's Democratic primary.

Daley, son of the late Chicago mayor, is running as an independent for the state's attorney's office and organizers of the party Thursday handed out masks to those who might fear retribution from the current mayor, Jane Byrne.

Only a handful of the guests took advantage of the disguises, but some several said the masks could come in handy later in the campaign.

Now it's like Dawk's feet over broken glass

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Darryl Dawkins, my colleague talking at the columnist's craft, has been mentioned unfavorably in dispatches in connection with the busting up of a couple of public playpens. When not authoring elegant essays which appear every Tuesday in the Philadelphia Journal, a sports publication, the Dawk — to use both his pen and playpen name — moonlights as center for the Philadelphia 76ers in the National Basketball Association. The erudite phrase slinger happened to be pirouetting basketball nearby when basketball backboards were shattered within a recent week of each other in Kansas City and Philadelphia.

from the halls of Maynard Evan High School in Orlando, Fla. DAWK THE Dunker, according to the statisticians in the 76ers' office, is only 21 years old. Had he chosen the degree-conferring groves of Academe over the high-paying locker rooms of the NBA, he would be a junior now, ringing up big scores with the literature professors and the local glaziers.

Long may he reign, even if he does give Larry O'Brien and coliseum janitors around the circuit a pane every now and then.

New satellite to be launched

NEW YORK (AP) — Plans are under way to launch a replacement in 18 months for Satcom III, the $20 million communications satellite that mysteriously vanished in orbit, RCA said Friday. The company said in a statement that a complete search for the missing satellite could take several weeks but that so far "contact has not been regained."

RCA said it would seek authority from the Federal Communications Commission to launch a spare satellite now under construction. It will be at least 18 months before a replacement can be launched, the company said.

Mulligan's Stew

complicity in either incident, which he seemed to regard as acts of God or perhaps, in his poetic soul, like something along the lines of T.S. Eliot's rats feet over broken glass. "The commissioner is the police," Dawkins conceded after their little tete-a-tete. "He makes the rules. I've got to abide by them. It could be I just don't know my own strength. But seeing the scratches that the glass made in the floor, I think I'll cool it for a while."

BUT THEN he added cryptically, "The dunk lives on. It's still with us."

Like his playing style, the Dawk's prose style is robust, vigorous and colorful, characterized by the fast break and the shock, sock ending after the manner of Tom Wolfe, Hunter Thompson and other exponents of the Wham, Pow, Zowie, school of letters.

In one of his early columns, Darryl drolly described himself to his readers as "The Master Blaster of Total Disaster who always gets what he's after."

DURING the off season, his literary flights of fancy took him to the imaginary planet of "Lovetron" for a series of columns. "Here I am surrounded by 18 beautiful brick-house Lovetronians who

THE FANS' term for such a mind-blowing, glass-showering happening is the "slam dunk." NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, definitely not amused, termed both incidents dangerous to the players and destructive of league property. The Dawk, whose literary specialty is rhetorical rodomontade, which he employs like the dunk, called his Kansas City caper the "Chocolate Thunder Flying, Robinzine Crying, Teeth Shaking, Glass Breaking, Rump Roasting, Bun Toasting, Wham Bam, Glass Breaker I Am, Jam." In addition to which, he assured the commissioner it was all unintentional.

DAWKINS has yet to come up with a suitable sobriquet for the busted furnishings on the home court, but he may be a bit more elliptical in his prose after being called in on the carpet in O'Brien's office for an hour and a half chat.

No punitive action was taken against the ponderous, playful prose stylist, who at 6 feet 11 and 252 pounds may be the biggest thing on the literary scene since Gilbert Keith Chesterton or Hilaire Belloc or both. In a stern memorandum to NBA owners and general managers, however, O'Brien announced that henceforth players who cause backboards to shatter "will be ejected immediately from the game and, absent the most extenuating circumstances, be automatically suspended without pay for at least the next regularly scheduled

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE Make Finesse Work

By Alfred Sheinwold. "Finesse work for other people," South gumbled after he had misplayed today's hand. "Why not for me?" South captured the queen of spades with the ace and led a diamond to dummy to return a heart, losing a finesse to the king. Back came a diamond to dummy's queen, and South lost another heart finesse. West returned a heart this time, and South won with the ace. South took his diamonds and led a club toward the queen.

FOURTH FINESSE West took the king of clubs and returned a club. South's last chance was to take the ace of clubs and try a finesse with the ten of spades. This fourth finesse lost to the jack, and South wound up down one.

South should take three rounds of diamonds before trying the first heart finesse. West wins, but cannot make a safe return. Any return but a diamond gives declarer a free finesse, and South has taken all of the diamonds out of the West hand.

In Europe, even Santa would need permit to chop tree

By RICHARD BLYSTONE

LONDON (AP) — Authorities are cracking down so tightly on Christmas tree rustlers that if Santa Claus carries a fir in his sleigh when he swoops through Europe, he had better have a permit for it.

From Robin Hood's Sherwood Forest in central England to the sparsely forested mountains outside Athens, authorities are on the lookout and in several countries are spot-checking cars and trucks.

Anyone carrying a fir tree in a vehicle in Yugoslavia needs a certificate of origin. In Austria, the certificate is a lead seal; in Czechoslovakia it is a bill of sale.

Holiday evergreens are big business these days and forest pirates brave arrest to reap bundles on the black market. In some cities even public parks are plundered of trees by night.

In Sweden, where cutting your own tree used to be a holiday tradition, a hapless bandit skids his truck off the road and winds up buried under 200 stolen evergreens that he might have sold to the city-bound for $15 each.

Policemen on horses rove farther than ever into the depths of giant Sherwood Forest to thwart robber bands whose aim isn't giving to the poor.

A Moscow newspaper laments that otherwise "solid and respectable people" seem to have no morals when it comes to holiday trees.

"I don't know how it must feel to sit beneath a Christmas tree that's been stolen," says a spokesman for Germany's Agriculture Ministry.

He said tree stealing is apparently too big a bother in prosperous Germany, but for those who crave "that Mother Nature experience" some forest areas are set aside to cut-it-yourself for a small fee.

But elsewhere forestry authorities are alarmed at the plunder of the forests.

Denmark's Private Forest Owners Association reports tree thievery is on the rise — and you cannot even leave logs lying around in the woods any more as the spiraling cost of oil heat makes a rich market for bootleg firewood.

Authorities in Czechoslovakia complain tree thieves lop off only the pointed tops, leaving bare stumps behind.

In Greece the loss of 30,000 fir trees every year poses a special danger of erosion to the thinly forested mountains. Authorities have assigned 130 guards this year to Mount Parnes, which rises temptingly close to the outskirts of Athens.

Russian police and student volunteers are patrolling the dense forests around Moscow to catch hatchet-packing private enterprisers seeking New Year trees for the black market.

Muscovites illegally chop down 300,000 firs for New Year trees yearly — for private use or sale on the black market after approved trees have sold out. The fine — as little as $4.65 — is less than the cost of a tree.

Immunity granted; Deadly agent, equipment recovered

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Authorities recovered stolen equipment containing a highly toxic cancer-causing concentrate by promising a burglary suspect he would not be prosecuted in the case, an assistant district attorney said Friday.

"I had to make a decision based on whether the chemical (aflatoxin) posed a threat to the community at large — and on talking to experts, even a small amount could have caused the death of many, many people," said prosecutor Richard Howell.

"So there was no question about the priority of human life over prosecuting him for the crime," he said.

The suspect in the case told police where they could find the stolen equipment, and it was safely recovered Wednesday. He was not charged with burglarizing the A&L Plains Agricultural Laboratories. But he was not set free either, Howell said.

"We have him on several other, unrelated charges," the prosecutor said. He declined to name the other charges pending against the man, who was not identified. A police spokesman said the contaminated equipment taken in the Nov. 30 burglary — a blender and a glass developing tank resembling a small aquarium — apparently had not been used.

Both contained the cancer-causing chemical aflatoxin in concentrations 50,000 times as potent as the level determined to be hazardous by the federal government. The substance is a byproduct of mold that grows on grain, according to Art Carnrick, manager of the A&L lab.

"There have been cases of horses eating grain with 150 parts per billion and dying," he said. "We had some in the stolen developing chamber that was 1 million parts per billion."

He said government inspectors order grain shipments with more than 20 parts per billion destroyed. The lab was using the substance in research aimed at controlling it.

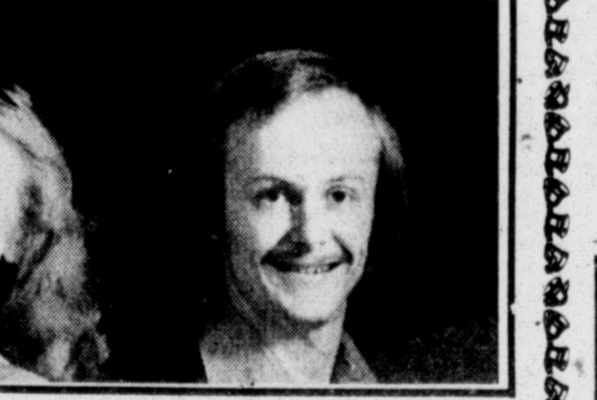

Police spokesman Bill Morgan said authorities feared the burglar might sell the contaminated blender and "expose innocent people." He said the equipment would remain highly toxic even after washed with soap and water.

Morgan said the prime suspect had been under investigation — but not arrested — since the break-in when lab officials suddenly realized the contaminated blender and tank were missing.

Magic runs in the Johnson family, but it hasn't been running evenly for Evelyn Johnson, sister of Los Angeles Lakers basketball star Earvin "Magic" Johnson. Evelyn, who set scoring records last year at Lansing Everett High School, is not having an easy time with the University of South Carolina basketball coach Pam Parsons. "Evelyn's going through the transition from high school to college ball and the 30-second starting clock makes a big difference, she's still finding her place and she's had some good games and some not-so-good games, but that's typical for a freshman." Still, the 5-10 rookie is South Carolina's second-best scorer at 11.7 points per game for the 13th-ranked team in the nation. And Parsons said Johnson has trimmed down from 218 pounds at the start of fall practice to 198, with 180 as her goal...

School Board of Education because he missed more than one third of the semester last spring, thus violating a local rule. He was absent 63 days. Jones appealed the decision to the D.C. Superior Court but Judge Shellie Bowers sustained the ruling Thursday, saying: "If I allowed this injunction, Jones might believe he is just a basketball player and doesn't need to go to school. That would be tragic. He may be jolted by this decision now but I hope in the long run the resolution I make will help undo some of the harm already done to him." Oregon grid program comes under investigation

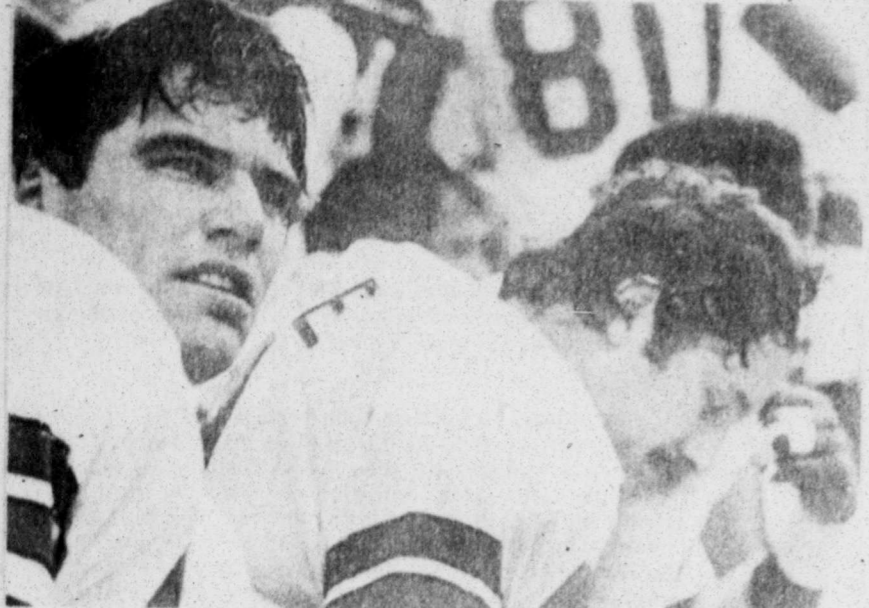

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Officials at the University of Oregon say an assistant coach made arrangements for one of the school's football players to take a controversial extension course through a private Kansas university. But Athletic Director John Caine said head coach Rich Brooks has assured him there were no arrangements made to allow the player to get credit for the course without doing any work. The player, freshman Paul Perez, has admitted receiving credit for the course although he did nothing but send the school his $75 fee. Caine said assistant coach John Becker arranged for Perez to take the course by correspondence. Two other Oregon players, Mike Honeycutt and Rock Richmond, took the course, entitled "Current Problems and Principles in Coaching," which was offered in a garage and lounge at Los Angeles Valley College in Van Nuys, Calif. No attendance was required for the course.

Longhorns head SWC All-Decade

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The University of Texas landed seven spots on the Southwest Conference football team for the 1970s in a poll of sports writers, broadcasters, former coaches and administrators.

The Longhorns also led in the individual voting with Russell Erxleben, 57 of 59 votes for punter of the decade, running back Earl Campbell as the top offensive player with 56 votes, and offensive tackle Jerry Sisemore also gaining 56.

Houston's Wilson Whitley narrowly won a close race for defensive player of the decade. The Cougar tackle had 16 votes to 14 for Texas A&M line-backer Ed Simoni. However, Simoni was the top vote-getter on the defensive team with 52.

The offense included three current and two former SWC record holders, Campbell, Rice quarterback Tommy Kramer, and SMU's Emanuel Tolbert at wide receiver. Tolbert recently nipped TCU's Mike Renfro as the SWC career pass reception leader and running back Dickey Morton of Arkansas was the SWC career rushing leader until Campbell broke his record in 1977.

The offensive line included Arkansas guards Leotis Harris and R.C. Thielemann, and tackles Sisemore and Bobby Wunsch and center Bill Wyman, all of Texas.

Defensive backs provided the voters with the easiest choice, Texas A&M's Pat Thomas and Dave Elmendorf, and Texas' Johnnie Johnson, each totaling 40 or more points, and Texas' Raymond Clayborn, who had 30.

The four defensive linemen included Texas' Brad Shearer, Whitley, SMU's Louie Kelcher and Baylor's Roger Gore.

Texas A&M's Tony Franklin won kicking honors over Arkansas' Steve Little and Erxleben.

Pokes, Steelers picked to reign once again

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

The Dallas Cowboys and Pittsburgh Steelers will be champions once again when the sup sets on Sunday. And as midnight approaches on Monday, the San Diego Chargers will also wear a crown.

Oh, one more thing—the apple in Tampa Bay's hand will remain there and the dream of a division championship will pass the Bucs. Kansas City's victory over the Buccaneers, by the way, isn't the Upset Special. It's Baltimore's over the New York Giants.

Last week's 8-6 mark put the record at 129-78, 623, heading into the National Football League's final regular-season weekend.

The Picks:
PITTSBURGH 35, BUFFALO 13: Had the Steelers won last Monday night, the Bills might have had an outside shot at a victory. Now the question is whether they'll survive. Pittsburgh knows that a loss will give Houston the American Conference's Central title, regardless of what the wild-card Oilers do ...

HOUSTON 27, PHILADELPHIA 20: ... and the Oilers will ride another 100-yard game by Earl Campbell and some fancy Dan Pastorini passing past the wild-card Eagles. Philadelphia's only hope for the title in the National Conference East is a Dallas Washington tie ...

DALLAS 31, WASHINGTON 23: ... and that's about as likely as the Cowboys' cheerleaders turning ugly overnight. No matter how important Mark Moseley's last-second field goal four weeks ago really was, the Cowboys still think it was an insult and will respond accordingly.

SAN DIEGO 38, DENVER 17: The points the Chargers didn't get in Denver last October they'll get this time as they clinch the AFC West and bust the Broncos out of the playoff picture ...

OAKLAND 30, SEATTLE 20: ... and deal the AFC's other wild card to the Raiders. Like Dallas, Oakland believes it has a score to settle, namely the Seahawks' run-it-up score 13 weeks ago.

KANSAS CITY 20, TAMPA BAY 10: The Bucs, to put it simply, are choking. Getting victory No. 1 a few years back wasn't as hard as getting victory No. 10 now. The Chiefs are going for a .500 season.

CHICAGO 21ST, LOUIS 14: Call it the Miracle of the Midway.

BALTIMORE 24, GIANTS 17: Throw out the names. Throw out the numbers. Look at the letters. AFC vs. NFC. That's a mismatch.

SAN FRANCISCO 26, ATLANTA 20: So is the 49ers' wide-open offense vs. the Falcons' wide-open defense. It's a fitting finale for O.J.

CLEVELAND 28, CINCINNATI 21: The Browns may be disheartened, but they're not so down that they can't at least try.

DETROIT 17, GREEN BAY 14:

New Mexico governor enters Lobos' scandals

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—

The University of New Mexico Athletic Council pondered the future of suspended head basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger Friday as the governor called on the university to resolve the burgeoning problems of its athletic program.

The Athletic Council, which is to make recommendations to university President William E. Davis on Ellenberger's status, was meeting behind closed doors.

Ellenberger was not present, but his chief recruiter, Manny Goldstein, attended a closed council session even though he resigned Thursday.

Ellenberger and Goldstein were suspended Nov. 30 in the wake of an FBI investigation into possible mail fraud and bribery involving alleged doctoring of a junior college player's transcript.

Guard Craig Gilbert was ruled ineligible. And further investigation by the university a week later led to five more basketball players being declared ineligible after school officials learned the students were credited with a course they never took. Another player, who claimed he took the course, was suspended pending further checks of his academic records.

UNM forfeited one basketball victory as a result, but the university's athletic woes spread Thursday to its football team.

University officials said the Lobos would have to forfeit their six 1979 football triumphs because a tight end was academically ineligible.

Marvin Johnson, UNM vice president for student affairs, said the end was one of three football players who had been enrolled in the same course that caused problems for the basketball squad—'Current Problems and Principles of Coaching Athletics.'

The course was offered by Ottawa, Kan., University on the campus of Los Angeles Valley College in Van Nuys, Calif.

Gov. Bruce King said Friday that New Mexico citizens "are insisting that we take action immediately, and that they want an investigation to determine why it was allowed to develop."

The governor said "the board of regents and the president of the institution are the ones who should be monitoring it. They are the ones who must move very rapidly to control these kinds of situations."

King said it seemed that some people at UNM have lost sight of the fact that "the basic operation of the university is its academic program."

"The athletic operation is supposed to be the caboose, not the engine," Goldstein, asked if he felt he was being treated unfairly, said, "Yes, by the press and everyone else."

He also said, "I don't think they've ever tried to find me and find out the truth."

Lehigh, E. Kentucky clash in NCAA finals

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Lehigh's ball-control winged-T offense and a tough defense go against high-scoring Eastern Kentucky in Saturday's NCAA Division I-AA championship game in the Tangerine Bowl.

Lehigh, quarterbacked by scrambling Rich Andres, is seeking its second national championship in three seasons. It took national honors in Division II in 1977.

Eastern Kentucky's offensive-minded Colonels bring a 10-2 record into the game against a team which allowed the fewest points per game among Division I-AA schools.

Lehigh also is ranked in the top five in every single defensive category.

Eastern Kentucky defeated Nevada-Reno 33-30 in a semifinal game in the division playoffs last week on a 17-yard field goal by David Flores in overtime.

Lehigh, of Bethlehem, Pa., downed Murray State 28-9 in the other semifinal playoff game.

Eastern Kentucky, from Richmond, traces much of its success to 22 Floridians on its roster. Flanker Jerry Parrish, a sophomore, is the single most explosive force in its offensive arsenal.

Parrish was its top pass receiver with 22 catches for 481 yards and scored seven touchdowns.

U.S. takes 1-0 lead in Davis Cup net finals

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Corrado Barazzutti twisted his right ankle early in the second set against Vitas Gerulaitis and was forced to retire in the opening match of the Davis Cup tennis finals, giving the United States a 1-0 lead over Italy Friday night.

John McEnroe was heavily favored to give the Americans a 2-0 lead later in the evening when he faced Adriano Panatta.

Gerulaitis had rallied from a 2-0 deficit to beat Barazzutti 6-2 in the opening set of the competition at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium. However, Gerulaitis trailed 1-2 in the second set when his opponent went down.

Barazzutti, who trailed 15-30 in the fourth game, injured the ankle moving to his right near the net attempting to reach a passing shot.

East meets West in Garden State

EASTRUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — California and Temple reached Saturday's Garden State Bowl — pick one — (a) via different routes, (b) the same way.

You're right whichever one you picked.

The first answer is correct because the Golden Bears of California had to fly 3,000 miles from Berkeley while the Owls of Temple just bused 100 miles or so up the New Jersey Turnpike from Philadelphia.

But both really got here on the strong right arms of their quarterbacks, Temple's Brian Broomell and Cal's Rich Campbell, who combined for 35 touchdowns this season.

Under the National Collegiate Athletic Association's pass efficiency formula, Broomell finished second while Campbell was seventh.

Translated into English, Broomell completed 56.1 percent of his passes — 120 of 214 — for 2,103 yards with 22 touchdowns and 13 interceptions while leading Temple to a 9-2 record and a No. 20 national ranking. Campbell hit on 67.1 percent — 216 of 322 — with 13 TDs and 12 interceptions in Cal's 6-5 season...and the five losses were by a total of 24 points.

"I've no one to blame but myself for not finishing first," Broomell said. "I lost it in the Penn State game. That was the best rush we saw all season. In the other games, I just stood in the pocket and took my time. This time, I should have moved up through the pocket, but I stayed too long."

Broomell was only 4-of-16 against Penn State, which defeated the Owls 22-7. Temple's other setback was a 10-9 loss to Pitt's Eastern champions. Cal was beaten by Michigan 14-10, Oregon 19-14, UCLA 28-27, Southern Cal 24-14 and Washington 28-24.

Both teams are likely to display plenty of different formations. "We try to hide what we are doing and catch our opponents in the wrong defense," says Cal Coach Roger Theder. Meanwhile, Temple's Wayne Hardin calls his attack a "smorgasbord" offense because Broomell is likely to do a little bit of everything — option, dropback, sprint-out, etc.

The second annual Garden State Bowl hopes to better last year's crowd of 33,000 which saw Arizona State defeat Rutgers 34-18. More than 54,000 tickets have been sold for 76,000-seat Giants Stadium and Bob Mulcahy, chief executive officer of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, predicts a crowd of around 60,000 "with a good break from the weatherman."

The forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-40s, above normal in the Northeast for this time of year. It was 52 for last year's game.

The Garden State Bowl will be televised nationally (Midwest, 1 p.m., EST), with delayed telecasts in New York and Philadelphia. Temple's only other bowl appearance was on Jan. 1, 1935, in the first Sugar Bowl. Cal has been in eight Rose Bowls, the last on Jan. 1, 1959.

Robinson still thinking USC No. 1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach John Robinson said Friday his undefeated but once-tied University of Southern California Trojans could win the mythical national collegiate football championship on New Year's Day.

The Trojans, who finished the regular season 10-0-1, play Ohio State in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1.

The Buckeyes were No. 1 in the Associated Press poll at the end of the regular season, finishing with an 11-0 record, the same as No. 2 Alabama.

"I think the voters will watch the games and vote for the team that looks the most impressive," Robinson told newsmen the day after his club opened Rose Bowl training. "Hopefully, we'll do a good job, win the game and someone will vote for us."

He discounted reports that offenses in the Big Ten were better this season and that Ohio State would have a better passing attack than other conference teams which have appeared in the Rose Bowl.

"There is not much difference between the Ohio State team we will play and the Michigan teams we have played," he said, referring to the 1977 and 1979 Rose Bowl games when his Southern California clubs beat Michigan 14-6 and 17-10.

He termed Buckeye quarterback Art Schlichter outstanding "but to assume Rick Leach of Michigan was not a fine quarterback is ridiculous. He was one of the best of the past 10 years."

Schlichter finished fourth in the Heisman Trophy voting and Southern California's Paul McDonald was sixth.

"Our basic job before Christmas will be getting ourselves ready," said Robinson of his practice plans. "After Christmas, we will concentrate on the Ohio State team."

He said he didn't plan to put many new players into the offense because, "usually when you put them in late, they don't work."

Anthony Munoz, a 280-pound offensive tackle who tore ligaments in his left knee in the 1979 season opener, will return to the Trojans line-up.

"It's a day-to-day thing," said Robinson of the big lineman. "He's being fitted with a brace and should be able to go all out."

Don Mosebar, who took over for Munoz on the offensive line, was hurt during the regular season and won't be able to play in the bowl game. Munoz is expected to start.

A possibility remains that offensive end Vic Rikishani will be off the injured list and able to see action against the Buckeyes.

"He worked out Thursday and I thought he was trying to do too much so I slowed him down," Robinson said.

He termed the return of Munoz, who gives up a 1980 season of eligibility to play in the Rose Bowl, "a great emotional thing for all the other players. They all love him."

Asked the hardest job in getting a team ready for the Rose Bowl, Robinson said, "The most difficult of all is combining fun and business. To take the fun away would be to rob the players. We tell the kids to have fun and do the best job possible in getting ready for the game."

"This has the potential of being one of the better games of recent years."

Syracuse fears McNeese in Independence Bowl

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Syracuse's Ernie Duplechin, whose Cowboys compiled just the second perfect season in school history in his first year as head coach. "It's pretty hard to judge them."

"We know they have fine talent at quarterback, running back, wide receiver and in the offensive line, but I'm no more worried about them than Lamar (34-25 losers to McNeese). I feel like we've got to play the best we can and hope that it will be good enough."

Close to a 55,000 capacity crowd will watch the game in State Fair Stadium, as well as a viewers on an Atlanta-based sports network.

At halftime, bowl sponsors will present Bob Hope with the Omar Bradley Spirit of Independence award, named for the nation's only surviving 5-star general. Last year's winner was John Wayne.

The weather at kickoff was expected to be partly cloudy and far milder than the 26 degrees and snow that chased the Orangemen from Syracuse on Monday.

On offense, Syracuse will be led by sophomore Joe Morris, who has rushed for 1,372 yards on 238 carries, and by the running and passing of quarterback Bill Hurley. Hurley has run for 813 yards on 293 carries and has completed 79 of 158 passes for 1,276 yards and six touchdowns.

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Doug Buffone, who ranks fourth in National Football League history in number of games played at linebacker, said Friday he will retire after the Chicago Bears complete the current National Football League season.

"I'm going to retire," Buffone said at a news conference at the Bears' training facility. "It's tough to get out of my mouth. The linebacker situation is real good and the Bears are at a point where they don't need me anymore."

Buffone, 35, is in his 14th NFL season and has played mostly on special teams this year. With one regular season game remaining, against St. Louis on Sunday, Buffone has played in 185 NFL games.

McNeese State may not be in the same league with Ohio State, Alabama, Brigham Young and Florida State but its 11-0 record is and that worried Syracuse (6-5) heading into Saturday's Independence Bowl football game.

"We know they have a good defense," said Syracuse Coach Frank Maloney on the eve of the Orangemen's 7:30 p.m. bowl date with the Southland Conference champions from Lake Charles, La.

It is the first bowl appearance in 13 years for Syracuse and the Orange was favored. But so was Tulsa in the first Independence Bowl in 1976 and McNeese upset them, 20-16.

"They're 11-0 and if you're undefeated you've done something well," said Maloney. "People may not know about them back East, but we do. We've been watching films."

The films showed McNeese winning six of its 11 games by four points or less against the likes of Lamar, West Texas State, Southwestern Louisiana and Tennessee-Chattanooga.

On the other hand, Syracuse lost to such powers as Ohio State, Penn State, Pittsburgh and Temple — all bowl-bound — and supporters felt it demeaning for the Orangemen to play an "unknown" like McNeese.

"I've seen a few films on them,"

Hollywood finds retirement isn't all that good

DALLAS (AP) — Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, who retired from pro football last month rather than be placed on waivers by the Dallas Cowboys, has appealed to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle asking for immediate reinstatement, a Dallas newspaper said Friday.

Henderson's telegram through the NFL Players Association asked Rozelle to reinstate him "at this time so he may be able to participate immediately," the Dallas Times-Herald said.

Cowboy coach Tom Landry dismissed Henderson from the team on Nov. 19 and told the five-year veteran he would place him on waivers. When Henderson retired instead, the Cowboys placed him on their reserve retired list.

Bears' Buffone to call it quits after NFL season

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Doug Buffone, who ranks fourth in National Football League history in number of games played at linebacker, said Friday he will retire after the Chicago Bears complete the current National Football League season.

"I'm going to retire," Buffone said at a news conference at the Bears' training facility. "It's tough to get out of my mouth. The linebacker situation is real good and the Bears are at a point where they don't need me anymore."

Buffone, 35, is in his 14th NFL season and has played mostly on special teams this year. With one regular season game remaining, against St. Louis on Sunday, Buffone has played in 185 NFL games.

A&I takes on Central Oklahoma in Palm Bowl

MCCALLEN, Texas (AP) — Central State of Oklahoma will try to contain the swift backfield of Texas A&I, whose backs will be up against a defense known for stinginess, when the two meet 1:30 p.m. today in the Palm Bowl for the NAIA Division I national football championship.

Both teams have 11-1 records with Texas A&I the Lone Star Conference champ. Independent Central State from Edmond, Okla., lost its final game to Northeastern Oklahoma, 22-14. The Javelinas of Texas A&I fell short of a perfect season with a 3-0 loss to East Texas State.

"On offense, A&I is probably the most physical team we'll face all year," Central State Coach Gary Howard told reporters before the game.

"Their speed factor...it's a concern," added the Bronchos' coach.

"I believe it will be a tight ballgame. I believe it will be a close one," said Texas A&I Coach Ron Harms. The Kingsville, Texas, school will be in its eighth NAIA championship bout.

Central State shut out four of its 10 regular season opponents and held all opposing teams to 1,947 yards total offense while piling up 3,819 yards.

"We're not able to boast of those kind of statistics," Harms said. Running backs Robert Poole and Marcus Bonner for Texas A&I will be out to continue their season average rushing marks of 101 yards and 68 yards per game, respectively.

Quarterback Martin Stroman ran for seven touchdowns and passed for 10 more this season.

On defense, senior linebacker Andy Hawkins was named to the Associated Press Little All-America team and gained conference line-man-of-the-year honors.

Astros, Mets to bid title against Zanon

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets and Houston Astros have selected negotiating rights to free agent infielder Joe Morgan in a supplementary poll of the major league clubs. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office announced Friday.

King also announced that Roberto Duran of Panama, the former lightweight champion and leading welterweight contender, will fight a scheduled 10-rounder against Josef Nsubuga of Uganda, the No. 9 WBC welterweight contender, Jan. 13. The Duran-Nsubuga fight will be televised by CBS while Holmes will meet Zanon on ABC.

Zanon, the European champion, has a 24-8-2 record, with eight knockouts.

Former NL umpire dies

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Winnie Smith, a former minor league catcher and National League umpire, died Friday at a local hospital. He was 66.

After a long career in the minors and a brief stint in the majors, Smith joined the National League as an umpire in 1956. He spent 11 years as a big league umpire, working in two World Series and three All-Star games.

A native of Richmond, he had lived in Virginia Beach the last three years.

Hall of Fame pitcher Bob Feller wrote in his book, "The Strikeout Story," that Winnie Smith was the best catcher he ever pitched to. He was Feller's catcher at the Norfolk Naval Training Station during World War II.

Thatcher-Carter to focus on 'delicate situations'

LONDON (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher meets President Carter in Washington Monday at a time when each leader could use the other's help in delicate situations.

Rhodesia, where Britain has gambled by sending in a governor in advance of a peace agreement, and Iran, where Carter needs strong backing for non-military efforts to free U.S. hostages, are to figure prominently in discussions.

Other prime topics include Northern Ireland — where Britain resents recent interest shown by Sen. Edward Kennedy and some other U.S. politicians — and the terms for buying American missiles to update Britain's strategic arsenal.

Mrs. Thatcher departs Sunday on a Royal Air Force VC-10 for her first U.S. visit as prime minister. After the White House meeting Monday she is to visit the Pentagon and talk with members of Congress.

Tuesday she flies to New York to meet top United Nations officials and address the Foreign Policy Association before flying home Tuesday night.

Elected May 3 in a groundswell of reaction against the Labor government's socialist policies, Mrs. Thatcher and her Conservative government have made bold and sweeping changes to restore free enterprise to Britain. But she has lost popularity in the process.

Her style in dealing with her own cabinet and with other European leaders has earned her the nickname "Attila the Hen." It is reported not to have charmed Carter at their latest meeting, in June at the Tokyo eco-conomic summit of the West's major industrial nations.

The 54-year-old blonde politician draws no cheers from Britain's small and generally left-leaning feminist movement, and a recent opinion poll shows a nine-percent swing away from her among the women voters who contributed to the Conservative's decisive election victory.

Having boosted sales taxes from 8.5 percent to 15 percent and presided over a rise in inflation from around 10 percent to 17.4 percent, the Tories have sunk to 40-percent approval compared to Labor's 45 percent in the Market Opinion Research International poll published this week.

The Conservatives did survive a by-election test Thursday, but there was a 4.4 percent swing toward the Laborites.

Mrs. Thatcher claims her cuts in government spending and boosts in interest rates — mortgages now are 15 percent — are bitter medicine necessary to put Britain back on its feet economically. The government says it will be up to two years before the benefits are felt.

Of more immediate concern is the continuing war in Rhodesia.

Europe to attempt first launching

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — The bugs of rocketry and the weather permitting, Europe will take its first independent step into the space age from a jungle launching pad here Saturday.

The European Space Agency is set to launch an Ariane missile in a test of a program designed to compete with the U.S. space shuttle for the lucrative satellite business of the next two decades.

Officials in the launch center here, 40 miles north of the South American colony capital of Cayenne, said the final countdown started on schedule Friday morning, aiming at a launch between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. (8 a.m.-1 p.m. CST).

It is the first of four planned test flights of the multinational missile over the next year. If at least two succeed, Ariane will start operational launches in 1981, officials said.

The first rocket will carry only an instrument package to monitor its performance but three test launches set for 1980 will carry satellites.

Canadians face winter election

OTTAWA (AP) — Canadians made ready Friday for a winter election campaign and Prime Minister Joe Clark said he would rescind a tax hike that added 18 cents to the cost of a gallon of gas and caused his government to fall.

Clark, whose 7-month-old Progressive Conservative government was defeated in a parliamentary no-confidence vote Thursday night, met with Governor-General Ed Schreyer on Friday, then went to the House of Commons to announce the dissolution of Parliament and a Feb. 18 election.

The Liberals and New Democrats teamed up in the Commons to defeat Clark's government on the budget Finance Minister John Crosbie presented Tuesday. It included an immediate increase in the gasoline excise tax from 7 cents to 25 cents, which would push the cost of regular as high as $1.32.

Opposition lawmakers and citizens expressed outrage at the increase and the vote of no-confidence was the result. Clark, who will remain on in a caretaker capacity, said Friday he would order a rollback in the tax immediately.

Clark, who is 40, said he was surprised and angered by the defeat, but enjoys campaigning and would begin Monday by "aircraft and dog sled," plugging the economic programs that led to the government's defeat.

He pledged to introduce the tough budget again if elected. He also said he had realized he risked defeat in the Commons with the gasoline tax and other measures, but believed them necessary.

"Sure, we could have gone on governing by not governing... (but) I made it clear from the outset I would govern as if I had a majority... I knew the risks."

The Liberals appear ready to ask Pierre Elliott Trudeau, who recently announced he was stepping down as party chief, to make a comeback and lead them into the new elections.

Liberals held a parliamentary caucus Friday and were addressed by Trudeau, 60, Liberal House Leader Allan Rock and other reporters. Trudeau "gave us some ideas that we now are considering."

"It was a very frank and open statement," MacEachen said. "I'm not ready at this point to discuss the various discussions that have taken place."

Earlier MacEachen said the sometimes flamboyant Trudeau would be an excellent person to continue at the helm, but conceded "if we go into an election with Mr. Trudeau, we'll have to fight every inch of the way."

Trudeau, who served as prime minister 11 years until the May 22 election that brought Clark to power, announced Nov. 21 he was stepping down as party leader, and preliminary arrangements had been made for a leadership convention in March in Winnipeg.

The former prime minister had no comment on his plans Friday. He left the caucus meeting after about 20 minutes and brushed past reporters.

The vote expressing no confidence in Clark's government was 139 to 133, and pandemonium broke out when the tally was announced. Three Conservatives and one Liberal were absent. The five-member Social Credit group, whose backing had enabled Clark to survive previous confidence votes, abstained.

At a news conference following the vote, Clark harshly criticized the Liberals and New Democrats for bringing "the business of Parliament to a complete halt" for what he described as purely partisan reasons.

He said the vote interrupted all plans of his administration to revamp the economy and tackle the energy crisis. But he noted it was the choice of the opposition and "I, of course, accept it."

Clark came to office as an untested newcomer, who campaigned on the issues of the economy, inflation and unemployment. Trudeau stressed "national unity," particularly as it involves the separatist movement in predominantly French-speaking Quebec.

Under the Canadian system of government, the party winning a majority of seats in the House of Commons forms a government and its leader becomes prime minister. If no party wins a majority, the one with a plurality — the highest number of seats — forms a minority government with the help of other parties.

In the dissolved Parliament, the Conservatives held 136 seats for a plurality in the 282-seat House of Commons; the Liberals 114, including the speaker; the New Democrats held 27 seats, and Social Credit 5.

COULD THIS BE YOUR IDEA OF A GOOD RELIGION:

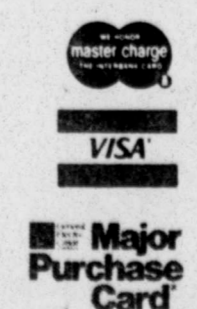

Unitarian Universalism is a Way-Of-Life Religion—a life of vigorous thought, constructive activity and generous service—not a religion of inherited creeds, revered saints and holy words. Unitarian Universalism therefore is not an easy religion. It demands that people think out their beliefs for themselves, and then live those beliefs. The stress is placed upon us to live this life nobly and effectively rather than as a preparation for another life.

If you want to give up "that old time religion" we may have the place for you:

Train meant new life

MCPHERSON, Kan. (AP) — One day after her 11th birthday, Anna Fuchs sat on a platform in a drafty Kansas church praying for a mother to step forward out of the curious crowd and give her a new life.

It was Dec. 7, 1924, a milestone for a crippled orphan from New York City and a lonely spinster from McPherson, Kan. Forever after, their lives would intertwine.

Anna Fuchs' story is one of thousands of footnotes in the story of America's orphan trains. The trains ran west from 1853 to 1929, but today few remember the transplant of nearly 100,000 abandoned and orphaned children from the ghetto streets of a metropolis to the isolated towns strung out along the tracks.

Miss Fuchs — 66 and retired — is now a civic leader in the small prairie town where the train deposited her. She is one of five children whose past is recounted in a new book, "Searching for Home," by Martha Nelson Vogt and her daughter, Christina Vogt, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

"I hesitated at first," said Miss Fuchs, a soft-spoken woman whose cheerful laugh dispels a grim image. "But I realized that most who had talked about it already were ones whose adoption didn't work out or were mistreated. I thought it wasn't fair to tell just one side."

"The happy, well-adjusted ones like me have been swallowed up by society. I wanted our side to be heard, too. And I wanted to pay tribute to the people who opened their homes and made it possible for a child like me to get a second chance."

THE STORY begins in 1853, when social worker Charles Loring Brace founded the New York Children's Aid Society. It was a time before widows' pensions, health insurance, welfare subsidies, compulsory education and child labor laws — an age when infanticide was not uncommon.

New York City overflowed with immigrants. Many died of disease, overwork and hunger. With relatives far away in the Old Country, tens of thousands of penniless orphans took to the streets.

"The society started orphanages and schools, but Brace felt the only decent life for the children lay to the west. He believed that in exchange for an extra pair of hands for chores, farm-families would provide waifs with wholesome food, a Christian upbringing and an education."

Legal adoption was possible after a year if the placement was satisfactory for both child and foster family. That was the ideal. It didn't always work that way.

"I know a lot of people today will feel this was a terrible thing, to bundle up a bunch of kids, ship them out on a train and give them away to somebody who liked the way they looked when they lined up on a theater stage or a church altar," said Miss Fuchs.

"But back then there were no psychologists or computer matches. It was either the orphan train or turn them out destitute on the street to become beggars, thieves and prostitutes. There was no other way and we all knew it. And anything was better than an orphanage."

THE ORPHAN trains — actually normal passenger coaches on which chaperoned groups of children traveled — started in the late 1850s. In 1875, the peak year, more than 4,000 children chugged west.

"In 1920, Anna's father, a butcher from Hungary, died in a tuberculosis sanitarium. Anna, a sickly child suspected of having TB, stayed at the Catskill Mountains hospital until 1924, when her mother died in New York City."

"I was sent back to be with my sisters, and neighbors got us into the orphanage," said Miss Fuchs. "That first night, I grew up. I knew I was completely alone then, and I was determined to somehow survive."

After Thanksgiving, the girls were told they were going west to new homes. She recalls humming "California Here I Come" on the long journey with her two sisters and six other orphans.

But when the train stopped, Anna was stunned to find herself in "a flat, desolate, snowbound landscape in the middle of nowhere."

"This wasn't California. Where was it? 'Kansas,' replied the chaperone. Anna had never even heard the word."

TWO DAYS later, awkward in a too-big blue velvet dress and a red sailor hat that failed to hide her unruly bangs, Anna stood before a standing-room-only crowd at the Presbyterian church. People stared in frank curiosity at the scared little strangers.

In the back of the room sat Jennie Bengtson, a 49-year-old spinster who supported herself by taking in boarders. She hadn't intended to come.

Her gaze kept coming back to Anna. On impulse, she told an adoption committee member: "I would like to have the girl on the end."

The orphan spent that first night eating ginger snaps and crying. Jennie felt as helpless as Anna felt lost. But slowly, tentatively, the bond grew.

"I was teased about my New York accent. I was a free spirit and Jennie had strict rules. But I had no choice. I had to stay there and make a go of it, and she stuck with me all the way," Miss Fuchs said. "One day I realized we loved each other."

"Thank you for my doll and our other toys," exclaimed Mary. "And take care of Mommy and Daddy," added Janie. "Help Billy not to be lonely in the hospital, offered Bobby for his little school friend."

Children believe in prayer. They believe their prayers are heard in exactly the way they use. They say simply what is in their hearts, trusting Mom's promise that they can talk to God all the time.

But sometimes the adult heart is skeptical. We wonder if prayer really does any good, whether it is heard. It is then we need the simple trust of a child. We must remember that, through the ages, men have found answers through the Church. Their God speaks with perfect wisdom to the hearts of His children. Attend church this Sunday.

RELIGION IN THE NEWS

First United Methodist presents 'Service of Lessons and Carols'

An annual "Service of Lessons and Carols" will be presented at First United Methodist Church Sunday morning during the 10:35 worship service.

Dr. Charles E. Lutrick, senior minister, will lead the service. He will be joined by two members of the congregation, Betty King and Jeff Boertz, who will read the lessons.

The musical portion of the service has been planned and directed by George L. DeHart, organist-choirmaster at First UMC.

Participating in the service will be the Carol, Junior and Chancel choirs in addition to the Youth Handbell Choir.

Leading off the musical portion of the service will be Gustav Holst's "Christmas Day," presented by the Junior and Chancel ensembles. Following will be "O Little Town of Bethlehem" by Lewis H. Redner, as arranged by Jane Marshall. It will be presented by the Chancel choir with other choral groups and the congregation joining in singing the last stanza.

The Carol Choir will offer "Little Jesus" by Len Law, a contemporary composer, and women of the Chancel Choir will present "No Candle Was There, and No Fire," by Liza Lehmann.

The Junior Choir will sing another contemporary work, "Christmas Child" by Lonnie McGlohon, to be followed by the Chancel Choir's presentation of "Do You Hear What I Hear" by Regney and Shayne. Drum and cymbals accompaniment will be provided by Jerry Wyatt and Monta Jo Johnson.

The Youth Handbell Choir will play "Christmas Joy," as arranged by Albert Zabel.

The Junior Choir will then join the handbell ensemble in a presentation of "At This Joyous Christmas Time," arranged by Eugene Butler from a Spanish carol.

Following a long-standing tradition at First UMC, the three singing choirs will sing "Away In A Manger" to conclude the musical service.

Organ music scheduled for the service includes "Puer Natus Est" by Everett Titcomb and "The First Noel," as arranged by Richard Ellsasser.

The Service of Lessons and Carols will be open to all residents of the city and surrounding area. The church nursery will be open to care for infants and small children.

Church panel plans new church

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — The Consultation on Church Union, whose membership is made up of 10 different denominations, has decided to begin drawing up new plans on how a united church might be put together.

With broad agreement among leaders of the 10 on theological issues, and an expected agreement on ministry due in January, the COCU executive committee acted here earlier this fall to get structure proposals on the table by the mid-1980s.

For the past several years, COCU has been testing union models at the local level. Reports on the results are due in the spring of 1981, about 16 months after action deciding on the kind of ministry a united church would have.

The COCU executive committee, chaired by the Rev. Dr. Rachel Hendler of Austin, Tex., who is currently COCU president, approved at its recent meeting here the setting up of a new commission on church order. The denominations will each appoint one or two members — possibly by January.

The broad-based union movement currently includes churches representing three major forms of church government — Episcopal, Presbyterian and Congregational.

COCU embraces denominations with more than 20 million members in the U.S., and has been involved in union talks for 17 years. The union effort has been moving cautiously since 1970 when church members showed basic acceptance of faith, worship and sacraments in a union plan but reacted coolly to parts of the plan related to ministry, order and structure.

Agreement on ministry now seems near enough that COCU has scheduled a special meeting for Jan. 22-24 in Cincinnati to act on the issue.

St. Luke's plans 'Advent' drama

An original Advent drama will be presented Sunday night at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave.

Advent is the season in the Christian calendar during which the faithful anticipate the coming of Jesus Christ. Advent begins the first Sunday in December and continues through the next three Sundays.

The special Advent drama will be presented at 7 p.m. Sunday in the sanctuary of St. Luke's Church is "A Word of Hope" and is based on the writings from prison of German theologian Dietrich Bonhoeffer.

Bonhoeffer was imprisoned by the Nazis in 1943 for opposing the Nazi regime, and during his incarceration he continued to write to several friends. These letters are a modern testimony of strength and faith.

The drama has been written by Fred Webster, who currently serves as minister of education at St. Luke's Church. A student at Perkins School of Theology of Southern Methodist University, he is participating in Perkins' intern program and is working with the Midland church as part of that program.

In Sunday night's presentation, Webster will serve as narrator of the drama. The part of Bonhoeffer, who discusses his feelings about Advent and Christmas, is played by Mitchell Williams.

Williams also is participating in the Perkins School of Theology intern program and currently serves at Midland's First United Methodist Church.

The public is invited to attend the special presentation Sunday night.

First Baptist sets Christmas plans

The music department of First Baptist Church has scheduled its annual Christmas music program for 7 p.m. Sunday in the sanctuary.

The program, titled "Worship Through Giving," will be a highlight of the annual White Christmas service at the church.

The musical program, under the direction of David Campbell, minister of music at First Baptist, will feature the Adult Choir, joined by the church orchestra, handbell ensemble and various vocal ensembles.

Another special event scheduled next week at First Baptist is the annual outdoor Christmas music celebration at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday on the west lawn of the church.

Participating in the celebration will be children's choirs, youth choirs and adult ensembles. A live nativity scene will be a special feature of the evening.

There is no charge for either program, it was announced, and all residents of the city and surrounding area are invited to attend the events.

First Baptist Church is located at West Louisiana Avenue and North Garfield Street.

Alamo Heights schedules special

Special musical programs are scheduled next week at Alamo Heights Baptist Church, 1305 N. Midland Drive.

During the 11 a.m. Sunday worship service, the church's Sanctuary Choir will present a "Festival of Christmas Hymns." Larry Howie, minister of music at the church, will sing "Gesu Bambino," by Pietro A. Von.

At the service, the Rev. Milo B. Arbuckle, pastor, will preach a sermon titled "Don't Let Christmas Wear You Out."

During the 7 p.m. Sunday worship service, the Sanctuary Choir will present a contemporary Christian musical work, "His Love...Reaching," by Ronn Huff and Bill and Gloria Gaither.

The Young Musicians Choir of Alamo Heights Church will present "Happy Birthday — Merry Christmas," by E.M. Benedict, at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the church. During that service, other Christmas music will be the church's pre-school choir and Music Makers Choir.

Both Sunday services and the Wednesday night service will be open to all residents of the community.

Unitarian Church trims tree Sunday

The Unitarian-Universalist Church, 3400 N. A St., is planning a special tree-trimming ceremony for its 10 a.m. Sunday worship service.

The tree will be trimmed with decorated gifts for others in the city, and during the coming week these gifts will be distributed, said the Rev. John MacPhee, pastor.

During the church school hour Sunday morning, children will be making, baking and decorating cookies which will be used as part of the tree decorations and later distributed, he said.

MacPhee said the church's regular Christmas pageant and party for members of the congregation and their families will be at 5:30 p.m. Dec. 23. Highlights of the event will include carol-singing, a light supper, a pageant presented by children of the church, and the showing of a special film on "The Other Wise Man," by Henry VanDyke.

Terry Cole-Whitaker

Terry Cole-Whitaker begins weekly TV series on KMID

Terry Cole-Whitaker, a young charismatic woman minister, is launching her weekly TV series in this area.

The program will be aired at 10:30 p.m. Sunday on KMID-TV Channel 2, and will be heard each Sunday night thereafter.

Ranked among the top motivational speakers in the country, the young woman fills auditoriums and convention halls wherever she travels.

She founded and operates her own human resources development firm, is the minister of one of the fastest-growing churches in the nation, has the weekly syndicated TV program, and yet has found time to go to college, raise a family and take third place one year in the Mrs. America contest.

Her book, "What You Think Of Me Is None of My Business," stresses self-reliance as a route to personal and professional success.

She has been listed as one of the top 25 speakers in the U.S. by the Association of Sales and Marketing Executives.

University not required to furnish church house

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The University of Missouri-Kansas City is not required to furnish a campus building for worship by a student religious group, a federal judge has ruled.

"The interest of the state of Missouri in maintaining a strict separation of church and state is a sufficiently compelling interest to overbalance the plaintiff's claim to free exercise of religion," U.S. District Judge William R. Collinson ruled Thursday.

Collinson's ruling upheld a UMKC regulation that "no university buildings or grounds, except chapels, may be used for purposes of religious worship or religious teaching by either student or non-student groups."

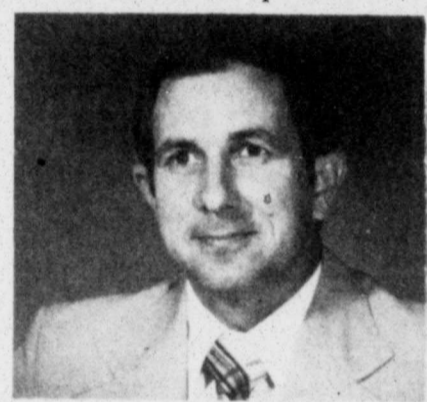

Rev. Bob Crow to speak Sunday

The Rev. Bob Crow, a representative of World Missions Outreach, will be a guest speaker Sunday at the Dayspring Christian Center, 100 W. Oak St.

He will preach at the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday services, it was announced. The public is invited to hear him.

Crow has been a missionary for the last 17 years and currently resides in Ciudad Victoria, Mexico, where he trains ministers in missionary work.

He is a former Baptist pastor and has been associated with several units of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International.

The Rev. Bob Crow

The visitor has traveled in many parts of the world. He has conducted spiritual crusades in South America, the Philippines, Central America and India.

David Cossa, magician with a Christian twist

By LINDA PHARR Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — David Cossa, 28, grimaced, his face turning beet red from the contortions he was making, but the straitjacket still held him loose.

He persisted, however, and four minutes later freed himself.

Cossa, a suburban Inglewood resident, is a Christian magician who uses his tricks to illustrate truths about the gospel.

The straitjacket illustrates the bondage of sin and the struggles people have with it, he explained.

"I enjoy performing. It's my accomplishment for the Lord, my way of serving Him and expressing myself," he said.

Cossa, a Christian for five years and an aspiring illusionist since grade school, says magic walks a fine line in the Christian world.

"Magic is a negative term for churches because of the involvement of the occult. You (as a magician) give it an air of the supernatural."

Despite that other world air, Cossa says that magic ranks high in ethics.

"Magic has high standards for entertaining. The standards must be high because we deceive people.

"Because magic has such a high priority on ethics, gospel magic has an even higher calling because we have to be aware of the fact we're sharing God's Word.

"We can't violate the message (spiritual truth) or the magic effect (trick). The message and magic effect have to match each other."

Cossa, a former teacher of magic at Cal State Dominguez Hills and Cal State Northridge, said he practiced the occult, Buddhism and philosophy before becoming a Christian.

He has developed a gospel magic ministry with Share Time International, a Christian organization in suburban Buena Park. He also has founded his own business, "Escapes and Illusions."

"I enjoy doing magic and I enjoy sharing the Word of God," he said. "It's my philosophy that magic has an appeal, that it grabs the attention of people."

Wayne Meyers to speak Sunday

Missionary Wayne Meyers of Mexico City will speak Sunday at the Midland Christian Fellowship, 2301 W. Indiana Ave.

The services will begin at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. and will be open to all interested residents of the city and surrounding area.

Meyers, a resident of Mexico for 35 years, has been organizer of numerous churches in that nation. He also has organized many churches in Africa. A well-known evangelist and Bible scholar, he has preached throughout South America. He is a former teacher at the Christ for the Nations Bible Institute in Dallas.

Kelview Heights sets special music

The Junior Choir of Kelview Heights Baptist Church will present a special Christmas musical during the 10 a.m. Sunday worship service.

The musical, titled "Listen to the Voices," includes drama, rhythm band and orchestrated sound track. Singers of the pre-school and primary grades will be featured in the presentation.

The public is invited to attend the presentation. Kelview Heights Church is located off North Big Spring Street near Scharbauer Drive.

Scientology ex-staffer files suit

BOSTON (AP) — A former staff member of the Church of Scientology, accusing the movement of using mind control to gain converts, is seeking $200 million in damages for the church's drop-outs.

Lavenda Van Schaick, 29, of Somerville, Mass., filed suit Thursday in U.S. District Court. In addition to damages, she is asking the court to unseat 17 top church leaders and place the organization's finances in the hands of a court-appointed receiver.

Ms. Van Schaick says church officials misled her into divorcing her husband, paying about $13,000 for instruction and working free for the church for nine years in Clearwater, Fla., and Las Vegas, Nev.

Since leaving the church, Ms. Van Schaick said Scientologists have subjected her to electronic "bugging" and leaked details of her private life that she had revealed in counseling sessions.

Spokesmen for the church, who describe their belief as "applied religious philosophy," called the suit "anti-religious" and "money-motivated," and predicted it would be thrown out of court.

The 25-year-old movement has recently come under legal attack on several fronts.

In Washington, D.C., nine Scientologists recently were convicted of obstructing justice in connection with burglarries of federal and private offices in Washington and Los Angeles. In Oregon, a former Scientologist was awarded $2 million in damages against the church, and in Riverside, Calif., an indictment has linked church members to an alleged bank fraud scheme.

Ms. Van Schaick's suit seeks compensation for herself and thousands of others who she claims have been defrauded of $10,000 or more.

The men from LESTER ROLOFF'S "CITY OF REFUGE" will be our services Sunday morning. The men, who were really down and outers, have been saved, reclaimed and restored to life worth living. They found what every person needs to find—Jesus as their personal Savior. They have some pretty sad and unbelievable stories to tell about what life was before they were rescued. They'll be telling them and singing God's praises beginning at 9:45 A.M. tomorrow. If you're down and out, come hear what they were—and see what they are! It might just change your life! If you are an aggressive professional with a strong background in industrial sales, we can offer you an opportunity for high earnings and advancement to management.

Sheriff resigns

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Gregg County Sheriff Tom Welch, insisting he is innocent, resigned Friday, two days after he was convicted with four other men of corruption and racketeering.

"I have never knowingly participated in or allowed anyone else to be a part of any wrongful act," Welch said in a statement distributed by a deputy.

It was the second resignation among the five defendants — which included three office-holders — in a federal trial in Tyler. All five defendants were convicted Wednesday. The first to resign, Justice of the Peace Charles Cashell, stepped down Thursday.

Sentencing for the five is set for Jan. 3.

Welch, who was convicted of an aborted 1974 murder conspiracy, facilitating illegal gambling, and bribery, said, "I feel the best interest of law enforcement will be served and the necessary confidence restored by my resignation as sheriff of Gregg County. My resignation shall be tendered to the commissioner's court effective immediately."

Cashell, Welch and County Commissioner Bill Satterwhite — along with a pair of former deputies — were convicted on charges they took bribes, permitted illegal gambling and obstructed justice.

In addition, Welch, Satterwhite and one of the former deputies were found guilty of murder conspiracy.

Cashell's term expires Dec. 31, 1983. County Judge Henry Atkinson said officials will decide later how best to pick a replacement.

'Most wanted man' wounded

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — George Alvin Bruton, who was on the FBI's 10 most wanted list, was captured Friday after being wounded while trying to elude an FBI stakeout at his mobile home, agents said.

FBI agent Mickey Drake said Bruton, 37, of Swann, Mo., suffered a shotgun wound in his leg and underwent surgery at a hospital. Drake said agents opened fire after Bruton rammed an FBI vehicle with his pickup truck, then shot at one of the agents.

Only Bruton was injured. He was wanted in connection with two slayings at Kansas City, Mo., and for allegedly taking hostages and wounding two law enforcement officers in Utah, according to William E. Kell, special agent in charge of the FBI in Arkansas.

The FBI said Bruton and Steven Scott Pannell, a fellow Fort Leavenworth inmate, took hostages at a Davis County, Utah, residence in Deember 1978. Both men escaped after a gunfight with authorities that left two law enforcement officers wounded, the agency said.

Pannell was captured a few days later, Drake said.

Bruton then returned to Kansas City, Mo., and moved in with a former prison associate there, Michael Walker, and Walker's girlfriend, Drake said. A few months later, Walker was found shot in the head in an abandoned auto.

Legislature studies loan program

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A little-known mechanism for putting low-interest loans in the hands of college students — especially those from middle-income families — came under legislative scrutiny Friday.

Rep. Frank Gaston, R-Dallas, chairman of a House higher education subcommittee, said all he was interested in at this point was "fact-finding" about the four local higher education administrations (HEAs) in Texas.

HEAs were authorized by the 1975 Legislature, but Gaston said he didn't know they existed until this year.

Gaston said the HEAs caught his eye when former House Speaker Raymond Price lobbied for changes in a bill providing state administration of federally guaranteed bank loans to Texas students.

Gaston claimed Price "offered six little corrective amendments that would have put the guaranteed student loan program completely in the hands of the four existing HEAs."

HEAs may be created by city councils and expanded to other areas with approval of county commissioners. They issue bonds and lend the proceeds through banks to college students from their areas at 7 percent interest.

There now are HEAs in Abilene, Hays and Travis counties, Arlington-Denton and 58 South Texas counties, including Bexar, Nueces and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Maek Adams, director of the Texas College Coordinating Board's student services division, said the Abilene HEA had sold $15 million in bonds, the Central Texas HEA $20 million, the Arlington-Denton HEA $10 million and the South Texas HEA $20 million.

There are more loans in existence because of the HEAs," Adams said.

Ralph Rushing, an independent financial adviser to the Central Texas and Arlington-Denton HEAs, said plans are being made for HEAs at Houston and Bryan-College Station.

While HEAs receive 7 percent from students and another 6 percent from the federal government on the loans, Rushing said Internal Revenue Service rules allow them no profit. He said about half the interest goes to bondholders and the rest is used to pay expenses.
