Hostages promised yuletide celebrations

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The Moslem militants holding 50 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy promised them whatever they need to celebrate Christmas, but the captors and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini declared the only way the hostages will be freed is for President Carter to return the shah.

A spokesman for the militants who seized the U.S. Embassy 51 days ago told The Associated Press the hostages will receive "fruits, sweets and cookies and whatever else they need to celebrate their Christmas."

"We'll do it however they want it, whatever they usually do. But we don't intend keeping the hostages separately. If they want they can all be together."

Both the militants and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh denied a new flurry of rumors today that some of the hostages would be freed for Christmas.

"There was some rumor going around today like that, but there will not be any release or any statement on it today," Ghotbzadeh told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

Asked to comment on reports that some of the hostages might be freed soon, the militants' spokesman said: "Our position remains that either the shah is returned for trial or the hostages are tried as spies."

The latest report came from French parliamentarian Brigitte Gros, who met with Khomeini and other officials in Iran and quoted them as saying three hostages will be freed within the next two or three days.

But Khomeini, in a message broadcast on Christmas Eve by Tehran

Radio, said the only way the hostages will be released is for Carter to send back the shah.

"On the occasion of the festivities marking the birth of the Christian prophet, Jesus Christ, who through his holy and sacred words has condemned the world's oppressors, I congratulate all oppressed nations, Christian nations and our Christian countrymen in Iran," Khomeini declared.

He said Carter should have bells tolled across the United States not for the "hostage spies," but for the benefit of "oppressed nations," adding:

"Oh, American nation, do not lend your ears to presidential propaganda which is simply to gain power. Know that our youths treat the spies in a manner pleasing to God (who) orders that forgiveness is for the conquered — even if they are tyrannical spies... You, the American nation, demand from Carter the extradition of the deposed criminal shah to Iran, for Carter holds the key to the spies' release."

The official Pars news agency said the foreign minister formally asked Panama to extradite the shah, who has been given refuge on the Panamanian resort island of Contadora. Ghotbzadeh was quoted as saying he expected Panama to return the shah to Iran "despite pressure from the United States." There was no immediate Panamanian comment on the report.

The embassy captors allowed a nine-foot Christmas tree from Seattle, Wash., and 90,000 Christmas cards to be delivered to the embassy Sunday by Los Angeles reporter Alex Paen. At least 49 more Christmas trees — one for each hostage — are believed stacked up at Tehran airport, along with 500,000 more Christmas cards sent by sympathetic Americans.

Three U.S. clergymen are flying to Tehran to conduct Christmas services for the hostages, and Tehran Radio said the three were invited because they always acted "in defense of the oppressed and against the aggression of imperialism."

The three are the Rev. William Sloane Coffin Jr., pastor at Manhattan's Riverside Church, Catholic Auxiliary Bishop Thomas J. Gumbleton of Detroit, and the Rev. William Howard, a Baptist from Princeton University. Cardinal Etienne Duval, Archbishop of Algiers and a leading figure in the third World, also flew to Tehran today to visit the hostages at the invitation of the Iranian government. He said his visit was "essentially humanitarian."

Six other U.S. ministers, two professors of Islamic studies and a Mexican rabbi, also arrived in Tehran today and said they hope to open a "dialogue" with revolutionary leaders. They said they were here as private citizens.

Before leaving New York, Coffin delivered a sermon blasting Carter's call for U.N. economic sanctions against Iran, declaring the strategy was "highly reminiscent of Lyndon Johnson's bombing of North Vietnam; it puts iron up the spines of the other side."

Finance Minister Abolhassan Bani Sadr told a news conference Sunday that Iran was "not easily scared" by the proposed sanctions. "You cannot make us surrender by your plots and instigating others," he told a news conference.

Oil industry's decision blamed for gas shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American oil industry decision to build inventories rather than sell products helped worsen last spring's gasoline shortage, says a report from the Brookings Institution.

But the stockpiling from April through June may have been prudent because of "uncertainty about world supplies of crude oil for the second half of the year," notes the study issued Sunday.

The report also suggests several Department of Energy policies encouraged the stockpiling and contributed to rising gasoline prices.

It cites a Feb. 28 Energy Department notice that "refiners are urged to keep (gasoline) stocks high enough to meet expected demand during the 1979 summer driving season, even if it is necessary to restrict somewhat the amount of surplus gasoline that is made available to purchasers currently." And it says existing price controls on gas "may have also created an incentive to withhold gasoline from the market" as crude oil prices were rising.

The report by economist Philip K. Verleger Jr. of Yale University is contained in "Papers on Economic Activity" published by the Brookings Institution, a non-profit research group based here.

Verleger said the second-quarter inventory buildup contributed to "shortages and increases in gasoline prices that far exceeded the rise in the cost of crude oil."

Gasoline prices for consumers rose from an average of 70 cents per gallon in the first quarter this year to an average 81 cents in the second quarter and to about 96 cents in August, his figures indicate.

The refiners' cost of acquiring crude oil, meanwhile, went from an average 32 cents per gallon in the first quarter to 37.3 cents in the second quarter and about 47 cents in August.

Verleger reached his conclusions after comparing U.S. government data on refineries for the second quarter of 1979 to the second quarter of 1978.

A spokesman for the American Petroleum Institute, an oil-industry research group, challenged both the report.

"The root cause, when everything else is stripped away, was a shortage of crude oil" that resulted from a cutback in Iranian production during the revolution to overthrow the shah, said the spokesman, who asked anonymity.

He added that oil companies "built up inventories, particularly of heating oil, at the request of the federal government."

He also said 1978 might not be a valid year for comparison because oil companies drew heavily from a surplus of inventories gathered in 1977.

Verleger said in spite of the Iranian slowdown, crude oil imports by U.S. companies in the second quarter of this year were higher than in the same period in 1978, and more than made up for a decline in domestic production.

Farm hands robbed by heavily-armed trio

BIG LAKE — Three men held several north Reagan County farm hands at gunpoint Sunday afternoon in a heavily-armed robbery.

Armed with a Thompson submachine gun, two rifles, two pistols and a large amount of ammunition, the men took an undetermined amount of cash from three laborers at the Gary Stiker farm, according to a Reagan County Sheriff's office spokesman.

The victims told officials there were three men, two short and one tall, involved in the robbery.

Deputies were told the three armed men were "acting crazy" and that the farm hands had been assaulted during the robbery. There were no serious injuries, according to officials. Victims told deputies the three men were driving a white Dodge Coronet 300. However, the direction of travel of the alleged robbers was not known, officials said.

A sheriff's spokesman said their investigation was being hampered by a language problem — the victims speak Spanish and the deputies speak English. A difficulty in addition to the language problem is that the robbery happened "sometime in the afternoon" and was not reported until about 7:30 p.m., said the official.

"They were long-gone by then," said the spokesman.

Christians begin rites marking Christ's birth

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Christmas celebrations in the Holy Land opened today with a colorful procession from Jerusalem to the traditional site of Jesus' birth in Bethlehem.

Monsignor Giacomo Giuseppe Beltritti, the top Roman Catholic clergyman here, led a motorcade of church officials and pilgrims from the walled city of old Jerusalem to Manger Square, outside the Church of the Nativity. The motorcade route was heavily guarded by Israeli troops on the alert against possible Arab terror attacks.

The procession was greeted by drum rolls and a tremendous din of trumpets and bagpipes from a dozen scout bands assembled in the square, which was decorated in pine boughs, pennants and colored lights. About 5,000 spectators lined up behind police barriers to witness the arrival of the procession.

The patriarch, wearing white and scarlet vestments, was greeted by Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij and Israel's military governor of Bethlehem, Lt. Col. Yosef Ziv. The three men marched between two rows of priests and monks who wore white, gold and crimson capes, and entered the basilica, where the patriarch will lead the pontifical high Mass at midnight.

Green-bereted Israeli border police linked hands and formed a protective cordon as the three men entered the church, while troops watched over the proceedings from rooftop positions. Israeli army helicopters hovered above the town, and two Phantom jet fighters made slow turns just below the cloud cover in what appeared to be a salute as the motorcade entered Bethlehem.

In his Christmas greeting, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said: "May the coming year be one of peace and understanding in our region and throughout the world."

Freij, watching from his office balcony as bustling workers added the final holiday touches to Manger Square, offered a Christmas message of hope for the 50 Americans held hostage by Iranian militants in Tehran.

Condemning the Nov. 4 hostage taking "in the strongest terms," Freij said the Iranians "have no right to hold them. It is against Christianity and against Islam."

Freij has been the only Palestinian leader to take a public stand against the Iranian action, which is supported by Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization and by other West Bank leaders.

Israeli tourism officials expected over 35,000 holiday makers in Bethlehem, Jerusalem and Nazareth, where special services were planned for the United Nations peacekeeping forces stationed in southern Lebanon.

Freij estimated that one million tourists and visitors, many of them Arabs from neighboring countries, visited Bethlehem this year, up about 15 percent.

But he claimed Christmas shopping in a town that lives off the tourist trade was suffering because of Israel's "devastating inflation rate" of over 100 percent.

"The price of toys is beyond the reach of my own people. Inflation is eating up their income in an unprecedented way," he said.

Oil riches will shape U.S. fiscal policy in 1980s

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Not since Congress took its first bite out of our paychecks more than a half-century ago has it faced such a tantalizing feast.

Regardless of whether Congress nibbles or gorges itself, a groaning board of oil riches will shape the national diet for at least a decade — perhaps even as long as the larger lasts.

The table was laid out earlier this year when President Carter began lifting controls from crude oil prices to discourage consumption, paving the way for huge increases in domestic oil revenues.

With consumers paying the cost of decontrol through higher oil prices, Carter proposed that Congress recycle a major portion of the proceeds for public use, principally for energy-related purposes.

Now Congress appears pointed in the direction of a new tax that would take $227.3 billion of the $1 trillion that decontrol is expected to produce during the next decade. This represents roughly a 50-50 split between the government and the oil industry after taxes and costs.

Carter first proposed the tax for its energy implications, not as a revenue raising device.

But now it is also becoming — thanks in large part to OPEC-inspired price increases — a principal prop for the federal budget during the 1980s and perhaps longer.

Within a few years, it would be one of the largest single federal taxes — well behind the income and Social Security taxes but comparable to all existing federal excise taxes. Over the decade, it would raise as much as the federal government's total income from 1789 to the early 1940s, according to the Senate Budget Committee computations.

Some lawmakers are already mentally disposing of the proceeds, including more than $300 billion in increased income tax revenue over the next decade as well as the extra billions that the new levy will raise.

A favorite project is rollback of the big Social Security tax increase that is scheduled for 1981. Putting the federal budget back in the black is another. Liberal Democrats see visions of national health insurance and other social programs, while Republicans view the "windfall" as all the more reason for an overall spending ceiling and a general tax cut.

Iran at-a-glance

By The Associated Press: The 50 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran were to receive visitors and promised holiday treats as they spent a 51st day in captivity — one day before Christmas. Here are the highlights.

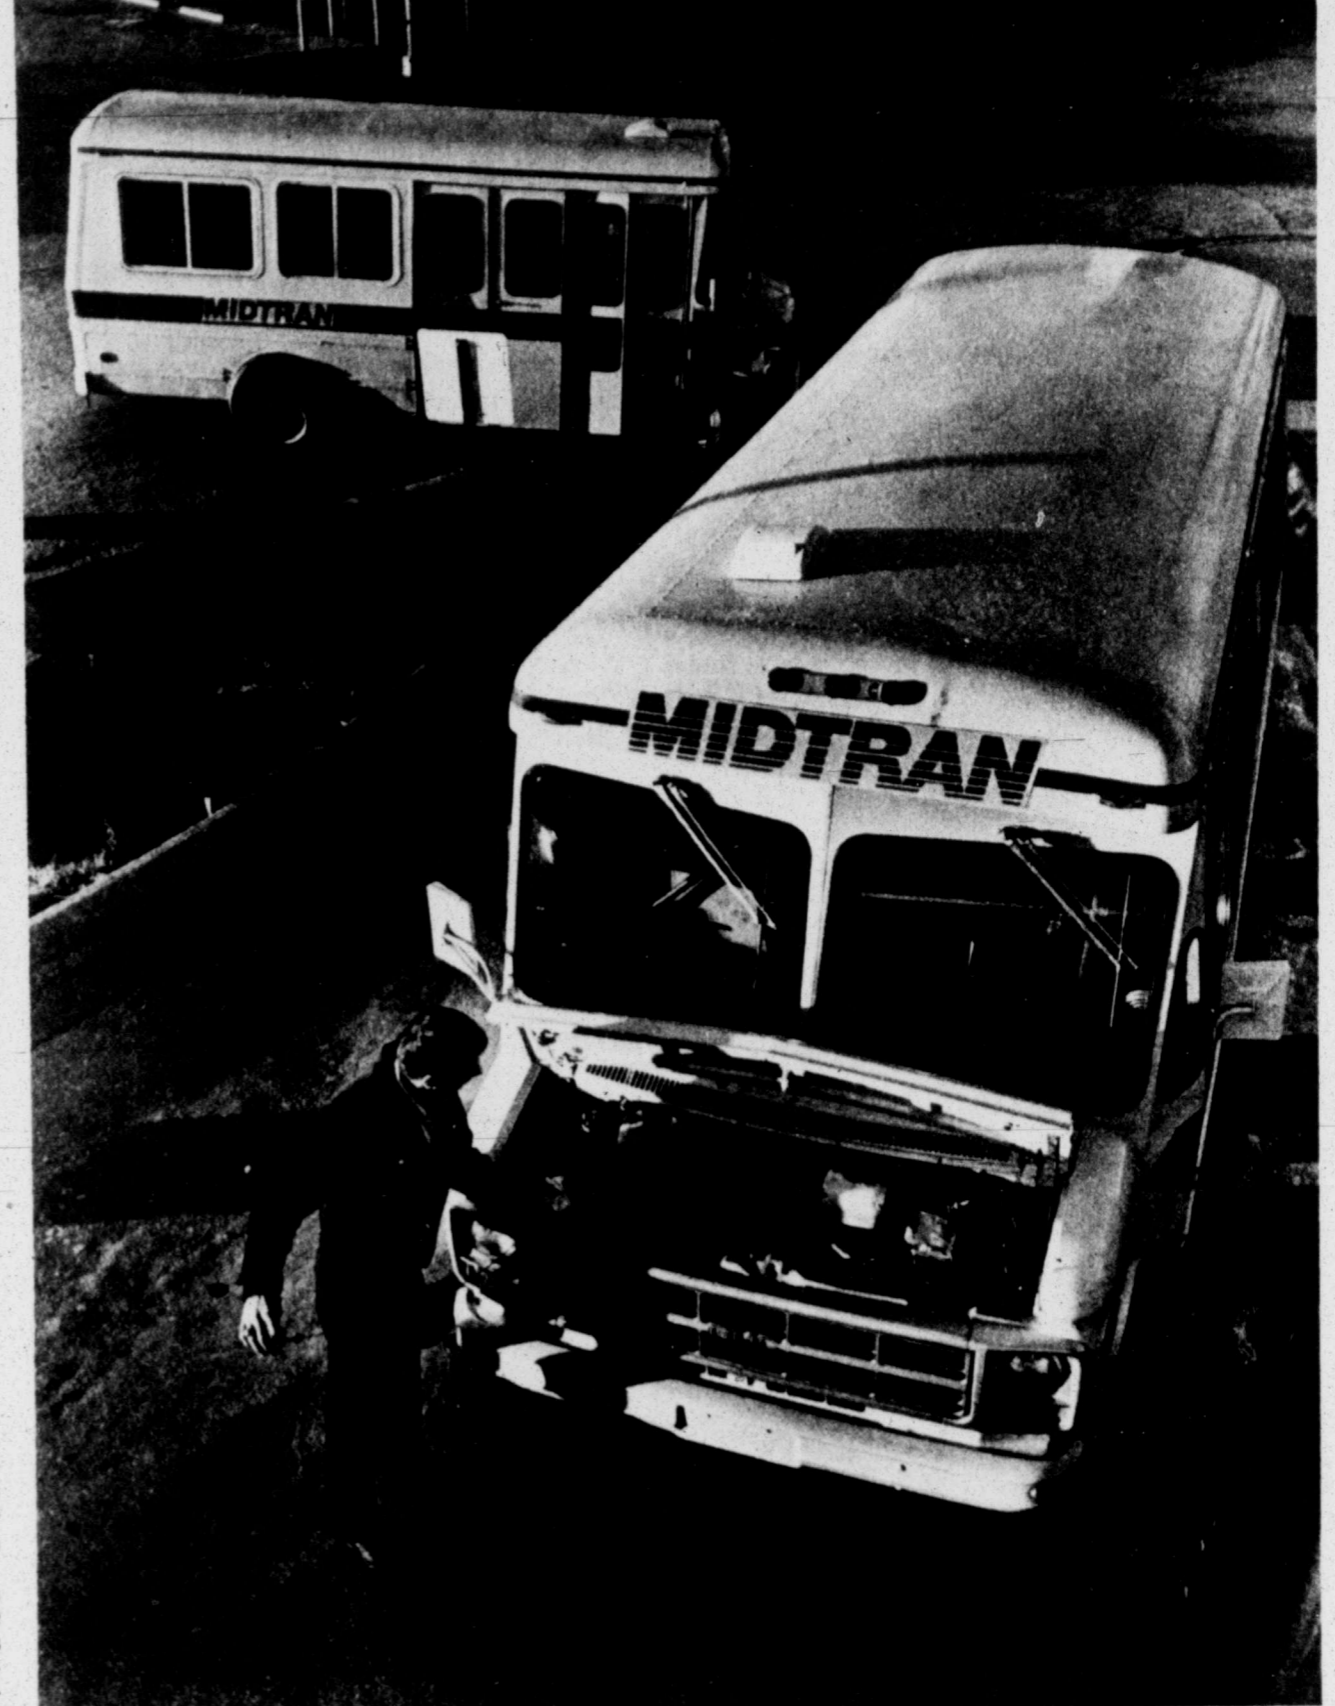

IN IRAN: The Moslem militants holding the hostages promised them whatever they need to celebrate Christmas, but the captors and Iran's ruler Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini declared the only way the hostages will be freed is for President Carter to return the shah. A spokesman said the hostages will receive "fruits, sweets and cookies and whatever else they need to celebrate their Christmas."

AMERICAN CLERGYMEN: The Rev. William Sloane Coffin, one of three U.S. clergymen heading to Tehran to celebrate Christmas with the hostages, said he was not afraid of the visit being used for Iranian propaganda purposes. But Roman Catholic Auxiliary Bishop Thomas J. Gumbleton of Detroit said the group wanted to avoid politics.

IN WASHINGTON: Officials say a U.N. embargo will symbolize in more forceful terms the world's condemnation of the seizure of the hostages. It also will serve to draw a direct link in the mind of the average Iranian between his economic problems and the holding of the hostages.

Man bets quake will flatten L.A.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The man who bet $5,000 that a major earthquake will destroy Los Angeles next week can collect only if the disaster claims one million lives, a Union Plaza Hotel official says. "It's got to be a devastating earthquake that will kill one million people," said Johnny Quinn, race and sports director at the hotel. Quinn, in announcing other specifications of the wager, said the earthquake must occur between noon Dec. 31 and noon Jan. 1. The hotel put up 70-1 odds Friday after the man, described as "well-dressed and 40-ish," asked for and received the odds from oddsmaker Bob Martin. The man told hotel officials he was from Virginia, but they declined to identify him. If the disaster occurs, the bet returns $350,000. "He didn't seem to be a nut," said Quinn. "He said he had done a lot of reading on the subject."

U.N. officer sentenced for smuggling

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A high-ranking United Nations forces officer who had served in Lebanon was sentenced today to 15 years in prison for smuggling explosives to Palestinian guerrillas in Israel. Lt. Col. Alfred Gom of Nigeria, a military information officer of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, was arrested last June after a road accident near Jerusalem. Police investigating the accident discovered guns and explosives in the back seat of Gom's car. Israel Radio reported that among documents discovered in Gom's possession was a letter from Ibrahim Abdel Azziz, a Palestinian guerrilla leader killed in Cyprus two weeks ago.

Professor says hostage release is negotiable

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A professor just back from Iran said the 50 American hostages might be released if the U.S. government acknowledged that charges lodged against the deposed shah by militant Iranian students were just. "The climate for a negotiated settlement exists in Iran" among the students, professor Norman Forer said Sunday night during a news conference at Kansas City International Airport.

Forer, a professor of social welfare at the University of Kansas, said it would be a "tragedy" if the American government did not respond. Forer spent nearly three weeks in Iran where he said he attempted "to establish a dialogue" between Americans and Iranians. Neither the university nor the U.S. State Department authorized the trip. Forer criticized the State Department's handling of the Iranian crisis and said American press coverage of the hostage situation had been "irresponsible."

Altercation ends with shooting

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A 16-year-old Odessa junior high school student was shot to death early Saturday morning as she sat in a car holding her 5-month-old baby in her arms, police said. Authorities said Helen Diaz was shot once in the temple with a high-caliber rifle. She died at an Odessa hospital. The baby was unharmed. A 16-year-old Odessa youth was taken into custody two hours after the shooting at a west Odessa city park. Police said they arrested the juvenile's father on a misdemeanor charge of tampering with evidence. Officers said the man called his home from the police station and told someone in Spanish to "get rid of the gun."

Temple Black recalls Zanuck as friend

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Movie mogul Darryl Zanuck, a force in American films from "Little Caesar" to "The Sound of Music," was remembered by one of his biggest stars, former child actress Shirley Temple Black, as "a fine playmate and a good friend."

Zanuck, one of the founders of 20th Century-Fox and the last of the major movie producers from Hollywood's Golden Age, died Saturday of a stroke and complications from pneumonia. He was 77.

He had been in and out of a coma since entering the hospital Oct. 29 after a heart attack.

Mrs. Black, who was one of 20th Century-Fox's "biggest box-office draws during the 1930s, remembered Zanuck Sunday as a man who "made some very important benchmarks for the industry."

Zanuck was brisk and nervous who paced his office, barking orders while swinging a polo mallet. "It's silly to say money hasn't meant anything — but it has never been the primary consideration," he once said. "Actually, nothing has ever given me the genuine satisfaction of taking pictures, seeing them through and then getting wonderful reviews. I love what I'm doing."

Zanuck was born in Nebraska in 1902, a sickly child whose health prompted his parents to move to California.

'Tidings of great joy'

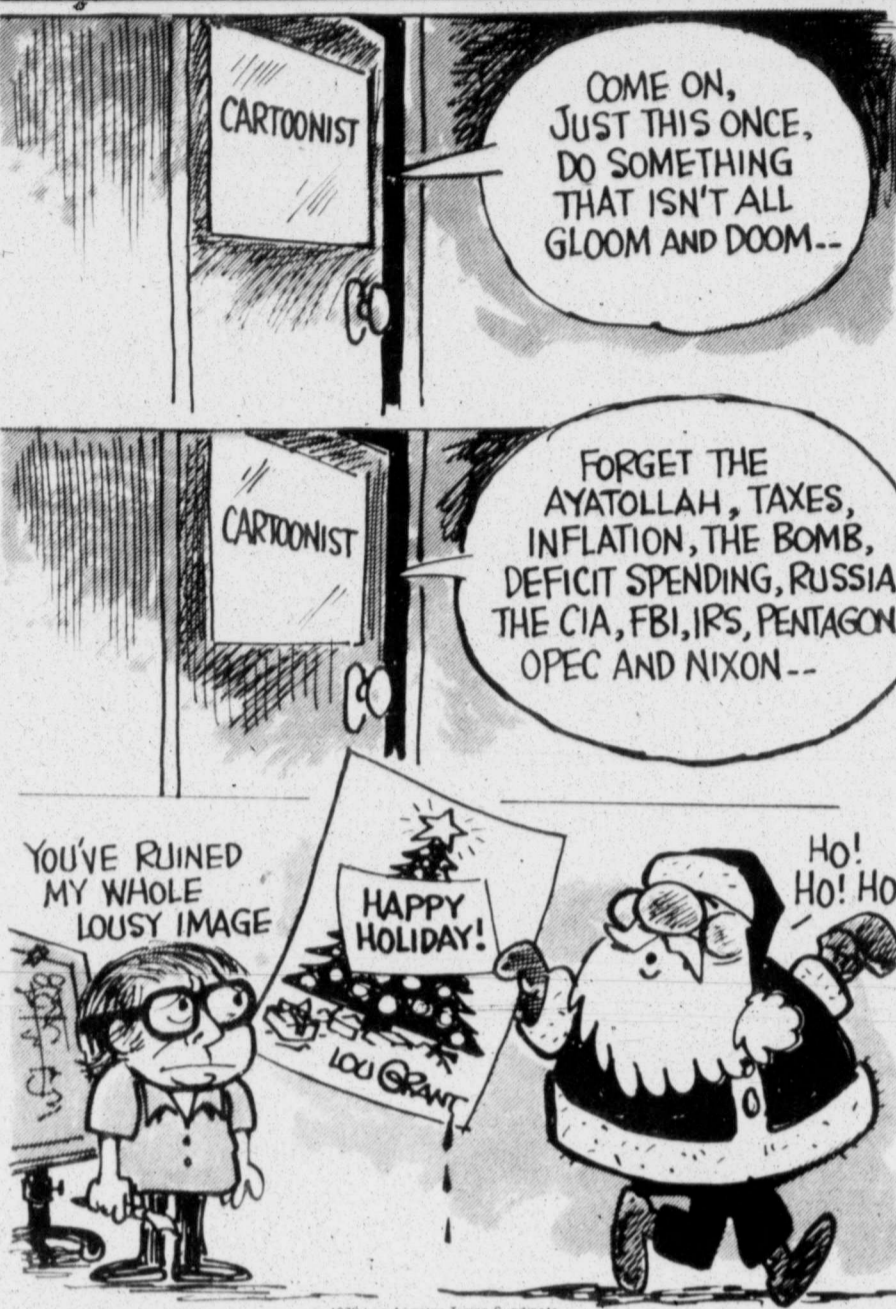

"And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed."
 "(And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria)."
 "And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city."
 "And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:)"
 "To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child."
 "And so it was, that while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered."
 "And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn."
 "And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night."
 "And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid."
 "And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."
 "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."
 "And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger."
 "And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,
 "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."
 "And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us go now even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which has come to pass, which the Lord hath made known to us."
 "And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger."
 "And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child."
 "And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds."
 "But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

 "And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them." — (Luke 2: 1-20.)

"When they (wise men) had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.
 "When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.
 "And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.
 "And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.
 "And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him." — (Matthew 2: 9-13.)

Mark Russell says

The Department of Energy plans to conduct a $2 million experiment to confirm a theory that half of the earth will disintegrate in 10,000 billion billion years. Couldn't we just take their word for it?
 This planet is built to last and, just think, in 20,000 billion billion years it will have worn out. That's twice the life of the warranty.
 Physicists are described as being "excited" over the theory that one or two atomic particles disappear in a year's time. As we say in the scientific community — whatever turns you on.
 That's a pretty slow process and, if this theory is correct, we are living on a global Alka-Seltzer. Therefore, the end of the world will not come with a big explosion, but with a plop plop fizz.
 I am grateful to the Energy Department for spending $2 million on a project of such urgency. I prefer this version of the future over the old scientific theory that the world is going to hell in a handbasket.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

After all, it's Christmastime

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Investigative reporters grate against the political conviviality and easy friendships of official Washington. Their function is to chronicle the misdeeds, hypocrisy and greed of the high and mighty.
 It is far more agreeable to write pleasant stories about the powerful. Public officeholders, after all, are usually likeable; that's why they get elected. So I have this compelling urge to find something nice to say about the people whose human frailties I have exposed. After all, Christmas comes but once a year.
 Here, then, are a few gold stars to paste on some of those bad report cards I've been handing out to public figures during 1979.
 Chief Justice Warren Burger The Scrooge of the First Amendment can be a kindly man in his personal relations. When Justice William O. Douglas, an unflinching liberal opponent of the conservative chief justice, suffered a paralyzing stroke, Burger telephoned then-president Jerry Ford to arrange for a plane to fly Douglas home from the Caribbean.
 Another ideological foe on the high court, Justice William Brennan, described Burger as "completely passionate" and "entirely absorbed" in assuring that Douglas got the best possible care after his seizure. Several of the justices credit Burger with saving Douglas' life.
 Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho Though Hansen was roundly ridiculed by the Carter administration and the nation's editorial cartoonists for his one-man, unauthorized trip to Tehran, my sources tell me that the big bluff bear of a man made a positive impression on the Iranians with his open, friendly, Western manner.

 Even the embassy captors — whose political views could hardly be more different from Hansen's — were impressed by his amiable approach. Hansen went to Iran as a supporter of the exiled shah, but listened to the radicals. More importantly, they listened to him when he defended the U.S. position. Hansen didn't need to make that trip. It took guts to do it, and his straightforward, John Wayne approach may have helped to defuse a dangerous situation.
 Rep. Billy Lee Evans, D-Ga. When he visited a camp for Vietnamese refugees in Thailand, Evans met 15-year-old Gin Hoanh Ly, who had escaped from her homeland without her family, one of thousands of ethnic Chinese banished from Vietnam since the communists took over in 1975. On his return to the United States, Evans found a sponsor for Ly. She is now in the United States, learning English and picking up the culture of a free country she would never have seen if it hadn't been for Evans.
 Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo. Five days after reading a newspaper story on the starvation in war-torn Cambodia, Danforth was on his way with two Senate colleagues to the Thai-Cambodian border. Despite warnings from Thai military officials and the U.S. ambassador that his life could be in danger, Danforth, an Ivy League Episcopal clergyman, insisted on vi-

CHARLEY REESE Mythology, like false road map, can be very dangerous

ORLANDO, Fla. — It's a good idea to examine now and then some of the modern mythology that people believe. Mythology, like a false road map, can be dangerous if you don't recognize it for what it is.
 One prevalent myth is the often heard statement that automobile manufacturers have been buying up fabulous inventions which would provide tremendous gasoline efficiency and hiding them from the public.
 How do I know this is a myth? Well, in the first place when you talk about cars, you are talking about science and not magic. Every ounce of gasoline must spend itself not only in maintaining forward motion but in overcoming inertia when starting and friction of tires against earth, of air against the car, and of part against part. The margin for improvement is not nearly so large as non-engineers imagine.
 But the most important reason is the simple fact that car manufacturers simply had no motive. Today everyone is aware of fuel efficiency, but if you will just tap your memory bank, you will recall that in the years of cheap gasoline, the great majority of Americans didn't give a hoot about fuel efficiency.
 Detroit did not force big cars on the American public. The American public demanded them. You know as well as I that the majority of us wanted rubber-burning acceleration, a heavy car that gave a comfortable ride and that could go all day at 75 to 80 miles per hour and still have enough juice for quick passing as well as lots of accessories. Those requirements are inconsistent with high gas mileage.

 By the same token, European and Japanese car manufacturers did not build small, fuel-efficient cars just because they were conservation-minded. They, too, built what their consumers demanded. Neither Europe nor Japan had decent roads, long distances to cover, or an economy which generated the amount of spendable income ours did. Nor has either country ever had cheap gasoline.
 Another myth is the belief that planned obsolescence is a plot by Detroit to force us to buy a new car every two years. The truth is that until recently at least American cars would last just as long as imports if given the same use and the same maintenance.
 The truth is that most Americans bought new cars every two years because they got bored with the old one and could afford to indulge their whims. We have allowed Detroit to take a bum rap from fanatic consumers and socialists just because we did not want to admit that the alleged "sins" were ours, not the manufacturers.

Most of the modern myths, in fact, originate with fanatic minorities who have special axes to grind. The myth that all food additives are poison originated with health food faddists. If you are over 40, just visit a local high school and note how the majority of teenagers raised on "junk" food tower over you. Today's generation of youngsters are taller, stronger and healthier than their parents and grandparents.
 Remember, too, that two of the nation's most widely known health food faddists, J.I. Rodale, former publisher of Prevention and Organic Gardening, and Adele Davis, who wrote several books on nutrition, both died at relatively early ages of a heart attack and cancer respectively.
 There is one unfortunate fact about the communications revolution. Nonsense can be as rapidly and as widely spread as fact and wisdom and, thanks to television's love of talk shows, is by far more abundant.
 Ours is an age of propaganda, huckstering, and ideological conflict which often politicizes scientists, academics and writers. Virtually all of the ideologies have their own retinues of scientists, scholars, writers, and foundations to trot out in an attempt to sell their viewpoint.
 Add to that the endless parade of actors, comedians, and book peddlers talking on the tube about subjects they know nothing about and it's no wonder there are more myths floating about today than there were in the Dark Ages.
 Perhaps the answer is to start teaching formal logic in kindergarten.

INSIDE REPORT:

Foreign minister's demand tempts Carter on Iran crisis

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The demand by Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh of Iran for a "grand jury" investigation of "crimes" of the shah and the U.S. back to President Eisenhower is setting the stage for a harder line by Jimmy Carter — or tacit admission by him that U.S. hands really are dirty.
 Such an admission would be viewed by many presidential aides as intolerable, even if it did assure freedom for the 50 U.S. hostages. Yet, a temptation clearly exists among some other presidential advisers, in and out of the White House, "to be a little de-meaning" (in the candid phrase of one) and go part way with Ghotbzadeh to get the hostages home.
 The strategy of the Iranian militants to twin the shah with the U.S. and put both on trial before freeing the American prisoners was succinctly outlined by Ghotbzadeh on ABC's "Issues and Answers" Dec. 16. What he wants is "getting to the front the crimes that (the U.S.) has committed here and the interventions of the American administrations," along with "the crimes of the shah."
 The trouble with this is that although some American politicians, led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, have made a conspicuous point of their agreement with one half of that charge — the part about the "crimes" of the shah — the half about the crimes of the American government, past and present, has few defenders, at least in public.

 The temptation for Jimmy Carter is to yield a little here, a little there on these cunning demands in hopes of freeing the hostages without having to get nasty. That is the effect of what he did, for example, in hastily packing off the former shah to an islet off the coast of Panama. The pressure was a friendly signal to the men running Iran that, deep down, Jimmy Carter agrees that the shah is not a very nice man.
 But giving even so small a hostage as this is likely to whet the appetite of the fanatical but shrewd men trying to maintain their control over Iran, and to force the U.S. into at least tacit agreement that the shah should indeed be tried for "crimes."
 In fact, however, political tension between the past and the present is an immovable barricade along the route toward even the first half of Ghotbzadeh's demand — an investigation of the "crimes" of the shah. From today's perspective, Kennedy's Dec. 2 charge that the shah "ran one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind" and stole "umpteen billions of dollars" from his country must have looked like an engraved invitation in Tehran.

 The fact that a presidential candidate with the influence and following of Teddy Kennedy could be so outspoken about the hated shah might seem to Ghotbzadeh as evidence that if only America spoke out, it would support his demand.
 From an earlier perspective, however, both Carter's subtle anti-shah hints and Kennedy's blunt-instrument attack on the shah have the faint taint of Monday morning quarterbacking. Consider President John F. Kennedy's private message to the shah 16 days before his assassination, which praised that same regime so damned today by his brother.
 Talking about the Soviet political and economic threat to Iran, Kennedy said he knew the shah fully understood Soviet intentions, a fact "amply evident from the far-reaching reforms that you have undertaken."
 "Opposition" to these reforms within Iran (partly resulting from a cutback of subsidies to the mullahs and ayatollahs) "was to be expected," Kennedy said, adding: "We therefore respect all the more the courage you have shown in striking at the roots of poverty and social discontent" despite "resistance of favored groups...with privileged positions."
 Jack Kennedy was not alone in such presidential assessments of the now-scorned shah. Communications similar to Kennedy's (only one of many from Kennedy made available to us by diplomatic sources) went to the shah from every president from Harry Truman to Jimmy Carter.

 At the time of Kennedy's Nov. 6, 1963, message, the shah had been in power almost continuously for 22 years, presumably within the time span covered by Teddy Kennedy's reference to "one of the most violent regimes."
 In dealing with Ghotbzadeh's "grand jury" demand for a linked probe of the shah's "crimes" and the "crimes" of the U.S., Carter cannot escape this written record. A soft response from the U.S. might indeed hasten freedom of our citizens in their embassy jail. But it would require a rewriting of history as recorded by seven presidents, both in public and private, of monumental proportions.

siting the refugee camps. Since his return from Southeast Asia, Danforth has doggedly pursued his efforts to help international relief organizations that are trying to keep Cambodian refugees from starving.
 Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La. I've blasted the 47-year-old, baby-faced Johnston in the past for his devotion to Big Oil. But when Israeli friends approached him a few weeks ago to help Cambodia's refugees, Johnston moved into action.
 Using his senatorial clout, Johnston and his staff helped the generous donor of corn-soy milk — a supplier to the State Department's AID program — to get tons of the donated product earmarked for hungry refugees.
 He wanted transportation for the vital foodstuffs to the West Coast, and airborne delivery to Cambodia.
 Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass. For the past two years, Conte — whose constituency includes about as many Argentinians as newspaper editors — has made a personal crusade out of the plight of Jacopo Timerman, a Buenos Aires newspaper publisher who was thrown into jail without charges.
 Conte learned of Timerman's situation while visiting Argentina with a human rights group, and the Massachusetts congressman hammered away with speeches, phone calls and letters. Timerman was finally set free by the Argentine military government last October, thanks in no small part to his unseen friend in Washington.
 Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore. When he learned that Jung-sook (Jenny) Mun, a 20-year-old Korean orphan, was too old to be eligible for adoption by the Oregon family that had taken in her two younger sisters, AuCoin pushed through a private bill that got Jenny declared a child for immigration purposes.
 Now legally adopted, Jenny may make it to the States for a holiday get-together with her sisters and her new parents.
 So much for the gold stars. Tomorrow I'll be back at the same old stand, handing out demerits to those who deserve them.

Two dead, three hurt in clash

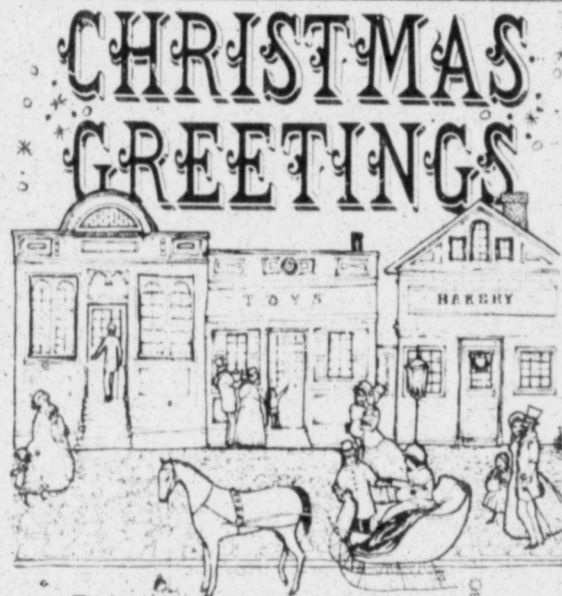

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Two persons were reported killed, three wounded and some 900 arrested today as students' occupied schools in Ankara and Istanbul on the first anniversary of bloody clashes between rival Moslem sects in the southeastern Turkish city of Kahraman-maras. One youth was killed when police stormed an Ankara high school, broke a siege by leftist students and arrested an estimated 400 of them, official sources said. But other students escaped to nearby slums and began sniping from rooftops at troops who pursued them in tanks and armored vehicles.

Fog-shrouded air crash kills 39; 4 others survive

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A Turkish Airlines jet, only two minutes from touchdown at Ankara airport, slammed into a fog-shrouded hill, killing 39 of the 43 persons aboard, the airlines said. A stewardess and three passengers survived the Sunday crash and were in good condition today, authorities said.

burned remains may never be identified. Aviation officials said they have not yet determined the cause of the crash, but they noted that the area was blanketed by heavy fog. Ankara has been sheeted by heavy fog for much of the past week, forcing intermittent closings of the city's airport, the officials said. It was opened at the time of the crash. It was the third F-28 to crash since Turkish Airlines bought five of the Dutch-made medium range jets in 1973.

Nuclear plants to check faulty stress tests

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has asked operators of all the nation's nuclear plants to determine whether they used faulty earthquake stress calculations that have been reported at the Seabrook atomic power plant.

"Until the problems at Seabrook are carefully evaluated, we won't know what the implications are for the other plants," Harold Denton, director of NRC's office of nuclear regulation, said Saturday.

On Dec. 13, the agency's office of inspection and enforcement issued a notice to the industry that Seabrook's builders, Public Service Co. of New Hampshire, had reported that incorrect "amplified response spectra," quake-proofing calculations, had been used in the plant.

According to the notice, the builders said "the wrong ARS were used for the design of some containment supports at their Seabrook units," and the NRC instructed all plants to examine their calculations.

The order could result in the closing for repairs of any plant where the problem exists, NRC officials said.

"If, in fact, other plants have made errors in the spectra they used and they've underestimated seismic forces, they'd have to fix them. This would likely lead to shutdowns," said James Knight, the NRC's assistant director for engineering.

"Apparently, somebody made a mistake which turns out to be a significant error, and now we've got to determine how widespread it may be," said Roger Mattson, director of the NRC's division of system safety. He said the request for review "has gone out to all operating nuclear plants and to every plant under construction — more than 160 operations."

The problem deals with quake-proofing requirements determined by possibly faulty computer studies of what the vibrations from earthquakes will do to the plant and its internal systems.

"This could be serious because of the possibility that inadequate construction and supports of the hundreds of pipes vital to the reactor's safety systems could break during an earthquake," Mattson said in a telephone interview from Washington.

The problem surfaced earlier this month when engineers at Seabrook were responding to an NRC bulletin warning that the published weights of valves used at Seabrook and other plants were incorrect.

The NRC said Seabrook repeated earthquake stress tests based on the revised weights of the valves and discovered original calculations were wrong.

Knight said every component in a power plant must be designed and constructed to withstand the vibrations from an earthquake.

"When an earthquake shakes the power plant, it sets up a response, different frequencies of vibrations. These high frequencies vibrate pipes and equipment, and if the vibrations are great enough, equipment could react like a glass bombarded with high frequency sound and crumble," Knight said.

Mattson said mistakes of this type "shouldn't happen."

"This is serious. Good engineering practice shouldn't allow this to happen," he said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Better to be thin than overweight

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know it is unhealthy to be overweight, but isn't being underweight just as harmful? Some of the people I know seem to be dieting to extremes because they consider it fashionable. — Carol

Dear Carol: While being slim is stylish, it is true that excessive thinness or unexplained weight loss can be a symptom of an underlying illness. On the other hand, being underweight, in itself, is not an indication that a person is unhealthy. In fact, available data indicate that thin people live longer and are less prone to such diseases as diabetes, kidney disorders and liver and heart disease.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have tried unsuccessfully for the past year to become pregnant. How common is this and what are the chances that I will still be able to start a family? I am 35 years old and in good health. — Mrs. A.E.

Dear Mrs. E.: About 10 million men and women in the United States have fertility problems of one kind or another. It is estimated that half of these people can be helped.

Some fertility problems are related to the growing trend to postpone having children. Although men and women achieve maximum fertility in their mid-20s, many couples prefer waiting before starting a family; women in their 30s and 40s may find becoming pregnant more difficult.

The American Fertility Society considers a couple infertile if they have been trying unsuccessfully for a year to have a child. In about 60 percent of couples who are fertile, the woman will conceive within six months — 80 percent within a year. In addition, five to 10 percent become pregnant during the second year. The remaining couples, about one in six, require treatment.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife has become almost a hermit; she literally refuses to leave the house most of the time, and never goes out alone. In every other way she is a bright and sensible individual. After I thoroughly lost patience with her, she agreed to go for treatment. Her psychiatrist has diagnosed the condition as agoraphobia. I never heard of this before, but he tells me it is not at all uncommon. What causes a phobia such as this? — Mel

Dear Mel: The cause of phobias is largely unknown. Agoraphobia — literally, fear of the marketplace — may not be the most common fear, but it is the one for which patients most often seek treatment. While patients with other phobias — for example, fear of heights or fear of flying — can generally avoid the dreaded situation, those with agoraphobia cannot do so very easily. These patients, therefore, are often forced to seek treatment since the condition, in its severe form, is virtually incap-

Two West Texas area interstate highway work contracts awarded

Contracts have been awarded for work on sections of two interstate highways in the Permian Basin area.

Allen Construction Co., Inc., of San Antonio has received a contract and work order for the construction of Interstate Highway 10 at Fort Stockton, according to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The project extends from 3.7 miles west of Texas 18 to 2.9 miles east of Texas 18, a distance of 6.6 miles, and is primarily on new location just north of Fort Stockton.

Included in the project will be the building of interchanges with U.S. 285, Texas 18, FM-1053 and County Road 7-D. The sections of U.S. 285, Texas 18 and FM 1053 between U.S. 290 and the new I-10 will also be reconstructed to accommodate expected increases in traffic.

The proposed roadway will be four-lane divided, with two-lane, two-way continuous frontage roads.

Charles Webb, resident engineer in Fort Stockton, is in charge of the project with State Department of Highways and Public Transportation District Engineer A. Henry Pearson providing overall supervision.

The State Department of Highways has also awarded a contract and issued a work order to Strain Brothers, Inc., of San Angelo for additional work on Interstate 20 in Ector County.

The project begins 0.6 miles west of Judkins and extends eastward to 0.4 miles west of FM 866, a distance of 6.4 miles.

The contract price was $2,987,000 with 180 working days allowed to complete the work.

Five inches of asphaltic stabilized base and one and one-half inches of asphaltic concrete pavement will be placed on the main lanes as a second stage of construction. This project will complete the work on I-20 in this area.

Producing the materials and crushing rock will start in the next few days with the actual work on the roadways to continue later.

Vernon Wilkinson, resident engineer in Odessa, is in charge of the project with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation District Engineer A. Henry Pearson providing overall supervision.

Drivers are reminded to observe barricades, the posted speed limits and construction equipment in order to prevent accidents in the area.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE

Avoid Stinginess

By Alfred Sheinwold

Everybody knows that bridge players are the most generous people in the world, and generosity is very fashionable at this time of the year. All the more reason to avoid the stinginess of today's declarer.

South stungily ruffed the third heart with the nine of spades. He's still alive. After all, everybody knows that bridge partners are law-abiding citizens.

South drew trumps and led the ace and queen of clubs. East took the king of clubs and led a heart, defeating the contract.

USE HONOR

Of course South should ruff the third heart with an honor. Then he can lead the nine of spades to dummy's ten, reaching dummy to lead the jack of clubs.

South repeats the club finesse and has no further problem. The hand is too simple for most days of the year, but we should all rest our brains on Christmas Eve. Watch for tougher generous plays the rest of the week.

Biology laboratory designed for blind

INDIANA, Pa. (AP) — William Waskoski has brought the wonder of biology to the fingertips of students who have never seen a frog — let alone touched and dissected one.

Waskoski, a professor at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, this year converted a stockroom into a self-instructional biology laboratory for the blind.

"It's something I've had on my mind for a long time," Waskoski said in a telephone interview. "I had experiences with blind students many years ago and it was frustrating to incorporate them into a lab designed for the sighted."

The new laboratory holds five stalls. Each contains fresh and preserved biology specimens, brailled drawings and models and a tape recorder.

"It deals with as many tactile materials as I can get into a lab situation," Waskoski said. "They need hands-on experience to gain a concept. If questions arise, I can show them."

In an experiment on blood circulation, a tape recording directs the students to examine with their hands the structures of a dissected sheep's heart.

Plant adaptation is illustrated with 17 examples to be touched, including germinating plants, a coconut seed and wooden models of various leaf shapes. Other stalls cover animal behavior and taxonomy, the classification of organisms. But the most popular experiment with the six blind students in Waskoski's class is frog dissection.

"One of my students had never experienced scissors, never had a pair in his hand," Waskoski said. "You have a wide range of abilities, but some dissected equal to or better than sighted students."

General biology for the blind also includes the normal lectures and field trips, including one to a nearby creek.

Education, as exemplified by these marching schoolgirls in Aligarh, is the key if the Moslems of north India are going to improve their lot. The Moslems, 50 million strong, take pride in the religious fervor running through much of the Islamic world, but they still have a deep sense of depression because so many opportunities are denied them. (Los Angeles Times Photo by Tyler Marshall)

North India's 50 million Moslems make up largest oppressed minority

By TYLER MARSHALL
The Los Angeles Times

ALIGARH, India — Tariq Rehman Saigal was 21 when he gave up the Hindu religion and became one of India's 75 million Moslems — the largest minority group in the country.

That was four years ago.

"I expected some discrimination," he said, "but I never thought it would be like this."

Some members of his family now consider him a source of embarrassment, and he is convinced that his application for a commercial pilot's license was rejected because of his religion.

If religion was the cause, older and more experienced Moslems in North India agree that it would not be unusual.

FOR UNLIKE the Moslems who arrived in southern India as traders more than five centuries ago and are now well integrated and relatively prosperous, the Moslems who once conquered and colonized most of the north are a depressed minority, kept in check by the Hindus who outnumber them 8 to 1.

The Moslems of North India, 50 million strong, take pride in the religious fervor running through much of the Islamic world, but they still have a deep sense of depression.

This sense of depression is a result of British colonial rule, which favored Hindus, and from the subsequent trauma of independence in 1948, which brought on partition and the creation of Islamic Pakistan.

Indeed, the idea of a separate Islamic nation, so carefully nurtured in the mid-1940s by intellectuals at the Aligarh Moslem University, is viewed by the present generation of faculty as a disaster from which their community has never recovered, psychologically, economically or socially.

"The upper and middle classes, the intelligentsia, the leadership — they all went to Pakistan," said Syed Haqqi, head of the university's political science department.

THOSE WHO STAYED behind, largely uneducated and isolated from the Hindu majority by religion and their Urdu language, were blamed by Hindus for dividing India and for the wave of communal riots and population shifts that accompanied partition.

"Anyone voicing demands for the Moslem minority was automatically a potential fifth columnist for Pakistan," Haqqi recalled.

For years India's Hindus feared that the Moslems desire to improve their lot could be equated with treason, and this fear was eased only by Indian military victories over Pakistan, along with the emergence of Bangladesh in the place of what had been East Pakistan.

But North India's Moslems remain a weak, leaderless group that has failed to regenerate itself in the three decades since independence.

HAGGI, A POLITICAL scientist, traces the decline of North India's Moslems to an abortive Moslem-led uprising against the British nearly a century before independence.

"After the mutiny, the British suppressed the Moslems, so they were slow to take up Western education," he said. "They soon fell behind."

In the years before independence, Moslems were assured jobs by government quotas, which reserved a specific number of positions for them. A small but active Moslem middle class carved itself a respectable niche among the professionals of colonial India.

But with independence, both the protection of the job quotas and the professional class disappeared.

THE HINDU MAJORITY doled out jobs in trade and commerce as well as in government first by caste, then by community, and finally to others.

"The discrimination wasn't just against us, but by the time it came to 'others' there was nothing," Haqqi said.

Azfar Husain, general secretary of the Jama'at-e-Islami-Hind, a small, fundamentalist Moslem political party, estimates that today only two percent of the central government's service jobs are filled by Moslems, even though they account for about 11 percent of the population.

In the competition for higher-level civil service posts, where vacancies are filled by rigorous — but fairly administered competitive examination, Moslems also fare badly.

Most of northern India's Moslems find work in skilled crafts such as wood working and copper engraving. Others are small traders or petty entrepreneurs.

BECAUSE MUCH of India's industry has been built up since independence, Moslems have lost out on employment opportunities in this field too. Consequently, even for those Moslems who are educated, opportunity is limited. The problem of the educated unemployed is a growing one in India, but the Moslems, like any minority in such a situation, have been hit harder.

Professor Shabbir Khan, head of the economics department at the Moslem university, estimated that no more than 15 or 20 of the 150 bachelor degree candidates in his department would find jobs. And Haqqi added, "For most of our products, it is a case of concealed unemployment. Many come back saying, 'I'm helping my father or uncle in his business.'"

With opportunities at home blocked, many of the community's brightest prospects leave India for better opportunities in the oil-rich Middle East. Haqqi's son, for example, has moved to Bagdad University, where he says the research facilities are better. Khan has a nephew and two sons-in-law working in the Middle East "because the pay is better."

BUT THIS CONTINUED drain is only part of the reason the community is leaderless and directionless more than three decades after independence. Those few North Indian Moslems who do achieve success tend to abandon their roots.

"If a Moslem businessman makes it big, he will divorce himself from the community because Indian business runs on personal connections and there are none of any use to him in our community," Hasan Rizvi, editor of the Moslem community daily Radiance, said.

The story is similar in politics. Despite their numbers, Moslems hold only 21 of the 542 elective seats in Parliament. That is partly because the record of the Moslem members of Parliament, in terms of service to their community, has been so poor Rizvi said.

"Once a Moslem becomes an MP, he ceases to think about the community," Rizvi said. "His loyalty goes to the party, he becomes weak and subservient and forgets where he came from."

IN THE COMMUNITY, these people are called derisively sarkari — official — Moslems, the Uncle Toms of Moslem India.

With no leaders, there has been no organization, and with no organization, little chance for real progress.

In recent years, there have been tentative attempts to form loose political alliances to articulate community desires.

In the campaign for January's national election, the heads of various Moslem groups have demanded quotas for government jobs and seats in parliament commensurate with the community's size. India's untouchables and other minorities already have such safeguards.

So far, however, the major parties have shown more interest in symbolic, rather than substantive concessions to win the Moslem vote.

Although they have been successful in preserving much of their cultural identity, Indian Moslems have also assumed many of the customs of the Hindu majority.

LIKE NOWHERE ELSE in the Moslem world, names such as Syed, Sheikh and Khan have taken on caste connotations here, much as Hindu names have.

"Inequality is a basic precept of Hinduism, and it's been adopted by the Moslems here too," Haqqi said.

But the resurgence of Islam elsewhere has rekindled a long-dormant sense of confidence in the community, especially among the young people.

While Moslem fathers talk of working hard to exert moral power and win the confidence of the Hindu majority with deeds of good faith and hard work, their sons are growing restless.

"We should ask for job quotas," one youth said. "If they aren't given, we should take them."

Unlike the Moslems who arrived in southern India more than five centuries ago and are now well integrated and relatively prosperous, the Moslems who conquered most of north India are a depressed minority, like this pedicab driver, kept in check by the Hindus, who outnumber them eight to one. The dance will start at 9 p.m. and continue until 1:30 a.m. on New Year's.

Reindeer returned to farm

BOONVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — After 10 days on the loose, "Santa's Reindeer" has been returned to the village park's Christmas display in this central New York community.

The 200-pound buck was felled finally by two tranquilizer darts about 1 1/2 miles north of the village. He was taken back to the park, which he fled Dec. 11 after vandals knocked down the gate to the display.

A veterinarian pronounced the 4 1/2-foot tall, antlered buck fit. But because of the ordeal, the deer was to be returned to an animal farm in Little Falls where he is kept year-round.

Residents have put up a $1,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of those who freed the animal.

Have a beautiful Holiday Season filled with happiness and good cheer. Thanks for your kind patronage.

Hungry, partner? Why not go to jail

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Where can you get a dinner of roast pork, stuffing, potatoes, lima bean casserole, applesauce, bread and butter, and butter pecan pie for less than $3?

At the Hampshire County jail menus like these have brought the chef rave reviews — and three recent job offers. But Howard Ouimet says he's happy and plans to stay until he retires.

His fare was criticized earlier this month by Northampton Mayor-elect David Musante when jail officials submitted next year's $140,000 budget to feed guards and inmates. This year the meals cost taxpayers $3.71 a day per person, or about $134,000.

The "word on the street" is that prisoners eat too well, Musante said.

But Ouimet, 57, says his job is to serve good food and what he's doing is simply a good job. "If I can't serve it to my wife, I wouldn't serve it to them. They're people too."

Some of the 100 inmates — admittedly a captive audience — have said they've been in other correctional facilities throughout the state, such as those at Norfolk and Concord. And they say "the best food in the state is right here."

Pacific storm battering coast

By The Associated Press

Boats were driven aground off the California coast, backpackers and skiers in Oregon were warned of avalanche dangers and radio stations in Washington were knocked off the air as an early winter storm punished the Pacific Coast with rain and snow.

Winds were clocked at 90 mph atop Mt. Tamalpais, north of San Francisco, as the storm pushed east Sunday. One disc jockey looked out her fifth floor window and watched garbage bags flying by, while on the San Francisco Bay Bridge, drivers crept toward darkened homes as winds of 60 mph shoved against their cars.

Christmas lights blinked off as the storm cut power to tens of thousands of homes in the three states. Snow accumulations of more than 7 inches were reported in some parts of Oregon, while rains flooded basements in posh San Francisco suburbs.

"We're having a mess here," said Redwood City, Calif., police officer Joanne Blocker. "I wish I were home having a hot toddy."

Parts of major interstate highways from California through Oregon and Nevada were closed before the wintery blast weakened Sunday night. However, some storm activity was expected to linger through Christmas.

In the Manchester area, east of Port Orchard, Wash., Puget Sound waves rode through front yards, witnesses said, and fishing boats were torn from their moorings and blown ashore.

Highway 160 between Port Orchard and the Southworth ferry terminal was closed for a time when waves threw logs on the roadway.

Gale warnings were posted in Oregon as snow piled up. The U.S. Forest Service advised backpackers and skiers to beware of worsening avalanche conditions.

California's Monterey Peninsula was punished heavily, more by wind than by rain. One woman in Prunedale reported that half the roof of her mobile home blew off and landed in a neighbor's corral.

Some flooding was reported in posh Marin County, while residents of Redding, near Sacramento, who ventured from their homes were greeted by the unusual sight of 8 inches of snow.

In Washington, gusts of 49 mph were recorded at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport. Ten area radio stations were off the air for about 9 1/2 hours when they lost power to their transmitters on Cougar Mountain near Issaquah, east of Seattle.

Don Noel, spokesman for Puget Sound Power & Light Co., said the storm was typical for the season and less severe than one earlier this month.

"It's only bad for the ones whose lights are out, and it's very bad for them," he said.

SKI lodge operators in the Lake Tahoe area were delighted by the first heavy snowfall of the season.

The Child is born! He brings us hope of lasting peace and kindness. We're wishing you a very blessed, joyous Christmas.

Gunrunner ring broken by police

NEW YORK (AP) — A former CIA agent and an electronics company president, described by officials as major international gunrunners, have been charged with conspiring to sell $2 million in firearms, poison darts and other lethal armor to undercover agents.

Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau on Sunday announced the arrests of Frank Edward Terpil, 40, who was discharged from the CIA in 1971, and George Gregory Korkala, 38, president of Amstech International, a Nutley, N.J., company that allegedly stored the firearms.

The two were seized at the New York Hilton Hotel on Saturday, moments after taking a $56,000 down payment from two undercover policemen who contracted to buy 10,000 machine guns from a warehouse in England, Morgenthau said.

FBI agents raided Amstech offices in New Jersey, finding a cache of sophisticated "sample weaponry" including envelope bombs and paperback bombs, Morgenthau said.

At the same time, agents from New Scotland Yard raided a lodge owned by Terpil in Crewe, England, seizing documents and taking several persons into custody.

Morgenthau said Terpil, of McLean, Va., operated two safe houses for fugitives in England and had sold $3.2 million in weapons, explosives and surveillance equipment to Idi Amin while Amin was president of Uganda.

Charges against the men include first- and third-degree weapons possession, manufacture, transport, disposition and defacement of weapons and dangerous instruments and appliances, and third-degree conspiracy.

Each would face up to 25 years in prison if convicted on the weapons charge. The other charges carry terms of from one to seven years upon conviction.

I WISH YOU CHRISTMAS

How strangely, thoroughly unnecessary it often seems to me, that we should say "I wish you a Merry Christmas!" How can Merry or any other adjective convey

A wish for greater gladness for our friends More than one word-Christmas all alone. The singing, shining word, that comprehends The utmost Grace and love men have known?

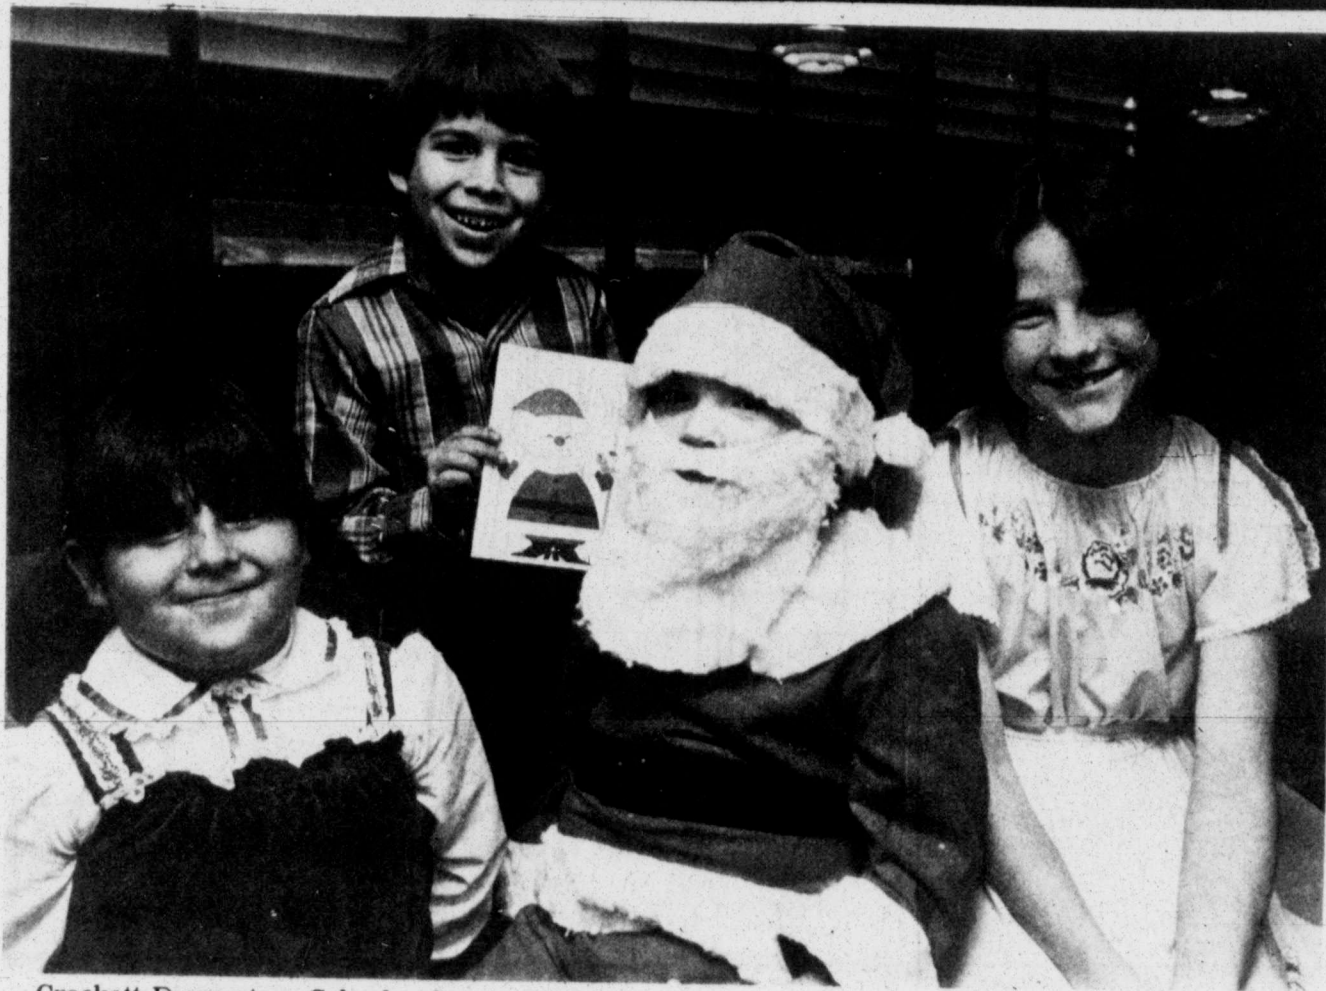

I wish you much, much more than merriment! All Faith and Hope and Love and Holy Peace,

All quietness and radiant content With blessings that continuously increase. And when I say the simple words, and small "I wish you Christmas," I have wished you all.

Isolation can harm babies

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Children born with life-threatening handicaps are often separated from their parents and placed in isolation. But this procedure can actually hinder their growth and development, says the director of a pilot program at Syracuse University.

Cheaper oil a possibility?

NEW YORK (AP) — With the price of imported oil soaring, a trade association says there is a way the United States can in effect buy a barrel of oil at least 25 percent cheaper than the going rate for imported crude.

When lead antiknocks are added to gasoline they not only boost the octane rating but lessen the need for refining, according to the Lead Industries Association.

Werner T. Meyer, LIA president, says every pound of lead antiknock used saves about $21 on a barrel of crude. With lead antiknocks priced at less than $1 a pound, $5 in effect "buys" a barrel, he said. The going price is about $20 a barrel.

bring parents of high-risk newborns into a specialized program providing "tender, loving care." Upstate Medical Center of the State University of New York is providing some of the medical forces and the project will be carried out at Crouse-Irving Memorial Hospital's neonatal and perinatal departments.

"Infants with handicaps — low birth weight, various birth defects — will have a better chance to learn and progress if they are brought into close physical contact with their families, and the sooner after birth the better," Ms. Ensher says. The program, which also draws on the expertise of social workers and psychologists, is aimed at immediate family involvement. "I think very often youngsters who are identified as having multiple difficulties have been written off, in a sense, by society," Ms. Ensher says. "One of the main objectives of this project is to try and get to these children as soon as all life-threatening problems are resolved and try to bring new hope to them and their families. It's the quality of life as much as the quantity of life we are concerned with." The program will follow the progress of some 40 infants and children, involving the families in a special learning curriculum designed for each specific situation.

Local teen-ager to compete in state pageant finals

Tory Keaton, 17, daughter of J.B. Keaton and Mrs. Barbara Keaton of Midland, has been selected as a finalist in the 1980 Miss Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant.

The 9th annual pageant, the official state finals to the Miss National Teen-Ager Pageant to be held in August in Atlanta, Ga., will be held June 6-8 on the campus of Texas Christian University at Fort Worth.

Holly Roberts of Corpus Christi, 1979 Miss Texas National Teen-Ager, will crown her successor.

Each contestant accepted will be requested to participate in the Volunteer Community Service Program of the national pageant. This program teaches teenagers to share and to participate in school and civic affairs. A mini-modeling charm course will be given during the weekend of the pageant.

The winner of the state pageant will receive a $500 cash scholarship, a modeling scholarship to Barbizon, other prizes and an all-expense paid trip to compete in the nationally televised national pageant, where $20,000 in cash scholarships will be awarded.

Contestants will be judged on scholastic achievement-leadership, poise-personality and appearance. There is no swimsuit or talent competition.

Each contestant will recite a 100 word essay on the subject, "What's Right About America."

Miss Keaton, whose hobbies are jogging, ballet, tap, piano, cooking and biking, is being sponsored by Dunlap's Department Store in Midland.

Decade of hairstyles: From 'mod' to 'retro'

CHICAGO (AP) — Revolution is simply evolution, and that's what has been seen in hair fashions during the 1970s, some of the nation's top stylists agree.

As the members of the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board reviewed the past decade of hairstyle trends, two basic lines were evident, say the 12 stylists from all over the country who make up the board.

One could be referred to as straight hair's evolution from the "mod" look of the early '70s to the sleek chic of the past year's braids, twists and bobs.

The second is curly hair, which came into its own during the decade and ran the gamut from tightly curled perms to the wavy retro feeling reminiscent of the '20s and '30s.

The two trends converged briefly about 1977, with a style known as Coupe Sauvage, a "no hairstyle hairstyle" incorporating lightly permed curl with a natural look.

This temporary blending of trends burst apart quickly with the advent of the retro revolution in fashion. Straight hair turned to slicked punk looks, while curly hair took on the waves worn by the movie heroines of half a century ago.

With the approach of the '80s, the board members see once again a variety of fashion looks that will suit everyone.

And, they point out, the latest in hair looks projected for spring 1980 is a return to short geometric haircuts reminiscent of the start of the '70s, and the addition of hairpieces, also popular 10 years ago, for dressy evenings.

He gives big in small way

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Every Christmas for the last 27 years, Charles Bowdish has given Pittsburgh a giant gift in miniature. The World War I veteran each year creates in painstaking detail a different railroad and village scene for display at the Buhl Planetarium and Institute. The exhibit drew 108,000 spectators last year. "It's a holiday tradition in Pittsburgh," said Carl Wapiennik, the planetarium director. "You think you could shrink right down, become a part of the lifestyle of the people and just go visiting." This year, Bowdish set his miniature Pennsylvania town in an autumn of the early 1900s.

Women advised to chart goals for their careers

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the most important problems facing working women today, says career counselor Marcia Fox, is the problem of "underemployment."

People who are underemployed are those who feel their talents and their abilities are not being fully utilized in their jobs, Dr. Fox noted.

"Feeling underemployed is one of the sources of deep discontent of the working woman," she said.

Dr. Fox is an assistant dean of career development and job placement at New York University's Graduate School of Public Administration and author of a recent book, "Put Your Degree to Work."

Changing jobs is a very important first step for people who feel they are underemployed, Dr. Fox said.

But, she added, "make sure you know what you're all about and make sure you know what you want and make sure you're twice as smart as everybody else out there looking for the same thing."

She said a lack of career goals was one problem that many people faced.

"A career is something that you have to have some control over, whereas a job or changing jobs gives you less control over the path you've been charting," Dr. Fox said.

She stressed that career goals were going to become more and more important to women in the work force in the years ahead.

"To the extent to which we care about career goals — and I predict that we will inevitably be caring more about career goals certainly as the divorce statistics continue to grow and the economic pressures are upon us — it's going to matter more and more that women can be responsible for their own survival and can be responsible for their own destiny," Dr. Fox said.

Dr. Fox was among a group of panelists at a recent "Stress and Working Woman" workshop held recently at the Ford Foundation here. The workshop was co-sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Foundation and the Clairol Corp.

This chart illustrates technique for mining for heavy crude in California. When discovered in the 1920s it was thought that the "goo" was worthless.

Now, all-out attempts are being made to recover and utilize the heavy crude. (Washington Post Charts by Richard Furno)

Companies make huge investment to recover California heavy crude

By J. P. SMITH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Back in the 1920s, a Union Oil geologist told his company he was onto a major oil discovery in central California. Impressed, Union drilled a string of wells and hit — black goo.

The geologist was fired. Today that black goo is known as heavy crude and — thanks to some new developments in extraction technology — several oil companies are betting a lot of money that they can get it out of the ground and sell it at a tidy profit.

Getty Oil, for one, is opening a $21 million operation outside Bakersfield, Calif., not far from the Union find, to tap a reservoir Getty believes contains 400 million barrels of crude. Other companies are contemplating similar efforts in New Mexico, Utah and other oil-producing states.

In fact, Shell Oil's $3.6 billion purchase of California's Belridge Oil Co. earlier this year may have been predicated on Shell's ability to squeeze a lot more out of Belridge's holdings than could be obtained through conventional drilling.

The key to all this is oil mining, a term that encompasses several processes. In one, the oil-bearing rock is simply mined out of the ground and the crude "cooked" out of it. In others, huge pits are dug down to the oil formation and chemicals applied to loosen the oil. In still others, shafts are drilled underneath the reservoir and holes cut upward so the oil drips out, like sap from a maple tree.

THESE PROCESSES are attractive because they are applicable not only to heavy crude, but also to tar sands, a hydrocarbon-bearing soil called diatomite, and perhaps most importantly, to old fields of lighter crude where conventional wells have run dry.

Studies for the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines conclude that oil mining could increase America's economically exploitable oil reserves tenfold, adding hundreds of billions of barrels to the nation's current 30 billion barrels of proven reserves.

John Hutchins of Energy Development Consultants, who worked on one of the studies, says: "It's quicker and probably a lot cheaper than oil shale and coal liquefaction. The only thing left is just going out and trying it." And that is what Getty and the others are doing.

The idea of mining for oil is not new. A 1932 Bureau of Mines study by George S. Rice concluded, "Where conditions are favorable, mining methods in depleted oilfields may bring large financial returns and recover oil that might otherwise be lost."

But until recently an important factor has been lacking: price. In the development of any mineral resource, the first question that must be answered is whether the deposit is "economic" — that is, can the mineral be mined and processed and sold for a profit at the prevailing price?

OIL IS NO different, and when crude was selling for $2 to $3 a barrel, only the cheapest extraction process could be employed profitably.

Now all that has changed. Bureau of Mines consultants say that surface-mined oil can be produced at a cost ranging from $12 to $21 a barrel, and that the cost for oil from underground mining operations ranges from as little as $10 a barrel to $60 a barrel.

World oil prices have risen more than 70 percent this year. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is charging "official" prices averaging $22 a barrel, and also sells much of its oil on a one-time, or spot, basis at prices of up to $40 a barrel.

Richard Dick of the Bureau of Mines' Twin Cities Research Center in Minneapolis says: "A couple of million barrels a day of production from oil mining is possible, by 1990, no doubt about it."

Dick oversaw the studies prepared by Golder Associates and Energy Development Consultants and released to the public earlier this year.

"Under today's economics, many of the oil deposits in this country can be mined economically," he adds.

SHELDON WIMPFEN, the bureau's chief mining engineer, also is optimistic.

"From a mining standpoint, all of this is proven technology in use worldwide," Wimpfen says. Wimpfen became interested in oil mining years ago when he noticed that mining engineers continued to make advances in ore recovery processes, but that oilmen still left 40 percent to 60 percent of the oil they discovered in the ground, even with so-called "enhancement oil recovery" operations.

"We have some mineral operations that typically recover up to 90 percent of the ore, but the oil boys have settled for a lot less," Wimpfen continues. In the last century, more than 450 billion barrels of oil have been discovered in the United States. But just 115 billion barrels have been produced. Current conventional production technology will allow the oil companies to produce about another 30 billion barrels, leaving some 305 billion barrels out of reach.

Another 26 billion barrels of oil are locked in Utah's tar sands, and billions more elsewhere. Then there are an estimated 30 billion barrels of "heavy" viscous oil in California, and billions more in shallow diatomite formations.

THE 1 MILLION barrels per day of new production from oil mining that supporters say is possible, is equivalent to President Carter's most optimistic forecast of production from synthetic fuels by 1990.

Not everyone familiar with the oil mining concept is quick to embrace it, however, or agrees with the Bureau of Mines studies.

Lee Marchant of the Energy Department's Laramie Energy Research Center is one of the skeptics. He says the optimistic conclusions of the Golder Associates and Energy Development Consultants studies "have to be considered speculative." Further, Marchant says, the firms have a "vested interest" in generating more studies through their encouraging reports.

Until an oil mining company actually mines oil on a commercial scale, Marchant says, it will be too soon to accept unequivocally the bureau's economic analysis.

As for the priority the Department of Energy assigns to oil mining, Marchant says: "We don't see spending a large portion of our money on this technology. . . . We feel mining is only applicable to a small percentage of our total resource."

CONOCO, A MAJOR oil company that has tried underground oil mining methods on a limited basis on its Lakota field near Casper, Wyo., is skeptical.

"If reservoir conditions are favorable, we might try this again," says Aurelio Madrazo, Conoco's head of North American production.

Conoco has been operating a 50-barrel-a-day underground mining plant for the last three years, draining oil into a 2,000-foot-long horizontal shaft, 180 feet underground, beneath a shallow oil field.

"It's not something we see as solving the energy crisis," Madrazo says. "It is still a very small contribution."

Getty Oil Co., however, is moving ahead with its $21 million pilot plant at its McKittrick field outside Bakersfield.

Construction will begin early next year, Getty spokesman George Schwarz says, and the company expects to be producing 20,000 barrels a day by the late 1980s.

THE MCKITTRICK operation, if it works, is an illustration of oil mining's potential. Discovered in 1896, the McKittrick field produced 15,900 barrels a day at its peak. But by June of this year, production had dropped to 6,000 barrels a day.

Schwarz says Getty is confident that the company will be able to extract nearly 400 million barrels before the field is mined out — largely through digging and processing hydrocarbon-rich diatomite overlying the field. The 400 million barrels Getty hopes to get amount to nearly twice the total production from the field during the 80 years it has been worked.

Most of the oil-soaked diatomite leached through and around the McKittrick field easily can be surface-mined. A few miles away, another company has a surface mining operation to extract diatomite that is free of oil, for use as cat litter.

Getty's pilot plant will produce 150 barrels of oil daily, from 240 tons of surface-mined ore processed at one of two facilities.

The purpose of the test is to determine which of the two methods of separating the oil from the ore is the most profitable. One method will employ a variation of a process devised by the Germans to convert coal to oil. The other will use a solvent from Drava, a company that is experienced in extracting vegetable oil from soybeans.

"With conventional methods you can't get the oil out, but mining should work," Schwarz says.

SIMILAR PLANS are under way in Utah to mine and process billions of barrels of oil locked in tar sands deposits.

Dr. Francis Hansen, of the University of Utah, says that maybe 25 percent of the state's tar sands can be surface-mined. While no major oil company has announced plans to go ahead, several are exploring it, Hansen says.

Hansen and other researchers believe it is feasible to construct units that could produce from 50,000 to 150,000 barrels a day by mining the tar sands. They believe the process could yield quality oil that could be sold profitably at $25 a barrel.

"I'm bullish on oil mining," Hansen says, adding, "It is only a year or two away."

The nation's largest gasoline retailer, Shell Oil Co., according to oil industry executives, also has plans for mining-style operations to recover billions of barrels of oil in the 33,000 acres of Kern County, Calif. fields it bought from Belridge Oil Co.

"There is a widespread belief that Shell has the capability to squeeze oil out of those formations," says Bruce Wilson, an energy analyst with the brokerage firm of Smith Barney Harris Upham Co. Inc.

"If you have a process with a higher recovery rate, then you have a larger exploitable resource base," Wilson points out.

This could explain why Shell's purchase of Belridge — the largest merger in U.S. history — called for paying almost $9 a barrel for the little-known California producer's known reserves, compared with the $6 a barrel that industry analysts normally figure in transactions of this type.

Demo delegates quitting Kennedy

CHICAGO (AP) — Several Cook County Democratic leaders have switched gears and say they plan to run as uncommitted delegates to the national convention next year — despite the Democratic organization's endorsement of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

That news prompted Mayor Jane Byrne to step up efforts to stop the defections. The Cook County Democratic Central Committee endorsed the Massachusetts Democrat on Nov. 5 despite objections from some powerful members who wanted a delay to give President Carter a chance to bid for their support.

Mrs. Byrne — who was one of the first big-city mayors to endorse Kennedy — said county party chairman George Dunne had mistakenly told some committeemen they need not run delegates pledged to Kennedy.

Party leaders met Thursday in the 11th Congressional District and chose a slate of uncommitted delegates. Alderman Roman Pucinski, one of those selected, said regular Democrats in at least three of the other seven city districts would run uncommitted.

Former county Assessor P.J. Cullerton, another 11th district delegate, said Dunne had told him Thursday that regular party leaders could run the uncommitted slates.

Later though, Cullerton said the uncommitted slate might have to be changed, but that it might not be easy to get the same delegates to run committed to Kennedy.

"Kennedy couldn't win in Illinois today," Cullerton said. "He's a little dull as far as the neighborhoods go."

Despite the development, Dunne said he believed as many as 75 percent of the party regulars seeking convention delegate seats would be committed to Kennedy.

"We're still endorsing Kennedy and on March 18 (primary day) we'll still be working for Kennedy," he said.

Seventy-eight of the state's 152 district-elected delegates are from Cook County and 27 are chosen at a party convention.

Merry Christmas!

God bless us, every one... and especially you. Our thanks to one and all.

Taiwan deports American woman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An American woman, deported by the Taiwan government for alleged anti-government activities, says she will ask President Carter and Amnesty International to intercede in behalf of more than 40 opposition leaders arrested in the Asian country.

The woman's Taiwanese husband, a target of the arrests, is missing.

Linda Arrigo Shih, 30, who was reunited with her family in San Diego on Sunday, was deported from Taiwan on Dec. 15. She spent several days in Tokyo and Hong Kong seeking information about her husband, Shih Ming-Deh, 38, who disappeared out a rear entrance when government agents surrounded their Taipei apartment at dawn on Dec. 13.

Ms. Arrigo, a self-described human rights activist who is known by her maiden name, said she had not seen or communicated with her husband since the raid.

The Garrison Command, Taiwan's top security agency, says it arrested 41 people after a riot in Kaohsiung in southern Taiwan on Dec. 10. The arrests came at a Human Rights Day rally, the first major political demonstration against the ruling regime in two years.

All those arrested reportedly were being held on sedition charges and face trial by a military court under Taiwan's martial law regime, which has been in power since the Kuomintang government of Chiang Kai-shek was driven from mainland China by the Communists in 1949.

According to government authorities, they could receive seven years to life in prison and some may face the death penalty.

Ms. Arrigo, who stopped briefly in Los Angeles en route to San Diego, said news accounts in Hong Kong placed the number of those arrested at more than 130.

"The whole opposition was smashed in one fell swoop," she said.

She accused the government of torturing her husband during his 15 years in prison on a life sentence for inciting armed rebellion while he was a lieutenant in the army.

Ms. Arrigo said she was not arrested and was told, "We will let you go home and realize the benevolence of the government."

A graduate in Chinese studies and anthropology at San Diego State University, Ms. Arrigo lived in Taiwan in the mid-1960s with her father, a retired Army man who ran an import-export business.

She returned to Taiwan to study in 1977, when she met her second husband. She divorced her first husband, also a Taiwanese, in 1975.

Asbestos dump forces evacuation

GLOBE, Ariz. (AP) — All 120 residents of a mobile-home subdivision built on a dump of cancer-causing asbestos have been asked to leave their homes while the asbestos is cleared, state officials say.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt vowed to call out the National Guard unless owners of the abandoned Metate Asbestos Corp. mill clean up the contamination in this eastern-Arizona mining town.

Activist appealing excommunication

STERLING PARK, Va. (AP) — Equal rights activist Sonia Johnson is appealing her excommunication from the Mormon Church to a higher religious court.

Mrs. Johnson, who said she has attended church regularly since she learned of her religious exile Dec. 5, turned over her appeal petition Sunday to stake President Earl Rouschke.

Mrs. Johnson, a founder of Mormons for ERA and an active campaigner for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment on state and national levels, was tried before Bishop Jeff Willis on Dec. 1 and received the verdict four days later.

She was excommunicated, according to the bishop's order, for preaching false doctrine, hurting the church's missionary effort and undermining the authority of the church's leadership by her public statements.

Mrs. Johnson did not give many details of her appeal but said it was based on procedural matters. She said specific charges were never presented in writing until the verdict was handed to her and contended she was forbidden to make any record of the trial.

She also said one of Rouschke's official counselors, who must act on the appeal, sat in on a pre-trial hearing.

Willis has said the dispute did not center on Mrs. Johnson's activities for the ERA, which is opposed by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, as the Mormon Church is formally known.

But Mrs. Johnson has insisted her work for the proposed amendment was the reason for her excommunication.

"If that mill isn't torn down in six months, I'm personally going to send in the National Guard to tear it down, board-by-board and brick-by-brick," Babbitt told residents of Mountain View Mobile Estates at a meeting Sunday in the Gila County Courthouse.

Trailer houses will be made available, state officials say, so residents can flee the dust when wrecking crews tear down the mill located in the middle of the subdivision, built in 1972 by mill owner Jack Neal.

Charles Ott, state emergency services director, will be in Globe on Wednesday to plan the demolition and burial of asbestos wastes throughout the development. Residents could be out of their homes for up to two months once the project starts, Babbitt said.

Attorney General Bob Corbin also will be asked to contact Neal and D.W. Jaquays, owner of another nearby pile of asbestos waste, Babbitt said.

"They will be ordered and commanded to clean this mess up," said the angry governor. If they don't cooperate, "my advice to Mr. Neal and Mr. Jaquays is to hire a lawyer and we'll have at it."

Neal contended that the subdivision was built with state approval, but R. Bruce Scott, state director of environmental health, said, "The only thing that required approval and the only thing that was approved was the sewer system."

Resident complaints about stinking sewage last month led to discovery of the asbestos contamination. "We sent one of our men up here to check the sewage, and he got to digging around and found the asbestos," said Scott.

"We thought we had just one (contamination site), but this thing exploded on us."

Besides the Mountain View and nearby Jaquays sites, Scott said land owners will be asked to clean up asbestos in Sixshooter Canyon, south of Globe.

Scott said he also is checking reports that asbestos mine tailings have been dumped in Salt River Canyon, where rain can wash them into Roosevelt Lake, a source of drinking water for Phoenix.

No illness has been attributed to the asbestos, but Scott said the U.S. Center for Disease Control has been asked to examine and monitor Mountain View residents since asbestos has been recognized as a cancer cause.

Babbitt guessed that the clean-up cost would be "less than $1 million and more than $100,000." Those responsible for the contamination should "pay every last nickel," he said.

Former CIA agent has his passport revoked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has revoked the passport of a former CIA official who suggests the Iranian crisis could be resolved by exchanging agency files on Iran for the 50 American hostages, a State Department spokesman says.

Phillip Agee, a thorn in the side of the U.S. intelligence community since he authored a detailed book on CIA activities several years ago entitled "Inside the Company," was advised by Vance of the revocation in a letter sent Saturday, State Department spokesman David Passage said today.

Agee, now living in Hamburg, Germany, was quoted in today's editions of the New York Times as saying the action is "only the latest part of an eight-year effort to silence me."

Vance advised Agee that his activities of the past several years "were causing or were likely to cause serious damage to the national security and foreign policy of the United States," Passage said. "There are indications that his travels and activities are likely to continue."

Vance made no specific reference to Iran in his letter to Agee, Passage said, adding that efforts to revoke Agee's passport have been under way for several years.

"Only recently were we persuaded that there was enough of a case that it is likely to hold up in court," he said.

Passage said he did not know whether the revocation of Agee's passport will force the former agent to leave Germany.

"We told the German government what we have done," he said. "I'm not sure whether they require foreigners to have valid passports."

Agee was quoted in the New York Times as saying: "This action comes precisely when I have proposed a solution that might well bring the immediate release of the hostages in Tehran."

"In recent weeks, I have proposed to the Iranian government, to the militants occupying the American Embassy in Tehran and to various interested third parties... that the quickest solution to the crisis would be an exchange of the CIA's files on its operations in Iran since 1950 for the captive Americans."

Passage labeled Agee's proposal "preposterous."

Agee was quoted by the Times as saying the plan would get "the Americans home and it would provide all evidence needed for the international investigation wanted by the Iranians and by the people of many other countries."

"In fact, I told the militants at the embassy by telephone yesterday that they would have a much more conclusive case using the files than they would have from whatever the shah or the 50 Americans might say," the Times quoted him as saying.

Agee said he has refused to become involved in identifying CIA personnel or analyzing files at the embassy until the hostages are released. The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

Fire chief's car bombed after firings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A city car assigned to Kansas City Fire Chief John Waas was firebombed just hours after Waas, acting in the direction of city officials, fired 10 firefighters, officials said.

"It's revenge," said Waas, who said he had no doubt the Sunday incident was related to the firings of firefighters. He said the firebombing probably was the work of a radical element in the firefighters' union.

However, John Germann, president of Local 42 of the International Association of Firefighters, said that he didn't believe a firefighter was responsible for the firebombing. "It's more likely to be someone trying to cast aspersions on the firefighters," he said.

The firings were the first under a directive issued by the city Saturday ordering fire department officials to dismiss any firefighter who refused twice to work overtime.

In all, a dozen firemen were dismissed Sunday in the growing contract dispute. The firefighters had been given three-day deferred suspensions when they first refused to work overtime Saturday. When they refused overtime again Sunday, they were given immediate 10-day suspensions to be followed by termination.

At least 84 others who refused to work overtime have been issued three-day deferred suspensions and could face the possibility of firing today. Waas said someone tossed a Molotov cocktail at his car when the auto was parked in the driveway of his home. He said he used a garden hose to put out the fire, estimating damage at about $500.

Two killed in holdups

DALLAS (AP) — Two men were shot to death during the weekend in separate hold-ups at grocery stores in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Police found the body of Valentin Torres Garza, 69, Sunday in the grocery store where he worked as a guard. Officers said they suspect he was surprised by a burglar who shot him to death.

Investigator G.R. Robinson said Garza was apparently making coffee when he was slain.

Oilers turn to Defense

Houston beats Denver despite loss of Campbell, Pastorini

HOUSTON—The Denver Broncos smelled and upset when Houston's two top offensive players, running back Earl Campbell and quarterback Dan Pastorini, were knocked out of action in the American Football Conference wild card playoff game here Sunday.

But the Oilers' defense rode to the rescue, prompting Coach Bum Phillips to observe, "We probably had the most courageous group of young men on the field that I've ever seen assembled."

The Oilers overcame injuries with a ferocious second-half defense to defeat the Broncos, 13-7, at the Astrodome.

"They just plain would not take no for an answer," Phillips said. "I was prouder of that group for that performance than any I've ever had."

Houston defensive end Elvin Bethesda said the Oilers, who pressured quarterback Craig Morton all game, just "did what we had to do when we had to do it."

"We knew if we could get to Morton he would be very ineffective. He had us off balance early by calling quick counts. We adjusted to that but they just kept doing the same ol' stuff."

Middle guard Curley Culp, who had two quarterback sacks in the crucial fourth quarter, said "Morton's not as mobile as say, a Terry Bradshaw and that helped us. One side can't carry the other but we rallied when we had to."

Disappointed Denver Coach Red Miller said he didn't think the Oilers could win without Campbell and Pastorini. "But we just didn't score the points when we needed them. But we have no alibis, no excuses. You can't score seven points and win a lot of games."

The victory advances Houston, 11-5 and runner up in the AFC Central to champion Pittsburgh, into the AFC semifinal game Saturday in San Diego. On Sunday the Steelers host Miami in the other semifinal.

Campbell, the NFL rushing champion with 1,697 yards this year, suffered a pulled groin muscle on a three-yard touchdown run with 46 seconds left in the half.

Houston's Tom Fritsch kicked a 31-yard field goal on the Oilers' first drive of the game. Denver's Craig Morton passed seven yards to Dave Preston to give the Broncos a 7-3 lead. Fritsch's 20-yard field goal with 4:18 left to play in the game capped Houston's scoring.

With 9:06 to go in the third quarter disaster seemed to strike the Oilers again when Pastorini fell to the turf with a strained groin and had to leave the game.

Early in the fourth quarter, after Denver linebacker Bob Swenson intercepted a pass by Gifford Nielson at the Houston 26, the Oilers pushed the Broncos back to the 33, and reserve placekicker Jim Steinfort, taking over for injured Jim Turner, missed a 50-yard field goal attempt when the ball hit the right upright.

Moments later, Houston linebacker Gregg Bingham intercepted a Morton pass and returned 15 yards to the Denver 20.

The Houston offense managed a first down, grinding it out to the Denver six before Fritsch was called on for his second field goal.

With 4:08 to play, Denver took possession at its 34 yard line on the kickoff following the field goal. Morton drove the Broncos as far as the Houston 27, but was sacked by middle guard Curley Culp as the Houston defense again pushed Denver back to the 40. On fourth-and-22 from that point, Morton's end zone bomb to wide receiver Steve Watson was batted away by safety Vernon Perry, killing Denver's drive with 1:42 to play.

The Broncos had one final desperate chance, taking a Houston punt at their 20 with 39 seconds to go, but after one incomplete pass and a 25-yard completion to Rick Upchurch to the Denver 45, time ran out on the Broncos.

Morton completed four of his first five passes for 48 yards in Denver's 80-yard touchdown drive. The Broncos also were aided by a 14-yard pass interference penalty against Houston cornerback Greg Stemrick that got the drive started.

Denver's defense stopped two Houston drives inside Bronco territory in the second quarter on a Campbell fumble recovered by cornerback Louis Wright at the Denver 45 and a Pastorini interception by Thompson at the Broncos' 18.

But with 2:23 left in the second period, the Oilers took over at their 26 and drove to the go-ahead touchdown.

Eagles end 19 years of frustration

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Philadelphia Eagles ended 19 years of frustration when they gave the home fans a National Football League playoff game victory.

The Eagles, on a 63-yard touchdown pass play from quarterback Ron Jaworski to substitute running back Billy Campfield in the fourth period, beat the Chicago Bears 27-17 Sunday.

Now, it's on to Tampa for a second-round game against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the drive for the National Conference title and a place in the Jan. 20 Super Bowl against the American Conference survivor. Tampa Bay had a bye as the NFC Central Division winner, while the Eagles had to play the Bears in a game between two wild-card teams.

THE EAGLES last appearance in a playoff game at home was in 1960, when they beat the Green Bay Packers, 17-14, to win the NFL title. There were only two divisions in those days, nothing like the six-division, long-drawn out postseason action of today.

The Eagles, the Eastern runnersup, took a 7-0 lead on the Central Division Bears 4:02 into the game on a 17-yard scoring pass from Jaworski to wide receiver Harold Carmichael. Chicago tied it on a 2-yard run by Walter Payton, and led at halftime 17-10 on a 1-yard Payton TD and a 30-yard Bob Thomas field goal. The first of Tony Franklin's two field goals, a 29-yarder, was the other Philadelphia first-half score.

The second half was a testimonial to the Eagles' defense, and the confidence of Coach Dick Vermeil in Jaworski, the quarterback who keyed an 11-5 regular season and Sunday's playoff triumph.

Chicago didn't score in the second half, thanks to a superb defensive effort by the Eagles led by rookie linebacker Jerry Robinson, who had a game-high 10 tackles, and cornerbacks Bobby Howard and Herman Edwards, each with a game-saving interception.

After their first touchdown, the Eagles had trouble penetrating the equally tough Chicago defense. The crowd of 69,397 booed Jaworski. They screamed for backup quarterback John Walton. Vermeil and Jaworski heard them, but neither paid any attention.

JAWORSKI REMAINED in charge of the offense and threw two more touchdown passes, one to Carmichael for 29 yards, and the game winner to Campfield. He also moved the team into position for Franklin's second field goal — 34 yards.

"I know the Philadelphia fans are not patient," said Jaworski. "Personally I can't understand it ... But it (the boos) just fires up the guys on the team. It's a great motivator for myself."

Jaworski tried to explain that things happen on offense over which he has no control, such as dropped passes, tipped balls, penalties etc. He said he can't let things like that upset him.

"Ron executed very well today," said Vermeil, who subscribes to the theory that if you listen to the fans you wind up sitting with them.

Linebackers John Bunting and Reggie Wilkes spoke for the defense.

"Marion Campbell (defensive coordinator) told us at the half that we wouldn't win the game if we gave up another 17 points," Bunting recalled. "That's a pretty tall order to shut out a great team like that for an entire half ... We shut down the things they did best."

WILKES said it has taken him a long time to adjust to the right side outside linebacker position. He said he's reading his keys better now, reading the flow of the backs, adjusting to the right side.

"We had our backs to the wall today," Wilkes said. "I didn't want to go home and see the season end today. So I went out in the second half determined to do something to fire guys up and make things happen ... We were laying back in the first half determining what they were going to do instead of taking control ourselves ... The secret of our success is to play more intense."

Bears' Coach Neil Armstrong said that on a scale of 10 his team gave the maximum effort, but executed at about seven-and-a-half. He was a little upset at two calls by the officials. One was a back-in-motion penalty that nullified an 84-yard run to the Eagles' one by Payton, and the other one he felt might have been called on Philadelphia's winning touchdown play.

"I'm not going to criticize the officials," said Armstrong. "I want no money out of my pocket."

On Campbell's touchdown, Armstrong felt one of his linebackers was illegally picked off, intentionally or otherwise.

Ule Marten, of West Germany, had to rally from a two-set deficit to defeat Cliff Letcher, of Australia, 4-6, 1-6, 7-6, 7-5, 8-6. In another five-set match, Alvin Gardner beat fellow Australian Noel Phillips, 6-3, 4-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Notre Dame football Coach Dan Devine met with officials of Arizona State University's most influential booster group last week, bringing speculation that he is being promoted as a successor to ousted Sun Devils Coach Frank Kush.

"We just visited awhile," Sun Angel Foundation president Harry Rosenzweig said in today's Arizona Republic. "We didn't discuss football or anything like that."

school," said Devine. "I was impressed by their mature approach, how they were trying to help, not interfere."

Arizona State's football program was rocked by the Oct. 13 firing of Kush amid allegations that he punched a player and asked assistant coaches to commit perjury if necessary to defend him against a $1.1 million lawsuit by the player, Kevin Rutledge. Kush denied the charge and agreed to drop a $10 million suit and leave the school in exchange for a $200,000 cash settlement.

the school forfeited all but one of its victories under pressure from the Pac-10 and NCAA.

Devine, who coached at Arizona State in 1957 before moving on to Missouri and then Notre Dame, would not say whether he was interested in returning to suburban Tempe as Sun Devil coach.

In the final year of a five-year contract with the Irish, Devine saw Notre Dame suffer four losses for the first time since 1963. One of his six daughters lives in Phoenix, and he owns property in suburban Mesa, the Republic said.

Athletic Director Fred Miller of Arizona State said he was not aware of Devine's visit. But Devine said he contacted Arizona State President John Schwada.

Rosenzweig, who's group has provided millions for stadium expansion and other athletic improvements at Arizona State, called for Miller's dismissal when Kush was fired, but later retracted it. He denied any effort to bypass Miller in the hiring of a replacement for Kush.

Asked about speculation that Miller was being bypassed in an attempt to embarrass him into quitting, the athletic director said, "Any common sense approach tells you the athletic director has to be heavily involved. No football coach will be selected who is not compatible with the athletic director."

Former Kush assistant Bob Owens finished out the latest season as head coach at Arizona State. The school began a nationwide search last week for a fulltime coach.

Three years ago MVP, now a man without a team

By ROSS NEWHAN
The Los Angeles Times

Three years ago he was baseball's best player. Three years ago he batted .320, drove in 111 runs, hit 27 homers, stole 60 bases, won a Gold Glove for fielding excellence and was named the National League's Most Valuable Player for the second straight season.

Now a free agent in a market that is making millionaires out of the most average of players, Joe Morgan is a man without a team, his considerable accomplishments having failed to generate much interest. Those who make decisions on payrolls and personnel cite his age (36), salary demands ($500,000 a year) and a string of injuries that diluted his ability and availability each of the last two seasons.

The second of those, of course, was his last in Cincinnati, his last under the terms of a three-year contract that brought him $300,000 a year, his last as a member of what was once the Big Red Machine.

Morgan became a free agent following a summer of frustration and disenchantment. Hip and ankle injuries limited his playing time to 127 games. He batted just .250 with nine homers, 32 RBI and 28 stolen bases. He was angry at himself and angrier with the fans and management of a team that did not seem to recognize he was attempting to play with injuries that would have sidelined most players.

THE SUPPORT he received during seven previous seasons suddenly evaporated. Letters of affection were replaced by hate mail. Cheers turned to boos. The front office refused to discuss a long-term contract and did not even retain negotiating rights when Morgan went through the free agent reentry draft, before which he announced he wanted to play for a contender and for a team closer to his Oakland, Calif., home.

Those desires — coupled with his age, salary and recent history of injuries — resulted in the eight-time All-Star being drafted by only four teams: the Dodgers, San Diego Padres, San Francisco Giants and Texas Rangers.

Morgan and/or his attorney, Tom Reich, have since met with each of those teams — and have come away empty. Each team has either filled a second base need this winter or is disinclined to trade or shift an incumbent second baseman to provide a place for Morgan.

His future is bleak.

MORGAN CAN retire or he can wait until Feb. 15 when unsigned free agents are eligible to go through a second draft. At that time there are virtually no restrictions on which clubs can draft him or with which of those he can sign.

The Dodgers, for instance, could sign Morgan then even though they have reached their limit by signing three free agents. Dave Goltz, Don Stanhouse and Jay Johnstone.

In a telephone interview, Morgan said that under no circumstances would he wait until mid-February to decide his future. He said that while he would like to play one more year to prove to the skeptics and cynics that he can still perform in the manner of his glory years, he is prepared financially and psychologically to retire. He said that he is still studying his alternatives and hopes to make a choice within a week.

"If I had not been injured the last two years," he said, "and if I had continued to produce the type season that a healthy Joe Morgan had been producing, I wouldn't now be having this problem. I also could have signed with any of the four clubs that drafted me if I had been willing to say 'Hey, fine, I'll take whatever you're offering.'

"The bottom line is that I've played 15 years in the majors and most people don't play 15 months. I played 13 years before having a serious injury and I accomplished quite a bit. What I'm saying is that no matter what happens I'll hold no animosity toward anyone, that nothing can tarnish my good memories.

"I'll always be able to go to a game and enjoy it. I'll always be able to look at my trophies with a good feeling. I don't want this to sound like I've definitely decided to retire, but I do want it clear that I'm not laying this on anyone else. No one but Joe Morgan created this situation. No one but Joe Morgan made this bed. No one but Joe Morgan has to sleep in it."

THERE WAS little emotion in Morgan's voice. He talked in the cordial and machine-gun manner that has always characterized his interviews.

Always accessible and always willing to discuss almost anything, Morgan now said there is no use dwelling on the past, that the factors leading him to leave Cincinnati were so numerous and complicated he does not care to review them, that in hindsight his only regret is that he didn't take time off when injured, rather than thinking "I had to play just because I was getting paid to play."

He said his ultimate desire (and the most significant reason he left Cincinnati) was to play for a West Coast team and he is naturally disappointed that it hasn't worked out. Asked if it is demeaning for a player of his stature to find himself at a crossroads of this nature, and a blow to his pride not to be offered the contract he had expected, Morgan said:

"Yes, you can look at it the other way. My pride is the reason I've been as good a player as I have and I will continue to take my pride with me no matter what I do and no matter where I go. I've never changed and I've never compromised and I'm probably prouder of that than anything.

"What I'm saying is that while this situation hasn't turned out like I had hoped, I'm still in control. It's Joe Morgan who counts and I can assure you that Joe Morgan can still look at himself in the mirror. I'm not going to play for just anything. I'm not going to conduct a bargain-basement sale. I'm not going to give away something that I feel is still valuable."

Morgan said he can understand how some people might look at the last two years and have reservations, but he said, "That's exactly why I would have accepted a one-year contract. It was my way of saying, 'Hey, I can do it; let me prove it.' I mean, I believe that. I believe I can still do the things I used to do. At the end last year, it was only my hitting that suffered. My fielding, base stealing and mobility were as good as ever. And my competitiveness was still there."

In fact, Morgan said, there is no question but that he retains a "burning desire" to play one more year. He stressed, however, that he shouldn't have to convince anyone, that he shouldn't have to get down on his hands and knees. He said that people considered Willie Stargell finished after two injury seasons, "And look what he's done."

Asked if retirement is likely, Morgan said, "It has crossed my mind and I'm not ruling it out. I've had several job offers and I've also played for 15 years. If I can't afford to retire after 15 years, I'll never be able to. If you're asking if I can handle it if that's what it comes to, the answer is yes."

Candy Young and Harrison Dillard, four-time Olympic Gold medal winner.

Candy's tuneup area not sweet

NEW YORK (AP) — Candy Young is considered a million dollar property with a five-and-ten cents practice area.

The 17-year-old senior at Beaver Falls, Pa. High School, a potential Olympic champion in the women's 100-meter hurdles, is forced, during bad weather, to conduct her daily workouts in the school's tile-floored hallways!

These less than ideal conditions are necessary because Beaver Falls High has no indoor or outdoor track.

"Not having a track to train on concerns me," said Karlin Ryan, her coach. "This is certainly not an ideal situation. But this is what we've got and we've been training this way for four years. You can't cry over something you don't have."

What makes the apparent difficult conditions bearable, said Ryan, is Young's coachability. "She is very adaptable, and her dedication is one of the things that has made her great," said Ryan, a former student at Beaver Falls High. "Her desire to work is great. There are times when I want her to stop running, but she wants to continue. That kind of attitude makes my job easy."

Practicing in the small hallways, however, is not easy. Instead of being able to set up five hurdles, the number required for an indoor race, the most that can be used are four.

"The fifth barrier's the wall," said Ryan. And when Ryan wants Young to work on her speed, he removes another barrier. "Sure, the conditions aren't great," said the studious Young, a member of the National Honor Society with a fondness for mathematics. "But in a way I think that's good. When I go into a race, and don't have all those handicaps, it sort of gives me a lift."

Young has gotten her biggest lift indoors during the 1979 National AAU Championships at Madison Square Garden, where she set a world indoor best for the women's 60-yard high hurdles with identical times of 7.50 seconds in the semifinals and final, upsetting veteran Deby LaPlante for the title.

Her biggest lift outdoors came in the 1979 AAU meet at Walnut, Calif., where she set a world junior record for the women's 100-meter hurdles of 12.95 seconds while finishing second to LaPlante's American mark of 12.86.

Young also got another big lift during the 1979 indoor season when she was timed in 7.27 seconds for the 60 during a United States dual meet against the Soviet Union at Fort Worth, Texas. But the electronic timer malfunctioned and she had to be content with a 7.3 clocking. The 7.27 would have been a world indoor best, but hand times no longer are eligible for world recognition.

Ryan expects his protege to better those electrifying times during the 1980 season.

With the help of Wilbur Ross, a former teammate of four-time Olympic gold medalist Harrison Dillard at Baldwin-Wallace College and a one-time coach at the school, Ryan has altered Young's training program.

Part of the new program has Young practicing over 39-inch hurdles instead of the customary 33-inch barriers.

"It makes me quicker," said Young, alluding to the times when she clears the 33-inch hurdles after working out on the 39-inch barriers.

"This is going to make her even better," said Ryan. "I've seen evidence of it already."

Ex-champ recalls how it was taking punch in ring

By STEVE JACOBSON
Newsday

NEW YORK—There is this story Floyd Patterson tells that illustrates the conditioned mind of a fighter refuses the reality of a punch in the mouth.

It was the first of his fights against Ingemar Johansson. You have to understand that Patterson was the undersized heavyweight champion of the world because his heart and his will outweighed his body. That's the nature of the best of them.

Johansson unleashed his hammer of Thor, which was as much a surprise to the champion as to the people who had observed the companionship and pleasure of the challenger's training camp. "I heard the referee counting," Patterson recalled. He remembered noticing that his mind was clear and he heard the referee say to go to a neutral corner. "I thought he was talking to me and counting over him," Patterson said. "I thought I had knocked him down."

Reality came to Patterson when he looked over the ring apron, recognized the face of John Wayne and realized he was seeing Wayne — Patterson moved his flattened hands first horizontally, like an equals sign, and then vertically, like the number 11 — "like this," Patterson said, "instead of like that."

The fighter, like any athlete, wants the fight to continue so that he may reverse the score and win. And, tragically, the folklore of boxing is full of fighters who got up from the canvas to win the championship. The Rocky II illusion is not at all fiction.

WHEN WILLIE Classen, having barely survived the ninth round against Wilfred Scypion on Nov. 23, was asked if he could continue, Classen, of course, replied that he was all right.

Classen died five days later from the effects of the 10th round — puffs the cumulative beating absorbed in the first nine rounds, his previous fight, and probably every punch he had ever taken. On Dec. 13, the New York State Athletic Commission suspended boxing in the state. Wednesday, the commission — John M. Prenderville, chairman, and Floyd Patterson and Louis Rios, commissioners — announced the results and recommendations of their investigation into Classen's death. The sign on the wall in the Department of State building identifying the hearing room was mounted above another that said, "Cemetery Division, Right — Around the Corner."

The reality of the situation is that Classen's death was a statistical inevitability. Given enough fighters fighting enough rounds, one will be killed. In the last 25 years of professional fighting around the world, 330 deaths have been reported. Some undoubtedly were not reported. This year four fighters have been killed in the United States, two in New York.

ALTRUISTICALLY, boxing ought to be outlawed. "It is," former champion Patterson said, "the only sport where the main purpose is mayhem." But outlawing boxing has been tried and that was no more successful than Prohibition. Prior to 1896, boxing was banned in the United States. In 1882, the police of Mississippi City, Miss., were sent out of town on a tip that John L. Sullivan was fighting out in the woods, which gave Sullivan time to fight in Mississippi City. In 1889, James J. Corbett won a 27-round knockout on a barge off the California coast.

The fabled Benny Leonard earned his reputation during a time when boxing in New York State was permitted only in private clubs, for members only. No decision was permitted, which covered 115 of Leonard's 210 fights. The bookmakers often paid off according to the account of a designated panel of newspaper reporters covering the fight, one of whom was often Bat Masterson.

The public wanted the spectacle of boxing, of two men in the ring trying to commit Patterson's "mayhem." As Prohibition had its rum-runners, moonshiners and speak-easies, boxing had its barge fights, backwoods brawls and fight clubs. During the three years boxing was outlawed in New York, before the present Walker Law was enacted in 1920, trusted authorities say that 29 boxing deaths were reported in and around the state.

"If you're going to have fighting — and it looks like there's going to be fighting, no matter what — you better have regulation," chairman Prenderville said Wednesday. That means there will be deaths and fighters with brain damage the rest of their lives, but maybe there will be fewer. Although no fight program is scheduled before mid-January, boxing could resume as early as Dec. 30 if the ring physicians have completed a required six- to eight-hour course on the neurology of boxing, intended to better acquaint them with the early warnings of brain damage.

FURTHER study is to be made on more careful licensing of seconds and managers. In Classen's case, his seconds and manager either were unable to recognize his condition or were not appropriately concerned. Classen's fighting put money in their pockets and another knockout would have hurt Classen's paydays.

That aspect is linked with the computer system Prenderville expects to have working in three months, keeping track of every boxer and official in his jurisdiction. While Classen was under suspension in New York for an April knockout, manager Marco Minuto booked the fighter against British middleweight champion Tony Sibson in London. Minuto testified during the investigation that he told the British promoter Classen's license had expired, which is not the same as medically suspended.

In that fight, Classen was counted out in the second round. He complained of double vision and was directed to hospital treatment, which Minuto testified Classen refused. Minuto apparently did not insist on Classen being examined, and the two went out to dinner. Back in New York, Classen told the commission his London fight had been stopped because of cuts and his account was accepted.

As long as there is a purse to be earned, there will be fighters to risk their lives for it. The best fighters, it seems, stand the greatest risk. To Patterson, the cliché of the youth fighting his way out of the ghetto still works. "Take the kids in the poor neighborhood who could have been killers or killed by drugs and compare it to the death rate in boxing," Patterson said. "At age 10, I was on my way to becoming a criminal. When I found boxing at 14, it changed my whole life. Even if I hadn't won a championship, it would have changed my life."

THERE are less lethal sports, but Patterson's point is that they all require some education while boxing requires "hands and feet and nothing else." In our culture, the upper class that pays the championship-fight prices or the largely Latin crowd of the Madison Square Garden routine fights is happy to pay to watch the gladiators in the ring. They always have been.

Some of the gladiators have always been killed. All the commission and all the commissioner's men can only improve the odds a little bit.

NFL takes to air in '79 to shatter old air records

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

In the National Football League, 1979 began and ended with footballs filling the air in record numbers.

It started with Terry Bradshaw shattering passing records as he guided the Pittsburgh Steelers to an unprecedented third Super Bowl title, a 35-31 victory over the Dallas Cowboys that was by far the most exciting of these roman-numeraled extravaganzas.

And when the 1979 regular season opened, the rest of the NFL's quarterbacks followed Bradshaw's lead — and the game opened up.

By the time the regular-season closed, the Steelers once again were the American Conference's Central Division champions and only two really new faces emerged among the 10 contenders for Super Bowl XIV — the San Diego Chargers in the American Conference and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the National Conference.

The Chargers epitomize the new look of the NFL. Don Coryell, an advocate of the wide-open offense, is their coach and Dan Fouts is their quarterback.

Coryell, who a few years back had built the St. Louis Cardinals into one of the league's most explosive teams, gave Fouts free reign to plunder opposition secondaries — and he did with a vengeance. In the year's final Monday night game when he guided San Diego to the AFC Western Division title Fouts finished the season with 4,082 yards, shattering the single-season passing record that had stood since Joe Namath of the New York Jets had thrown for 4,007 during the 1967 American Football League season. Fouts also tied Namath's record of six 300-yard games.

He wasn't the only record-breaking quarterback. Relative no-names like Steve DeBerg in San Francisco and Greg Landry in Baltimore (the latter a replacement for injured Bert Jones), established club marks as revered names like John Brodie and Johnny Unitas were relegated to secondary positions in the record books.

In 1978, five quarterbacks threw for 3,000 yards during the season. In 1979, 11 of them hit that mark, eight of them surpassing Fran Tarkenton's 1978 high water mark of 3,468 yards.

In 1978 only 17 receivers caught 50 or more passes for the season. That number more than doubled to 35 in 1979. Four of the top 10 receivers were running backs in 1978, hauling in short stuff out of the backfield, and Minnesota's Rickey Young was the runaway receiver with 88 catches, 14 more than his nearest competitor. In '79 there were only two running backs in the top 10. And although one of them, Joe Washington of Baltimore, was the leader, his 82 was only two catches ahead of Ahmad Rashad of the Vikings.

Not that the ground game was entirely forsaken in 1979, mind you. An even dozen running backs surpassed 1,000 yards, matching the league record set in 1976.

Earl Campbell, the NFL rushing champ as a rookie with 1,450 yards in 1978, retained his title with 1,697 yards, only the third player in league history to win the ground-gaining crown his first two years. But the rookie rushing record he'd set was demolished by Otis Anderson of St. Louis with 1,605. Anderson began his season explosively with 193 yards against Dallas, one yard short of the pro-debut record by Baltimore's Alan Ameche in 1955.

Anderson stamped his way to the offensive Rookie of the Year award while Campbell won MVP and Offensive Player of the Year honors. The Defensive Rookie of the Year was Buffalo linebacker Jim Haslett, who might have labored in more obscure circumstances had not the Bills' No. 1 draft choice, Tom Cousineau, signed with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

THE COACH of the Year was Jack Pardee, whose Washington Redskins came within 40 seconds of a playoff berth (or within six points, based on the NFL's controversial net-point-differential tie-breaking procedure, a rule certain to be scrutinized in the off-season).

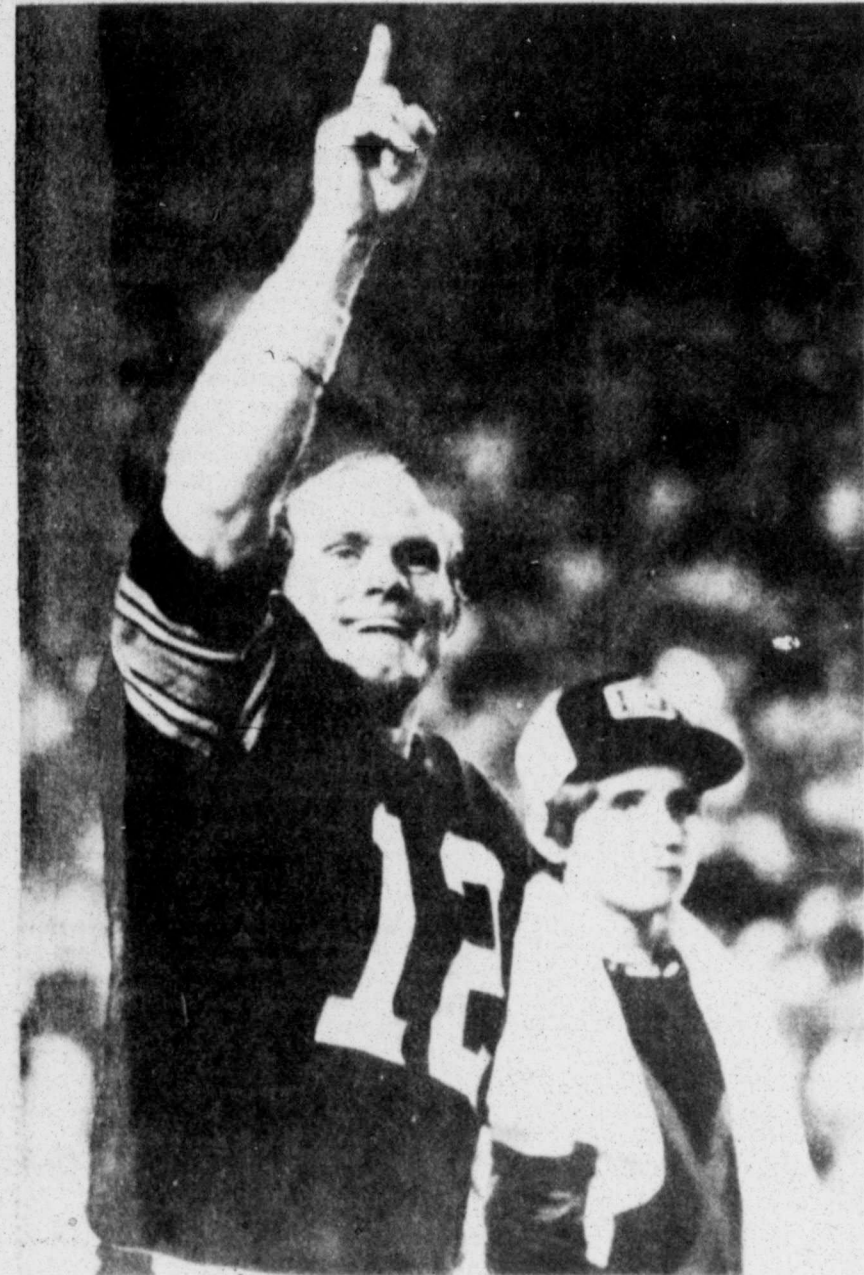

Unlike 1978, when controversial officiating dominated the post-game talk on some weekends, the "zebras" of 1979 spent most of the season in the background — until side judge Willie Spencer's flag on a Pittsburgh outside kick in Houston brought back more demands for instant-replay aids.

The Defensive Rookie of the Year was Lee Roy Selmon of Tampa Bay. The Buccaneers, winless in their first season and losers of their first 26 games ever, emerged as a defensive power and, with the National Conference's Central Division title, a playoff team, too.

Old faces occupied the rest of the playoff berths — Philadelphia, Chicago, Dallas and Los Angeles in the NFC and Miami, Houston and Denver along with the Steelers in the AFC.

No matter which teams make it to the pinnacle, the Super Bowl on Jan. 20 in Pasadena, Calif., they face a monumental task — trying to match the excitement Pittsburgh and Dallas staged in the Orange Bowl a year earlier.

Terry Bradshaw led Steelers to another championship.

Cowboys can breath, but Oilers cross fingers

The Dallas Cowboys can breath now and it's the Houston Oilers' turn to hold their breaths.

Although the Cowboys had an extra week to prepare for their NFC semifinal playoff game, it really didn't do that much good. Coach Tom Landry still didn't know who he would be playing next Sunday, although it was a pretty good bet that it would be Los Angeles.

Houston knows it will be playing San Diego Saturday, but the Oilers don't know whether their two prime offensive figures, running back Earl Campbell and quarterback Dan Pastorini, will be ready for the Chargers after both suffered groin injuries in Sunday's game with Denver.

San Diego is hailed as one of the AFC's upcoming super powers, and it may be so, but a glance at the Chargers' schedule indicates that, like Tampa Bay, they were the beneficiary of the NFL's new scheduling policy which gives teams that didn't do well the previous year an easier road.

The Chargers' most impressive effort was that 35-7 manhandling of Pittsburgh. But in other tough assignments, they split with Denver, split with Oakland, beat Los

Los Angeles during the Rams' mid-season miseries, and lost to New England. Otherwise, the schedule was made up of teams like Buffalo, Seattle, Atlanta, Kansas City, Cincinnati and New Orleans. However, the verdict will be in this week, if they meet a healthy Oilers' team.

Since the NFL's system for determining playoff teams was patterned after the income tax form, now that the NFL schedules are programmed to match strength against strength at all levels, why not make it a little more complicated by taking into consideration the caliber of opposition played? It might avert the loss from the playoffs of deserving teams such as Washington and Cleveland.

Harold Carmichael's consecutive game pass-catching streak reached 112 games when the NFL season concluded, but did you notice after the Eagles beat Dallas, 31-21, a game in which Car-

'79 COLLEGE BASKETBALL REVIEW

Spartans, Big 10 rule college roost

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Larry Bird did just about everything one could expect from a Player of the Year in 1978-79, but he didn't do what he wanted to do the most: win the NCAA basketball championship.

As he sat disconsolately on the bench at the end of Indiana State's 75-64 loss to Michigan State in the national finals at Salt Lake City, his face buried in a towel, the Blond Bomber reflected a lot of broken dreams.

In place of the Sycamores was Michigan State, a less-publicized team throughout most of the season but, as it turned out, more spectacular and solid at the end.

As no one else could do in 33 prior games, the brilliant Big Ten club showed how to bring Bird & Co. down to earth. The Spartans threw a net around the great forward with a collapsing zone defense and went on to their first NCAA title behind the all-around play of Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Greg Kelser.

MICHIGAN STATE'S victory in the NCAA playoffs provided the Big Ten with their second national title in a week, since Indiana had earlier won the NIT by beating arch-rival Purdue 53-52 in an exciting all-conference final in New York.

Ironically, Michigan State was hardly anyone's choice to win the NCAA title, especially after the Spartans struggled through a desultory period early in the season when they lost four games. Meanwhile, Indiana State's profile was being raised considerably by the 6-foot-9 Bird, who led the Sycamores to victory after victory with his virtuoso passing ability and radar-like shooting.

Although some sideline observers had criticized Indiana State for what they termed a "creampuff" schedule, the Sycamores were indeed the only unbeaten team in the land when tournament time rolled around in March. And considering the way they played in the NCAA playoffs against some of the nation's top teams, this criticism was eventually proved unwarranted.

With Bird performing at his peak, the Sycamores defeated Virginia Tech and Oklahoma with relative ease, then edged Arkansas 73-71 on Bob Heaton's last-second shot to win the heart-stopping Midwest regional finals. Michigan State at the same time was winning the Mideast with resounding triumphs over Lamar, Louisiana State and Notre Dame.

At this juncture, the surging Spartans were playing their best ball of the season, a fact reflected by their 101-67 humiliation of Penn in the national semifinals. The Quakers were not that bad a team, as the East Regional champions would later prove in a tight third-place game with DePaul two nights later, but were simply burned by Michigan State's hot hand.

INDIANA STATE won a close one from DePaul, the Mideast winner, in the other semifinal game and moved into the finals on the wings of 33 straight victories. The nation's longest winning streak, though, lasted only for two days longer, as Michigan State forged an early lead behind the explosive play of Johnson and Kelser and won the national title with an enigmatic defense that had Bird virtually bottled up.

The Sycamore star did manage to score 19 points, but only made 7 of 21 shots from the floor. Johnson, meanwhile, scored 24 and Kelser 19, showing that two excellent players were better than one great one.

The Big Ten was the Big One in the NIT as well, with three teams among the final four. Indiana defeated Ohio State in the semifinals before edging Purdue for the championship. The Boilermakers had made it into the NIT championship game with a rout of Alabama behind Joe Barry Carroll's 42 points.

As a result of its NIT championship, coupled with the losses of Johnson and Kelser to Michigan State and Bird to Indiana State, Indiana assumed the position of power in college basketball for the 1979-80 season.

THE HOOSIERS started out with the nation's No. 1 ranking, but didn't last there too long after a beating by Kentucky in December. Duke, which had beaten the tough Wildcats in the season-jumping Hall of Fame Game in Springfield, Mass., moved into the top spot after the Hoosier loss. Other early-season challengers for the No. 1 ranking included Ohio State, Notre Dame, DePaul and Louisiana State.

In other 1979 playoffs, North Alabama won the Division II championship by beating Wisconsin-Green Bay 64-50 and North Park won the Division III championship with a 69-62 decision over Potsdam State.

Drury was the NAIA champion and Old Dominion was the best women's basketball team in the country, winning the AIAW title with a nifty 35-1 record.

Bowie learns fast at Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie, Kentucky's 7-foot-1 freshman center, spent a fruitless night battling Purdue's Joe Barry Carroll, but the worst may now be behind him.

Son's. Senior guard Kyle Macy and junior forward Fred Cowan led the Wildcats, 10-1, with 18 points apiece. Macy ended the game by grabbing the basket and heaving it toward the rafters — no small undertaking in 23,000-seat Rupp Arena.

In early foul trouble, Bowie totaled just two points — both on free throws — and one rebound, but the Wildcats held off the ninth-ranked Boilermakers 61-60 for the championship of the 27th University of Kentucky Invitational Tournament.

After the game, Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall said Bowie already had faced the three best centers in the nation — Carroll, Iona's Jeff Ruland and Duke's Mike Gminski.

"They've all had good nights against us," Hall said, "and Carroll had an exceptional game (25 points and seven rebounds). As far as we're concerned, Carroll hurt us more, for various rea-

Try lowering the temperature in your home to 68° this winter. You'll save on your heating bill.

A setting of 68° during the winter is the one Texas Electric recommends for both comfort and energy efficiency.

For each degree above 68° the energy used for heating your house is increased by approximately 4% per degree.

As shown by the chart the difference between the recommended thermostat setting and 74° is 24%. At 78° the increase in energy usage is 40% or more.

Clearly, the lower you set your thermostat the lower your heating bill is going to be. And after last winter's snow and ice, we think a lot of people are going to be trying their best to use less energy.

Remember to change the filter in your heating system regularly, too. A dirty filter causes your heating system to work longer and that costs you more. Check the filter at least once each month.

All forms of energy are costing more these days. If you're serious about saving energy and money, call us to find out about our Operation Tighten-Up program. We'll show you practical ways to save on your heating bills.
