Controversies, compromises, growth, the voice of the people, murders. They all played a part in creating the top news stories of 1979 in Midland.

The Midland school board made big news with its consideration of the controversial Plan O, a proposal to consolidate the city's two high schools.

The emotions created in the four-month flap over Plan O — which began with an administrative recommendation for the plan in a January school board meeting — may have spilled over into the school board election, which saw one incumbent defeated and another thrown into a run-off.

A non-binding referendum on the Plan O proposal on the school board ballot was defeated by a resounding 5-to-1 margin.

BUT AT THE SAME meeting the board acknowledged the public's will on Plan O, they took up arms for another issue — the condemnation of Hill house.

The historic home, owned by the heirs of Midland pioneers J.E. and Irene Hill, is located on land close to Midland High School. That land the board proposed to use for a baseball diamond and athletic fields in a master plan to expand the campus.

The controversy ended with almost everyone happy. The school district and Hill heirs reached a negotiated settlement without the need for the eminent domain proceeding being opposed by a citizens group called PRIDE — People Resisting Inminent Domain Exploitation.

The house was sold to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Viney, who plan to restore the house on property they own just outside Midland.

The resentment created by the issue, however, may have contributed to the defeat of the $10.2 million bond issue the school district proposed to voters in September.

The bond issue — offered to voters in a one-vote, take-it-or-leave-it package — was to be used to purchase the rest of the land near MHS and expand the campus, build a new elementary school and do a number of fix-up and maintenance projects on schools in the district.

THE GENERAL FEELING of the times may have contributed to that bond defeat, because the city of Midland didn't fare much better in its bid for bonds in 1979.

The city offered its $16.3 million package in nine proposals. While citizens okayed the three major items requested — sewage treatment, water system and road improvements — six of the nine were defeated.

The city had its own controversy early in the year in the zoning application made by Magnatex Corp. for a planned retail center on a 57-acre tract east of Midkiff Road and just south of the proposed Loop 250 Road.

The proposal drew the ire of residents in the area, who turned out in droves to protest the plan at each stage of its movement through the

Below, another fireman rushes a young girl, barely breathing, from the burning building. More than 40 others were injured in the fire on Chicago's north side. Another apartment building only 11 blocks away also burned Saturday, and that one killed five and injured more than 15. No cause was given for the fires, but a police arson investigator said it appeared one of them started in a fourth-floor apartment near a stove. (AP Laserphotos)

U.S. doesn't ask sanctions against Iran

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance called on the Security Council Saturday to "condemn Iran's failure" to release American hostages held by "terrorists" at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

But he stopped short of demanding the council impose immediate economic sanctions against Iran, as President Carter first urged on Dec. 21.

Under the plan suggested by Vance, the council would impose sanctions on Iran only if an intensive effort by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to gain the hostages' freedom fails.

Vance's proposals appeared to represent a softening of the U.S. position and an acknowledgement the council was not ready to approve the kind of tough sanctions that U.S. officials reportedly were seeking last week.

He said any resolution should note Waldheim's willingness to go to Tehran and "report back to the council by a specified date," but he did not list a date.

Waldheim told the council, "I am ready to leave for Iran at any time." Earlier in the day in Tehran, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadagh Ghotbzadeh said, "We'd like to hear what he has to say," but a Foreign Ministry spokesman said no decision had been made about inviting Waldheim.

At Saturday night's public debate, delegates from council members Britain, Norway, Portugal and France and non-members West Germany, Singapore, and Australia expressed support for Vance's plan and the council adjourned for the night.

Private talks were to resume Sunday morning and a public council session was expected to be held later in the day, when a resolution is likely to be offered.

The debate is expected to run through Monday and conclude with a vote. Vance said the United States was seeking a resolution that would condemn the holding of the hostages and "further provide for two additional steps: First, request the secretary general to intensify his good offices' efforts, noting his readiness to go personally to Tehran and to report back to the council by a specified date; second, decide that, if the hostages have not been released when the council meets again at the specified early date, the council will at that time adopt specific sanctions under Article 41 of the charter."

Article 41 of the U.N. Charter authorizes the council to deal with a threat to international peace by calling on U.N. members to punish the country responsible through the "interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations."

Vance said the response of the "terrorists who have invaded our embassy and the government of Iran which supports them has been defiance and contempt."

He did not specifically mention military force but told the council America's "patience and forbearance have been severely tested in these past weeks. They are not unlimited. We have made clear from the beginning that we prefer a peaceful solution to the other remedies that are available to us under international law."

Diplomats familiar with a resolution being drafted by the seven Third World council members said it would commit the council to consider sanctions if the hostages are not freed by the revolutionary Islamic government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Many Midland workers get a holiday Tuesday

Numerous Midland-based governmental workers — and others — won't show up for work on the first day of the new decade Tuesday.

Furthermore, many Midlanders won't be at their jobs for the final day of this decade.

But it isn't a well-orchestrated "sick-out." It merely will be holiday closings in observance of the arrival of the New Year.

City employees in Midland will take off Tuesday for the New Year's holiday. But Midland County workers and officials will be away from their posts both Monday and Tuesday.

Of course, policemen, sheriff's deputies and emergency personnel will be on duty during the holiday period.

Most federal offices in the Tall City will be open Monday, but will close Tuesday for the arrival of the new year and decade.

Likewise, most state employees — including those at the Texas Employment Commission and the driver's license division of the Department of Public Safety — will take off only Tuesday for the holiday.

DPS troopers will be on the highways throughout the holiday period.

Banks in the Tall City will be closed Tuesday for the holiday.

Postal workers in Midland will deliver mail Monday and window services will be provided until noon that day. There will be no mail delivery or window service on Tuesday, however.

A Postal Service official said box service and express mail service will be provided on Tuesday, however.

Midland's school children will continue to enjoy their holiday recess until classes resume Jan. 7. Administrative school offices reopen Wednesday.

Midland College is closed until Wednesday, also.

The business office of the University of Texas at the Permian Basin at Odessa reopens Wednesday and students there will return Jan. 10 and 11 for spring registration.

San Simeon — With our two children, Will, and Austie, and their two beautiful brides and our grandson, the former's four-month-old boy Willie, visiting their in-laws in San Francisco and San Diego, their lovely mother, Austine, and I are alone here on this beautiful ranch.

Under such circumstances, it is easy to become contemplative — especially fitting as the sand flows through the hourglass, the old year runs out and the new year stands in the wings in its swaddling clothes.

There is something exciting about a new year and some special excitement about entering a new decade, almost as though we were entering a new century, as we will do in a mere 20 years.

Most of us think that 1979 has been a tacky year. True, there were bad things about it, but the good outnumbered the bad. Let me refresh your memory:

• More people are employed in the U.S. than ever before in history.

• Egypt's President Sadat and Israel's Prime Minister Begin sat at a peace table with President Carter and co-authored a plan for lasting

Carter argues via 'hot line' for Soviet withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, weighing fresh intelligence reports that place up to 30,000 Russian troops in Afghanistan, has used the Moscow-Washington "hot line" to argue that the Soviet forces should be withdrawn.

Carter's belief that 25,000 to 30,000 Soviet military personnel are in Afghanistan, helping solidify a pro-Soviet coup, was far above previous estimates of up to 10,000.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the revision was based on new intelligence information showing "the magnitude of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan continues to grow."

"We now believe that there is the equivalent of approximately an airborne division in the Kabul area and that two motorized rifle divisions have moved into Afghanistan across the northern border," he said.

Those military movements would bring the number of Soviet combat troops in Afghanistan to 25,000 to 30,000, Powell said.

The president's views and actions in connection with the latest global trouble spot were made known to a group of reporters at a White House luncheon. The reporters were barred from naming sources.

Carter, it was learned, sent a personal "hot line" written message Friday to Brezhnev, with one point being a call for withdrawal of the Soviet forces.

Brezhnev's response was received here Saturday, but administration officials declined to characterize its contents.

In writing sharply to Brezhnev, it was understood, Carter emphasized a possible adverse impact on U.S.-Soviet relations because of the military intervention in Afghanistan.

six-month zoning change process. After finally gaining approval of the Planning and Zoning Commission, Magnatex was faced with a petition presented to the City Council from residents in the area opposing the change despite concessions built into the planned 400,000-square foot shopping center.

After meetings between the developer and representatives of the homeowners in the area, a greatly revised compromise plan was presented at the May 22 meeting of the City Council and finally accepted.

THE MAGNATEX development only added to the tremendous growth and construction experienced in Midland during 1979.

Construction began on the city's downtown exhibit hall, Midland Center, after final arrangements to purchase the land were completed. Building permit for the massive Midland Park Mall was issued early in the year and construction began soon afterwards.

Several new industries began construction or announced plans to relocate in Midland, including Michelin Tire and Rubber Co., Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Inc. and French Tool & Manufacturing.

MidTran, Midland's answer to mass transit, was finalized with an infusion of federal money. The first two of seven buses arrived in time for the New Year's celebration, and officials of MidTran expect service to begin in early 1980. The city also took over operation of MidTran from the private corporation that had the preliminary work.

Another major project that got off the ground in 1979 was the low interest mortgage loan plan. The Midland Housing Finance Corp., a private, non-profit corporation, sold bonds under a federal program. This gave Midlanders who met the income requirements a chance to apply for $29 million in mortgage money at 9 1/2 percent interest, considerably lower than the current 11 to 12 percent rate.

Although delayed for a while in federal snarls, Midland's program was one of the first in the state to actually get under way. More than 200 persons turned out Dec. 13 to apply for the money on the first day it was available. After the first day's applicants were processed, however, $20 million of the low-interest money still had not been reserved.

IMPROVED HOUSING also was available to residents of Midland County because of a rental subsidy program offered for the first time this year.

Midland County applied for $39,000 to be used for 20 units of rent-subsidized housing in the county for persons with low incomes. First applications were taken in November.

While some programs were getting started in 1979, another was going under.

The beleaguered Midland Community Action Agency, an anti-poverty group designed to administer projects of the federal Community Services Administration, finally lost its battle and disbanded.

Under fire over a period of years because of its bookkeeping methods, board members and policies, the agency lost ground when the city, county and regional planning commission gave it votes of no-confidence. MCAA finally expired when its funding grant was denied.

While one federally funded agency was lost, Midland did get its first resident federal judge when Odessa Lucius Bunton was appointed to serve in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas and announced he would hold court in the George Mahon Federal Building.

Naming the Midland federal building for the man whose 44-year term in Congress ended this year also was a high spot in the news of 1979.

OTHER THINGS ENDED this year, including plans for a pipeline to bring Alaskan crude oil from California to Midland. Standard Oil Company of Ohio (SOHIO) contended federal and state red tape put an end to the proposal, which might have helped distribute needed petroleum products throughout the U.S.

Another dream ended with a sheriff's sale of land near Seminole owned by Mennonite immigrants. The Mennonites had come to West Texas from Mexico and Canada seeking to farm land they bought, but a misunderstanding over qualifications for their visas and less-than-expected income from the property crumbled their dream for the good life.

Many of the immigrants are still living and working around Seminole, however, able to stay in the country because of a special bill introduced in Congress.

The past year was a particularly violent one in usually quiet Midland.

Several murders were investigated by Midland law officers, including the shooting death of Army Sgt. J.B. England. Two men, Kelly Joe Chambliss and Raymond Wesley Mathis, were tried for the crime and each sentenced to 99 years for the murder.

Other murder cases investigated in 1979 included the shooting of 14-year-old Poetry Brazell on Feb. 19 and Dwayne Edward McGowan on June 3, the stabbing of Freddie G. Haynes on May 31, the Aug. 21 shooting death of Daniel Nixon, the beating death of 73-year-old Ardesha Wortham on Sept. 11, and murder of Leona White, who was beaten to death Sept. 27 outside the bar where she worked.

The year brought changes even to The Reporter-Telegram, which turned 50 in 1979. The major change included the sale of the paper to the Hearst Corp. and appointment of W.C. Thomas as new publisher. The R-T also lost longtime vice president William Woody who died June 4.

Prisoners sickened by anti-freeze

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Fifteen prisoners "trying to have a good time over the holidays" were hospitalized here Saturday suffering from vomiting, nausea and severe stomach cramps after drinking anti-freeze, an official said.

Two of the Granite Reformatory inmates were listed in serious condition after consuming the tractor tire anti-freeze in an effort to get drunk, Corrections Department spokeswoman Nancy Nunnally said.

Corrections officials have been told that two ounces of the mixture consisted undistilled or undiluted can be fatal.

Ms. Nunnally said a trusty working on the prison farm smuggled about 16 ounces of the anti-freeze into the prison Friday night in a shampoo bottle. The anti-freeze is used on the prison farm to keep tractor tires from cracking in cold weather.

The trusty will have disciplinary charges brought against him, Ms. Nunnally said. In addition, there will be "a personnel hearing to find out who is responsible for checking him (the trusty) when he came in from his job," the spokeswoman said.

The trusty was not among the 15 inmates hospitalized, Ms. Nunnally said. She said the stricken inmates "could be charged with disciplinary violations or possession of contraband."

"This kind of thing is not unusual during the holidays," Ms. Nunnally said. She said prisoners in the past have drunk "anything that'll either get you drunk or get you high."

However, in most cases only a handful of inmates require hospitalization, the spokeswoman said.

peace. ●Productivity is increasing in American industry at a rate that will soon put us on a par with other industrialized countries.

●We seem unable to talk ourselves into a depression, despite the strongest efforts of the media — electronic and print.

●Pope John Paul II paid us the honor of an extended visit and, by kissing the ground, gave his blessing to the entire land. From Christ's Vicar on Earth, we can ask no greater gift.

●President Jimmy Carter has been wise in his handling of the Iranian hostage situation. He has used every legal means available to him. Note bono: We are not at war.

●Mrs. Thatcher, of England, and President Giscard d'Estaing, of France, have both proclaimed their support of the U.S. in its quarrel with the Ayatollah Khomeini in Iran.

●We have begun to receive oil from Mexico — the most oil-rich nation in the world — and we are also getting Mexican natural gas. A refreshing rapport may be budding between the two big neighbors.

●The Three Mile Island incident came and went without any known health damage. From the experience, we all learned that we must have tighter and sterner controls over nuclear power; on which we must rely increasingly in the years ahead.

●A new political year in the quest of the presidency got underway, and, boring and windy as it may seem, that is a blessing, too, for it is the American way. It is democracy at its best.

Oh, yes, we have had some bad things, too. We have been unable, thus far, to free the Americans held hostage in Tehran. Inflation is eroding American incomes. There is a huge budgetary deficit. Big government continues to grow bigger (i.e., The new educational department) despite the promises of the President. The energy crisis continues while Congress drags its feet over legalization.

Nevertheless, it was a good year, and it appears as though there's a better one coming up, starting Tuesday.

So, as Tiny Tim said, "God bless us all, every one."

If you are driving tomorrow night, be exceedingly careful — and HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL.

Mercury to dip into 20s tonight

The warm afternoon sun here should take the nip off winter's bite elsewhere as it is viewed on television football games. The weatherman said the mercury should rise into the mid-50s today.

But winter will return in good form tonight when the mercury is to dip into the upper 20s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Monday's weather will best Sunday's by a few degrees with a high expected to be in the upper 50s.

Saturday's high temperature reading was 50 degrees, which was well below the all-time high of 77 degrees set Dec. 28 in 1945. The overnight low Saturday was 31, while the record low for a Dec. 29 is 16 degrees in 1966.

Sunset today will fall at 5:54 p.m., and the sun will rise at 7:49 a.m. Monday.

Rain showers moved out of Texas and into Arkansas and Louisiana Saturday, although the eastern half of the state was covered with a thick cloud cover and temperatures were on the chilly side.

The National Weather Service said an upper air disturbance continued its eastward movement, pushing the rainshowers ahead of it out of Texas.

Late afternoon temperatures ranged from the upper 30s in the northern Panhandle to the 60s in extreme South Texas. Temperatures at 4 p.m. ranged from 39 at Dalhart to 67 at Brownsville.

Ex-Pittsburgh Steeler tackles inmate holding hostage

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Wake County Sheriff John Baker, a former professional football player, tackled an inmate Saturday to free a woman jailer who had been held hostage with a makeshift knife almost 1 1/2 hours.

Baker, a former defensive lineman for the Pittsburgh Steelers, said he went to the jail about 7:30 a.m. after hearing of the incident.

"I just felt we could have a peaceful conversation," said Baker, who is 6-foot-6 and weighs 260 pounds.

He moved closer to the inmate, whom he identified as Lamar Davis, 23, and refused to back off. Davis relaxed his arm, Baker said, and "that was when I overpowered him and told her (the jailer) to get the hell out of there as quick as she could."

Jailer Dianne Rowe, 26, an employee of the jail only seven months, said she was serving breakfast to Davis when the inmate "reached out through the bars and pulled me up close."

After he held the sharpened prongs of a fingerprint roller holder to her neck, she said, "He told me I would be wasted (killed) right there if I did not let him out."

"At the moment, I didn't think I had any other choice but to drop dead right there or to let him out," she said.

Miss Rowe said Davis forced an inmate who was a kitchen helper into his cell and locked the door. He asked if other inmates wanted to be released, but the six others on the cellblock refused, she said. Davis was being held in a single cell. The jail held 110 prisoners at the time.

Davis demanded to be taken to another area of the jail. But Miss Rowe said she led him into a jail office, where he ordered a deputy to handcuff two other jailers together.

Davis said he wanted to talk with the news media, and another kitchen helper, who identified himself as Patrick Grace, called The Associated Press.

"Last night they made an animal out of me," Davis told the AP, saying that he had a terrible stomach ache. Jailers refused to give him the salt water he wanted, he said, "so I had to force my way out."

Prior to the incident, Davis was being held in lieu of bond on a charge of rape and with bond set at $100,200 on charges of robbery, assault on a female and simple assault, Baker said. He was charged Saturday afternoon with kidnapping and assault on a law-enforcement officer with a deadly weapon and was transferred to Central Prison, the state's main facility here, for safekeeping, a spokesman for the department said.

Baker, 44, was elected in 1978 and is North Carolina's first black sheriff. He played defensive left end for Los Angeles, Pittsburgh and Detroit and was named All-Pro in 1965 while with the Steelers.

Oklahoma girl chosen 1980 Maid of Cotton

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 21-year-old, blue-eyed blond from Altus, Okla., is the new 1980 Maid of Cotton.

Melissa Mock was chosen from five finalists Friday night to succeed Suzanne Snipes of Greenville, Miss., as the American cotton industry's new goodwill ambassador.

Miss Mock is a senior at the University of Oklahoma, majoring in public relations.

Dulce Stephania Kingsman, 19, of Atlanta, Ga., was first runnerup, and Nan Andrews, 21, of Marianna, Ark., was selected second runnerup.

Others making the top five were Janet Ward Black, 20, of Kannapolis, N.C., and Susan Elizabeth Raines, 20, of Dallas, Texas.

"I'm trembling, but I feel fine, I feel great," the coed told reporters shortly after being crowned late Friday.

Her father, Paul Harrison, grows cotton on 700 of his 2,000 acres near Altus.

Finalists in the contest were chosen from more than 100 entrants from 11 cotton-producing states on the basis of personality, poise, communication skills and appearance.

The contest, in its 42nd year, is sponsored by the Memphis-based National Cotton Club of America, the Memphis Press-Scimitar, the Memphis Rotary Club and the Memphis Cotton Carnival Association.

The University of Oklahoma coed was to spend a couple of days in Memphis to be fitted for a new wardrobe, then travel to Dallas where she is to make her first official appearance at the Cotton Bowl parade and football game on New Year's Day.

EAST CHICAGO, Ind. (AP) — A faulty fan was blamed Saturday for leaking poisonous gas that killed six steelworkers and stunned a dozen others near the blast furnace of a steel plant on Lake Michigan.

A union official, in the meantime, charged that the plant had one of the worst safety records of any in the steel center of northwestern Indiana.

The steelworkers were ready to end their evening shift Friday night at the plant operated by Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. when they were overcome by carbon monoxide fumes.

"There have been a good dozen fatalities (at the plant) over the past five years," said Norman Purdue, president of Local 1011 of the United Steelworkers Union.

"It's hard to believe six people would fall like flies, I guess in a matter of moments."

The leak apparently developed when a fan that recycles carbon monoxide gas — a by-product of the steelmaking process — into a blast furnace stove quit turning, plant officials said.

Workers crowded into the open area where the fumes had accumulated to try to rescue those who had collapsed and to try to shut off the gas, said Jack Gavin, a company spokesman.

"They rushed into the area," said Gavin. "Blast furnace people are very close... They all help each other."

The dead were identified as Gary Hoffman, 37, Crown Point; Don Fields, 50; Alan Black, 43, and Benjamin Harris, 46, all of Gary; Fred Dehoyas, 22, Hammond; and Zelle Goins, 32, East Chicago.

The leak began about 11 p.m., just before the midnight shift was due to report to the company's Indiana Harbor Works, which employs about 9,000 people.

Gavin said the fan was supposed to force gas into the stove where it is used to generate intense heat for separating iron from ore.

When the fan stopped, carbon monoxide backed up in the furnace. Attempts by the stoveman and other workers to shut a safety valve and cut off the flow of gas failed when a chain on the valve came loose. The carbon monoxide gas spewed out, and the men were overpowered by the fumes, Gavin said.

Purdue charged that the plant, which was operated by Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. before a recent merger, was investigated by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration about a year ago.

He said the plant "should have had more safety guards, the valves should have been replaced with electric controlled valves instead of the manual ones. There also should have been more power respirators throughout the blast furnace."

Gavin said he knew nothing about the plant's previous safety record or the alleged OSHA investigation. He refused to comment on Purdue's charges about the equipment.

There was no immediate comment from OSHA officials.

A safety workers eventually closed the valve manually Friday night, and the fumes dissipated, Gavin said.

Gavin said after carbon monoxide gas is created by the steelmaking process, it is collected and piped into stoves that heat air in large cylindrical chambers. The heated air is forced into the furnace, which produces temperatures up to 2,400 degrees for reducing iron ore to molten steel.

The reason for the fan failure was not known immediately, he said. Gavin said the company would conduct an inquiry and he expected local and federal officials to investigate.

Officials at St. Catherine Hospital said eight people were reported in guarded condition Saturday, all of them conscious.

Four steelworkers who had been taken to the hospital were released. Of the eight people remaining at St. Catherine, three were workers, three were East Chicago firemen and two were Civil Defense workers, the hospital officials said.

East Coast facing loss of insurance

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Interior Department will recommend this week that the government declare most East Coast islands ineligible for federally subsidized flood insurance, officials said.

The proposal could greatly hinder development on North Carolina's Outer banks and on other barrier islands from Maine to Texas.

Leo Willette, a spokesman for the Interior Department's Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service, said that it is paradoxical that the government encourages development on coastal islands through the insurance program, then pays out huge sums in disaster aid.

YMCA claims 'Holiday Heavies' cure

After the holidays some Midlanders may find they're carrying around a few extra pounds.

Alamo YMCA has developed a cure for the "Holiday Heavies" in the form of a variety of exercise programs for the entire family, according to executive director John McVickar.

An aerobic fitness class meets 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Other fitness classes that will be available in January or February include Fitness Fantasia or Aerobic dance.

Swimming classes for the new year will be held Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday. Any student wanting to attend all four days may do so for an additional fee.

Ladies swimming classes begin Jan. 14 and will meet three days each week through May 31. The advanced class will meet 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. The intermediate class will meet 11 a.m. to noon those days and the beginner class will meet noon to 1 p.m.

Girls Gymnastics continues to be a popular youth program through the winter. Classes are offered either Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday. There are classes for two and three year olds, four and five year olds, six and seven year olds and eight years and up.

Friday night is family night at the Alamo YMCA with volleyball, swimming, games and television offered for the older children and a nursery service for the younger ones. McVickar said those persons interested should come by for a visit or call and ask for a brochure to be mailed.

Registration forms for classes may be brought by the YMCA or mailed in. The forms are available in the brochure.

Youth sports programs coming up next include basketball for boys and girls. Girls basketball is offered for those girls in grades three through six and registration will be taken through Jan. 11. Boys basketball is offered for those in first through ninth grades.

Registration deadlines are Jan. 11 for first through third grades and Jan. 4 for fourth through ninth grades. A $5 fee is charged for each program and a membership is required for all programs except junior high.

Other youth programs include the after school program, which provides bus pick-up every afternoon and the Holiday Fun Club program, both for elementary age children. Also available are the Indian Guide and Princess programs for fathers and sons and fathers and daughters.

Available in January will be Middle Eastern Dance from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesdays and karate from 6:30-7:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. A CPR course will be offered from 9 a.m. noon to 6:45-10 p.m. Jan. 18 and 25.

The next session of classes at the Alamo YMCA begins Jan. 7 and registration for all classes begins Wednesday.

Disco Dancing for youths is offered Mondays from 6:30-7:30 p.m. and 7:30-8:30 p.m. An advanced disco dancing class is offered Mondays 8:30-9:30 p.m. A Western Dance class for youths is slated 6:30-7:30 p.m. Wednesdays and a class for adults is held from 7:30-8:30 p.m. Wednesdays. Advanced Western dancers meet 8:30-9:30 p.m. Tuesdays.

Classical dance youth classes also are offered. Tiny tots meet 3:15-4:15 p.m. Mondays. Eight and nine-year-olds meet Mondays and Wednesdays 4:15-5:15 p.m. and older youths meet the same days at 5:15-6:15 p.m. An adult ballet class meets 10-11 a.m. Mondays and Fridays.

For more information, call 694-2528 or go by the Alamo YMCA, 901 N. Midland Drive.

Guardsmen fight fires as firemen, city argue

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — National Guardsmen manning the city's fire houses for the second time in four years were quick to get their baptism under fire late last week.

And the rhetoric is growing hotter in this latest dispute between the city and its firefighters.

Officials of Firefighters Local 42 call City Manager Robert Kipp a "dictator" who is out to break the union and fire all of the 906 people in the fire department.

Mayor Richard Berkley calls the firemen "lawbreakers." He says the city will not negotiate a new contract until they end a "sickout" that started Wednesday.

On Oct. 3, 1975, Kansas City firemen walked off the job and 800 National Guardsmen manned the fire stations until the strike ended four days later. Will there be another strike?

"No," says union chief John Germann. "There's not enough men left in the department to strike."

In the first 10 days of the latest job action, 42 firefighters have been dismissed and 278 have been given three-day suspensions to be served later and face dismissal if they decline to work overtime. More than 200 firemen have been calling in sick since Wednesday.

More than 1,000 preregister for spring semester at MC

More than 1,000 prospective or current students have preregistered for the spring semester at Midland College. Preregistration activities resume Wednesday, when the college reopens following its holiday break.

Preregistration, which allows students to get much of the paperwork and details out of the way in advance, is being handled Wednesday through Friday of this week and Monday and Tuesday of next week before official registration days Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 9-10.

"We are running somewhat ahead of last year's pre-registration count for the same period," noted registrar Dee Windsor. "This was anticipated as more students have learned that getting their time permits during preregistration is preferable in signing up for specific courses and getting the class schedules they desire before classes are closed."

Time permits are issued as students complete preregistration, allocating them specific time periods to report for registration.

The preregistration count when Midland College closed for the holidays was about half the number of students expected to sign up for courses during the spring semester, Windsor said.

Classes for the spring semester begin Jan. 14 for both daytime and evening students.

"New students attending Midland College are particularly urged to come in for preregistration, so they can visit with counselors about their educational and career plans before signing up for classes," Windsor urged.

Preregistration is conducted in the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Additional information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 166 or 251.

AREA REPORT

Hobbs Plaza to begin soon

HOBBS, N.M. — Construction of the $6-million Hobbs Plaza Shopping Center is expected to get under way in February for a September opening on a 10-acre site.

The Skaggs Alpha Beta food market-drug store will anchor the center, which may include fast-food restaurants, hardware store, camera shop, book store, music shop, dress shop, floral shop, jewelry store, a clock shop, and other businesses.

The new center, which will be adjacent to a bank and fast-food restaurants, will serve the Hobbs trade area, which takes in about 85,000 people in Southeast New Mexico and West Texas.

The center is to be developed by Hobbs Associates, a Los Angeles-based partnership. Alvin Oldin, one of the partners, said announcement of other stores to be located in the center will be made soon.

Jim Nance to resign

LAMESA — Jim Nance, 33, said he will resign his job as a Dawson County deputy sheriff to run for the Precinct 3 commissioner's post now held by Alton Addison.

"I am interested in county politics," Addison said, "and feel I could offer a valuable service" as a commissioner.

Political offices up for election here in 1980 include that of sheriff, held by Bill Horton; tax assessor-collector, held by Leland Miller; county attorney, held by Ralph Kinsey, constable, held by Glenn "Bottles" White, and district attorney, held by Joe Smith of Seminole.

West wins oratorical contest

STANTON — Phyllis West, 16-year-old Rankin High School junior, won the oratorical contest "How To Save Energy Every Day" and an expense-paid trip to the nation's capital here recently.

Seven high school students from Stanton, Midland, Rankin and Grady were entered in the contest sponsored by Cap Rock Electric Co-operative of Stanton.

Other students entered were Gregory Graves of Stanton; James-Hoelscher, Tim Purcell and Billy Forest, all of Midland's Lee High School; James Barrett of Rankin, and Laura Constable of Grady.

Judging the event was Bruce Griffith and Andy Wilson, both of Big Spring, and Tom Boone of Odessa.

Wright announces for sheriff

KERMIT — Former Winkler County deputy sheriff and jailer, Joe Wright, 38, has announced his candidacy for the sheriff's post, which now is sought by three men, including the incumbent, W.E. "Bill" Adams, 33.

Wright, like Adams and candidate James L. "Mack" West, 47, is running under the Democratic Party's banner. West has been a deputy sheriff here for three years.

Wright has undergone advanced law-enforcement training in crime scene and search, teletype and fingerprinting at Sul Ross State University in Alpine.

Monahans plant studied

CRANE — Studies are under way for a new power-generating site west of Monahans in Ward County for Texas Electric Service Co. The plant hinges on the availability of adequate water to cool the proposed 1.5-million kilowatt plant.

Some face '80 Social Security tax increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some people face an increase in Social Security taxes in the new year, but unless Congress changes things, nearly everyone will be paying more in 1981.

After increases in each of the previous two years, the amount of tax withheld from workers' paychecks will remain at 6.13 percent of income in 1980.

Unless a worker earns more than $22,900 during the year, he or she will not pay any more in Social Security taxes in 1980.

However, workers in higher income brackets will pay more. The wage base on which the tax applies has been raised from $22,900 to $25,900, increasing the maximum tax from $1,404 to $1,588.

Income tax rates will remain the same because there isn't any increase or decrease in the tax rates scheduled for 1980. However, workers whose incomes are rising in dollar terms, will find themselves in higher tax brackets, so proportionately more income taxes will be withheld from their paychecks.

THAT MAY seem unjust to some since the real value of workers' earnings declined by more than 5 percent in 1979, largely because of inflation. The deductions from workers' paychecks for the Social Security program are matched by their employers, so the actual tax on $25,900 of income is 12.26 percent, or $3,176, with half paid by the employer.

Once the maximum tax has been withheld from a paycheck, there are no further deductions during the year for someone earning more than the top wage base. A person earning $30,000, for example, stopped paying the Social Security tax in October and enjoyed a sudden increase in take-home pay. The beginning of a new year means a resumption of the tax and thus a drop in take-home pay for persons in the higher income brackets.

from his or her paycheck during the entire year. Unless Congress acts this year to change existing law, virtually all of the more than 98 million workers in the country face a substantial increase in Social Security taxes in 1981.

THE AMOUNT withheld from workers' paychecks is scheduled to increase to 6.65 percent in 1981 and the wage base will rise to $29,700, producing a maximum tax of $1,975. A worker earning $15,000 will pay $920 in 1980, the same as in 1979, but faces an increase to $998 in 1981.

However, because of inflation, which has been much worse than expected, there is concern now that even those additional revenues may not be enough. Social Security benefits are indexed to the rate of inflation so that they rise together.

But even the increases now in the pipeline could be reduced, or even eliminated, in favor of alternative means of financing the Social Security program.

FARM-RANCH ROUNDUP

100 Texans set for Phoenix meet

WACO — More than 100 Texas Farm Bureau members, including 18 voting delegates, will be attending the 61st annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Phoenix, Ariz., on Jan. 6-10.

Delegates from 49 states and Puerto Rico will be deciding on Farm Bureau policies for 1980. Policies recommended by the TFB include:

— Extending the present farm program for two years. Price support levels should not create artificial incentives for overproduction and should be indexed to increase at the same rate as inflation.

— Legislation to restrict or regulate non-resident alien farm ownership.

— Opposition to the federal beef referendum program and to a federal check-off program for wheat.

— Voluntary program for beef.

— Opposition to a national grain board.

— Ban be lifted on 2,4,5-T herbicide.

— Cut budgets of Environmental Protection Agency and Occupational Safety and Health Administration be cut by 98 percent until EPA and OSHA can be dissolved.

— Increase research on improved brucellosis vaccines for cattle and calves.

— Reinstate Mirex to combat fire ants.

— Agricultural producers should be given highest priority in the allocation of energy resources.

— Opposition to the "windfall" profits tax.

— Deregulation of the trucking industry.

— Decrease welfare budget and use the 1978 budget as the norm.

Feeding the 'bugs'

COLLEGE STATION — When feeding cattle, producers need to know that they are actually feeding little "bugs" in the animal's rumen — stomach.

"It's these microscopic organisms that turn forage into something cattle can use," says Dr. Dennis Herd, feed cattle specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of Texas A&M University.

"The rumen bugs need 6 to 7 percent protein to function properly," explains Herd. "So, if hay has this much protein or more, no supplemental feed is necessary for adequate microbial activity and good digestion. However, with low quality hay or forage of 4 percent crude protein, a protein supplement to increase digestion, total feed intake and daily gain."

Farm financial survey set

A survey of the financial characteristics of farm operators and owners of farm land to yield "needed information" for Congressional committees and interested groups will be taken in January by the U.S. Department of the Commerce's Bureau of the Census.

Survey report forms will be sent to a sample of U.S. farmers and ranchers as a follow-up to the 1978 Census of Agriculture conducted earlier this year.

Production costs climbing

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Huge crops of corn, wheat, soybeans and cotton produced in 1979 resulted partly from application of chemical fertilizers that made crops more productive, growing faster and sturdier.

But with fertilizer prices going up, farmers can expect higher production costs in 1980. That is one of the tough realities producers face in the near future.

Even more worrisome may be the long-range outlook for phosphates — the commercial sources of phosphorus — which, along with nitrogen and potash (potassium), comprise the three primary plant nutrients contained in chemical fertilizers.

About 90 percent of the world's phosphate production is used for agriculture, and the United States is by far the leading producer and user.

But the General Accounting Office, the auditing agency of Congress, says U.S. supply of readily available phosphate rock — the main source of phosphorus for fertilizer — is dwindling. Annual production, it said, may peak by 1985 and thereafter "steadily decline."

In fact, a recent GAO report said, current reserves of high-grade phosphate "probably will be exhausted over the next 30 to 40 years."

Phosphorus probably has been used as a fertilizer since pre-historic times in the form of bone, guano or fish meal but was not identified as the source of a plant nutrient until 1800.

"Following that discovery, the demand for bones was so great that European battlefields were dug up and the bones shipped to England" for processing into fertilizer, the report said.

Nothing so drastic appears likely to evolve in the decade or two ahead, but the GAO does say the government ought to be taking a more serious look at the phosphate situation and start thinking about what the alternatives may be.

Primary vote could be surprise

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) The dozen candidates who have qualified for spots on New Hampshire's presidential primary ballot are digging in for a contest that may offer some surprises.

For more than a year, candidates have dashed in and out of the state. Some, such as former CIA director George Bush and Illinois Rep. Philip Crane, were here so often they could almost qualify for residency. Others, such as former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and former Texas Gov. John Connally, came in once or twice.

The nation's first state primary is considered crucial by many politicians. Others disagree.

"Like it or not, the next president of the United States is going to start his trip to the White House right here in New Hampshire," Rep. John Anderson, a Republican candidate, said last week.

Whatever politicians may say, the New Hampshire staffs of the candidates are worried about where the votes will go Feb. 26.

Some New Hampshire organizers for Democrat Sen. Edward M. Kennedy are worried that the national campaign organization for the Massachusetts senator is not putting enough emphasis on the primary.

Dudley Dudley, the head of Kennedy's New Hampshire operation, said, "We've seen many campaigns in the past where taking New Hampshire for granted has led to the defeat of a candidate."

At President Carter's headquarters here, there is growing optimism.

"We're much further ahead than we thought we'd be and a great deal of that is because of Kennedy himself," said Ellis Woodward, a senior Carter staff member. "All of the hoopla about what a great campaigner Kennedy is has faded as he's proven himself to be bumbling, erratic and sometimes inept."

But Carter organizers are worried how long Carter can stay off the campaign trail. He has called off campaign appearances because of the crisis in Iran.

The other major Democratic contender, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., appears to be making little progress. While some fresh talent has smoothed out rough spots in his New Hampshire campaign, there is no sign Brown has found support in the state.

The Republicans, with their side of the ballot crowded with seven candidates, are having problems of their own.

The battle expected between Reagan and Connally has yet to surface, as Connally apparently is putting little emphasis on his New Hampshire campaign.

Reagan sits confidently on a frontrunner's throne and his organizers insist that his lead in New Hampshire is solid.

Possible conservative challenges from Crane and Kansas Sen. Robert Dole have yet to materialize, although both candidates began campaigning here months before the rest of the pack.

Meanwhile, Bush has made some apparent inroads on Republican votes, drawing conservatives and moderates to his campaign.

His repeated visits and personal contacts, directed by former Gov. Hugh Gregg, have made an impact, and some GOP leaders believe Bush will take the number two slot behind Reagan.

Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker, who entered New Hampshire amid speculation that he would do well, appears to be bogged down with organizational problems compounded by his late start.

Borger deaths lead to fine for Phillips Petroleum

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. has been fined $19,600 for violating government safety regulations in connection with the deaths two months ago of two workers at a refinery near Borger, a Lubbock newspaper reported Saturday. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration cited Phillips for "two willful and two serious" safety violations after the two workers fell to their deaths, the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal said in a copyright story.

The newspaper said the company has 15 days to pay a $19,600 fine or contest the citations.

At Phillips headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla., a company spokesman said the firm had been advised of the action but has not seen the complaint and will not comment until officials can read it.

Edd Windler, acting plant manager, declined to comment on the citations.

Kim Manning, 27, and Fran McGahan, 29, both of Fritch, died several hours after they inhaled lethal gas and fell more than 20 feet to the ground during a maintenance check of Unit 22, a special refinery tower at the sprawling plant four miles east of Borger.

Jerry Bailey, OSHA's area director, told the Avalanche-Journal the autopsies were inconclusive, but there was "strong evidence" to show the men died from hydrogen sulfide gas poisoning.

"We feel that had Phillips been in compliance with the regulations, the deaths could have been prevented," Bailey said.

Following the accident, Bailey said, an OSHA inspector noted the two men did not have respirators, breathing equipment or facial protection available to them when toxic gases sprouted from a pipe thought to be empty.

Thirteen other workers also were exposed to the deadly gas, but survived.

Two "willful violations" of the OSHA Act of 1970 were cited after an OSHA inspector found the company failed to assure tests were conducted for hydrocarbon vapors and hydrogen sulfide prior to and continuously after a safety valve was removed from the pipe, Bailey told the newspaper.

The inspector said the second "willful" violation comprised a series of violations concerning the lack of respirators available in a potentially dangerous area.

Among the charges, OSHA claimed, Phillips had exposed its employees to lethal gases, exposed rescue workers to potential lethal gases without adequate respirator protection and had failed to teach its employees how to properly use the respirators.

The petroleum company was assessed a $9,000 fine for each "willful" violation. The maximum penalty is $10,000 per violation.

"We certainly can't place a monetary value on a life," Bailey said. "The fines are more to show there are some problems that need to be corrected and to act as an incentive to the company to comply."

Bailey said the inspector also found two "serious" violations, each carrying $800 fines. The open platform where the two men worked did not have a standard safety railing. "Those railings could have kept the men from falling," Bailey said.

'One More Time' goes on the road; To Israeli kibbutz!

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — When the producers of "One More Time" told the cast their new musical was going on the road before opening on Broadway, they weren't kidding.

First stop was an Israeli kibbutz. Then the eight talented singers and dancers, bypassing the traditional tryout circuit of Philadelphia, New Haven and Boston, captivated the Israeli stage with a rousing revue spanning a century of American song.

"They told us we would open in Israel," said Greg Burge, at 21 a veteran of three years on Broadway as the Scarecrow in "The Wiz." "I said, 'Boy, that's really out of town.'"

Despite the 6,000-mile trek from The Great White Way to a country where English is a second language, producer Gil Shiva said the idea made sense.

"The risk was actually less than if we'd gone to a bigger place," said Shiva, an Israeli who moved to New York 17 years ago. "With a small cast, it wasn't so many airplane tickets and it costs a lot more to rent a theater in Philadelphia. So why not come here?"

At $6 and $10, ticket prices are scaled down to Israeli standards, but the enthusiastic response quickly eased any financial worries. "One More Time" is the hottest ticket in Israel.

There are artistic benefits as well. "It's easier for us to polish the show here," Burge said. "The audiences are wonderful, and their expectations aren't as high. So we can work on the show with less pressure."

Shiva, a veteran producer of dance companies and television shows taking his first crack at theater, said the idea for "One More Time" stemmed from the Broadway successes of such all-music, no-plot revues as "Ain't Misbehavin'" and "Eubie."

"I felt an evening of that sort with more versatility, using different composers and different styles, could appeal to a lot of people," he said.

The show itself consists of 75 songs, loosely woven together, encompassing current trends and nostalgic fa-avorites stretching back to the days of minstrel shows.

On paper, holding together a show with such diverse numbers as "Oh Susannah," "Fly Me To The Moon," "Beer Barrel Polka," "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho," "Ain't She Sweet," and Donna Summer's disco hit "Last Dance," to name a few, might seem impossible.

But on stage it works, thanks to colorful staging, exciting choreography and an exuberant cast that sings and dances for two grueling hours without bogging down.

"It's pure entertainment," Burge said. "Everyone can relate to the music no matter what language you speak. There aren't any heavy messages. People are tired of hearing heavy messages, especially in Israel with all they've gone through. They really appreciate just being entertained."

The all-black troupe, after working for a month in New York, came here in October for another Broadway first: two weeks' final rehearsal at an Israeli kibbutz.

"It's great to have a theater at your disposal all the time," Shiva said. "In New York you get just a few hours a day before you open. At the kibbutz we rehearsed day and night, whenever we needed."

The Israeli hosts, said Archie Wilbur, a 23-year-old Washington, D.C., native, "were very warm. They would come in and watch rehearsal and applaud. It was a hectic schedule, but when I could, I'd go outside and sing some of the songs with the kids. And when we left they threw a big party for us and invited us back."

One boy killed, two wounded in knife attack

NEW YORK (AP) — About 12 youths with knives attacked a group of teenagers on the platform of an elevated subway early Saturday, killing one person and wounding two others, authorities said.

The attack occurred about 2:30 a.m. in Brooklyn after the youths jumped a turnstile and surrounded a group of two boys and two girls on a subway platform, police said.

Officers said the youths stabbed the three boys, one of whom said he was standing nearby out of curiosity.

Police said William Martinez, 17, was stabbed in the neck but managed to run down the steps of the subway station to the street.

Texas A&M's Singing Cadets will perform at Lee High

The Singing Cadets, a Texas A&M traditional all-male glee club, will perform in the Lee High School auditorium January 7 at 7 p.m. Tickets for the concert will be $2 for adults and $1 for students and will be available from Jack Burns at Western State Bank, 697-3137; J.C. Rainey, 682-7979; Pete Bauerlein, 683-2751; or at the door. Tickets also can be obtained by writing and sending the money to 1030 Andrews Highway, Midland, 79701.

The 67-voice group, directed by Robert L. Boone, traces its roots to 1894.

The Singing Cadets attracted national attention under Prof. J.J. Woolket's direction, performing in a 1939 radio broadcast at the Sugar Bowl. Their first recording, made with the Texas Aggie Band, was cut during this period.

The Cadets also provided choral music for Universal Picture's 1942 production of "We've Never Been Licked."

The Singing Cadets in the last 15 years have performed in the White House by presidential invitation, on the Ed Sullivan and Mike Douglas television shows, and for seven consecutive years appeared on the nationally televised Miss Teenage America Pageant.

A 1974 summer tour sent the Cadets to Romania.

Six stereo recordings have been released, with another in the works.

3 gas tankers derail in yard

MECHANICVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Three railroad tankers loaded with gasoline derailed at the Delaware & Hudson Railroad freight yard near here Saturday but officials said the derailment posed no immediate danger.

Officials said that one of the cars had tipped on its side after the derailment, one was leaning and one remained upright. There was no leakage from any of the cars.

"We have several fire companies standing by just in case," said Deputy Timothy Thomas. "There doesn't appear to be any immediate danger, however."

Thomas said that no residents of the city of about 6,200 had been forced to leave their homes.

British authorities report cease-fire working thus far

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesian soldiers and guerrilla troops — bitter enemies through seven years of war — appear to be heeding a call for peace as Rhodesia ushers in its first full day of the new cease-fire, British authorities said Saturday.

That assessment was disputed by Rhodesian military leaders, who accused Patriotic Front guerrillas of violating the truce in several attacks throughout the country. No casualties were reported.

The Rhodesians said guerrillas ambushed a Rhodesian army supply convoy, attacked two farms operated by whites and sent as many as 700 armed insurgents into Rhodesia in violation of the truce.

"While promising to investigate the Rhodesian charges, British officials tended to dismiss them and seemed pleased with the day's events.

"The operation is going well," said chief British spokesman Nicholas Fenn. "It is not surprising that there should have been incidents which are miles from the monitoring units."

"It's a very encouraging start," said Col. Mike Bush, a member of the 1,300-member British Commonwealth force here monitoring the cease-fire.

Added a military spokesman for the Commonwealth force: "A couple of shots fired need not mean a breakdown in the cease-fire." He suggested the alleged violations were acts of "plain banditry" not connected to the truce.

"Every indication is that all concerned are making every possible effort to make the cease-fire work," said Brig. John Learmont, commander of the British force.

He said "a considerable number" of the 16 cease-fire assembly camps had had communications with guerrillas loyal to Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, leaders of the Patriotic Front which for years fought the Rhodesian army in a civil war that cost an estimated 21,000 lives.

About 100 guerrillas had arrived at reception points since the cease-fire took effect at midnight Friday, Learmont said at the first press briefing, 14 hours later. He said more were expected Sunday.

Shortly after dawn, hundreds of U.S.-made tents were airdropped into the guerrilla assembly areas, where Patriotic Front leaders have urged their estimated 15,000 guerrilla forces to gather. The guerrillas will keep their weapons, but they and the Rhodesian army will be watched by the 1,300 members of the peacekeeping force provided by Britain and Commonwealth nations.

All guerrillas still roaming outside assembly points after Jan. 4 will be considered outlaws.

As an indication of how well the cease-fire's first day was progressing, Brig. Learmont spoke of a group of armed Rhodesian troops whose path had unexpectedly crossed that of a party of armed black guerrillas on a bush trail.

Learmont said the group from the Rhodesian Home Affairs Ministry met the guerrilla band in the northern bush and that their calm reactions to each other served as a good example of the apparent respect both sides held for the cease-fire.

Learmont's force, which besides some 800 British troops includes others from Australia, New Zealand, Fiji and Kenya, is depending more on good will than armed force to maintain the cease-fire.

The troops are armed only with pistols and automatic rifles and are under instructions to use them only in self defense.

HAYDEN, Colo. (AP) — Routt County sheriff's officers have identified the pilot of a twin-engine plane that crashed near here as Joe Demmer, 57, of Tyler, Texas.

Demmer was killed Friday when his plane went down after aborting a landing approach to the Yampa Valley Airport, about two miles east of Hayden. He was on a flight from Texas.

Demmer's identity was withheld until Saturday so relatives could be notified.

A spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board in Denver said the plane was a Beechcraft Model 60, commonly known as a "duke".

U.S. Coast Guard rescues seaman from Mississippi

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard plucked a seaman from the swirling Mississippi River in predawn darkness Saturday after he tumbled from a Greek freighter leaving the Port of New Orleans.

"It's very seldom that a man goes overboard in the river and comes up alive, especially in darkness," said Chief Petty Officer Claude Otto at the 8th Coast Guard District.

The seaman, identified as Kiriakos Panagiotis, 34, was in stable condition at the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital. His hometown was not immediately known.

Otto said the Coast Guard got a report about 1:45 a.m. that a seaman had fallen from the Homer, a 311-foot Greek freighter, as the ship was southbound in the Mississippi River about 15 miles south of New Orleans.

He said Panagiotis was spotted in the muddy waters about 3 a.m. by the co-pilot of a Coast Guard helicopter, was lifted aboard a 32-foot Coast Guard patrol boat and then was transferred by helicopter to the New Orleans hospital.

DPSS predicts 56 will be slain on state roads

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Fifty-six persons will die on the road as Texans celebrate the end of the decade, according to Department of Public Safety predictions.

DPS' "Operation Motorcade" will keep track of highway deaths from 6 p.m. Friday through New Year's Day.

Spokesman Bill Carter said highway deaths during the New Year's week often occur closer to home than deaths on the Christmas holiday.

"There's more long-range travel at Christmas than New Year's," said Carter.

Many Americans took to the highways for the final weekend of 1979 Saturday as the four-day New Year's Day holiday began.

And the death toll began to mount, with 91 people having been killed in traffic accidents across the nation by 11 p.m.

DOE approves import of Mexican natural gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy announced Saturday that it has approved import of 300 million cubic feet of natural gas per day from Mexico and has allowed a price increase for liquefied natural gas from Algeria.

The department said in a written statement that its Economic Regulatory Commission gave the final approval to an agreement between a firm formed by six U.S. companies and the Mexican state oil company Pemex.

The initial price for the natural gas as of Jan. 1 will be $3.625 per million British thermal units, the department said. It described that price as "competitive with other fuels," and said the imports would help cut American dependence on foreign oil.

The statement also said the price would be adjusted every three months in line with increases in various crude oil prices by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and by non-OPEC countries. The adjustments also would require review by the regulatory commission.

The new price approved for liquefied natural gas from Algeria is $1.94 per million British thermal units, compared to $1.15 per million Btu's approved on an interim basis last summer, the department said.

It added that with transportation and other costs, the price will be $3.43 per million Btu's at the point where the gas enters the U.S. pipeline system.

The price for the Algerian gas is cheaper than the price of other natural gas imports, including those by pipeline from Canada and Mexico, the Energy Department noted.

The gas to be imported from Mexico will be through existing pipelines and any additional imports requiring new facilities would require further consideration and possibly hearings, the department said.

The company doing the importing is Border Gas Inc., formed by Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co.; Texas Eastern Transmission Corp.; El Paso Natural Gas Co.; Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp.; Southern Natural Gas Co.; and Florida Gas Transmission Co.

The department said the approval of the new price for Algerian liquefied natural gas came in renegotiation of a contract which also ties the future price of the gas, before transportation costs, to changes in prices of imported fuel oils for the remaining 23-years of the contract.

Stick up near Vealmont costs young farm hand

BIG SPRING — A young hired farm hand was robbed at gunpoint, of $65 in cash and a $100 payroll check Saturday afternoon just after he had driven to his farm house near Vealmont and about 25 miles north of Big Spring.

Howard County sheriff deputies were withholding name of the victim, who was in his late teens or early 20s. They reported the farm house had been ransacked.

Deputies Gary Porter and Allen Parrish, who investigated the incident, said they were told a man had placed a stereophonic record player in the trunk of a car when the hired hand drove up to the farm house between 6:15 and 6:30 p.m. The house was rented to Alonzo Valquez.

The victim reported that another man and woman were in the car when the first man pulled a gun on him. No shots were fired.

"He said he was scared," Porter said of the victim. "I told him I would be, too, if somebody pointed a gun at me." The deputy said the weapon used was a .32-caliber automatic pistol.

The victim reported the trio drove north toward Gail in a white-and-green-colored car. The car's license plate was either missing or not visible, a deputy added.

He said that an All Points Bulletin has been issued in an effort to catch and arrest the alleged burglars.

DIRT, SQUIRT, QUIRT Tree planting time almost here

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Damp weather for most of the week delayed the windup of the harvest of the 1979 cotton crop in the Midland area. Gins were able to continue ginning the backlog of harvested cotton in trailers and in modules and ricks in the field. Some farmers have begun stalk shredding, chiseling, listing and breaking of land in preparation for next year's crops.

WHEN FEEDING CATTLE, livestock producers need to know that they are actually feeding little "bugs" in the animal's rumen or stomach. It's these little microscopic organisms that turn forage into something cattle can use. The rumen bugs need 6 to 7 percent protein to function properly. So, if hay or grass has this much protein or more, no supplemental feed is necessary for adequate microbial activity and good digestion. However, with low quality hay or grass of 3 to 4 percent crude protein a protein supplement will increase digestion, total feed intake and daily performance.

Classes of cattle such as growing heifers, fattening cattle or cows nursing calves require protein levels of 10 to 12 percent for good production — levels above those needed by rumen bugs. One way to determine if cattle are getting an adequate protein diet is to examine their droppings. If droppings are dry and tall, it's a sign of constipation and lack of protein in the diet. Small amounts of supplemental phosphorus and protein stimulate these bugs and the digestive process so that mature cattle can use low quality forages that are available this time of the year.

A pound of 30 to 40 percent protein supplement and a few ounces of a good salt-phosphorus mineral can change poor animal performance into acceptable maintenance performance on low quality forage. However, young cattle do not have the digestive capacity to use low quality forage effectively. So they need higher levels of protein and energy supplement, higher quality forage, or both, for acceptable growth rates.

AT THIS TIME OF YEAR, wood ashes from stoves and fireplaces are plentiful, and the question arises as to the value of wood ashes as an additive to the garden soil. Ashes are quite beneficial on some types of soil, such as the acid, sandy soils in many East Texas areas. But not so in the soils of West Texas.

Ashes contain chemicals which are very alkaline (pH 10 to 12) and are quite high in potassium, calcium and magnesium — elements that are already abundant in West Texas soils. Also, since about 80 to 90 percent of wood ashes is water-soluble matter, high rates can cause salt buildup in soils, resulting in plant injury. So, the best advice is not to use wood ashes in your garden soil in our section of the state.

JANUARY THROUGH FEBRUARY is an ideal time to select shade, fruit and nut trees for planting so they can become established prior to spring growth. Choose a tree that is well adapted to the area soils and weather extremes. Information is available from the Extension office on recommended species and varieties, or you can consult your nurseryman.

After selecting the tree, make certain it's planted correctly. Start out by making sure the planting hole is large enough for the root system. For a bare-root tree, make the hole large enough to allow the roots to spread out naturally. It should be deep enough for the plant to set no deeper than its original soil level — slightly higher (1 to 2 inches) is even better.

Next, trim broken or damaged roots, and then form a mound in the bottom of the planting hole, letting the roots flow down the mound. Do not allow roots to dry out.

For balled-and-burlapped trees, dig the hole about one and a half times the diameter of the ball. Plant it so that the top of the soil ball is at or slightly above the existing soil surface.

Finally, prune the tops of transplanted trees to compensate for loss of roots. As a general rule, prune about one-third of the top growth. Then fill the hole with a good soil mixture (no fertilizer) and water thoroughly, making sure no air pockets are left around the roots. As your newly planted tree begins to grow, you can feel proud of improving your landscape and environment.

Hodgkin's disease, leukemia related but quite different

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is Hodgkin's disease another name for leukemia? Mrs. A.N.S.

Dear Mrs. S.: Both Hodgkin's disease and leukemia involve the production of abnormal white blood cells, but while there is a relationship between the two, they are not the same disease.

Normal white blood cells are used by the body to fight infections. Leukemia is a disease of the organs that form blood. In patients with leukemia, there is an overproduction of abnormal white blood cells which are unable to fight infection, disrupt the production of red blood cells and interfere with clotting.

There are two major types of leukemia, and they are identified by the type of blood cells affected. Lymphocytic leukemia involves the lymphocytes, which are produced in the lymph nodes and bone marrow. Granulocytic leukemia (also called myelocytic) affects the granulocytes, which are produced by bone marrow cells (or myeloid). Either kind occurs in both the acute and chronic form.

The acute form of leukemia is seen in patients of all ages, and is most often the kind that affects children. It progresses rapidly and, until recently, soon resulted in death. Chronic leukemia, which is less common than the acute form, generally occurs in adults. It progresses more slowly, and some patients live for as long as 10 or even 20 years.

As leukemia cells increase in number, the production of normal red and white cells and platelets is substantially reduced, resulting in anemia and making the patient highly susceptible to infection, bruising and hemorrhaging. Symptoms include fever, pain in the joints and bones, and swelling of the lymph nodes, spleen and liver.

Hodgkin's disease affects the lymphatic system, where the body manufactures plasma cells and white blood cells. As the disease progresses, the increased number of abnormal white blood cells produced reduces the number of normal cells available to fight infection.

An early symptom of Hodgkin's disease is a swollen lymph gland, usually in the neck; however, it might appear in armpit or groin. There may be pain in the abdomen, back or legs, as well as fever, sweating, itching, loss of appetite, nausea and vomiting.

MC interim session just concentrated classwork

Earning three hours of college credit in just nine days of classes isn't easy, but it can be done through the concentrated winter interim session offered by Midland College Jan. 2-11.

Dr. Yell explained that all instructors teaching interim session courses are regular, full-time faculty members at Midland College.

"Students attend classes five hours per day for nine class days and concentrate solely on one academic subject," explained Dr. Raymond Yell, dean of instruction. "By working on just one subject, they and their instructor together are able to cover a semester-length course in a very short period of time."

The 1980 Winter Interim Session opens with registration at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 2, in room 213 of the Learning Resource Center. Classes are in session from 8:30 to 11 a.m. and from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. including one Saturday. The session ends with final examinations on Jan. 11.

Courses being offered during the interim session include history 2301, U.S. History to 1877; history 2302, U.S. History from 1877; psychology 2301, Introduction to Psychology; sociology 2301, Introduction to Sociology; English 1302, Composition and Literature; English 2303, Technical Writing; and government 2302, State and Federal Government.

One important difference between the two diseases is the more favorable prognosis for patients with Hodgkin's disease. The disease is classified according to the type of abnormal growth predominating in the affected lymph nodes, and the extent. The system of classification, known as "staging," indicates how far the disease has progressed. When the disease is discovered in its early stages, the treatment of choice is intensive irradiation of lymph regions. Prompt treatment can save from 80 to 90 percent of those afflicted. For patients with later stages of the disease, drug therapy has proven most effective.

With leukemia patients, the prognosis is less favorable, but improving. With the new drugs now available, a five-year survival rate is possible for about half the patients. Early diagnosis and prompt treatment make the probable outcome more favorable.

HOUSES ARE LIKE PEOPLE
I was watching the Academy Awards on television. Two actresses were introduced, both of whom had won Oscars some 20 years ago. One had shown the effect of these 20 years. She had gained much weight, was wrinkled and looked far older than 20 years should have looked on her. The other, to my pleasure, looked exactly as she did on the screen 20 years ago. Although the same years had rolled by you'd never have known it. The difference was amazing. Homes are like people. They can easily deteriorate with age and along with their physical deterioration follows the deterioration in value-money value. On the other hand, a house has the unique capability of being able to look even fresher, more beautiful, more gracious, and increase in value over 20 years if it is well maintained by the owner. When you become a homeowner, you agree in your mortgage to keep the property in good condition. This is only common sense. Why sacrifice years of hard work to buy an expensive home and then allow it to lose value through neglect? Take good care of your investment inside, outside, and system-wise—you'll be glad you did — for pride and profit. It may even win an Oscar someday. If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON HARVEY REALTORS 702 Andrews Hwy. Phone 683-5333. We're here to help. ## Tankers equipped with sails foreseen

TOKYO (AP) — In the endless search for new ways to conserve oil, a Japanese shipbuilding company predicts it will have within a few years the world's first oceangoing tanker equipped with sails as well as engines.

In feasibility studies done so far, Nippon Kokan K.K. has gone to sea with a 77-ton test ship, the "Daioh," equipped with three kinds of sails.

"Our estimate now is that if we got fair winds of up to 32 miles an hour from a 90-degree heading, we could cut the engines and still keep a 20,000-ton ship moving at 15 knots," said Kazuyuki Shimizu, the shipbuilder's chief naval architect.

This would be the equivalent of 7,480 horsepower on a conventional ship, he said.

Shimizu said the basic idea would be to use sail to augment normal power and save about 10 percent of the fuel now consumed by oceangoing cargo ships.

However, he said, as oil prices go up, auxiliary sails will become increasingly valuable and "economically feasible" when fuel oil costs more than $200 a ton.

The sails themselves would not be the old clipper ship variety but, according to an artist's conception, giant rectangular sails of plastic, folded against iron masts when not in use. They would be unfurled when a shipboard computer determined that their use was called for.

There are some drawbacks, Shimizu admitted in an interview.

One is that many of Japan's shipping lanes cross the equator and sails could be of limited use in the horse latitudes where winds are often slight. Moreover, there are many bridges in the world which might prevent the entry of ships with sails as high as 180 feet from the water.

Even so, the idea of cargo ships turning back to the age of sail has been well received in some quarters of the Japan shipbuilding industry.

The Japan Marine Machinery Development Association, a non-profit group, paid $60,000 to Nippon Kokan K.K. to do the preliminary studies, which include refitting a 3,200-ton tanker, the Aitoku Maru, with a pair of sails as the first computer-age power sailer in cargo service.

A new frontier of medical research will be... the coral reefs of the South Pacific Ocean. Where is Jacques Cousteau when we need him? Scientists will learn from the fish and other creatures of the reefs how to become immune to various diseases. They will discover antidotes for powerful poisons. And they will even hit upon a serum to slow down the aging process. But that last marvel will have to wait until the 1990s.

The economy: Expect inflation to continue

Expect inflation to rage throughout most of 1980. Relief will come late in the year, but prices will continue to rise until 1982.

The stock market will slowly decline this year, but there will be no crash like the one in 1929 that touched off the Great Depression.

The dollar will remain fairly stable this year, not because the U.S. economy will be strong, but because other countries will have their share of economic trouble at the same time. So our currency will hold its value, more or less, compared to French, English, German, and Japanese money.

A mini-tax cut this year will reduce income taxes for some taxpayers, but most Americans will have to wait until 1983 for a real victory in the Tax Revolt.

New outbreaks of the Tax Rebellion will take place this year in Vermont, Florida, and the middle-western states. Look for the seizure of state office buildings by angry taxpayers in at least one state capital.

The Chrysler crisis will be temporarily averted by a federal loan to that ailing company. But Chrysler's problems will outlast the loan. The corporation's tank will run dry in about two years.

Other major corporations will follow Chrysler to the brink of bankruptcy. A major steel company, as well as important chemical, transport, and mining concerns, will seek — but not get — government help to stay in business.

Hot spots in the economy in 1980 will be precious gems, air travel, art, cosmetics, and state lotteries.

1980 will be a bad year for strikes, especially in spring and summer, when millions of Americans will lose pay because of labor disputes.

A different kind of dispute will lead to the withdrawal of the controversial Susan B. Anthony dollar. She will remain in use for two more years. Then it will be back to the vaults for her.

Meanwhile, set a few pennies aside for your children to see when they become teen-agers, because that smallest U.S. coin will be out of circulation by the end of the 1980s. The nickel, with or without Thomas Jefferson on it, will take over as our lowest unit of currency.

Unemployment will climb through most of 1980 and will remain high for two more years. Then it will start to fall, as more and more jobs appear all over the economy. Before too long, we will have a fully employed work force, for the first time in memory!

Bright spots for the economy in the years ahead will be Virginia and the Carolinas, Delaware, Texas and Louisiana, and a huge chunk of the West consisting of Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, and the Dakotas. New England will continue to make an economic come-back, although that may be sidetracked for a while by the wrong economic policies from some state governors there.

Dolly Parton will keep rising, while the ayatollah may not

MARIE OSMOND

Marie's family will be shocked and hurt because Marie is going to assert her independence in 1980 in a way that her brothers have never accomplished.

Marie's fans will be more pleased than shocked at the new image Marie will establish this year as a solo performer.

JOHNNY CARSON

Johnny Carson will probably be tied to the Tonight Show for the bulk of 1980. He is just too good to let go, and his producers know it and will turn over every political leaf they can to make him stay.

Unfortunately, the discontent Johnny will feel by being professionally tied-up will affect many of his personal relationships. His marriage will become especially strained because Johnny's temper will sometimes get out of control.

During the year there will be a legal judgment against the talented comedian that will cost him a great deal of money.

ROCK TRAGEDY

Unfortunately there seems to be at least one rock superstar who will follow the path of Janis Joplin, Elvis, and Jimi Hendricks this year. I believe it will be a man who has created quite a personal mystique as well as his singing fame. The critical times for this star will be February or late April.

MARLON BRANDO

Although Marlon starts the year out of shape and with few offers, 1980 is going to be a great year for the great actor. He will be offered a very meaty role as a man who has to go into hiding for political reasons. The film will be very successful and establish Brando's enormous talent for years into the future.

BEATLES

There is a growing desire in each of the Beatles to try it again, just one more time. I believe that the intricate business web that is keeping them apart will finally separate enough to let the old friends get together once again for a special performance — but it will be for one or two shows and not a permanent arrangement. Enormous wealth will fall on two more of the Beatles, Ringo and Lennon. George will feel he has garnered enough and his may be the greatest wealth of all because he will find the greatest happiness in his life.

DOLLY PARTON

Dolly Parton is like a comet traveling upward and she will continue in that direction for many years. She will be tired out by overwork. She will be harassed by legal battles and the loss of a fortune to a former friend. But the end of 1980 will find her even more popular than she is now, if that is possible. Dolly will always be extremely fortunate.

JANE FONDA

Jane Fonda calls herself a revolutionary, but deep in her heart she loves this country and is sincerely trying to work for its betterment. This work will continue to keep her "in hot water" for the next few years until her rough radical edges wear down a little.

She and her husband, Tom Hayden, will both face some personal danger in 1980 associated with their political stands. They will also find themselves in the ironic situation of being lauded to the skies one month and torn apart by the press the next. In August Jane is in for some honors, probably from foreign royalty. In September, she and her husband will be the subject of a political and financial probe — and Jane may do or say something that will make big news.

MARGARET THATCHER

Britain's Margaret Thatcher will be beset with immigration problems at home, continued trouble with Ireland, and personal danger from someone she considers a friend. Added to all this will be straining relations with the United States in 1980.

Immigrants from Third World countries will continue to pour into the crowded slums of Great Britain's cities, breaking down the already strained sanitation and public health systems. Riots will take the lives of many of Mrs. Thatcher's police force. She will be forced to take drastic and sometimes unpopular action.

In the early spring there will be a great upheaval in Mrs. Thatcher's life caused by the unexpected actions of someone close to her. It could be a highly placed staff member. She will survive the attack, but the person to blame will find himself behind bars.

President Carter will not understand Mrs. Thatcher's refusal to enter into oil disputes involving the United States. Relations between the U.S. and Great Britain will be strained but Mrs. Thatcher is wise to concentrate on her own domestic problems.

ANWAR SADAT

Anwar Sadat will split his incomparable talents between working for the best interests of Egypt and trying to champion the United States in the Mideast. He will continue to be successful in his efforts for his own country, but he will meet repeated failure as he works as an intermediary for the U.S.

One of the most important jobs Jimmy Carter will ask President Sadat to accomplish will be a meeting on Egyptian soil between Carter and Khomeini. Because of the grave danger to all parties involved the meeting will never take place.

Egypt will mourn the loss of a great leader this year. Someone close to Mr. Sadat will be assassinated.

MOTHER TERESA

Mother Teresa's most important work and world-wide recognition is still to come in this new decade.

This dynamic woman in her 70s will inspire women of all ages. Young women will want to walk in her footsteps, and older women will be comforted by her accomplishments late in life.

This saintly woman will inspire new vocations for the sisterhood of her church, will raise millions of dollars through personal appearances, and will build at least one great new hospital for the homeless.

Mother Teresa does not yet realize how the seed she planted in India will mushroom in the next few years.

THE SHAH

The Shah will remain in grave danger of abduction or assassination. An imposter, pretending to be either a physician or a clergyman, will come perilously close to the former ruler. This deceitful visit could even be fatal, if the Shah's protectors do not act quickly enough to intervene.

The Shah's enemies in Iran and around the world will attempt another hostage scheme. They will pursue the Shah's relatives to exchange them for his return to Iran. Although this dreadful strategy will not harm him, he faces a more imminent threat to his illness, February, March and June which will be especially trying times...if his health does not fail him in the meantime.

In the meantime, the wealth of the Shah will be greatly exaggerated. In fact, during his current difficulties, some financial advisors or bank officials will take advantage of his confusion and distraction to improperly adjust his accounts for their own benefit.

Such is the misfortune of the fallen great. But even greater misfortunes are in process for the nation which the Shah left behind.

POPE JOHN PAUL II

An urgent warning to Pope John Paul II. He is in grave danger near the end of February. No matter where he is at that time, he should make sure he is well guarded. He should cancel any foreign trips at that time. Someone who wishes him harm may get close enough to actually touch him. Other dangerous times during 1980 for the Pontiff will be in late January and early April.

God is watching over John Paul and with his help the Pope will take his message of peace to places in the world never before visited by a Pope. For the first time the Orient will open its doors to a Pontiff.

AYATOLLAH KHOMEINI

Even an Ayatollah cannot live on vengeance forever, and 1980 will bring serious challenges to the endurance of Khomeini in power. His violent crusades will sweep the Middle East with discord and, in some cases, death. But he himself will become a victim of the genie he set free from its bottle.

A member of Khomeini's family, probably his trusted son, will become the target of persons seeking revenge against his father, just as the father has sought revenge against the Shah. The same cloud hangs over the Ayatollah later this year, when the chaos he has unleashed swirls around his own home.

As the months pass by, Khomeini will find that the mobs he has created are being steered by alien forces. He will appear to control them, but they, in fact, will come to control him. Behind the scenes, power will be wielded by a tiny group of well-trained agents, loyal to powers outside Iran.

Connally will be a surprise to many

HOWARD BAKER

The Republican minority leader of the United States Senate will enter the 1980 presidential race with great momentum. For a while, he will look like a winner, and many opportunists will jump onto his bandwagon, hoping it will take them to the White House.

They are apt to be disappointed, however. The Senator's quest for the Presidency will become an obsession with him, and his wanting will confuse his thinking. He will make strategic blunders during the spring months, which will leave him farther and farther behind in the polls.

Senator Baker will become fighting mad when allegations are made about comments he never uttered. He will strike out verbally to defend his good name, but he will be unprepared for the tactics of his opponents, who will go to any lengths to remove him from the race.

Born under the sign of Scorpio, which has taken many men to the White House, Howard Baker could become President one day, but I do not believe that 1980 is his time. How he reacts to disappointment or defeat this year will largely determine whether he will be able to grab the brass ring a second time around.

JOHN CONNALLY

The square-jawed Texan, John Connally, will come charging toward the Presidency this year like a long-horn steer. He will surprise political pundits by a sudden burst of popularity and political power in the spring. But in May, his critics will mount a coordinated attack against him, bringing up old controversies rather than deal with his new proposals.

The months of May and June will be trying for him physically. The strain on his stamina will be tremendous, and there will even be a danger of attack upon him by an unbalanced publicity seeker.

Whether or not Mr. Connally prevails in the presidential contest, his optimistic can-do attitude will win in the end. "Texas John" will shape the future course of American government by giving it all the strength of his convictions and all the emotion of his deep feelings for this country and its people.

EDWARD KENNEDY

For the first three months of this year, Senator Kennedy's presidential star will be on the rise. Just by doing nothing, he will move ahead of President Carter, who will have to make some unpopular decisions and take the heat from them.

The teeter-totter of popularity will totter the other way, however, in April, when President Carter will focus on his opponent's shortcomings. The two men will run neck and neck from then until early June. At that time, a major crisis will bring them together against their Republican rivals. Despite a bitter contest between them, Jimmy and Teddy will manage to create the public appearance of harmony and cooperation in the interest of a Democratic victory in November.

In a way, the most severe test for Mr. Kennedy will not be the Democratic convention in August. It will be, instead, an incident in mid-March, when publicity or comments about his personal affairs and his marriage will make him furious. The way he handles that provocation, fair or unfair, will have a significant impact upon the rest of his campaign.

Throughout the year, Teddy will live with the fear of physical assault against him. That need not come to pass, as long as he and his advisors use a great amount of good sense to avoid possible confrontations. Senator Kennedy can survive mistaken policies and changes in direction, rumors and scandals, but he would not be able to afford foolish exposure to risky situations this year.

WALTER MONDALE

The Vice President will spend several months early this year in humanitarian endeavors, arranging for international relief missions to disaster areas overseas. At the same time, he will find himself defending official positions with which he will not entirely agree. His loyalty to President Carter will be admired and rewarded by the President, who will resist attempts to replace Mr. Mondale with another Democrat as Vice President.

PAT NIXON

The former First Lady, Pat Nixon, will preside over her family's move to New York. But no sooner will they get settled in their new surroundings than circumstances will lead to another move. All that domestic upheaval may be to the good, however, as it will give her the activity she needs to keep her mind away from her several sorrows.

Her children and grandchildren will be the antidote to all the heartache of the past, and she will spend much of this year with them. The official life of past years will intrude unexpectedly, however, when some official friend of the Nixons — a foreign leader whom they knew from their White House years — becomes the victim of assassins. This sudden sorrow will lead Pat to count her blessings and to realize that fate has not been unkind to her and those she loves.

RICHARD NIXON

This year, former President Nixon will be up in the air much of the time, flying to foreign lands by special invitation. While at home, however, he will turn his attention to another book, not a massive volume like his memoirs, but a smaller, more personal account of the highlights of his career. It will be harshly judged by his critics, but their reaction will not dissuade him from launching a new literary venture, pertaining to his political philosophy and views of government.

Another major television interview with Mr. Nixon in the spring will provoke another round of controversy about his views and his actions as President. His candid comments about the assassination of a public figure some years ago will be the focal point for accusations, and name-calling.

Later in the year, Mr. Nixon will spend much more of his time than he likes in legal matters, concerning disputed property or a contract. These courtroom contests, however, will be less strenuous than the political battles of his career. This time around, win or lose, the outcome will be minor compared with his earth-shaking showdowns of the past.

Expect closer ties among Christians and Moslems

Bootlegging will be big business in 1980, until the G-men crack a national network of rum-runners, who will make the illegal production and sale of alcohol the foundation for an economic empire, coast to coast.

U.S. Bonds, held by millions of Americans; will get into legal trouble in 1980. A lawsuit will expose some financial irregularities in the selling or handling of the bonds and will shake the confidence of investors in their future.

More of our country's newspapers will go out of business. The rising costs of energy will finish off dozens more of them. This will lead to greater control of news in a few papers.

The dream of every truant schoolboy, playing hooky for a day off, is about to come true. School attendance will be made voluntary for teenagers. That may seem like a drastic change, but it will have very little effect on school enrollments.

A major oil spill off the coast of a beach resort will ruin vacations for many in late May and early June of 1980, unless they want to collect free oil along with their suntan.

Expect a better winter this year than last. There will be rare snowfalls in the Sun Belt from Georgia to Arizona, but even so, the East and Midwest will not shiver as much as they did last time around.

Two major mishaps are apt to make travel a bit risky at the end of April 1980: An attempted hijacking of a major airline and an accident involving a river barge and a key bridge, which will tie up city traffic for days.

No more nuclear accidents, like the one at Three Mile Island, will occur in 1980. But the authorities will barely head off an attempt by a crackpot political group to seize a nuclear installation as a protest against atomic power.

It may seem comical at the time, but serious damage to the nuclear facilities will narrowly be prevented.

RELIGION

Islam and the West are now in deep and tragic conflict in Iran. But that will change, and very rapidly. Soon it will become clear that the Moslem religion has little support for the Ayatollah Khomeini. Expect close ties to develop among Christians, Moslems and Jews in the years ahead.

The real problem of Islam in the future will be with the Soviet Union. An Islamic revival within Russia itself, where there are many Moslems, will shake the towers of the Kremlin within three years.

Nature will repay the ayatollah

A shroud of unreality surrounds the Ayatollah Khomeini. The world will soon learn that he is not what he seems to be. During his years of exile from Iran, if he was not replaced with a double now masquerading as him, then his mind was affected by brainwashing. Even though he does not realize it now, his actions and decisions are being orchestrated by a power alien to Iran.

The wave of violence unleashed by Khomeini will, like every wave, eventually return to its own shore. His beloved son will become a victim of the same frenzy which the Ayatollah has directed against America.

In the meantime, someone should closely guard the irreplaceable crown jewels of Iran. Among the richest treasure troves in all the world, the diadems and sceptres of the Peacock Throne of Persia will be tampered with and may, even now, not be all that they appear to be.

The next target of religious extremists in the Middle East will be King Hussein of Jordan, who would be wise, at this moment, to make preparations for an emergency escape from his palace.

Nature will repay Iran for its treatment of foreign visitors. The earth itself will shake the power of the Ayatollah, who will be unable to explain to his people why he cannot help them after an earthquake, while the United States can help.

A foreign submarine, that has traveled a great distance, will land terrorists in the oil fields of a Middle Eastern state. This attempt to knock out the petroleum lifeline of Western Europe will be the opening move of a very dangerous game of diplomatic chess.

Last January, my New Year predictions contained one of my happiest forecasts: that Idi Amin, the murderous dictator of Uganda, would be overthrown in 1979. That soon came to pass, and a wonderful day it was! When it occurred, I launched a new prediction: that another of Africa's worst rulers would soon go the way of Amin — right into the ash can of history. Within months, the cruel president of Equatorial Guinea was overthrown. This year, the spotlight of history falls on the ruler of the oil-rich nation of Libya, Muhammad Kadafi, who has bankrolled-terrorists around the world. This year, Mr. Kadafi should sleep well — while he can.

ASIA

The terrible famine in Cambodia, as hundreds of thousands of desperate people flee their country into Thailand, is the grim fulfillment of earlier predictions. Readers of this column were told years ago that the ancient culture of Cambodia would be destroyed. And now, looking again to the future, we can expect Communist Vietnam to entirely abolish the nation of Cambodia. Vietnamese will be transported there to resettle the land, and it will be annexed as a province of Vietnam.

Elsewhere in Asia, a national leader will be implicated in an international smuggling operation. This exposure will help to provoke his abrupt downfall.

Another China upheaval is in the making. Things appear calm now in Peking, as they do along a seacoast before the hurricane strikes. Within three years, however, China will teeter on the brink of civil war.

This time around, the Soviet Union will not be able to resist the chance to take advantage of her rival's weakness. The map of Asia will be redrawn by the more years. By and by, however, it will be forever settled by a new partition of Ireland.

The hot spot of Europe will be Yugoslavia, where the U.S. and the Soviet Union will stand toe to toe, armed to the teeth, before five years have passed.

Another fishing war, like the one between Iceland and Britain a few years ago, will break out, this time in the Mediterranean Sea. The solution will not be shooting, but joint efforts in aquaculture, to "farm" the sea so that there will be more of its bounty for everyone.

A new religious leader will emerge in Europe from the least likely of places — a prison. He will attract throngs to him by his dynamic preaching and by his life of poverty and self-denial, like John the Baptist.

SOUTH AMERICA

Sabotage at the Panama Canal will imperil American's access to that vital waterway. But in the aftermath of the Panama Canal treaties, giving it to the Republic of Panama, there will be nothing to do but wait for the Canal to be cleared.

Vast mineral wealth will soon be discovered in Brazil, bringing fantastic riches into that country and transforming it into a military power as well as an economic one.

A new "Monroe Doctrine," warning foreign powers not to meddle in Latin America, will be announced. But the United States will have nothing to do with it. This version of the Monroe Doctrine will be declared by three powerful South American nations, who will combine their armed forces to guard their continent against alien attack.

The events in Iran will be repeated closer to home, as an American embassy in Latin America comes under attack by well-trained mobs of protestors. This time, the threat of U.S. intervention will suffice to save our citizens there.

Another Jonestown will be established somewhere in the Caribbean. This colony of fanatics will be as dreadful as the one where so many perished in Guyana in 1978. But this time, it will be discovered before it turns into the ultimate tragedy.

The leader of an island in the Caribbean is playing with political fire and will soon be badly burnt. Questions will arise about his mental instability, and his harsh repression of the people will provoke riot and rebellion. He will be lucky to escape, if he does at all, with his life.

In the U.S., a proposal will be made to withdraw from the marine base in Guantanamo, Cuba, for which the U.S. has a long-term lease. That attempt to give up the symbol of U.S. interest in the Caribbean will be defeated by the Congress.

end of the 1980s, as vast chunks of Central Asia and Siberia change hands.

An ancient people, long thought extinct, will be rediscovered in Asia. Their unusual language will be traced to an ancient civilization, and will enable anthropologists to recognize them as the descendants of one of history's greatest empires.

EUROPE

The sensational revelations about spying by an intimate friend of the British royal family, predicted in this column at the time when West German Chancellor Willy Brandt was forced to resign after a spy scandal in his government, is only the prelude to a similar expose in Washington, D.C. To protect great and powerful names, an attempt will be made to cover up the discovery of an espionage network in the top circles in the United States. But the truth will come out, and heads will roll.

In Northern Ireland, the conflict that has already caused so much suffering will continue for several

The big political question: Who will be president?

Who will win the primaries and who will be the next President of the United States?

Of all the names that come to mind of the declared candidates, there is a period this summer when two non-candidates swim in and out of Presidential waters. Events of the summer will so change the line-up of candidates that it is impossible now to tell who will still want the nomination when the late primaries roll around.

Even though many Iranian students will be sent home in the coming months there will be enough left with murder in their hearts to pose a grave danger to our President and to other candidates. And foreigners are not the only fanatics with planned suicide missions against some of the leading candidates. There is danger on every side to President Carter, Senator Edward Kennedy and John Connally.

President Carter's crisis will be an extension of the international strife that started with the hostage taking in Iran and which will spread through the Mideast until in early summer the United States will face the last deadly decisions between peace and war.

Mr. Carter will keep his head and move as slowly in the direction of war as he can. The public will have a good chance to weigh what the President does against what Mr. Kennedy says he should do.

Only one of the presidential candidates has the White House written in his stars — one was born to be President. But the events of these next months will decide who the voters will pick.

Who are the two I can see swimming in presidential waters? They are Rosalynn Carter and Walter Mondale. Neither of them is happy. It may be that because of world strife, these two people who are extensions of our President must triple their chores. It may be that they just feel the weight of the nation resting on their shoulders. But I see a time when Rosalynn Carter is in the White House very much alone and then I see her campaigning with Walter Mondale.

On the presidential scene, look for Jimmy Carter to make a comeback in the Democratic primary balloting. By June, he and Senator Kennedy will stand neck and neck. But at that point, both men will be confronted by a dangerous combination of international crisis and domestic trouble here at home. The victory of their struggle will be decided by the way President Carter handles that delicate period in June, and by the way Senator Kennedy reacts to what his rival does.

Most of the Republican presidential contenders will drop out of their party's contest long before the GOP convention begins in July. Only three serious candidates will remain: Ronald Reagan, George Bush, and John Connally. For the identity of the winner, check this column in early July, just before the Republicans begin their convention.

More Hollywood stars will enter politics in a big way. No, not Jane Fonda, although she will continue her activities. But in the years ahead, expect several big names to actually run for office, including Pat Boone, John Ritter from "Three's Company," Marlo Thomas — Danny's lovely daughter, and Ron Howard, of "Happy Days."

Taxpayers wondering where the money goes should keep a sharp eye out for the last four months of this year. Huge surpluses will accumulate in government agencies, and so the money will be spent like mad at year's end, just to get rid of it.

California's Governor Jerry Brown will remain the lone-wolf of American politics. His disappointment in not winning his party's nomination for President — or even for Vice President — will cause him to form an independent political group. In the future, he will run as their candidate for office. But he will do so without the company of Linda Ronstadt, who, true to my forecasts, will move on to a more attentive and less busy companion.

It's year of monkey in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — When temple and shrine bells toll 108 times on New Year's Eve — once for each of man's passionate sins — it will mark the passing of the Year of the Sheep and ring in the Year of the Monkey in Japan.

According to Japanese soothsayers, familiar with the ancient oriental zodiac, 1980 will more or less be a continuation of 1979 — a year that was supposed to have been 12 months of peace but became a year of turmoil.

They predict food problems but say the oil crisis may ease later in the year. However, economic upheavals will continue with trouble for the dollar and other world currencies, they say.

For people born in the Year of the Monkey, which comes every 12 years, it is time for patience and caution.

The last monkey year was 1968, the next will be 1992. Other years were 1956, 1944, 1932, 1920, 1908, and 1896.

According to Buddhist lore, the monkey was the ninth of 12 animals that hurried to the bedside of the dying Buddha to pay homage. First came the rat, then the ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, sheep, monkey, rooster, dog and boar. A year was named for each. The 12 animals and what they symbolize are said to influence the year and the personality and character of those born in the period. According to the 3,000-year old Asian zodiac, people born in the Year of the Monkey are clever, skillful and especially adroit in finances. While gifted with great charm and an ability to get along with others, the zodiac says they also are easily distracted, become bored and careless.

The Year of the Sheep opened with what many hoped would be peace. U.S.-Chinese diplomatic relations were restored last Jan. 1. But soon there was a one-month border war between China and Vietnam, followed by an influx of refugees from Indochina into neighboring countries, and finally starving Cambodian refugees fleeing their homeland.

DEATHS

M.R. "Red" Gayle

M.R. 'Red' Gayle

Memorial services for M.R. "Red" Gayle, 81, of 811 W. Missouri Ave., will be at 4 p.m. today in the United Church of Religious Science, 3400 N. A St.

He died Monday in a Midland hospital following an illness.

Cleveland school board, teachers still deadlocked

CLEVELAND (AP) — Under threat of possible court action, the Cleveland Teachers Union and the school board met for 9½ hours with an "advisory arbitrator" Saturday in an effort to break a deadlock in the 73-day-old teachers' strike.

Representatives of both sides said afterward there had been no change in their positions, but would not comment further.

They had outlined their positions to arbitrator Earle C. Brown, at the offices of the American Arbitration Association in a session that began at 10 a.m.

In ordering the session, Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court Judge Frederick M. Coleman urged both sides to "discuss in good faith their best offers... and attempt a resolution" of the bitter pay dispute.

The union and school board have been ordered back into court Monday.

Coleman says he will use the arbitrator's report as a basis for deciding what action to take to try to get Cleveland's 92,000 school children back in the classroom.

John E. Gallagher Jr., school board president, has urged Coleman to order teachers back to work, saying it was "absolutely essential that the schools reopen Jan. 2."

Coleman ordered the arbitration session after meeting with both sides for three hours Friday night.

School board lawyer J. William Petro said after that session the impasse continued with no change in positions.

Gallagher said the board had made drastic budget cuts to the tune of $10 million and there is no more money to meet pay demands of the 5,200-member teacher's union.

He said the board had gone to Coleman "with the sole purpose of obtaining a back-to-work order" and that he felt court action was the only way to end the strike.

In a court-ordered referendum conducted by the arbitration association, the teachers rejected two pay proposals from the school board by a nearly 4-1 margin.

Union negotiator Joseph Varga says the latest pay proposals are little different from that rejected by the teachers before they struck Oct. 18.

The alternate proposals rejected by the union would provide increases totaling 16 or 20 percent over two years. Because of the varying effective dates for the proposed increases, Varga contends that the two offers are virtually identical.

Atlantic City police end sick-out

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A full complement of Atlantic City policemen patrolled the Boardwalk and the city's streets Saturday after officers ended a large-scale 32-hour sick-out to protest the city's offer of a 10 percent pay raise.

"We have no problems right now at all," said Public Works Commissioner Pierre Hollingsworth at the opening of Atlantic City's third legal casino, Park Place, on Saturday morning.

"There's no picketing. There's nothing going on. Everybody's working," said Hollingsworth, who is acting police commissioner.

Officials said about 230 of the city's 270-member police force called in sick between 4 p.m. Thursday and midnight Friday.

Policemen and women returned for the early morning shift Saturday after a court injunction was issued against the "blue flu" late Friday afternoon.

City officials reported no major incidents during the sickout in this city of 45,000.

Gambling at the Boardwalk's three casino hotels was reported heavy for the New Year's holiday weekend. The casinos, which have their own security forces, were not affected by the sickout.

The police officers, members of Patrolmen's Benevolent Association Local 24, are angry over a 10 percent across-the-board wage offer made by the city on Wednesday. The policemen want a 20 percent raise and at least parity with city firefighters, who will earn $19,500 a year by mid-1981.

Divers resume search for ship survivors

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (AP) — A salvage diver swam through the hull of the capsized ore ship Lee Wang Zin on Saturday, surfacing to report no signs of life. The Coast Guard began operations to scuttle the vessel, giving up the search for 28 missing crewmen.

Navy divers had planned to check the 714-foot Taiwanese freighter for survivors, but after the report from Del Hansen, owner of Alaska Diving Service of Ketchikan, they called off the plan.

The Coast Guard said Hansen reported water throughout the hull, and no signs of life. He said he did not see any bodies as he swam through the boiler room and living quarters.

An Alaska State trooper also said he and a fellow officer landed a helicopter on the vessel Saturday and tapped along its hull, receiving no response.

"At this point, as far as I'm concerned, the search for survivors is over," said Sgt. Morris Rogers, who was coordinating aerial search efforts by the Coast Guard and a Ketchikan volunteer rescue squad.

The bodies of two crewmen were recovered earlier this week.

Divers who reached the beached wreck Friday were forced to turn back because of 40-knot winds and 16-foot seas. Officials said Friday night that they had given up the search, but changed their minds on Saturday when weather conditions in Kendrick Bay improved.

The freighter, with a load of pea-sized iron pellets and 370,000 gallons of fuel, overturned in a Christmas Day storm off the northern British Columbia coast, and then drifted into U.S. territorial waters. Aerial surveys showed the bow had snapped off and the vessel was pivoting.

Officials said the ship apparently hit a reef, and its shifting load, combined with heavy seas and high winds, caused it to capsize.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Phillip Franklin said authorities planned to drag the Lee Wang Zin about 70 miles out into Dixon Entrance, near the U.S.-Canadian border, and sink it in about 8,400 feet of water.

He said the remaining bunker fuel inside the ship would thicken in the cold temperatures. "As long as the tanks are intact and we sink the ship, the oil will stay there for ever and ever," he said.

Hansen's boat had begun moving the wreckage, and a Coast Guard Cutter was also helping to help move the hulk. Franklin said a large salvage ship was expected Sunday to help tow the hull to deep water.

Oil from the vessel was spotted as far as 60 miles north of the wreckage, the Coast Guard was on the way with oil pollution cleanup equipment.

Houston officers face theft charges

HOUSTON (AP) — Police Chief Harry Caldwell said Friday two police officers were suspended after being accused of robbing a Mexican man they reportedly stopped for a traffic violation.

Caldwell declined to identify the officers involved, saying "I'm not accusing these officers of any wrongdoing." He said the officers were put on non-duty status so they would be available to investigators handling the complaint.

The charge against the officers was lodged Dec. 21 with the department by Salvador Cerja Chavez, 22, who said he is from Mexico and living in Houston with friends.

RRC ruling unfair

Sometimes when you want something you get it only to find that you were better off without it.

Such is the Dec. 17 ruling by the Texas Railroad Commission restricting advertising by gas utilities to two-tenths of 1 percent of gross revenues as a business expense in rate considerations.

The ruling was requested by Pioneer Natural Gas Company on the basis that there was no guideline for a gas utility to determine what percentage of such a company's budget was a fair and responsible portion for such things as promotion of its product and support for the communities it serves in areas such as leadership and industrial development.

That isn't to say the company went looking for trouble; it didn't. It merely wanted some clarification — a guideline. After all, the Texas Public Utility Commission, which regulates rates for electric utilities, had allowed those companies under its jurisdiction to spend three-tenths of 1 percent of gross revenues as a business expense in rate-making considerations.

Additionally, the PUC allows electric utilities to include in that three-tenths of 1 percent those contributions companies may make to community and industrial development.

Via advertising, a utility hopes to attract more customers, thus "spreading out" the cost of its product. Cost increases are felt less by all of a company's customers when that company has a broadening base of people to serve.

Additionally, gas utilities are in competition in the sense that they vie for the gas available to all such utilities in order to serve their customers. Through advertising they also educate the public as to the necessity of conservation.

A company must pass along to its customers the expenses of operating. If by gaining more customers a gas utility can help hold down the cost of gas for each individual customer, all those served by such a utility will reap the benefits. Thus, the necessity of advertising appears.

In another sense, the RRC further hampered this "free enterprise" by disallowing gas utilities to pass through to customers any corporate contributions for charitable causes.

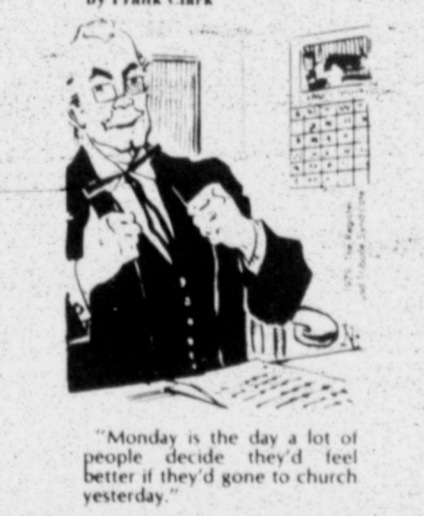

By way of those contributions, companies add tremendously to the growth, development and economic well-being of a community. But those costs aren't free. All residents of a community are expected to help pay for the quality of life they enjoy.

The RRC, by way of its ruling, has added further to the burdens of the free enterprise system.

Pioneer says it is "disappointed" with the ruling.

Columnist lists 10 people he most admired during 1979

WASHINGTON — Year end is the time for list-making by scribblers like me and Dr. George Gallup as well, with his register of the "10 Most Admired Men (and Women)." The people on Dr. Gallup's lists are newsmakers, and that's why they are so "admired." When Dr. Gallup asks, the poor citizen will hardly give him the name of his barber, chiropractor or city councilman. The citizen at most always comes through with, say, Jimmy Carter, the Pope or Billy Graham. Fine.

My list is of people I know personally and some I don't. They are mostly people I have been around, interviewed or written about. You can only admire people you had something to do with, right?

Unlike Dr. Gallup, I assign no one first place. So my list can be turned upside down or inside out. I listed them as they came to mind. I was tempted to include the Pope, Mother Teresa (God love her) and Anwar Sadat, but they are so showered with praise this year, they don't need me.

Anyway, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie makes my list because, as chairman of the Budget Committee, he toils for fiscal responsibility, a thankless chore. A proven liberal, Muskie is appalled at congressional squandering. His crackdowns offend colleagues. He wasn't satisfied that he managed to hold the 1980 deficit at $30 billion. Muskie will push for more cost-cutting in the new year. He wants to be remembered as the Senator who brought a responsible budgetary process to Congress.

I like it when our elders willfully remain vital and useful. That's why I admire Sen. Jacob Javits, 75, alert and productive. There's no better head in Congress. When Javits speaks, the debate takes on quality. For years, fellow Republicans regard him as too liberal. Now they listen respectfully, and seek him out. He can be aloof, but his diligence benefits the republic. Javits could have retired years ago, but he knows he's too good to quit.

Allan Ryskind is known only to journalists and ideologues. As an editor and co-owner of "Human Events," a national weekly, Ryskind works 70-hour weeks for his conservative beliefs. His paper is first-rate, if unappreciated, and is constantly quoted or stolen from. Ryskind could earn far more than his modest salary, but after 21 years in harness, he still prefers to pursue stories reflecting the frailties and frauds of our leaders.

Wayne Norman, a modest man, performed wonders to preserve the history, and improve the cultural life, of my hometown, Dubuque. Instead of goofing off after early retirement, he harnessed his executive skills into improving the quality and pleasure of old Dubuque, by constantly working to get disparate groups to cooperate. ## A CHANGING WORLD: Singapore's prime minister displays caution

By JOHN PINKERMAN
Copley News Service

John Pinkerman

SINGAPORE — The guard around and in City Hall here has been doubled. The same is true at the prime minister's residence.

This is so because Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew, dictator over a city, an island and a nation of 2.3 million people since 1959, reads the papers, listens to the radio, watches television and possesses the sharp instincts of most Chinese in this troubled area known as Southeast Asia.

Lee is plainly scared. The assassination of South Korean leader Park Chung Hee of South Korea was the latest event to increase his nervousness. Earlier, his blood pressure went up when the Shah of Iran fled his nation just ahead of Iranian savages bent on execution. Every day, too, he watches for new signs of mounting troubles for Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos, another partner in dictatorship.

Lee has taken a number of steps to save himself, even though at present any discontent within his tightly controlled city and nation is muffled and mostly confined to undercurrents of grumbling over lack of democratic freedoms that are routine in most free societies.

There is no censorship per se in Singapore but the newspapers, even the highly regarded Straits Times, take no chances with objective criticism of Lee and the one-party rule imposed by his Peoples Action Party.

Lee also has informers everywhere. As I talked in the restaurant of the Goodwood Park Hotel with an Australian friend about Lee, he put his fingers to his lips in a gesture of caution. "Keep it down," he said.

"Everybody listens here, and the waiter could get points for turning you in."

Although arrogant in the extreme, Lee has guided Singapore to a level of economic success that he hopes will help save him. His nation has the second highest per capita income in Asia (only Japan's is higher) and real growth here is at a 10 percent annual rate. Almost nobody, particularly anyone in the 76 percent Chinese population, goes hungry.

This does not mean that there is freedom here. There is Lee-directed subjugation.

He has tough and strongly enforced laws limiting use of private transportation and God help the Singaporean who drives his car to work in violation of restrictions.

Foreigners here, that is non-Chinese, have a tough time. This is particularly true for Indians. Lee hires Gurkhas to run his prison and they are extremely cruel to Indians, Malays and other non-Chinese.

Lee also is stepping up his appeal to Singaporeans' patriotism, particularly regarding the Vietnamese danger to the north. He has hired Israelis to train his excellent but tiny (30,000) army, a force that has only 75 tanks and 103 combat aircraft. He has ordered F-5E, A-4 and C-130 planes from the United States. ## ART BUCHWALD Art foresees future: 1989 year of mechanical bodies

WASHINGTON — The big medical breakthrough of the Eighties will be the development of mechanical parts for the human body. We've seen the success of the pacemaker, plastic joints and hips, steel replacements for legs and arms, and artificial organs which do the work that was formerly left to human ones.

Perhaps I'm being too optimistic, but I predict that by 1989 half our bodies will either come from Dupont, U.S. Steel or Reynolds Aluminum.

It follows then that when our bodies are working well we shall all have to go to a garage, rather than a hospital, to have repairs done.

A man walks into George's Human Body Repair Shop:

"Can I help you, sir?"

"Yes, I'd like a tuneup and a grease job."

George takes out a repair slip and starts filling it in.

"Mind getting up on the rack so I can examine you?"

The man stands on a rack and George jacks him up a few feet. "How are the knees?"

"They seem a little sluggish when I jog."

"I'd better change the bearings and linkage," George says, as he writes on his clipboard. "When did you have these leg muscles checked?"

"About a year ago. Why?"

"They're starting to fray. We have a few steel-belted radial muscles which is guaranteed for five years."

"Do I really need them?"

"Depends if you ever want to walk again."

Art Buchwald

The man nods his assent and George scribbles on the sheet. Then he says, "How are the arms?"

"I have tennis elbow in the right one."

"We'll have to put in a new shock absorber. Are your finger joints okay?"

"They seem to be. I can still make a fist."

George examines the hands. "I'll have to put new points in your fingers. Your nails seem to be rusting."

"Look, I just came in for a tuneup. My body's 50 years old, and I don't want to put a lot of money into it."

"You notice anything else bothering you?"

"Well, my back hurts when I do situps. I hear this click, click, click every time I touch my toes."

George runs his hand along the man's back. "I was afraid of that," he says. "Your spine is all out of whack. We're going to have to replace it. We have a sale on back shafts that will last a lifetime, or we replace it for you absolutely free. How's the head?"

"Fine. I have no trouble keeping it together."

"You're losing a lot of hair. We better give you a transplant. We have a Lincoln Day special on new all-weather Orlon that is so strong you never have to wear a hat."

George kept writing on the pad. Then he said, "I don't think you're getting enough air into your lungs. I'll put in new valves. You're American, aren't you?"

"Of course I am. Why do you ask?"

"Because if you were a foreigner, we'd have to order the parts from overseas and it would take two months."

"Are you finished?" the man said.

"That should do it," George said.

"When can I have the work done?"

George looked at his schedule. "If you come in on Thursday morning at eight, I should have you out by 5 p.m. unless my mechanics find something I've overlooked."

"If you do everything you want to, can you guarantee that my body will be good for at least two more years?" the man asks.

"How can I do that?" George replies. "I'm not a doctor."

THE BIBLE CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

BY LAVINA ROSS FOWLER AND ELIZABETH ROSS WIERSEMA

1. The three epistles of John have a special appeal. These epistles are mostly of love and the writer holds to three thoughts: "God is light," "God is righteous," and "God is love." In what "fatherly" way does John address his readers? 1 John 2: 1.

2. With what words did Jesus address Jairus' daughter when he restored her to life? Mark 5: 41.

3. What did Jesus say to Zebedee's wife, when she asked special places of honor for her sons? Matthew 20: 20-22.

4. It is notable that God chose two men, who had little confidence in themselves, to supervise the building of the Tabernacle and Temple. Name them. Exodus 4: 10, 1 Kings 3: 7 (K.J.).

5. After what deed did the people say, "The spirit of Elijah doth rest upon Elisha."? 2 Kings 2: 14-15 (K.J.).

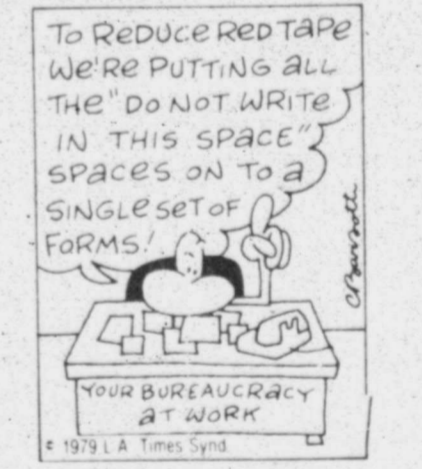

Four correct...excellent. Three correct...good.

Bob Maberry, master craftsman, was a proud man

R.J. "Bob" Maberry wasn't one to boast brazenly. He was a proud man — proud of his craftsmanship, proud of his family, sure in his beliefs, though he was never one to make a big ado over sentimental or religious things.

Bob was a hearty, basic, straightforward fellow who worked diligently and conscientiously and who died with the greatest of reluctance. He "held on" as long as his mortal body — God's temple — could endure; he was headstrong.

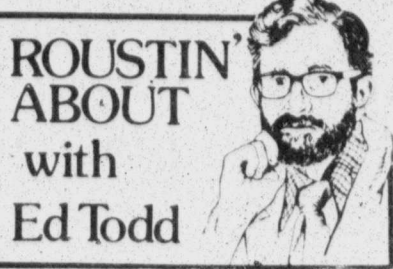

Bob was neither a braggadocio nor was he pretentious. Outwardly, he might have seemed arrogant; he wasn't. He was assertive and confident but not overbearing. He was very good — the best — at what he did, and he had no qualms about telling you that he was a true craftsman.

Bob was a gunsmith — par excellence. He'd tell you that. And he'd let you know that if you wanted quality, you'd have to pay for it.

"All I've got to sell is my time," Bob would say. His time, like his talent and industry, was valuable. Bob was a brusque fellow, no doubt about that. He was a straight-laced guy, despite his sometimes rogue lingo.

He was aboveboard. And you could count on Bob Maberry dealing squarely with you. "I've just got one way to run my railroad," he would say in an allegorical sort of way, "and that's straight down the track." He was a master gunsmith who grew up in the trade. His father — who "was a powerful man" like Bob — was a blacksmith, gunsmith and building contractor. He grew up with the outlaw James brothers in Missouri in the late 1800s and laid cobblestones in St. Louis before landing in Texas.

Bob was a disciplined man who toiled "like a dog" and lived "like a hermit" in his gunshop.

He took pride in the quality of his workmanship and in the materials he used to make and finish out a firearm.

In carving a gunstock from a blank, he'd use American walnut. "It's the prettiest wood in the world...when it's finished out. It's hard; it's dense. It's high; it's expensive."

Bob was dedicated to his work, to his family, to his Creator, to his outdoorsmanship — shooting and hunting. He was a keen marksman in the field and on the range.

Bob had heart and spirit. "I'm religious," he once said in his gunshop. "I believe in God. I believe in The Hereafter."

And today Bob is into "The Hereafter." He died at age 61 about a week ago after a heroic battle with a massive heart attack that struck him two weeks before that.

His death hit his family hard. His death, like that of any family's loved one, is a tragedy to the living. Yet, death — like life — is part of living.

"In his gruff sort of way," his wife Floy recalled, "Bob was very religious at heart."

She called him "Daddy," and he called her "Mother." They had been married almost 33 years and brought into the world two daughters, Nancy Helen and Janice "Punkin," whom Bob simply adored.

And when his eldest daughter, Nancy Helen, presented him with a granddaughter, Michelle, well, Bob was delighted. He loved her dearly.

Bob Maberry was a gentee — albeit an admittedly cantankerous — fellow who is dearly missed by his friends and family. He was a big man in stature and reputation. And he won't be forgotten.

Goodbye, Bob.

Koreans wonder: Will democracy ever arrive?

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea has a new president, a new set of military power brokers and a new pledge to move toward democracy. The Korean people have only one overwhelming question: Will democracy ever arrive?

Two months after the assassination of President Park Chung-hee, the shock of his murder has faded but the nation of 37 million remains in turmoil because of a violent military shakeup on Dec. 12.

Just when South Korea appeared on the road to constitutional reform and free elections, the top military leadership was purged by a group of younger generals — staunch supporters of Park and his repressive policies.

Political activity in Seoul came to a standstill as pro-government and opposition forces tried to sort out who was really running the country. The answer remains murky, and the people apprehensive.

President Choi Kyu-hah, a civilian, is ostensibly still in charge. He was inaugurated Dec. 21 as scheduled and announced a timetable for completion of constitutional amendments in one year "unless special circumstances occur."

The Americans, who have the security and stability of Korea as a top priority, are known to believe that unless the military sorts out its differences, the democratic reforms can't go on — or won't have any meaning.

The purge bruised egos, claimed three dead and 20 injured, and raised a serious possibility of reprisals or a counter-coup by backers of the ousted generals.

Internal revolt in the military is always serious but especially so in South Korea, because of the threat of attack by the North Korean communists.

Since Park seized power in a military coup in 1961, there never had been a revolt in the army. It gained a solid reputation as a tough, united fighting force.

American officials believe the Korean people are more worried by the military shakeup than by Park's death, because they think the generals risk an attack from the North.

The United States hopes this public apprehension will serve as a constraint on further military power plays.

What do the new young generals want? One ranking diplomat said they would like to restore Park's authoritarian rule but face U.S. pressure to keep moving toward democracy.

U.S. officials call them super-nationalists but not anti-American. But they are not as close to the Americans as the older generals they ousted.

U.S. Ambassador William Gleysteen lectured the insurgents' leader, the defense security commander, Maj. Gen. Chon Doo-hwan, on the devastating impact that continued military feuding could have on the country's economy, but received only noncommittal replies.

I was involved in a minor accident Wednesday afternoon (December 19) and left my car — with blinkers flashing — at the corner of Liddon and Big Spring Streets. While standing beside my car awaiting the arrival of the police, no less than half a dozen people offered their assistance. The variety of jobs, people, and cultures represented overwhelmed me!

A second look

To The Editor:
A national holiday in honor of Martin Luther King? Let's give some thought to that.

Let's look at some of King's co-laborers. Hunter Pitts O'Dell was a staff consultant for King in the 1960s. This man was identified as a communist as early as 1956. Bayard Rustin was secretary and advisor to King in the late 1950s. He attended the 16th national convention of the Communist Party in 1957; Fred Shuttlesworth was King's secretary for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and was also president of a group said by congressional investigating committees to be a major communist operation. And the list goes on.

As a so-called Christian minister he denied many of the cardinal doctrines of the Bible such as the diety of Christ, the Virgin Birth, the resurrection of the dead and so on.

Dr. King attended a communist training school; several of his aides were communist; he received aid from communists, and that he was taking direction from communists. So wrote Mrs. Julia Brown, a black lady who spent nine years serving as an undercover operative for the FBI as a member of the Communist Party in Cleveland.

Mrs. Brown said: "When someone served the enemies of our country while alive, and his name is still used by his comrades to promote anti-American activities, shouldn't people who know the truth speak out?"

"Every communist was ordered to help convince American Negroes that we are no better off than slaves. Wherever we went and whatever we did, we were to promote race consciousness and resentment, because the communists know that the technique of divide and conquer really works."

"Mr. King was one of the worst enemies my people ever had."

Afraid of what?

To The Editor:
When Mother Teresa of Calcutta accepted her Nobel Prize in Oslo recently, she shared not only her feelings about the poor, but about abortion. Clearly to her it is murder. She begged that people think more seriously about the responsibility to sustain and nurture life — not merely their own, but those of the unborn.

Were this a clubwoman who was only mouthing idealism, she might easily be dismissed, but we believe Mother Teresa is especially close to God who gives her the strength and resources for her work among the poor of Calcutta. Not only does she care for the sick and dying, but she has an orphanage that cares for babies.

Asked in El Paso in '76 what she believed to be the greatest miracle she had received from God, she replied, "His delicate thoughtfulness to provide always one more plate of food, one more loaf of bread so that we never turn one person away."

On abortion she asked, "What are they afraid of — a little baby? Are the population experts a la Jim Jones going to lead us down a road to mass suicide — the enormous killing of the unborn?"

Mother Teresa votes yes to life. Which way do you vote?

That dirty word

To The Editor:
It's official now. Profit really is a dirty word. The U.S. Congress says so.

At first, it was said, "Big Oil makes too much profit." The inference was that "little oil" and a "little profit" was okay. Facts and figures show that the actual earnings of the oil industry, even Big Oil, are about that of other successful corporations. The key word is not big or little. The key word is successful. Congress ignored facts and passed the so-called "windfall profits" bill, to penalize the successful oil industry.

With the same "even-handed" justice, Congress rewards mistakes, mismanagement, and bankruptcy. Chrysler is "big," the tenth largest corporation in the U.S. So, bigness itself, isn't always a fault. But, certainly, Chrysler is free from the taint of "profit," completely free. Hence, the taxpayers are bailing out Chrysler.

POSITIVE THINKING

Overcoming the impossible not impossible

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

There was the son of a poor family in the South whose parents loaded him down with the name Napoleon Hill. But he bore the impressive name well for he became one of the great motivational writers of our time. As a speech writer for President Franklin D. Roosevelt he was said to be the author of that famous phrase, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

A penniless boy with meagre schooling, Napoleon Hill told people in his rural community that he intended to be a writer. They were amused. "Why, you have to know words to be a writer, and you're a poor, uneducated boy. What you dream of doing is impossible."

Hill, therefore, scrimped and saved to purchase a dictionary, for was it not a book of words? The first thing he did was borrow a pair of fine scissors and he carefully clipped the word "impossible" from his dictionary, crumpled it and threw it in the fire. Thus rid of the concept impossible, he proceeded to become one of the most widely read writers of his time.

When Napoleon Hill told me that story I was so impressed that I used it one night in a speech at a Positive Thinking Rally in Massey Hall in Toronto. A man in the audience was also impressed, so much so that he wrote me that he went home immediately after the meeting, gathered up all the dictionaries in the house and clipped the word "impossible" from each one. I wrote him back that he misunderstood, that I was not advocating the mutilation of dictionaries but was urging that the concept "impossible" be removed from one's thought pattern and positive thinking be substituted.

An American living in Tokyo teaches English to young Japanese businessmen and businesswomen. He states that the Japanese consider English a difficult language. So he taught them positive attitudes which made English come easier. His method was rather whimsical.

He first taught them the word impossible calling attention to the first syllable, "imp." These "imps," he informed his students, were negative thinkers sitting on their shoulders whispering in their ears, "You can't learn English." So, he said, "Brush thoseimps off and affirm that you can." He reports that by this innovative teaching procedure his students made better progress.

The idea that something is impossible is self-defeating. But when the belief that nothing is impossible takes hold of the mind and excites it, the most amazing and seemingly incredible achievements become possible.

In Hong Kong, where I was speaking to a meeting of businessmen on the subject of positive thinking, a member of the audience told me how he had overcome "an impossible situation."

He had been a refugee from Mainland China when hundreds of thousands were flocking into Hong Kong only to live in makeshift hovels and be fed at breadlines. He sat daily in this poverty devastated by hopelessness. How could there possibly be any future for his family and himself except more of this terrible living situation?

This man, a Chinese Christian, had brought from old China a copy of the New Testament. Among his meager belongings it was a prized and comforting possession. He read it daily.

One day in his reading he came across the statements "Everything is possible for the person who has faith." (Mark 9:23) He was familiar with this passage from the scriptures but now it struck him full force: Could that apply to the situation he was in? Could he by faith extricate his family from poverty and give them the ordinary blessings of life?

It seemed incredible, "but suddenly a formula came to my mind." He wrote it for me on a paper napkin that lay on the table. "I believe + I can + I will = I did." It was a long struggle, he said with a smile, "but I learned that if you have faith nothing is for a fact impossible."

These are just a few people who come to mind when I consider those who have overcome the seemingly "impossible."

Soviets reshaping reality in Asia

(c) 1979, The Washington Post
MOSCOW — The Soviet Union's successful military intervention Thursday in remote Afghanistan may have achieved a solid Kremlin victory that paradoxically could both bolster and damage its global interests in years to come.

By placing Soviet troops in direct combat and garrison roles to install a tractable new regime in Kabul, the Russians have come closer to seizing an objective that eluded the czars for more than a hundred years: control of a landlocked central Asian area that eventually could yield direct Moscow access to warm-water ports, a strategic goal of immense importance.

In a broad sense, the Soviet military thrust is a shrewd move on the world geopolitical chess board of the sort the leadership of Leonid Brezhnev has made in various forms in recent years, such as Angola, Ethiopia and Cambodia. Moscow's intervention seems to guarantee the swift conversion of an innocuous buffer state of the classic 19th century variety into a Kremlin puppet and potential staging area for direct leverage deep inside central Asia.

Iran, Pakistan and India woke up to a changed world Friday. The intervention also has impact in China, Moscow's bitterest adversary, which has expansionist aims of its own in the area.

The angry and worried Washington reaction, which President Carter made plain in his luncheon talk with reporters Saturday at the White House, underscores the fundamental strategic change Moscow's move implies — and the potency of Soviet military power. At a time when the distant United States is grappling with ways to reinforce its influence throughout the Persian Gulf and South Asia land masses, the Russians simply marched in against virtually no organized opposition and took control. The operation reflects continued Kremlin calculations that it can seek detente with the West while also seizing any opportunity to expand its power. Whether it can consolidate this gain and make more from its new salient depends on various internal and external factors but the historic goal is clear.

The Arabian Sea port towns of Chah Bahar in Iran and Gwadar in Pakistan lie about 300 miles south of the Afghan border, in a region dominated by Baluchi tribesmen disaffected from both Tehran and Islamabad. Baluchistan, convulsed by a breakaway rebellion in 1973-77, has always been a tempting target for a Russian gateway to the sea.

Strategic international oil sealanes to the Persian Gulf lie south of the Baluchistan coast. But Moscow first must deal with complex tactical and strategic problems within Afghanistan that could take years to solve and that could have damaging impact on Soviet relations with Moslem regimes and peoples from the Persian Gulf to the South China Sea.

The success of the Russian gamble, which began with the relatively easy putsch Thursday against Kabul strongman Hafizullah Amin, depends on the ability of new leader, Babrek Karmel, to quell the Moslem insurrection that has ripped Afghanistan since pro-Marxists came to power in an April 1978 coup.

The fact that Moscow mounted the military overthrow underscores the consensus among foreign observers here that the Soviets are intent upon finding a political settlement allowing a peace between the pro-Marxists and the tribal Moslem insurgents. Karmel, sheltered and certainly tutored by Moscow or its Communist allies this year after going underground to escape a purge by Amin, has called for peace with the Moslem tribesmen. However, Moscow is in the awkward position of using its troops to shoot at Moslems while proclaiming it supports Moslem nationalist aspirations elsewhere in the vast, volatile region.

To minimize the impact of this situation, the Soviets are certain to clamp tight restrictions on outside access to Afghanistan to lessen the world's awareness of what is going on. But if Moscow expands its combat role, much will be learned abroad from foreign diplomats, Western intelligence listening devices and from new thousands of refugees streaming into Pakistan to join the estimated 350,000 Afghans already there.

Official Soviet media have offered only terse confirmation of Russian combat troops in Kabul, Saturday, the Tass agency reported a Kabul radio address by Karmel and highlighted his assurances to "the worthy Moslems of Afghanistan, Sunni and Shiite. . ." Tass did not say whether Karmel had words of thanks for the Soviets who brought him to power and made possible his peace offering to the insurgents.

But Moslem countries elsewhere have already reacted with alarm to the intervention, providing a foretaste for Moscow of deeper long-term reaction in the Mideast and South Asia regions. The Kuwaiti government has officially protested, and newspapers in Saudi Arabia and Iraq have denounced the Soviet move.

Iran's Ayatollah Rullollah Khomeini also has responded negatively and it is here that the Soviets may stand to lose the most ground in the immediate future. Khomeini earlier had attacked Kabul for warring on Moslems, and Tehran has always been especially sensitive to its problems with the Baluchi separatists. Khomeini, who has sought to solve his severe internal problems of Iranian cohesion by means of the U.S. Embassy crisis, is unlikely to soften his view.

Many new Texas state laws become effective Tuesday

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Most of us think of violent crime only in terms of pain and death suffered by the victims.

Not so obvious is the fact that financial injury often accompanies the physical and mental harm done by an assailant.

A gunshot, knife wound or beating can hospitalize a victim for weeks and require months of follow-up therapy. Medical bills can exceed insurance coverage. Death or the expiration of sick leave can cut off a family's income.

Starting Tuesday, the state will provide cash to victims of violent crimes, whose injuries caused financial hardship.

"This is one of the best laws the Legislature ever passed, and darn it, we have got to get this going right. The taxpayers are not paying for this. The criminals are," said Jerry Belcher, executive director of the Texas Industrial Accident Board.

Belcher says the board — originally created to referee workers compensation cases — is ready to take its first claim from a crime victim.

The new law is one of several major bills passed by this year's Legislature with a Jan. 1, 1980, effective date.

Only victims of crimes committed after 12:01 a.m. New Year's Day may tap the new Crime Victims Compensation Fund, which the state has been accumulating since Sept. 1. Convicted criminals must pay $10 to $15 into the fund.

Belcher said the fund stood at $75,000 on Nov. 15, with 47 counties still unheard from.

"Our biggest problem is going to be funding," he said.

If the fund won't stretch to cover all verified cases, Belcher said wage replacement for disabled victims will take priority over payment of medical expenses.

To qualify, victims or their survivors must apply to the board within 180 days of a crime and prove they are suffering financial hardship.

Belcher said he hoped Texas could better the "horrendous" five to 12 months other states take to process claims from victims.

"By gosh, a case is going to be investigated, verified and the claim is going to be paid or some action taken within 30 days," he said.

One requirement is the victim must have reported the crime within 72 hours — an incentive to cooperate with police.

State assistance will cover only out-of-pocket losses not paid by insurance, Social Security, sick leave or similar sources of help. There is a $50,000 ceiling on aid to any one victim. Wage replacement is limited to $150 a week.

The law doesn't leave it to victims to learn about the aid program on their own. Posters advertising it must be posted prominently in hospital emergency rooms. Police must tell victims of the program and give them application forms.

AUSTIN: application forms. Besides paying medical or burial expenses and replacing lost wages, the Industrial Accident Board also may get counseling or vocational rehabilitation for victims of crime.

Exceptions to the new law include crimes committed by a person living in the same household as the victim.

Other new laws of statewide interest that take effect New Year's Day will:

— Require Texans to have their dogs and cats vaccinated against rabies and impose a fine of up to $200 on pet owners who willfully disobey. The measure also gives the State Health Department statewide rabies control authority.

— Allow the sale of beer in containers of seven, eight and 16 ounces, in addition to the previously permitted 12-, 24- and 32-ounce cans and bottles.

Distributors say they have been in the new container sizes stacked in their warehouses and ready to put on supermarket and liquor store shelves.

— Enable cancer patients and sufferers from glaucoma to receive marijuana for medical purposes. The law allows the use of marijuana to treat glaucoma and to alleviate the nausea from cancer chemotherapy. But only patients taking part in research programs approved by a State Health Department advisory committee may receive the drug.

— Add June 19 — Emancipation Day in Texas — to the list of holidays received by state employees.

— Prohibit state expenditures, except those from constitutionally dedicated funds, from rising faster than the projected rate of growth of Texans' personal income.

— Allow a homeowner or business to install solar or wind-powered equipment without raising the taxable value of the property.

Stanton hospital hearing set

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission will hold a public hearing March 4, 1980, to consider an application by the Martin County Hospital District, Stanton, to convert two patient rooms into an intensive care unit-cardiac care unit recovery room.

The hospital district is seeking to convert the two two-bed rooms into a three-bed recovery room including a heart monitor, ventilator and inter-venous pump.

No change in licensed capacity would be required.

Persons wishing to protest the application must do so prior to Feb. 6.

If no protests are received, the hearing may be dispensed with and the application sent to a THFC voting session without a hearing.

Amazing Oilers, Buccaneers win

Vernon Perry picks off four aerials in 17-14 victory

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Safety Vernon Perry, leading an aroused Houston defense that took up the slack for missing offensive stars, intercepted four Dan Fouts passes and blocked a field goal attempt and the Oilers, riding Gifford Nielsen's clutch touchdown pass to Mike Renfro, beat San Diego 17-14 in the American Football Conference playoffs Saturday.

NIELSEN, MAKING only his second career start in the National Football League, teamed with Renfro on a 47-yard scoring play with 2:05 left to play in the third quarter for the touchdown that vaulted Houston into the AFC championship game Jan. 6 against the winner of today's contest between Miami and the defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Oilers, the surviving AFC wildcard team, spotted the Chargers, the AFC West Division champions, a first-period touchdown on Clarence Williams' 1-yard run.

Then Perry went to work. He didn't finish until he had picked off Fouts' last pass of the game, at the Houston 27-yard line with two seconds remaining to seal the remarkable upset.

On San Diego's second possession, he picked off a pass at midfield to kill a potential scoring threat.

HE REALLY started his heroics by blocking a field-goal attempt of 26 yards by Mike Wood, scooping up the ball and racing 57 yards to the Chargers' 15-yard line. The Oilers couldn't get into the end zone but they got on the scoreboard six plays later on Toni Fritsch's 26-yard field goal.

In the closing minute of the first half, Perry intercepted his second pass of the game at the San Diego 45-yard line and lateraled the ball to safety Mike Reinfeldt, who carried it seven yards to the 38.

Four plays later, Nielsen found his receivers covered, sprinted to his left and raced 18 yards to the 4-yard line. Two running plays put the ball on the 1. Nielsen threw an incomplete pass to stop the clock with 25 seconds to go before halftime and Fritsch kicked an apparent 18-yard field goal to cut the Chargers' lead to 7-6.

BUT ON the play, the Chargers were penalized for having 12 men on the field, giving Houston a fourth-and-inches option rather than the fourth-and-1 which had preceded Fritsch's kick.

Houston chose to pull back the three points and go for a touchdown — and the Oilers got it when Boobie Clark found a hole around left end, scoring his first TD of the year. Fyitsch now kicked again — this time an extra point that put the Oilers' halftime lead at 10-7.

THE CHARGERS came charging back at the start of the second half. Fouts completed passes 20 yards to Charlie Joiner and 16 to tight end Bob Klein and Houston helped the San Diego drive when linebacker Robert Brazile was flagged for roughing the passer. The Chargers went back on top 14-10 when Lydell Mitchell, starting in place of flu-stricken Mike Thomas, fought his way eight yards into the end zone.

But the lead didn't last through the third period. Cornerback J.C. Wilson picked off yet another Fouts pass — the five interceptions tied an AFC playoff record set by Miami against Cleveland in 1972 — to give the Oilers possession at the San Diego 46.

On a third-and-11, Nielsen, a second-year pro from Brigham Young, found Renfro over the middle. The wide receiver cut back to his right and swept down the sideline, piling into the end zone just ahead of a desperation tackle. Fritsch again kicked the extra point, the final point of the game.

The Chargers had other opportunities to re-establish their supremacy, but twice more it was Perry to the Oilers' rescue.

WITH 3:18 to go and Fouts driving the Chargers toward a potential tying field goal or go-ahead TD, Perry stepped in front of Klein at the Oilers' 32 — within Wood's field goal range — and picked off yet another pass by Fouts.

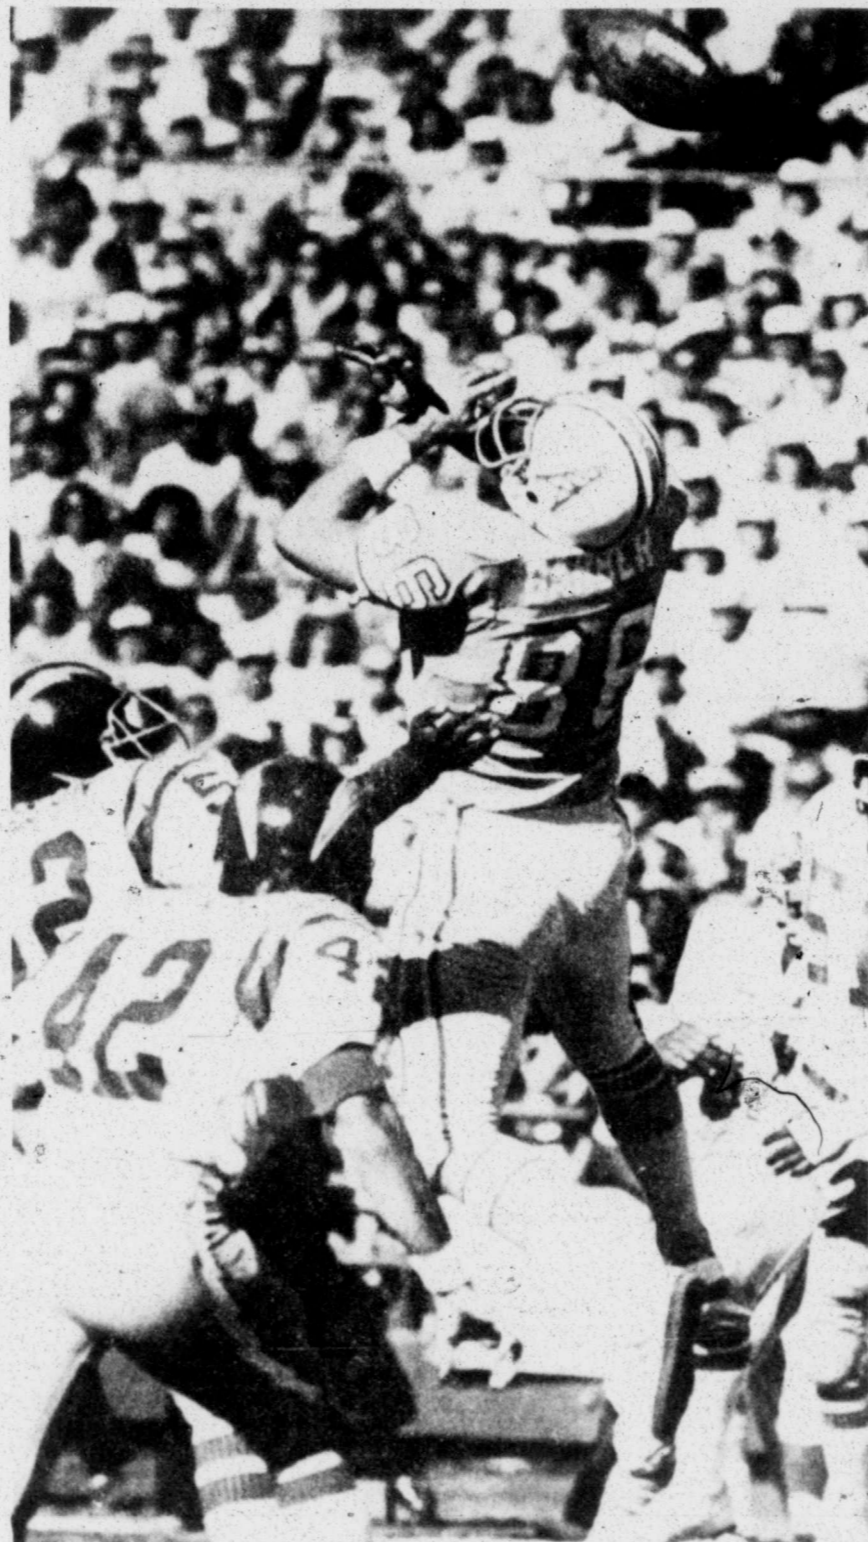

And in the final minutes, San Diego rode Fouts' desperation passes from its own 5-yard line to its 40 before the final, crushing interception by Perry.

Demonic defense puts clamps on Eagles in 24-17 Buc victory

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay's demonic defense slammed the door on Philadelphia when it mattered while record-setting Ricky Bell ran for two touchdowns and set up Doug Williams' clinching scoring pass to lead the Buccaneers to a 24-17 upset victory over the Eagles Saturday in the National Football League playoffs.

Bell, who gained 142 yards on a playoff-record 38 carries, scored on runs of 4 and one yard in the first half, then scampered 26 yards in a fourth-period drive capped by Williams' 9-yard TD strike to tight end Jimmie Giles with 7:08 to play.

THE VICTORY in the National Conference semifinal playoff sends the upstart Bucs, a winless team in their inaugural season just four years ago, into the NFC title game Jan. 6 against the winner of today's Los Angeles-Dallas game. If the Cowboys win, the Bucs will visit the Cowboys. If the Rams win, Tampa Bay will be the host.

Ron Jaworski, the Eagles' harried quarterback, completed just 15 of 38 passes for 199 yards. And the Eagles' ground game was almost totally shut down with Wilbert Montgomery gaining only 35 yards on 12 carries.

An 80-yard opening drive climaxed by Bell's 4-yard sweep and a 43-yard march capped by Neil O'Donoghue's 40-yard field goal gave the Bucs a 10-0 lead. Then the defense set up another quick score when end Wally Chambers forced Montgomery to fumble at his own 4. Randy Crowder, the Bucs' nose tackle, recovered and Bell followed three plays later with a 1-yard plunge for a 17-0 halftime lead late in the second quarter.

The Eagles' only first-half points came because of a Tampa Bay mistake. With time running out in the second period, Williams tried to get in position for one more score, but his hurried pass to running back Jerry Eckwood, high and off his hands, deflected to linebacker Jerry Robinson, who sprinted 37 yards to the Tampa Bay 11.

TWO PLAYS later, Jaworski hit wide receiver Charles Smith for the 11-yard scoring pass.

The Eagles narrowed the margin to 17-10 on Tony Franklin's 42-yard field goal with 3:16 gone in the second half. But after a 20-yard Jaworski pass to Montgomery moved the Eagles to Tampa Bay's 38, defensive end Lee Roy Selmon sacked Jaworski for losses of 11 and 9 yards that killed the Eagles' comeback.

And the Bucs sewed up their triumph with a 57-yard, nine-play drive culminated by the scoring catch by Giles, who earlier had had an apparent 22-yard scoring reception wiped out when officials ruled he

Dolphins to challenge Pittsburgh Steelers today

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Today's playoff game here between the Miami Dolphins and Pittsburgh Steelers rekindles memories of a 1972 season that was magical for both teams.

The Steelers won their first division title ever that year. Then rookie Franco Harris plucked an "Immaculate Reception" off his shoe tops as Pittsburgh beat Oakland in the playoffs.

"I'll never forget the hysteria," Joe Greene recalled. "It was almost like winning the Super Bowl."

THE HYSTERIA ended with a 21-17 loss to Miami in the American Football Conference title game. The Dolphins went on to a 17-0 season with the first of their two consecutive Super Bowl titles.

"I like to think of the Dolphins as the team of the 70s," Miami offensive lineman Bob Kuechenberg said this week.

"Be sure to tell Mike Webster (Pittsburgh's All-Pro center) that one thing he doesn't have is a 17-0 ring. I'm proud of that."

No, the Steelers have never gone

17-0, but they have won three Super Bowl titles.

The first was in 1974, the year Oakland ousted Miami from the playoffs. Pittsburgh won again in 1973 and 1978 while Miami slipped in status amid injuries and defections to the World Football League.

This season, Miami took the AFC East for the first time since 1974 with a 10-6 record. Pittsburgh won its sixth straight AFC Central title with a 12-4 record.

IT WILL be their first playoff meeting since the 1972 clash, and the winner advances to the AFC title game against Houston.

Offensively, Larry Csonka is back at fullback for Miami and quarterback Bob Griese completed 70 percent of his passes in the last three games after being benched earlier in favor of Don Strock.

"Offensively, they've been in and out a little bit," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll. "But they've been able to come up with the big play and the big drive when they've needed them."

Tampa Bay's Ricky Bell escapes from Philadelphia defenders during NFL playoff game in Tampa Bay Saturday afternoon. He rushed for 142 yards as Bucs took a 24-17 win over the Eagles. Tampa Bay will face either Dallas or Los Angeles next week for the NFC championship and a berth in the Super Bowl. Jan. 20 in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif. (AP Laserphoto).

Cowboys, Rams battle in Texas Stadium today

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams are in a familiar position in the National Football League playoffs: Nobody loves 'em. They've won seven consecutive National Conference Western Division championships yet were eight-point underdogs for today's NFC first round matchup in Texas Stadium against the Dallas Cowboys.

The Rams have never played in a Super Bowl. The Cowboys have played in five.

THREE OUT of four times this decade the Rams have been playoff patsies to the Cowboys.

The only time the Rams have ever won a playoff game on the road was in 1976 when they nipped the Cowboys 14-12 in Texas Stadium, a game that still whips Dallas coaches and front office people into a fever at the mere mention of an official's controversial call near the end of the contest.

The Rams come into the game with a 9-7 record after a troubled year in which 18 players missed at least one game with injuries, including frontline stars like quarterback Pat Haden and cornerback Pat Thomas.

Haden won't play because of a broken finger suffered during a 30-6 loss to Dallas in October. Vince Ferragamo, who also broke a hand against Dallas and missed a month, was slated to start.

Thomas, who tore a calf muscle in the Dallas game, was expected to play.

Dallas was 11-5 and won the NFC Eastern Division on quarterback Roger Staubach's third come-from-behind "miracle" of the season in a 35-34 victory over Washington two weeks ago.

DALLAS BEAT Los Angeles 28-0 in the NFC title game last year. The Cowboys throttled the Rams 37-7 in 1975 and bumped them out of the playoffs 27-16 in 1973.

Defensive end Jack Youngblood is one of a number of Rams who are tired of being criticized.

"We didn't pick this division," said Youngblood. "All that stuff about being a weak division is bull. We're winners."

He added "We can't pay any attention to what people say now. To quote an old (Ram Coach) Chuck Knox cliché: 'You're never as good as they say you are. And you're never as bad, either.'"

DALLAS, WHICH has been rebuilding its defense on the fly because of injuries and retirements, may miss strong safety Randy Hughes, who has a shoulder separation. The rest of the team including running back Tony Dorsett, who has rested two weeks with a shoulder bruise, should be ready and Hughes may see limited duty.

The winner of today's game plays Tampa Bay for the NFC championship next week.

Today's kickoff is set for 3 p.m. with more than 65,000 fans expected. Coach Tom Landry of the Cowboys said: "The playoffs are even in the NFC this year. All the teams are equal."

He added "The Rams have too much talent not to make it to the Super Bowl. We just hope it isn't this year."

Junior Miller, Nebraska's All-America tight end from Midland, Tex., stretches during warm up before Cornhuskers practiced Saturday for Tuesday's Cotton Bowl battle with Houston in Dallas. # Cougars, Huskers primed for Cotton DALLAS (AP) — The critics are calling this one the "Apathy Bowl" but don't demean the Cotton Bowl in front of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman and Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne.

Yeoman figures his Southwest Conference Cougars have a point to prove after blowing a 34-12 lead and losing 35-34 to Notre Dame last New Year's Day.

OSBORNE THINKS his team was the best in the Big Eight Conference this year and wants a victory to propel his club perhaps into the top three of the final Associated Press poll.

"What happened to us against Notre Dame last year has been in the back of our minds since it happened," said Yeoman. "This season was a result of it. We lost only one game, a close one to Texas.

"When something like the Notre Dame comeback happens to you, well, you really don't need to be reminded of it."

The Cornhuskers are rated No. 7 and the Cougars No. 8 before the kickoff of the 44th annual New Year's Day game here. It was expected to draw a sellout crowd of 72,000.

"We want to win this game badly," said Osborne. "People take their football seriously in Nebraska. We might not be able to win the national championship but we might get it up to No. 3 or No. 4. That's better than No. 12 or No. 13."

Houston and Nebraska, each 10-1 for the season, are meeting for the first time.

HOUSTON FEATURES a rugged ground game headed by 1,000-yard ground-gainer Terrell Clark. Nebraska has a high-powered I attack spotlighting its own 1,000-yarder, Jarvis Redwine. He's coming off an ankle injury which sidelined him for the late-season loss to Oklahoma.

Houston will be playing in its third Cotton Bowl game in four years. The Cougars beat Maryland 30-21 in 1977, then lost to Notre Dame last year. Nebraska beat Texas 19-3 in the 1974 Cotton Bowl but lost 10-7 to Arkansas in 1965.

Osborne said he wasn't worried about his team dwelling on the Oklahoma loss. "I've discovered that 18- and 19-year-olds can rebound pretty quickly," he said. "They have a lot of respect for Houston. We figure we're playing the top team in the Southwest Conference."

Yeoman said the Cornhuskers are "big, thick, strong and don't make many mistakes."

Yeoman said he wants to be able to see the Cotton Bowl film this year after the game.

"I still haven't seen the Notre Dame film," he said. "I may get around to it in another three or four years."

Alabama seeking national title in Sugar Bowl

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The University of Alabama is ranked No. 2 for the second year in a row at Sugar Bowl time but the Crimson Tide hasn't given up hope of a second consecutive national championship, even though it doesn't have a shot at the No. 1 team.

Holtz does not, however, poor-mouth Alabama, which ranks ninth nationally in total offense, fourth in rushing, eighth in scoring, second in total defense, fifth in rushing defense, second in pass defense and first in scoring defense.

LAST YEAR, Alabama defeated then-top-rated Penn State 14-7 and captured national honors from The Associated Press.

"Boy, will they get excited about playing us when they see our defense on film," says Holtz. "Offensively, we'll have trouble moving the ball against them. They have a great defense. If we make a first down well be so excited we might send the PAT team into the game."

Next Tuesday, the Crimson Tide, its supporters infuriated by a slip from first to second in the final regular-season poll after seven weeks at the top, takes on sixth-ranked Arkansas ... and Coach Bear Bryant takes on the university representing his home state.

Buccaneers

"Alabama is my home now, but Arkansas is my home state," says Bryant, college football's winningest active coach. "It's like playing my own people."

bobbled the ball as he left the end zone.

As much attention probably will be focused on the rival coaches — the drawing, gravel-voiced 66-year-old Bryant and Arkansas' quick-talking Lou Holtz who will turn 43 next Sunday.

Giles' 9-yard TD catch enabled the Bucs to withstand a 37-yard scoring pass from Jaworski to wide receiver Harold Carmichael with 3:36 left in the game.

BOTH ARE among the country's leading exponents of poor-mouthing themselves and their clubs. Bryant likes to moan about how his team is always outthit, out-tackled and out-everythinged but somehow manages to overcome his horrid coaching while Holtz usually describes himself as "one step short of suicide."

Carmichael's scoring catch came at the end of an 80-yard, nine-play drive — the only time the Eagles managed to put together a lengthy scoring march in packed Tampa Stadium. The game drew a stadium record 71,402 fans — the Bucs' ninth straight sellout in their first playoff game ever.

The records prove otherwise. Bryant, concluding his 35th season as a head coach and 22nd at Alabama, has a 295-77-16 record and needs 20 victories to pass Amos Alonzo Stagg and become the winningest coach of all time.

In all, Tampa Bay controlled the ball for more than 36½ minutes of the 60 minutes.

Holtz, a native of East Liverpool, Ohio, is 30-4-1 in three seasons at Arkansas after going 13-20-0 at William & Mary and 33-12-3 at North Carolina State. Overall, that's 76-36-4. Between N.C. State and Arkansas, he spent one best-forgotten season in the Big Apple as coach of the National Football League's New York Jets.

It is a team far removed from the once-laughable Bucs who lost their first 26 games they ever played in the NFL and managed just seven victories in their first three full seasons.

BRYANT WAS born in Moro Bottom, Ark., which he describes as "a little piece of bottom land on the Moro Creek about seven miles south of Fordyce" and likes to call himself "the sorriest thing ever to come out of Arkansas."

THIS YEAR they won their first five, finished at 10-6 for the championship of the NFC's Central Division — and now have polished off the Eagles, the surviving NFC wild-card team which wound up second in the NFC East at 11-5 and won a 12th game by beating Chicago 27-17 in the first round six days ago.

But several weeks ago, he became the first coach in NCAA history to win 100 games in a decade (Alabama is 102-16-1 during the 1970s) and come Tuesday the Crimson Tide will appear in its 33rd bowl game and 21st in a row, both national records.

The game against the Eagles was, in effect, a rematch of former collegiate rivals. The Bucs' John McKay was, for many years, the coach at Southern California while the Eagles' Dick Vermeil coached grosstown rival UCLA.

AFTER GOING eight years without a bowl triumph, Bama has won four in a row and boasts a 20-game overall winning streak, longest in the nation, including 11-0 this season. The Crimson Tide also has won eight Southeastern Conference championships in the last nine years and owns a record 23-game SEC winning streak.

The Bucs' opening 80-yard, 18-play scoring drive featured a masterful mix of Bell runs and Williams passes and sneaks. The highlights in the 9½-minute drive were passes of 18 and 16 yards to Giles and Bell's 40 yards on 10 carries.

Arkansas, on the other hand, was picked to finish in the middle of the Southwest Conference — "a legitimate pick," Holtz said before the season. "If this is supposed to be a rebuilding year, we need urban renewal." But the Razorbacks went 10-1 and shared the SWC crown with Houston, the only team to beat them (13-10).

Heavy pressure from Chambers and Seimon and blitzing linebacker David Lewis shut down Philadelphia's passing attack through most of the first half. Wally Henry's 11-yard return of a 36-yard line-drive punt by Tom Blanchard gave Philadelphia possession inside Tampa Bay territory, but a delay-of-game penalty negated a successful fourth-and-4 run for a first down by John Scarra on a fake field goal. Franklin then was short on a 52-yard try early in the second quarter.

"I believe this team can play with anyone in the country," Holtz says now. "We're the only team to have won 10 games without our opponents ever conceding we won. All along, I've said this team is something special."

The apparent 22-yard scoring strike to Giles was called incomplete when officials ruled he didn't have control of the ball before he left the end zone. A television replay indicated otherwise.

Lou is an outstanding football coach," says Bryant. "He likes to entertain with his jokes and magic tricks, but don't believe for a minute he isn't a fine coach. That may be his way of letting off pressure."

Tar Heels win

LONDON (AP) — Mike O'Koren scored 25 points and Al Wood 21 as North Carolina beat Zeltbert of England 115-93 in the Philips International basketball championships at London's Crystal Palace stadium Saturday night.

Wood scored 17 of his points in the second half as the sixth-ranked Tar Heels broke open a close game after leading 52-48 at halftime. John Virgil added 15 points for UNC and freshman James Worthy 13.

Vanderbilt trips SMU

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mike Rhodes scored 14 second half points to lead Vanderbilt to an 88-77 come-from-behind college basketball victory over Southern Methodist here Saturday night.

Rhodes led Vanderbilt scorers with 19 for the game. In the first half, Vanderbilt jumped to a quick lead but saw SMU take as much as a six point lead before settling for a 41-38 half-time margin.

The Mustangs, now 8-2, scored almost at will on layups down the middle during the first half.

But Vanderbilt scored the first eight points of the second half and never trailed the rest of the way as the Commodores spread their offense and worked the ball inside for easy layups.

Guard Tommy Springer scored 16 for Vandy, reserve center Byran Allmiller added 15, starting center Jim Lampley had 14 and freshman forward Ted Young 10.

For SMU, senior forward Brad Branson led all scorers with 23 points and guard Billy Allen added 20.

Vanderbilt, now 6-3, hosts Louisiana State in a Southeastern Conference game Wednesday night. SMU will visit Arkansas for a Southwestern Conference clash Thursday.

MIAMI (AP) — When you have an offense like Oklahoma's and a running back like Billy Sims, the other players tend to get overshadowed — including quarterback J.C. Watts.

In the truest wishbone tradition, Watts is "a" quarterback rather than "the" quarterback.

That wasn't the case at Eufala High School in Oklahoma, where Watts passed for more than 1,000 yards in each of his three years.

"He would call a play in the huddle, then at the line of scrimmage he would tell his line which way he was scrambling," said Bill Shimek, the Sooners' assistant coach.

During Oklahoma's 10-1 season this year, Watts was the team's third-leading rusher (behind Sims and Stanley Wilson) with 455 yards and its second-best point producer with 10 touchdowns and a two-point conversion.

He also passed for 130 or more yards in three games and twice ran for more than 100 yards.

Impressive numbers, but not enough to bank on. Even with Tuesday night's Orange Bowl Game against Florida State and his senior year ahead of him, Watts doesn't have visions of making the big time.

"It would be nice," he said before a practice. "Every college player dreams of playing in the pros. But every college player is not that fortunate to be chosen — to play in the NFL, in Canada, somewhere. But I'm not counting on it."

"I've got too many things I want to do, too many dreams."

One of those dreams is to open a chain of barbecue restaurants, "like the Kentucky Fried Chicken place," he said.

And if that doesn't work, he'll pursue a career in real estate or singing.

Shimek says Watts can do just about anything he puts his mind to.

"First time I ever saw him play, as a 10th-grader, I knew he was a heckuva player," he said. "Even though we don't pass that often, J.C. is a pure passer and he's got a strong arm."

"In practice we pass as much as anybody, and in a big game the pass has always been a big play for us."

When Watts signed with Oklahoma, he understood his obligation. "I knew I wouldn't have a chance to throw much," he said. "But I didn't want to go to a school that wouldn't win. I knew I would play for a winner at Oklahoma. I knew there would be bowl games."

He was right. He's been part of one Fiesta Bowl team and two Orange Bowl teams.

State legislators want to settle UNM problems

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Two top state legislators have given mixed reviews to the idea of a legislative probe into the University of New Mexico athletic program.

The public is entitled to be fully informed, and we need to get to the bottom of this. We need to restore confidence in the university," House Speaker Gene Samberson of Lovington said Saturday. "But I don't know if we need another investigation."

Senate Minority Leader John Conway of Alamogordo said an interim committee could investigate the matter, "but only if it is proven that the (UNM) Athletic Council and regents aren't handling it properly."

Samberson said a special committee probably would have to conduct an investigation after the upcoming 30-day session.

"We'd be cramped for time with the issues we have already. But it would be feasible for the Legislature to investigate the situation after the session is over," he said.

Sen. Les Houston of Albuquerque announced Friday that he would ask the Legislature to form an interim committee to look into the player eligibility scandal that has rocked the UNM athletic department.

"I do feel there is strong sentiment in the Legislature to appoint this committee to get at the facts, to get things out in the open and get the university rolling again," he said.

Houston said he was upset about action taken this week by the UNM Athletic Council, which echoed the school's regents and said the university administration proceeded properly in investigating troubles plaguing the athletic program.

The Athletic Council's decision Thursday came after it heard testimony concerning possible grade buying and eligibility problems raised by journalism Professor Charles Coates.

Houston charged that the council "brass-knuckled Professor Coates during his testimony, then they switched to kid gloves when other members of the administration" testified.

Coates told the council Wednesday that he gave a documentary taped by students to university President William E. Davis in 1978. In the tape, persons identified as football players said grades were bought routinely for athletes.

Coates also said he requested an investigation Oct. 18 of the eligibility of star basketball player Larry Belin, who had failed a summer course taught by Coates but was still playing for the team.

The professor said he was told that without the summer credits, Belin would be ineligible to play.

Davis testified that Dean of Admissions Robert Weaver already was investigating the eligibility of Lobo basketball players at the time of the Coates memo.

The practice referred to by Coates in 1978 was discontinued at least a year before, Davis said.

Purdue downs Tulsa five

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue center Joe Barry Carroll scored 23 points in leading the eighth-ranked Boilermakers to an 82-58 college basketball victory over Tulsa Saturday.

After falling behind by 15 points, 32-17, at halftime, Tulsa came out gunning in the second half. Quick baskets by forward Bob Stevenson and center Chris Cantrell trimmed the Boilermakers' advantage.

Twice the Golden Hurricanes cut Purdue's lead to 10 points, the first time 52-42 with 7:55 left.

Oilers show Bum lots of character

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Nothing brings out the best in the Houston Oilers like the National Football League playoffs.

"You don't build character, you exhibit it, and this team showed me more character than any team I've seen in 31 years," said Houston Coach Bum Phillips after the Oilers accomplished a stunning 17-14 upset over the San Diego Chargers Saturday.

THE VICTORY enabled the Oilers to earn a berth in the American Football Conference's championship game as a wild-card representative for the second straight year. Houston's playoff record over the past two years is 4-1.

"We're 60 minutes away from the Super Bowl," said veteran center Carl Mauck.

Rated 8-point underdogs because they were facing an offensive powerhouse and because of injuries, the Oilers overcame a 7-0 deficit behind the cool performance of second-year quarterback Gifford Nielsen and four interceptions and a blocked field goal by strong safety Vernon Perry.

"We had three guys out and somebody had to take over," said Perry, referring to starting quarterback Dan Pastorini, All-Pro running back Earl Campbell and standout wide receiver Ken Burroughs. "Ain't no such thing as a one-man or two-man team."

Perry, who attended Jackson State University, was originally drafted in 1976 by the Chicago Bears, but he was cut and played two seasons in the Canadian Football League with the Montreal Alouettes before joining the Oilers this year as a free agent.

PERRY'S BLOCKED field goal midway through the second quarter keyed the Houston turnaround. With San Diego leading 7-0, Mike Wood tried a 26-yard field goal, but Perry blocked the attempt, scooped the ball up and raced 57 yards before being wrestled down by holder Mike Fuller at the Chargers' 28-yard line.

Shortly later, Toni Fritsch got Houston on the scoreboard for the first time with a 26-yard field goal, making it 7-3.

Perry's blocked field goal was one of three big plays that directly led to Houston's 17 points.

Shortly after Fritsch's field goal, Perry intercepted his second pass of the day to set up a 1-yard scoring plunge by Boobie Clark, which came 19 seconds before halftime, making it 10-7.

And Nielsen's 47-yard scoring strike to wide receiver Mike Renfro late in the third quarter was set up on an interception by J.C. Wilson.

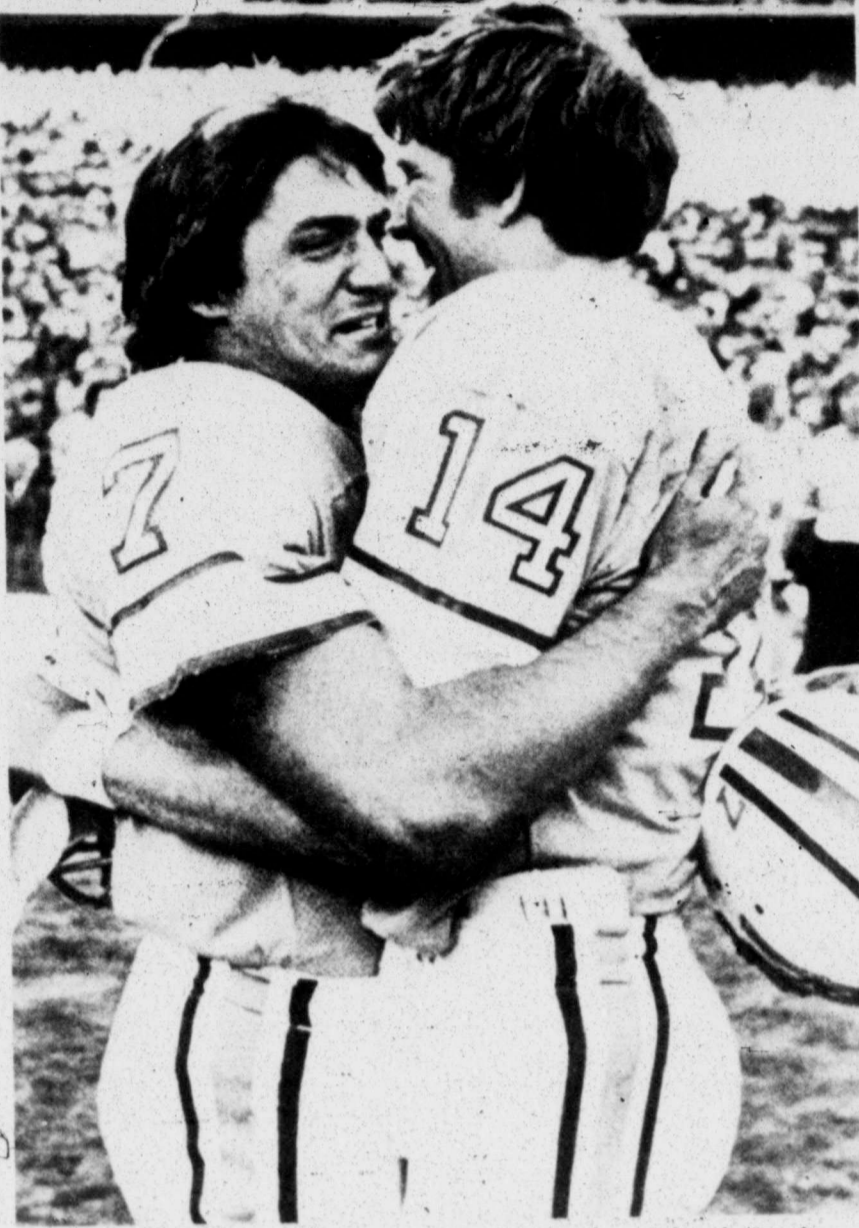

"I could not be more proud of our team," said Nielsen, who was making only his second NFL start. "Everyone rose to the occasion. Everybody hung together."

MAUCK CITED the Oilers' playoff experience as a factor in the upset.

"That helped us," he said. "We had nothing to lose because we were picked to lose."

San Diego Coach Don Coryell wasn't able to hide his disappointment but saluted the Oilers.

"Things just didn't go our way," said Coryell. "Little things win football games. This is very disappointing. I would just like to congratulate Bum Phillips and his team."

Dan Pastorini, left, gives Gifford Nielsen, right, hug after Houston Oilers upset the San Diego Chargers, 17-14 Saturday in AFC playoff battle in San Diego, Calif. # Clemson will throw against Baylor Bears in Peach Bowl tilt

ATLANTA (AP) — Clemson Coach Danny Ford, who admits his Tigers' offensive success this season has been mostly on the ground, says he will have to go to the air Monday to defeat the Baylor Bears in the 12th annual Peach Bowl.

"We don't pass much," Ford said Friday as his 18th-ranked Tigers prepared for the contest, scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. CST at Atlanta Stadium before a sellout crowd of 58,000 and a national television audience.

"We line up pretty simple. We hand the ball off to the fullback up the middle and have some options. When we call a pass play, I panic," he said of his 8-3 team, a member of the Atlantic Coast conference. "But against Baylor, we're going to have to throw the ball."

The Bears, 7-4, boast a defense, featuring by All-American middle linebacker Mike Singletary, that allowed only 15 points a game.

"I think the game is a very good matchup," Ford said. "We are very similar. They like to play defense and we like to play offense."

Clemson, which ranked seventh in the nation in total defense and 10th against the rush, is led by All-American defensive tackle Jim Stuckey.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said the Southwest Conference Bears are similar to Clemson in that they would prefer to run the ball.

"Our passing is not very good this year. Our two quarterbacks are inexperienced and they throw like I do — not very well," he said jokingly.

The quarterbacks, redshirted freshman Mike Brannan and senior Mickey Elam, combined for only 1,106 passing yards, while completing only 53 of 152 passes, a 34 percent completion average.

But the Bears moved the ball for 2,586 yards on the ground, sparked by sophomore tailback Walter Abercrombie, who had 886 yards and seven touchdowns. Dennis Gentry added 511 yards while Brannan and Elam combined for 673 yards.

Clemson's ground attack is led by powerful fullback Marvin Sims, a 6-foot-4, 234-pounder who pounded out 728 yards and by tailbacks Lester Brown and freshman Chuck McSwain. Brown gained 529 yards and McSwain 444 yards.

Quarterback Billy Lott passed for 971 yards on 73 of 140 pass completions and ran for 444 yards.

"Clemson's basic philosophy is to pound it up the middle with their big fullback," Teaff said. "That big fullback (Sims) will message your head. Our people up inside are going to have to take care of that big moose."

"Basically, we feel we have got to stop him if we are to win the football game," he said.

Tampa Bay fans think Super Bowl

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Joyous Tampa Bay fans were talking about a spirited tailgate party in the parking lot after the game.

Jon Albert, a Tampa fan who just underwent surgery, couldn't stay away despite a 10-inch surgical scar.

"This is what we've been waiting for," he said. "I was with them when we lost 26 straight games and I wasn't sure this day would ever come. But it did and it feels great. We're going all the way; there ain't no stopping us now."

Julie Zufelt and her husband, Jimi, were so happy they said they might reroute a vacation trip to Las Vegas through Dallas so they could watch the Buc's play the Cowboys for the NFC championship, provided Dallas beats Los Angeles on Sunday.

"I just can't believe it, this is so wonderful," she said. "After watching all those losses to finally see this. Well, it's just great."

There were wild celebrations among the record-breaking 71,402 fans who jammed into Tampa stadium to watch the game. But police reported few incidents. Several fans tried to leap over stadium walls and tear down the goalposts after the victory, but thanks to security officers didn't even come close.

Stadium officials said the fans would have had a surprise in store had they had made it as far as the goalposts. The uprights were coated with motor oil, making a good grip impossible.

But not everyone caught Buc's fever. In fact, Duncan McCormick, who was trying to scalp tickets outside the stadium, was downright mad.

"I've got two tickets right here on the 50-yard line that I'm going to have to sell at face value," he said. "This is so new the fans don't know how to act. Everybody bought all these tickets and tried to sell them ... they were going to make a lot of money."

Four bobsled members injured during crash

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Four members of the U.S. Air Force's bobsled team were injured Saturday when their sled crashed while running practice trials leading to the selection of the U.S. Olympic team.

The sled's driver, Walter Hallett, 24, suffered head injuries and a broken collarbone, according to officials at Placid Memorial Hospital. Earl McNeil, 19, was admitted with head injuries.

Rod Gress, 25, was treated and released after banging his head during the crash. Officials said none of the four was hurt seriously. Hometowns of the four were not immediately available.

Washington Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann was an eyewitness to the accident.

"I thought about taking a run down on a sled, but after this — no way," he said.

Theismann, in Lake Placid to serve as "king" of the local winter carnival, said the sled went off at the Zig-Zag curve about halfway down the one-mile run.

"He (Hallett) was on his way up at the end (of the curve) instead of on his way down," the National Football League star said. "This convinced me to leave the sport to people who want to do it. Blitzes are easy compared to this."

The bob run has been described as the fastest track in the world and one foreign sledder was killed on the run in the 1960s when he was decapitated during a crash.

Forrest Gregg set to make Cincinnati aggressive, tough

CINCINNATI (AP) — Savior of the franchise or Simon Legree, Forrest Gregg has been commissioned to make the Cincinnati Bengals aggressive, conditioned and tough.

"I'm not in this business to have everyone love me. I'm out to win football games ... I could get three or four guys right now who would be more than happy to ring my chimes. But that doesn't bother me," said the 46-year-old coach when Paul Brown, vice president and general manager introduced him.

Gregg was hired Friday, the day after winning release from the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League. Before that he coached three years for the Cleveland Browns.

"He wasn't picked for anything as far as Cleveland was concerned. That's Mickey Mouse trivia," said Brown.

"There are a few hard and fast things that I believe in. I do believe in discipline. I do believe in conditioning. And I also think this is a game off aggressiveness," vowed Gregg.

News of the successor to "Mr. Nice Guy" Homer Rice quickly spread among the Bengals players. Some were not pleased. Some thought it was a good idea. Others withheld judgement.

Punter Pat McNally agreed it was time for a 180 degree change in coaching philosophies. "Just mental preparation won't work. We proved that. I think our record speaks for itself. We had to make a change. We've got to win," said McNally of the consecutive 4-12 seasons.

"Oh, my God," gasped reserve defensive end Mack Mitchell, who played three years for Gregg at Cleveland.

Rockets take win

HOUSTON (AP) — Rick Barry hit two free throws with eight seconds left and Calvin Murphy scored 33 points to lead the Houston Rockets to a 104-100 National Basketball Association victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Saturday night.

Houston led 102-100 with 14 seconds remaining when Philadelphia's Julius Erving went for a game-tying shot. Erving, who led all scorers with 36 points, was short and Barry, who was fouled as he pulled in the rebound, went to the free throw line.

Barry, who had 19 points, scored his 18,000th career point on his first basket of the second half.

Kentucky edges Notre Dame

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kyle Macy's three-point play with 4:06 remaining scuttled a Notre Dame comeback and helped propel second-ranked Kentucky to a 86-80 college basketball victory Saturday night over the third-ranked Fighting Irish.

The Irish, 7-1, had trailed 69-54 with 9:44 to go before two Stan Wilcox free throws started a 15-6 rally. Tracy Jackson's 12-footers at 5:28 completed the run to pull the Irish to within 75-69.

Jackson missed the front end of a bonus free throw opportunity at 4:21. Macy drove the lane for a basket and was fouled on the play by Jackson. The free throw by Macy, who finished with 21 points, pushed the Kentucky advantage to 78-69. The Wildcats, 11-1, held on from there as LaVon Williams and Jay Shlider each converted a pair of free throws for an insurmountable 82-69 advantage with 3:15 to go.

Kentucky played without Dwight Anderson, a starting guard who quit the team last Tuesday.

Missouri downs South Carolina

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Phil Bradley lofted a 28-yard touchdown pass to David Newman and scored on a 1-yard keeper as Missouri erupted for 17 points in a 5:09 stretch of the second quarter Saturday night and defeated 16th-ranked South Carolina 24-14 in the third annual Hall of Fame Bowl.

The Tigers spotted South Carolina an early 6-0 lead when Gary Harper's 20-yard touchdown pass to Zion McKinney capped a 69-yard drive following the opening kickoff. But the Gamecocks, who have never won a bowl game, only crossed midfield once more in the first half.

Ron Verrilli's 22-yard field goal at 7:45 of the second period sliced South Carolina's lead in half and ended a drive that began at the Missouri 11 and lasted 9:44. Then the Tigers tacked on two quick touchdowns.

Bradley's scoring pass to Newman came just 14 seconds after Verrilli's field goal. South Carolina's Horace Smith fumbled the kickoff at his 28 and Johnnie Poe recovered for Missouri. Newman then got behind defensive back Mark Bridges for an easy touchdown catch and a 10-6 lead.

The Missouri defense helped set up the next score. Dave Macoubrie tackled Percy Reeves at the 10 after a 10-yard kickoff return and, two plays later, Jerome Sally sacked Harper for a 10-yard loss. Jay Feltz then shanked a 25-yard punt out of bounds at the 30.

Four carries by James Wilder and Bradley's 6-yard pass to Andy Giber put the ball at the 1 and Bradley cracked across right guard for the touchdown.

Harper and Missouri's Gerry Ellis traded 11-yard touchdown runs in the third period after a driving rain began at halftime.

Missouri wound up with a 7-5 record while South Carolina finished 8-4, its winningest season in 76 years, but suffered its fourth loss in as many bowl appearances.

The Gamecocks made it look easy in their opening drive before Missouri's defense stiffened.

After Reeves' 27-yard kickoff return to the 31, All-American tailback

George Rogers carried six times for 24 yards and Harper completed three passes for 36. McKinney caught all three, outleaping Bill Whitaker in the rear of the end zone for the touchdown.

Missouri, which hurt itself with two penalties in the opening period, finally crossed midfield on the second play of the second quarter en route to Verrilli's field goal. The 18-play drive — the longest a 15-yard pass from Bradley to Giber — started with 1:59 remaining in the opening period and lasted more than half of the second quarter.

South Carolina's Eddie Leopard missed a 26-yard field goal attempt with five seconds left in the half, but the Gamecocks pulled to within 17-14 on a 62-yard march in the third quarter, capped by Harper's 11-yard keeper at 6:33.

Harper passed to McKinney for a two-point conversion, but the South Carolina quarterback was intercepted for the first time in nine games to set up Missouri's final score.

Linebacker Eric Berg returned the interception 10 yards to the South Carolina 28 and six plays later Ellis smashed through the right side from 11 yards out.

Berg, who was voted the game's top defensive performer, led an assault on Harper that sacked the South Carolina quarterback six times.

Rogers, who finished second nationally with 1,548 yards during the regular season, was the offensive star. He carried 25 times for 133 yards, his 10th consecutive 100-yard effort. Bradley, however, was named the game's most valuable player.

A crowd of 62,785, including more than 25,000 from South Carolina, turned out at 76,000-seat Legion Field. More than 68,000 tickets were sold.

Lee takes win over Foxes

By RICHARD VINCENT
Sports Writer

Clay Bateman and Gary Wood didn't start for the Midland Lee Rebels Saturday night at the Chaparral Center against the El Paso Jefferson Silver Foxes, but the two seldom-used reserves definitely had a say in the Rebels' too-close-for-comfort 62-61 come-from-behind victory.

In fact, it wasn't until midway in the fourth quarter that Lee coach Paul Stueckler dug deep into his bench and inserted Bateman, a smallish guard, and Wood, a thin wing.

But Bateman secured a pair of free throws at 1:12 that put the Rebels ahead to stay.

And Wood collared a key rebound in the waning seconds that eliminated any chance of victory for Jefferson.

This one had all the finesse of a head-on collision between two garbage trucks, but it was quite enough to help Lee improve its record to 10-8. The Rebels, 60-47 winners against this same Jefferson crew Friday night, begin District 5-4A action next Friday at Odessa High.

For the small but determined Silver Foxes who watched as their nine-point fourth quarter lead dwindled to nothing, the defeat was a bitter pill to swallow. They stand 8-9 for the season.

Tim Walker, the active guard, paced Lee with 18 points, 16 of which he accumulated in the first half. Also, Tim Fisher had 12.

Ten of Walker's markers came in the first quarter, and his double-dip layup at the buzzer boosted the Rebels to a 20-14 lead.

But Jefferson, riding eight points from Jeff Carlisle, who finished with 16, and six from substitute sparkplug Kenny Henderson, outscored the Rebels 23-18 in the second to trail by only one, 38-37, at halftime.

In the third quarter, Jefferson kept plugging away, outdistancing the Rebels 16-10, and taking one of their biggest bulges of the contest, 53-48, on Orly Andrade's layup with two ticks left in the third.

Then, they continued their solid, patient play and caused Lee some headaches with a tight press.

Suddenly, the visitors from the Sun City had themselves a 59-50 lead with 1:20 remaining.

Danny Rabb, who converted Lee's first free throws of the game at 4:13, cut the Foxes' cushion to seven before

David Duchene drilled both ends of a one-and-one that extended Jefferson's margin back to nine, 61-52.

But that was all the scoring for Jefferson, partially because of the scrappy defensive play of Wood, Bateman and David Keys.

Bateman drew a charging foul and Walker converted the opportunity into two points.

Wood then tallied easily after a great feed from Bateman before Bateman dropped in a 15-footer at 2:15 that carried Lee to within three, 61-58.

Norris Lane's swipe of a pass resulted in a fastbreak layup for Keys that closed Jefferson's lead to one.

Two miscues and a jump ball that Bateman and Walker caused, earned the Rebels their final chance.

After Bateman coolly canned his freebies, Jefferson had plenty of time and looked for one shot.

They held until the 20-second mark when a misfired layup by Beto Rodriguez was snorfed up by Wood and the game was in the bag for Lee.

MHS wins; Lee girls are beaten

The Midland High girls' basketball team opened the District 5-4A season on a bright note Saturday night with a 59-55 victory over the Abilene Cooper Cougars, but the defending district champion Lee Rebels weren't so lucky, dropping a 41-38 loss to Abilene High in the Key City.

For Midland High, 1-0 in district and 13-7 overall, Margaret Christian blazed the way with a 26-point outburst while Sandra Rock added 13 points and Jana Trolinder pocketed 10. The Bulldogs, by the way, were playing without the services of talented center LaShell Schrock, who's sidelined with a cartilage problem.

Lee, meanwhile, was involved in a barnburner, but just couldn't pull the contest out, dropping to 0-1 in district and 13-6 overall.

Gale Wilson and Leshia Watkins each scored 12 for the victors.

Midland High and Lee tangled Thursday night in a district clash at the Chaparral Center.

In junior varsity action, Yoyo Goodley's basket at the buzzer lifted Lee past Abilene, 47-45, as Lurdis Dunn netted 11 and Susan McGaha ten. The Midland High junior varsity dropped a 34-24 net to Cooper.

Bulldogs struggle past Fort Stockton by 59-56

FORT STOCKTON — The sluggish Midland Bulldogs had to battle down to the wire here Saturday night to post a narrow 59-56 victory over the Class AAA Fort Stockton Panthers in a non-district basketball game.

The victory gives Midland an 18-4 record going into next Friday's District 5-4A opener with Odessa Permian in the Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus.

Midland got a 16-point performance from Darrin Matlock while Anthony Carroll added 43 more to the attack. Herbert Johnson and Perry Bolger chipped in with 10 each while Shane Large ripped the cords for 23 points for the Panthers. Teammate Bill Howell added 12 more as the Bulldogs outscored the Panthers, 21-16 in the final period to pull out the victory.

In the preliminary junior varsity games, the Midland Bullpups took a 19-47 victory to bring their record to 15-2 on the year. Jackson had 11 points to be the only Midland player in the double figures while Sitton had 15 for Fort Stockton.

WACO, Texas (AP) — Terry Teagle scored 23 points Saturday as Baylor defeated Davidson College of North Carolina, 76-67 in a non-conference basketball game.

The Bears trailed by 8 points early in the game, but led at the half, 36-30, and never trailed again.

Greenwood Rangers capture Jayton tournament, but Rangerettes lose

JAYTON — The Greenwood Rangers put the wraps on the Jayton boys' basketball tournament championship Saturday night with an easy 64-44 victory over Coahoma.

Tommy Somers fired in 21 points for the Rangers, 13-1, and got help from Joe Mobley and Rex Evans with 12 points apiece.

The Rangers resume action Monday night against Reagan County at Big Lake.

The Rangerettes, however, didn't have things quite as nice, as they dropped the championship game of the girls' division to Floydada, 40-31.

Charlotte Pitcock scored 13 to pace the Rangerettes, 13-7 heading into their game Monday with Reagan County. Lisa Mobley added 11 to the attack.

Texas Christian takes 89-71 win

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The 24 points and 9 rebounds by Deekery Johnson lifted Texas Christian to an 89-71 victory Saturday night over Northeast Missouri.

The victory raised the Horned Frogs' record to 5-3 going into Thursday night's Southwest Conference opener against Texas A&M at home.

South Carolina posts cage win

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Zam Frederick hit two free throws with two seconds remaining Saturday to lead South Carolina to a 66-65 basketball victory over Vermont in the consolation game of the Iron Duke Classic.

Top-ranked Duke, host team in the tournament, and Cincinnati met in the championship game.

Frederick, who finished with 18 points, helped spark a Gamecock drive that whittled away a six-point Vermont lead in the closing minutes.

South Carolina was down 56-50 with 5:15 remaining, but substitutes Derrick Scott came off the bench and scored six quick points to put the Gamecocks within striking distance. Frederick brought them to within one point, 61-60, with 2:22 remaining and then stole the ball on an inbounds play and scored on a dunk.

Purdue, Tennessee set for Bluebonnet

HOUSTON (AP) — Purdue quarterback Mark Herrmann and Tennessee quarterback Jimmy Streater will be primary targets for opposing defenses in the AstroDome Monday night when the two teams meet in the 21st Bluebonnet Bowl.

Herrmann, the Big 10 all-time passing leader as a junior, is considered the key to the Boiler-makers' pass-oriented offense that rolled to a 9-2 record this season under third year head coach Jim Young.

Streater, a senior from Sylva, N.C., is Herrmann's counterpart for the Volunteers. Streater led the Volunteers to a 7-4 record and set a school total offense record in the process.

"We are a different team with Streater in the game," Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors said. "He gives us such flexibility because he can pass as well as run."

Streater established a UT total offense record of 4,807 yards in his career. He rushed 494 yards on 82 carries and passed 1,256 yards on 80 completions in 161 attempts during his senior campaign.

Herrmann goes into the game with even more impressive statistics. He finished the season with 6,431 career passing yards to surpass former Purdue quarterbacks Bob Griese and Mike Phipps.

"I just think Mark is the greatest passing quarterback in the country today," Young said. "He has the ability to throw every kind of pass. A lot of quarterbacks have come and gone but he's right at the same level for three years."

"The best thing about him is his accuracy. He's right there everytime."

Trojans pack offensive weapons

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Southern Cal, with a balanced pass-run blend featuring Heisman Trophy-winning tailback Charles White, is a carbon copy of past Trojan teams. But Ohio State, with new Coach Earle Bruce and outstanding quarterback Art Schlichter, bears little resemblance to previous Buckeye Rose Bowl teams.

"They're very versatile," Southern Cal linebacker Dennis Johnson said of the top-ranked Buckeyes. "They're not like other Ohio State teams because they can run and throw the ball. They're not afraid to take chances."

Schlichter's ability to throw the football and the Buckeyes' more wide-open offense is the most obvious change in Ohio State football, but not the only change.

When Woody Hayes brought his team to the Rose Bowl in past years, he was all business, apparently interested only in winning the New Year's Day classic. Bruce, who replaced Hayes last January, certainly wants to win the contest against the third-ranked Trojans. But he also wants his players to have a good time, saying the trip West should be a reward for the team's 11-0 season.

That approach, which led Bruce to allow the Buckeyes to participate in all the accompanying Rose Bowl activities for the first time, may be as wily as it is benevolent. Pacific-10 coaches who've been in the Rose Bowl in recent years have generally allowed their players a great deal of freedom — and the West Coast teams have won nine of the last 10 Rose Bowls, including the past five.

Southern Cal, with a 21-21 tie against Stanford the only blemish on its record this season, goes into Tuesday's game as a 7 1/2-point favorite, although ranked behind the Buckeyes. Past Rose Bowls would indicate, however, that odds mean little.

Both coaches shrug off the point spread, with Southern Cal's Robinson saying he finds it hard to believe and Bruce saying in essence that the oddsmakers didn't consider his team's "competitiveness."

"The fact that they've won 11 straight games sums up their ability pretty well," Robinson said of the Buckeyes. "But more than that I think they're one of the best teams we've played in my four years as coach."

"Most certainly Southern Cal is the best team we've played," said Bruce. "We've played some good teams this year, but USC is the most successful, the most talented and the best-coached."

Robinson, whose Trojans beat Michigan 17-10 last Jan. 1 in Pasadena, said the game against the Buckeyes may determine this year's national championship, but added that No. 2 Alabama was still well in the running. Bruce, while not saying the game should be for the national title, remarked that he believed it would turn out that way.

The matchup is interesting in that it pits teams with similar characteristics. Both have outstanding defenses, and both feature a fine blend of running and passing.

"I just think Mark is the greatest passing quarterback in the country today," Young said. "He has the ability to throw every kind of pass. A lot of quarterbacks have come and gone but he's right at the same level for three years."

"The best thing about him is his accuracy. He's right there everytime."

Some of the new Midland Housing Finance Corporation's low interest housing money can be used for purchasing a CHANDELLE condominium. This can mean a big savings with an opportunity to purchase with a 95% 30-year loan at a low 9-1/2% interest rate. Ask us about details for this program.

WHY BUY A "CHANDELLE" CONDOMINIUM? *

"CHANDELLE's" location at 2100 West Wadley is within minutes of downtown, theatres, recreational areas, shopping, restaurants, schools, churches, the college, and Airpark. At "CHANDELLE" you get an equity investment, the same tax breaks as a home owner, and greater control of your housing costs. # Midland Rape Crisis Center opens

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Every day, women of all ages, races and social and economic backgrounds suffer the trauma of rape and its aftermath. In 1978, 30 rapes were reported in Midland to the Midland Police Department and Sheriff Department.

Understanding rape is a necessary first step toward protecting ourselves. The new Midland Rape Crisis Center will help to meet this goal.

The center, which opened earlier this month, was formed by a group of concerned Midland residents to provide crisis counseling, supportive services, and follow-up counseling to rape victims and their families.

The center also hopes to launch a public education program to increase public awareness and the consciousness level of the crime of rape. It will serve as a referral agen-

The two full-time staffed members of the center are Gordon and Laura Chandler, assistant director.

They will supervise a group of volunteers who all go through a training program.

The MRCC is working with local law enforcement agencies, hospitals, and the court system. A non-profit Texas Corporation, the center is operating on a $39,000 five year grant from the Criminal Justice Division of the State of Texas. Other funding will be available through public donations.

Directing policy of the center is a board of directors consisting of Brenda J. Machost, president; Linda George, vice president; Doris Howbert, vice president; Bob Dutton, treasurer; Kay Maley, secretary; Sgt. Jerry Compton of the Midland Police Department, advisory board member; and Sheriff Dallas Smith, advisory board member.

p.m. Calls will then be forwarded to the home of a volunteer. When a victim calls, her needs will be assessed and counseling provided, informed Gordon.

Twelve volunteers have currently been trained, with 40 to 50 more to be recruited, according to Gordon.

Location of the center is being kept confidential for the protection of the rape victim, according to Gordon.

Programs will be presented to any requesting Midland community organization or school by MRCC and the Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department.

"These programs will express that rape is a hostile, forcible act committed against another, with the object of dominating, degrading and humiliating the victim," said Gordon.

"RAPE IS NOT AN ACT aimed for sexual gratification," she said. "It produces severe long lasting emotional trauma and social disruption in the victim and her family's lives."

Support of rape victims by their community will be urged by MRCC during their programs.

"Our program leaders will also give suggestions on self protection and preventive measures," said Gordon. "They will explain passive and active resistance of an attacker, but will not advocate either position. That decision must be made by the victim at the moment of attack."

She stressed that all contact with rape victims or their families is completely confidential. Communication with law enforcement agencies is encouraged, but the victim has cy for the rape victim and her family if further assistance is requested or deemed helpful.

"Through this program, it is hoped that a more accurate reporting of rapes will be obtained, resulting in increased prosecution," said Nan Gordon, director.

"ALSO, WE HOPE THAT the vulnerability of women and children as crime targets will be reduced."

A 24-hour hotline (682-RAPE) is available to the rape victim in efforts to carry out the center's intervention counseling, assistance and referrals.

THE HOTLINE IS being operated by paraprofessional volunteers who have undergone legal, counseling and medical training.

Volunteers are available at the center from 8:30 a.m. to 5 the final decision regarding this contact. If a victim chooses to deny law enforcement association, a description of the assailant given through the center may assist in a related case.

Statistics show that, nationally, only one out of every ten rapes or attempted rapes is reported. According to Sheriff Dallas Smith, one out of every four rapes or attempted rapes is reported in Midland.

"We think this lower number is due to the West Texas location and because of the high quality of the people," he said.

He added that the local police department and sheriff's office is very supportive of the Rape Crisis Center.

"Many people have misconceptions about what will happen if they report the rape to the police," he said. "Hopefully, the center will help in clearing up these misconceptions and let the victims know what they are faced with."

In 1977, nine rapes were reported to the police department. In 1978, 24 rapes were reported, a 167 per cent increase.

To the sheriff's department were reported four rapes in 1977, six rapes in 1978 and seven rapes through November, 1979. This showed a 17 percent increase over the past year.

"These figures show only the numbers who reported the crime," said Sheriff Smith. "We are also concerned with the 75% of those who do not report the rape."

Next: The myths and traumas of rape.

A victim speaks out

Editor's note: It can happen to anyone—and it happened to Sharon. The following is the true story of a Midland woman who was raped 28 years ago. Her name is fictitious.

It happened 28 years ago, but she remembers it as vividly as if it happened yesterday.

Then, Sharon was 25 years old, married and the mother of a two-year-old son.

It was late at night and she had driven downtown to pick up her husband who worked late hours. The office was located next to an army base.

"I was silly not to have locked my doors, but then I never thought about such things," she said.

A MAN CAME UP TO THE CAR, slipped inside, stuck a gun in her ribs and said, "let's go."

"The bad part about it was that he had earlier that night been picked up by the police for drunkenness. They told him to get out of town and let him go," she remembers.

The man ordered her to drive, an ordeal that was to end several hours and over 200 miles later.

"The gun was enough to frighten me, but I was terrified for my little boy who was also in the car," she said.

She attempted to get help and attract attention once by hitting a road sign, but that only infuriated the man, who then placed himself between Sharon and her child.

"I was so scared because he had my little boy standing up in the seat next to an open window. He threatened to push him out if I didn't do what he told me," she said.

After that, he ordered her to pull over onto a side road. She summoned up incredible amounts of courage then. And while her attacker raped her in the back seat, she soothed her little boy who was lying in the front seat by talking about the monster movie she and he had seen earlier that night on television.

"It was more important to me then that my child not see what was going on and get frightened," she said. I didn't even think about possibly being killed then. I was so much more worried about my baby." So she gave only passive resistance.

THE RAPIST THEN HAD SHARON drive back to the army base, where he threatened her if she reported the crime to anyone. She promised not to say a word to her husband or the police.

"I told him that I would tell my husband that I had car trouble and that was why I was late picking him up from work," she said.

"Of course, it was a lie. I immediately reported what had happened. But I suffered later for telling that guy that I would not tell anyone. It caused suspicion, not with the law, but with other people.

What happened next was almost as bad as the actual rape, according to Sharon.

"Immediately upon learning what had happened, my husband didn't want to touch me and offered no comfort at all," Sharon said. "He also did not want to file any charges against the guy because he didn't want any publicity at all.

"I filed charges after the police advised me to do so," she said. "We learned that the guy was in the army, had been in trouble in another state and had gone AWOL when he received a 'Dear John' letter from his girlfriend."

But the police told me that, regardless, there was no excuse for what he had done and that I should certainly file charges.

"It was in all the papers, though they never named me," she remembers. The authorities had to call in the FBI because she had driven over the state line. The military was called in because the rapist was in the army.

"WE ALSO HAD TO GO BACK to the county where the crime occurred and where I showed them the sign I had run over," she said.

"The law enforcement agencies all treated me nice, but that didn't help much," she said.

It was the public and gossip that hurt most.

"You wouldn't believe people's curiosity," she said. "I remember that a neighbor of mine that I scarcely knew hired a babysitter while she came to court, prepared to have a ringside seat and see a good case.

"She seemed real disappointed when the guy pleaded guilty and we didn't have to go to court," said Sharon. "Stuff like that hurt."

That and her husband's attitude was something that took more than a little while to get over, she said.

Finally, her attacker pleaded guilty to several charges, including rape, kidnapping, and assault. He was sentenced to only seven years in the penitentiary for kidnapping.

Since then, Sharon has learned to use a gun and says that she wouldn't hesitate to use it.

"I still have that fear—it's something you just don't get over," she said. "That night I had left my car door unlocked. I have never let that happen again. That night, it was hot and humid, so I had unrolled the windows. I will never do that again, either.

"I SLEEP ALONE NOW—but with a gun beside me. I took a course and know how to use it, too," she added.

She is only thankful that her attacker did not beat her or her child, though the mental anguish she suffered for her little boy was just as bad, she believes.

She also thinks that she might have battled her attacker if her son had not been present. "He knew he didn't need a gun, though, because my son's life was a greater weapon to be used against me." Police authorities in Midland, however, do not advise a woman whether to take active or passive resistance because each situation is different. A woman risks being killed either way.

They do offer brochures which advise a woman in self-protection methods and what to do in case of an attack.

Some of these are listed:

A woman should protect herself against rape at home by locking doors, installing bars on windows, hanging curtains, listing only initials and last name on mailbox, getting to know neighbors, using a peephole at the door, varying routine each day, leaving a light on, avoiding elevators, staying alert and having keys ready before getting home.

When walking, a woman can protect herself by walking at a steady pace, planning her route, never walking alone, screaming if in danger, breaking a window for help if needed, keeping arms free of bundles, carrying a whistle, and turning down offers of rides from strangers.

PROTECTION SHOULD BE MADE when driving or riding by locking car, checking the back seat, arranging for a ride with someone else whenever possible, looking alert, avoiding empty cars on subway or bus, and taking a cab at night.

The brochure from the police department advises women against carrying weapons, unless they have been trained to handle and use them.

If attacked, the police department advises to throw the attacker off guard by screaming, biting, punching, scratching or running.

Also, kick at the knees to throw him off balance and use judo or karate only if trained to do so.

Don't every try to defeat an attacker—just get away as fast as possible.

A course in self-defense is also helpful.

If attacked, try to remain calm and use your head.

Get help by telling the first person you meet; call a woman friend for support and to accompany you to the hospital or police; or call the Rape Crisis Center.

Decide if you want to report to police. If you do, don't douche, bathe, or change clothes—you risk destroying evidence.

Go to a hospital. A physical exam is necessary to prove rape—and to determine what injuries you have.

If the hospital does not routinely report rape, call the police right away.

If you don't report to police, do get medical help as soon as possible.

The Midland Rape Crisis Center is prepared to help with any immediate concerns, both medical and emotional.

They can also give information on what the police will require.

Refugee family faces better life

By PATSY GORDON
Lifestyle Writer

For years, the Cambodian people have been living with war, starvation and sickness because the Communist forces overran their country in 1975.

Last Christmas, the Vietnamese attacked Cambodia and drove Pol Pot and his Khymer Rouge soldiers to the mountains.

Although millions of Cambodians remain in the war-torn land, many of the country's refugees have been sent to Australia, New Zealand, Switzerland, Germany, France, Canada and the United States.

This holiday season finds You Tei Taing, his wife, and six of their children in the Tall City, doing very well. They arrived here Nov. 11, Veteran's Day, under the sponsorship of the First Christian Church.

The Taings related their past experiences through the aid of an interpreter, Chhing Hou Hong, 26, himself in this country only five months.

The Taing children are Sour, 19; Ung Heap, 20; Ngeong Hong, 12; Buoy, 6; Huoy, 22, and Ngoun Hong, 3. Another son, Ngoun Chour, remains in Cambodia. He was forced to join Pol Pot's army and his family is unaware of his whereabouts.

Eight other Cambodian families live in the duplex apartment complex with the Taings.

Taing, a chef at Sambo's Restaurant, was born in China. He studied the Chinese language in a church there, but still practices the Buddhist religion. All Cambodians are Buddhists, he explains.

Before the Communist came, Taing was a pig merchant. "I bought pigs in Battambang," where the family lived, "and sold them in Phnom Penh. I made enough to support my family. Everything was OK financially."

Taing also was a chef in Cambodia for 27 years before the Communist takeover.

After the Communist takeover, "We worked, but got no food," said Taing.

When the Taings first escaped Cambodia, they "spent three days walking with thousands of fellow refugees" on their way to "anywhere in Thailand."

After finally reaching Thailand, the Thai government sent them back to Cambodia, although they didn't know why, said Taing.

However, they escaped again and went back to Thailand. They found the situation had worsened there, but they stuck it out.

In his account of what happened, Taing said the refugees would be beaten if they went into a Thai village to buy rice and the Thai soldiers found them. Dogs were used to hunt them, he said.

After 52 days, they were put into a refugee camp called Mairut.

They stayed here three months before being flown to the United States by way of Bangkok and Japan, said Taing.

"I could not imagine, not dream, I would ever be in the United States. Now that I am, I am very happy," Taing said.

His wife, equally happy to be in this country, said, "In Cambodia, I had to work very, very hard. Many people were killed." This frightened her.

The interpreter left his parents, a brother and a sister in Cambodia. Another sister lives in Midland. He speaks English very well because he taught himself by listening to Radio Free Europe. Chhing Hou is employed as a meter reader by the City of Midland.

The family attends worship services at First Christian Church.

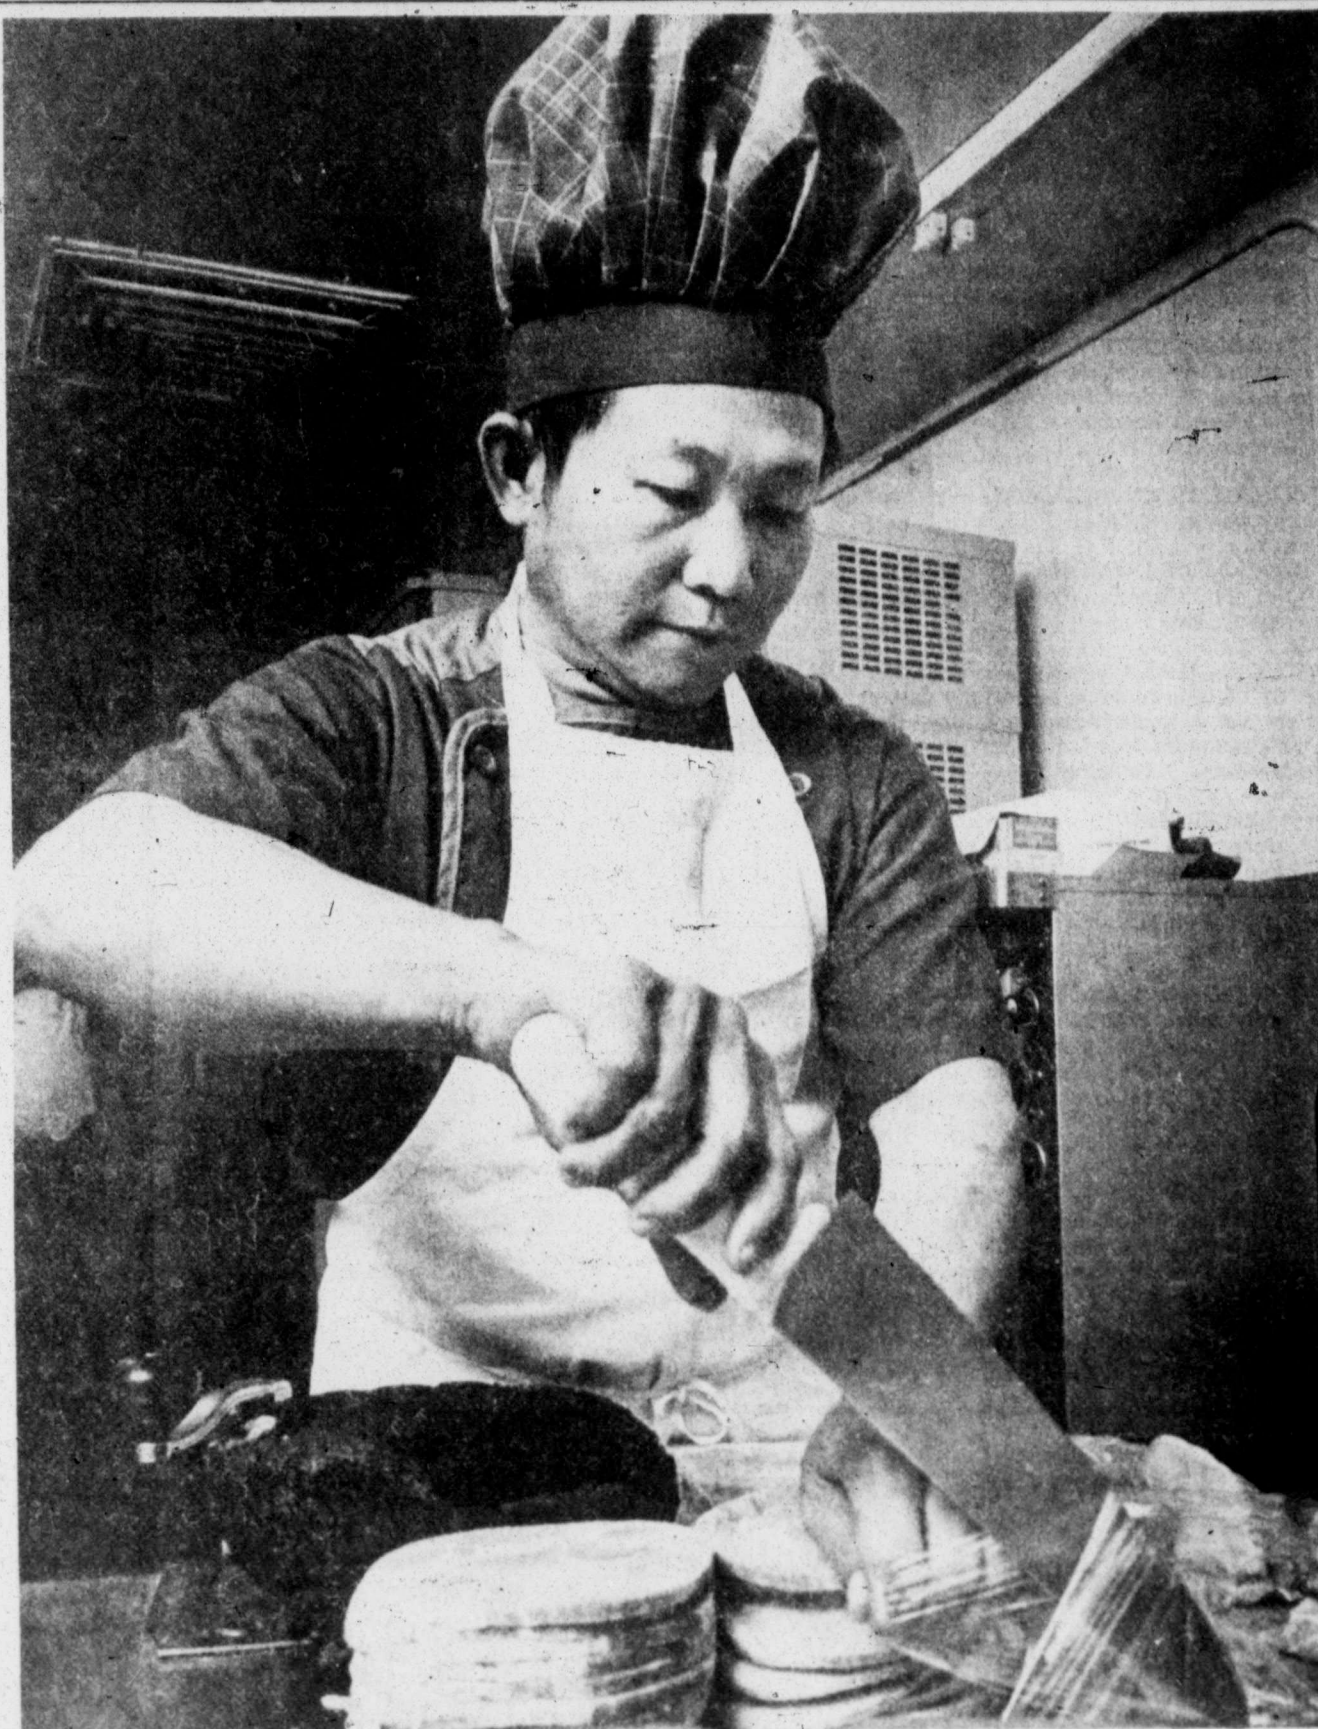

For recreation, they watch television and play records, said Marilyn Mauldin, who helps the Taing family adjust to their new life.

Sour said he wants his parents, to find a girl for him to marry, "a Mexican girl," he points out.

Huoy works at Mid-Tex, Ngeong Hong is a seventh grader at San Jacinto Junior High School and Buoy is in the first grade at Lamar Elementary.

According to Wendal Dishaw, You Tei Taing's employer, Orientals make the best employees. "Once they learn a job and enough of the English language, they make some of the best workers. They are never late, never call in sick and do their work while on the job," said Dishaw.

Stuffed lobster tails make luxurious New Year's meal

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I'm having an early supper for six on New Year's Eve before we go to a big party later in the evening. I'd like to serve a light but luxurious main dish. What do you suggest? — LOVE-TO-COOK.

DEAR LOVE-TO-COOK: There's a way to treat rock lobster tails for a light and lovely main course for just such a supper as you plan. With the lobster you might offer potato puffs, tiny green peas and crusty rolls. A tossed green salad could follow. For dessert, sherbet with a fresh-fruit sauce — flavored with a liqueur — would be refreshing. — C. B.

STUFFED ROCK LOBSTER TAILS

6 (each 4 ounces) frozen South African rock lobster tails
3 tablespoons butter
¼ pound (scant) mushrooms, thinly sliced (½ to ¾ cup)
½ of a large green pepper, finely diced (about one-third cup)
2 tablespoons flour

1 cup light cream cup medium sherry
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ cup grated (medium-fine) Swiss cheese
¼ cup fine soft bread crumbs

Generously cover frozen lobster tails with boiling water; bring water to a boil and boil 3 minutes. Drain at once and cool under cold running water. With a kitchen scissors, cut away soft underside membrane; remove meat, slice and reserve; reserve lobster shells.

In a medium saucepan melt butter; add mushrooms and green pepper; stirring often, cook briskly so mushrooms won't exude their liquid; stir in flour; stir in cream. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and bubbling. Stir in sherry, salt and paprika. Off heat, stir in reserved lobster meat. Spoon mixture into reserved lobster shells. Place in a foil-lined shallow pan. Stir together cheese and crumbs; sprinkle over lobsters. Cover and chill. Before serving, bring to room temperature. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until thoroughly hot — about 15 minutes. If topping is not brown enough, broil briefly. Note: As a garnish, you may want to use extra fresh mushrooms, raw and sliced.

Refugees doing well

Dishaw was stationed in Thailand from 1973 to '74 with the United States Air Force. He was manager of the NCO Club and Officers Club there. "I had 563 Thai employees in the club complex," said Dishaw.

The restaurant manager is getting ready to employ Taing's wife, Sok Cheng Lim, as a dishwasher.

"Taing is picking up English very well. I am able to spend more time with him now," said Dishaw, who also manages the Odessa Sambo's. "He's only been here three weeks and is oriented where everything is in the restaurant."

"I only have to show him (Taing) one time how to do something and I don't have to show him again," said Dishaw. "The first thing he learned was how to slice ham according to the correct weight."

Taing, said Dishaw, also is "teaching American cooks how to clean up after themselves. He never does anything without cleaning up afterwards."

This country gave Taing and his family a chance to escape from inhumanity. He repays this kindness by being a loyal, dependable citizen.

He gets the bird...birdseed, that is

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — One of Sen. Howard Baker's Christmas gifts was strictly for the birds. The Senate-Minority leader received 120 pounds of birdseed from his wife for Christmas.

But the gift wasn't a gag. Baker is an avid photographer, and birds are one of his favorite subjects. "The seed will bring the birds in and I can get a bird's eye view of them," the Republican presidential hopeful said.

Baker's birdseed was one of several unusual celebrity Christmas presents turned up last week.

Singer Brenda Lee's husband gave her a year's supply of socks. Miss Lee said, "I wear socks to bed. My husband, Ronnie, accuses me of wearing everything but a pair of gloves when I sleep. Guess I'm not too romantic." But she also got a bracelet decorated with diamonds and rubies.

First Lady points out discrimination to hubby

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter was huddled with his inner circle of advisers when Rosalynn Carter made an observation, one that had troubled her before. The first lady quietly scribbled a note and passed it to her husband.

Mr. President, she said, look around. There are no women and no minorities in this room.

Until recently, at least, women held no prominent positions on the staff of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy; the top-ranking woman on his campaign staff has known the senator for only a month.

Carter and Kennedy have one thing in common when it comes to women's issues: neither counts a woman among his most trusted advisers.

The same is true of California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., whose top advisers on his campaign staff and in the state capital are men. He has, however, appointed a number of women to important jobs on his gubernatorial staff.

Carter relies heavily on his wife, of course, but women who hold high-level jobs in the White House chafe at the limited role they and other women play in high-level discussions.

The president meets each morning with a group of male advisers, some of whom are not even senior staff members.

Annexation secretary Sarah Weddington, the two women on Carter's senior staff, are excluded.

Joanne Howes, deputy campaign manager for Kennedy, says the senator also lacks women among his closest advisers.

"He's the first to admit that in the past his personal staff was very heavily male," said Ms. Howes, 35, who earns $40,000 a year and has been working for the campaign a month.

"It's not an uncommon thing. I think people get into ruts."

However, White House press secretary Jody Powell takes exception to even a comparison between Carter and Kennedy, saying Carter's record is so much better in hiring women.

The bottle label battle

Copley News Service

A few weeks ago a story came across one of the wire services, dateline Washington, saying that U.S. District Judge Gerhart Gesell had ordered "concise explanations" to identify "principal grape types" and other data on wine labels.

Three consumers had filed suit challenging 1978 regulations handed down by the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. One key ingredient of that ruling raised the minimum varietal content of varietal wines from 51 to 75 percent as of Jan. 1, 1983.

It was a rule that both the BATF and the wine industry agreed to, and it came after more than four years of public hearings -- hearings that produced 24 volumes of testimony. And with a background of 44 years regulation of the wine industry, BATF felt certain the rules would suit everyone -- wine maker, government and consumer.

The three who challenged the regulations claimed that by permitting "only" 75 percent minimum varietal content wine makers could do up to 25 percent "undisclosed blending," which was misleading to the consumer.

The wire story indicated that four years of hearings are out the window in a 90-minute presentation to a judge, and one industry source said a number of wine makers are irate that Gesell would ignore the last four years of hearings.

However, the wire story may have been a bit off base. Lawyers for the wine industry understand the judge's order to mean that if a wine is made up of at least 75 percent of the grape named on the label, and if the label says something like, "At least 75 percent of the wine in this bottle is made from the grape named," the BATF would approve it.

Louis Martini, interviewed about the latest turn of events, said one interpretation of the judge's order is that the wine could list on the label all the grape varieties used; i.e.,

This Cabernet Sauvignon is made from 77 percent Cabernet Sauvignon, 20 percent Merlot and 3 percent Cabernet Franc. Presumably this would satisfy the three consumers who filed suit.

However, Martini said such a ruling is hard to accept: "My objection to that solution is that once you're up to 75 percent with the major varietal, the other grapes used in a particular wine are only one of many factors that make up the wine.

"I think the judge may have understood a varietal wine as the simple squeezings of a grape, but there's more to it than that. There are so many other factors that go into what a wine finally is -- things such as the length and temperature of fermentation, the skin contact time, how long and in what you age the wine. I don't see how this one single fact -- the other grapes in the bottle -- is any more meaningful to the consumer than, for example, the oak treatment.

"Also, blending is not an insidious thing. It is done to improve quality, not to fool the consumer."

Martini has long named a number of his wines "California" rather than designate them as coming from Napa or Sonoma, simply because his grapes come from both counties.

"I make better wine by putting grapes from both areas together," he says, an indication that quality is more important to him than in the name on the label.

Unfortunately for Martini, however, the 75 percent minimum content that will be mandatory (presumably) by 1983 could force Martini to make a lesser wine. Here's why:

One of the finest wines Martini makes year after year is his Barbera. The wine is very rich and robust, a perfect accompaniment to Italian food, and it ages handsomely.

For years Martini has made his Barbera by a judicious blending of not more than 60 percent Barbera grapes and a number of other undisclosed grapes.

Woman is part of A&M's Singing Cadets

One woman appears on stage each time the Singing Cadets, Texas A&M University's 70 voice male glee club, gives a performance. She is Nancy S. Theeman, the cadet's pianist-accompanist.

The Singing Cadets will perform in Midland Jan. 7 at 7 p.m. in Lee High School auditorium.

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Tickets can be obtained by calling Jack Burns, Western State Bank, at 697-3137; J. C. Rainey, 682-7979; or Pete Bauerlein, Midland National Bank, at 683-2751. To receive tickets in advance, write Burns at Western State Bank, 1030 Andrews Highway, Midland, Texas 79701.

Tickets will also be available at the door on the night of the performance.

Originally from Bethesda, Maryland, Ms. Theeman joins the group this year to become the third accompanist the Cadets have had in the last 20 years. Along with her duties as Singing Cadet accompanist, she directs the Texas A&M Century Singers, the University's 65 voice mixed chorus.

Nancy S. Theeman

Since this is her first year with the Cadets, she is considered a "buffo" by the men in the group. "Buffo", an operatic clown, is the title given to first year members of the Singing Cadets.

She studied music at the University of Rochester, Eastman School of Music, the University of Manchester in England and Colorado College. She sang in the National Cathedral Choir in Washington, D.C., and also with vocal groups at both Eastman and Manchester.

Although the piano is her main instrument, she is quite at home with various members of the string family as well.

Cop does not want company

NEW YORK (AP) — John J. Kenny says he hopes "nobody shows up" for the New Year's Eve party that he's planning to attend.

Kenny, a city policeman, is planning security for this year's welcome to 1980 at Times Square. Some 50,000 revelers are expected.

This year, using barricades, the police will try to divide the crowd that traditionally jams Seventh Avenue and Broadway from 42nd to 46th streets. Instead of letting the partygoers form a single throng.

But Kenny still says: "I wouldn't tell my friends to come." Last year, he says, one person was stabbed, 40 people were robbed, and 40 more lost purses and wallets.

Women get 'for men only' posts in '79

NEW YORK (AP) — It was not politics as usual in 1979 — a year in which a woman became prime minister of England and others of her sex were challenging the "For Men Only" tradition in government leadership all over the globe.

When Margaret Thatcher and the Conservative Party swept to victory in Britain's general election, she became the first woman to be prime minister in any European country. The new resident at No. 10 Downing Street in London is a 53-year-old Oxford-educated chemist and lawyer.

In the United States, another political first was scored when Jane M. Byrne was elected first woman mayor of Chicago. Mrs. Byrne, 44-year-old Democrat, took over the running of the nation's second largest city after winning a landslide victory.

And in this country, President Carter nominated 54-year-old Judge Shirley Mount Hufstедler, of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit, as Secretary of the new Department of Education.

A DENVER LAWYER and former deputy attorney general, Jean Eberhart Dubofsky, 37, was appointed the first woman Supreme Court justice in the 103-year history of Colorado.

Not only in government, but in other fields, women were still breaking barriers.

Betsy Ancker-Johnson, former assistant secretary of commerce for science and technology, was elected the first female vice president of General Motors Corp. Dr. Ancker-Johnson, 51, is in charge of the company's environmental activities staff.

Beverly Sills, 50, former prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera, took over as new director of the New York City Opera.

When she was named cadet regimental commander at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, Cadet 1st Class Linda Johansen, 21-year-old senior, became the first woman to command an entire cadet corps at any of the nation's four service academies. Lt. j.g. Beverly Kelley at 26 became the first woman in history to command a U.S. military vessel. She assumed duties as commanding officer of a Coast Guard cutter, the 95-foot Cape Newagen, which has a 14-member, all-male crew.

Ten years after women were first admitted to Yale University, and for the first time in the 101 years the Yale Daily News has been published, a woman took over the editorship. The editor-in-chief is Anne Gardner Perkins, a 20-year-old junior from Baltimore, a history major.

CATHLEEN BLACK, APPOINTED publisher of New York magazine, at 35 became the nation's first woman publisher of a major weekly magazine.

Being one of the few women ordained as rabbis is a novelty in itself, but Rabbi Linda Joy Holzman is also the first woman in the nation to be the presiding rabbi of a temple. The spiritual leader of the Beth Israel congregation in Coatesville, Pa., is a 1979 graduate of the Reconstructionist Rabbinical College in Philadelphia.

Mother Teresa, Calcutta's "saint of the gutters," won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her work among the poor of India. The sixth woman ever to be so honored, the 69-year-old Yugoslav-born Roman Catholic nun was recognized for "her work in bringing help to suffering humanity."

The Ladies' Home Journal honored as Women of the Decade Marian Anderson, Joan Ganz Cooney, Betty Ford, Helen Hayes, Katharine Hepburn, Barbara Jordan, Elisabeth Kubler Ross, Sylvia Porter, Beverly Sills and Barbara Walters, as well as Margaret Mead posthumously.

Katherine Dunham, 70, pioneer in black dance, received the Albert Schweitzer Music Award for her contribution to the arts and to humanity.

Barbara S. Askins, a chemist at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., was honored as Inventor of the Year because of the patent she was granted for a method of getting clear pictures from old negatives. She is the first woman Inventor of the Year chosen for work she did alone.

IN SPORTS, TOO, 1979 was a year of triumphs and firsts, with women setting records and starting to attract the kind of national interest and media attention formerly reserved for male athletes.

Joan Benoit, 21, topped the women's division of the Boston Marathon, setting a record for women there of 2 hours, 35 minutes, 15 seconds.

At Wimbledon, Martina Navratilova won her second consecutive title in the women's singles. The 22-year-old Czechoslovakian tennis star, who defected to the United States four years ago, defeated 24-year-old Chris Evert Lloyd, the 1974 and 1976 titleholder.

Billie Jean King and Navratilova captured the women's doubles crown, a win that brought the 35-year-old Mrs. King a record 20th Wimbledon championship. Her victory followed by less than 24 hours the death of 87-year-old Elizabeth Ryan, with whom she had shared the record of 19 wins since 1973.

LATER IN THE year Tracy Austin returned to classes at Rolling Hills, Calif., High School after beating Lloyd, to become the youngest singles champion in U.S. Open history.

Defying powerful currents, jellyfish and sharks, Diana Nyad became the first person to swim from the Bahamas to Florida. The 30-year-old marathon swimmer from New York completed the endurance test in 27 hours, 38 minutes, covering more than the 60-mile straight distance because of the fast-flowing Gulf Stream.

Two women sports stars took time out from winning tournaments to star in wedding ceremonies: Tennis player Chris Evert, 24, married British tennis player John Lloyd, also 24; and supergolfer Nancy Lopez, 22, exchanged vows with television sportscaster Tim Melton, 29.

Susan Ford, 21, daughter of former president Gerald Ford, exchanged marriage vows with Charles Vance, 37, a Secret Service agent she fell in love with when he guarded the Ford family.

Another bride who wed her bodyguard was Patty Hearst, 25, who married 33-year-old Bernard Shaw. He was one of her personal bodyguards when she was free on bail during the years following her kidnapping and subsequent imprisonment for taking part in the armed robbery of a California bank.

SO MUCH FOR the good news of 1979.

On the other hand, the number of states ratifying the Equal Rights Amendment remained at 35, three short of the number needed.

With Congress last year having extended the deadline for passage to June 1982, the National Organization for Women served notice at its 12th annual conference that it would push harder to influence legislators in states that have refused to ratify, and to help elect those who support it.

For the first time in the nation's history, more women have jobs than do not have, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. But, on the average, women earn 59 cents for every dollar earned by a man.

Among findings of studies sponsored by the Carnegie Corp.: median weekly income of women full-time workers was 73 percent of men's pay in professional and technical jobs and 45 percent in sales jobs. Median income for women college graduates was $10,861 while male counterparts earned $17,891.

Women are 2.3 percent of executives earning $25,000 or more annually, 6.4 percent of construction workers, 2.1 percent of locomotive engineers, 3.4 percent of surgeons and 5 percent of the managers, proprietors, and officials earning more than $10,000 annually.

According to the report, "The rate of occupational segregation by sex is exactly as great today as it was at the turn of the century, if not greater."

Populace grew 700 million in 10 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's population grew by some 700 million people during the decade of the 1970s, it was asserted last week.

The Population Reference Bureau, Inc., a nonprofit research organization based in the nation's capital, said the population is expected to expand by an even greater margin in the 1980s. Bureau demographers estimate that 900 million people will be added to the world population in the decade beginning on Jan. 1.

It said global population now stands at approximately 4.4 billion — up from 3.7 billion in 1970.

"Although the world's population growth has fallen slightly," the bureau said, "the number of people in their reproductive years continues to rise, particularly in the poor countries of the developing world which make up three-quarters of global population."

Class books are of past

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — "Year-books are a thing of the past — that's what they're all about," says a publisher's promotional slogan.

But the traditional high-school memory book in recent years has become very much a thing of the present.

The modern yearbook began as a "class book," a pictorial listing of graduates, their names and perhaps career goals. Over the years, the book has come to contain class mottos, activities and sports, and has expanded to include all students, not just seniors.

But the classic American yearbook has been characterized by blocks and rows of well-scrubbed, stiffly posed student portraits, alphabetized, yet somehow interchangeable. The jocks, the beauty queens and the bookworms might have been cloned from the pages of last year's book or, as easily, from those of another school's. Across the land, glee clubs and football teams alike would spend posterity frozen left-to-right.

In yearbooks past, high-school life was reduced largely to faces and vital statistics, in a format that reflected but little flavor of the institution itself. Still, they were treasures enough — to those who had the memories to fill in the margins.

But, in the last decade, the availability of several recent technologies and a lively interest in the yearbook as a journalistic enterprise have turned the American yearbook from a stilted class catalog to a slick, sophisticated, innovative publication.

The leaders boast professional-looking color photography, offset printing, the latest in graphic design and sharp, cohesive copy.

Some recent high-school yearbooks are "as good as any publications on the market," says Les Howell, executive director of the National Scholastic Press Association.

The NSPA sponsors educational workshop around the country to keep yearbook staffs abreast of the resources available to them. Howell, himself a former high-school yearbook advisor, supervises NSPA's yearbook judging.

Many of the books he reviews, says Howell, are "virtually professional in quality" and more sophisticated than ever.

But the improvement, he says, is not to be attributed to professional printers and photographers. In fact, most schools rely very little on professional services for what goes into their yearbook, according to Howell.

He attributes the trend to the greater accessibility of schools to technology that was formerly available only to professionals, for reasons either of cost or complexity.

Happy New Year!!! We stand, like Janus, the two-faced doorkeeper of heaven, looking backward into 1979 and forward into 1980. We begin a new decade and hope fervently, that personally and as a nation, it will be a good one. As a newcomer, I have some hopes and wishes for Midland, also.

I hope that the people will continue to smile and greet you on the street. If you move here from a large city, it is totally unexpected and thoroughly appreciated and imparts a warm feeling. The very first thing my husband told me about Midland, was that people actually smile and say, "hello."

I hope that the community continues to appreciate and support the Midland-Odesa Symphony and Choral and Theatre Midland. They are cultural endeavors of superb quality and have enriched our lives.

I hope that the salespeople continue to be friendly and helpful and that those providing services continue to be as prompt and caring.

I hope that all its citizens will be treated equally under the law.

My wishes for 1980, for Midland, would include a wish that the neighborhoods would feel a sense of community with block parties or gatherings where we might get to know one another.

I also would wish that all streets in all neighborhoods would be paved and that residents would take pride in cleaning up alleys and vacant lots.

I would wish for the minimum of 30 minutes on all parking meters in the downtown area. What can you possibly do in 12 minutes?

On behalf of the working people downtown, I would wish better drainage of the rain water in that area.

Finally, I would wish that everyone could adopt this resolution for 1980. It was written by Lloyd Shearer in 1975.

"Resolve to be tender with the young, compassionate with the aged, sympathetic with the striving and tolerant of the weak and the wrong. Sometime in life, you will have been all of these."

RRC's Nugent believes long gas plunge may be at end

Railroad Commissioner James E. "Jim" Nugent said a production spurt in late summer may lead to the snapping of a six-year slump in Texas natural gas output in 1979.

"Significantly higher natural gas production in July, August and September gives us the happy prospect that our state will equal or exceed last year's production levels," Nugent reported during the Commission's statewide hearing to determine oil and gas production rates for January 1980.

"If the production figures for October, November and December reflect the surge, as I predict they will, it will mark the end of six consecutive years of production decline," he noted in pointing to the 27 percent plunge in gas output from 9.6 trillion cubic feet in 1972 to seven trillion in 1978, or 430 billion cubic feet per year.

By offsetting such an annual loss, said Nugent, the equivalent of 210,000 barrels of oil per day is added to the country's domestic petroleum supply.

Nugent said the production upturn appears to be attributable to a combination of factors, including provisions of the federal Natural Gas Policy Act allowing higher prices for interstate gas and mechanisms to facilitate the movement of gas into the interstate market.

Commission statistics indicated that 33.7 percent of Texas' marketed production in 1978 went out of state and that 37.6 percent flowed to out-of-state markets in the first nine months of 1979, he related.

"As long as the needs of Texas consumers are adequately met," Nugent continued, "we can be nothing but proud and pleased to supply excess gas to the interstate market. It helps the nation to offset oil imports, it reflects positively on our state tax revenues and it allows producers the cash-flow necessary to continue exploration efforts."

But, Nugent emphasized, "I do not want to see Texans in the middle of a producing gas field, out of gas, and cold because our resources have been auctioned off to the interstate market."

The Commission must utilize its limited control over gas movements, "wisely and judiciously," to help ensure that energy needs of Texas citizens are met, he asserted.

Nugent reported a brief curtailment of gas service to six categories of customers of Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. occurred earlier this week because of cold weather. Such occurrences, he said, "betray any sense of security we may have about the adequacy of supplies."

Also, he stressed, "they allow us to preview a specter which could again become real: severe need in Texas co-existing with massive exports (of gas) to northeastern customers."

A Tenneco Inc. worker prepares to open a valve at the Petro-Tex chemical plant on the Houston Ship Channel. When an expansion program is completed in early 1980, this Tenneco plant will have a capacity of 280,000 metric tons of methyl-t-butyl ether, commonly called MTBE, which is blended with unleaded gasoline to increase its octane rating.

Aminoil USA announces structure reorganization

HOUSTON — In a major reorganization of Aminoil USA, Inc.'s management structure, George Trimble, Aminoil's chairman, president and chief executive officer Saturday announced the following promotions:

—Paul W. Cain, formerly vice president, production, was named to the newly-created position of executive vice president — Operations, with responsibility for the production, exploration and land departments.

—Martin W. McGarry, formerly vice president, natural gas liquids, was named to the newly-created position of executive vice president — Marketing, with responsibility for the marketing and natural gas liquids departments.

—James J. Keating, executive vice president, was named to the new position of executive vice president — Finance, and chief financial officer, with responsibility for the controller's, treasurer's, tax, internal audit, and corporate information systems departments.

—John H. Tobin, controller, was elected vice president.

—Charles P. Luper, formerly manager of petroleum engineering, was named manager — Production, replacing Cain as department head. —Cain joined one of Aminoil's predecessor companies in 1966 after holding various operating and financial positions with mining companies.

McGarry joined an Aminoil predecessor company in 1969 after 14 years in various production and exploration positions with Shell Oil Co.

Keating joined American Independent Oil Co. in 1962 and, after holding various accounting and marketing positions, became vice president, marketing in 1977. He has been an executive vice president of Aminoil USA since July 1978.

Tobin joined American Independent as controller in 1974 and was named controller of Aminoil USA in August 1978.

Luper joined an Aminoil predecessor company in 1957 and has held a number of increasingly important production department positions, including chief petroleum engineer.

Trimble said the change would significantly strengthen the coordination and direction of Aminoil's key exploration, production and marketing operations, provide increased focus on financial management, and be a major step in long range planning for management succession.

Association reports overall increase

By MAX B. SKELTON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Year-end statistics on domestic use of natural gas and petroleum are in rather sharp contrast.

The American Gas Association reports an 8.4 percent overall increase in natural gas utility sales, with the 46.5 million year-end customers representing a 1.6 percent gain over 1978.

The American Petroleum Institute meanwhile was reporting that January-November demand for petroleum products was down 2 percent, from 18,761,000 million to 18,377,000 million barrels a day. Gasoline demand was down 4.8 percent, from 7,408,000 million to 7,050,000 million barrels a day.

The API report had domestic crude production declining 2.4 percent, from 8,712,000 to 8,502,000 million barrels daily, while total oil imports, crude and products, were slipping only from 8,129,000 barrels a day to 8,123,000.

Charles J. DiBona, API president, said imports provided the nation 44 percent of its oil in 1979, compared with 23 percent in 1978.

"During the 1970s, the United States fueled the growth of its economy with imported oil," DiBona said.

"The challenge of the 80s will be to replace those imports with increased production of U.S. energy from all sources, conservation, oil, natural gas, coal and nuclear power."

George H. Lawrence, president of AGA, said there are sound reasons for optimism and enthusiasm in the natural gas utility industry in that events of 1979 heightened long term expectations, including improved gas supply and demand prospects.

Lawrence said, however, the industry realizes there is still much to be done if gaseous energy is to make its essential contribution in achieving the nation's priority goal of energy independence.

But in 1979, he said, some 225,000 energy users converted their home heating to natural gas, and, on the demand side, the industry was able to offset or "back out" imported oil at an annual rate of 450,000 barrels a day.

Lawrence said 1979, the first full year of the Natural Gas Policy Act, was a year of improved gas supply for all markets. Without question, he said, the 1978 act exceeded expectations in spurring new natural gas exploration.

"Natural gas well completions in 1979 have increased sharply in many areas and will finish nearly 13 percent higher overall than in 1978," he said.

"Many experts are predicting gas well completions in 1979 will achieve their highest level in U.S. history."

Lawrence viewed as especially encouraging sharply escalated activity in areas of high gas potential, such as offshore gas completions which were said to be up nearly 30 percent.

"A record year was set in this area estimated by the Potential Gas Committee to have 20 percent of potential U.S. gas supplies," Lawrence said.

Lawrence said another area favorably affected by the natural gas pricing act has been "deep gas," gas below 15,000 feet.

"The early prospect of deregulation of the wellhead price of deep gas, a prospect which became reality in November, has led to approximately a 15 percent increase in gas well completions in those deep horizons," he said.

The Potential Gas Committee estimates the deep horizons also hold 20 percent of domestic gas supplies.

Lawrence said the 1978 act, in addition to providing effective incentives for the increased production of conventional natural gas, also permitted interstate market purchasing to tap existing surplus supplies of conventional gas in the intrastate market.

Through a reasonable approach to implementation of the provisions allowing the intrastate pipeline sales to the interstate market, Lawrence said, federal authorities have greatly accelerated such transactions.

"This flow has reached levels as high as 1 billion cubic feet per day, contributing both to enhanced curtailment protection for high priority users and to the displacement of imported oil in the industrial sectors of the economy," he said.

Center offers courses

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer three oil-industry related courses next week at the center's headquarters, 105 W. Illinois St., Midland.

"Reserve Recognition Accounting is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Jan. 7.

The course will be instructed by Dr. Robert J. Koester, associated professor of accounting at Texas Tech University. It is designed to explore reserve recognition accounting requirements for oil and gas producing companies.

Fee for the course is $125. "Hydrogen Sulfide in Drilling" will be offered Jan. 7-9. Classes will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day.

Don Carter, safety consultant with Pollution Control Rentals, Inc., and a specialist in H<sub>2</sub>S detection and survival training, will instruct the course. The fee is $275, including materials.

The three-day course, offered in cooperation with Prentice and Records Enterprises, Inc., is designed for personnel directly or indirectly related to H<sub>2</sub>S in the drilling industry, including rig crews, service personnel, and operator's representatives.

"Drilling Fluids School" is slated Jan. 7-9, with sessions each day from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The instructor will be Neal Adams, associate of Prentice and Records Enterprises.

The fee is $275, including a set of notes and other materials.

The three-day course is designed for engineers, drilling foremen or mud engineers. It will discuss the basis of drilling fluids and their purposes and provide an understanding of drilling fluids, attendant equipment and related problems.

Tubular business better

WASHINGTON — Business for the domestic producers of seamless specialty steel tubular products was slightly better during the first nine months of 1979 than for the same period in 1978, it was announced by the Committee of Seamless Specialty Tubing Producers, American Iron and Steel Institute.

According to industry and government records, shipments by the domestic industry of 743,000 tons were up by 5.6 percent, exports at 47,000 tons were down 14.5 percent and imports at 68,000 tons remained the same as last year's level. Apparent market consumption or supply at 764,000 tons was up by 6.6 percent.

This pattern is considerably different than the trade flow pattern of other types of steel tubular products, where domestic shipments were down 5.1 percent, exports up 36.4 percent, imports down 8.5 percent and apparent consumption or supply down 9.1 percent.

Although seamless specialty steel tubular products only account for about 1 percent of the steel tonnage output of the United States steel industry and about 12 percent of the total steel pipe and tubing shipments, the current annual sales value of the output of the domestic seamless specialty tube industry is about a billion dollars.

Currently about a fifth of the output is pressure oriented, with primary markets being boiler, heat exchanger tubing and specialty piping in electrical and industrial power generation and oil and gas refining and processing. Imports of this type of tubular products are rather high—currently at 32.0 percent of apparent consumption during the first nine months of 1979.

The other four fifths of the output is mechanical tubing, with primary markets as starting stock for anti-friction bearings, and functional parts of automotive, industrial, construction, transportation, mining, drilling and materials handling equipment. Imports of mechanical tubing during the first nine months of 1979 were 4.2 percent of apparent consumption, with just about all of it being alloy steel bearing tubing.

Fiber Glass to expand

BIG SPRING — Fiber Glass Systems, Inc., of Big Spring announced it will build manufacturing and office facilities in San Antonio which will employ approximately 200 persons.

V. F. Michael, company president, said the new plant will be engaged in the manufacture of products primarily for the petroleum industry, specifically high pressure fiber glass pipe and fittings, down hole tubing and casing, and high pressure injection lines.

He said Fiber Glass Systems plans to transfer no more than 20 employees from its Big Spring headquarters to San Antonio.

Construction will begin in January on acreage at Highway 90 and 36th Street. Fiber glass pipe production is expected to start before the end of 1980.

The fittings plant and research and development facility will be in operation by the end of 1981.

Midland area sales are handled from Midland offices by Bob Michael, vice president, and Jack Kreyenbuhl, district manager.

Weekly loss shown, but count far ahead of '78

Drilling activity in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico reported a decrease in activity by 12 operations, as Reed Rock Bit Co. counted 303 rigs making hole in the two-state area last week.

Pecos County, the West Texas leader, reported its tally as the same as the previous week's 20 rigs.

Ward County decreased one operation as 14 were counted going and Andrews County reported 12 active rigs a decrease from last week's tally of 17.

After-Christmas shoppers make many retailers happy

By The Associated Press

Last-minute shoppers and bargain hunters looking for after-Christmas markdowns are making the holiday season a happy one for many retailers.

An Associated Press spot check of major department stores showed that officials report sales in most areas are better than expected.

"We did very well last week and the last three days — Saturday, Sunday and Monday — we went well over last year's sales and well over planned sales for the season...to kind of a record," said a spokesman for Gimbels in New York City.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the after-Christmas sales began on Wednesday with a white sale and selected price reductions in almost all departments.

Charles G. Gardner,

executive director of the State Street Council, a business group in Chicago, said that retailers might be able to make up for losses suffered during last week's transit strike if shoppers take advantage of post-holiday specials. Gardner said the strike — which lasted from Dec. 17 through Dec. 20 — cost State Street merchants in the Loop an estimated $5 million in lost business, but he said sales picked up the day after the strike ended.

Phil Slimm, president of Halls in Kansas City, said employees were at work early Wednesday morning arranging sale merchandise. "When we opened the three large front doors, we had a huge crowd," he said.

Slimm said pre-Christmas sales were good. "Our more expensive departments seemed to do much better," he said. D.H. Jeffcoat, manager of a Sears Roebuck and Co. store in Columbia, S.C., said the selling season had some ups and downs. "It started out great at Thanksgiving, then slowed down at the start of December. But it was fantastic the last week or so before Christmas, especially Christmas Eve."

Jeffcoat said shoppers "were looking for better quality. They wanted something that would last." He said best sellers included microwave ovens, electronic games, stereos "and anything that had gold in it."

In Washington, D.C., James McCullough, regional vice president for Bloomingdales, said sales were higher than projected. "With all the talk of recession and the gloom and doom projections of the economists, we approached sales cautiously, but were very surprised at the strong results," McCullough said.

On Wednesday, Bloomingdales offered half-price sales on Christmas wrappings and cards and McCullough said several hundred persons headed for the bargains as soon as the store opened.

Ray Gutter, manager of the Bamberger's in the Garden State Plaza in Paramus, N.J., said many shoppers had conservation on their minds. "Anything related to energy" sold well, he said. "Quilted coats sold well across the board as a fashion and utility item for keeping warm... We sold booties and anything to keep warm in the house."

U.S. consumer commissioners subpoena 20

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Consumer Products Commission, which was blocked by the courts from inspecting a cable car ride that fell at the State Fair of Texas, has issued more than 20 subpoenas for a Jan. 7 hearing on the fatal accident.

One person was killed and 17 others were injured when two gondolas on the Swiss Sky Ride fell about 65 feet into the midway crowd at the fair Oct. 21.

Commission attorney Eric Stone said in Washington Wednesday that the subpoenas were issued to persons "involved in the manufacture, control, distribution and retailing of the ride."

The hearing is designed to gain information about the accident and to determine if the commission has jurisdiction to inspect the ride.

Year's end means changes; Giving ends; Taking begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hardly has the season of giving ended, than the season of taking has begun. Tax-taking that is.

The first of some 85.4 million Internal Revenue Service income tax returns for 1979 were delivered to the nation's taxpayers Wednesday.

An IRS spokesman said the mailing should be completed by Jan. 4, and that most taxpayers will have received their forms by Jan. 8, at the latest.

It has become traditional for the IRS to wait until the day after Christmas to begin mailing the forms. This isn't because it wants to avoid dampening holiday spirits, but because it waits until the season's mail crush is over.

Delivering the tax forms is big business for the Postal Service. The IRS says mailing costs total $7.7 million, paid by the taxpayers of course.

Taxpayers will find several changes in the tax law for 1979, including: —An increase in the personal tax exemption to $1,000, up from $750 in 1978. This exemption can be taken by taxpayers for all dependents, including the taxpayer.

—A slight increase in the zero bracket amount, or the minimum standard deduction.

—An end to the deduction for state and local gasoline taxes. This change was made to help discourage gasoline consumption.

Unhappily for most taxpayers, their total tax will probably be even higher than last year, when the average per return was $2,770.

Dollar earnings of most Americans have increased, pushing them into higher tax brackets even when inflation has eroded the real buying power of their income.

Although the deadline for filing completed returns isn't until April 15, an IRS spokesman said taxpayers who want a prompt refund of any tax overpayment should file as soon as possible.

The spokesman, Larry Batdorf, said the average wait for a refund is three to five weeks for people who file early, while those who delay may have to wait up to six weeks.

About three out of four tax returns resulted in a refund last year, Batdorf said, with the average amounting to $499.

He said total refunds increase 3 to 4 percent a year, meaning the average for 1979 should be more than $500.

People entitled to refunds include those who pay more tax than they owe — usually because more money is withheld from their paychecks than needed to cover the tax bill — and those who have had tax money withheld but don't pay taxes because their earnings are too low to be taxed.

Federal judge charges Dallas $62,000 fee

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A federal judge says the City of Dallas must pay $62,002 in fees to lawyers who represented blacks and Hispanics in a lengthy legal battle over city council district boundaries.

U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon directed the city Wednesday to pay $25,230 to the Dallas Legal Services foundation to pay the non-profit organization for the 628 hours it spent representing blacks.

The judge also ordered Dallas to pay $22,345 to James A. Johnston, $9,757 to Edward B. Cloutman III and $4,170 to Walter Irvin. All three lawyers represented blacks. And he ordered the city to pay $500 to the Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund.

The legal battle erupted in 1971 when blacks and Hispanics argued electing the council on a citywide basis diluted minority voting strength.

Mahon ordered Dallas to implement an 8-3 plan, with eight councilmen elected from single-member district and three elected at large. That plan was rejected by an appeals court but recently upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Boeing pays GSA record for AF plant

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Boeing Wichita Co. of Wichita, Kan., has paid the federal government a record $44.75 million for an Air Force plant in Wichita.

The General Services Administration office in Kansas City said Wednesday the amount, paid by check, was the largest negotiated cash sale for a single property transaction in GSA history.

The transaction, which required congressional approval, involved 573 acres and 69 buildings containing about 5 million square feet of floor space.

Electronic devices missing

HOUSTON (AP) — Three expensive electronic devices used to gather data for offshore oil exploration have vanished from the ocean floor, and researchers at Texas A&M University said Friday they are willing to pay to get them back.

Project investigator David McGrail said the devices — two of which measure ocean current — were placed about 100 miles offshore in the northern Gulf of Mexico in September.

He said the instruments, valued at more than $25,000, were missing when researchers tried to retrieve them Dec. 4. McGrail said the "invaluable data" the instruments collected, which must be processed by computer, was worth more than $100,000.

The university announced Friday it would pay what it called a "substantial reward" for information leading to the recovery of the measuring devices.

The research project, sponsored by the Department of the Interior, has been underway for about three years, said McGrail. The data is "critical" to oil exploration because no other information had been collected in the area, he said.

Project manager Joseph U. LeBlanc said he did not think the instruments had been stolen, but said a shrimp trawler or scuba divers may have picked them up.

Adobe executes agreement

Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland announced it has executed a merger agreement with the Dorothy Corp. of Houston which will result in CRC Corp. becoming a wholly-owned subsidiary of Adobe Oil & Gas.

Companies tagging leases in channel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oil companies on Friday began tagging offshore oil tracts they would like to lease for a new round of exploratory drilling in the Santa Barbara Channel and Santa Monica Bay.

Twenty-six tracts near San Diego were excluded from the bidding. The oil companies have until February to nominate tracts they would like to explore in a vast region between Point Conception and the Mexican border and running 200 miles out into the ocean. The lease sale is scheduled for June 1982.

Before the San Diego tracts were excluded, the prospect of drilling there had brought storms of protest from local government officials and environmentalists during an oil lease sale last June. A smaller number of tracts in the Channel Islands also have been withdrawn.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s Office of Planning and Research was not happy about the financial liabilities of Dorothy which are approximately $10 million. The merger acquisition will increase Adobe's proved (both developed and undeveloped) reserves by approximately 2.5 million barrels of oil and 35 billion cubic feet of gas, and involves interests in 350 gross wells in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi, West Virginia, Ohio, North Dakota, Colorado, Wyoming and California.

areas that remained open for nominations. Acting Director Deni Greene said the office "definitely will answer the call for nominations" and outline areas of concern.

"The good news is San Diego," she said. "The bad news is everywhere else."

She said the Brown administration also is concerned that tracts near Newport Beach and Laguna Beach, which went unsold during June's offerings, also have been reopened for consideration.

The Santa Monica area under consideration covers about 155,000 acres in the bay and westward and had been excluded from the previous sale. All of the Santa Barbara Channel not yet leased will be under consideration.

Permian Basin Briefs

The board of directors of MGF Oil Corp. of Midland has declared a combination dividend of 2 percent stock and 6 cents per common share cash. The dividend will be paid on the new shares after issuance of the stock. Both the stock and cash dividend will be paid Jan. 24 to shareholders of record Jan. 10. R. O. "Jack" Major, president, said.

Harold Burns has become an associate in Kading Enterprises, a Midland company which specializes in production logging consulting and contract wireline services. Burns has 30 years experience in the wireline logging business. His background includes field management responsibilities and consulting experience in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and offshore Louisiana; introduction of annular production logging techniques to the Permian Basin, and management of his own company, Profiles, Inc., for a number of years.

Petroleum Exploration & Development Funds, Inc., of Midland announced the promotion of three senior officers and the opening of an executive office in the Campbell Centre in Dallas.

J. Roy Christian of Midland, formerly president of the company, was elected vice chairman of the board and chief executive officer. He will base his activities in the newly opened executive office in Dallas.

Jerry W. Ward of Midland previously executive vice president, was elected president and chief operating officer and will direct the company's operations from its Midland headquarters.

Bert L. Hungerford was promoted from senior vice president to executive vice president — Finance and Administration.

Earlier this year, the company's headquarters were relocated to large space in the Wall Towers East Building. Also, due to increasing operations in Oklahoma, an office was opened in Oklahoma City.

A 40-member delegation of United States geologists — including three Midland residents, Frank L. Constant and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Elam — has just returned from a three-week People-to-People goodwill tour to Russia, Italy and Egypt.

During the diplomatic travel mission, delegates met with local geologists and American embassy officials in Moscow and Cairo. Counterpart meetings also were conducted in Baku, Hurgada and Kharga Oasis. The purpose of the mission was to give delegation members an opportunity carry messages of friendship to their counterparts overseas. It also allowed them to visit typical geological operations to compare methods and procedures. The mission was an official program of People-to-People, a non-profit, private sector organization founded in 1956 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to promote world peace through international understanding.

Garza, Reagan, Sutton regions gain oil, gas discoveries; field well finals

Discoveries have been reported in Garza, Reagan and Sutton counties, and a field has been reopened in Garza County.

GARZA REOPENER
Wilson Energy Inc. of Midland No. 1 Miller has been completed to reopen Spraberry production in the Gordon-Simpson area of Garza County.

The well finished for a daily pumping potential of 21 barrels 35-gravity oil and 18 barrels of water. The gas-oil ratio is 900-1.

Completion was through perforations from 4,680 to 4,722 feet after a 10,000-gallon fracture treatment.

Total depth is 7,722 feet and 4.5-inch pipe is set on bottom.

A re-entry of an 8,220-foot dry hole, the reopener is 3,773 feet from south and 1,865 feet from east lines of section 64, block 6, H&GN survey and six miles southwest of Justiceburg.

The project originally was drilled by Holley Energy Inc. as No. 1 Ralph Miller.

GARZA DISCOVERY
Alan Leeper Family and Employees No. 2 J. R. Shelton has been completed as a Glorieta D1 discovery in Garza County, five miles southeast of Southland.

The well finished for a daily pumping potential of 92.5 barrels of 37-gravity oil and 55 barrels of water, through perforations from 4,191 to 4,197 feet. The gas-oil ratio is too small to measure, and the pay was acidized with 1,200 gallons.

Total depth is 4,202 feet and 4.5-inch casing is cemented at that point.

No. 2 Shelton is 330 feet east of Edwin Cox No. 1 Davis which was tested and plugged in 1957 after coring the Glorieta reef.

The discovery is 1,650 feet from south and 660 feet from east lines of section 1245, TTRR survey.

The operator will ask for D1 (Glorieta) as the field name.

REAGAN STRIKE
Anadarko Production Co., operating from Midland, announced potential test on an upper Canyon gas discovery in Reagan County, 19 miles southeast of Garden City.

The opener, No. 1 Sallie Fox, finished for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 2.5 million cubic feet of gas, through perforations from 8,262 to 8,286 feet. The gas-liquid ratio is 148,350-1. Gravity of the liquid is 58.5 degrees.

The pay was fractured with 60,000 gallons. The upper Canyon was topped at 8,262 feet on ground elevation of 2,656 feet. Other tops include the Spraberry at 5,366 feet and the lower Canyon at 8,372 feet.

Total depth is 8,600 feet, 4.5-inch pipe is set at 8,599 feet and plugged back depth is 8,337 feet.

Wellsite is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 72, block 2, T&P survey. It is two and five-eighths miles northeast of Spraberry Trend Area production and three miles southwest of the Conger, Southwest (Canyon oil) pool.

SUTTON OPENER
William Perlman of Houston No. 1 Lea Allison has been completed as a Wolfcamp gas discovery in Sutton County, 14 miles east of Sonora.

It finished for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 160,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, natural, through perforations from 2,182 to 2,206 feet.

The Wolfcamp was hit at 2,192 feet on ground elevation of 2,262 feet.

Total depth is 2,206 feet and 5.5-inch pipe is set at 2,192 feet.

Location is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 39, block B, HE&WT survey. It is 2.75 miles southeast of the depleted Headquarters (6000 Strawn field).

WARD WELL
Gulf Oil Corp. has completed the seventh well in the Wagon Wheel (Pennsylvanian) field of Ward County, three miles southeast of Wickett. The well, No. 1048 Hutchings Stock Association one location north of other Pennsylvanian production, finished for a daily flow of 367 barrels of 38.3-gravity oil, no water, through an 18/64-inch choke.

The gas-oil ratio is 1,166-1. Completion was from pay behind casing perforations from 8,026 to 8,218 feet. The zone was acidized with 400 gallons and fractured with 5,800 gallons.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from north and 2,000 feet from east lines of section 4, block O, G&MMB&A survey.

Total depth is 9,050 feet and 5.5-inch casing is set at 9,048 feet. Plugged back depth is 8,921 feet.

GAINES OILER
The Champpon multipay field of Gaines County has gained its second active Devonian producer.

The well, VF Petroleum Inc. of Midland No. 1 Schamburg, was completed for a daily flowing potential of 104 barrels of 33-gravity oil and 26 barrels of water, from open hole at 12,754, where 5.5-inch casing is set, and total depth of 12,763 feet. The gas-oil ratio is too small to measure, and completion was natural.

The well is 3/4 mile east of the other Devonian well and 1,400 feet from south and 1,198 feet from east lines of labor 11, league 301, Terry County School Land survey and 13 miles southeast of Seminole.

Gas contract inked

CHICAGO — A 15-year contract for the sale of up to 1.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas in southwest Wyoming's Overthrust Belt was signed last week by subsidiaries of Peoples Gas Co. and Standard Oil Co. (Indiana).

The gas will be produced by Standard's subsidiary, Amoco Production Co., in the Whitney Canyon and Carter Creek areas of Uinta and Lincoln counties.

Transportation to Midwest markets will be provided by the proposed 800-mile Trailblazer Pipeline System to be built by Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America, transmission subsidiary of Peoples Gas, and three other interstate pipeline companies.

According to George L.

Morrow, president of Natural Gas Pipeline Co., Trailblazer will be the first major pipeline system to deliver gas from the Rockies to major urban areas in the Midwest and in the East.

The pipeline system is to be completed in 1981, provided government regulatory approvals are received on schedule.

DOE says air-quality facilities need improving

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Air quality monitoring equipment and monitoring networks near thermal enhanced oil recovery oilfields in California may need to be improved and expanded, according to a new report published by the Department of Energy.

The finding is of particular significance to California's heavy oil producers who use steam flooding, a thermal enhanced oil recovery (TEOR) method, to thin the heavy crude in the reservoir to make it more fluid and able to flow to a wellbore. California has both tremendous deposits of heavy oil and stringent air-quality standards. Kern County, surrounding Bakersfield, has the most TEOR projects according to the report. About 9,400 steam injection wells are being operated in Kern County, and as of December 1978, about 640 steam generators had permits to operate in the area. Other California counties with heavy oil activity include Fresno, Monterey, Orange, and Santa Barbara.

Thermal recovery projects are the most practical way to recover the needed heavy crude, but the burning of the heavy crude to produce steam can cause air-quality problems unless precautions are taken. To combat the problems, producers have been required to install air-pollution control devices on the steam generators in many TEOR fields. The devices primarily control the emission of sulfur dioxide and hydrocarbons, but increasing concern about other types of emissions from the oil activities and other sources may soon result in the requirement for additional pollution-control devices on the generators.

Silver, gold hold spotlight for '80s

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The dawn of the ultra-modern 1980s may be approaching, but the dominant theme in the investment world just now is an ancient one: Silver and gold.

The precious metals staged a spectacular rise in price during 1979, outstripping all the more elaborate attractions for capital that people have devised in modern days.

Gold has more than doubled, and silver has approximately tripled, since last New Year's. And as the statisticians prepared to close the books on the 1970s, those runaway markets gave little sign of slowing down.

"Once again, like a storm warning flag, the price of gold is flying higher," wrote Julian Snyder in his investment advisory letter "International Moneyline."

As gold passed the $500-an-ounce level for the first time this past week, traders in the stock market seemed to be mesmerized.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks drifted sluggishly all week, closing Friday at 838.91, unchanged from the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index, meanwhile, edged up 15 to 61.88.

Long-service awards made

Leland Foster recently was honored by The Midland National Bank for 30 years of service with the bank.

Tony A. Martin, president, said "Leland's long record of service to many Midlanders is one of which we are very proud."

Foster, a senior vice president of the bank, is a graduate of Abilene Christian College and the Southwest Graduate School of Banking.

Other service awards presented by Martin went to Dale McMurry, 20 years; Willie Wilson, Al Fierro, Janie Howard, Josephine Norwood and Pearl Nunez, 10 years, and Sid Smith, Louise Dickerson, Phyllis Reeves, Mary Jane Upham, John Lee Cooper and Jean Holland, five years.

Foster

Only at the American Stock Exchange, home of many smaller companies involved in the business of another precious commodity — oil — did prices show any life. The Amex market value index gained 3.17 to 245.61, a record high.

Big Board volume slowed to a daily average of 27.49 million shares from 41.09 million the week before.

Gold is traditionally regarded by its partisans as a haven from inflation, currency turmoil and political uncertainty, as well as an industrial commodity used in electronics, dentistry and other fields.

Silver, with industrial uses in electronics, photography and elsewhere, is often viewed as a kind of poor cousin to gold that tends to tag along wherever its much-esteemed relative goes.

But most analysts agree that those standard images alone can't account for the fireworks that have occurred lately in the markets.

"By all conventional logic," said Snyder, "the price of gold is too high, having increased more than 10 times its dollar value since 1971, while the U.S. consumer price index has only doubled."

"Silver has definitely separated itself from the usual fundamental factors," added the Boston-based United Business Service.

One common explanation being advanced for the heavy demand of late is a flight out of currencies and into precious metals by governments and private investors in oil-rich countries.

Gold's supporters say the oil squeeze and growing tensions between producing and consuming countries are putting more and more pressure on the international currency system. And as a result, they say, those on the producing side are growing more and more uneasy about keeping their assets in the currencies of the consumers.

Year ending as it started, with debate over recession

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The year is ending as it began — with debate over when the recession will start and with concern about inflation.

At the start of last year there were widespread predictions that 1979 would see the start of a recession. Some predicted that it would start midway and be a mild, short-lived one that would be nearly over by now.

Instead there is little agreement on whether a recession actually has begun, because economic signals were mixed in recent months. And the fact that the recession remains a question was one of the economic surprises of 1979.

BUSINESS

But it was far from the only one.

Inflation of about 13 percent was almost twice what many economists predicted for this year. Unemployment was not as bad as expected.

And record highs were reached in interest rates, gold and silver prices and such consumer essentials as gasoline and fuel oil.

House prices continued their march upward for much of the year but finally succumbed near the end of the year to high interest rates and a dwindling number of people who could afford them. New home construction fell sharply late this year from its pace a year ago.

Among corporations, Chrysler and some of the big oil companies made headlines for different reasons. Many of the big oil companies reported huge profit gains in the third quarter, some even double their profits of a year earlier. Although they argued much of the gain was from overseas operations, the big profits fueled the debate in Congress on a so-called "windfall profits tax" which would tax extra revenues resulting from domestic oil deregulation.

Chrysler Corp., the nation's third-largest domestic automaker and 10th-largest industrial company, was embroiled in another controversy because of its failure to make money. After Chrysler's executives argued that the company could not survive without financial aid, Congress approved $1.5 billion in loan guarantees on condition that Chrysler raise $2 billion on its own from workers, dealers, suppliers and creditors, as well as states and cities.

Skyrocketing energy costs were one of the biggest surprises of 1979. A revolution in Iran late last year shut down that country's oil fields for a time and created a shortage of world supplies early in the year which pushed prices higher. Although Iran's exports resumed in March, the United States late this year refused to buy any Iranian oil in retaliation for the taking of U.S. hostages in early November. But prices by other oil cartel members have continued to increase and will push U.S. energy prices higher next year.

Here in capsule form are some of the major developments of 1979:

ECONOMY: Many forecasters now expect 1979 to average a modest 1 percent growth in Gross National Product, after adjustment for inflation. Few, however, appear dissatisfied from the view that a recession will still hit the economy, if it hasn't already started in late 1979. After an increase of about 1 percent in the first quarter of 1979, GNP fell 2.4 percent in the next three months and economists both in and out of government declared that that was the start of the recession.

But the economy crossed up the forecasters by rebounding smartly at a 3.5 percent rate in the third quarter. The final quarter figures won't be out until early next year but many experts are guessing that GNP will decline again.

INFLATION: As measured by the Labor Department's consumer price index, inflation this year will be the worst since 33 years ago, when wartime price controls were lifted. Consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 9 percent in 1978. But this year they have risen about 13 percent, despite the Carter administration's wage and price guideline program which was designed to hold down inflation. Wage gains didn't keep pace. It's estimated that the purchasing power of workers' paychecks declined more than 4 percent in 1979.

ENERGY: The worst energy price spiral since the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo forced up the price of oil in the United States by 60 to 70 percent. Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised world prices in steps from $12.69 per barrel at the end of 1978 to a range of prices as high as $35 a barrel in December. U.S. consumers didn't feel the full weight of those increases because much of their oil is still domestically produced. But the pinch was painful. There were lines at gasoline stations for a time last summer, and gas prices topped $1 a gallon in August. The average price of heating oil went from about 54 cents a gallon last January to 81 cents in September.

JOBS: Employment was a bright spot in the 1979 economy. About 2 million new jobs were created during the year and the number of unemployed workers was less than predicted. The unemployment rate dipped to a five-year low of 5.6 percent in June, and hovered below 6 percent through November, the latest month for which government figures are available.

Bank gives service pins

Commercial Bank & Trust Co. has announced presentation of 11 service pins.

Receiving 15-year pins were Amos McGuairt, John Snow, Mike Hughes and Ozellar Smith.

Ten-year awards went to Anna Hoelscher, Dolores Teague, Willie Rankin and Edith Almand.

Five-year pins were presented to Forrest Pendleton, Homer Eggleston and Peggy Kimbrow.

The presentations were made by Robert D. Southerland, president.

Hike sought for air fares

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airlines said Friday it will ask the Civil Aeronautics Board to authorize an 8 percent increase in transatlantic air fares effective Feb. 1.

The increase would be on top of a 7 percent increase already scheduled to take effect Tuesday.

TWA said the recent increases in oil prices has brought on a "fuel crisis environment."

As a result of the latest round of price hikes, TWA expects its 1980 fuel bill to be $1.1 billion, $100 million more than it had previously estimated.

Sally C. McElwreath, a TWA spokeswoman, said the fuel bill in 1978 was less than $500 million and in 1979 was $729 million.

Magazine sets record

The Hearst Corp. announced that one of its publications, Cosmopolitan, closed 1979 with 2,452.23 advertising pages — the greatest number ever recorded in one year in the history of any monthly women's publication.

Louis E. Porterfield, the magazine's publisher, said the total topped Cosmopolitan's own 1978 record of 2,144.06 by 308.27 pages, making it again the most successful national monthly publishing ever, besting every other monthly in America.

Hearst also reported that Patricia Guinan has been named home furnishings marketing director of Hearst Special Publications. The announcement was made by Gilbert C. Maurer, president of Hearst Magazines.

Mrs. Guinan has been associate publisher of House Beautiful since 1976 and will continue in that post in addition to assuming the responsibilities of the newly-created position. She holds the Dorothy Dawes Award for distinguished journalistic coverage in the home furnishings industry.

In another move, Hearst reported that Knox Armstrong has been appointed general manager of American Druggist Publications. The announcement was made by Gordon L. Jones, vice president of The Hearst Corp. and senior executive of the Hearst Books & Business Publishing Group.

Armstrong, a former publisher of Dun's Review and Chemical Week, was most recently marketing director for the Technical Publishing Co. (New York Area), a Dun & Bradstreet subsidiary, where he was responsible for promotion research and sales support for 13 business magazines.

Midland men appointed

Lincoln National Life Insurance Co. has announced two appointments in Midland.

Dee K. Carter of R. C. Heasley and Associates, the West Texas agency for the company, has been named vice president of Lincoln's West Texas operations. He has served as district director of the Midland-Odessa office since 1976 and will continue to reside in Midland and primarily be responsible for the continued development of the agency in the Permian Basin.

Daniel L. Cornelson has been appointed Lincoln sales agent with R. C. Heasley and Associates. He has been with the insurance firm seven years.

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Officials point to high interest rates as biggest concern on economic front during coming year

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

Officials here consistently name high interest rates as the biggest economic concern they see for 1980, but are cautiously optimistic regarding business conditions for the new year.

"I think money is going to stay awfully tight and high-priced," Banking Commissioner Robert E. Stewart says. "I don't know about recessions, depressions, or upturns..."

Banks in Texas, he reports are "loaned up" for the moment, and while that doesn't indicate any particular problem as far as the banks' condition, it does indicate money will be hard to come by, at least early in 1980.

Stewart and other financial regulars are hopeful action by Congress, just before the Christmas adjournment, on financial legislation pre-empting State usury limits and making a number of other changes, will help.

Sam Kimberlin, Texas Bankers Association, says the measure "should give some relief to lenders paying 12 percent and over for their funds."

The bill is designed only for a 90-day period, until March 31, but it is expected to be extended.

ALLOWING LENDERS TO charge rates five percent above the Federal discount rate "should loosen up funds for projects," and "probable it may have a side effect... of tending to deep the rates of interest paid to savers... at the same level."

Another measure affecting Texas banks in 1980 will be a proposed constitutional amendment, to be voted on in November, for off-premises unmanned teller machines, Kimberlin reports.

Those machines are intended to "provide a convenient place to carry out normal bank transactions, such as withdrawing cash from an account or depositing funds to an account," he says.

Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff says he's "very optimistic" about 1980.

"I think there's no doubt we're going to have continued high interest rates," he agrees.

But, he adds, "I see a leveling off and the beginning of a kind of boom towards the end of the year."

Vandygriff feels the falling out of housing starts, apparently in response to the drop in mortgage loans being closed, will reverse.

"I THINK PEOPLE WILL HAVE learned to live with the double-digit interest figures," he comments. "I don't think we'll experience anything less for a long time."

As far as the savings and loan industry is concerned, Vandygriff sees the challenge in the 1980s as "not necessarily a competitive challenge... it's meeting the challenge of growing economy... geared to a higher interest rate than we've experienced in the past."

He expects State-chartered associations will "end the year in a stable condition," with a growth in savings of "approximately eight percent overall... they may grow as much as 10 percent in assets."

The profit picture, however, "is not quite as rosy," he adds.

For January, the maximum rate of home mortgage loans was set at 12 percent under HB 409, making the figures allowed under the Texas usury ceiling.

That ceiling, however, apparently will become moot under the new Federal legislation.

DURWARD CURLEE, EXECUTIVE vice president, Texas Savings and Loan League, thinks the bill "could help in certain ways."

But he's unsure about other provisions of the bill, and reports savings and loan officials are "scared to death" of proposals for small demonstration savings accounts bearing interest at the same rate as larger denominations.

"It sounds good socially, (but) it's not economically feasible," Curlee says, to argue that, "the $1,000 man should get paid the same (interest) as the $200,000 man."

But, he says, "it costs the same to administer a $1,000 account as to administer a $200,000 account." Unless the home mortgage situation improves, he says, "I don't see how we can maintain the housing market."

Figures from the Department of Commerce show construction in Texas lagged far behind the national average for the first quarter of 1979, with total value increasing only 8.1 percent compared to the first quarter in 1978.

NATIONALLY, THE INCREASE was 19.8 percent. Texas housing starts dropped 10.7 percent for the first quarter — compared to a 2.6 percent increase nationally.

Only Missouri, Louisiana and Utah showed greater declines in new housing.

Figures from the Bureau of Business Research, University of Texas at Austin, and Texas A&M's Real Estate Research Center, show that through August, total value of reported building permits issued in Texas came to $6,508,955,000, an increase of 17 percent over the comparable 1978 period.

Non-residential construction totaled $2,756,376,000, an increase of 47 percent.

But the number of dwelling units appears to be dropping.

The number reported this year is 102,857 — while in the standard metropolitan statistical areas alone in 1978 the comparable period showed 106,190.

NEW PLANT LOCATIONS REPORTED dropped 14 percent, to 114 for the first three quarters, with expansions decreasing two percent, to 135.

Figures on new mortgage loan commitments have fallen in nearly every area of Texas, with a net decrease of 30.3 percent statewide from Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1979, compared to the same period in 1978.

For the first three quarters of 1978, the total was over $4.9 billion. For 1979, the three quarters showed $3.4 billion.

And the decline has been greater in the last few months — dropping from $447 million in August to $342 million in September.

Securities Commissioner Richard Latham says his crystal ball is "always very cloudy" but he feels money market certificates — the most active securities issue being registered with his department in the last year — will continue to attract the money from investors, "as long as prime rates stay high and interest rates stay high."

"They're paying high interest, and are a lower risk than equity investments," he notes.

THERE WILL BE A CONTINUED problem for capital formation... due to the weakness of the equity market," Latham reports.

He notes the volume in securities to be registered in Texas is increasing steadily, with the volume in the last three months rising "considerably."

At the Secretary of State's Office, nearly 40,000 new profit-making corporations have been chartered for the first 11 months of 1979 — an increase of 26 percent over the comparable period in 1978.

Gerald Brown, head of the Texas Industrial Commission, agrees high money costs are a problem in attracting new industry to the state, from several standpoints.

"High money has slowed down relocations," Brown reports, with "prospects and expansions... running a little less than we had last year (1978)."

But, he adds, "about 80 percent of the employment comes from expansion of existing industries."

ANOTHER PROBLEM IS THE effect on lack of mortgage funds for employees of new industries, Brown says.

"If you bring industry in, you have to have some place to house the employees... Unless they have equity in a house, there's no way for them to qualify..."

Brown reports one problem of past years has been eliminated, with passage of provisions for use of industrial revenue bonds in Texas.

"It should help the small communities," he feels.

"We're hoping it will make up the difference on these high money costs," Brown adds, noting the TIC recently completed approval of the first proposal under that program, a $1.7 million program by Industrial Development Authority of Harlingen, Inc., to finance expansion of a meat processing firm.

"All the states around us have had this," Brown says, "and we've been losing some pretty good prospects to them... At least new we're equal."

All in all, he says, "the outlook... is pretty good for the entire state."

hints from Heloise

DEAR FRIENDS:

Here we go again, closing out the old book and starting anew on a nice, clean page. So let's resolve here and now to have more FAITH in ourselves, HOPE for each other, and CHARITY towards everyone.

Hopefully, our families are gathered around us and peace and tranquility abound — even if the football game is on! Over the past year, we've had much to be thankful for. And there's so much to anticipate and plan for in the year to come.

With sharing and caring, with everyone pulling in the same direction, we'll weather any storms ahead and enjoy the calm that inevitably follows.

Just remember, I love you — each and every one — and wish you the most prosperous, happy and healthful New Year!

Hugs, Heloise

FARAWAY GRANNY!

DEAR HELOISE:

When my baby was 10 months old, we moved 1,200 miles from my parents. Each week since then, I've written my Mom, telling her all the new and funny things my son has said or done.

My sweet, thoughtful Mom bought a notebook and has been recording each thing I've written about our son.

What a treasure this notebook will be in the years to come.

Yes, for both you and your son!

Heloise

THE DOOR PRIZE

DEAR HELOISE:

The best remedy for keeping glass shower doors free of film and always sparkling is with a soft scrub brush and some pre-wash spray.

Spray it on your doors and let it soak for a few minutes, then just wipe it clean.

Mrs. Helen Koutek

JUST LEAN BACK!

DEAR HELOISE:

The easiest way to create a backrest for a convalescing person confined to bed is to take a straight kitchen chair and turn it upside down on the bed.

Pad it by placing a pillow or two on the chair's slanted back.

With this behind the patient's back, he's supported in a comfortable position.

Pat Schutz

You don't have to be sick to try that one. It's great when you're sitting on the floor watching a football game and want to prop up your back.

Heloise

DEAR READER:

This is your column. If you'd like to share a hint, ask a question or make a suggestion, write me care of this newspaper.

Just for Kids

GREAT FOR BITS AND PIECES

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of throwing out empty thread spools, wind leftover pieces of ribbon, seam binding and elastic on them.

I thought of this when helping my babysitter organize her scraps.

A CENTERPIECE YOU CAN EAT

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found that if fruit is put out on the table in a bowl, the family doesn't forget that it is in the vegetable bin.

It makes a nice table decoration too. And it's so good for you. Best of all, seeing it on the table reminds the family to eat fruit instead of sweets.

You can cover it with plastic wrap so dirt doesn't get on it.

Pam Gibson, 11

NEXT STOP, THE MOON!

DEAR HELOISE:

Those foam meat trays are good for making airplanes. Cut 'em to any size you want.

It may take two or three trays to have enough to cut out the body, wings and tail of a plane. Make the wings and body the same size and put a weight on the nose part.

It really soars!

MY 'WISH BOX'

DEAR HELOISE:

When I was visiting my cousin, she gave me a cute idea. She calls it her "wish box."

She took a coffee can and covered it with decorative paper, then cut a slot in the lid. She attached a pouch to the outside of the coffee can to hold paper and pencil.

During the year when members of her family see something they would like to have, they write it down on a piece of paper, sign their name and put their "wish" into the can.

When birthdays and such come around, all anyone has to do is look through the "wish box" to get a good idea for a gift!

This little box eliminates the hassle of trying to find out what someone wants without letting that person have a hint of what you're going to get them.

Jackie

Now that's sure staying one step ahead of the game. We should all keep this idea in mind for next Christmas!

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

I just have to tell you what happened at my house the other night.

With three boys and a girl — plus a little neighbor boy who seems to be at my house more than his own — it sometimes takes "force and volume" to get my point across.

It was late and time for baths. So I went into the boys' room and announced that I wanted each and every one to take a bath and get ready for bed.

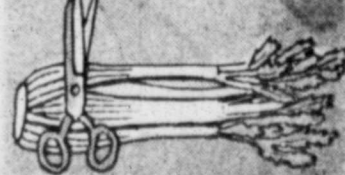

After what seemed an eternity, the bathroom was still occupied.

"Who's taking a bath now?" I inquired. "Tommy!" (the neighbor kid) was the reply.

When I asked Tommy why he was taking a bath at our house, he replied, "Well, you said everyone!"

No wonder I'm always in a state of total confusion!

STRING ALONG!

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a tip I'd like to pass along to people who have a problem chopping celery for a recipe.

It's instead of a knife, you use scissors to cut the stalks, it not only is much easier but you avoid the problem of celery strings.

Have a nice day.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story:
SIR GAWAIN HAS BROUGHT HIS COMMAND OF SHIPS AND MEN TO CARLYLE TO PREPARE FOR A RAID ON THE VIKING INVADERS ON THE ISLE OF MAN. NEVER HAS HE SUFFERED SUCH ANXIETY; FOR HIS SQUIRE, PRINCE ARN, OUT ON A SCOUTING TRIP, IS FOUR WEEKS OVERDUE.

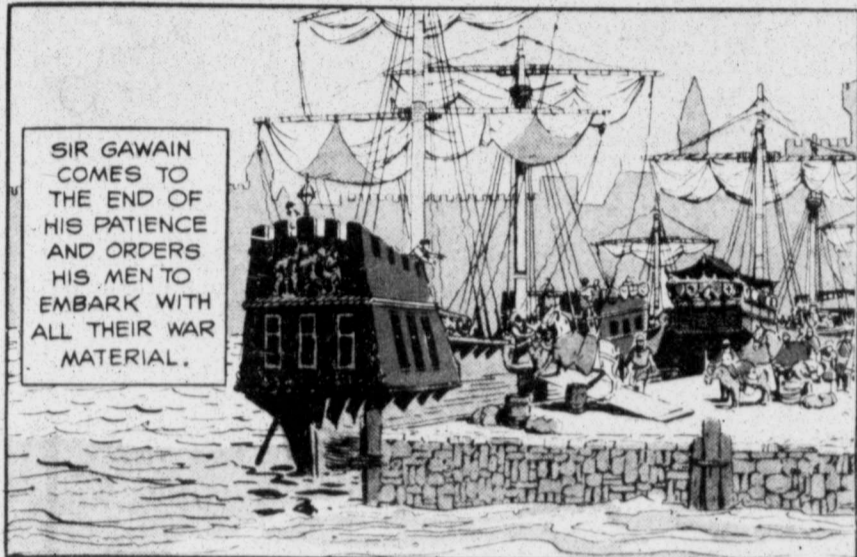

THE LONG VIGIL ENDS SUDDENLY AS ARN'S CURRAGH COMES SURGING SHOREWARD, HASTENED BY A PATROLLING VIKING SHIP.

AS ARN LATER SAYS: "GAWAIN'S WELCOME WAS SINCERE ENOUGH, BUT NEXT TIME I'LL WEAR FULL ARMOR!"

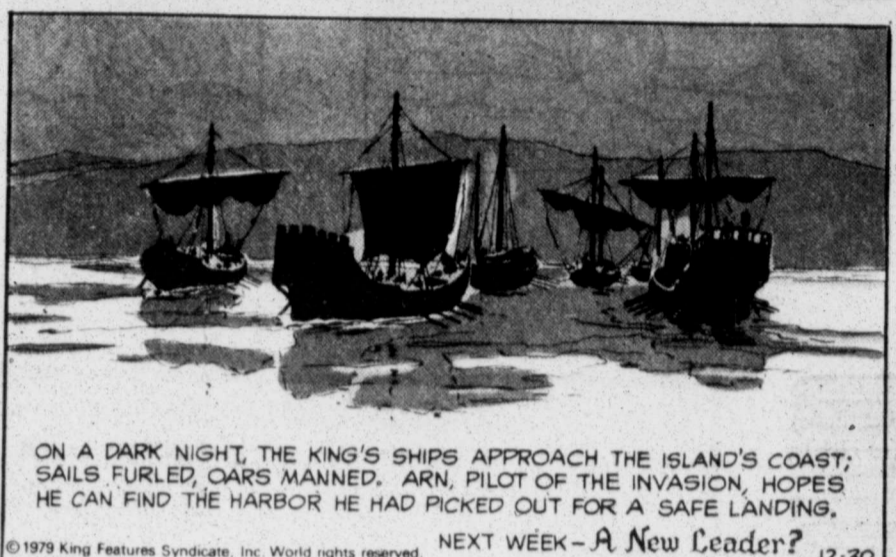

GAWAIN CALLS HIS CAPTAINS TOGETHER TO PLAN THE LIBERATION OF THE PEOPLE OF THE ISLE OF MAN FROM THE VIKINGS. BUT THEY WERE TRAINED TO FIGHT MOUNTED. HOW WILL THEY FARE IF THEY HAVE TO MEET THE NORTHMEN AT SEA?

SIR GAWAIN COMES TO THE END OF HIS PATIENCE AND ORDERS HIS MEN TO EMBARK WITH ALL THEIR WAR MATERIAL.

THE FIRST CASUALTY OF THE INVASION IS ITS DYNAMIC COMMANDER. ALTHOUGH A WARRIOR ON LAND, GAWAIN IS A PUSSYCAT AT SEA.

ON A DARK NIGHT, THE KING'S SHIPS APPROACH THE ISLAND'S COAST; SAILS FURLED, OARS MANNED. ARN, PILOT OF THE INVASION, HOPES HE CAN FIND THE HARBOR HE HAD PICKED OUT FOR A SAFE LANDING.
