Cincinnati OK's tank for streets

CINCINNATI (AP) — A state appeals court says John Coyne may drive his Sherman tank and military halftrack on Cincinnati streets.

The 1st Ohio District Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday that Cincinnati's ordinance banning vehicles not equipped with inflatable rubber tires is unconstitutional.

Coyne, 35, who operates an auto salvage yard, was cited by police in November 1978 for driving the tank on a busy city street in the suburban Mount Washington area.

Five days later, he was cited again for driving the tank to a Veterans Day celebration in downtown Cincinnati.

Hamilton County Municipal court judges subsequently issued contradictory rulings on the city's ordinance requiring pneumatic tires.

The three-judge panel unanimously ruled in favor of Coyne Wednesday, saying the city ordinance "enacted solely to preserve the physical condition of city streets lacks a rational basis by prohibiting, in effect, the operation of a vehicle which caused no more street damage than a conventional car or truck."

U.S. bonds called ripoff of poor

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The U.S. Savings Bond, a time-honored way of showing patriotism while saving money, is under fire by a San Francisco lawyer who calls bonds a ripoff of the poor.

"To call them a ripoff would be modest," Robert L. Gnaizda of Public Advocates, a consumer advocate group, said Wednesday.

On Monday, Gnaizda filed an amendment to a class action complaint with the Federal Trade Commission, claiming the U.S. Treasury uses unfair, deceptive practices to peddle the new Energy Bonds, scheduled to replace Series E bonds in 1980.

The original action, filed in September, asks that all bond advertising be halted until every ad contains a clear statement advising consumers of the interest paid on savings bonds.

Treasury's ads use slogans like, "They'll put your financial worries to rest" and "U.S. Savings Bonds are one sure way to make your dreams come true."

Energy Bonds pay 6.5 percent interest, 7 percent if held 11 years. The interest rate on Series E bonds was raised from 6 percent to 6.5 percent on June 1, 1979. Holders of E bonds that have not matured will get the same half a percentage point bonus as buyers of Energy Bonds, if they keep them for 11 years from the date of the first semiannual interest period that begins on or after Jan. 1, 1980. The figures are well below current money-market rates and far behind the rate of inflation.

Money market certificates currently pay up to nearly 12 percent on an minimum investment of $10,000 for six months. Inflation is running about 13 percent.

"Because of the difference in interest rates between the money market and what the government pays, small savers will lose $2.4 billion this year," said Gnaizda.

Carolyn Johnston, director of public affairs for the Treasury's Savings Bond division, said attacks such as Gnaizda's are unfounded, because the object of the bonds is to promote savings, not investment.

"We're talking about deductions of $10 or $20 a month, and where are you going to get a better interest rate on that than with bonds?" she said.

Some 16.2 million Americans bought bonds last year, including 55 percent of federal civilian employees and almost 50 percent of the military. Some $85 billion in bonds are outstanding, officials said.

Bonds are promoted through payroll savings plans, often aimed at lower income people who can least afford to have money deducted from their paychecks, Gnaizda said. Among the lawyer's plaintiffs are the Gray Panthers, an organization of the elderly, and the Mexican American Political Association.

Gnaizda also protests the "Energy Bond" designation, a direct result of President Carter's energy speech last July in which he said energy bonds would be sold.

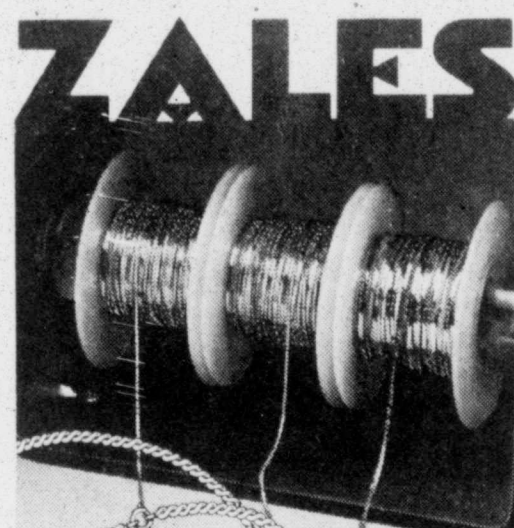

"They're not energy bonds at all," said Gnaizda. "The revenue from them goes for general purposes, not energy... The Treasury is trying to capitalize on high interest in energy conservation by exploiting low income people."

Retiree battles city hall over garbage service

WILLISTON, N.D. (AP) — Henry Bruins decided he didn't want Williston's mandatory garbage collection service, so he stopped paying.

Now the city has retaliated by cutting off his water, and the 62-year-old retired painter is ready to fire the next salvo.

"I'm debating about drilling a well," Bruins said Wednesday. "I think it was unconstitutional to do it, but they did it."

For the past month, Bruins, who has paid his water bill in full, has been filling tanks in his basement with water from a neighbor, although "it's not convenient."

Bruins estimates the water table is 50 to 60 feet below his home and said he has bought his own drilling equipment. "I'll be paying my water bill in advance for a while this way," he said.

The Williston native stopped paying the $2.75 a month for garbage collection a year ago.

"I have very little garbage to haul out," he said. "If I accumulate enough to make it worthwhile to go to the city dump, I'll haul it and pay whatever they ask. But that's only once every three or four months."

City Auditor Jordis Larvick said an ordinance provides that no one may refuse the city's disposal service and everyone must pay for it whether they use it or not.

"The fee structure is based on everyone in the city taking everything," he said. "You can't drive to the landfill for $2.75 a month."

Bruins said he fears the monthly collection assessment will double in another year to pay for two trucks the city bought last year.

But Larvick said the fee is expected to remain unchanged.

Sub maintenance costs U.S. Navy more than boat's construction

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — It has cost the Navy more in the last five years to keep the nuclear submarine Nautilus operating and to deactivate it than it cost in 1955 to build the vessel, figures released by the Navy show.

The Navy said Tuesday it will request $13.3 million in the 1981 budget to deactivate the vessel, the nation's first atomic submarine, and another

$7.6 million to prepare a site for it at the Washington D.C. Navy Yard, where it is planning to place the submarine on public display.

With the $48 million cost of an overhaul of the submarine in 1975, it will have cost the nation at least $68 million to maintain the sub for the last five years and to retire it. It cost $55 million to build the vessel at the Electric Boat shipyard.

Strangers remember abandoned baby boy

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The death of an unnamed baby boy, abandoned naked in the chill Minnesota autumn, haunted Carol Hamline.

The mother of three bought a small monument for the baby's grave. A 76-year-old woman donated space in her family's plot for the little grave, and someone anonymously bought a small white casket.

On Wednesday, in a church filled with flowers, 35 people attended the funeral of the nearly forgotten child.

Mrs. Hamline arranged the funeral after reading in a newspaper of the death of the child, left in a yard in Minneapolis Nov. 17.

"To some people, it may not seem like much," said the St. Paul nurse. "But it broke my heart. I couldn't get it out of my mind. He only lived for part of one day. But that was a life, and I felt that life should be celebrated and commemorated."

"I have an 18-month-old boy myself," she said. "Like other mothers, when I hold him and cuddle him, I have a special name for him. I call him my little baby boy."

"So that's what we're having put on the monument — 'Jesus Loves You, Baby Boy.'"

The monument will be erected over the tiny grave in the family plot of Rosalia Livingston.

"I've lived a long life," she said. "This little baby lived for just a few hours. I can't explain why it's important for me to do something for it. But it is."

Late Wednesday, Minneapolis police announced they had arrested a 16-year-old girl believed to be the mother of the baby. Authorities said she was being held in a hospital psychiatric ward while the Hennepin County attorney's office decided whether to bring charges against her.

The Rev. Roger Mackey said about half the people who attended the service at the St. Paul-Reformation Church were strangers to him.

The service was simple: scriptures, hymns, a meditation. Mourners sang "Away in the Manger" and heard the Gospel reading of the nativity, about another child humbly born about 2,000 years ago.

After a prayer for the mother and father of the unknown infant, a single pallbearer lifted the tiny casket and carried it up the aisle. The Hamlines walked behind, standing in for the parents who were not there to mourn their son.

In the back pew, a woman clung to her bundled infant and cried.

'Alice' star best represents working women: poll

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Who best represents the working woman on television?

Bonnie Franklin is a public relations and advertising executive on "One Day at a Time." Loretta Swit is an Army nurse on "MASH." Penny Marshall and Cindy Williams bottle beer on "Laverne and Shirley."

The working woman is widely represented on television, although not many are ever shown on the job. Most are in jobs that traditionally have been open to women, and few are in positions of authority.

Who then is the heroine of the working woman? According to the National Commission on Working Women, it is Linda Lavin, who plays a waitress on CBS' "Alice."

Miss Lavin was recently given the commission's Grassroots Award based on a poll of working women across the country. The commission represents blue and pink collar working women.

She was also cited for her upcoming television movie, "The $5.20 an Hour Dream," in which she plays a factory worker fighting for a higher-paying job.

"I think the fact that this award was given me is a very strong indication that we are reaching the people whose jobs are, well, not only the non-glamorous jobs, but those that don't have much dignity brought to them," she says.

"I think we do deal with them, even in a comedy situation. The show is highly farcical, but you do see women at work, and that's very rare in television. And those women out there are feeling supported by that weekly evidence on television, no matter how difficult their lives and their jobs are."

Miss Lavin plays Alice Hyatt on "Alice," now in its fourth season and at the top of the ratings. It is adapted from the movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore," in which the role of Alice brought Ellen Burstyn an Oscar as best actress.

Alice is a woman with a young son and a dream of becoming a singer. She views her stay in Phoenix and her job at Mel's Diner as only a waystop on the road to a singing career.

Most of the action takes place in the diner, where Vic Tayback is the dyspeptic proprietor. Polly Holliday is Flo, who is tarnished brass on the outside and solid gold inside. Beth Howland is Vera, who's tuned in to a different wave length. Philip McKeon plays Alice's son, Tommy.

ENTERTAINMENT

Polly Holliday, incidentally, will soon be taking Flo to a series of her own. She'll leave the show in late December, when Diane Ladd joins "Alice" as a waitress named Belle. Miss Ladd created the role of Flo in the movie.

Miss Lavin says when she was first asked to do Alice she had some pause. "What scared me was doing a character I felt had already been very fully played by another actress. I always felt there was great potential. Especially in someone who has a kid, has a dream and is stymied in a situation that presents obstacles to that dream."

In four years Alice has changed, but Miss Lavin says the dream is still present.

"She wants to sing and she performs whenever she can," she says. "For instance, I take a job sometimes as a singing telegram deliverer. In the opening show this season I go to Telly Savalas' hotel and sing. There are lots of opportunities for the character to sing, which is fun for me."

Miss Lavin, who was on the musical comedy stage in New York, took on "Alice" after a semi-regular stint on "Barney Miller." Since then she's starred in the television movie "Like Mom, Like Me," and played a guest star role with her husband, Ron Leibman, on his series "Kaz." His series was canceled.

Besides her movie, she's working with Joe Layton, and Ken and Mitzie Welch on a special, and with Nancy Malone on a project about what happens to a woman inside and outside of prison.

Her movie, "The $5.20 an Hour Dream," is also a change of pace for her. She plays a divorced woman with a child who needs $30 a month more to make ends meet. So she presses for a higher-paying job on the production line — a traditionally all-male job.

Her pursuit of the job brings opposition from the men and indifference from her own union. Miss Lavin says, "It's not a story about politics or unions. It's about her economic needs and the conflicts that arise when she goes after a better job."

She wins out when those around her finally find their decency and fairness.

The same can't often be said of Mel in "Alice." He exploits the waitresses, and several shows have been built around that. In one episode he hired a waiter and paid him more than the waitresses.

Violinist Lowell Hohstadt wins Juilliard's Bach Competition

ODESSA — Lowell Hohstadt, talented young Odessa violinist who studies at the Juilliard School in New York City, has won the prestigious Bach Competition at Juilliard and recently performed as soloist with the Juilliard Orchestra.

Hohstadt, 15, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Hohstadt of Odessa. Dr. Hohstadt is musical director-conductor of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, Inc.

Young Hohstadt entered Juilliard's pre-college division this fall as a scholarship student. At Juilliard, he is studying with noted violinist and teacher Marge Pardee.

Prior to attending Juilliard, Hohstadt was for several years a student of Dorothy Croft, well-known Odessa violinist and teacher. During his years in Odessa, he performed in several dozen concerts and as a recitalist. He played in the first violin section of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and served as concertmaster of the Texas Tech Music Camp orchestra and the Texas All-Region orchestra. He currently plays in three orchestras in the New York City area.

The young man has been a scholarship recipient for a summer's study at the Meadowmount School of Music and has received the Benno Rabinoff Award given annually to an outstanding young violinist "for having performed with sensitivity, sound technique and tonal clarity and beauty."

Hohstadt has several musical compositions to his credit. He is one of the youngest boys to have received the coveted Eagle Scout award of the Boy Scouts of America.

Early next month, he will make his debut performance with a European orchestra when he performs Jan. 7 with the Oradea Philharmonic of Romania.
