City Holds Line On Tax Rate

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council approved a $28.4 million general fund budget this morning and left last year's $1.12 per $100 valuation tax rate unchanged.

At a public hearing on the budget, discussion centered on $25,000 earmarked to hire a person to promote the Civic Center and other city facilities.

Representatives of the hotel-motel assoication and the restaurant association urged the council not to spend the money and wait to see how operation of the Convention and Tourism Bureau by the Chamber of Commerce next year goes.

Ray Chapman, chairman of the board of the Lubbock Hotel-Motel Association, said the money allocated to hire the promotional person could better be spent by increasing funds to the Convention and Tourism Bureau.

"The money could better be used elsewhere," Chapman said, or the council should "hold up a year and see where we are."

Recently the council decided to turn operation of the Convention and Tourism Bureau over to the Chamber for the coming year and to hire a person to promote city facilities to insure they are adequately used.

Councilman Bill McAlister explained, "It was a feeling on the part of the council we have a duty and responsibility to see the civic center used as much of the time as possible."

Council members did agree not to fill the promotion position until further discussion on what the employees' responsibilities would be.

All council members but Bud Aderton voted in favor of that motion.

Also speaking on the budget was Robert Reithel, manager of employee relations at Johnson Manufacturing, who asked that a bus route be approved to benefit employees of the business.

However council members said they would prefer to eliminate an unprofitable route and substitute the route by Johnson Manufacturing rather than simply adding a new route.

The budget hearing was a marked contrast to hearings on the budget last year, Mayor Dirk West noted. Last year, in the heat of the tax revolt, the council held hearings all day and into the night before adopting a budget.

Council also held a public hearing on

SMASHED BY STORM — An employee looks over the wreckage of an auto supply store in Pascagoula, Miss., after it was smashed by Hurricane Frederic early today. Storm Blasts Residents Of Gulf Coast

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Hurricane Frederic crashed into this 300-year-old port with 130 mph winds early today, ripping apart homes, flattening businesses and felling trees and power lines along the Gulf Coast from Florida to Louisiana.

By morning Frederic, downgraded to a tropical storm, had moved inland over southeast Mississippi, growing weaker but still whipping winds up to 80 mph as far as Meridian, Miss., about 100 miles to the north.

There were two confirmed deaths as the born-again storm hit Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and the Florida Panhandle, churning up 15-foot tides. Forecasters said the greatest threat today was from floods and tornadoes.

This festival city of 300,000 and neighboring Pascagoula, Miss., a smaller city to the west, bore the brunt of the hurricane which first hit land at Dauphin Island, a resort island 5 miles long that was reported "sliced in half."

"I would say there is not a dwelling, business or any other building in Jackson County that does not have damage ranging from minor to total destruction," said Ken Phillips, director of disaster relief in Pascagoula.

Mayor A.J. Cooper of Prichard, a Mobile suburb of 50,000, said widespread looting was reported in his community today. The mayor told his policemen to fire two warning shots at looters, then "shoot to kill."

Mobile Mayor Gary Greenbought said some looting was reported in the downtown area and Alabama Gov. Fob James sent armed National Guardsmen and state troopers into the area.

Prichard fireman Sidney Anderson said the looting began at daybreak, "as soon as they could see to steal."

Nearly half a million people fled their homes as Frederic followed close to the path that Hurricane Camille took 10 years ago in killing more than 250 people.

At mid-morning the center of Frederic was located near latitude 32.3 north and longitude 88.6 west, very close to Meridian. It was moving north at 15 mph to 20 mph and was expected to turn northeast later in the day.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham said he expected the damage in the area from Panama City to Pensacola to exceed the $95 million in wreckage left by Hurricane David 13 days ago. Frederic destroyed 125 houses and mobile homes and blacked out the entire tip of the Florida Panhandle.

Mississippi Gov. Cliff Finch estimated damage in his state at more than $50 million.

"It's terrible," Finch said. "Fortunately there were not any lives lost. But some lost all they had saved all their life for."

In Mobile, streets were nearly impassable and 160,000 customers were without electricity. A power company spokesman said it would take several weeks to fully restore power.

Frederic damaged the roof and ripped a cupola from the historic City Hall in Mobile, where more than 5 inches of rain fell between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. Wednesday.

Century-old oaks littered the city's boulevards and littered streets kept firefighters from three reported blazes. Downtown storefronts were blasted out, and officials said one shopping center which housed several stores was "virtually blown away."

County engineer Joe Ruffer woke up city chain saw dealers to get tools for the massive cleanup, but said "I may have to cut my way into the area where my work crews live."

Jury Panel Studies Drug Raid Claims

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A federal court civil jury filed out of the U.S. District Courtroom at 10:30 a.m. today to begin deliberations on whether narcotics agents involved in a 1976 Plainview drug raid acted in good faith when executing the warrant for the raid.

The panel also must decide if the five agents involved in the Lubbock retrial of the case acted "wantonly and maliciously" after entering the apartment of Ted Hooks, Diane Duncan Hooks and Delia Gutierrez on March 19, 1976.

The Hookses and Miss Gutierrez filed the suit, charging the agents with violations of civil rights and seeking $300,000 in damages, after it was discovered the officers, although armed with a search warrant, were looking for a neighbor of the trio.

In final arguments this morning, plaintiffs' attorney John Mann told the panel, "I don't believe this is the kind of conduct we can afford to tolerate from our government. Has our government gotten so big they can walk around and treat us like this? Tell the government 'no.'"

Mann added that although testimony indicated Mrs. Hooks had been mistaken about which officer had tried to pull the blanket off her the morning they entered her bedroom, the mistaken identity of the officer did not detract from the action.

And, Mann, pointed out to the jury, the court's charge on how to consider evidence states that the panel need not find each officer who participated in the raid guilty of wanton behavior; they are to consider each defendant's actions individually.

The Amarillo attorney also noted that while two of the narcotics agents, who were wearing plainclothes the morning of the raid, said they were preceded by a uniformed Plainview officer carrying the warrant, the uniformed officer testified he was the fourth person to enter the residence.

In asking the jury to award $1,000 in actual damages and $60,000 for each of the five defendants in punitive damages, Mann said the jury should tell the officers, "Don't teach us to fear the law."

Defense counsel Joe Harlan, representing former Amarillo officers Jim Patterson and Russell Ivy, however, pointed out that in the charge, it is not-

Three Local Robberies Reported

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Lubbock convenience store was robbed of $75 cash about 1:30 a.m. today, and two individuals, in separate incidents, told city police they fell victim to bandits Wednesday.

Autumn Kristene Blair, 18-year-old attendant at the 7-Eleven Store at 2318 19th St., said a man entered the business early this morning, walked straight to the counter and displayed a brown-handled knife before asking her if she had any money.

The employee said she was holding $75 cash which she was about to put into the safe when the bandit confronted her.

Miss Blair said that after she handed the money to the man, he fled the store and ran southeast across 19th Street.

The suspect was described as a black man, between 18 and 25, short, thin and wearing blue pants and a plaid shirt. He reportedly sported a medium-length afro haircut, was clean-shaven and wore a black watch on his right wrist.

About 3½ hours before that holdup, Curtis Wayne Howell, 20, of 4913 37th St. told police three persons robbed him of his tan 1977 Grand Prix.

Howell said he was getting out of his car in front of an apartment complex in the 8200-block of Quaker Avenue when he was confronted by the trio, who asked him for a ride.

He said that after he refused to give them a lift, he was pushed back into his vehicle and one of the men began driving his car.

Reports indicate the other two men were laughing and trying to disrobe Howell while their companion drove.

The victim told police he was driven to 21st Street and Memphis Avenue where he was pushed out of his car and knocked to the ground. The bandits, still laughing, then reportedly got back into Howell's vehicle and drove north.

Reports state one of the suspects went by the first name of "Al," and was a young, heavy-set Mexican-American with brown eyes. Another suspect reportedly was a tall white man, between 18 and 25.

Howell told police he could not describe the third bandit.

In yet another reported holdup, a 21-year-old disabled man told Lubbock police he was robbed of his hat, watch, keys and blank checks about 4 p.m. Wednesday after he accepted a ride with a woman at 16th Street and Avenue B.

Couple Refuses Sex Club Offer

A married couple living in South Lubbock received an offer Wednesday morning which they decided they could refuse.

It was a lettered invitation to join the "Friendship Club," with regular meetings held weekly. The letter stated that the agenda at each meeting would include "several hours of swinging sex."

And it would have been so easy to sign up. No forms to fill out or dues to pay. All the couple was instructed to do, if interested, was to hang out a bright-colored cloth in a window facing the street in front of their house by 9 a.m. Thursday.

The letter also stated that if couples could not attend regular meetings, some members would be free during the day.

While the offer probably would be attractive to some lonely hearts, this couple decided not to join and was a little incensed they got the invitation to begin with. They called police.

The 34-year-old housewife said the letter came in the mail about 11:45 a.m. Wednesday, and the postmark showed it was mailed the day before in Lubbock. The invitation was typed, lacked any names and was signed only "Friendship Club."

In early August, a man living in the same neighborhood called police after discovering a photograph of a nude woman and several pages torn out of a pornographic magazine propped up next to a tree in his front yard.

However, there was no invitation to join anything in that incident.

The man said he wanted to report it to police in case any "weird things happen in the future."

The man said at the time he thought a neighbor was responsible for placing the material in his yard.

The report made Wednesday by the couple was classified by police as 'harassment.' However, a police official said the invitation sent in the mail actually was not a criminal offense.

Haig Accepts Invitation To Speak Here Sept. 28

By JOE GULICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce at 7 p.m. Sept. 28 in Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. The announcement was made at this morning's board of directors meeting.

Haig, former Supreme Allied Commander of European Operations and NATO, follows two other notable chamber banquet speakers. The 1977 Chamber of Commerce Banquet featured former President Gerald R. Ford and the 1978 banquet featured former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Haig will be introduced at the program by U.S. Rep. Kent Hance. Retiring chamber president Tim Hatch will be recognized and incoming chamber officers will be officially recognized.

Haig retired from the military service on June 30, 1979, after a distinguished career including serving as Supreme European Commander, Supreme Commander of NATO, and White House Chief of Staff. Late in August, he was elected to the board of Texas Instruments.

Tickets for the event went on sale today at the Chamber of Commerce Office for $12.50 each on a first-come, first-served basis.

The board of directors is planning a reception for Haig before the banquet.

In other action at today's meeting, the directors discussed Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland's visit to the area next week. Bergland is coming at the invitation of Rep. Hance to inspect crop damage in the area. The directors made plans to meet with Bergland at a breakfast reception on Sept. 20.

The directors also supported the proposed location for the new central station of the U.S. Postal Service. The proposed site, near the intersection of Avenue L and Fourth Street has met with approval so far from the Postal Service and City Hall, according to Bob Messersmith, chairman of the urban rehabilitation committee.

The directors decided to check with the members about a possible bus tour to Amarillo to visit a coal-burning generator plant of Southwestern Public Service Company there.

Boy's Death Clouds Safety Programs

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Despite the posters and pamphlets, despite the films and public service announcements, despite city and school efforts at promoting safety awareness, a 7-year-old Parsons Elementary student was struck by a car and killed Friday as he rode his bicycle to school.

The tragedy prompted city and school safety coordinators to re-examine their safety campaigns, and although they concluded they are already conducting adequate programs, they are still looking for ways to improve them.

Lubbock public schools traditionally launch a safety campaign, chiefly among elementary school students, during the first few weeks of school and several times during the year. In addition, fourth grade physical education teachers are required to teach a concentrated safety unit.

"I feel we have done as much as we could this opening school campaign," said Charles Caraway, director of health, physical education and driver education for the schools. "One of our (the schools') principal responsibilities is for safety in the schools. It's not only our moral, but our legal responsibility."

Still, Caraway has asked the principals in the district for feedback on the safety campaign — "if there are any additional materials, anything we could do to help them do a better job (promoting safety)."

Caraway explained that safety instruction is not an academic subject "and that makes it difficult. But our philosophy is that even though we don't have teachers of safety, all teachers are safety instructors."

Teaching aids available for instruction in safety include films, filmstrips and records, safety bulletins and pamphlets and posters distributed by the Citizens Traffic Commission and the Department of Public Safety.

Caraway said that the DPS booklet "Texas Bicycle Driver Rules" is always given to fourth grade students, because a past survey showed that students usually begin riding bicycles to school when they reach that grade level.

But he said in view of the younger age of the child struck last week, that the pamphlets may be handed out to elementary children below the fourth grade level as well.

Caraway said that the school principals "are responsible for making sure the school environment is safe and teachers present safety instruction as needed."

He noted that the principals met recently with central office personnel and reported that teach-

Blind Man Finds Home For Ill Seeing-Eye Dog

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lottie led her blind master aboard the airliner like she's done for eight years. But this time, the weeping blind man took off his guide dog's harness, kissed her and turned her over to a sobbing San Antonio couple.

With that, Keith Roark of Decatur, Ga., ended his nationwide journey to find the perfect home for the devoted 10-year-old tan-and-black German shepherd that can no longer serve him because of its own failing eyesight.

"I've got three hours on the plane to sit and cry," said Roark, alone for the first time since he got the dog in 1971. "It's going to be very hard on me. She's part of me. When I leave part of me behind, it's hard."

Although Lottie is still suitable as a house pet, Roark said he could not keep her after he gets his new guide dog Oct. 1. He said he would have had to have her destroyed if he couldn't find the proper home for her.

His plight received nationwide attention and more than 800 families, including Mike and Denise Pirtle of San Antonio, offered to take the dog. He was still getting calls Wednesday morning, one Dallas woman offering to send her private jet to pick up Roark and his dog.

But Roark's incredibly strict requirements had eliminated all but the Pirtles and a Tucson, Ariz. family. Roark and Lottie visited 10 cities on the search, making their last stop in San Antonio.

"I'm very happy, but my heart aches for Mr. Roark," Mrs. Pirtle said through tears. "Lottie will be the happiest dog in the world. Lottie will love it here. She'll be a member of the family."

In a notarized document, the Pirtles agreed to groom Lottie twice per day, take her to the veterinarian every 90 days, walk her at least 1½ miles daily and feed her special vitamins and a certain type of dog food.

Two Regulars Leaving Show

NEW YORK (AP) — "Saturday Night Live" is losing two of its liveliest cut-ups — Dan Aykroyd and John Belushi — according to a spokesman for the NBC-TV series.

Spokesman George Hoover said Wednesday the two comedians would not be with the show when it begins its fifth season Oct. 13.

Belushi and Aykroyd are appearing in Steven Spielberg's upcoming film, "1941," due for release around Christmas. They also have been working on the "Blues Brothers" movie in Chicago, a follow-up to an album they made.

Vincent Pleads Innocent

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Actor Jan-Michael Vincent has pleaded innocent in Municipal Court to a charge of home marijuana cultivation.

The 34-year-old actor is scheduled to appear for a preliminary hearing before Oct. 11. He was released Wednesday on his own recognizance.

Plantis added that after serving Vincent with a search warrant, deputies found 41 marijuana plants ranging in height from 4 to 12 feet growing in a greenhouse behind the actor's home.

Vincent has starred in such movies as "White Line Fever," released in 1975 and "Bite the Bullet," a 1974 release.

Pope Blesses Young Actor

Wednesday's encounter occurred in St. Peter's square as the pope approached the platform from which he later addressed a crowd of 30,000 in his weekly public audience.

Ricky was introduced by a priest. John Paul smiled, said a few words to the youngster and blessed him.

Ben Bradlee Buys Mansion

NEW YORK (AP) — Grey Gardens, the 26-room mansion owned by Edith Beale, a cousin of Jacqueline Onassis, has been sold to Ben Bradlee, executive editor of the Washington Post.

In 1971, Suffolk County health officials tried to evict Miss Beale and her mother, Edith, from the East Hampton, N.Y., mansion when they found 25 cats had the run of the house, which had fallen into disrepair.

Mrs. Onassis and her half-sister, Lee Radziwill, paid $32,000 for repairs and the women were allowed to remain.

In February, the house was reported to be on the market for $500,000. Miss Beale said Wednesday, "My brother told me if I dropped the price to $225,000 I would sell it before winter, and that's what happened."

Steiger To Play Mussolini Again

ROME (AP) — Actor Rod Steiger has signed to play Italy's Fascist dictator Benito Mussolini for the second time in his career.

The 52-year-old actor will appear in American producer-director Moustapha Akkad's $25 million epic "Omar Mukhtar." He will play Mussolini during the height of his power when he invaded Libya and ran into Bedouin resistance led by Mukhtar, played by Anthony Quinn.

Five years ago, the actor played in the Italian production "Mussolini, the Last Act" that depicted his final days before being killed by Italian partisans.

Buffaloes Play Through

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — There's probably never been a hazard quite like the one at Trosper Park Golf Course.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

"One of the golfers walked in and asked me how much the buffalo had to pay to get on the 10th green," pro shop manager Jonya Christensen said Wednesday.

She said greenskeepers had spotted tracks several days ago, but her "beware of the buffalo" speeches drew only snickers.

They quit snickering on Wednesday.

Miss Christensen said the buffalo was spotted about 3:30 p.m. Police and animal control officers arrived and the chase was on.

Eluding the golf carts and pickup trucks, the buffalo raced past a shocked foursome putting on the 12th green.

Three tranquilizer darts didn't seem to faze the beast, which appeared to quit three hours later only because it got tired.

A police spokesman said the pet buffalo's owner had reported it missing several days ago, but officers thought it was a crank call.

3-Year-Old Rescues Baby Sister From Attack By Rabid Bat

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — "He was flying and he bit Katie and he bit me and I hit him," said 3-year-old Annie Whattoff after she slapped a rabid bat, knocking it unconscious and getting bit in the process.

For a 3-year-old, what Annie did to rescue her infant sister was amazing, says the chief veterinary epidemiologist at the federal Center for Disease Control.

It was Sunday afternoon, and Annie was napping with her 10-month-old sister in a bedroom of the Whattoff family's home when she saw the bat attack the baby. Annie went after the creature with her hands.

Test later confirmed the bat was rabid and both girls are undergoing a painful 21-day series of rabies-vaccine shots.

Dr. Gerald Winkler, the veterinary epidemiologist with the Disease Control Center in Atlanta, said Wednesday he had never heard of a case like it.

"My reaction would be that it was a remarkably responsible and protective reaction on the part of the older child," he said. "I am amazed."

Sonya Whattoff, the girls' mother, said there had been bats in the attic and under the eaves of the house before. Efforts to get rid of them were not successful, she said.

The Whattoffs were out Sunday afternoon and a baby sitter was caring for Annie and Katie. Both were napping in Katie's room when the sister heard Annie screaming.

By the time the sitter got into the room, the bat was unconscious on a bed. Katie had been bitten on the hand; Annie, on the arm.

County animal control officers shipped the bat to Denver, where the State Health Department confirmed Monday it was rabid. State Patrol cars rushed anti-rabies vaccine to Greeley, about 45 miles north of Denver, and the first shots were administered Monday

Officials In Juarez Killing Dogs To Combat Rabies

EL PASO (AP) — Mexican authorities in Juarez are rounding up and killing stray dogs in an effort to combat a rabies outbreak that already has claimed at least three lives along the border.

Heriberto Perez-Gonzales, health center director for El Paso's Mexican sister city of Juarez, said 300 veterinarians also were lecturing in Juarez schools to advise children of the dangers of rabid animals.

Dr. Richard Coppedge, field chief for the Pan American Health Organization here, said two deaths in Juarez — still not officially confirmed as rabies — recently were reported.

Mexican animal control patrols set out before dawn each day, picking up all stray dogs, according to Perez-Gonzales. The strays are killed the same day in a gas chamber.

Perez-Gonzales said Wednesday about 45,000 Juarez dogs had been vaccinated. He said educational radio programs have been warning dog owners for weeks to vaccinate animals and keep them tied or indoors.

Dr. Bernard F. Rosenblum, El Paso city-county health director, said Juarez reported 109 rabid animals since December. El Paso has reported 29 rabid dogs, cats and skunks since March.

El Paso Animal Control Supervisor Jack Luck said he hopes dogs will be controlled on the Mexican side of the border before late October.

Recluse Worth $1.1 Million

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Genette Lemmon lived in a house filled with dirt and garbage but court records show that Genette Lemmon was really a millionaire.

Neighbors say that Miss Lemmon, 81, a former school teacher who died last April, kept to herself.

Only one light bulb in the house worked. Her home had been without hot water service for 15 years and without any water for five months.

Yet, when Hamilton County Probate Court records were filed this week, they showed the former school teacher was worth more than $1.1 million.

Investigators said she had $112,000 in cash including $42,000 of it at the house and the rest in a bank safety deposit box.

And, at seven banks and savings and loan associations, she had more than $580,000 in accounts.

She also owned $400,000 worth of stocks.

The probate court will decide where all the money will wind up.

Miss Lemmon, who never married, left a will that said her estate should be divided according to Ohio law.

West Texas Town Enraged Over Training Flights

VALENTINE (UPI) — If approved by the Secretary of the Air Force, military jet trainers could begin shaking the tranquility of this tiny West Texas ranching community with simulated dogfights at supersonic speeds as early as January, 1980.

A spokesman at Holloman Air Force Base, N.M., said January was "the absolute earliest" that the 49th Tactical Fighter Wing could begin supersonic training flights, expected to produce 35 to 40 sonic booms each weekday in an area where a coyote's howl or cowboy's whoop are about the loudest noises ever heard.

Residents of the community of Valentine, situated 40 miles southwest of remote Van Horn and heretofore known only as a treasured postmark for Valentine's Day cards, have not taken kindly to the news of the training missions and a spokesman said they have retained a Washington D.C. lawyer and intend to file suit to halt the Air Force's plans.

After conducting a public hearing in Valentine last week, Air Force officials are now preparing a final environmental impact statement on supersonic flights over the area, according to Holloman spokesman Maj. Vern Spohn.

Spohn said the Air Force was proposing 300 supersonic flight training missions over the Valentine area each month, causing 35 to 40 sonic booms each weekday. But he added it also would be practical to fly as many as 600 missions a month.

Based on 300 flights, Spohn said the Air Force estimated a given individual would only hear three to four sonic booms each day because of varying flight patterns.

"We had to get an area that is free of air traffic," Spohn said.

He said the possibility of inflight collisions in areas frequented by military and commercial aircraft in more heavily populated areas caused the Air Force to search for a remote area such as surrounds Valentine.

Under the proposal, training jets from Holloman also would practice supersonic training dogfights over the White Sands, N.M., Missile Range and at Morensi, Ariz., in the desert, Spohn said.

He said the Air Force would have almost exclusive use of the air space from about 5,000 to 50,000 feet in the Valentine area.

About 65 Valentine area residents attended the Air Force's public meeting last week. R.W. Voigt, coordinator of the Council for the Preservation of the West Texas Frontier, led objections to the proposed training flights.

Voigt contended that although an Air Force study said only 700 persons live in the boundaries of the proposed supersonic training area, the sonic booms would be heard by about 20,000 persons in cities on the fringes of the area, including Marfa, Van Horn, Presidio, and Ojinaga, Mexico.

Voigt alleged he had a list of "broken promises" by the Air Force, saying 12 sonic booms were heard by residents in the eastern limits of the 2,700 square mile training area between Nov. 20, 1978, and Feb. 1, 1979.

Air Force officials conceded that two "accidental" sonic booms were caused and that other military aircraft may have created sonic booms outside the designated altitude areas.

The Air Force officials promised that no night flights would be conducted, but Voigt said, "I've heard maneuvers over my house as late as 3 o'clock in the morning."

Voight said although it would cost the federal government more money, the training missions should be conducted over the Gulf of Mexico or over the ocean near Tydall Air Force Base, Fla.

PLANT AWAITS STRIKE

ARLINGTON (AP) — About 4,700 workers at General Motor's assembly plant in Arlington and the parts depots in Dallas and Houston are among workers poised to strike at midnight Friday if a new contract is not negotiated, union officials said. The Arlington plant is one of 13 the United Auto Workers has picked out of 26 GM assembly plants for the selective strike. The two Texas parts depots are among 32 of 43 which the UAW plans to strike.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Dr. Carter's Snake Oil

JIMMY CARTER, who promised us as a candidate that he would never mislead us or lie to us, is saying things about the U.S.-Soviet arms pact which simply are not true.

He says the proposed SALT II agreement "will give us peace, cut down on the nuclear arms race, control the proliferation of nuclear weapons throughout all the rest of the world (and) allow us to monitor what the Soviets are doing."

First of all, no signed piece of paper, even if ratified by the Senate, will give us peace. The idea that it could is absurd.

Second, SALT II will neither cut down the nuclear arms race nor stop the Soviets' buildup. These assertions are preposterous.

THE AGREEMENT would allow the U.S. to dramatically increase its nuclear warheads from 9,000 to 15,000 by 1985, and permit the Soviets to increase their warheads from 5-15,000 in this same period.

According to CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner, SALT II will reduce the growth rate of the Soviet defense budget by "one-fifth of one percent," not exactly bringing Russian military spending to a screeching halt.

Third, SALT will not, as the President claims, control the proliferation of nuclear weapons throughout all the rest of the world." This statement is ludicrous. SALT is a bilateral agreement between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. It has nothing whatsoever to do with nuclear weapons in any other countries.

Despite the outrageousness of the SALT-selling quackery, one ought not to underestimate its impact. A lot of people are willing to believe any tale, forcefully told, by a seemingly authoritative figure.

DR. ELISHA Perkins and his son lived quite comfortably in the mid-1700s selling their patented "Perkins Metallic Tractor", a device consisting of two, three-inch metal rods which were supposed to yank disease out of various ailing parts of the body. Believers included George Washington and Supreme Court Chief Justice Oliver Ellsworth.

John D. Lofton, syndicated columnist and editor of Battle Line, monthly publication of the American Conservative Union, says, "If Mr. Carter were Pinnochio and said the things he has said about SALT II, he would need two more personal aides just to carry his nose."

Well, maybe. But the President does provide a textbook example of the old bait-and-switch game by telling us the treaty will perform miracles—instead of what it really does.

THE WAY TO GET tax relief, says Chairman Al Ullman of the House Ways and Means Committee, is to create a new value added tax (VAT) that would raise as much as $150 billion in its first year.

THE WAY THINGS are shaping up, this year's Mexican Fiesta here could be a significant milestone in bringing about better racial relations and understanding.

From 5:30 p.m. Friday until 10 p.m. Sunday, Lubbock's browns will be enjoying themselves at the Memorial Civic Center and they've invited other residents to come share their heritage with them.

Leaders among our Mexican-American citizens have given the weekend celebration a new tone this year that will preserve all that's good about it and make it a source of pride for all.

Moving it to the Civic Center after a situation that some thought got out of hand in a city park last year was the first step toward enhancing the character and quality of the Fiesta.

Chairman Sally Rodriguez, with the help of the Mexican American Chamber of Commerce, Civic Lubbock, the Human Relations Commission, the Parks and Recreation Department and other city officials, has put together a top-notch program.

Raul Sanchez of COMA and Barbara Sommerville, director of the Guadalupe Neighborhood Center, are among those who I'm told have worked hardest on the plans.

After a ribbon-cutting by Mayor protem Alan Henry and City Manager Larry Cunningham at 5:30 p.m. Friday, there will be a mass and then a beauty and talent contest preceding a 9:30 p.m. dance.

SATURDAY'S PARADE, Folklorica ballet, classical guitar, arobic dance, disco, singing and more dancing all sound exciting, as does the entire schedule of events through Sunday night.

Any white or black who attends all or part of the celebration is bound to come away with a better appreciation for the Mexican-American culture.

As a large and increasingly successful part of the Lubbock populace, the Mexican-Americans want to preserve their heritage while participating fully in the economic opportunities of today.

This year's Fiesta provides an opportunity for all to enjoy the best of both the past and the present.

Paul Scott:

Salary 'Cut' Lightens Tax Load

WASHINGTON—A little-known provision of the Social Security law can save workers and employes some of their hard-earned money in these days of increasing taxes and rising costs.

The "double saver" is a 40-year-old provision that permits employers to pay the worker's share of the social security payroll tax—a payment that normally comes out of an employe's regular pay check.

While this part of the Social Security law has been little used in the past, more businesses are discovering its benefits because of increasing Social Security taxes, according to a survey by the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

WORKERS AND EMPLOYERS must now pay 6.13 percent on income up to $22,900, for a maximum tax of $1,403.77 each, and big increases are scheduled to begin in 1981 under past rate changes made in the Social Security law.

Under the little publicized provision, the employer can pay the worker's share of the payroll tax and trim the employe's gross salary by the same amount. This procedure helps both save.

In the case of a worker earning $10,000 a year, for example, he and his employer normally would pay social security taxes of $613 each on that amount, for a total tax of $1,266.

Total cost to the employer is the wage plus the tax, or $10,613, and the worker's pay before income taxes would amount to $9,387. Under the so-called "double savers" provision, the employer would cut the worker's gross pay to $9,387 and pay the full amount of Social Security tax owed on that amount.

AS COMPILED BY the House committee's staff, the total tax comes to $1,150. Add that to the employe's salary, and the total cost to the employer in wages and taxes is $10,537, a savings of approximately $75 a year over the usual method of paying social security taxes.

For workers in the higher pay scales, savings can run upward to more than $170 for each worker.

When hundreds and thousands of workers are involved, the savings for these firms can range from hundreds of thousands of dollars a year into the millions.

For the rank and file workers, the use of the provision can boost his actual take home pay each week. The lower gross pay would put most workers in a lower income tax bracket.

In other words, the worker would stop having to pay taxes on the part of his income which in the past went for Social Security taxes.

In some cases, workers have worked out arrangements whereby they would keep the same gross pay in lieu of other benefits with the firm paying all of the Social Security taxes.

For workers, there is one long-range drawback. Since old-age benefits are based on a worker's average lifetime earnings, employes using the provision would receive slightly lower payments.

While Social Security officials agree the "double savers" provision is very proper and legal, they aren't advertising it because of the revenue lost to the government.

Instead, these officials are now quietly lobbying the House Ways and Means Committee to eliminate the provision from the present Social Security law.

At the present time, only Texas is using a modified version of the provision. Another dozen states have made inquiries this year. Several have discovered they can save millions yearly by using it and are expected to put it into effect in the near future.

Sylvia Porter:

Today's Stockholders More 'Sober Minded'

(Seventh of nine columns)

WASHINGTON—On the surface, the America of 1920-1929 looked great, I suppose. The overall statistics showed personal income rising, industrial production climbing, employment increasing, prices dipping, profits zooming, mass consumer markets developing.

But the glitter was tinsel. For beneath the overall statistics, personal incomes were going more and more to the very top. Between 1920 and 1929, the share of the income pie going to the upper 1 percent of Americans actually increased by half.

The rise in wages and salaries was lagging far behind the productivity of workers and the rise in corporate profits, rents and interest.

In that decade, hourly wages rose only 2 percent while productivity of workers in factories soared 55 percent.

THE RATE OF growth in our population was shrinking. Farm prices were declining. The pace of auto sales was slowing.

In the late '20s, the housing and major durable goods industries went into a tailspin.

Everything was set for a classical business downturn—when suddenly the gambling fever hit the stock market and stock prices took off on the wildest credit-happy upsurge ever known in history.

And this, as Fortune magazine remarked some years ago, "postponed the inevitable reckoning and converted what might have been a routine recession into a cataclysm."

And today? Today, we are well into a business downturn—which I, for one, will not yet characterize as merely a "recession," for it may turn out to be worse than a recession (by accepted definition a moderate, relatively short business decline).

THIS DOWNTURN COULD be steeper, more prolonged and broader, paralleling in many ways the sharp break of 1974-75, which warranted the characterization of a "slump."

Today, productivity is lagging far behind the rise in wages and salaries (instead of the other way 'round)—and this factor in itself is the most basic cause of our galloping rate of inflation.

Reinvigorating the rate of rise in productivity is among our most urgent tasks if we are to bring inflation under control—and this means fundamental changes in our tax and other laws to spur business to invest in new plants and machinery and give workers more incentive to produce.

Most serious of all, the expansion in consumer debt has been so huge that it presents an ever-present hazard to our entire economy.

WHILE THE WORKING wife, in millions of instances, holds the key to the quality of the debt overloading the consumer, she as well as the male partner in the household can lose her job and turn what is now a hazard of too much debt into a horrendous problem of widespread defaults dragging down creditor with debtor.

But there are vital distinctions between the wild prosperity of 1929 and the downturn-plus-inflation of 1979.

It is in the shape of a diamond, with the vast majority of us in the middle and fewer at the top and bottom.

And it is this huge middle class which has been buying stocks with cash in the past several years and which doesn't scare easily.

And since 1929, we have built into our economic structure stabilizers that keep billions flowing into the business stream in good times and bad.

WE HAVE INSURANCE to protect our bank deposits, minimum wage laws to provide some decent living standards for our lesser educated, lesser privileged citizens. None of these reforms existed in '29.

Behind the stock market of 1929 was economic rot, which people then neither saw nor if they had, would have recognized. And in the stock market of 1929 was gambling on a scale unknown until that time.

In the stock market of 1979 are sober-minded investors who have sat through more than a decade in which prices have been "outstanding" for no trend at all.

Tomorrow: Distinction No. 6: Where the Gamblers Are.

John D. Lofton:

Russian Troops Defy Definition

WASHINGTON—The Soviet state organ Tass, laughably referred to as a "news agency," has ridiculed the U.S. claim that 2,000 to 3,000 Soviet combat troops are in Cuba.

In all candor, it must be said the U.S. position on this matter is not entirely undeserving of ridicule, although not of the type heaped on it by Tass.

On Aug. 31, State Department press spokesman Hodding Carter III said it has been "recently confirmed" that a combat unit of from 2,000 to 3,000 Soviet troops are in Cuba.

That came a little over a month after Sec. of State Cyrus Vance had assured Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., that there was "no evidence (of any) substantial increase (of the Soviet military presence in Cuba) over the past several years, or of the presence of a Soviet military base."

THE UNIT IS said to include armored, infantry and artillery elements. Although the U.S. is "concerned" about this Soviet military presence, Carter said that, as "currently configured and supported," the troop unit "poses no threat to the U.S."

He noted that on Aug. 29 the State Department expressed "our concerns" about the Soviet ground force in Cuba to Soviet officials in Washington.

So, why is the U.S. concerned about this non-threatening Soviet force? Well, Carter said, because "it is difficult to understand the rationale for their presence."

The Soviet rationale isn't the only rationale difficult to understand, however. Carter said it is "important" to "make clear" that the U.S. is "not now in a position to characterize the unit's presence in the island as a base or not."

Following his observation that the Soviet unit in Cuba is "extremely small by any true measure of military units," Carter was asked: What then is the basis on which this issue has been raised with the Soviets?

He answered: because the President is concerned about the establishment of a "military base" in this hemisphere. He hurriedly added, however: "We are not saying this is a base. We are attempting to determine what that is."

NOT A BASE! Is Carter kidding? The Soviets have 2,000 to 3,000 combat troops in Cuba, with elements of armor, infantry and artillery. The Soviets have another 1,500 to 2,000 military advisory and technical personnel in Cuba.

Soviet nuclear submarines make port calls in Cuba. And Soviet air force pilots fly MIG-23 fighter planes in Cuba. And still this does not make Cuba a Soviet military base?

Now, as ridiculous as it may be, there is a reason why the State Department adamantly refuses to call the Soviet presence in Cuba a base.

In January 1978, to get Florida Democratic Sen. Richard Stone's vote for the Panama Canal treaties, President Carter had to promise him that "it has been and will continue to be the policy of the U.S. to oppose any efforts, direct or indirect, by the Soviet Union to establish military bases in the Western Hemisphere."

SO, YOU SEE, if the Soviet presence in Cuba is called a "base," then the U.S. must insist that the Soviets withdraw their troops, which the U.S. has not done.

That's right, despite the State Department expression of concern and despite the fact that Soviet officials have been called in to explain the presence of their troops in Cuba, the U.S. has not requested that these troops be withdrawn!

When pressed on the question of whether the U.S. had asked the Soviets to remove their troops from Cuba, briefer Carter said no, that the U.S. determination is twofold: to express "concern" and to be "fully informed" about the matter.

When it was noted that he had very carefully avoided saying that a "diplomatic protest" had been made to the Soviets, Carter said: "No, I can't use that word."

Finally, whatever happened to the Monroe Doctrine—the doctrine formulated by President James Monroe's administration in 1823 which stated that the U.S. would consider any attempt on the part of the European powers "to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety."

THIS DOCTRINE WAS explicitly invoked by President John F. Kennedy in 1962 to support his diplomatic posture when he demanded the Soviets remove their nuclear missiles from Cuba.

Isn't the presence of thousands of Soviet combat troops in Cuba a violation of the Monroe Doctrine?

In 1824, Baron de Tuyll, Russian minister to the United States, vigorously assailed the Monroe Doctrine, expressing doubt that the young republic had either the willpower, the money, or the manpower to enforce it.

In July 1960, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev declared the doctrine dead, observing: "Now the remains should best be buried as every dead body is so that it should not poison the air by its decay."

President Kennedy proved him wrong, however. Will Jimmy Carter do the same?

If he lets the doctrine die, the President invites more of the kind of Soviet adventurism about which his State Department says it is so concerned.

Homemakers Organize Seminar On Nation's Energy Problems

HOUSTON (UPI) — If Americans hope to become energy independent, the effort must include the home and homemaker, say housewives who have raised money and lured top speakers to a grassroots energy seminar to tell women how they can contribute.

"Sometimes women who are not working can feel helpless," said Sarah Kosberg, an organizer of the Sept. 19 series of speeches and workshops. "But as a combined group we know we can have our voices heard."

The common bond among the 35 volunteer organizers was neither kinship nor neighborhood. They worked at home, usually raising children, though most had strong ties to their church or synagogue.

"We were tired of hearing everyone blame everyone else for the problems and saying somebody else should conserve but the individual talking never wanted to do without," said Millie Cowen, co-chairman of the seminar.

"We want to reach the woman in the home and give her some idea of what's taking place around her, what she can do to alleviate the situation and what she can do about making choices for her future and the future of her children."

"We don't want to put the hammer on anybody's head," said Mrs. Kosberg. "We want to look at all the (energy use) options and set about the task of influencing attitudes.

"Our hope and our goal simply is to raise consciousness and see what affect we can have upon our government in bringing about change."

The women do not claim to have learned a lot about energy while piecing together the seminar program, but they have surprised themselves at their ability to raise money, find speakers and attract interest.

"When it came to actually programming, we found we did it better ourselves," said Mrs. Cowen. "Many groups catered to the professional, but we wanted simple language and simple ideas."

They settled on topics that included energy myths; energy conservation in the home, church and synagogue; nuclear energy; solar energy, natural gas exploration; and petrodollars and the world economy.

With a church committed as the site of the workshops, they joked about enticing Lola Redford to Houston as a keynote speaker and learned from a television talk show she was active in Consumer Action Now. On a nothing-to-lose whim, they telephoned the organization's New York office and found out she was available and would be happy to participate.

"It's been a long summer," Mrs. Cowen said. "We just have to do it ourselves because we believe in this country and we don't want to be dependent on everybody for everything."

Lawyers Argue Ethics Of Firms Going Public

By PHILLIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

One of Wall Street's favorite jokes may not stay funny for long. Unless the courts step in, it soon may be possible to buy shares in a law firm. Wall Streeters who are weighted down with legal requirements — and soaring legal fees — have long called the law the biggest growth industry of all.

Consolidated Legal Clinics in Clearwater, Fla., isn't ready to go public yet. First, the three investors who financed the nine-office firm (none of them lawyers) have to get past charges that they're practicing law without a license. Then, says vice president Daniel Ward, "It would be a question of what kind of company we want to be — how fast we want to grow."

There's also a third problem — clearing any public sale with the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is loaded with serious-minded lawyers who aren't likely to smile on the idea.

Consolidated is tiny compared with big law firms around the country. Its offices, each of them with one lawyer and secretary, took in about $600,000 last year. In contrast, Josh Fitzhugh, editor of the National Law Journal says, the gross take at major U.S. law firms runs as high as $40 million a year.

The company, though, is having an impact on the legal profession far out of line with its size. Debates have sprung up all over the country over the ethics of laymen investing in law firms. Opponents say the profit motive could undermine the lawyer-client relationship, while supporters argue that profit is the aim of every law firm.

"I don't think there's an attorney in the country who's not in it to make money," Ward says, "unless it's legal aid. If an attorney says he's not in it for a profit, he's either a liar or a fool. And if the investors in a firm aren't concerned about the clients, they're bad investors. If a company is not doing what's in the best interest of its clients, it's not going to last. If a lawyer isn't making a profit, he's not going to be around long to serve his clients."

Last year, the Florida State Bar Association filed a suit against Consolidated, charging the unauthorized practice of law. A state circuit court judge appointed as referee filed his findings in June, coming down heavily against the firm. He said Consolidated hasn't attempted to balance the profit motive against the bar's Code of Professional Responsibility. He charged that the non-lawyer owners have access to confidential lawyer-client communications, that lawyers can be transferred from one office to another without regard for the needs of clients and that operating expenses can be paid with money from client trust funds.

Ward and other supporters of the private investor idea say the lawyers are trying to shut the company down because it's taking business away from them. "All we do is assure the cash flow, make sure the lawyers have the proper facilities and, of course, hire the lawyers," he says. "In fact, we've developed some expertise in hiring lawyers. But we have nothing to do with the lawyer-client relationship."

Ward says he expects to stay in business, staking his hopes on an eventual decision by the U.S. Supreme Court, which opened the door to legal clinics in 1977 when it ruled that lawyers could advertise. And he says Consolidated is planning to expand to other states (although virtually all states have some kind of bar on outside ownership of law firms).

When that time comes, he says, the owners would think of going public. "We've been approached by people," he says, "but I don't know whether at this time we want to go public — or need to. Besides, if we win the case, we'd get a better price."

At the SEC, which can block sales only if all material information isn't disclosed (but which can throw up so many roadblocks that many would-be sellers just give up), enforcement chief Stanley Sprokin says the idea of a publicly-owned law firm "would bother me."

"Law firms often have to make decisions that are antithetical to the profit motive," he says, "like pro bono (public service work). I don't know, I don't know."

Coastal Town's Residents Vote To Keep Laws

OCEAN GROVE, N.J. (AP) — Residents of this tiny religious enclave have voted to keep laws restricting alcohol sales, hanging laundry outside, driving and beach-going on Sundays.

Also retained in this week's voting in this mile-square coastal community were laws limiting the number of domesticated animals in a house and requiring people to wear clothing over their bathing suits on the streets and boardwalk.

Voters also decided, in a non-binding referendum, to seek approval from the state Legislature to secede from the surrounding Monmouth County community of Neptune Township, which has assumed all of Ocean Grove's municipal functions.

Exact tallies of the voting were not immediately avaiable.

In June, the state Supreme Court set up the voting by issuing a ruling stripping the town of its municipal powers and turning them over to Neptune Township. The decision, which is being appealed, said the church and the government in Ocean Grove were "inextricably intertwined."

All the town's land is owned by the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, a Methodist group, which provides 99-year leases to homeowners. Only Methodists may serve on the board of trustees, the association's governing body.

About 7,500 persons live in the shoreside community year round, but in the summer, the population swells to about 17,000.

Ballots in the voting were cast by three classes of citizens — one for full-time residents; one for registered voters and one for others, persons who live here at least eight weeks a year but are not full-time residents.

Local groups have been trying to find ways to preserve the community's traditions. And William Campbell, poll committee chairman for the Ocean Grove Businessmen Inc. which sponsored the vote said Tuesday's vote will help guide local and Neptune Township officials on how to proceed.

"My position is one of neutrality," said Campbell, who has owned a barber shop in the town for 27 years. "We just want to provide the townspeople with the opportunity to express their opinions."

Farmers' Criticism Of Reports Prompts Survey

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Department officials were so concerned about farmers' criticisms of crop and livestock reports that they commissioned a survey to explore objections of farmers and ranchers in the Dakotas.

Farmers' and ranchers' attitudes are important because officials depend on their voluntary cooperation to provide data for the large number of reports published by the Crop Reporting Board.

The board has been reporting monthly on crops since 1866. The most widely distributed reports are monthly surveys estimating crop harvest.

In the survey, 1,681 farmers and ranchers in North Dakota and South Dakota were interviewed by the National Opinion Research Center. About 10 percent wanted to eliminate Agriculture Department surveys and reports.

Half suggested some kind of change, including a fourth who doubted the accuracy of the reports and 6 percent who said the reports should be distributed only to farmers.

In a recent article in "Agricultural Situation," an Agriculture Department publication, officials said the survey "indicates that better efforts are needed to communicate how and why the Crop Reporting Board does its job."

Four out of five farmers and ranchers surveyed said the information benefits other groups more than farm operators. They said use of data by agribusiness, which supplies farmers and ranchers, was beneficial.

But they indicated that commodity buyers, speculators and consumers used the information contrary to producers' interests.

Producers criticized the surveys for pushing down farm prices, although Agriculture Department officials responded that prices rise as often as they fall following crop and livestock reports.

In addition, officials said, crop reports affect prices for only a brief period before actual supply influences prices.

"And it would be impossible to conceal an unusually large U.S. supply from buyers, who typically have their own sources of information," the article said in defense of the reports.

In further defense, officials said that no matter what the news, surveys and reports reduce uncertainty in markets.

They said the reports make farm product markets less vulnerable to manipulation by special interests and create an orderly balance between production, supply and marketing segments in the agricultural chain.

"Without the board, crop and livestock statistics would still be developed by private firms, but might only be available to benefit them and limited groups of clients seeking financial advantage in commodity markets," the Agriculture Department said.

Government procedures releasing reports to the public and news media at 3 p.m. Eastern time "ensure that survey information becomes freely available for everyone at the same time," the department said.

Officials said that early warnings about large or small crops can help farmers and ranchers adjust their plans and are essential for government policymakers and suppliers of products to farmers and ranchers.

About one-fifth of farmers and ranchers surveyed in North and South Dakota said crop and livestock reports could be trusted most of the time. About three-fifths said they could be trusted some of the time.

The remainder said survey results were almost never correct.

Yet officials believe surveys are becoming more accurate. In the 1950s, early-season forecasts were within 7 percent of final harvest. Now they are within 3 percent.

Some farmers and ranchers contended government agencies and private companies could gain access to individual replies, despite promises of confidentiality.

Agriculture Department officials said they take the confidentality promises very seriously. Responses are kept in state offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and are used to develop summaries which are sent to Washington, where tabulations are made under strict security.

Neither private companies nor government agencies are permitted access raw data, officials said. Local and federal authorities cannot look at them for tax or investigative purposes, officials said.

The majority of farmers said the reports are somewhat useful to them. One-tenth said they were very useful, but a third said the information was not useful at all.

Farmers were most interested in reports on costs or production and least interested in number of livestock on farms and monthly forecasts of crops to be harvested.

They asked for more information on potential market demand for their crops and prices they are likely to get for their crops, two things the Crop Reporting Board does not do.

USDA Issues Food Booklet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has unveiled a new food booklet that tells you "juice is better than nothing for breakfast" and that leftovers are fine for people in a hurry to get going in the morning.

It's called "Food" and is the first in a series USDA has underway to call attention to better nutrition. The next, which might raise the eyebrows of livestock producers, will include discussions of vegetarian diets and cholesterol.

The "Food" issue was announced this week. More than breakfast is discussed in the colorful 64-page volume, which makes some recommendations that are real eyeopeners.

For example:

"Have you every tried sauteed chicken livers for breakfast? Or a bowl of onion soup with grated cheese and crusty bread?"

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, who held a news conference to announce "Food" said he thought it "will be a bestseller" among nutrition-minded Americans.

Some 400,000 copies have been printed at a cost of $219,800.

Single free copies can be obtained from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 693-G, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. The booklet also can be ordered for $3.25 each from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Drought Effect Severe On Major Indian Crops

NEW DELHI (AP) — A six-week drought has destroyed more than $125 million worth of rice, millet and vegetable crops in Bareilly district, northern India, an official statement said Tuesday.

In parts of the drought-hit district, about 120 miles east of New Delhi, 80 percent of the crops have been destroyed, the Uttar Pradesh state government said.

It's called "Food" and is the first in a series USDA has underway to call attention to better nutrition. The next, which might raise the eyebrows of livestock producers, will include discussions of vegetarian diets and cholesterol.

The "Food" issue was announced this week. More than breakfast is discussed in the colorful 64-page volume, which makes some recommendations that are real eyeopeners.

For example:

"Have you every tried sauteed chicken livers for breakfast? Or a bowl of onion soup with grated cheese and crusty bread?"

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, who held a news conference to announce "Food" said he thought it "will be a bestseller" among nutrition-minded Americans.

Some 400,000 copies have been printed at a cost of $219,800.

Single free copies can be obtained from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 693-G, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. The booklet also can be ordered for $3.25 each from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Drought Effect Severe On Major Indian Crops

NEW DELHI (AP) — A six-week drought has destroyed more than $125 million worth of rice, millet and vegetable crops in Bareilly district, northern India, an official statement said Tuesday.

In parts of the drought-hit district, about 120 miles east of New Delhi, 80 percent of the crops have been destroyed, the Uttar Pradesh state government said.

Industry Voices Support For Natural Pest Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pesticide industry, although skeptical about potential government arm-twisting to force compliance from farmers, says it generally supports programs to use "natural" methods along with chemicals to control insects and other enemies of crops.

The National Agricultural Chemicals Association, which represents companies that make or formulate 90 percent of the U.S. pesticides, said integrated pest management "can evolve into a viable technique" for controlling pests that threaten the food supply.

Jack D. Early, association president, said this week that IPM — as the program is called — is "a technique whose time has come" and that "we favor the best pest control methods available, whatever they may be."

The pesticide industry accepts a responsibility "to play a central role" in developing new IPM methods, he said.

But "we oppose the use of the regulatory process" to force IPM instructions to be put on pesticide labels, Early said. "Experience has shown that educational and demonstrational approaches are far more effective."

Pests include weeds and plant diseases as well as insects. For years, farmers have relied heavily on the applications of chemicals to crops and soil to curb these threats to crop production.

But with the environmental concerns and federal crackdowns on potentially harmful chemicals — such as bans on DDT and other pesticides — much interest and research have developed on the side of an integrated approach to reduce pest damage.

Biologic controls, improved cultural practices and other means are involved in IPM so that less amounts of chemicals may be required.

However, the association said in a position paper that as IPM catches on, "there is now a danger that government will attempt to restrict the use of pesticides below the level needed to produce enough food for domestic and export consumption."

According to the industry's report, "The central issue is whether farmers will be allowed to try IPM voluntarily or whether government will impose such methods regardless of the effect on farm productivity."

It said "one specific proposal for over-regulation" by the government is that IPM recommendations be included on the labels of chemical pesticides.

The association said the proposal means that the chemical product should be used only after other types of pest control programs have been tried by producers.

"This implies that the use of the pesticide will be a 'last resort'. Crop loss will have occurred already," it said.

A spokesman for he Environmental Protection Agency, which is in charge of federal registration and labeling of pesticides, said no "specific proposal" has been made yet.

Larry O'Neill of EPA told a reporter, however, that "it's an idea that may occur in the future" and that the agency "is not averse" to putting IPM information on the labels of some chemicals.

Tests Raise Questions About Drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — New tests indicate a powerful drug used in feeds to fatten animals may be getting into food products even though its potential effects on humans have not been studied, according to a scientist.

Dr. Berton C. Pressman of the University of Miami said this week a sensitive new test he has developed shows that, contrary to previous studies, carboxylic ionophores pass through the tissues and blood of animals before being excreted.

This could mean the chemicals get into meat, eggs or milk consumed by humans, he said.

Animal tests show that ionophores stimulate heart contraction and enlarge coronary arteries, making them promising agents for treating human heart failure and shock, Pressman said.

But the drugs have not been tested on humans and research on human applications is in it's infancy, he said, raising questions about whether people should be exposed to them.

"While we wish to stress that there is no clearcut evidence of danger at the moment, in light of their powerful pharmacological effects, there is an urgent need to ascertain the consequences of the increasing exposure of man and animals to ionophores," he said.

In a presentation at the national meeting of the American Chemical Society, Pressman said thousands of tons of the ionophores, in the form of a drug called monensin, are used in poultry and cattle feed. For unknown reasons, the drug appears to help animals use food more efficiently, he added.

The scientist told a news briefing that the prevailing belief, based upon chemical industry studies, is that ionophores remain in the digestive tract of animals until they are excreted.

Pressman said his studies with dogs show the chemicals travel through the body before ending up in the intestine and finally being excreted. Because the compounds tend not to break down and almost all are recovered in excrement, the detour through the body has been missed, he said.

"In their studies, the companies look at what goes into the animals and what comes out, and not so much at what happens in between," Pressman said in an interview.

The scientist criticized the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for not paying more attention to his findings and relying too heavily on industry data on ionophores in approving their use in feeds.

However, Dr. Lester Crawford, director of the FDA's bureau of veterinary medicine, said the agency is satisfied that the safety data related to using ionophores in chickens and cattle is adequate.

"We have reviewed Dr. Pressman's data, which we view as preliminary, and we don't feel at this time that there is any need to change our regulation of monensin," Crawford said.

The official said the FDA would not fund any further research on monensin unless there is new evidence it is needed.

Pressman said more studies are needed because ionophores remain stable in the environment after being excreted and may be recycled into farm animals, enter plants or even get into farm runoff water that eventually could become drinking water.

And because of the controversy about using antibiotics and hormones in feed to fatten animals more farers may switch to ionophores, which could further increase human exposure, he said.

End To Rationing Could Bring Lines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorists once again could find themselves waiting in long gas lines because of the repeal of odd-even gasoline rationing plans.

That's the opinion of oil industry executives who say they fear motorists will return to old driving habits and use more fuel. That, in turn, could threaten heating oil supplies for the coming winter, they say. "The motorist is going to have to continue to think about the supply of gasoline because we're in an era right now of a real thin line between supply and demand," Shell Oil spokesman Tom Denman said Tuesday. Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia were the latest of several jurisdictions to announce a repeal of rationing plans.

Senators Remain Locked In Spending Dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats remained locked today in a dispute over the 1980 budget and a controversial demand that Congress live up to a commitment to trim $4 billion in government spending.

The demand, being pressed by the Senate Budget Committee, prompted a full day of closed meetings Wednesday. Those meetings continued today but key Demorats were still unable to resolve their differences.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia told reporters that "more than one sticking point" remained, but he refused to discuss details of the talks. He said action on the budget would be delayed at least until Monday.

Sen. Russell B. Long, chairman of the Finance Committee, took to the Senate floor late Wednesday to criticize the Budget Committee's demand as unrealistic.

"We are not going to achieve a balanced budget by announcing program cuts that we will not be able to bring about," the Louisiana Democrat said.

However, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, Budget Committee chairman, said earlier he was determined to fight for the cuts, recommended amid widespread anti-spending rhetoric earlier this year.

In its target 1980 budget adopted last May, Congress recommended $5.6 billion in spending cuts. However, $4 billion of those proposed legislative savings have not been achieved in subsequent action on the budget.

The Senate Budget Committee voted last month to try to force seven committees to make those cuts through a budgetary process called "reconciliation."

Reconciliation, which needs majority approval in both houses of Congress, is politically touchy because it treds on the traditional power of committee chairmen to oversee legislation under their jurisdiction.

After a three-hour Democratic caucus Wednesday, Muskie conceded that achieving reconciliation was "going to be very difficult," but said he would oppose the budget resolution if it did not contain "some element of savings."

The Maine Democrat said he would accept a budget that did not mention specific programs to be cut but set overall spending close to what the budget committee recommended. Congress would have to decide later where to cut.

The Democrats also appeared split over President Carter's recommendation this week that defense spending be increased by 3 percent in real terms after inflation is discounted.

Carter's proposal exceeds the levels of Pentagon spending supported by the House and Senate budget committees.

"National security is not going to be jeopardized if for one year we adopt fiscal restraint," Muskie said. "If we relax on defense ... it will be very difficult not to yield on domestic programs."

However, two prominent Democrats who favor higher defense spending endorsed the president's recommendation.

Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., praised Carter's proposal for the 3 percent boost in 1980 but urged larger increases in later years.

The $4 billion in proposed spending cuts cover a wide range of government programs, including Amtrak, defense pay raises, Medicare, jobs programs, veteran benefits, Social Security and park acquisition.

The House Budget Committee has refused to join its Senate counterpart in demanding adoption of the budget cuts in fiscal 1980, which starts Oct. 1.

The Senate committee, assuming the $4 billion in savings will be achieved, has recommended $542.7 billion in fiscal 1980 spending, $10.7 billion more than Congress agreed to last May, and a $28 billion deficit, $5 billion above the target budget.

The House committee has recommended $548.7 billion in 1980 spending and calls for a $29.2 billion deficit.

The spending and deficit figures for both the House and Senate committees have risen since the initial targets were set last spring, largely because of higher-than-expected inflation and the current economic downturn.

Neither committee budget makes room for an anti-recession tax cut that is favored by many members of Congress and is a major part of the Republican economic plan.

Brown Disavows Work On Criminal Code

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Sr., a pioneer in a 13-year effort to rewrite the federal criminal code, today disavowed the work of a House subcommittee dealing with the issue.

Brown, who was chairman of the National Commission on Reform of Federal Criminal Laws which was created in 1966, said a bill being considered by the Senate Judiciary Committee is a "direct descendant" of the commission's recommendations.

In a statement submitted to the Senate panel, Brown said Rep. Robert subcommittee on criminal justice "really started from scratch."

"That was a bold and ambitious approach which, given the enormity of the project, required great courage and stamina," Brown said. "I realize that I, as the chairman of the 'Brown Commission,' am viewed by many as the putative father of the House bill. However, in all honesty, I cannot claim the child."

Brown urged the committee, nevertheless, to "approach the House version with a very positive attitude, hoping to extract from it much which can be articulated in ... the bill which eventually emerges."

Brown did not attend the hearing. His statement was presented by former Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., a member of the commission, who also testified that he preferred the Senate version.

William Greenhalgh, a law professor at Georgetown University who represented the American Bar Association, said the ABA supports some provisions of the Senate bill and some in the House version.

The commission headed by Brown made its final report in 1971 but efforts to write its recommendations into law have bogged down in controversy.

The first version, offered seven years ago, contained government secrecy provisions which drew strong opposition from civil liberties groups and the news media. It died in committee.

Last year, the Senate passed a criminal code measure that dropped many of the more controversial features of the original bill, but was still opposed by the American Civil Liberties Union. It died in the House subcommittee.

McCrory Embarrassed To Tell Friends Of Davis Employment

FORT WORTH (AP) — Prosecution witness David McCrory says he wanted to keep his employment in a Cullen Davis-owned company a secret from his friends because "it was embarrassing to me."

McCrory testified he was afraid his friend, karate instructor Pat Burleon, might slap him when he revealed his new job during an August meeting.

"Were you deliberately concealing the Cullen Davis relationship from Pat Burleson?" asked lead defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

"Who else did you not tell you were working for a Cullen Davis company?" Haynes asked during the fifth day of his cross-examination of McCrory.

"Anyone I considered a friend ... because it was embarrassing to me," McCrory replied.

McCrory told jurors Wednesday he told Burleson about the job when he asked his friend for help last August. McCrory said he did not tell Burleson that he was trying to break free of mass murder negotiations with Davis.

The 41-year-old witness claims Davis ordered him to hire an assassin to kill Judge Joe Eidson and others. Davis, 45, is standing trial on charges he solicited the murder of Eidson, his divorce judge. The jurist was not harmed.

"I told Pat I had a real serious legal problem and needed some help and some advice ... a lawyer or anybody I could trust," McCrory said.

McCrory said Burleson later put him in touch with FBI Special Agent Ron Jannings, who launched the whirlwind three-day undercover investigation that led to Davis' arrest Aug. 20, 1978.

"When I told Pat Burleson I had gone to Jet Air and Cullen had bought it, he was very unhappy with me."

Chagra Associate Sought In Assassination Probe

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A federal grand jury investigating the May 29 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. has subpoenaed a Michigan man whom court testimony shows has close ties to fugitive drug smuggler Jimmy Chagra.

The subpoena does not mean the witness, Peter Lynn Krutschewski, 34, of Lansing, Mich., is a target of the investigation, but means only that federal investigators believe he has information in the case, authorities said.

Chagra, a professional gambler, has fled rather than face a possible life prison sentence after being convicted last month in Austin of masterminding an international drug smuggling ring.

Wood, known as "Maximum John" for his stiff sentences in drug cases, was gunned down by a sniper's single shot in front of his San Antonio home. The Chagra trial was shifted to U.S. District Judge William Sessions of El Paso.

Chagra testified in his own trial that he had known Krutschewski, who uses the name Peter Blake, for several years.

City Woman Reports Assault By Bandit

A Lubbock woman said she was tied, gagged and raped about 1:40 a.m. today by a knife-wielding man with a red blanket wrapped around his head.

The 23-year-old restaurant employee said she awoke to find the man standing at the end of her bed. He reportedly told her not to move or "I'll cut you with this," referring to the knife.

The woman said the man turned his back and she attempted to jump out of bed, but that the intruder grabbed her and cut her slightly on the finger.

Reports state the man used the victim's T-shirts to tie and gag her before raping her. After the assault, police were told, the man grabbed the woman's purse containing $100 and fled through the front door. Entry was thought to have been gained through a living room window.

The rapist was described as a white man, between 26 and 35, and about 5 feet 10 inches tall.

In other activity, police shortly after 2 a.m. today arrested an alleged burglar inside a business at 2210 Fourth Street.

Officers, dispatched on an alarm down at the business, said they found the 18-year-old male suspect hiding behind a large box in a storage room. The man, who was thought to have gained entry by climbing through an air conditioner vent on the roof, was taken to the county jail.

An employee at a Lubbock department store in the 3200-block of Avenue Q was taken into police custody about 9 p.m. Wednesday after he allegedly tried to steal $176 in tapes from the business.

A security guard at the store apprehended the employee after seeing him walk out of the building with a bundle of clothing, according to reports.

The unpaid merchandise was revealed when the clothing was unraveled in an office, police said. The 17-year-old suspect was taken to the county jail and booked on suspicion of theft.

Someone trying to steal a truck and trailer from an east Lubbock business early Thursday did more than $10,000 damage to the vehicle before abandoning the project, police reports indicate.

The 1969 red Chevrolet truck with an orange 1977 trailer attached was parked in the southeast corner of the parking lot of American Equipment and Trailer Inc., 3707 Quirt Ave., when someone gained entry by breaking the window on the truck's left side.

Court Rules On Insurance Question

AUSTIN (UPI) — Death as a result of drunk driving comes under the provisions of accidental death insurance policies in Texas, the state Supreme Court has ruled.

The court, ruling on the issue for the first time, said Wednesday Crown Life Insurance Co. must pay a $15,000 accidental death benefit to the widow of a Dallas grocery store employee who was killed when his pickup collided with a parked truck.

The insurance company had contended Jackie W. Freeman was drunk at the time of the Aug. 14, 1976, collision, and the fact that he had voluntarily driven his car while drunk had made his death non-accidental.

The company had paid a $15,000 normal death benefit included in a group insurance policy carried by Freeman's employer, Affiliated Food Stores Inc., but refused to pay the additional $15,000 accidental death benefit.

Billie Darlene Freeman filed suit to collect the benefits of her husband's insurance policy.

The insurance company had contended that drunk driving was illegal, and therefore a person driving while intoxicated should be excluded from the accidental death policy coverage.

A Dallas trial court agreed with the insurance company, but the Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals overturned that decision and ruled the insurance company must pay the $15,000 accidental death benefits plus attorney fees.

"The mere fact that a person's death may have occurred because of his negligence, even gross negligence, does not prevent that death from being an accident within the meaning of an accident insurance policy," the appellate court said.

The Supreme Court, without written comment, upheld the civil appeals court decision in the case.

Chief Defends Officers At Abuse Hearing

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's police chief asked the U.S. Civil Rights Commission not to believe the testimony of some earlier witnesses "who have told this commission police officers are cut from the same cloth as pimps, burglars and killers.

"This is not true," Harry Caldwell said Wednesday during the second and final day of hearings on charges of abuses by the police of the nation's fifth largest city.

He said the department has handed down many regulations in the past two years designed to eliminate police brutality.

"But officers are only human beings and at times might violate policy," he testified. "Even in the year 2000, there will be violations of regulations because we are dealing with human beings."

Commission attorneys had several heated exchanges with Caldwel, who relied to what he viewed as attacks on his officers by saying, "Unlike television, real life on the streets is more complicated. Of course, there will be errors of judgment, but few of them are wanton and malicious.

"I am making a young man or a young woman go out in this world to make quick judgments day after day after day," he continued.

Houston Judge Dismisses Suit To Prevent Abortion

HOUSTON (AP) — A suit seeking to keep a Houston woman from having an abortion was dismissed by a state district judge who said an unborn child in early stages of development has no rights as a person.

District Judge William Kilgarlin predicted Wednesday following the ruling that the U.S. Supreme Court would be hearing an appeal of the decision in the future.

Kilgarlin said the 19-year-old woman seeking the abortion who was identified only as Jane Doe was entitled to have it.

In a related action earlier Wednesday, Harris County Probate Judge Bill Bear dissolved a Sept. 4 order granting temporary guardianship of the woman's 10-week-old fetus to Eileen Brady, a right-to-life advocate.

The suit heard by Kilgarlin was filed by Miss Brady.

Bear said he had granted the temporary guardianship so "everyone involved" would have a chance for a full hearing in the case.

"My earlier decision had nothing to do with religious or moral issues, but was merely a matter of law," he said.

Bear dissolved his order following a meeting behind closed doors with attorneys for both sides. The conference followed the filing of an action by Jane Doe contesting the appointment of Miss Brady as temporary guardian.

After his decision, Kilgarlin said he could have refused to hear MissBrady's suit, because it appeared to him that she had no legal right to file the action.

"Eileen Brady has no more personal stake in the outcome of this controversy that does any other citizen," he said in court. "But this is a controversy that is ultimately going to have to be decided by the highest court in the land."

Her suit had asked that Jane Doe and all other expectant mothers here be barred from having abortions considered medically unnecessary.

Police Seek Help In Combating Prostitution

AMARILLO (UPI) — Police Chief Lee Spradlin has appealed to city commissioners for help in curbing prostitution along a neon-lighted stretch of interstate where streetwalkers net up to $50,000 tax-free each year.

Spradlin said the city's prostitutes, who work a five-to-six block area along Interstate 40 near the central business district, are treated "like racehorses" by crime syndicate members.

Mayor Jerry Hodge said commissioners had not addressed the issue seriously in the past, but are willing to accommodate the police department.

In recent weeks, Spradlin reported, Amarillo police officers have succeeded in slowing prostitution that usually flourishes along Amarillo Boulevard. But Spradlin said the success has been at the expense of other police functions.

"It's up to the city manager and the commission. If they want more enforcement than they are getting, then they will have to provide the funds. The heat has been on the sex traffic the past two weeks. We are keeping a lid on it," Spradlin said.

Spradlin said prostitutes from "Los Angeles and Lubbock and you name it" flock to Amarillo to earn $10 to $100 a trick.

Residents Rap Lubbock Officials

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Progress on getting an overpass or underpass built at East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue has been satisfactory so far, about 40 East Lubbock residents agreed Wednesday night, but they said city officials haven't been doing such a good job in solving other neighborhood problems.

The citizens gathered at Mae Simmons community center for a meeting with Mayor Dirk West, Councilman Bill McAlister, City Mgr. Larry Cunningham and City Planning Director Jim Bertram for a scheduled discussion of a crossing at East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue.

However, the meeting became a forum for an airing of gripes about other problems as well.

Lubbock Digest publisher T.J. Patterson, who organized this and two prior meetings on the intersection, said the citizen involvement had produced some action from city officials.

In reviewing what has been done on the intersection, Bertram told the group Lubbock voters approved a bond issue in May 1977 which included $574,000 to improve the intersection.

However, the railroad companies which own the tracks and right of way at the intersection resisted the city's suggestion for another "at-grade crossing," insisting instead on an overpass.

About the same time negotiations bogged down with the railroad companies, Bertram said the state highway department offered to give the city $60,000 to install crossing bars and flashing lights at the crossing.

However, residents who attended the initial meeting in May firmly rejected the suggestion that the crossing devices be installed, saying it might delay city action on an overpass or underpass.

Most recently, Bertram said, the city council approved $10,000 to perform a feasibility study on construction of an interchange like that sought by the neighbors which is expected to cost approximately $3 million.

It will take at least a month to select an engineering firm to do the study, Bertram said, and then the study will take about three months to complete.

Those attending the meeting urged the council to be "flexible" in evaluating the study, and West said the council could accept or reject all or part of the study.

West and McAlister said they are hopeful this study will show the need for such an overpass or underpass so the state might bear some of the construction costs.

Without state funds, West said a bond issue might be required to pay for the construction and in light of the recent taxpayers revolt predicted bond issues would not have much success at the polls.

"I think you'd get your brains beat out on anything right now," West said. "The timing's poor.

"We're hoping the study will come up with results that look good," the mayor said, but added the council has got to look at where the money for constructing such an interchange might come from.

Because the city staff would be writing specifications for the study, McAlister said he is hopeful the overall transportion needs of the neighborhood can be examined in the study and possibly influence the highway department's decision on funding the project.

"We're all aware the railroad tracks have trapped this part of town," West said, "but I really think we need to take a cold hard look at it."

The primary complaint residents voiced to the city officials unrelated to the intersection was the profusion of tall weeds in East Lubbock.

The residents also said East Lubbock parks are being neglected and weeds in the medians are not mowed as they are in other parts of town.

However, the group did have some kind words for city officials on progress on Canyon Lakes No. 6 and the city council's pledge to have a traffic signal installed at 23rd Street and Avenue A.

Gregory Sanchez Waives Right To Jury-Assessed Punishment

Gregory Sanchez has waived his right to have punishment for his attempted murder conviction assessed by the jury. Instead, District Judge Thomas L. Clinton will set the punishment for Sanchez, probably within two weeks.

Sanchez was convicted Wednesday of attempted murder in connection with the April 15 shooting of cab driver Hank Eugene Dubey.

The 17-year-old defendant, of 2124 Ave. V, surrendered to sheriff's deputies five days after the shooting incident, which left Dubey hospitalized with three gunshot wounds.

Dubey, 28, of 1615 29th St. was shot about 10:30 p.m. April 15 after he had stopped his cab about two miles east of Loop 289 on 19th Street at the request of his passenger. Dubey Wednesday identified Sanchez as the passenger that night.

He said he had picked the young man up at an East Amherst Avenue residence and had made three stops before the one during which the shots were fired.

Prosecutor Everett Seymore emphasized in his argument for the attempted murder conviction Dubey's testimony that Sanchez's unusual behavior had prompted the cab driver to remain alert throughout the fare.

Seymore pointed out that after the last stop east of the city, Dubey said he had reached for the gun after the first shot was fired and was struck by a second bullet in the hand.

"Think what might have happened if he hadn't grabbed that gun," Seymore told the panel.

Defense counsel Bob Jones, however, pointed out that Sanchez's strange behavior that night and his discussion with Dubey about drugs could indicate that the defendant was intoxicated the night of the shooting.

"Something just went off in (Sanchez's) head," Jones said, arguing for a conviction on the lesser charge of aggravated assault.

Seymore countered that argument by reminding the panel that no testimony specifically pointed to any motive for the shooting. He added, however, that "one glaring reasonable inference is that Mr. Sanchez was there to do more than to take a taxi cab ride."

"I want you to remember that this young man shot Hank Dubey for no known reason," Seymore argued.

Suspect Charged With Murder In Shooting Death At Club

A 37-year-old man was in the county jail this morning charged with the July 15 murder of Jesse B. Ramirez, 27, in front of Lorenzo's Gameroom at 4505 E. Fourth St.

After two months of investigation, authorities charged Elias Rangel Jr. with the shooting death of Ramirez. The suspect, whose address was unknown early today, was taken into custody about 11:45 p.m. Tuesday on a perjury charge.

The charge was later changed to murder after Rangel reportedly gave a statement to sheriff's deputy Sonny Keesee and Texas Ranger Joe Hunt concerning the shooting death of Ramirez, of 3111 Itasca St.

Rangel remained in the county jail today pending bond.

The suspect said he and a friend were at the club about 3 a.m. July 15 when they saw Ramirez, who reportedly had been involved in past disputes with the suspect's family.

Rangel said he was walking back to his pickup truck after seeing Ramirez get a pistol from one of his relatives. Rangel said he was reaching for a shotgun in the back of his truck when the dead man fired a shot at him.

The suspect said that while he held his weapon Ramirez fired two more shots at him. Rangel said he then fired one shot and saw Ramirez fall at the club entrance.

Reports indicate Ramirez was pulled into the club and more gunfire was exchanged between the suspect and club patrons before Rangel drove off.

Ramirez was killed by a single gunshot wound in the right shoulder. The man was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who ruled the death the county's eighth homicide of the year.

Preliminary reports indicate the suspect walked into the gameroom, quickly circling it inside, then went outside. Ramirez reportedly then stepped out and was shot.

Deputies said the suspect also fired at the plate glass windows before leaving in a light-colored vehicle.

One witness said the door barely had shut behind Ramirez when he heard the first shots fired.

Solon Nets $100,000 In Contributions

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton of Springlake, eyeing a statewide political race in 1982, raked in about $100,000 in contributions from lobbyists, businessmen and state university officials who attended a reception in his honor Wednesday.

George Works, Clayton's news secretary, said the take was "about $100,000 — that will be somewhere close to the total."

The Austin American-Statesman estimated between 250 and 300 persons were at the affair. Tickets for businesses and lobbying organizations were $500, and Works said there also were "personal tickets that cost $100."

Invitations were sent out by insurance and utility lobbyist Jack Gullahorn, whose administrative assistant, Connie Saathoff, is listed as Clayton's campaign treasurer.

Until last December, Gullahorn was Clayton's chief aide. Miss Saathoff was Gullahorn's secretary in the speaker's office.

Works said tickets to the fundraiser "were offered to members of the lobby, to (trade) associations, to individuals who have been supportive of the speaker in the past." He said tickets also were offered to state university officials — "to some extent, I guess."

Works said the money would go for Clayton's campaign for re-election to the House — he has been unopposed for years — and "for his officeholder account."

Area Officers Testify About Drug Raid

Three more area officers involved in the March 9 drug raid on a Slaton home that resulted in the arrest of Ernesto Pina testified this morning about their roles in the raid.

Slaton Police Chief Jim Estes, Department of Public Safety Narcotics Division Sgt. Bobby Porter and Lubbock police officer Paul Mayfield told the 140th District Court jury of serving a search warrant at a Slaton house and arresting Pina for suspected possession of heroin.

At the time of the raid, Mayfield was working as an agent for the Drug Enforcement administration.

Pina, of Slaton, was arrested after he allegedly tried to dispose of a bag containing heroin. Wednesday afternon, DPS Narcotics Division Sgt. Fred Jack and DEA agent C.L. Graham told the panel they saw Pina toss the bag containing a "powdery" substance over a fence surrounding the backyard of the house.

Both officers testified that when they arrived the evening of March 9 to execute the search warrant, issued after receiving information that heroin might be in the residence, Pina was in the back yard and ran to the fence and threw the bag when agents approached.

Graham said he intercepted Pina as he was running back to the residence and Jack told the jury he climbed over the fence and retrieved the object Pina had discarded.

Judge Jails 11 Teachers

By The Associated Press

Eleven leaders of striking Anchorage teachers were in jail today as judges in Alaska and elsewhere began cracking down on walkouts that have affected more than 885,700 pupils nationwide.

In Woodbridge, N.J., township police arrested picketing teachers Wednesday near four of the district's 28 schools for violating terms of a back-to-work order.

The Detroit Board of Education heads back to court today to try to get an order sending 12,000 striking teachers back to work in Michigan's largest district.

In Indianapolis, Circuit Court Judge Frank Huse Jr. ordered about 1,150 strikers back to work today and told the board to find enough money in the budget for a 7 percent pay raise for the teachers.

Ex-Lubbock Woman Charged In Death

DODGE CITY, Kan. (AP) — A preliminary hearing has been set for Sept. 26 for a young woman charged with second-degree murder in Wednesday's death of her 15-month-old son.

Bond for Donna Holt, 19, was raised from $25,000 to $75,000 at a hearing today before Ford County Associate District Judge Jay Don Reynolds. She was charged Wednesday, hours after her son, Brandon, was pronounced dead on arrival at a Dodge City hospital.

The charge alleges she beat the child with her hands. An autopsy report indicated he died of a crushed skull and a ruptured pancreas.

Police said the woman had just moved to Dodge City from Lubbock a few weeks ago along with her mother and father.

CAB To Reopen Love Field

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Civil Aeronautics Board told its staff today to prepare an order authorizing flights between Dallas' Love Field and New Orleans, which would become the first interstate service to the in-city airport since the larger regional airport opened in 1974.

Charles Bierfield, attorney for the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport board, said it was too soon to tell if the regional authorities would go to federal court to stop Southwest Airlines from starting its interstate flights.

"We just don't know. We have to see the order and the opinion," Bierfield said.

Barring interference from the courts, Southwest might be able to start its direct Dallas-New Orleans service in October. CAB staff members said the final order authorizing the flights would be ready by Oct. 1.

Paul Seligson, Southwest's attorney, said the airline has three 737s ordered for the new route to be delivered by the end of October. The airline plans six round-trip flights a day.

The CAB approved the Dallas-New Orleans service because Southwest's application was submitted under the "automatic market entry provision" of the Airline Deregulation Act.

Hill Charged In Rape Case

Ricky Farrell Hill, 24, was charged Wednesday with aggravated rape in connection with an Aug. 30 incident in which the victim jumped from a second-story bedroom window to escape her attacker.

A $5,000 bond was recommended for Hill, of 2602 82nd St., No. 47.

The victim told police she was at a South University nightclub early Aug. 30 when the persons with whom she came decided to leave. She said she wanted to stay longer and a man offered to give her a ride home after the club closed.

However, she said, instead of taking her home, the man said he needed to stop by his apartment first and she went inside with him. Once inside, she told officers, she continued to tell the suspect she wanted to go home but he asked to come upstairs because "there's something I want you to see."

When she entered his bedroom, she said, the man pulled a pistol from under the bed, ordered her to disrobe and raped her. But when he went into the bathroom, she grabbed her clothing and jumped from the bedroom window, she said.

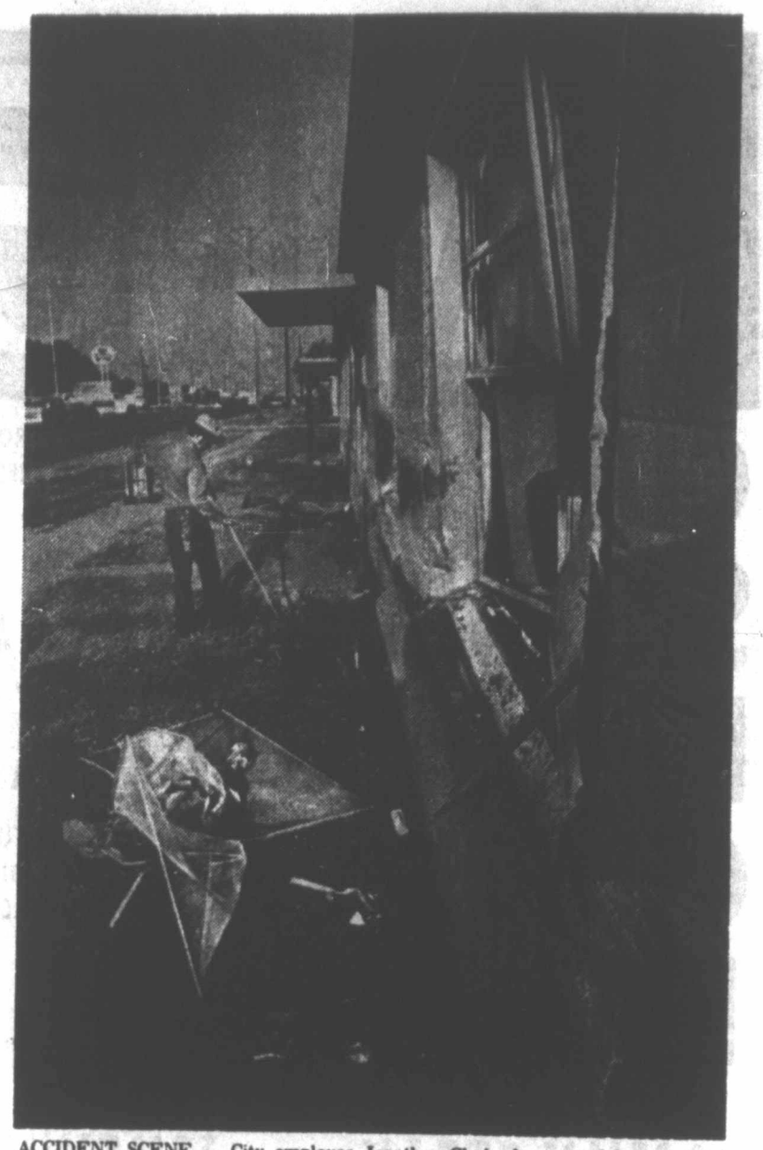
After failing to locate the apartment manager's residence, the woman ran to another residence about five blocks away and called help, according to police reports.

Auctioneers Picket For Pay Increase

A picket line was set up this morning in front of Lubbock Auto Auction at 1122 E. 34th St. by two auctioneers who are demanding higher wages from the company.

An auction spokesman said Don Hamilton and Nelvis Knowles had discussed a pay increase with auction officials earlier, but were refused. The two carried signs in front of the building today, the day of the weekly wholesale auction, to protest.

The auction was not greatly affected by the absence of Hamilton and Knowles, the spokesman said, because the company employs other auctioneers who could put in extra time to cover for the protesters.



ACCIDENT SCENE — City employee Jonathan Clark cleans up debris resulting from an early morning traffic accident in the 500-block of Fourth Street which left Winford Ray Fishback, 25, of 2317 Auburn St. in Health Sciences Center Hospital. Fishback, reported in satisfactory condition, escaped serious injury in the 1:30 a.m. mishap, even though police said he was traveling more than 100 mph when he lost control of his car and sideswiped these two Hub Homes apartments. No one else was injured. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

Senate Vote Possible On Draft Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite overelming defeat in the House, an effort bring back military draft registration y be put to a vote in the Senate.

The House rejected 252-163 late ednesday a proposed order to renew aft registration for 18-year-old men rting Jan. 2, 1981. Instead, it directed esident Carter to study the situation.

Carter has already said draft registran is not needed now and Speaker homas P. O'Neill predicted that with e House vote: "That'll be the end of

But an aide to Sen. Sam Nunn said believes the Georgia Democrat still ill put a similar bill to renew draft regtration to a vote in the Senate.

The House vote was part of action on $42.1 billion weapons authorization bill r the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. Conderation of that overall measure was ontinuing today.

The House vote on bringing back raft registration, which was suspended larch 31, 1975, was demanded by Rep. V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., a upporter.

"We've had enough studies ... and hey all show it's needed," Montgomery old the House. "To kill something in Congress you put it to another study."

Montgomery said registering young men in advance is needed to enable the Selective Service System to supply draftees quickly in the event of war. Proponents of renewing registration say it would speed up the drafting process by 60 days if the draft is ever needed again.

No one has been drafted since June 1973 and reinstatement of the draft itself would require an act of Congress.

A number of those who supported directing the president to study the situation — and report his findings by next Jan 15 — opposed draft registration, saying it would bring back the draft resistance strife of the Vietnam era.

But one, Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., said the study would show the country must bring back the draft itself.

White Sees New Vigor In Carter's Approach

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic National Chairman John C. White, after a day of watching Jimmy Carter meet the voters, thinks the president has become "a little feistier" since Sen. Edward M. Kennedy began inching closer to a run for the White House.

White's assessment that he saw new fire in Carter's approach to the electorate came after "non-political" appearances by the president Wednesday in Connecticut, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

The presidential feistiness apparently was sparked by Kennedy's statement that he has "not foreclosed the possibility of running" for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

After Wednesday's foray, presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Carter would prefer to wait until January to announce his campaign plans, but might be prompted to come forward sooner because of Kennedy's actions.

Speculation about a Kennedy candidacy has been rampant since the Massachusetts Democrat said last week that his family had no objections to his entering the race.

White said a Carter-Kennedy fight for the Democratic nomination would be "one of the classic struggles of our political history." And former President Richard M. Nixon said Wednesday that "if the Massachusetts boys go against the Georgia boys, it will be the battle of the century." Carter's home state is Georgia.

As for Kennedy, White told a group of reporters aboard Air Force One on the flight back to Washington: "It seems to me he has moved from being an unannounced candidate with an option to announce to an announced candidate with an option to withdraw." The party chairman, who has been aligned politically with Carter as the incumbent president, loyally added that "anyone who thinks the president is going to play dead is mistaken."

Carter himself seemed a bit uncertain how to deal with Kennedy's statement Tuesday that he may seek the nomination.

Asked by a citizen along an airport fence in Hartford, Conn., if he thought he could beat Kennedy, Carter responded, "I feel confident about the future."

Landing in Pittsburgh before driving through West Virginia's panhandle to a "town hall meeting" in Steubenville, Ohio, Carter was less responsive when a television reporter asked if, indeed, he thought he could beat Kennedy.

"Nice day, isn't it?" Carter replied.

"You don't want to talk about it, sir? the reporter inquired.

"How'd you ever guess that?" the president asked.

Meanwhile, a new ABC News survey of state Democratic chairmen found a sharp erosion of support for the president among the party's leadership. The network said Wednesday its survey found 18 state chairmen planning to back Carter, down from 31 in a previous poll. Kennedy's support rose from 4 to 19.

The survey also showed that two-thirds of the state chairmen think Kennedy will seek the nomination.

Asked about the poll results on ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America" program today, Carter campaign manager Tim Kraft said "these things will change ... I think we'll get the support we need."

Committee To Meet On Talmadge Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee is trying anew to reach agreement on allegations that Sen. Herman Talmadge inflated his Senate expenseaccount and diverted campaign contributions to his personal use.

The committee scheduled a meeting this afternoon — its first since returning from the August congressional recess — in an attempt to resolve the allegations against the Georgia Democrat.

Sources who asked not to be identified have said the biggest question before the committee at today's session was whether Talmadge was aware that the way his financial affairs were handled violated Senate rules.

The committee reportedly was still divided over that question and consequently over what disciplinary action to recommend against the veteran senator.

The full Senate has the final say in what punishment, if any, to impose.

Sources said earlier that the committee's special counsel, Carl Eardley, recommended that Talmadge be censured by the full Senate for his actions.

But not all members of the committee are willing to go along with that recommendation, the sources say, and the committee chairman, Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., has stressed that he wants an unanimous vote on the question of disciplinary action.

As a result, the committee reportedly has been seeking a compromise that would show its disapproval of Talmadge's actions while avoiding the split that a vote on censure might bring.

One compromise previously mentioned is for the committee to recommend that the Senate "condemn" Talmadge rather than it "censure" him.

Although the committee has not met formally since the August recess, there have been numerous discussions among various committee members in the past few days, sources said.

Committee spokeswoman Lynne Murphy said Wednesday she expected today's meeting to be lengthy.

Talmadge has admitted that his office overcharged the Senate some $50,000 for his official expenses and has repaid $37,125 of that amount.

He also has admitted, in an agreement filed with the committee, that his office made technical errors in disclosure documents filed with the Senate.

But he has contended those errors were honest mistakes by his staff. And he has steadfastly denied any knowledge of a secret bank account set up by his former administrative assistant, Daniel Minchew.

Minchew testified earlier that he opened the account on Talmadge's orders and that he funneled $39,000 in campaign contributions and Senate expense checks into the account in 1973 and 1974.

The former aide contended he made cash payments from the account to Talmadge and that the senator was aware of his activities and a partner in the scheme.

Unrelated to the specific allegations — but a factor in the committee's deliberations — is testimony by Betty Talmadge, the senator's former wife, that Talmadge kept as much as $45,000 in $100 bills in a pocket of an old overcoat in their Washington apartment.

Official Rejects Charges Of Impeding VescoProbe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Top Justice Department official, insisting it is "almost impossible to cover up an investigation," is rejecting accusations that prosecutors impeded a probe of White House contacts by fugitive Robert Vesco.

In a chat with reporters Wednesday, Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann refused to discuss the Vesco case specifically or the investigation of charges Hamilton Jordan sniffed cocaine.

But he declared: "I've seen no sign of any will to cover up any investigation since I've been here."

Since shortly after Heymann took over the criminal division last year, a federal grand jury has been investigating charges Vesco attempted, through two Georgia businessmen, to bribe White House aides into fixing his legal problems.

Vesco, accused of plundering an investment fund of millions of dollars, is believed to be living in the Bahamas and seeking to avoid extradition.

The case heated up two weeks ago when it was disclosed the grand jury foreman wanted to resign because "cover-up activities are being orchestrated" in the Justice Department to "protect the administration at all costs."

It was revealed Heymann personally met with eight grand jurors, including foreman Ralph Ulmer, in an attempt to answer the charges.

Heymann said Wednesday one reason Ulmer may have been disturbed about the progress of the investigation was there was a "three-or four month gap" in which prosecutors did not convene the grand jury while the FBI "interviewed and reinterviewed 13 to 15 major witnesses."

Baker Prods Carter Over Troop Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. said today "time is running out" on President Carter to set a firm position on the presence of Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

Baker, an unannounced candidate for the 1980 GOP presidential nomination, said he told Carter last Friday that he was being tested by the Soviets and should respond promptly.

When asked how he would handle the situation if he were president, the Tennessee senator said he had promised Carter "I will not try to second-guess him" before the president acts.

As a result, said Baker, he would not publicly suggest possible courses of action.

Baker also said that "beyond a doubt" the disclosure that a Soviet combat brigade was in Cuba was having an impact on Senate consideration of the SALT II treaty.

Asked about speculation that the troops might be in Cuba to train Cuban forces, Baker said he has seen no evidence the Soviet troops have had any contact with Cuban forces.

Baker's comments were made at a news conference at which he received the support of two New England Republican senators, William Cohen of Maine and Robert Stafford of Vermont, for his presidential candidacy.

Earlier, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., cited the Soviet troops in Cuba as one reason he had decided to vote against the SALT II treaty.

Long also said his opposition was based on his belief that the treaty is not verifiable and will prolong the nuclear arms race, not prevent it.

Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is a major Senate Democrat and his decision is seen as a serious blow to the Carter administration's campaign to ratify the pact.

"If I had any doubt about it — and I didn't have much — my doubts were removed by the last indication down there in Cuba that the Russians are not keeping their faith on that agreement they made (in 1962) with President Kennedy," said the Louisiana senator.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance prepared for another meeting with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin to negotiate the future of a combat brigade of up to 3,000 Soviet troops in Cuba.

Officials said the administration hopes a long series of meetings between Vance and Dobrynin — without any public announcements following the sessions — will cool the crisis atmosphere that has surrounded the revelation of the troops' presence.

Published reports said U.S. intelligence is examining the possiblity that the Soviet brigade in Cuba may be there to demonstrate field maneuvers to Cuban soldiers.

The Washington Post and The New York Times both quoted an unnamed State Department official as saying this was one of the possible explanations under consideration for the presence of the troops.

And the State Department said today that the reports were inaccurate.

Budget Gets Approval Of Council

the use of $2.7 million federal revenue sharing funds next year.

Ahrens asked that more than $53,000 be allocated for the Red Cross to purchase emergency equipment and to "enhance our disaster capability."

However council members questioned allocating the federal funds to such a nonprofit corporation and did not include the Red Cross request in the revenue sharing budget.

Under the revenue sharing budget approved by the council, parks projects in the amount of $519,000 would be funded.

Included in that amount is the replacement of irrigation systems in five city parks, the development of two south Lubbock parks (Jan Jennings and N.B. McCullough), surfacing tennis, volleyball and basketball courts in five parks and drilling wells in Higginbotham and Maxey parks to provide irrigation water.

Nearly $461,000 is earmarked for traffic engineering projects, most of which are improvements suggested in a recently completed study of Lubbock traffic conditions.

Other projects to be funded are a feasibility study on the use of municipal solid waste as a fuel to generate electricity, completion of a new branch library at Quaker Avenue and South Loop 289, and the purchase of 14 more "crime eye" cameras to deter armed robberies.

SCENE OF TRAGEDY — Emergency crews and officials gather at the site of a train collision at a major rail junction southeast of the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade early today. At least 40 persons were killed and more than 100 others injured when a freight train and a crowded passenger train slammed together at Stalac, according to Radio Belgrade. Some officials said the freight ran through a warning signal just before the accident. (AP Laserphoto)

Fuel Costs Benefit Solar Energy

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although perfection of economical solar-powered heating and cooling systemsfor homes still is a few years away, the rising cost of conventional fuels is giving thrust to research in solar energy, according to a solar energy research specialist from the University of Texas.

Dr. Gary Vliet, of the Center for Energy Studies at the University of Texas at Austin, told a group of local architects, contractors and engineers attending a solar energy workshop here that the energy-efficient home of the future will combine solar power with construction design and conservation techniques.

"Solar energy is becoming more viable as the cost of conventional energy continues to go up," Dr. Vliet said. "However, some solar systems still are not economical at this time."

The systems Vliet was referring to are the solar-powered cooling systems now being developed and monitored as part of an active solar design.

An active solar system, as opposed to a passive system, uses mechanical means such as pumps and pipes to carry heat from solar collectors to storage tanks and then artificially circulates them throughout the living space.

In a passive solar system, the heat from the sun is absorbed and stored by a container placed inside the living space, usually an element of the building such as the floor or wall. Heat is radiated at night back into the living space and no mechanical devices or fluid is required.

Vliet spoke on the application of active solar systems on the concluding day of the two-day workshop being conducted at the Memorial Civic Center by the Texas Solar Energy Society. The first day was devoted to passive systems.

Vliet is monitoring a solar energy system for heating and cooling an Austin apartment complex he designed.

He said solar collectors were installed on the roofs of the existing structures and a storage tank for the heated water was placed in a separate building. The heated water from the solar collectors travels through a series of pumps and copper pipes to either heat or cool the air, which is then piped to the living quarters.

"I do not recommend solar cooling right now because it is not economically feasible," he said. "A lot more research needs to be done on solar cooling."

He said that depending on the application, solar cooling would be a viable alternative to conventional means of cooling buildings in about two to three years.

"I don't see the cost of these systems coming down, but their performance will improve and become more feasible as the price of existing fuels continues to rise."

Dr. Vliet advocates integrating both passive and active solar energy systems, keeping in mind that an energy efficient structure combines both systems with a design that utilizes the best angles of the sun's rays for winter and summer comfort.

Also speaking on the final day of the workshop are Warren Cole, who is the founder and president of the Cole Solar Systems, a successful Austin firm which manufactures and markets solar systems designed by Cole himself, and Steven Huck, who has designed a short form method for sizing and estimating solar systems costs.

Smog Threatens California Area

A-J News Services

Air pollution reached "hazardous" levels in the Los Angeles area today to climax a week of heat and smog, but it was just like autumn in Northwest Texas after a weak cold front moved through the region.

The Los Angeles forecast for hazardous conditions was the first such warning ever issued in advance in the Southern California metropolis. A rating of "hazardous" means the smog is thick enough that even healthy adults will feel symptoms ranging from burning eyes and tightened chests to nausea and irritibility.

"It's terrible," said Mary Jean Pew, acting president of Immaculate Heart College. "The students and faculty are gagging!"

Daytime temperatures have been over the 100-degree mark on five of the last six days in Los Angeles.

But Lubbock and the South Plains cooled into the 50s overnight as the cold front moved through the area, bringing along with it a slight chance of rain tonight and Friday.

It was 57 degrees in Lubbock and in the low 50s in some area towns. The forecast calls for a high temperature today in the mid-70s and a low tonight in the mid-50s.

Winds are expected to be northeasterly at 10 to 15 mph this afternoon and tonight, weathermen said.

The high Friday will be near 70.

Overnight low temperatures over the South Plains included 50 at Dimmitt, 51 at Plainview and 52 at Hereford, Lockettville, Muleshoe and Silverton.

The front stretched from near Wichita Falls on a southwestern line through the South Plains early today, the National Weather Service reported.

Behind the cold front, the mercury dropped to 27 degrees early today at Gunnison, Colo., and into the 30s at many places in the Rocky Mountains and western Great Plains.

Scattered thunderclouds, but no significant showers, were reported over the Panhandle and over Southeast Texas.

The regional West Texas forecast predicts widely scattered showers and a few thunderstorms in the Panhandle and in Southeast Texas today and tonight.

The rest of the state will have clear to partly cloudy skies and most cooler temperatures.

The extended West Texas forecast calls for widely scattered showers in the southwestern part of the region Saturday and partly cloudy skies over other sections. West Texas skies will become mostly fair Sunday and Monday, weathermen said, and there will be a warming trend most the region during the weekend.

Daytime temperatures will be in the 70s in most sections Saturday and in the 80s Sunday and Monday, forecasters said.

A gusting north wind was cooling the Panhandle-South Plains this morning with winds of 15 to 20 mph common over the area.

Federal Court Jury Pondering Suit Involving Plainview Raid

ed that officers can use force in executing a search warrant when the officers reasonably believe such force is necessary for their protection.

And Harlan added that negligence of the officers is not to be considered by the panel, according to the charge.

"The mere fact that they could have done more to ensure the search of the proper apartment doesn't mean they acted in bad faith," Harlan said. "The burden of proof is on the plaintiffs. In the charge you are told a peace officer doesn't have to be right 100 percent of the time, he just has to reasonably believe that a suspect is in an apartment and can take such measures he thinks necessary to neutralize the believed harm."

Charles White, who represents the remaining defendants Gary Noblitt, Gary Gillespie and Bennie Clifton, reminded the panel of U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward's ruling that the search warrant used by the officers 3½ years ago was valid.

The only way the panel could find the officers acted in bad faith in executing the warrant, White said, was if the jurors determined fraud had been employed in gaining the warrant.

And White, whose clients were members of the Hale County sheriff's office at the time of the raid, also repeated Harlan's argument that negligence is not a factor in the case.

Two days of testimony concluded Wednesday afternoon after the defendants took the stand and said they had followed regular procedures in gaining the warrant and executing the search.

And the two former Amarillo police officers denied allegations Wednesday they did not identify themselves and refused to display the search warrant.

Patterson said the group of nine officers conducted the raid after receiving a search warrant for the address which the trio was sharing. He testified the group identified themselves as police officers before entering the residence and during the brief course of the raid.

Patterson added that he specifically told Mrs. Hooks, who was not married to Hooks at the time of the raid, that he was a police officer in order to calm her.

"She said 'Yes,' and stopped screaming," Patterson said.

said the woman offered to give him a ride to his therapist's. Sedberry, according to reports, is unable to use one of his arms.

The woman, described as a young black female, instead drove to a bank where she instructed Sedberry to cash one of his checks, police were told.

Sedberry said he failed to cash the check because he had no identification. The victim was then driven to a supermarket at 34th Street and Avenue H where Sedberry again was forced to try and cash a check, but again failed because of lack of identification, reports indicate.

The complainant said the woman then became angry, displayed a knife and ordered him to hand over his hat, watch, keys and checkbook. She then reportedly ordered the man out of her car and drove away.

School Safety Program Under Study

The safety coordinator said he believes the youngsters take their teachers' safety tips to heart, but "they do a lot of things impulsively. That's why we have accidents. (Victims) acted impulsively — they weren't thinking — or there were circumstances beyond our control."

Caraway added that "we have to educate drivers." He said that though safety awareness is aimed at parents through the school PTAs, many adults do not know some of the safety rules, particularly for bicycle riders.

"A lot of adults ride on the wrong side of the road (bike riders should always stay on the right side of the street — they should not face oncoming traffic). Adults don't know the bike rules and so they give the wrong example to kids. Parents have to take responsibility."

The city is also in the business of promoting safety and since the fatality last week, "has attempted to increase (safety) awareness through the media," said Vaughn Hendrie, traffic safety coordinator for the city.

He said he called the local television stations to ask them to continue to run public service announcements concerning safety.

The Citizens Traffic Commission had already discussed bicycle safety early last week and asked that STEP (Selective Traffic Enforcement Program) police officers increase their patrol of school zones.

Hendrie said that "within the resources available" the city is providing an adequate safety program. "We're not going to eliminate accidents. There's just so much that can be done as far as education is concerned."

Added Hendrie, "It's still the responsibility of the individual to obey the laws and follow the rules. Our job is to keep reminding them of the rules."

He said that enforcement of bicycle rules had been discussed at the last CTC meeting and that the group "encouraged the police department to enforce traffic law on bike riders as well as those in cars."

Hendrie added that while bicycle rider violators are ticketed, it is difficult for police officers to keep an eye on bike riders while attending to the regular flow of traffic.

He said that while young children cannot be ticketed for bicycle violations, he hopes that policemen might be able to "stop and warn a child if they see a dangerous mistake being made, and send the parents a letter pointing out what the kid was doing."

The death of Michael Shane Schwartzkopff last week was the third traffic fatality involving a public school student during school hours in the last 12 years, according to Bill Parker, director of pupil personnel for Lubbock public schools.

He said a number of students have been injured while riding their bikes to school, but "we've been fortunate to have relatively light injuries considering the number of children on the streets."

Female Equality Splits Jaycees

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The national leader of the Jaycees says challenges to the organization's all-male membership rule have had a "positive" result and put the group in the "national limelight."

But others feel the court suits around the nation have split the young men's group into factions and say the time has come to open membership to women.

The battle has been boiling for years, and soon some of the suits may come to resolution. But J. Terryl Bechtol, president of the Tulsa-based group, doesn't see that as the end of it.

The Jaycees are ready to "fight to our last dime" to uphold rules against women, says Bechtol, who is on leave as a vice president of a motivational seminar firm and will be on the road 340 days this year as the Jaycee's major spokesman against a change in rules.

Bechtol joined the Jaycees 10 years ago and found that "the further up the Jaycee ladder I went, the more money I made." He campaigned for the Jaycee presidency in 46 states last year, and with his red, white and blue vocabulary, was known as the "miracle candidate."

"I was the man who wasn't supposed to get elected," said Bechtol, who moved into the "Jaycee White House" here in June.

"I think it's the most positive thing that's happened to us in 10 years because it's brought us into the national limelight," he said of the battle. "We had an opportunity to state our stand. It was not always a popular one ... But people started spelling our name right ... Some of the great things we've been doing for years now have been brought to national attention."

The Jaycees include 385,000 men ages 18 through 35 in 9,000 chapters around the country, many in small towns, who raise money for charities and perform service functions. Membership is up more than 5,000 since May 1, officials said.

Members attending the 1978 annual convention voted against allowing women in the Jaycees. That ended a three-year program in which women were provisionally allowed to join local chapters in a few states.

When some chapters refused to oust women, the Jaycees board of directors began revoking charters in January 1979.

That has escalated into the court battles involving the national organization and chapters in Alaska, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia. Decisions in most of those court cases are expected during October, Bechtol said.

To Linda Berge, a member of the Alaska Jaycees and one of the plaintiffs in the suit, the issue is a simple one — women are being discriminated against. "Everything they do is for the whole community, not just half of it," she said of the Jaycees.

And says Penny May, executive assistant to the Alaska Jaycees: "The Alaska Jaycees are 100 percent behind having women ... We passed a resolution in our May 1979 annual meeting to that effect."

Bernie Garostiague, president of Anchorage's Gold Rush Jaycees, said he thinks the Jaycees will admit women. "Some of the older Jaycees don't want it to happen, so there probably won't be enough votes for the next couple of years. But it's coming," he said.

A Massachusetts Jaycees official, who asked that his name not be used, said he sees four factions within the Jaycees.

"We have chapters that are all male and want to maintain their autonomy and there are chapters which we call open that have both men and women." The other two factions fall between those two, he said. "Some don't mind women as long as they aren't in their group and others want women only under certain conditions."

Bechtol, 34, of Pensacola, Fla., says there are principles at stake in the dispute, which he said cost the Jaycees more than $300,000 this year.

"They lost by a 6-to-1 majority and we voted to remain male, Bechtol said. "The principle involved here is majority rule. They can call it chauvinism. We call it democracy. We voted. That should have been it. The principle is: What's more important? Admitting women or allowing the right of majority rule?"

Bechtol said there is an organization "for women who want to be part of the Jaycee action," called the Jayceettes.

"I tell you the real reason we don't have female membership ... The majority of the women are against it," Bechtol said. "I assure you that if the women that we're married to had wanted it, we'd have it. Been a hell of a lot more wars won in the bedroom than were ever won on the battlefield."

The issue being raised in court is whether the Jaycees should be considered a public or private organization, Bechtol contended.

"We're a private organization and have been for 60 years," he said. "Any private organization in this country — religion and anything else — has the right to remain what they want to be ... That's what America is all about.

"Where would we be if we had no organizations that were unique?" Bechtol asked. "Two things that the Jaycees are unique about are that we're all male and that we're 18 to 35. We also discriminate against age. But that's what makes us different from everybody else."

"I believe that the United States Jaycees can be the organization that leads us back into essential patriotism," he said.

Late this month, Bechtol and other Jaycee officials will discuss national issues with President Carter and members of the Cabinet.

"We feel like we can easily influence 2 million to 2.5 million votes on any issue we endorse," Bechtol said.

"Ten years ago we were 200,000 folks having good times in local communities and not really having any impact as a national organization. But that's all changed," Bechtol said. "We've grown ..."

Cup, Balloon Trick Fun To Figure Out

By SHARI LEWIS

There's more of them than there are of us. That's what I think when I read my mail, because soooo many of my readers adore figuring out puzzles and challenges and betchas and brain twisters. Not me! I collect 'em only because I like knowing the answers. However, here's a challenge my Dad posed to me, and would you believe — I FIGURED IT OUT! You probably will, too, and it's fun to do.

The challenge: How can you lift a large paper cup with a round balloon?

The secret: Put the deflated balloon into a paper cup. Blow up the balloon until the fit is snug, and then you can easily lift the cup.

ANSWER: Marry a widow with a grown-up daughter. Have your dad marry your stepdaughter. Now your father is your son-in-law and your steapdaughter is your mother. If your wife (the widow) now gives birth to a son, that boy will be your father's brother-in-law and he will also be your uncle, because he is the brother of your stepmother. And if your father's wife gives birth to a son, he will be your brother and also your grandson for he is the son of your daughter-in-law. As brother of your own grandchild, your wife becomes your grandmother. As the husband of your wife, you become your own grandfather!

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: If you had to pay $1 for having a board sawed into two sections, how much would you have to pay for having the board cut into four sections? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only column.)

(Mail to Shari should be addressed to Kids-Only Club, c/o of this paper, P.O. Box 1111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.)

Public Policy Urged For Nuclear Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investors are wary about putting money into nuclear power securities because, in part, the government lacks a well-defined policy on the future of nuclear energy, say financial experts.

The experts, appearing Tuesday before the House subcommittee on energy and the environment, said for the most part securities of nuclear utilities have rebounded from the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident in March. But they said investors are still cautious about the securities. "There is an urgent need for sensibly determined public policy on nuclear power," said Carleton D. Burtt, executive vice president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

Engineers Seek To Harness Winter's Chill For Use In Summer

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — Engineers at Texas A&M University are attempting a new sort of cold storage: harnassing winter's chill and then using it for relief from scorching Texas summers.

Dr. Donald E. Reddell, an agricultural engineering professor, said the technique amounts to chilling water during the winter, pumping it into underground wells for storage, and then pumping it back out six months later for use in air conditioning systems.

"There are two wells in the system," said Reddell. "Well A is a pumping well and well B is an injection well.

"Beginning in November, we pump water out of well A Through a pipeline to a chilling pond on the surface. At that point we spray the water into the air to chill it to whatever the atmospheric temperature is. We try to do it when we can get a temperature of 50 degrees or less.

"As that process is completed, we take the water from the chilling pond and inject it back into well B for storage. This is done from the first of November to the first of March, and from then until the first of July nothing is done with it."

Reddell said that beginning in July the water will be brought to the surface for use in a simulated air-conditioning experiment.

"We have no commercial use for the cooled water, thus the simulation," he said. "During the experiment the water is warmed slightly then injected back into well A for re-cooling.

"This constitutes a closed loop. In the winter we pump the water out of well A and into well B and in the summer the process is reversed."

Though the process sounds simple, Reddell encountered problems in the experiment.

"We have a problem of water chemistry in the transfer procedure," he said. "When you are pumping water out of an aquifer, such as our underground wells, the pressure and temperature of the water changes, which also causes an equilibrium change in the water.

"If the change is too drastic, it can close up the pores in the sand and gravel in the wells, causing the well to clog. If that happens, you can't get water in or out of the well."

Another problem, Reddell said, is that rainfall can cause a temperature change in the stored water, as well as causing the stored water to move around beneath the surface.

"The excessive rainfall we had this year caused a natural recharge (infiltration of water from the surface) which gave our aquifer a big shot of warm water, which normally does not occur," he said.

Reddell also said the recharge raised the water levels in the area and caused the "bubble" of cold water to move laterally more than expected, making recovery of it more difficult.

Despite the problems encountered this year, Reddell is optimistic about the future of the experiment.

"Though our energy return this year was only 20-25 percent against an anticipated 40-45 percent, we expect after four years to have a recovery rate of 80-85 percent," he said.

UW Fund Fights Alcohol Abuse

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles dealing with the United Way of Lubbock. Except for official of United Way agencies involved, the names used are fictitious to protect the identities of those served. However, the stories reflect actual case histories here.)

FACT: An estimated 10 million Americans suffer from the disease of alcoholism but less than three percent of those are on "Skid Row."

FACT: The total cost to the nation is approximately $43 billion per year due to absenteeism in employment, health and welfare services, property damage and medical expenses.

FACT: Fifty percent of fatal auto accidents involve alcohol, 80 percent of fire deaths, 22 percent of home accidents, 77 percent of falls, 55 percent of pilots involved in accidents had been drinking.

FACT: Alcoholism is treatable.

These facts come from the National Council on Alcoholism in New York. Here, the Lubbock Council on Alcoholism estimates that approximately 10 percent of the drinking population are alcoholics, according to its director, Wright Carlisle.

United Way of Lubbock

The Lubbock Council on Alcoholism is a United Way agency and will receive $11,600 from the 1980 United Way goal of $1,803,752.

Jim Carson is now a recovering alcoholic. A year and a half ago Jim was consuming either a fifth of liquor or a case of beer a day. He was one of the 10 percent of Lubbock's population suffering from the disease of alcoholism.

Jim's case is not unusual. He didn't live on "Skid Row"; he lives in a very comfortable home in West Lubbock. He has a wife, children, two cars, his own business and all the rest of the trappings of middle class life.

Mary Carson, Jim's wife of 11 years, saw the progression of the illness and the strain on their lives. She recalls many nights her husband would come home but not be able to make it out of the car and into the house.

Once, she said, he lost two paychecks in a dice game while he was drunk.

However, Mary didn't want to go to Al-Anon or any other agencies to seek help with her alcoholic husband. "I thought I could make him stop and I wasn't able to admit defeat," she said, adding that, even if she walked out on him, it would be admitting defeat. She stayed.

She read all the information she could on alcoholism, though, much of it supplied by the Lubbock Council on Alcoholism, and tried hard to make Jim stop drinking.

One of the methods she used was to get him to sign a paper admitting he

Smith Wins Battle For Salary Hike

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

After 2½ hours of blunt discussion, a Lubbock County grievance committee Wednesday agreed with Justice of the Peace Charles Smith's protest of his 1980 salary and awarded him an extra $3,500 for next year.

The committee, consisting of six elected county officials and three private citizens, heard Smith and all four county commissioners before reversing the commissioners court and giving Smith $18,700 for 1980 instead of the $15,120 previously allocated for him.

It was the first convening of a grievance committee in Lubbock County since a statute creating one was enacted in 1971.

The vote to give Smith his original 1980 salary request was unanimous. The statute requires a unanimous vote to have the effect of a legal mandate.

Smith testified in the Wednesday meeting in commissioners court that aside from Harris County Justice of the Peace courts in Houston, his court was the busiest in Texas last year with 13,794 cases handled.

Smith complained that he has been doing as much work as Precinct 6 Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy for the past 10 years, but never has been paid as much as LeCroy.

Committee member F. J. Hamman, one of the three members chosen from the current grand jury list, asked Commissioner Alton Brazell why Smith, the Precinct 1, Place 2 Justice of the Peace, had been allocated an 8 percent raise while LeCroy had been raised 16 percent to $17,500.

"The general sentiment I hear is that Wayne LeCroy is the hardest working JP we have in the courthouse," Brazell said. "I think Judge LeCroy does a better job as JP than anybody else in this county."

A moment later, Commissioner Jim Lancaster arose from the packed courtroom and said, "I think there are some personal feelings on these studies."

Smith had asked in his letter to County Judge Rodrick Shaw for the same salary that commissioners will receive next year. County commissioners recently voted themselves a 23 percent raise, increasing their annual salaries to $22,008.

Criminal District Attorney John Montford, a committee member, said at various points in the discussion that he was "not impressed" with the argument that Smith should be paid the same as the commissioners, but he questioned the inequality of justice of the peace salaries over the county and asked, "Is it a reward system?"

Other committee members were citizens Margaret Randle and Dr. Norma Porres and County Clerk Frank Guess, County Treasurer Connie Nicholson, Tax

Mexican Fiesta 1979 Opens Friday

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Mexican Fiesta 1979, a three-day celebration recognizing the heritage of Mexico, will be highlighted this weekend with the Adelita contest, a parade, traditional music and cultural food and game booths.

Mass will be celebrated 30 minutes later, followed by the introduction of the Fiesta Committee 1979. Lubbock leaders, Alan Henry, mayor pro-tem, Col. Richard A. Ingram, wing commander at Reese AFB, State Rep. Froy Salinas, and U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, who will be represented by Lorenzo Sedeno, also will be recognized.

Five Adelita contestants, sponsored by Lubbock area businesses, will be judged at 8 p.m., on their Revolutionary-period costumes, talent, personality and their knowledge of Mexico's history.

The winner, who will reign during the Fiesta, will receive a scholarship, wardrobe and trip.

Two dances, a disco and traditional dance, will follow in the banquet and exhibition halls, respectively, at 9:30 p.m.

Highlighting Saturday's events will be a parade with 60 float entires scheduled to make its way down Broadway from the Fair Park to the Civic Center. Lub-

Fall Meal Marks Season Change

CHICAGO, Ill. (Special) — The signs are everywhere that the season is changing. Even in the supermarket, there is positive proof that summer is fading and fall is fast approaching. The produce section is brimming with autumn's bounty, especially apples in a wide range of sizes, shapes and colors.

There are noticeable changes, too, at the meat counter for the pork section is packed with a variety of cuts, many featured on sale at very attractive prices. While fall is usually the time to expect pork supplies to peak, this is a banner year with pork supplies the highest they have been in 35 years. For the consumer, this means there is more pork to choose from at most attractive prices.

You'll find blade steaks one of the most economical pork cuts available. They are easily identified by the long, narrow blade bone resembling the shape of a number seven. The steaks are generously sized, with most providing two servings.

While the price tag for pork steaks is low, their nutritional rating is high. Like all pork cuts, the steaks are an excellent source of high-quality protein, and also contain impressive amounts of the B-vitamins, especially thiamin, and necessary minerals, including iron.

To bring the flavors of fall to the dinner table, pair up those plentiful pork steaks and apples in this delectable braised entree. While pleasing the pocketbook, you'll also be pleasing the family for this pork and apple combination will be a favorite.

PORK STEAKS WITH APPLES

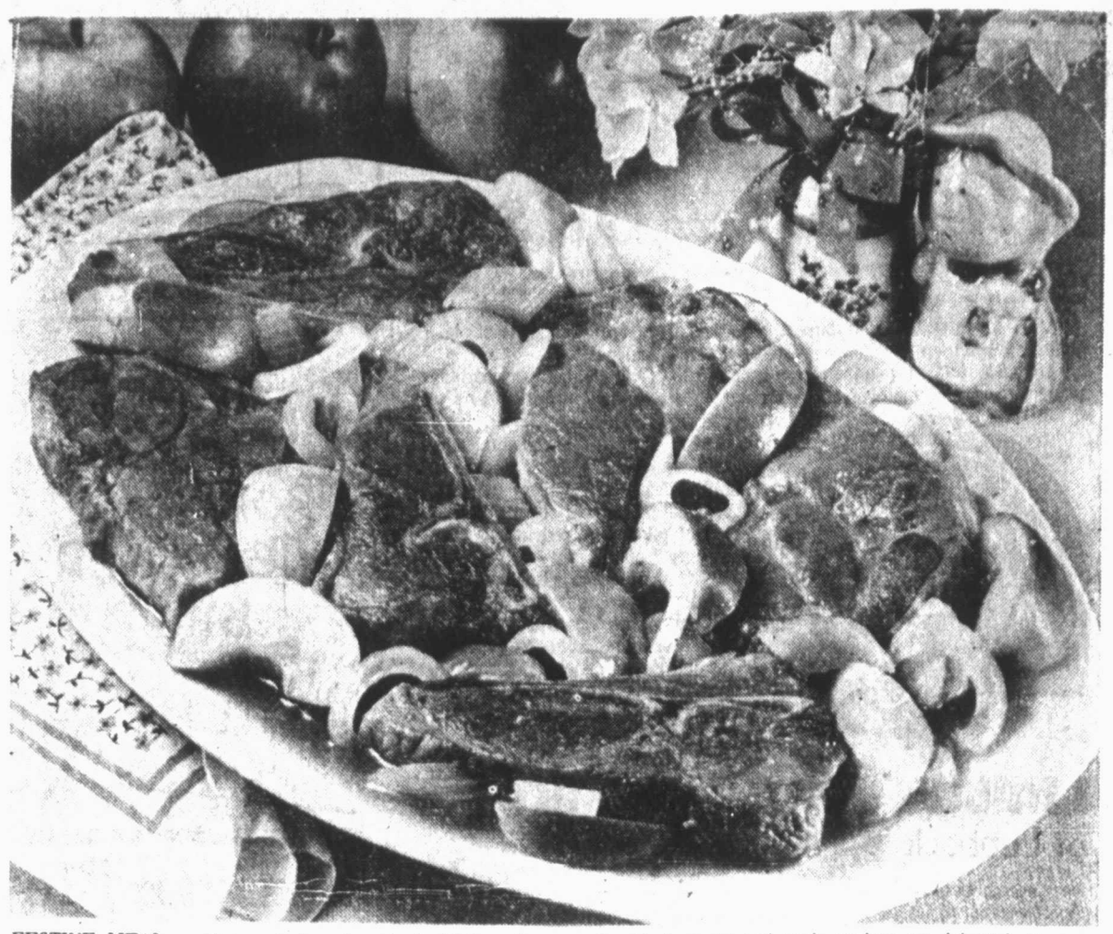
2 tbsps. flour
1½ tsps. salt
½ tsp. paprika
⅛ tsp. pepper
2 tbsps. lard or drippings
1½ cups diagonally sliced celery
1 large onion, sliced
2 tbsps. water
2 large cooking apples, cut into 6 wedges and cored
2 tbsps. red wine

Divide steaks in half by cutting lengthwise along straight side of T-bone. Combine flour, salt, paprika and pepper; dredge meat, reserving excess flour. Brown meat in lard or drippings in large frying pan. Pour off drippings. Add celery, onion and water to meat; cover tightly and cook slowly 45 minutes. Place apple wedges around steaks; continue cooking, covered, 10 minutes or until meat and apples are done. Remove meat, vegetables and apples to warm platter. Combine reserved flour with red wine, add to cooking liquid and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Reduce heat and cook 3 to 5 minutes; serve with chops. Makes six servings

To complete the main course, consider serving the pork and apples with buttered egg noodles. When selecting the vegetable accompaniment, check the produce counter for other good fall buys such as broccoli or Brussels sprouts. Keep the salad simple; top rafts of lettuce with sliced tomatoes and French dressing. Dessert will be declared irresistable when it is gingerbread squares served with a tangy lemon sauce.



FESTIVE MEAL — Economical pork and plentiful apples combine are combined in Pork Steaks With Apples, a fall favorite. Pork steaks and apple wedges are delicately flavored with wine in this salute-to-fall entree.

Readers' Exchange

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

This is the second column of Reader's Exchange, an opportunity for our readers to trade recipes, cooking tips, and household hints. It will run in the Thursday editions of the Family News.

Household tips, recipes and requests are welcome, but letters must include the writer's name, address and telephone number. Addresses and phone numbers will not be given out, and no personal replies will be made. Commercial brand-names cannot be used.

Send tips, recipes and requests to: Readers' Swap, Family News Department, Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Tx. 79408. Recipes printed are not tested by the Family News Department.

Kitty Gage of Lubbock sends two excellent "budget" recipes:

MEXICAN SKILLET

1 lb. ground meat
(regular, not extra lean)
1 onion, chopped
2 green bell peppers, chopped
1-4 hot peppers (vary to taste)
Salt and pepper to taste

GERMAN STYLE SPAGHETTI

Combine and cook until done:
¼ cup salad oil
1 onion, chopped
1 lb. ground meat
1 green bell pepper, chopped
To the above mixture add:
6 oz. sliced mushrooms
1 can tomatoes

Simmer 10 minutes and add one 8-oz. can of cooked spaghetti and 6 oz. grated cheddar cheese. Heat until cheese is melted. Serve four.

DAISY's PATIENCE CANDY

3 pts. white sugar
1 pt. can condensed milk
1 stick oleomargarine
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. soda
2 lbs. whole pecans

Caramelize 1 pint of sugar in skillet (slowly). Combine 2 pints white sugar with 1 pint can condensed milk in large pan. Bring to boil, adding 1 stick oleomargarine to this mixture. Add carmelized sugar to other mixture slowly and stirring constantly. Cook until mixture forms a very firm ball when dropped in cold water. Take off heat. Add 1 tsp. vanilla and 1 tsp. soda. Let sit 20 minutes; then beat. Add 2 lbs. whole pecans and pour into a large greased pan. When cool, cut in squares.

Here are this week's requests:

Mrs. R. Jameson of Lamesa would like to have a recipe for "healthy cookies" for joggers — probably containing honey, raisins, wheat germ, coconut and such.

Mrs. Peter Schmidt of Lubbock says she has tried several kinds of commercial products which supposedly will remove ballpoint pen stains from children's clothing but none have worked well. Does a reader have a home method for getting out the stains?

Linda Peters, Lubbock, wonders if anyone has a recipe for the Millionaire's Pie served at the Furr's Cafeterias?

Marie Shaw of Morton wants recipes for Peanut Butter Fudge. She'd also like to know if anyone has a recipe for "Sun Tea."

New Stretch Fabrics Gain Popularity

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Popular fabrics stretch for action with increasing popularity, variety and availability, says Becky Culp, a clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Today's stretch fabrics are often created from the spandex fiber blended with others such as nylon or polyester, she points out.

The resulting action fabric usually stretches in both directions and can be styled into fashionable drapable or tighter form-fitting looks.

When selecting ready-made garments or fabrics for homesewing, check that the fabric recovers when stretched, the specialist recommends.

Stretch a short length, about four to six inches or 15 to 20 cm, against a ruler or marked length.

After stretching, check that the fabric returned to the same size.

For two-way stretch fabrics, test stretch in both lengthwise and crosswise directions to avoid purchases that will bag or sag out of shape during wear, Miss Culp adds.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: How can parents cope with one of three children who is more of a stranger than a son? He is the eldest, 25, unmarried, self-supporting and selfish.

When Allen left college seven years ago, he completely disassociated himself from the family — never calling, writing or showing any interest or concern regarding family illnesses, death, or any of the occasions that usually elicit a caring response from family members. Holidays, graduations, birthdays, anniversaries, etc., are unacknowledged, yet his sister and brother have always been considerate and thoughtful to the family as well as to Allen.

Although he lives only half an hour from us, we are ignored except for Christmas and HIS birthday. Then he honors us with a visit, knowing he will not leave empty-handed — although he ARRIVES empty-handed. He always has plenty of money for his own pleasures — girls, bars and expensive gadgets. We are hurt and disgusted by his behavior and wonder if you or your readers can tell us how to make this thoughtless son aware of his selfishness? Or would you say he is a lost cause?

HURT

DEAR HURT: You can't instill concern, consideration and generosity where none exists. However, no one is ever a "lost cause." If some well-meaning friend ro relative isn't able to make Allen aware of his selfish behavior, perhaps the power of prayer (yours) will produce a miracle. I hope so.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: When FORTY AND CURIOUS asked when you would call a person middle-aged, you replied, "When he (or she) climbs out of the bathtub and is happy to find that the full-length mirror is all steamed up."

I'm sure a lot of readers got a chuckle out of that, but let's be serious about it: My dictionary defines middle-age as the middle period of one's life. In other words, if a person lives to be 90, then he is middle-aged at 45. So the truth of the matter is, since no one knows how long he is going to live, no one knows when he is middle-aged.

66 AND GOING STRONG

DEAR 66: You don't say which dictionary you use, but my Webster's Seventh New Collegiate defines middle-age as the period of life from about 40 to 60. And that's what I call a nice middle-aged spread.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Please tell NEEDS TO KNOW IN NEVADA to go ahead and have himself circumcised.

My husband was 38 before I finally persuaded him to have it done. He felt a little discomfort for about a week afterward, but no other problems. And now he is cosmetically, hygenically and sexually a much superior lover than he used to be. We are not Jewish, so religion didn't enter into it.

ANNIE IN PASADENA

DEAR ANNIE: Since you compare the before and after experiences, you should know. And by the way, circumcision is not exclusively a Jewish religious rite. It's for Moslems as well.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

Staggering losses at the bridge table have been incurred through the injudicious choice of an opening lead. On this hand West was responsible for a swing of 1,860 points against his side due to an ill advised attack.

The bidding sequence, given as it occurred at the table, does not have our seal of approval; nevertheless, the soundness of the final contract cannot be impeached. East's double was of the Lightner variety, requesting an unusual lead—usually the first suit bid by dummy.

West, however, decided upon the "safe" lead of the queen of clubs. Declarer won the king, cashed the ace of trumps, then took the ace of clubs and ruffed a club in dummy. He returned to his hand with the king of trumps, in the process drawing the last of the defenders' trumps.

Since East's Lightner double surely doomed the diamond finesse to failure, it seemed that declarer would have to lose two diamond tricks. However, declarer saw that he had a chance if East held both high spade honors in addition to the king of diamonds. He ran all hi trumps to bring about this position:

♠ 6	♠ K Q
◇ 8 7 3	◇ K J
♠ 4
◇ 5 4 2

Now the ace and another spade forced East into the lead, and he was obliged to surrender the last two tricks to the ace and queen of diamonds.

Note that had West followed his partner's request and led a diamond instead of the queen of clubs, declarer would have been unable to develop this neat end play, and the contract would have failed.

Safety Council Offers Advice To Serious Jogging Enthusiasts

CHICAGO (Special) — A lot of people are running into trouble as they engage in America's current fad sport — jogging.

With runners an increasingly familiar sight along highways and byways, the casualty rate is also rising, according to the Department of Safety and Research of the Combined American Insurance Company.

While precise numbers are not available, the safety experts have reason to believe that a signficant proportion of the pedestrians struck down by motor vehicles have been joggers who either did not see or were not seen as they ran too close to traffic.

Some joggers have suffered heart attacks and heat strokes, but most of the casualties have involved sprains, strains, torn ligaments, fractures, muscle cramps and blisters.

The National Safety Council regards jogging as one of the best all-round forms of exercise, helping people stay trim and improving their general health, strength, endurance and outlook on life. But the Council also warns that jogging can be hazardous to one's health unless pursued in moderation.

The Office of Consumer Affairs of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare agrees, recommending that before one takes up running he or she should involve investing in a good, properly fitting pair of running shoes, according to the consumer advocates.

In the interest of making jogging a safer pastime, Combined Insurance safety researchers offer these rules:

— Before running, engage in a brief warm-up to limber muscles and minimize chances of developing charley horses or becoming easily fatigued.

— Set your own pace. If you are a novice, walk the course — say a mile — the first day. The second day run a short distance and walk the rest of the way, increasing your running time each day until you can cover the entire distance easily. Then gradually increase the distance.

— To test your endurance, talk, sing or recite poetry to yourself as you run. As soon as it becomes an effort to talk, sit down and keep quiet. You have gone your distance.

— At the end of a run, walk a short distance to ease your muscles. Then rest, do a few stretching exercises and take a shower.

— Take a drink (nonalcoholic, of course) whenever you feel the need during a run: the belief that athletes should not slake their thirst is no longer considered valid. Tomato juice is preferred over salt tablets to replace salt lost in sweating.

— Whenever possible run on sidewalks or in parks or other out-of-the-way areas; if you must jog in a street or road, find a shoulder or margin for safety, and always run against traffic so you can see what is coming.

If you follow the rules, you can prolong your life, according to Combined Insurance safety researchers. They noted that the Health Insurance Institute has reported fewer heart attacks among Harvard University graduates who regularly jog, swim, climb moutains or engage in other strenuous sports. A good criterion for healthful activity is that the participant works up a sweat and pants.

"In other words," a Combined researcher observed, "jogging isn't just another sport. It enables people to run for their lives."

Defense To Open Proceedings In Huey Newton Murder Trial

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Later this month, a jury again will sit in judgment of Black Panther Huey Newton, leader of the group that the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover once called the most dangerous in the country.

Newton shouted back that the Pentagon, CIA, politicians and police were far more dangerous, and, after finding them guilty, ruled, "... the verdict is death."

Today, the handsome, richly dressed man sitting, relaxed but alert in the courtroom, is a far cry from the gun-rattling, rhetoric-spewing revolutionary who harangued crowds a decade ago.

Gone are the squads of armed, black-leathered "soldiers" and the crowds of white, long-haired radicals who jammed the streets outside the courthouse in past legal skirmishes, shouting, "Free Huey!"

And his Black Panther Party has little left of its former clout. Most of its original leaders are into other things. The bold headlines they used to make are a blurred, fading memory. Membership is reported shrinking, but no figures are available.

"We're just not looking at them anymore," said an officer in the Oakland Police intelligence section.

Today, the only time the Black Panthers seem to get public mention is when Newton goes to court. The current trial is his seventh felony trial since 1964, with three convictions, two reversed. He is currently appealing conviction on a weapons charge.

Newton, 37, is being retried in the street-corner killing of a 17-year-old Oakland prostitute five years ago. The first trial last March ended in mistrial after the jury stalemated 10-2 for acquittal.

The prosecution wants the new jury of seven women and five men to believe Newton gunned down Kathleen Smith because she had the effrontery to call to him as she patroled her "beat" and did not appreciate Newton's importance when he confronted her.

The defense, which was to open its case today, wants the jury to believe the murder charge is continued harassment by "the establishment."

HomeOwners Threatened By Tax Deed Speculators

QUINCY, Fla. (UPI) — Muhammed Sideeq says John G. Barrow and other tax deed speculators are about to take over dozens of homes in Gadsden and surrounding counties.

"Fedo and Hatti Mae Kenon are the ones who got bitten, but a lot more people around here are about to be bitten," said Sideeq, a Black Muslim minister and official with Florida State University's Office of Minority Affairs.

During a combination prayer service-rally for the Kenons at a rural Baptist church near here Wednesday night, Sideeq read off the names of 30 people behind in their property taxes, according to Gadsden records.

"There's another 150 down there at the clerk's office. I just didn't have time to get them all," says Sideeq, who has joined other black activists in trying to help the Kenons save their home, which now belongs to Barrow because he paid a $3.05 deliquent tax bill three years ago.

Barrow has purchased tax deeds on several homes behind in Gadsden taxes, he said, and is in court trying to evict at least two families, although he has made no attempt to evict the Kenons so far. Others also have purchased deeds and may be about to begin eviction proceedings.

Black leaders and activists in the area will publish a list of people with delinquent taxes and distribute it at churches, Sideeq says, adding someone should have done this earlier.

"Three dollars and 5 cents may cost a family their home, and not because of Barrow, but because my sister didn't know and those of us who did know didn't take the time to tell her. I don't have a bone to pick with Barrow."

Taxes on the Kenon home — negligible because the property is only appraised $5,200 and most of that is absorbed by the basic $5,000 homestead exemption — were paid until 1975. Delinquent notices went out then, but Mrs. Kenon says she never saw them.

SISTERS:
Bittersweet Rivals, Loving Friends

Between two sisters growing up side by side there can be tremendous competition. They must share parents, and more; they vie for approval, and the contest goes on — until one day the relationship will mature, and one-time rivals become friends. Sibling rivalry has always been a fascinating study; now read about it this week in FAMILY WEEKLY.

Researchers Discover Genetic Link To Cancer

BOSTON (AP) — For the first time, scientists have discovered an inherited genetic defect that causes a form of cancer, and they say they can spot fetuses before birth that almost certainly will grow up to have the disease.

Researchers at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston noticed that one family had an unusually high frequency of cancer of the kidney. After more study, they found a specific, inherited foulup in the people's chromosomes that apparently caused the illness.

Some scientists believe that all of the approximately 100 kinds of cancer that plague humans can be caused by either inheritance or environmental hazards. Until now, however, they had never been able to spot the genetic mistake that allowed the disease to pass from parent to child.

The research, headed by Dr. Robert S. Brown, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Brown said that through amniocentesis, a prenatal test, doctors will be able to determine before birth whether new members of this family will be predisposed to having kidney cancer.

Inheritance of kidney cancer is rare, and Brown said the genetic accident they discovered may affect only one family. However, the possibility exists that doctors may someday be able to use similar techniques to find the seeds of other kinds of cancer in the unborn.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Alfred G. Knudson Jr. of Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia wrote: "If it is true that there are 100 or so cancers and that each occurs in both hereditary and non-hereditary form, then genetic studies of those rare families with inherited cancers could ultimately lead to a catalogue of the 100 or so cancer genes in men. Theoretically, all persons at high genetic risk of cancer could be identified, even in fetal life."

According to this scenario, parents could decide to stop a pregnancy with abortion if it appeared the unborn baby had a high risk of growing up to have cancer.

Researchers are not sure what proportion of cancers are caused by heredity and which are touched off by environmental factors, such as smoking.

In the family that was studied, kidney cancer developed in five men and five women over three generations. The researchers were able to study genetic material from eight of them and found that all had the same genetic mistake. Members ot this family have a 50-50 chance of being born with the scrambled chromosomes.

All humans have 23 pairs of chromosomes — strings of genes that control physical development. In the people in the family studied, one chromosome from the third pair was switched with one from the eighth pair.

People with this abnormality stand an 87 percent chance of developing cancer of the kidney by age 59, the researchers said. Ordinarily, about one person in a thousand gets kidney cancer by this age.

Bergland To Survey Area Crop Damage

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland will visit Lubbock and the South Plains next week to survey recent crop damage, talk to area officials about the fresh water situation and deliver a major speech on agriculture, U.S. Rep. Kent Hance said Wednesday.

Bergland will make a one one-day trip here Sept. 20 to tour Deaf Smith, Castro, Parmer, Lamb, Hockley, Terry, Gaines, Dawson and Martin Counties, which were declared disaster areas after being struck by a monstrous hail storm three weeks ago.

"We are extremely pleased to have Secretary Bergland coming to the 19th Congressional District," said Hance, who along with U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford, arranged for the visit. "This is one of the major agricultural areas in the nation and having the secretary visit here could play an important role in the future concerning regulations and legislation that will greatly affect agriculture and agricultural-related business and economics.

"His visit also could prove very important in the light of recent severe crop damage in our area," Hance continued. "I've written Bergland to request a 20 percent reduction in the loans of farmers who suffered a 70 percent loss of crops. Many farmers could be forced out of business by this disaster, and my proposal could prevent some of this."

A potentially record-breaking summer crop of corn, cotton, soybeans and sunflowers was wiped out by the storm, which many longtime farmers are calling the worst ever to hit the South Plains. Damage estimates for the nine-county area hit hardest is currently listed at about $200 million, with nearly $150 million of that coming from a single cell inside the storm.

Hance toured the area two days after the storm at the request of area farmers and called the damage, "The worst I've ever seen." At his urging, Texas Gov. Bill Clements declared the nine counties disaster areas, paving the way for farmers to receive low-interest loans to offset their losses.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures were mixed and soybean futures rose slightly in quiet trading Wednesday before the release of a major government crop report.

The Agriculture Department report after the close of trading was expected to predict a record 2.2-billion-bushel U.S. soybean harvest, about 4 percent more than the department estimated in August, and a record 7.26-billion-bushel corn crop, about 2 percent bigger than last month's estimate.

Rural Town Debates Building City Hall

SOUTH HARRISON, N.J. (AP) — The building inspector keeps files in his kitchen. The town clerk works on her sun porch. And the town's two policemen have their headquarters in a mobile home.

Voters in this rural hamlet of 1,400 persons in southwestern New Jersey decide Saturday whether to break a 97-year tradition and change all that — by building their first town hall.

The Gloucester County community doesn't have any traffic lights, gas stations, housing developments or sewers.

Its town hall — the hottest political issue in years — is needed to store the municipal paperwork, said Mayor Donald J. Kelley.

"The building inspector has a filing cabinet in his kitchen and papers in his bedroom," he said. "The clerk works out of her sun porch. It's an inconvenience to the officials as well as the people."

There is no central phone number for the township and people have a hard time finding officials, he explained.

As proposed by the township committee, voters will decide whether the town should put down $40,000 cash and borrow $50,000 by issuing bonds to build a wood-frame municipal building.

The plan has been scaled down twice — costs of earlier versions were estimated at $400,000 and $200,000.

But some people still object, saying the small residential community can't afford even the scaled down building.

Committeeman Harvey Skinner, a retired farmer, said taxes are high enough already, and "that's good reason to be conservative."

Kelley, a surgeon, disagrees.

"We don't provide much in the way of services," he said. "There is no water, sewer or trash collection. The only thing we do provide are the police and the streets, and of course, the paperwork."

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: I am 28 years of age, single, and have no dependents. My parents gave me, when I was still a minor, common stocks which have now reached a market value of $20,000. Would this stock automatically revert to my parents in the event of my death? I want them to have the stocks, but I am not sure a will is necessary.

A: Upon your death the stock would pass to your parents, but it would not pass automatically. It would be necessary to prove that the parents were indeed the heirs, and the only heirs, of the deceased person. The cost of drawing a simple will and having it probated would probably be less than the cost of proving title to the stock without a will. A will would have the additional value of disposing of other assets which the person might have, such as personal effects, checking and saving accounts.

Q: A friend of mine wants to have a will prepared leaving all his property to his grandchildren and leaving his daughter nothing. Could his daughter break a will like that?

A: In Texas a person can disinherit any relative, including children, by leaving property to someone else. Grounds for contesting a will include lack of mental capacity, failure to observe some legal requirement in the execution of the will or fraud. However, disinheritance alone is not ground for challenging a will.

Q: My son keeps receiving bills from the doctor and hospital for surgery performed on his former wife. The operation occurred between their separation and the granting of the divorce. The divorce decree states my son is responsible for all of their debts. Does he have to pay these bills?

A: Any debt which was incurred between the marriage of a couple and the date of their divorce is a debt for which their community property is liable. Even though the operation on your son's former wife occurred after they were separated, the husband is still legally liable for debts against the couple's community property until the divorce decree was issued, unless these debts were excluded by the divorce decree.

Q: I have been separated from my husband for the past 18 years and have single-handedly raised my 10 children. I didn't get a divorce because of my religious objections. Needless to say, the children never received child support. Recently I heard that if there is a separation of five years the couple is automatically divorced. Is this true? If so, what, if anything, am I required to do?

A: This is not true. You will need to contact a lawyer. You will need to file and obtain a divorce if you desire one.

Garwood Fighting Private War

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI) — While the Marine Corps ponders the fate of Pfc. Robert R. Garwood, the small-town Indiana boy who returned to America 13 1/2 years after being captured by the North Vietnamese, is fightin his own private war.

It is not, he says, a war with the Marine Corps, which is investigating charges that Garwood collaborated with the North Vietnamese during his years of captivity.

"Nobody can hurt me anymore," he says, his speech halting and still tinged with a European accent he picked up in Vietnam. "If somebody says they want to hurt me, what can they do? My body, my soul have become numb. What can they do?"

The fight, he says, is to keep his "mental stability," to find his bearings in a world totally alien to the one where he spent 13½ years, much of it in the jungle.

"The charges. What are the charges? They (the Vietnamese) threaten me year in year out. I'm threatened with death for so many years, so what is this to me? I've lived with the gun to my head, but they never pull the trigger," he said as he reflected on his case in an interview.

Garwood, 33, whose sudden emergence last April gave hope to many families that other American servicemen are alive in Vietnam, returned to active duty in May at Camp Lejeune, a sprawling and isolated infrantry base, where he is carefully shielded from reporters.

Here he will remain until the Marines decide whether Garwood is Vietnam's latest villian, or its latest victim.

He has been accused by fellow POWs of deserting and collaborating with the enemy, of helping interrogate American POWs, and of walking patrols with enemy soldiers. He could face death if convicted of treason.

He refuses to discuss specific allegations, but only says, "You tried to do everything you could to survive. If you gave up, you died. I saw death many times, but somehow I kept on breathing."

Gaunt, balding and withdrawn, the mirror-lensed sunglasses he wore on his return are gone to reveal dark, darting eyes. He rarely smiles and rubs his temples constantly as he talks in a voice just above a whisper about his experiences. At one point, he taps his forehead, and says, "I have a psychiatric problem."

He takes medication for malaria and tuberculosis. He works as a clerk, and spends most nights in town with friends, avoiding the military quarters set aside for him in a barracks for Marines whose status is in limbo because of problems medical or legal.

A high school dropout from a broken family of little means, he joined the Marines at 17 and was captured only three weeks before his tour of duty as a chaplain's driver was to end. His mother died while he was in captivity.

Garwood is resigned to the fact no one will ever understand what he has gone through, and he spends little time trying to explain. The nightmares, he said, have become more frequent.

"Many times you can hear the cries of your buddies when they are being tortured. Many times you can hear the scream just before they die. You can see their faces. It's like the hell of hells," he said.

The official word from the Marines is that the Garwood investigation is continuing, and there is no way to determine when it will be complete. Marine Corps spokesman Maj. John Woggon says he is treated as "just another Marine," fueling charges from Garwood's attorney that he is not receiving the special psyciatric treatment and rehabilitation he needs.

In the meantime, Garwood's rank is frozen at Pfc., and $146,000 in back pay is held up until the case is resolved. He has also been offered a six-figure sum for the rights to his story, but insists money means little to him.

"It cannot buy me life," he says. "I have gotten many letters from people who want to write my story, but there are many painful memories. There will be a time and place to relate this."

Rock Island Railway Talks At Standstill

WASHINGTON (AP) — No new bargaining talks are scheduled between the Rock Island railroad and its two striking unions after efforts to revive the stalled contract negotiations failed.

Federal mediators called officials of the Chicago-based railroad to separate meetings with the striking unions Tuesday. But after the talks, chief mediator George S. Ives said "no immediate progress was made" toward ending the two-week strike that has snarled freight shipments in 13 states and shut down the line's Chicago-area commuter service. Members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks and the United Transportation Union are striking over a back pay dispute.

Solon's Actions May Be Based On Brother's Political Lesson

By CLAY F. RICHARDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy's statements that he will likely decide by year's end whether to challenge President Carter may be based on a political lesson he learned from his brother, Robert, in 1968.

A look at the 1980 presidential primary calendar makes it clear it would probably be too late for the Massachusetts senator to wait and see if Carter is defeated or weakened in the New Hampshire primary before deciding to take on the incumbent.

Once, it could be done. Estes Kefauver defeated President Harry Truman in the 1952 New Hampshire primary, clearing the way for Adlai Stevenson to make his move for the nomination — but only after Truman subsequently dropped out.

Similarly Sen. Eugene McCarthy softened up, but did not defeat, President Lyndon Johnson in the 1968 New Hampshire primary, and a few days later, Robert Kennedy got into the race and Johnson decided not to run.

We'll never know if Kennedy could have won the nomination that year — an assassin's bullet settled the issue in June.

But some liberals were angered at Kennedy for jumping in after McCarthy had done the dirty work, and weren't about to hand the whole ball game over to the New York senator.

In any case, the 1980 political calendar as it now stands makes it difficult if not impossible for Edward Kennedy to wait as long as his brother did to decide.

Kennedy himself dismissed the feasibility of waiting until next year to see how Carter does in the early primaries, telling the Wall Street Journal Tuesday: "I never felt that was realistic."

Analysis

He said, "the fact is only 70 percent of the delegates are left to be selected" after the New Hampshire primary Feb. 26.

Actually, there are a lot less than 70 percent of the delegates left for Kennedy to have a shot at after New Hampshire, since the filing deadlines in many states with later primaries will have passed by then.

In general, many of the early primaries are in the Northeast — Kennedy's home territory. If he skips these to analyze how weak Carter is, he will face the same problem brother Robert did — taking on Carter later on in the president's native South, and in the West, where Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., of California is strong.

Garden Becomes Center Of Talk At Prison

Whatever it's called, the garden they planted this year outside the walls of the Chittenden Community Correctional Center has become the talk of the prison.

"The idea is that planting, nurturing and harvesting a garden satisfies a primal need and helps prisoners gain self-confidence and self-esteem," said Nancy Flinn, 38, a mother of four who started the program last spring.

First, she talked correction officials into trying the idea, then convinced the University of Vermont to loan a 3½ acre alfalfa field nearby.

Nearly a dozen inmates volunteered to work part-time in the fields and Mrs. Flinn convinced CETA officials to pay four prisoners $3.25 an hour to cultivate vegetables.

The prison brigade planted 800 tomatoes, 700 pounds of potatoes and a dozen rows of corn, but initial enthusiasm was lagging.

"I hated this garden at first. I hated it because I had to be here. I hated everything about prison," said Rick Brown, 32.

"Now, I'd have to say it helped me," he said as he harvested a 200-foot row of yellow beans.

"It's not working in the garden per se, but all the things that go with it — all the pats on the back we've gotten, the people we've met," he said.

Brown, serving a one-year sentence, is due for release this month, his sentence reduced by "good time" earned in part in the garden. All the other prisoners working in the garden were nearing the end of their terms.

"It's a good deal," said Floyd Russell, 23, serving three-to-nine years for theft. "I took the job for the money. For the first time I got all my bills paid."

Prison guard Brent Baker, who supervised the garden, said there was only one security problem — a woman inmate who escaped and was caught an hour later.

The only other law enforcement problem put prisoners at the receiving end of a crime — an overnight thief cleaned out eight rows of potatoes.

"You never saw anybody get mad until you've seen a bunch of prisoners who have been ripped off," one observer said.

Russell and Brown pointed with pride to the harvest: a cornucopia of 5,000 pounds of assorted vegetables, several tons of potatoes, 4,000 ears of corn and 144 heads of cabbage.

As of mid-September, Mrs. Flinn calculated the harvest's retail value at more than $4,000. The vegetables were served at the prison, with the surplus shipped to other correctional centers or donated to senior citizen centers.

And there were less tangible results.

"The (prisoners) involved in the garden were much better behaved. They had no disciplinary problems, and they became more conscious of how they spent their money," prison Superintendent George Africa said.

Russell called the garden an outlet for the frustrations of prison life.

New Yorker Boasts Best Mailing Lists Around

NEW YORK (AP) — Hypnotists cost $35 a thousand, the same as periodontists, pits and quarries, and journalism colleges. Ice and roller skating rinks are a bit more — $40 per thousand.

Alvin B. Zeller will sell you all these things — or rather, he will sell you lists that contain names and address for individuals and companies in all these categories.

Zeller claims to have the best mailing lists around. His lists are used for a lot of things, chief among them direct mail advertising — otherwise known as "junk mail."

"We can do all sorts of things," Zeller says. "We can take urban residents and we can take farm residents...We've had calls for farmers by crop — only cotton farmers who have a thousand acres or more. We can be very pinpointed, very specific."

Indeed. Zeller's 1980-81 catalog offers more than 2,500 categories, ranging from 15 xylophone manufacturers for $20 to 2 million office workers at $50 per 1,000.

There's 35,000 millionaires, at a price of $75 per 1,000; 11,500 Jewish contributors, very large, $50 per 1,000; and 5,850 jails, prisons and reformatories, $25 per 1,000.

Zeller has been in the business for 29 years, and perhaps that's why his speech is littered with lists. For example, who buys Alvin B. Zeller lists?

"We sell largely to publishing companies, advertising agencies, manufacturers, fund-raising organizations, ordinary individual firms that have a product to sell...or somebody who has a private word to say," he said.

And where do the lists come from?

"We get them from a combination of telephone directories, we have a huge library of every trade directory, every professional directory, every roster, every membership list.

"There are medical associations that offer us lists of doctors, there are legal associations that offer us lists of lawyers, the states publish many, many lists of accountants and engineers and architects, day care centers and whatever," he said.

All of these facts are plugged into computers, to be compiled on demand. Zeller estimates his computers contain 100 million names.

"For instance, we have about 60 million names that are residential families. Now, we can break that down by income echelons. ...We say that carefully, because some people don't like to know that we know they're making 10-, 20-or 100-thousand dollars.

"Everybody is categorized by what they have done, by what they do, by what they buy, by where they go. We go from the small people to the large people," he said.

"We have calls from people who want Polish names in Nebraska, or Spanish names in New Mexico, or Jewish names in Miami. ...We have religious names and ethnic names, Jewish doctors and non-Jewish dentists."

There are expensive lists and cheaper lists. The most expensive are lists of investors, going for $100 or $200 per 1,000. Zeller says he simply figures his cost and adds a markup, without considering the nature of the lists involved.

For example, dynamite and explosives manufacturers cost $40 per 1,000, the same price as hospitals with more than 1,000 beds but $15 more than mayors or state legislators.

The home addresses of corporate presidents go for $50 per 1,000, double the cost of a list of wives of high-income executives.

Quaker, Mormon, Eastern Orthodox, Unitarian, Mennonite and Evangelical churches cost $30 per 1,000; all others cost $25.

Factor One, Zeller says, is impact. He says direct mail advertising has found its "niche" in this decade, and "pinpointing via direct mail has become probably as effective an advertising medium as there is."

For those who hate junk mail, or perhaps object to that massive computer stuffed with names and information, Zeller says he will purge the computer of names on request.

"But you'd be surprised, we get people who ask to have their names put on to mailing lists," he said. "They're afraid they're missing something. We get a great number of them. I get letters every day, 'Please add my name to your mailing lists.'"

Soviet Union Orders Additional Grain, Corn

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought an additional 500,000 metric tons of U.S. grain for delivery in the coming year.

The Agriculture Department said this week the new orders included 200,000 metric tons of wheat and 300,000 of corn. The grain is to be delivered in the fourth year of a purchase agreement that will begin on Oct. 1.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

The latest purchases raised to more than 4.9 million metric tons of grain, including 1.6 million of wheat and 3.3 million of corn, the total that the Soviet Union has bought for 1979-80 delivery.

Sales for the third year of the agreement, which will end Sept. 30, total more than 15.5 million metric tons, including about 11.6 million of corn and 3.9 million of wheat.

APE ON TELEVISION — Chantek the orangutan, being taught sign language at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, performed for the camera this week Children's Television Workshop, which produces the Sesame Street program, is filming the 20-month-old orangutan's doings for airing in January. With the ape before the camera are Ginny Ortiz, a member of the show's cast, and Lyn Miles, a university anthropology professor who is instructing Chantek. (AP Laserphoto)

Orangutan Takes Center Stage On Children's Science Show

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Civilization has been good to Chantek. First he learned sign language, and now he's on a nationally televised children's science show. Not bad for a 20-month-old orangutan.

Lyn Miles, a University of Tennessee at Chattanooga anthropology professor who began Chantek's instruction last October, said recently she is elated with his progress.

"It's wonderfully successful. We're really very pleased," she said. "He'll offer his hands to us to be molded. He's recognized that signs have meaning, and he wants guidance from us."

Chantek is trained in a trailer on the university's urban campus. Inside, he has toys with which he learns various skills. Miss Miles and her assistants are currently analyzing Chantek's intelligence and comparing his progress with that of human children.

Clad in diapers "for convenience's sake," Chantek was center stage recently as a crew from the Children's Television Workshop filmed him in trees, showing off on the "monkey" bars and signing words with his handlers. The program, "Three, Two, One, Contact," is for airing in January.

But Miss Miles said her small hairy charge, whose wardrobe includes a custom-made ski jacket and snowsuit, is not always so well received — like the times he goes shopping.

"Most everybody is just thrilled with him," she said. On the other hand, she said, "Some of them ask him to leave. They think he's a pet."

The Children's Television Workshop has been filming at the univrsity for the past two days. The workshop is aleady known for producing the Sesame Street program brought to young viewers over the Public Broadcasting System.

Miss Miles said Chantek first displayed his sign language ability last December, moving his right hand up to his chin to indicate "food-eat." A day later, he began signing for "drink."

Now, he knows 11 signs, including those meaning tickle, come gimme, open, up, brush, chase and more. Some involve two-sign combinations.

"He's not doing human language. We can't claim that," she said. "It seems like a technical distinction, but it's really important."

CHANGING LIFESTYLES

When changing to a different lifestyle, little thing do add up, points out Dorthy Taylor, a family life education specialist. Families moving to the country from the city and vice versa need to spend more time considering all aspects of the new life, Miss Taylor says.

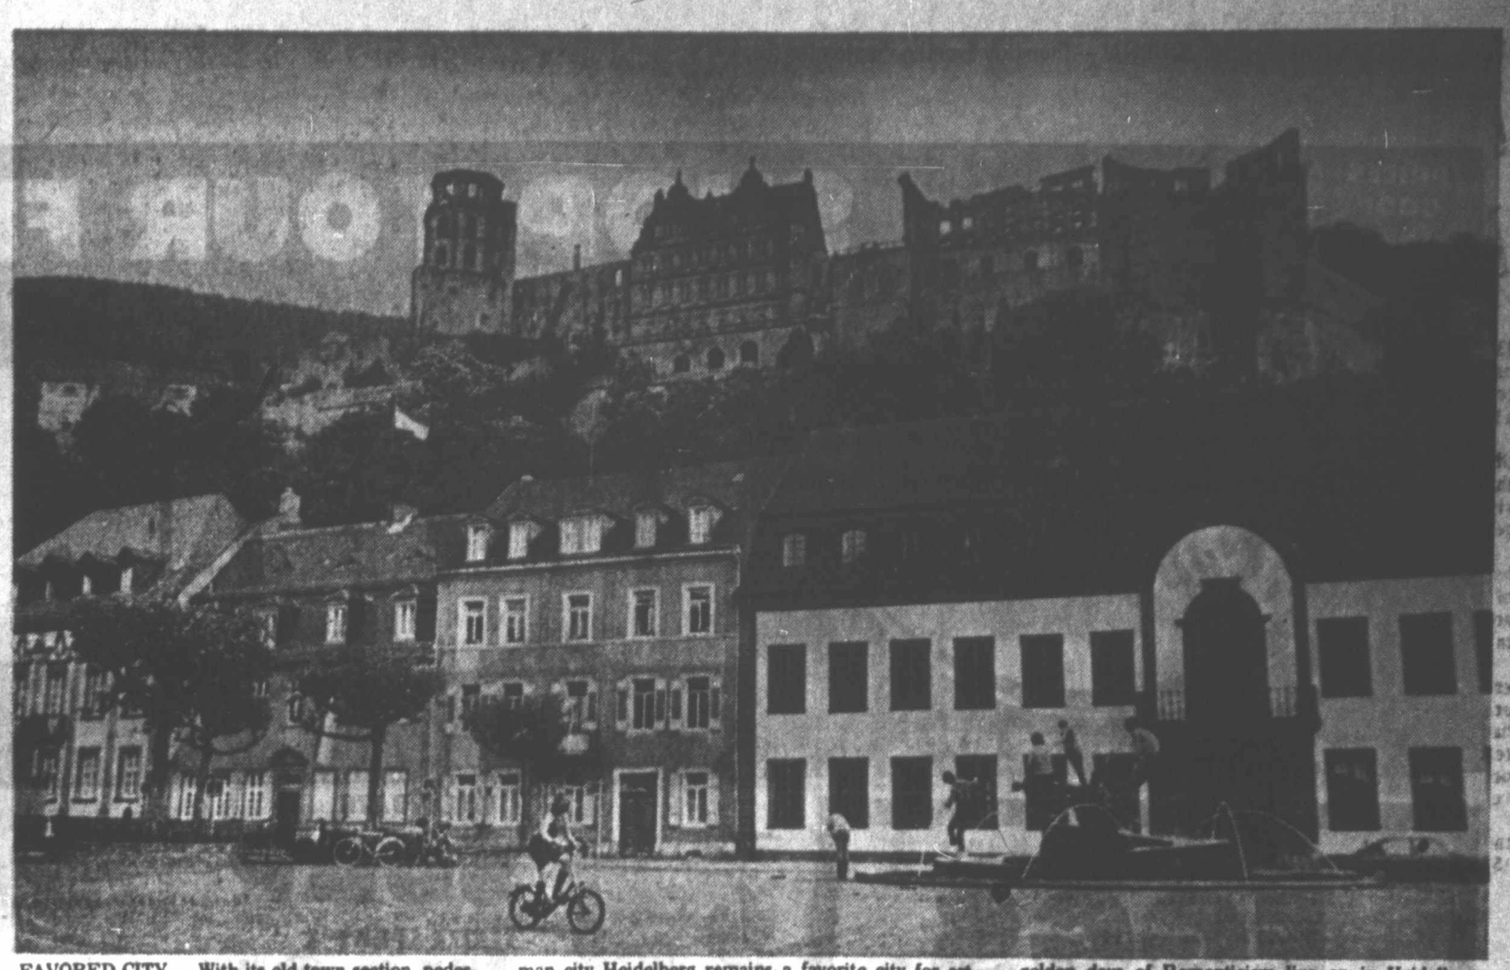
ELIZABETH'S GATE — A stone arch honoring the marriage of Elector-Prince Friedrich and Princess Elizabeth of England in 1613 retains its beauty at Heidelberg.



FAVORED CITY — With its old town section, pedestrian walk, castle, river and forested hills, the German city Heidelberg remains a favorite city for artists. Setting of "The Student Prince" operetta, the golden days of Romanticism live on in Heidelberg fair. (Staff Photos by Ted J. Simon)

City Deserving Of Accolades

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

"For centuries our city has been romanticized by artists, poets and writers," said Mary Kopp, tour guide with the Heidelberg tourist office. "We're proud to say that it's regarded as one of the most beautiful cities in Germany."

Such statements, appropriately changed for the territory concerned, are expected from a tour guide. But, in the instance of Heidelberg, the flowery accolades are justly deserved.

Heidelberg's charming old town section, with the huge castle spreading across a dominating hillside, is everything the travel brochures promise. Picturesque stone bridges span the winding Neckar River, painters favor large pedestrian walks to capture the charm of the German Romanticism period, and university students wearing "Student Prince" caps crowd into quaint taverns. Not only is Heidelberg beautiful, but it is also one of Europe's most interesting cities.

Heidelberg is less than an hour away from Frankfurt by bus. Frankfurt, a gateway to all of West Germany, is served by Braniff International with non-stop 747 flights from Dallas-Fort Worth. Braniff's round trip budget fare of $528 from Lubbock (beginning Sept. 15) makes it possible for cost conscious travelers to visit the forest-village-vineyard country that has changed little in recent decades.

Americans usually associate Heidelberg with Sigmund Romberg's "The Student Prince" operetta. Although the prince was a character borrowed from a fictional story, and the music by Romberg was Viennese, the operetta publicized Heidelberg more than any Madison Avenue advertising agency or public relations firm could have imagined. Today the operetta has become so related to the city that it is presented every August, to the delight of visitors from around the world.

New York City has its Times Square, Rome its Trevi Fountain, and Nairobi its outdoor Thorn Tree Restaurant. All are famous places to meet friends and keep appointments. In Heidelberg it is the castle's terrace. The terrace is an unforgettable rendezvous site; it's especially memorable when the bells from the city's many churches simultaneously herald the appointed hour. The haunting tones, reaching up to the forested bluff, gain an even richer resonance within the high walls of the castle.

The Castle of Heidelberg was built in the thirteenth century. Much of the Renaissance fortress is now in ruins because of occupying French troops of Louis XIV under the command of General Melac in 1689 and 1693. However, enough of the reddish stones have been replaced so that the site enjoys an elegance surpassing most castle ruins.

Visitors to the castle should visit the Apothecary Museum and the Heidelberg Tun. The tun is the world's largest wine cask and is large enough to hold 65,000 gallons of the liquid grape. The wooden keg is so large that a stairway was constructed along one side, so that the top could be reached to facilitate the filling process.

There are several castle tours conducted daily by English-speaking guides. The castle can be reached by a cable railway; the same ride continues on to the top of the hill (2,000 feet) and the "King's Seat" for a view of the city, river and surrounding countryside.

Back down to the old town portion of Heidelberg, be sure to see the university that was founded in 1386 and is modern Germany's oldest university. Other notable structures are the baroque Palatine Museum, town hall, and Church of the Holy Ghost.

Many of the narrow streets lead to student inns and taverns (shades of the "The Student Prince" again) where you will see old photos and other memorabilia of fencing teams and dueling clubs adorning the walls. By the way, visiting one or two of the student taverns is an interesting experience, but I recommend having your meals elsewhere. I was served a meal different than I had ordered. When I brought it to the attention of the indignant waitress, the correct order was poorly cooked and slammed down on the table. Perhaps the poor food and rude service can be attributed to having to contend with a lively student clientele.

Heidelberg's resident population of 105,000 is augmented by 25,000 students. The large ratio of students (many getting by on meager allowances) does make for budget pricee meals and lodging. Heidelberg can be one of the most inexpensive cities in Germany for a tourist.

An inexpensive and memorable experience is a river trip. Day-long river cruises depart from Heidelberg for an enjoyable view of the countryside. The Neckar River cruises can be extended with Rhine River excursions. Such a river trip prompted Mark Twain to write "Rafting Down the Neckar." Twain went to Heidelberg in May 1878 with the intention of visiting about a week. He fell in love with the city and extended his stay for the entire summer. Besides Twain and Romberg, the city also inspired Victor Hugo and Sigmund Romberg.

Camera-toting visitors would do well to cross the Carl-Theodor Bridge (also known as Old Bridge) built in 1786. On the north bank of the Neckar, you should be able to capture a beautiful scene that includes the bridge with its nine arches, the baroque twin-towered bridge gate, old town, and the castle. It is a story book setting.

Heidelberg is also the gateway to the south of Germany, Bavaria, the Black Forest, the Rhine and the Danube. It is a country of festivals, streams, pristine mountains and valleys, and villages to which time has been most kind.

A modern Heidelberg, adjoining the old town, offers all of the amenities of a dynamic city. There are theatres and concerts, nightlife with discos, art galleries, botanical and zoological gardens. For the athletically inclined there are golf courses, tennis courts, swimming pools, bicycle and horseback paths.

More information pertaining to the charming city, and special three-day holiday package visits, is available from the German National Tourist Office, 630 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10020. General information about visiting Germany is available from Braniff International. Arrangements for transportation, tours and accommodations can be made by any Lubbock travel agent. There is no charge for this service by a travel agent.

Heidelberg usually enjoys a mild winter and an early spring. The jewel of Germany is a pleasure to visit any season of the year.

The magic charm of Heidelberg for many visitors may be found inscribed on a stone on the grounds of the castle. The stanza of a poem written by Marianne von Willemer (1824) reads: "Here I was happy, loving and beloved."

Heidelberg Area Rich In Ancient Castles

Conjure up an image of castles, historic events, vineyards and picturesque scenery. Germany can make this image reality.

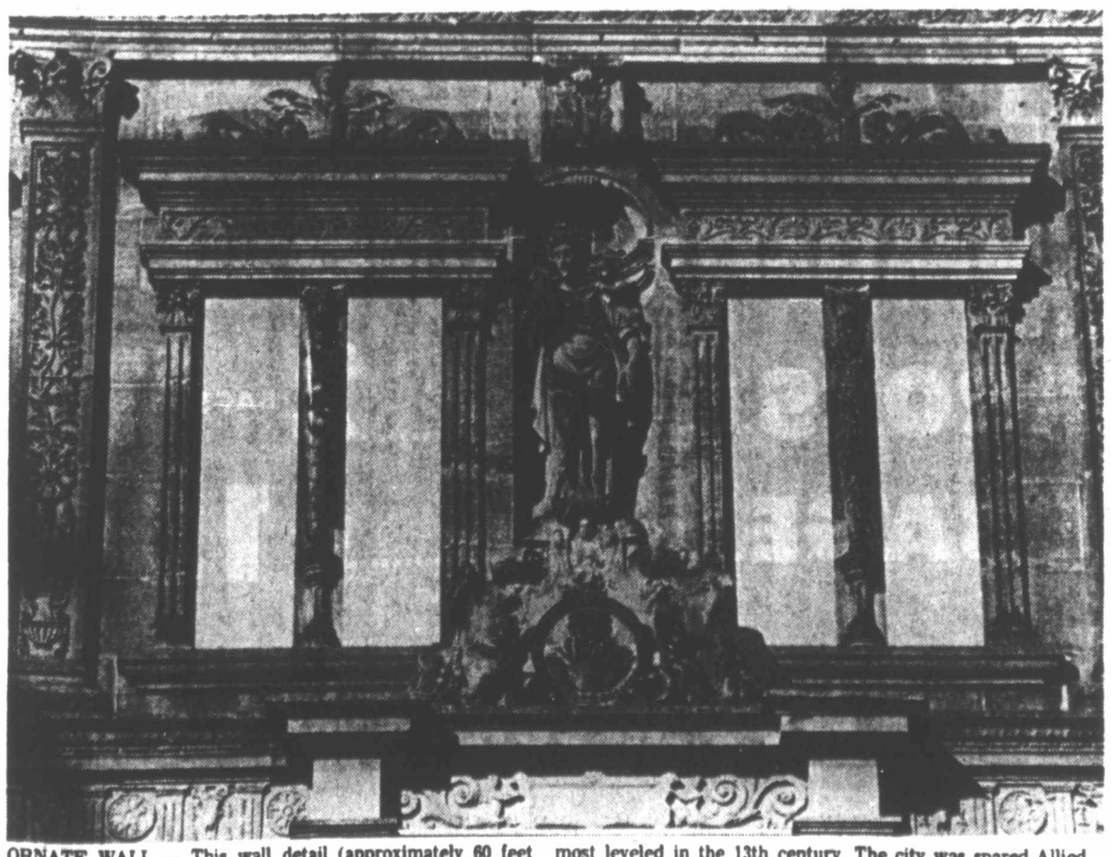
Perhaps no area bettes typifies that scene than the region along the Wine Road and the Castle Road. With Heidelberg as its center, this part of Germany is rich in old castles and includes one of the country's finest wine regions. Along the Wine Road grow more than 180 million vines andalong the Castle Road stand more than 75 ancient fortifications.

Either road is a worthwhile excursion from Heidelberg. Or, one can start on one road, circle around to the other and end up back at the beginning.

First stop on the castle route is the Neuburg Monastery, now inhabited by Benedictine monks, but formerly a royal residence where poets and writers of the Romantic movement congregated. And so it goes: a castle at every turn; a fort on every hill.

Any of the castles will immediately place the visitor in a time long ago when kings, colorful minstrels and weary soldiers peopled these imposing structures. The romance lives on, particularly in those castles and forts that are now hotels and inns. In the Neckar Valley alone, there are more than a half dozen now converted to hostelries.

At the end of the Castle Road is Stuttgart, home of Mercedes Benz and the Stuttgart Ballet. This is a city of contrasts, with stretching beyond sight and more mineral baths than a spa.



ORNATE WALL — This wall detail (approximately 60 feet above the courtyard) bears witness to the intricate workmanship that was destroyed when the Heidelberg Castle was almost leveled in the 13th century. The city was spared Allied bombing during World War II, but three bridges were demolished by retreating German troops.

Satellites Prove To Be Successful

Science Today

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As you read this, the telephone conversations of 10,000 people around the world may be going through a satellite thousands of miles high. Millions of others may be watching television via satellite.

In addition, these same switchboards in the sky can relay digital data across oceans and continents carrying electronic mail, transferring funds, reporting stock market activities and connecting networks of computers.

New jobs for communications satellites are developing as more and more people have access to them. The Comsat Corp., for example, announced a few weeks ago that it was considering using satellites to beam pay television directly to roof top antennas on subscribers' homes.

Communications satellites were the earliest and remain the largest commercially successful offspring of the nation's space program.

"Certainly, no effort in the U. S. space program has yielded more direct and obvious benefits, and none has had more international involvement than satellite communications," Comsat vice president Burton I. Edelson told a congressional subcommittee last week.

The International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium, which is managed by Comsat, now has 11 operational or standby satellites in orbit to provide a global capacity of 50,000 telephone circuits.

The United States also has three domestic satellite systems in operation as well as commercial satellites to provice service to ships at sea. Canada has its own domestic system as does Indonesia. Other nations are planning domestic or regional systems.

Besides expanding international communications, Burton said Intelsat has significantly reduced the cost of overseas phone calls. He said Intelsat's charge for a telephone circuit is 18 percent of the original charge in 1965.

"Moreover, Intelsat is profitable for its participants," he said. "From its revenues of almost $200 million this year, it will pay about 14 percent return on investment to its members."

Intelsat, which has 102 member nations, is tied together by a network of 250 ground stations in 103 countries. A telecast two weeks ago from Cuba to Yugoslavia marked the entry of Cuba into the system.

The first commercial communications satellite was the little Early Bird, launched in 1965. It had a telephone relaying capacity of 240 circuits and equalled at the time the combined communications capacity of all transatlantic cables.

The largest satellites now in the Intelsat syem are five known as Intelst 4A models. Each can handle as many as 6,000 simultaneous telephone calls.

Burton said an even more powerful Intelsat spacecraft scheduled to be launched early next year will have twice the capacity of the Intelsat 4A.

As satellite power increases and the size of space antennas goes up, ground stations have been able to use smaller and less expensive antennas.

Burton said the trend toward larger satellites undoubtedly will continue and he urged the National Aeronauties and Space Administration to begin work on a large orbital communications platform to be launched in the mid 1980s with the new space shuttle rocket plane.

Department Awards Construction Grant

ATLANTA (AP) — The U.S. Commerce Department has awarded a $2 million grant to aid in the construction of a multilingual conference center at the Martin Luther King Center for Social Change, center officials announced.

The $5.6 million two-story conference center is part of a proposed $15 million Freedom Hall complex planned by the MLK center in Atlanta.

Spokesman Steve Klein said the conference center will be one of three facilities in the United States with facilities for multilingual meetings. The others are the United Nations building in New York and Atlanta's World Congress Center.

Most of the funds for the multilingual conference center and the rest of the complex have been obtained through a fund-raising committee composed of business and labor leaders.

The MLK center currently includes a community center, Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthplace and a chapel. More than 200,000 tourists visit the site each year.

Klein said groundbreaking for the Freedom Hall complex, which will be built next to King's gravesite on Auburn Avenue in Atlanta, will be held Oct. 18.

In addition to the conference center, the complex will include the Martin Luther King Library and Archives, the center's Institute on Nonviolence, the Scholars Internship Program and other programs. It will include an exhibit hall and rooms for classes and seminars.

Klein said the archives will contain more than 1 million civil rights documents, most of them papers left by the slain civil rights leader.

The completion date for the Freedom Hall complex is the fall of 1981, he added.

DR. LAMB

Controlling Diabetes

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has diabetes and his feet have really been bothering him lately. He has tried aspirin and Ben Gay rub but nothing seems to help. He has been up all night lately because his feet hurt and the toes are numb and sting. I read where people with this trouble could take a number of medicines but I don't remember what they were. Any help you can give on this would be appreciated.

DEAR READER — Anytime a diabetic starts having trouble with his feet, he ought to see his doctor. It's too easy for diabetics to lose a foot.

The liklihood is that your husband has diabetic neuropathy which means an involvement of the nerves to his feet. This usually affects the sensory nerves and the person may complain of numbness and pain as you describe. As the condition progresses, there may be other changes that indicate invovement of the nerves.

Diabetes does affect the nervous system. That's how it causes impotence. It involves the nerves that control normal sexual arousal.

There are a limited number of things that can be done to control nerve involvement from diabetes. Most authorities think that the best approach is to try to control the blood sugar level as well as possible. Beyond that, most of the medicines that can be used for this condition are really those that relieve pain.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention And Management, to give you more information on your husband's diabetic problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

The other possibility is that your husband may be developing changes in his circulation to the legs. That is common in a person who has diabetes. These changes are associated with fatty-cholesterol blockage of the arteries. That's another reason why it's important for your husband to see his doctor.

I'm pleased to see there is hope that there will be improved methods of managing diabetics in the not-too-distant future. The National Institutes of Health has let a contract for the production of small mechanical devices by 1981 to continuously provide insulin. These will change the whole picture of the control of the diabetic who needs to take insulin.

The little device is about the size of a cigarette package and can be worn in the shirt pocket. It will deliver insulin as needed at different times of the day in a controlled manner. This will help to control the marked swings in blood sugar levels that are inevitable with the currently available forms of treatment. It's possible that this improved control may decrease the number of complications that we now see with diabetes.

In addition, there is a totally implantable insulin dispensing device that's being developed and may be ready sooner than people think.

Minnesota City Aims For Lofty Goals

W.J. USERY
Mediates City Project

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

Starting this month, St. Paul, Minn., will be drawing up plans for four city projects aimed at achieving energy and economic self-sufficiency.

A lofty enough goal. But if St. Paul succeeds, it will be how the city did it — not what it did — that may well shape the way local governments across America work in the coming decade.

The four projects the city plans include a comprehensive energy program, an industrial park, a downtown renovation program to create badly needed housing, and details for future uses of the 17 miles of Mississippi River that flows through the middle of town.

Each project requires the cooperation and dollars of about half a dozen federal agencies, the state government and local groups.

To understand what is about to happen in St. Paul, imagine that New York City had been able somehow to overcome all the jealousies and conflicting goals of local groups, and of state and federal bureaucracies, and had seen everyone agree on how to rebuild the South Bronx, perhaps America's worst slum.

Now, imagine that this planning was accomplished in just two months.

On a somewhat smaller scale, this is the kind of rapid-fire planning St. Paul hopes to achieve.

According to Dick Broeker, executive assistant to Mayor George Latimer, federal and state representatives will sit down next month in a kind of "town meeting" format with city officials, local businessmen and community groups, and negotiate St. Paul's plans.

Federal negotiators have the full backing of the White House, says John Eric Stenson, a staff member of the Federal Regional Council in Chicago, which will be the voice of Washington in the talks.

"We've been told that the agencies involved will back us up — within reason," says Stenson.

The state officials have the blessing of Minnesota Gov. Albert Quie.

The mediator will be former U.S. Labor Secretary W.J. Usery.

All parties have agreed on a December deadline to complete St. Paul's plans, and commit the necessary money for the projects.

"It's a very radical departure from how government usually operates. It's what you'd have if there wasn't bureaucracy," said Broeker in a recent interview.

The experiment is based on a plan for improving local government called the "Negotiated Investment Strategy," conceived by the Charles Kettering Foundation, an Ohio-based group active for years in the urban arena.

Similar experiments are to begin shortly in two other cities: Gary, Ind., and Columbus, Ohio.

Getting federal, state and local parties to negotiate urban problems is hard enough. Making the agreements stick will be even harder. If even one party — the city council for instance — decides it wants to back out of the talks, the whole scheme could collapse.

And the real test will come after the negotiations — whether promises made by the city, state and federal governments are backed with hard dollars.

Specifically, the two-month negotiations must overcome long-standing intergovernmental conflicts. When a city wants to build an industrial park, for instance, it often grapples with complex federal rules on pollution that make the job of economic development harder.

If the experiment succeeds, it might eventually form the basis of a national urban policy built from "just the whims of Washington."

"All of us have felt that the system of delivering services has been bogging down because of increasing federal rules and regulations," says Stenson. "To a large extent, Proposition 13 fever made a lot of us think that we'd better come up with a way to get more bang for the buck."

Christian Church Schedules Music Composition Contest

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Finding good material is never a problem for the heavenly choir, but for the earthly congregations of one Protestant church the pickings have gotten pretty slim.

That has prompted the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), with its world headquarters here, to launch a sacred music composition contest, complete with cash prizes.

Why would an established church — with 1.4 million members — feel the need for new sacred songs when the old ones have served it well?

"I suppose there are two or three reasons," said Dr. Thomas E. Wood, executive secretary of the church's department of ministry. "The first one is very mundane. We are a 178-year-old denomination and as far as we can tell, we've never been involved in the process of developing sacred music. We have quite a few musicians in our church and we thought it would be good to stimulate them to do some sacred music because its not part of our tradition."

Another reason is that some of the hymns have been used so much that they've become overworked, he said.

"We have a weekly communion service and when you have a service like we do 52 Sundays a year, you exhaust the material very quickly," Wood explained.

The contest is open to members of the church's Association of Disciple Musicians and other members and employees of the church and its congregations. The entry deadline is next June 1. Wood said the judging by a panel of church musicians should be complete by mid July.

The Christian Church, which Wood described as "a middle-of-the road, main-line American Protestant communion," also has some social reasons for wanting new songs.

"So much of the sacred music can only be described as terribly sexist in its orientation of language and its use of the masculine gender throughout," Wood explained. "We're hoping we can gather some material to reflect where we think the church ought to be, not only in terms of language, but also in its outlook toward the world."

So for the first time in its history, the church decided on a contest to solicit new hymns, anthems, choral works and orgn music. Cash awards of $200 for first place and $100 for second will be given in each category.

"Most hymn writers never make a penny off their hymns, there's such a limited market," Wood said. "We have no way of guaranteeing publication and this seemed to be the only way they'd ever be compensated for their hymns."

PCB Found In Chickens

FRANKLIN, Idaho (UPI) — The toxic chemical PCB has been discovered in chickens at one of Idaho's largest poultry farms, forcing the destruction of 350,000 laying hens.

The Food and Drug Administration said this week that the Ritewood Egg Co. has voluntarily shut down its operations because of the contamination.

The FDA said the contamination apparently began in late July and as many as 13 million eggs hatched since then may have been sold in four Western states.

The federal agency also said some contaminated chickens from Ritewood were sold to major canning companies which distribute soup and other products nationwide.

Dr. Joseph Street, a professor of toxicology from Utah State University and a federal investigator, said Ritewood had been producing 260,000 eggs per day until last week's shutdown.

TEXAS ROUNDUP

Panel To Study Initiative, Referendum Measure

AUSTIN (UPI) — The chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee says the panel will begin examining information on how initiative and referendum works in other states in anticipation of Gov. Bill Clements' asking legislators to adopt the proposed constitutional amendment in a special session.

Rep. Al Brown, D-San Antonio, said Wednesday he did not know if or when Clements would call a special session. The governor has indicated he would include initiative and referendum in any special call of the Legislature.

The proposed consitutional amendment was approved by a majority of the House last spring but did not receive the necessary 100 votes to place it on the ballot.

Brown appointed Reps. Ray Keller, D-Duncanville; John Sharp, D-Victoria; Bob Leonard, D-Fort Worth, and Bob Close, R-Perryton, to a subcommittee that will evaluate data gathered from 15 states that have initiative and referendum, which allows citizens to bypass the Legislature to create or abolish laws.

The committee, by unanimous consent, also instructed Brown to ask the governor to include consideration of a ban on a state personal income tax on any special call of the Legislature.

Suit Filed

BEAUMONT (UPI) — A former petrochemical worker and his wife have filed a $6.5 million damage suit in federal court, charging 50 oil, chemical and rubber companies with failing to develop safeguards to prevent cancer in industrial employees.

Homer Lemaire, described as suffering from leukemia, said Wednesday he worked at the Gulfport gas freezing docks until Sept. 14, 1978, and was required to enter gas freezing barges daily. The suit said he was exposed to at least 20 cancer-causing agents per week.

Lemaire, of Port Arthur, sought damages for himself and his wife from defendants that included Texaco, Gulf, Mobil, Jefferson Chemical, the chemical services division of Browning-Ferris Industries, Independent Refining Corp., Dupont, Goodyear, Firestone and Texas-U.S. Chemical.

Milk Study Slated

HOUSTON (AP) — A team of Texas Medical Center and Mexican researchers will study the makeup and value of human mothers' milk, a subject experts say has been ignored.

"No one in the world knows if breast milk is the ideal food for all babies or just some babies," said Dr. R. Rodney Howell, chairman of pediatrics at the University of Texas Medical School. "In fact, remarkably little is known about the properties of breast milk. Our work will have global applications."

New Flights Announced

DALLAS (UPI) — Texas International Airlines has announced it will begin non-stop service between Dallas-Fort Worth and both Oklahoma City and Tulsa Oct. 1, offering discount fares of 37 and 42 percent respectively.

The fare to Oklahoma City will be $29 each way when purchased round trip and to Tulsa $32 each way with a round trip purchase. Those figures compare to the regular one-way coach fares of $46 and $54.

Fertig Addresses Chemical Conference

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

"Decisions on whether to ban agricultural chemicals should be based on scientific data, not politics or hysteria," Dr. Stan Fertig, projects manager of the U. S. Department of Agriculture pesticides impact assessment staff, said here Wednesday.

Fertig spoke to about 200 agribusinessmen, chemical dealers and educators Wednesday at the 27th annual Agricultural Chemicals Conference at the Civic Center.

Legal aspects of agricultural chemicals was the main thrust of opening sessions of the two-day conference.

Supplying food for the world should be the major concern when considering the regulation of agricultural chemicals, said Fertig. He said Treflan, a widely used herbicide that is being evaluated by the Environmental Protection Agency, would cause a short-term loss of $521 million to the nation's farmers if banned.

"Farmers should have all the registered chemicals they can get," the official said. "There are really no alternatives for each chemical."

To secure the continued acceptance of vital agricultural chemicals, Fertig noted, more information is needed from farmers on the application of chemicals and yield and quality of crops and livestock.

Sections 18 and 24(c) of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act were discussed by Bob Hawk of the registration section of I.C.I., an international chemical company.

Section 18 deals with obtaining permission to use certain unregistered chemcials for limited time periods with specific, emergency, or quarantine and public health exemptions from the EPA.

Section 24(c) allows unregistered chemical use for special local needs.

"Applications for emergency status are sometimes rejected by EPA because they are poorly written," Hawk said.

"Applications should describe the problem, pest, other non-effective pesticides available, proposed chemical, and economic losses and benefits," he suggested.

"The new law, effective Aug. 27, says companies can charge 6 percent interest 30 days after the account becomes due and payable," Hale said.

Simply charging too much interest (not necessarily collecting) on open accounts can result in court suits, monetary penalities and forfeiture of the debt, the lawyer warned.

As an example, Hale said, a 10 percent charge for one month on a $25,000 acount would total $208.25. The allowable interest charge for that amount is $125, netting an overcharge of $83.25. Penalties for the overcharge, he said, would be a $2,000 fine plus payment of the debtor's attorney fees and court costs.

Terry Stark, agricultural assistant to U. S. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., spoke about federal legislation bearing on agricultural chemicals. Jim Mills of the National Agricultural Chemicals Association of Washington, D. C., and Harold Hardcastle of Vernon, president of the National Aerial Applicators Association also addressed the group.

NASA Engineer To Speak At Dinner

Walter Scott, an aerospace engineer at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Houston, will be speaker for the Friday meeting of the Lubbock Chapter of the Air Force Association.

The quarterly dinner session begins at 6:30 p.m. in the Officers Club at Reese Air Force Base.

NASA Space Shuttle will be Scott's primary topic, but he also will touch on other NASA projects, including Voyager I and Voyager II space probes.

His presentation will be enhanced by slides of the space shuttle, solar flares and the planets of Jupiter, Mars and Venus. A four-minute motion picture will depict Voyager I's flyby of Jupiter in May 1979.

A 45-minute presentation will be followed by a question and answer period.

The Memphis, Tenn., native holds science degrees from both New Mexico State University and the University of Texas at El Paso.

Scott's background includes work with the Rocket Sled program at Holloman AFB, N.M., and the Apollo series of manned space flights before he began duty with the space shuttle.

The Army veteran began his Houston assignment in 1966.

Evening activities at the informal Reese function begin with a 6:30 p.m. social hour, dinner at 7:15 p.m. and Scott's presentation at 8 p.m.

The Air Force Association is a national organization of men and women who believe in a strong national defense and support the Air Force and its programs.

Association events are open to the public. Advance reservations may be made with Maj. Terry Obermiller at 885-3354 or 885-3724.

$3,500 Pay Hike Awarded Smith In Salary Dispute

Assessor-Collector Frank Stuart, District Clerk Vern Boyd and Sheriff C. H. Blanchard.

Dr. Porres questioned what she said is an unsystematic method of paying Lubbock County justices of the peace, saying, "Fundamentally, I think that's wrong."

Brazell and Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton came to the front of the room to say that justice of the peace salaries traditionally have been set on the basis of workload and job performance.

Brazell said county employes are on a standardized salary schedule but that such a system has not been workable for elected officials and especially not for justices of the peace, who have widely varying workloads.

Lubbock County currently has seven justices of the peace. Their salaries as listed in the 1980 budget, which has yet to be adopted, range from the $18,700 Smith was awarded Wednesday to $4,600 for a part-time office in Idalou.

"I think the commissioners court has put the best yardstick we can on these various offices," Brazell said.

Guess said he had done a study of the cost of living versus increases in county salaries and said that only the salaries of the county judge, the county commissioners and the courts-at-law judges "have kept up with inflation" over the past decade.

Speaking of the commissioners and their raises, Smith said, "I think they're worth $22,000. That's where we disagree. They don't think I am."

A first motion by Dr. Porres and seconded by Mrs. Boyd to raise Smith to $18,696 next year was approved 8 to 1 when Mrs. Randle said she thought the raise should be larger.

Smith told her that that much would be satisfactory to him, and, after more discussion, Montford moved for a 1980 salary of $18,700, Mrs. Randle seconded it, and it was approved unanimously.

The committee discussed making a recommendation on standardizing justice of the peace salaries in Lubbock County, but was advised by Judge Shaw that it could act only on the specific grievance filed by Smith.

UW Campaign To Meet Friday

Campaign coordinators, the people who represent direct contact to the contributor, meet Friday at Memorial Civic Center for a noon launching of activity in the United Way's employee division.

Campaign coordinators are representatives selected by management to head the campaign for their employee groups. About 200 are expected to gather to hear Horton Shipley of Waco discuss campaign potentials.

The employee division has a goal of $51,000 as its part of the overall $1.8 million goal for operation of 34 agencies in 1980.

Hadley Phillips, chairman, and Joe Pollock, vice chairman, oversee 14 captains who have selected six members for each team. The division members have made contact with 400 firms to set up the in-company campaigns that will follow in September and October.

Campaign information, supplies and promotional material will be provided for the coordinators at the division kick-off.

Progress reports are to be made at the campaign report meetings beginning Oct. 8 at the civic center.

Alcoholism Council Gets Funds From United Way

was an alcoholic while he was in a blackout. He did and she confronted him with the admission the next morning. But the strategy did not hold up and the drinking continued.

Jim now admits that he always had a question in his mind as to whether he had a drinking problem, but knowing and doing something about it were two different things to him. Finally, his brother persuaded him to go to Alcoholics Anonymous for help. Coincidentally, Mary gave up her lone battle and decided at the same time to seek help from Al-Anon.

Jim said he doesn't know why he drank, a habit he developed when he began at age 16, but it really doesn't matter now. "Yesterday is past. It doesn't make a bit of difference why you drink. It's already happened and you have to go on from there," he said.

Carlisle, who is a recovering alcoholic of 1½ years, said that most of his job is to act as a referral and information service for alcoholics, their friends and families who may seek his help.

Carlisle defined the council as "a group of interested citizens who are concerned about the incidence of alcoholism in the community." He said the 25-member board is comprised of persons from all walks of life, including doctors, ministers, lawyers and businessmen.

He said the purpose of the council is "to prevent, through education, the incidence of alcoholism and to alleviate the destructiveness of the disease." Also, he said, the council serves as a central referral service for alcoholic information and treatment services.

From April, 1978, to March, 1979, the office has made 1,473 contacts, made 3,184 group contacts for educational purposes and made 247 referrals. A total of 7,170 pieces of literature was distributed.

bock dignitaries and Ronald McDonald also will appear in the procession.

The best three entries in non-profit, commercial, military and band categories, will receive trophies at 11:45 a.m. in the Exhibit Hall. Other entrants will be given a ribbon.

Musical entertainment will begin at 1 p.m. with the Lubbock Folklorica Ballet. At 5 p.m., performances in classical guitar, aerobic dance and disco will get under way.

Joining the musical line-up at 7 p.m. will be singer Mary De La Cruz, the Guadalupe Dancers, the Matachines doing religious Indian rituals and Almeta Speaks.

Singer-piano player Almeta Speaks has won three Emmy Awards for her PBS program broadcast from California.

Cipranio Aguilar will take over entertainment in the Exhibit Hall at 9 p.m.

Jimmy Edwards, a San Antonio entertainer, will headline a dance from 7 to 10 p.m. in the Banquet Hall. Cost is $5.

The Folklorica Dancers, Guadalupe Dancers and Matachines will begin Sunday's activities at 2 p.m.

Cipriano Aguilar will play for the dance set for 8 p.m. in the Exhibit Hall.

The Tequila Band will be performing 3 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the Banquet Hall. Tickets are $2.

About 75 cultural game and food booths will be set up in the Civic Center from noon to midnight Friday and Saturday, and from 2 p.m. to midnight on Sunday.

Most activities held in the Exhibit Hall are free, said Raul Sanchez, treasurer of the Fiesta Committee, but fees are being charged for events in the Banquet Hall.

THE SOUTHLAND CORPORATION

Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

Incredible opportunities are no longer a secret.....

7-ELEVEN FOOD STORES, a division of The Southland Corporation, is offering an unequalled program for prospective Management Trainees.

Our training involves actual in-store job experience for approximately 90 days...and you will earn an attractive BEGINNING salary of $14,200 while you are learning.

The position requires a business related degree and preferably two years management experience.

Advancement potential is excellent to move into a supervisory position where you would then participate in our bonus program, receive a car allowance and be reimbursed for your expenses.

As a member of THE SOUTHLAND CORPORATION's family your benefits are outstanding; profit sharing, credit union, paid health and life and much, much more.

Noble Horse Making Comeback

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

RIDGEFIELD, CONN. (AP) — As a hedge against inflation, a rediscovered means of transportation and the plat de jour at some classy restaurants, the horse is making a comeback.

The cry of "Get a horse," without the mincing sarcasm that ushered in the Age of Pollution, may soon be heard again in the land.

Mulligan's Stew

While investors in the future of the solid-footed perissodactyl quadruped were writing six-figure checks for promising colts at the recent Saratoga yearling sales, a horse-drawn tourist bus reappeared on the streets of London and a restaurant in Marseilles began serving hors d'oeuvres that included pate de cheval made from the hind quarters of a constant loser at Longchamps.

And why not? Equus caballus, to give the steed his formal name, has always been one of creation's nobler creatures.

Scientists believe that the horse, or an early variant of it about the size of a fox, was galloping across North America 50 million years before the Iroquois launched that canoe on the infield lake at Saratoga or the Seminoles set up their wigwams along the backstretch at Hialeah.

In the art of classical Greece, the horse placed second behind only the gods. The Assyrians made it a god.

Bucephalus, the first of history's famous war horses, permitted only Alexander the Great to ride him. The mount carried the Old World conqueror all the way to India, the outer reaches of the empire, in reward for which the city of Bucephala was founded in its honor in 326 B.C.

The Roman Emperor Caligula thought so highly of his horse Incitatus, he provided a stall made of marble and a manger of carved ivory.

The favored beast drank wine from a golden bucket, and the emperor dispatched his soldiers to tell the neighbors to shut up lest they disturb his repose.

Incitatus was made a priest and vice consul by the emperor and later appointed to the Senate. It was believed to be the first time an entire horse ever sat in the Roman Senate, but the appointment seems to have angered the populace.

According to the gossipy historian Suetonius, who bad-mouthed Caligula as "a fidgety neurotic who collected sea shells," the emperor's "frantic and reckless behavior caused murderous thoughts in certain minds," a not uncommon mass reaction these days when a favored horse disappoints his public at Belmont or Hollywood Park.

Horses have held their own in history long before Tom Mix insured Tony for two million pre-inflation dollars.

Paul Revere rode Dobbin while shouting, "The British are coming,", although Toots Shor insisted "the bum took him wide at Lexington." Copenhagen, with the Duke of Wellington up, met a white stallion named Morengo, ridden by Napoleon, on the field of Waterloo in 1815. The British silks carried the day.

Comanche, an ironically named cavalry horse, was the only survivor of the dust-up at the Little Big Horn. Vic, Gen. George Armstrong Custer's mount, was killed in the battle.

A spirited gray gelding named Traveller carried Gen Robert E. Lee throughout the Civil War, but the winner's circle was graced by Cincinnati, an enormous black charger who had to put up with both the smoke of battle and Ulysses S. Grant's cigars.

Reckless, a tiny Korean racing mare, was the first female sergeant and to date the only four-legged one in the U.S. Marine Corps. She won her stripes and a medal for bravery lugging ammunition for the Leathernecks in the Korean War.

While imparting some horse sense to readers who may not know a hackamore from a fetlock and boring others who may dismiss these equine gleanings as horse feathers or worse, it is well to dwell for a moment on ponies who made their names in less belligerent pasttimes.

Out there in Glitter Gulch beyond the bright lights of Tinsel Town, Gene Autry rode to fame and fortune aboard Champion. Roy Rogers plucked the golden ring by training Trigger not to shy at the sound of gunfire or yodeling. Dale Evans followed along on Buttermilk.

But long before they kicked up gold dust in Monument Valley, a famous talking horse named Clever Hans was relieving turn of the century yokels of their pocket money and pay checks by solving arithmetic problems with unfailingly precise hoofbeats.

And, speaking of the pay-as-you-go cavalry, Gallant Fox, Twenty Grand, Citation, Seabiscuit, Whirlaway, Assault, Stymie and Kelso are household words even in houses where betting is deemed the devil's tool. But there is room, too, in the hippic-pantheon for Upset and Onion.

Upset justified his name by upsetting the great Man o' War for his only defeat in 21 races. Onion pulled off a similar shocker by showing his tail to triple crown winner Secretariat.

Both made horse history at Saratoga, N.Y., where Gentleman Johnny Burgoyne finished out of the money in the colonial stakes to an upstart named Benedict Arnold. Some trivia expert can probably tell you the names of their respective horses. And while they're at it, can they supply the name of the drayhorse that pulled Gabby Hayes's Chuck wagon?

Quiz Tests Knowledge Of Congress

DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is back from its summer vacation and since the atmosphere is always a little like the first week of school, it seems a good time for a quiz.

Congressional buffs should have little trouble identifying who said the following and under what circumstances. The answers are given at the end.

1. "Up in the Tigris-Euphrates Valley, where you reach the Turkish border, there are a group of people who are despised by their Islamic neighbors because they are thought to be devil worshipers. That is not fair to them and it is not just.

"They are not devil worshipers; they are a residuum of the old dualism or Middle East Manichaeism; they believe there are two principles, one good and one evil. They spend their time looking after the evil one. Bernard Lewis, the eminent scholar, has called this a form of 'theologicl non-alignment.'"

2. "In the event that the communists in China invade the communists in Vietnam because the communists in Vietnam invaded the communists in Cambodia, which communists are the communists and shuld be th communists that we, the Democrats and Republicans, feel are the bad communists versus the good communists?"

3. "This is simply a prohibition against any aid to the Republic of Panama, excepting aid for food programsor medical assistance."

4. "I will do whatever the speaker says. I always do."

"A month off does everyone good."

5. "There is plenty of time to cut the chicken's head off, when the water is boiling."

6. "I am confident that this body will not permit the 'slot undoing' of human rights in any area of the world. In this light, I am also confident that the Senate will recognize the need for ratifying the Genocide Convention."

Here are the answers:

No. 1 was easiest. Only Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., could spin out such bits of esoterica during a Senate debate, in this case, on the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba and the conference in that country of non-aligned nations.

No. 2 was Rep. John Burton, D-Calif., opposing a move to kill additional aid for Indochinese refugees.

Followers of the long debates on the Panama Canal might recognize No. 3 as Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., a determined opponent of the Panama Canal treaties. The House had no vote on the treaties, but Bauman and other opponents in that chamber have fought persistent rear-guard actions.

No. 4 was Bauman again, this time in an exchange with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. Bauman delights in using the House rules to upset the timetables of the Democratic majority.

No. 5 is the sort of mountain-imagery for which Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., is known. In this case, Byrd was urging senators not to support moves to halt debate on the SALT II Treaty until Soviet troops are removed from Cuba.

No. 6 is another easy one. Every day the Senate has been in session for the past 12 years, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., has spoken in favor of approval of the Genocide treaty.

YAZ CONNECTS — Boston captain Carl Yaztrzemski follows through and strides into baseball history with his 3,000th major league hit Wednesday night against New York. Yaz now leads all active major leaguers in games played, runs batted in, total bases and extra-base hits. (AP Lazerphoto)

Yaz Reaches 3,000-Hit Plateau

After 19 years and three frustrating days, Carl Yastrzemski is the first American League player in history to achieve 3,000 hits and 400 homers.

Captain Carl, a 40-year-old wonder, reached the coveted goal of 3,000 hits Wednesday night, grounding a single under second baseman Willie Randolph's outstretched glove into right in the eighth inning of Boston's 9-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

Bedlam broke loose as the Red Sox mobbed their acknowledged leader at first base and a packed crowd of 34,337 stood, roared and clapped hands.

Somehow New York slugger Reggie Jackson made his way through the mob to present Yastrzemski the ball and offer congratulations. Manager Billy Martin led an exodus from the Yankees' dugout to join in the celebration.

Finally, formal ceremonies were held with league secretary Bob Holbrook presenting Yaz a special scroll.

"I know one thing — the last hit was the hardest of the 3,000," Yaz told the crowd jokingly. "It took me so long because I really enjoyed the standing ovations you've given me the last three days."

He went on to thank his teammates, manager Don Zimmer, the Boston coaches (particularly hard-working Walt Hriniak), club president Mrs. Thomas A. Yawkey, widow of the longtime owner, and his family.

"I also wish two people who were my biggest boosters were here — my mother and Mr. Yawkey," he said. "They deserve to be here."

Yastrzemski's mother died after a long battle with cancer nearly three years ago. Yawkey died of leukemia in 1976.

Following the 15-minute festivities, Yastrzemski retired from the game for a pinch-runner. That's the only "retirement" plan in his future.

"I plan to play the rest of the season and come back next year," he said at a post-game news conference before heading upstairs, still in uniform, to meet with his family, Mrs. Yawkey and others.

Yastrzemski pulled a surprise, something he has been noted for during his career. He left Hriniak virtually speechless by presenting the bullpen coach and batting practice pitcher an engraved gold watch.

With his 3,000th hit, Yastrzemski became only the fourth player in major league history to reach that goal while hitting 400 homers, joining Stan Musial, Willie Mays and Hank Aaron, who accomplished the feat in the National League.

CHS, Panthers Collide

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Coronado coach Jack Quarles and Dunbar's Van Jefferson had the chance to get together for a little chow and chit-chat Wednesday afternoon.

The site was the 50-Yard Line restaurant where Lubbock's high school coaches gathered for their weekly press conference. The two men will meet again tonight, but the encounter won't be quite as friendly.

Quarles and Jefferson will stand on opposite sides of Lowrey Field as Dunbar and Coronado tangle tonight at 7:30 in the first intracity match of the young season. The action should be fast and furious as both schools seek their first win of the '79 campaign.

And the competition was just as tough Wednesday, as each coach tried to outpraise the other.

"Coronado has some of the biggest kids we'll play all year," said Jefferson. "And we know that they are a better team than was indicated by their score last week (Coronado lost 20-6 to Wichita Falls)."

"Our scouts told us that Dunbar should have won that game by three touchdowns," said Quarles of Dunbar's 7-0 loss to St. Marks of Dallas. "His (Jefferson's) two big people in the middle sort of worry me — and it's hard for us to prepare for them.

"Our substitues weigh about 160," said Quarles , "and I have to tell our linemen to pretend that they're about 250. It's hard to do."

The two big men that Quarles was referring to are Dunbar tackles James Moreno (255-pound sophomore) and Mark Sanders (245-pound senior).

Sanders was named the defensive linemen of the week by the Dunbar staff for his work during the St. Marks game. The big senior was in on seven tackles and graded out at 64 per cent by the coaches.

And both coaches said they were happy with the progress of their squads despite their opening losses.

"I think we learned something," said Jefferson. "We were down inside the 10-yard line three times and couldn't score. But we did prove that our offense can move the ball."

Twice the Panthers were driven back by 15-yard penalties on the goalline; they lost the ball on a fumble the other time.

"I feel good about the team," said Quarles. "After the game I saw a tear or two shed in the locker room. The kids don't want to lose again."

Although the coaches shared similar outlooks about the tonight's contest, they were preparing their teams differently.

Jefferson held only a light workout in shorts for his Panthers Wednesday, while Quarles had his Mustangs working in pads until 6 p.m.

"We're as ready as we're going to be," said Jefferson.

"We need all the work we can get," countered Quarles. "But if you're quitting early," he told Jefferson, "you're welcome to come over to our place and watch us."

Coronado won last year's contest 17-12.

A doubleheader is scheduled for Lowrey Field on Friday. First Monterey will battle Wichita Falls Rider at 4 p.m. and then Lubbock High will host Estacado at 8 p.m.

Wright Remembers Tech

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

When Brad Wright thinks of Texas Tech he gets stars in his eyes. And you really can't blame him.

Last year as a sophomore, the 6-2, 200-pound quarterback from Midland had a field day picking apart the Red Raider defense when the University of New Mexico Lobos and Tech met in Albuquerque.

Wright smashed three school passing records with his outstanding performance. Those single game marks were 452 yards passing, 440 yards total offense and 28 pass completions.

Wright also had three passes go for touchdowns that evening as the Lobos fell to the Raiders 36-23.

The Lobos are off to their best start in 15 years this season following wins over Louisiana Tech and Oregon State, and Wright is the prime factor. He accounted for four touchdowns against Oregon State last week, two running and two passing.

Wright is currently ranked 11th in the nation in passing efficiency with 139 points. He is the No. 1 quarterback in the country among signal callers who have played in more than one contest. His pinpoint passing has enabled New Mexico to score 34 and 35 points, respectively, in its first two outings.

There is little doubt Wright is New

. . . Of Jinxes And Early Jumps

WHEN LUBBOCK CHRISTIAN College starts scheduling football games for next season, sitting right beside coach Jerry Don Sanders will be the Spanish teacher. Sanders can use all the help he can muster.

After more than six months, LCC officials learned Wednesday morning for sure the name of the team the Chaparrals will be playing Saturday. It's Universidad Regio Montana, from Monterrey, Mexico. And Ma and Senora Bell probably made the most money off the contest.

Between language and communication barriers, LCC has had difficulty nailing down the opponent. Originally, the schedule called for a game against the University of Saltillo, Mexico. And, the past few weeks, LCC officials were not sure the game would be played.

But, this week, working through the Mexican Consulate here, they were able to obtain an opponent, and they praised the help of Luis Castresana at the Consulate office here for his efforts.

The first schedule prepared by LCC had the Chaparrals playing a game at Monterrey the latter part of November. But, said Sanders, "Our last game before then was Oct. 27 against Tarleton, so we didn't see much need of working out an entire month just for one game. It would have been difficult to keep our players' attentions."

So, that one was canceled. And, now the international schedule is down to one game — which is just one of the consequences of starting anew. Not only have

Wright Passes Riddle Tech In '78 Contest

Mexico's top offensive weapon and there is little doubt he will come out throwing when the Lobos and Red Raiders lock horns Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Jones Stadium.

But UNM is an improved football team in many areas. The Lobo defense has given up only 16 points in two games, and there are several individual players on that unit who are quickly grabbing national attention.

The Tech-UNM contest has always been a barnburner. Tech head coach Rex Dockery has already expressed his respect for Bill Mondt's Lobos and has said on several occasions he expects a close, physical game.

Mondt expects much of the same.

"I can't deny the win over Oregon State was one of the best of my career, but after watching the films, I know Tech is a much better team," Mondt remarked. "This is probably the best team we play every year, and things look no different this time.

"This will by far be our toughest test."

Wright's favorite receiver so far this season has been sophomore fullback Jamie Fox. Fox (5-11, 203) has caught six passes for 32 yards. He has also carried the football 22 times for 99 yards.

When Wright needs a score he has gone to either senior tight end Chris Combs or sophomore flanker William Owens. Combs (6-3, 242) has two of Wright's three scoring passes. Owens (5-10, 170) has four receptions for 61 yards and one score.

Joining Fox and Wright in the New Mexico backfield will be a pair of talented tailbacks. Junior Jimmy Sayers (5-10, 166), has replaced high school sensation Mike Carter in the starting lineup. Sayers has carried 23 times for 113 yards.

Carter, a 5-11, 180-pound sophomore, is not starting, but he is seeing a great deal of action. He has 81 yards and a touchdown on 16 carries. His 9.3 speed in the 100 make him a constant breakaway threat.

There is good size and a great deal of improvement visible on the UNM offensive line. The Lobos began to jell at the end of last season and have moved people around so far this year.

The biggest lineman for Mondt is junior tackle Frank Giddens, a 6-7, 300-pounder. He is the main reason the Lobos rushed for an average of 277 yards per game in 1978.

Joining Giddens up front will be sophomore center Eddie Gill (6-2, 250), junior guards Dennis Spencer (6-3, 235) and Don Wilson (6-3, 245) and senior tackle Pat Warfield (6-3, 240).

"So far, it has been our defense which has looked the best for us, although we've scored 34 and 35 points in our first two games," added Mondt. "It was the defense that set us up for our points against Louisiana Tech. They were responsible for two touchdowns."

Leading that improved defense is senior linebacker Mike Forrest, a 6-3, 230-pounder from Carlsbad. Forrest led the Lobos in tackles last season with 162. He was also a first-team all-Western Athletic Conference selection.

Another outstanding defender for UNM is senior end Charlie Baker, who has been compared to former Lobo all-America Robin Cole. Baker (6-2, 218) is a strong pass rusher. He came up with 12 sacks in 1978.

The other defensive end position is manned by senior Coleman Berry (6-1, 244). Seniors S.G. Ray (6-2, 242) and Mike Dickson (6-5, 227) will start at the tackle spots.

The defensive secondary consists of junior cornerbacks Sharay Fields (5-8, 172) and Steve Remeyer (5-11, 180) and safeties Doug Smith, a 5-11, 170-pound junior, and Roark Shirley, a 6-1, 200-pound senior. Smith returned an interception for a touchdown last week and Fields is a dangerous kickoff and punt return man.

TOO LONG — Too Tall Jones, who stands 6-9, shows his reach is too long for TV personality David Hartman, who is "only" 6-5. Jones, the former Dallas Cowboys defensive end who is preparing for his first professional heavyweight bout at Las Cruces, N.M., on Nov. 3 — against a Mexican opponent to be named later — was appearing on the ABC-TV show "Good Morning America" when he matched arm lengths with Hartman. AMERICAN LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Bosox Drop Yankees As Yaz Takes Bow

By The Associated Press

The first 3,000 hits are the hardest, says Carl Yastrzemski. And you know what? He isn't joking.

In what must have seemed like an eternity to the Boston Red Sox veteran, Yastrzemski was shut out 12 straight times in search of his 3,000th career hit.

Then he finally made contact.

"I know on thing — the last hit was the toughest of all the 3,000," said Yastrzemski after getting his long sought-after hit in Wednesday night's 9-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

Yastzremski's historic hit was a single off Yankee reliever Jim Beattie in the eighth inning — in his last time at bat — after he walked, flied out and grounded out twice. Before his hard ground ball skipped into right field in Fenway Park past the glove of Yankee second baseman Willie Randolph, Yastzremski had been hitless in 10 official at-bats and walked twice.

His last hit was a single in his final appearance in Sunday's 16-4 loss to Baltimore.

Boston right-hander Chuck Rainey, 6-5, allowed a Yankee run in the second and one in the eighth and just six hits altogether. Rainey's teammates, meanwhile, pounded Catfish Hunter, 2-9, for seven runs on nine hits before Hunter left in the fifth inning.

Jim Rice belted his 37th homer in the first inning, a two-run shot, to get the Red Sox off to a fast start. Boston scored three runs in the fourth and three in the fifth on eight hits, including RBI singles by Tom Poquette, Mike O'Berry and Rick Burleson.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 2

Rick Cerone's two-run single in the sixth inning and Rick Rosetti's solo homer in the eighth carried Toronto over Baltimore. It was the second victory over Baltimore in as many nights for the Blue Jays, who had dropped their 15 previous meetings with the Orioles dating back to Aug. 8, 1978.

"Maybe we're a little anxious at the plate," said Baltimore manager Earl Weaver, trying to explain a three-game losing streak. "But when you get into a slump, that can happen,"

White Sox 11, Angels 5

Jim Morrison drove in three runs with a single and sacrifice fly and Mike Colbern hit a two-run triple to lead Chicago over California. The loss was the second in a row for the Angels, whose lead in the American League West dropped to three games over Kansas City.

Royals 4, Twins 0

Dennis Leonard pitched a three-hitter and Amos Otis drove in two runs to spark Kansas City over Minnesota. Leonard, 12-10, tossing his fourth shutout of the season and his second against the Twins in 10 days, struck out three and walked two.

Brewers 7, A's 0

Cecil Cooper and Ben Oglivie hit homers and Mike Caldwell pitched a two-hitter as Milwaukee defeated Oakland. Caldwell, 15-6, set down 17 straight Oakland hitters after giving up a leadoff single to Mitchell Page in the second.

Rangers 13, Mariners 3

Willie Montanez drove in five runs with a grand slam homer and a single and Buddy Bell hit a double and two singles as Texas routed Seattle. Montanez' blast capped a five-run fourth inning and the Rangers came back to send 12 men to the plate for eight hits and six more runs in the sixth.

Doc Medich, 9-6, won his fourth straight game. He scattered nine hits, striking out two and walking one before Jim Kern came in to pitch the ninth.

Tigers 4, Indians 1

Milt Wilcox and Aurelio Lopez combined on a four-hitter and Jerry Morales and Lance Parrish hit RBI doubles as Detroit defeated Cleveland. Wilcox didn't allow a hit until Dave Rosello's two-out single in the fifth and gave up a homer to Cleveland's Ron Hassey with two out in the seventh before needing Lopez' relief help.

NATIONAL LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Expos Hold Top Spot In NL East Struggle

By The Associated Press

The Montreal Expos are holding onto first place in the National League East. . .one-half game behind the Pittsburgh Pirates.

No, you didn't read that wrong. Yes, it's true.

The Pirates have won three more games than the Expos while Montreal has lost two less games than Pittsburgh. But the Expos have a .6043 winning percentage while the Pirates are chugging along at a .6041 clip.

"Fractions of percentage points don't matter to me. All that matters is that we keep winning," Tanner said after Pittsburgh beat the St. Louis Cardinals 2-0 behind the six-hit pitching of John Candelaria and reliever Kent Tekulve Wednesday night.

National League Box Scores, Page 6, Sec. D)

The Expos also won, 6-3 over the Chicago Cubs. It was Montreal's 16th victory in its last 17 games.

"I'd have to say it's really discouraging for Montreal to play the way they're playing and they can't catch up," said Tanner, ignoring the mathematical fact that the Expos hold a slight edge. "It's tough when you keep winning and you can't catch the team in front of you. It makes it hard. There's a lot of pressure on them."

Despite their hot streak, the Expos have not been able to gain much ground on the Pirates, who have won 14 of their last 17 contests.

"Montreal can't possibly play any better than they have played, and they've only picked up a game and a half," Tekulve said. "You win 16 out of 17 and only pick up a game and a half That's got to be a little frustrating."

Ed Ott and Phil Garner slammed run-scoring singles to pace Pittsburgh over the Cardinals.

"Montreal is putting the pressure on us, but the cream is rising to the top. We're separating the men from the boys," said Ott.

Expos 6, Cubs 3

Veteran Tony Perez drove in two runs with a double to ignite a three-run eighth-inning rally and carry Montreal to its victory over Chicago.

Dave Kingman, Larry Biittner and Steve Ontiveros stroked run-scoring singles in the first inning to provide the Cubs with a 3-0 lead. But the Expos bounced back with a run in the third on Larry Parrish's 25th homer of the season and third in as many games. Montreal tied the contest with two runs in the seventh.

Reds 7, Astros 4

Dave Collins' perfect 3-for-3 night at the plate paced Cincinnati to its victory over Houston, giving the Reds a 1½-game lead in the National League West.

Frank Pastore, 4-6, got the victory in relief as the Reds swept the two-game series with Houston. Joe Niekro, 18-10, was the loser, failing for the fourth straight time in his attempt to pick up his 19th win of the season.

Giants 4, Braves 3

Left-hander Vida Blue, whose bunt single helped ignite a two-run third inning, won his 12th game as San Francisco edged Atlanta. Mike Ivie slammed his 24th home run of the season, a solo shot, for the Giants in the fifth inning.

Dodgers 5, Padres 2

Bill Russell and Steve Garvey collected three hits each to back the eight-hit pitching of Charlie Hough and Bobby Castillo as Los Angeles stopped San Diego.

Phillies 4, Mets 0

Randy Lerch tripled in two runs and hurled his first shutout of the season as Philadelphia defeated New York. Lerch, 9-12, scattered seven hits and New York got more than one hit in only the first inning.

Graham Heads Buick Field

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — If rolling and wooded Warwick Hills Country Club course plays tough in today's opening round of the Buick Open, the pros will have Jim Colbert to blame.

"The only bad thing is that they'll think this course is easy and put the pins way back in tough positions," Colbert said about his record-shattering 10-under par 62 in Wednesday's practice round.

"I've always thought this was a helluva course so this is a thrill for me," Colbert said. He clipped three strokes off the course record shot by Dr. Cary Middlecoff in 1959 and equalled by Don Fairfield in 1965 and Homero Blancas and R.H. Sikes in 1969.

His birdies in the 32-30 round on the comparatively short, 7,001-yard layout came in spurts — four straight on the front side, five in a row on the back.

David Graham, who won the PGA championship last month 50 miles south of here in Birmingham, is the biggest "name" golfer in the field of the $150,000 event.

Graham, an Australian, is available for the Buick because most of the best American and British golfers are in White Sulphur Springs, Va. this week competing in the Ryder Cup matches.

"Golf has been good to me and I really appreciate that," Graham said, "and now I have a chance to pay it back."

Graham is hoping his return to Michigan also will restore his luck. It was at Oakland Hills Country Club that Graham came away with his first major title in a dramatic 3-hole playoff with Ben Crenshaw.

Tom Weiskopf, who always has played well here, also is entered as is ageless Sammy Snead.

All games have been moved out of the Lena Stephens Field, on campus, three — including this Saturday's Mexican battle — going to Coronado High and another to Lowrey Field. Maybe this is only turn-about's-fair-play, since CHS uses LCC's baseball field for home games.

WHEN TIME AND space run short. . . Nothing like getting an early start. The Fiesta Bowl is sending out representatives to two football games this weekend, Michigan-Notre Dame and Arizona-California. But, the Fiesta is not the only bowl getting out of the gate early. Former Tech AD and coach JT King is traveling about the country scouting possible teams for the Cotton Bowl. His work at the Alabama-Georgia Tech game kept him away from the Raider-USC battle. . . Mike Williams, the former fullback at New Mexico who battled Tech defenders for four years and wound up as the WAC's alltime rusher? He's now playing for the KC Chiefs — but on the specialty teams. . .

You gotta have a gimmick, these days. To help hype this weekend's TCU-SMU contest at Fort Worth, four paratroopers will bail out and land — try to, that is — on the 50-yard line. . . Bryan Donzis, the guy who designed that flak jacket for the Oilers' Dan Pastorini last winter, has come up with a special shoulder pad to help Curtis Dickey protect a bruised shoulder. . .

MANAGERS OF THE year in the majors? Depending on which team comes out higher in the standings, the National League could look to the Astros' Bill Virdon or the Expos' Dick Williams. In the American, it'll be difficult to overlook Earl Weaver, who wins it just about every second or third year. . . And, did you get the continued jinx talk about Sports Illustrated cover boys? Last week, it was USC's Charles White and OU's Billy Sims, fighting over the Heisman Trophy on the cover of the sports magazine; just a few hours later, White was hurt in the Tech contest. . .

LCC is in the process of installing an artificial surface on its indoor track. It'll make the school's winter indoor meet more attractive and cut down on the prospect of injuries.

FAREWELL — Ann Meyers, the NCAA women's all-America forward, waves to another player after Wednesday's final workout of the Indiana Pacers'rookie-free agent camp at Indianapolis. Miss Meyers failed in her bid to make the team and become the first woman to play in the NBA. In front of Miss Meyers is Frankie Sanders, who was not dropped. (AP Laserphoto)

Pacers Drop Woman Prospect

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ann Meyers convinced Indiana Pacer coach Bobby Leonard she knew the fundamentals of basketball well enough to play in the National Basketball Association. But, Leonard said her size just wasn't right.

"If she was six inches bigger and 40 pounds heavier, it would have been a different story," Leonard said Wednesday after he told the 5-foot-6, 140-pound Miss Meyers that she had failed in her bid to become the first woman to play in the NBA.

"I personally feel Ann did a great job from the fundamental standpoint of knowing the game of basketball," Leonard said. "I wish some guys out there tonight were as fundamentally sound as her."

Miss Meyers, an all-America women's player at UCLA and a U.S. Olympic star in Montreal who will remain with the club in some capacity, took the news calmly. "I'm happy with myself; I did the best I could. The players were super to me. Slick (Leonard) and his assistants showed me a lot of things that I did wrong."

Sam Nassi, the club's owner who decided to give Miss Meyers her opportunity, said no definite decision had been reached concerning a future role with the team.

"She has already had an offer from one television station and an offer from a radio station to do color commentary for 82 games," he said. "We can definitely use her in the administrative end of the organization."

Nassi said he had no second thoughts about Miss Meyers' trial.

"She definitely wasn't the worst player on the court," he said. "I thrilled I did it. I brought the best possible woman player here."

The owner said he had no idea if he or some other team might give another woman a trial in the future. "but, I do know that for her to be successful, she'll have to be faster than Ann and be built bigger."

Leonard also gave the bad news to James Lee, the 6-6 former Kentucky University star who had been cut by Seattle last season. Neil Traub, a 6-10 center who had played in Europe after performing for San Diego State, was also told to pack.

Among those invited to join James Edwards, Mickey Johnson, Mike Bantom, Johnny Davis, Billy Knight and Alex English in the regular camp were 6-3 guard John Kuester, a veteran of two seasons in the NBA who signed with the Pacers as a free agent; former Texas star Jim Krivacs, a 6-1 rookie guard; and former Southern University star Frankie Sanders, a 6-6 swingman who played in the NBA last season.

U.S. Cagers Win World Title

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Italy's Pietro Mennea beat a world record and America's frustrated track and field athletes beat themselves out of an almost-sure gold medal on today's wind-up of the 10th World University Games.

"Medals are hard to come by," said a disappointed James Segrest, the American track and field coach from Odessa College, whose charges have won only two gold medals in 26 events.

And it won't be any easier on today's closing program. The United States' heavily favored 400-meter relay team didn't even qualify for the final. The baton was dropped on an exchange and the Americans finished last in their four-team qualifying heat.

But the United States men's basketball team had an easy time of it — a surprisingly easy time — in a front-running, 88-70 victory over Yugoslavia in the gold medal game late Wednesday night.

The Yugoslavs had beaten the U.S. 79-73 earlier in the Games, but they were no match for the defending champions this time. The Americans, led by Andrew Toney's 20 points, built a 12-point halftime lead and weren't challenged after that.

"The difference is that we were mentally tougher," U.S. Coach Ken Anderson said. "The other game, we let down."

The victory completed a basketball sweep for the United States, whose women team won the gold medal the night before.

The U.S. water polo team provided another gold with an 8-6 decision over Russia in the final game of their round-robin tournament. The Americans finished the last round with a 3-0 mark and the Soviets were second at 2-1.

The two victories helped set the American medals count at 19 gold and 49 total, well behind the overall defending champion Russians who have compiled a 32-72 count in the biennial, multiple-sport competition that drew college-age athletes from 95 nations. Romania is next at 12-28, followed by East Germany at 6-14.

Mennea, 27, set the only world record of the Games with a spectacular clocking of 19.72 in the 200-meter dash, wiping from the books the 11-year-old standard of 19.83 set by American Tommie Smith in the same Olympic Stadium.

"I always wanted to be the fastest," Mennea said, but added: "I kept looking at the results during the awards ceremony because I still couldn't believe it."

The other track and field winners were Marita Koch of East Germany, who ran the third fastest women's time in history in the 200, 21.91; Hermanus Schultieng of Holland, 48.44 in the men's intermediate 400-meter hurdles; Klaus Ploghaus, West Germany, 248 feet, 6 inches, in the hammer throw;

Lightfoot Named WTSU Track Coach

CANYON (UPI) — Former high school and college All-America hurdler Randy Lightfoot has been named head track coach and assistant cross-country coach at West Texas State University.

The 26-year-old former University of Texas and Wayland Baptist College star replaces Bob Kitchens, who resigned after 11 years to accept the head track coach job at Mississippi State University.

Lightfoot, who resigned as sports editor of the Pampa Daily News to accept the post, will assume his duties Tuesday, said WTSU athletic director Dr. Myron Dees.

"The univesity and the athletic department are very pleased and fortunate to have secured the talents of this fine young man," Dees said.

'Professor' Woody Capivates Throng

HOUSTON (AP) — It could have been the absent-minded professor lecturing his attentive students on American military history.

Reminding the audience of a Houston pilot who was a hero in the Battle of Midway in World War II, he asked "Now, who wants to tell me his name?"

Later, discussing the devastation of Germany following World War II, the speaker asked "In 1947, they were starving until we instituted what?"

This time, a louder chorus echoed, "The Marshall Plan."

It was an abrupt change in the usual format of the Houston Touchdown Club, a gathering of local businessmen who meet weekly to discuss football strategy instead of military strategy. But it was clear "Professor" Woody Hayes, former Ohio State football coach, had his audience enthralled.

Hayes, a well-informed student of American military history, entertained the audience with a blend of patriotic remembrances of past U.S. military victories and former Ohio State football victories.

And the same fire was in his eyes when he discussed either subject.

"We were outmanned 40-1 in that battle," Hayes said, referring to Midway. "Yet, that was the most heroic battles this country ever fought. I like the George Gays because they saved our country."

Hayes noted that Ohio State trailed Baylor at the half last season, his last as coach of the Buckeyes, and to inspire his team, he slammed his fist through a blackboard.

"That got them started," Hayes smiled. "I told them to get the blackboard out of there because the sports writers would make a big deal out of it. But the real thing that worried me was when I start putting my fist through a blackboard in a NON-conference game, you know we're in trouble."

Former Houston Oiler general manager John Breen preceded Hayes to the microphone and said "I brought Woody in here through the kitchen and even the cooks ducked."

TV Cameramen Try To Bypass Free Adversiting

By FRED ROTHENBERG
Associated Press Sports Writer

"Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health."

One television network also has determined that calling a certain horse race by its brand name could be dangerous to its health.

For the past five years, CBS had given the Marlboro Cup the young-girl-smoking-in-the-bathroom treatment. Instead of calling the race by its given name, CBS called it "The Cup" — except for announcer Jack Whitaker who slipped twice last year and blasphemed "Marlboro Cup".

The Federal Communications Commission, which regulates the broadcasting industry, took the Marlboro Man and all the other cigarette hawkers off the air in 1968. The FCC felt television shouldn't be the medium for launching another generation of smokers.

CBS feels the horse race with the cigarette name comes under the FCC's restrictions. NBC feels otherwise, and got its chance Saturday because the New York Racing Authority (NYRA) had moved up the date of the Marlboro Cup. That caused a conflict with CBS' U.S. Open tennis coverage and forced CBS to pass on its option to televise the race.

CBS got into trouble with the FCC in 1978 because of its deception over "Winner-Take-All" tennis matches, which were nothing of the sort. The players in those matches were promised guarantees.

CBS may have once considered changing its policy on the Marlboro Cup, but last September — after the run-in with the FCC — was certainly not the right time.

"CBS took an extraordinarily conservative position which was not founded, in our opinion, in law," said Alan B. Kaufman, NBC's director of Compliances and Practices. "There have been no reported cases in court or before the FCC which would prohibit the mention of a cigarette company in an established sports event.

"The Marlboro Cup has always been the Marlboro Cup."

Kaufman says NBC's general policy is to control gratuitous commercials. Even though it called the Marlboro Cup by its given name, NBC wanted to make certain that Phillip Morris, the cigarette company sponsoring the race, didn't get too much of a free ride. The FCC and NBC's paying customers wouldn't like that.

He told the producers to limit visual references to Marlboro Cup in the telecast. When NBC broke away from the race buildup, the visuals said coming up was "more thoroughbred racing" or "more racing from Belmont."

And at a meeting before the race, Kaufman asked the NYRA what other exposure possibilities could exist for Marlboro during the broadcast. The NYRA said a flag with the Marlboro logo — which the cameras wouldn't be able to see — and free plugs on the grooms' jackets and the horses' saddle cloths. But the NYRA said jackets and saddle cloths wouldn't be needed if the weather was cool.

Saturday was warm, and Kaufman was angry that the grooms wore red jackets with the Marlboro logo for the feature race after going in shirt sleeves for the seven previous races. The saddle cloths with their cigarette trademark were also very apparent for the big race.

"At that stage you can't tell the grooms to take off their jackets, you can't tell (trainer) Buddy Delp to pull off Spectacular Bid's blanket and you can't tell (executive producer) Don Ohlmeyer not to shoot the horses," Kaufman said. "Personally, I don't think the NYRA met its commitment to NBC."

In one area, NBC was also negligent, failing to meet its responsibility to the public. An NBC advertisement appeared in local New York newspapers and around the country Friday heralding the Marlboro Cup. The copy said Affirmed, Spectacular Bid and Coastal "are set to clash. . ."

Yet early in the week, trainer Laz Barerra had said Affirmed would not race and, in fact, the horse was not entered on Thursday. NBC contends that its conditional phrase "are set" covered any lineup changes and that Affirmed's non-entry on Thursday was too late to modify the ad.

"But we should have used a stronger conditional phrase (scheduled or expected)," said Kaufman. "We went with our softest phrase, when we should have used our strongest."

The New York Post and the New York Daily News say they could have accommodated an ad change as late as Thursday. Bob Bache, NBC Sports' director of talent and promotions, said that would mean the individual papers would make the changes themselves, and NBC has never stood for that.

Bache said killing the Friday ad was a possibility, "but then we would be performing a disservice to our other shows (in the ad) and the viewing public that wants to know what we have."

One solution would be for NBC to handle its ads the way CBS does, labeling the promos with the day they were written.

"We changed our on-air promos and hit the Barerra decision at the start of the show," said Kaufman. "Under no circumstances was our ad meant to mislead."

Ryder Cup Play Starts

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — For the past eight years, Philip McLaughlin, 39, has been the president of a White Sulphur Springs bank.

But for the next three days, McLaughlin plans to change jobs.

McLaughlin, who says he has been playing golf all his life, will be the caddie for Spanish star Severiano Ballesteros in the Ryder Cup international golf matches Friday through Sunday at The Greenbrier resort.

"I've really moved up in 12 years," said McLaughlin. "When I first started working at the bank, I was a teller. Now I've moved all the way up to caddie."

McLaughlin spent his summers as a youth working as a caddie. He said he got the idea to caddie during the Ryder Cup when Jim Searle, director of sports at The Greenbrier, spoke to a local Rotary Club meeting and asked for volunteers to work the tournament.

"I've always loved golf," McLaughlin said. "This is a once in a lifetime opportunity to be a part of it."

The biennial matches begin at 8 a.m. Friday with four foursome matches, in which two-member teams play each hole individually, with the better score for that hole counting as the team score.

Friday afternoon, play will revert to four-ball, in which two-man teams play alternate strokes on each hole.

Saturday, the four-ball play will be in the morning, and the foursome play in the afternoon. Sunday, there will be 12 singles matches.

Lady Chaps Face Two VB Opponents

Sporting a 3-2 record after a week of play, the Lubbock Christian College women's volleyballers will play hostess to a series of matches tonight.

IC the first match, beginning at 6 p.m. at the LCC field housse, Eastern New Mexico University will take on Angelo State University. An hour later, LCC will play Angelo State, then follow against ENMU at 8 p.m.

Johnson Paces MHS Victory

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

No mistakes, please.

"Before I'm through (at Monterey)," commented Willie Johnson. "I believe I can make a name for myself as a running back."

Johnson, a 185-pound tailback, started up the hard road to stardom last week when he carried the ball for 105 yards on 23 carries during the Plainsmen's 35-7 win over Canyon. If that wasn't enough, he also caught three passes for an additional 39 yards and scored a pair of touchdowns.

"I think I had a pretty good game (against Canyon)," said Johnson, "but not great. They (the officials) took 20 yards away from me on penalties. And that hurt. But I guess I did come out pretty good.

"This week (Friday afternoon against Wichita Falls Rider) I hope to get everything together."

For Johnson, last week was his first appearance in a Monterey varsityuniform. A transfer from Jackson, Miss., Johnson spent last season toiling with the MHS junior varsity.

"I ran over them pretty good," Johnson said of his JV play.

Monterey coach James Odom agreed: "He had a good season for us (on the JV)," Odom said. "And we're expecting a lot from him this year.

"I really think he'll help us out a lot. He gives us a new threat — a new dimension — that we haven't had in some time here."

The dimension Odom talked about is speed. Although Johnson is by no means a world-class sprinter, he does possess 4.8 range in the 40-yard dash. And to Odom, a coach never blessed with a burner in the past, that's good enough for him.

Johnson said that with him and fellow runners Ricky Pinkerton and Dwayne Smith, MHS possesses a steady ground game — something the Plainsmen didn't have a year ago.

"Now that we have the ground game, I think it will open things for (quarterback Kent) Potts," said Johnson. "He should be able to throw the ball now. Last year, no one expected Monterey to run. Now they do."

Odom agreed again. "All of our backs run well and that should help us tremendously this year. Potts, Smith, Pinkerton and Johnson, all have ability."

Along with leading Monterey to a District 4-AAAA football title and gaining 1,000 yards, Johnson also hopes to become the top back in a loop which sports all-state candidate Ervin Davis of Plainview.

"Those are my goals," said Johnson. "I think I can accomplish them all."

"Yeah," said Johnson. "I really believe I can be. He (Davis) has the physical attributes, but I think I can become a better runner...I believe that."

White Paves Way For EHS

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Kelvin White has enjoyed better nights carrying the ball for the Estacado Matadors — and the junior tailback probably has plenty of bigger nights ahead of him.

Nonetheless, White has been selected the Class AAA player of the week for his work in Estacado's 13-7 win over Plainview.

White carried the ball 15 times for 76 yards Friday — not the most overwhelming statistic in the world. But all of White's yardage came in the fourth quarter. In fact, he had been completely shut out by the Plainview defense — regarded as one of the best in the state — until his last five carries.

The Matadors rolled up 163 yards of offense in their final two possesions of the night and nearly half of that — 76 yards — came from White.

"I think we just wore them out at the end," said EHS boss Louis Kelley. "We could see that they were getting tired so we started letting (Kelvin) White run those sweeps."

The plan worked and White's clutch performance earned him the honors. It wasn't so much what the running back accomplished, but when he accomplished it that made his performance an outstanding one.

Several other offensive players also recieved mention for their work on Friday. They include White's teammate Leonard Chatham. The Estacado center graded out with almost a perfect score from the EHS coaching staff.

Charles Burse, Brownfield tailback, gained 98 yards on 19 carries and caught one pass for 43 yards as the Cubs dropped a heartbreaker to Levelland.

The AAA defensive player award goes to someone who played for a team that wound up on the short side of the final score.

Brownfield linebacker Brent Wilkes, who had 14 tackles, one interception and both Cub touchdowns in Friday's loss to Levelland was selected the top performer.

Coyotes Test Abilene Cooper

By United Press International

Coach Donnell Crosslin doesn't pull any punches about the task facing his Wichita Falls Coyotes Friday night: "I don't think we can get ready for them, so we're just going to go out there and hope we can get in the way of someone."

Wichita Falls hosts the high-riding Abilene Cooper Cougars in a key Texas high school Class AAAA football game. And, after Cooper dominated highly regarded Class AAA Brownwood 50-14 last weekend, Crosslin isn't taking the game lightly.

"We always know Cooper will be tough, but we certainly weren't prepared for them to dominate a team like they did against Brownwood, and Brownwood isn't a bad team, either," he said. "We'll do the best we can, and I hope some of our young kids don't go into shock during the game."

The game will be played in the Wichita Falls stadium, which has Astro-Turf. But Crosslin isn't sure that's an advantage to his Coyotes.

"Cooper has a lot more speed than we do, and the AstroTurf is fast," he said. "That gives them an extra edge which should be ours on our own field."

And, while much of the state will be watching to see just how well Wichita Falls does against the top-ranked Cougars, others will be watching the outcome of a key game at the other end of the state. Houston Stratford, defending Class AAAA champion, opens defense of that crown against Port Neches. And, the longest current win streak in the state will be on the line as Stratford goes after win No. 20.

They won 15 games in 1978 en route to the state championship, and the final four games of the 1977 season after losing a district game which kept them out of post-season playoffs. Victory No. 20 could show some folks that the No. 4-rated team has to be dealt with again in 1979.

Plano — state champ in 1977 and runner-up to Stratford last year — looks for victory No. 2 this week at Dallas Kimball. La Porte, a 24-22 victor over Port Arthur last week when rated No. 1, will put its No. 3 ranking on the line this week at Cypress-Fairbanks.

Other key Class AAAA games find No. 5 Seguin at New Braunfels, No. 6 Dallas Lake Highlands hosting Nacogdoches, No. 7 Tyler hosting Richfield, No. 8 Houston Kashmere at Forest Brook, No. 9 San Antonio Roosevelt across town at San Antonio Judson, and No. 10 Odessa Permian hosting Amarillo.

Jasper, ranked No. 1 this week by UPI in Class AAA, hosts Center and No. 2 Estacado plays Lubbock High, while No. 3 Bay City is at Dickinson and No. 4 Kerrville is at San Angelo Lake View. Beaumont Hebert, ranked No. 5, goes across town to play Beaumont Charlton-Pollard.

Also, Paris hosts Clarksville, McKinney hosts Sulphur Springs, Huntsville is at Katy, Brownwood hosts De Soto and Pecos is at Carlsbad, N.M.

The Big Four in Class AA are divided, with two teams at home while the other two are on the road. Top-rated Kenedy hosts Poth, No. 2 Pittsburg is at Gilmer, No. 3 Childress hosts Memphis and No. 4 San Antonio Randolph is at Canyon. Other games find Bellville at Willis, Whitehouse hosting Canton, Littlefield at Levelland, Hays Consolidated hosting Pflugerville, the Bowie Jackrabbits at Olney and Wylie hosting Clyde.

China Spring, the Class A Defending state champion and No. 1 ranked this week, hosts Whitney while No. 2 Haskell hosts Hamlin and No. 3 Falls City hosts Karnes City. No. 4 Hawkins is at home against Tyler JV. Also, Seagraves is at Sundown, Knox City at Albany, Glen Rose at Clifton, Rotan at Merkel, Hull-Daisetta hosts Newton and San Saba is at Mason.

Seminole Gets Away To Surprising Start

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Any doubt that Seminole deserved serious consideration as the best Class AA football team on the South Plains was erased Friday night as the Indians edged Class AAA Monahans 13-7.

The upset was a reversal from last year when Seminole, picked as contenders in District 5-AA after dropping down from Class AAA, went the whole predistrict season without winning a game, then came on strong at the end.

"We had a great goal-line stand there at the end (against Monahans)," Bornstein said. "They had a fourth-and-one on our three-yard line with 40 seconds to go and we held them. Heck, they had four downs from the 12 and we stopped them. That's a super way to win a ballgame."

Bornstein picked back Ricky Green as the outstanding offensive player of the game. Green gained 201 yards on 15 carries, including a 55-yard run for one score, and caught a pass for the other.

"We were in a fourth-and-12," Bornstein related, "and Ricky ran out in the flat and caught a little ol' pass and took it 35 yards for the touchdown.

"I'll tell you what, last season we went the whole preseason without winning a game. I'm a lot happier right now. This definitely gives us momentum."

Defensively Bornstein singled out linebacker Jim Hill and tackle Gary Rumans, but he also had praise for the entire secondary.

"Our secondary allowed 32 yards passing," he said. "They threw 10 passes all night and we had three interceptions."

Speaking of passing, Littlefield stormed Frenship, a team that was supposed to contend in District 5-AA, 35-7.

"We played good, I have to admit that," Littlefield coach Jerry Blakely said reluctantly. "We played a lot better than I thought we would in our opening ballgame.

"I think the key was our offensive line. They were able to handle the various stunts and slants Frenship threw at us. That's the contrast in the two years."

The other three teams on the A-J's top five also notched impressive wins. Slaton collected its third win in a year's time over Colorado City; Idalou whipped up on Class A toughie New Deal 37-14 and Tulia showed some strength downing Friona 13-0.

The Avalanche-Journal's first weekly ranking of the Top 10 Class AA football teams on the South Plains:

Team	Record
1. Seminole	1-0
2. Littlefield	1-0
3. Slaton	1-0
4. Idalou	1-0
5. Tulia	1-0
6. Floydada	1-0
7. Denver City	1-0
8. Olton	1-0
9. Abernathy	0-0-1
10. Frenship	0-1

Mentioned Briefly

BASEBALL

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox lashed a two-out single in the eighth inning of Boston's 9-2 win over the New York Yankees to become the first American League player to get 3,000 hits and 400 home runs in his career. Yaz' sharp grounder off Jim Beattie skipped beyond the reach of second baseman Willie Randolph, making him the 15th major leaguer to reach the 3,000-hit mark and only the fourth big leaguer to join the 3,000-hit, 400-homer club. The others are all Hall of Famers from the National League — Hank Aaron, Willie Mays and Stan Musial.

TENNIS

TOKYO (AP) — Dana Gilbert upset defending champion Virginia Wade of Britain 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 in the first round of a $150,000 tournament. In other matches, Dianne Fromholtz of Australia eliminated Brigitte Cuypers of the Netherlands 6-4, 6-3; Wendy Turnbull of Australia ousted Barbara Jordan 6-1, 6-4; Australia's Kerry Reid beat Diane Desfor 6-2, 6-2; Billie Jean King defeated Julie Harrington 2-6, 6-1, 6-1 and Laura DuPont downed Jeanne Duvall 6-1, 6-4.

ATLANTA (AP) — Ricky Meyer upset No. 2 seed Ilie Nastase 3-6, 6-3, 6-1 in the third round of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution Open. In other matches, third seeded Eliot Teltscher eliminated South African Cliff Drysdale 6-3, 6-0 and Kevin Curren outlasted Ray Moore 6-1, 6-7, 7-6.

WOODLANDS (AP) — Sherwood Stewart and Marty Riessen scored a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Mexican Marcello Lara and Australian John Bartlett in first-round play in the $150,000 ATP World Doubles tennis tournament. In other action, the No. 2-seeded team of Raul Ramirez of Mexico and Peter Fleming defeated Ted Erck and Paul Crozier 6-2, 6-3, while South Africans Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan, ranked fifth, beat Tim Garcia and Ashok Amritraj of India 6-1, 6-3.

WORLD UNIVERSITY GAMES

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Italy's Pietro Mennea set a world record in the 200 meters at the 10th World University Games, clocking a time of 19.72 seconds. The time bettered the old mark of 19.83 set by Tommie Smith of the U.S. at the 1968 Olympics. In the women's 200, world record holder Marita Koch of East Germany ran the third fastest time in history, 21.91, a Games record. In other events, Andrew Toney scored 20 points as the United States men's basketball team rolled over Yugoslavia 88-70 and won the gold medal.

BASKETBALL

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ann Meyers failed in her bid to become the first woman to play in the National Basketball Association. Indiana Pacer owner Sam Nassi said. Nassi said Miss Meyers, a 5-foot, 9 inch, 140-pound guard who was an All-American women's player at UCLA, failed to survive the club's cut following three days of rookie camp. Miss Meyers, who announced in Los Angeles that she had signed with the Pacers, is expected to remain with the club as a color commentator on its radio broadcasts.

Home Loan Ceiling May Be Lifted

AUSTIN (UPI) — There are reports Gov. Bill Clements may ask a special session of the Legislature to raise the state's interest ceiling on home mortgage loans again because the lift to 12 percent has not helped home financing, a House committee chairman says.

"He (Clements) hasn't said it publicly, but I talked to some people he has talked to, and they said he was saying that," Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville, chairman of the House Financial Institutions Committee and House sponsor of legislation abolishing the old 10 percent ceiling, told reporters Wednesday.

Donaldson's legislation allowing the old ceiling to float up to 12 percent is not sufficient to enable Texas lenders to acquire money on the national market to finance home construction in the state, the lawmaker said.

He said that as a result Clements may ask the Legislature during a proposed special session to raise the ceiling higher, and that "... if the money market certificates are still over 10 percent and the prime rate is at 13 or 13.5 percent, it might be something we would want to look at.

"What it boils down to is, with the law we passed we're still out of the secondary money market," Donaldson said.

Rep. Stan Schleuter, D-Salado, suggested to a meeting of the Financial Institutions Committee that the interest ceiling on home mortgage loans be abolished or allowed to float with no upper limits.

"I think that's the only way we're ever going to solve this problem," Schleuter said.

Donaldson said he believes the state constitution forbids abolishing the ceiling without the approval of voters.

He asked the committee staff to immediately begin preparing information on mortgage loan rates and the status of the money market in Texas.

Donaldson said he does not look forward to another legislative battle concerning the interest rate issue.

The law passed this year sets the interest ceiling at 2 percent higher than the interest rate on 10-year Treasury Bonds, up to a maximum of 12 percent. And legislators provided that the state will revert to the 10 percent limit in 1982 unless the Legislature again votes for a higher ceiling.

"I've been asked what the Legislature will do next session, and I don't think legislators will do anything if there isn't a crisis," Donaldson said. "It was difficult enough to pass a two-year bill with a crisis."

He said the general feeling among builders is that the interest ceiling change approved by the 1979 Legislature was "too little too late."

Clements is in Eastern Europe until Sept. 22, and was not available for comment.

Texas Solons Want Negotiations To Find Party Liable For Slick

WASHINGTON (AP) -Both Texas senators think negotiations are in order to decide who is liable for damages to the state's beaches and businesses as a result of the oil spewing from a runaway offshore Mexican well.

Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo has denounced calls for compensation, saying talks were not in order. The well is owned by Petroleos Mexicanos, the national oil company.

"I think there is a liability there by Pemex and we should press very strongly in the negotiations to see that people are compensated," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said at a news conference Wednesday.

The state's Democratic senator canceled a speech he planned to deliver earlier in the day about U.S.-Mexican relations, saying he was told natural gas negotiations had reached a "delicate" stage. The speech reportedly referred to tensions from the on-again, off-again negotiations for U.S. purchase of Mexican natural gas as well as the oil spill liability issue.

Tower said the question of liability is "a matter of negotiation" but it should be undertaken through quiet diplomatic routes.

"I think the fact is that there has been too much public comment to the extent that it has exacerbated our relationship with Mexico," the Republican senator said Tuesday.

The man the incumbent senator defeated in a tight race last fall, former Texas congressman Bob Krueger, had provoked blasts from Mexican officials last month by announcing the U.S. would ask for payments for at least some of the damage.

Krueger is working in the State Department, where he awaits Senate confirmation of his nomination to be ambassador-at-large to Mexico and coordinator of Mexican affairs. He is scheduled to appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committeee on Monday.

Bentsen predicted the Senate will confirm Krueger's nomination. "I think he (Krueger) will get a very good vote," the senator said. "I believe that Bob Krueger can make a contribution to the (gas) negotiations."

Criticism Mounting Against SEDCO

AUSTIN (AP) — Criticism of SEDCO's role in the Mexican oil spill is piling up in the absence of the company's founder, Gov. Bill Clements.

President Harry Hubbard of the Texas AFL-CIO said Wednesday the labor organization plans to join others in a private lawsuit against SEDCO Inc., the Dallas-based international oil drilling company, and Pemex, the Mexican national oil monopoly.

Rep. Bennie Bock, chairman of the House Committee on Environmental Affairs, urged Attorney General Mark White to block SEDCO's attempts to limit liability for the huge spill, which started June 3 when a well blew out in the Bay of Campeche.

Clements is in Eastern Europe on an agricultural and goodwill mission. He is scheduled to return Sept. 22.

On Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor signed an order protecting SEDCO temporarily against liability for damages. O'Conor set Oct. 23 as the deadline for the filing of all damage claims in federal court.

SEDCO lawyers had asked the judge to exonerate the company of all liability or to limit its liability to $300,000.

"Until now," White said, "we have accepted in good faith their statements regarding the sinking of their drilling equipment, but the filing of this suit raises strong suspicions that their prior acts were merely an attempt to destroy the evidence."

White said previously SEDCO would be treated like any other party in assessing possible liability for damages.

Bock, D-New Braunfels, said the SEDCO suit "appears to be precipitous" since his committee "has heard testimony that the effects of the spill may not be known for several years."

Two Country Singers Join Charlie Pride

David Wills, United Artist recording personality, will be a special guest star on the Charley Pride show during the 62nd annual renewal of the Panhandle South Plains Fair here Sept. 22-29.

Wills will team up with Cliff Cochran, an RCA recording artist, on the Pride show, slated at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 23.

Wills has been a mainstay on the Pride show for more than a year and Pride will be introducing Cochran at the appearance here.

Wills, discovered by Charlie Rich, had "Song on the Jukebox" and "Barrooms to Bedrooms" recordings make the top five on the country and western charts.

Cochran's top recordings to date have been "The Way I'm Needing You" and "Love Me Like a Stranger."

Pride's show is the first to be presented during the eight-day fair run, along with several free attractions on the outdoor stage. A fiddlers' contest will help launch the fair on opening day.

Following Pride's show will be the Statler Brothers show, with Barbara Mandrell, 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 24; the Eddie Rabbitt show, with Janie Fricke, 8 p.m. only Sept. 25; the Dave and Sugar show, with John Conlee, 8 p.m. only Sept. 26; "The Golden Years of Country Music" by South Plains College, 7 p.m. only Sept. 27; the Tom T. Hall show, with Charly McClain, 8 p.m. only Sept. 28; and the Tammy Wynette show, with George "Goober" Lindsey and Rex Allen Jr., 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sept. 29.

All seats are reserved. Tickets for the South Plains College show are $2 and $3. All others are $4, $5 and $6 and may be obtained at the fair offices, Ed's Wagon Wheel, Dunlap's, Sears and Hemphill-Wells stores in South Plains Mall and Luskey's Western Wear.

Deaf-Mute Released In Murder Case

DALLAS (AP) — Jerome Fisher, an uneducated deaf-mute, has been freed of criminal charges in connection with the strangulation of a south Dallas prostitute.

A Dallas County grand jury, investigating the death of the 19-year-old woman, took no action Wednesday against Fisher, ending the ordeal for the deaf-mute arraigned Aug. 1 for her murder.

Fisher was arrested in connection with the death of Dorothy Armstrong on July 14, but officials ran into trouble in making the 27-year-old Fisher understand what was going on during the investigation of the murder.

Book On Atlantis Stirs Myth

By KERIN HOPE

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — Yet another new book about Atlantis, the lost continent of mythology, is becoming a Greek best-seller, although Vassilis Paschos' theories have raised some smiles among archaeological experts.

Paschos, 55, a Greek customs official fascinated by the myth for almost 20 years, says Atlantis was not an isolated island but a giant continent covering much of what is now the Atlantic Ocean:

"Atlantis has been pinpointed in the Bermuda Triangle, in Crete and Santorini (now Thera) and recently in the eastern Atlantic, between Portugal and Madeira," he says.

"Those researchers were both right and wrong: they confined Atlantis to one location, while in fact it included all the areas mentioned."

The title of Paschos' book, "The Atlanteans, Mr. Von Daniken, Not the Gods," refers to his belief that the inhabitants of the lost world were responsible for the birth of technology, rather than space visitors revered on earth as gods, as Swiss author Erich Von Daniken would have it.

"The evidence of ancient writers like Plato and the startling similarities among linguistics, mythology and archaeological remains in the Americas, Egypt and the Aegean point to common origins, which I am certain were in the continent of Atlantis," he said.

Paschos claims that Atlanteans founded colonies on the Aegean islands of Crete, Delos and Santorini, which survived the sinking of Atlantis around 6,500 B.C. Fugitives from Atlantis introduced metal technology to the Aegean, he adds.

The discovery of a sophisticated bronze age town on Santorini, engulfed by a volcanic eruption around 1,450 B.C., gave rise to considerable speculation that here at last was the answer to the riddle of Atlantis.

But archaeologist Christos Doumas, who heads the Santorini dig, remains unconvinced.

"If Atlantis existed as described by Plato, according to his chronology, it could be none other than the Minoan civilization of Crete," he said. "It then becomes impossible to consider Santorini as part of Atlantis, or one of its colonies, since only the final phase of Minoan culture is found there."

Some 20,000 books and articles have nourished the Atlantis legend since Plato first described it in "Timaeus and Critias," written early in the 4th century B.C.

"There was an island opposite the strait you call the Pillars of Heracles (modern Gibraltar), larger than Asia Minor and Libya combined ... with a powerful and remarkable dynasty of kings," Plato wrote.

But there is a strong possibility he may simply have invented Atlantis to bring a philosophical argument to life.

"I am sceptical of the Atlantis story because of its context," said Dr. Ken Wardle, who teaches Aegean archaeology at England's Birmingham University. "It is most likely a dramatic episode used by Plato to illustrate his political ideas.

"It's also curious there is no mention of the legend in writers before Plato: you would expect to find it in Homer. And if it carries conviction, why don't scholars go looking for it?"

French undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau, who spent months combing the Aegean seabed in 1976, came away convinced the lost continent never belonged in the Aegean and suggested atlantologists look elsewhere.

The following year, U.S. Researcher Charles Berlitz found traces of what he identified as Atlantis in the Bermuda Triangle in the western Atlantic. Last spring, Soviet oceanologist Prof. Andrei Aksyonov said he had photographs of building remains from beneath the Atlantic several hundred miles southwest of Portugal, which he suggested might have been part of Atlantis.

Both claims have met with scepticism. But Paschos unperturbedly points out that Heinrich Schliemann discovered the ruins of Troy in Turkey — and confounded the experts — by interpreting a legend literally.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Pay special attention to what you promised to do for someone in your family tomorrow. Your lack of follow-through could have bitter consequences.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could fail tomorrow because you tend to be a defeatist. Negative thinking distorts your logic and could destroy the very thing you have going for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Take extra special precautions tomorrow not to get involved in any commercial or business matters with one you know little about. Your losses won't be recovered.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's a strong possibility tomorrow that you could depend upon the wrong person in an important matter and be sorely disappointed when you're let down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A friend's well-meaning advice is more compassionate than logical and could send you off in the wrong direction. You'll have trouble getting back on the track.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you find yourself involved with one whose way of doing things skirts the borderline of ethics, get away fast. He'll drag you into an awful mess.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) No matter how difficult mistakes are to rectify, correct them immediately. Try to sweep them under the rug and you could create an insoluble situation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) No matter how difficult mistakes are to rectify, correct them immediately. Try to sweep them under the rug and you could create an insoluble situation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's not your nature to be deceitful, so don't begin tomorrow, even with a little white lie. It could snowball and cause unintended harm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Dissatisfaction could spill over into taking it out on your mate and/or family. Don't cause needless suffering.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may have great difficulty tomorrow consolidating your efforts. Unless you are careful, you could pull the rug out from under your own feet.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Wastefulness on your part will not be easily avoided and could cause future shortages in your budget. Don't be extravagant.

Heat Wave Hits San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The National Weather Service says the record heat wave that stalled the city's trolleys and congested freeways Tuesday will stay around for awhile.

The temperature soared to 98 Tuesday afternoon — a record for the date and the highest in eight years. Pacific breezes and fog abandoned the city.

"This prolonged hot spell is giving us fits," a spokesman for San Francisco's Municipal Railway said. "The slots in the cables are expanding with the heat, and that may stop the cable cars. And the diesel engines on the buses are used to more moderate temperatures and are beginning to overheat and rupture hoses."

Work crews used specially designed trucks to water down the cable lines in an attempt to stop the expanding cables and keep the historic cars running until the fog comes in and the heat spell breaks, which is not expected until Thursday.

Trolleys were backed up, dead in their tracks. Downtown Muni islands were clogged with homeward-bound workers.

There were many overheated cars on the San Francisco Bay area's freeways, adding to the congestion created by the shutdown of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District in a labor dispute.

Shows Retain Popularity Despite Fall Schedule Changes By ABC

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They called it "taking risks" back in May, and, if you listened long enough, you might have half-believed that ABC really stood to lose something with its daring fall schedule.

ABC split the profitable Tuesday night "Happy Days"-"Laverne and Shirley" combination, and moved its most successful new show, "Mork and Mindy" from Thursday to Sunday night for a head-to-head battle with CBS' sitcom cleanup hitter, Archie Bunker.

It turns out that ABC was taking about as big a risk as the guy at the carnival with the three walnut shells and a pea. No way they could lose. This is ABC's game.

"Mork" will do better than survive on Sunday night. The show was getting better ratings than "All in the Family" anyway, and that was before Jean Stapleton departed, leaving CBS with something called "Archie's Place."

Tuesday night won't prompt any fire sales at ABC. The evening still opens with "Happy Days," followed by "Angie," which showed strength last season.

And a Mork-less Thursday is no worry for the ratings leader. The evening opens with "Laverne and Shirley" followed by "Benson," a spinoff from the popular "Soap."

"Benson," judging from its pilot episode airing tonight, is going to do nice things for ABC. Yes, another success for the network that is fat with sitcom hits.

"Benson" will make it, and not just because it follows a proven hit (though that will help). The show's star, Robert Guillaume, is a walking hit. His intelligent, likeable manner and restrained comedy style would give the worst half-hour of drivel a fighting chance.

Guillaume, in case you're not a "Soap" fan, was the butler on that parody. In his new series, he has gone to work for a widowed governor (James Noble), an innocent guy who is really too nice for politics. Fortunately, he has a new butler to help him run things.

To be sure, some familiar sitcom inanities show up:

Governor's aide to Benson: "Where's the coffee?" Benson: "In the pot. Where's the governor?" Aide: "Same place."

But there are more fresh jokes than stale ones, as when the governor explains to Benson that his late wife was killed by horses.

"I'm sorry," Benson says. "Trampled?"

"No," replies the governor, "eaten."

So, ABC has another hit. The rich get richer, and NBC gets McLean Stevenson.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Where did Merv Griffin learn to handle his variety-talk show so entertainingly and to sing and look like a matinee idol? Also, is it true that he once weighed more than 200 pounds? — Mrs. J.R., Ft. Lauderdale.

A: Yes. Merv tipped (or broke) the scales, weighing in a 265 pounds. Once he could afford to eat regularly, he ate moderately and displaced that surplus tonnage. In the early '50s, the versatile showman was the vocalist with Freddie Martin's big band, emceed a game show ("Play Your Hunch"), won a Warner Bros. movie contract (in 1953) and hosted his NBC-TV daytime series for some four years. He still remembers a fan letter he received on that show: "I always watch you when I'm sick in bed!"

When that same network groped around for a likely "Tonight" show host, the choice narrowed down to Merv, Mike Douglas and the reluctant Johnny Carson. All three stars are now in the million-dollar-per-year bracket.

Mike's syndicated series is healthier than ever. Griffin's Westinghouse show has more outlets than before. And he also masterminds his own TV production company — marketing a kaboodle of game shows. All three originate their shows in California where almost anyone you meet is a potential guest.

Their newest heavy competition is the low-profile but highly intelligent Phil Donahue, who, some day, may sit in Carson's chair — if Tom Snyder doesn't beat him to it, especially with his "Prime Time Sunday" feature, a quick click.

CELEBRITY SNAPSHOTS (With a bow to Louis Sobol, who invented the title thousands of N.Y. Journal-Americans ago): Nothing to the rumor that Sadat has been asked to use his influence to arrange for Georgie Jessel to be booked into a Cairo cabaret — even if he agrees not to sell any Israeli bonds before and after each peformance.

No, Israel is not "execution crazy." Adolf Eichmann was the only person who's been executed in that country since it was founded. Their law provides for the death penalty only for wartime treason and genocide.

Carol Burnett got a thrill reading the critical acclaim of her emoting in "Friendly Fire." "I Love to hear laughter," she says, "but when an audience cries, that's really a sincere reaction."

It was Betty Hutton who played Pearl White in the biograflim of her. Pearl was the heroine of the 1914 serial, "The Perils of Pauline."

Peter Frampton began to master the guitar when he was barely eight years old. By 16 he was the Herd group's lead, followed by Humble Pie.

Did you know that Hal Linden, (Barney Miller) played sax, sang and learned to swing and sway with Sammy Kaye's band? Also with Bobby Sherewood.

Yes — Marvin Mitchelson, famous divorce lawyer who collects mucho bounty for clients who commit marital mutiny (or a reasonable facsimile) has been happily married for years and years and years.

A fan of Rod Carew's, the baseball super-swatter, asked him to autograph his new autobiography, simply titled "Carew." "Sorry to tell you this," the fan said, holding the book open for an autograph, "but there's a big mistake on the book jacket. It says 'Rod Carew won six batting championships. They cheated you — it's seven!"

No. George Burns didn't act in the film, "The Solid Gold Cadillac" — he just did the narration ... What Jack Klugman observed about himself was: "I look like King Kong and have the strength of Fay Wray!"

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

New Oil Recovery Techniques Cited

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Energy Department officials attending the International Petroleum Exposition cite recently developed techniques for coaxing oil out of the ground as a way to increase America's recoverable oil reserves by a third.

Robert T. Johansen, director fo the Department of Energy's Bartlesville Technology Center, speaking at an IPE symposium this week, said two-thirds of the country's known oil reserves are still in the ground and that half of that thicker oil could possibly be recovered by using new technical advances, such as the injection of water, steam and chemicals, into old wells.

Johansen said the present research program, being jointly sponsored by the oil industry and the DOE, involves 23 field demonstration projects at an estimated cost of $146 million.

Meanwhile IPE officials said they are encouraged at the response of oilmen to the exposition and that hopefully another exposition will be scheduled.

"So far, it appears the IPE is living up to expectations," said John Houchin, retired chairman of Phillips Petroleum Co. and IPE president.

IPE officials said as many as 40,000 oil industry people from 60 foreign countries are expected to visit the technical exhibits, attend symposiums and exchange information.

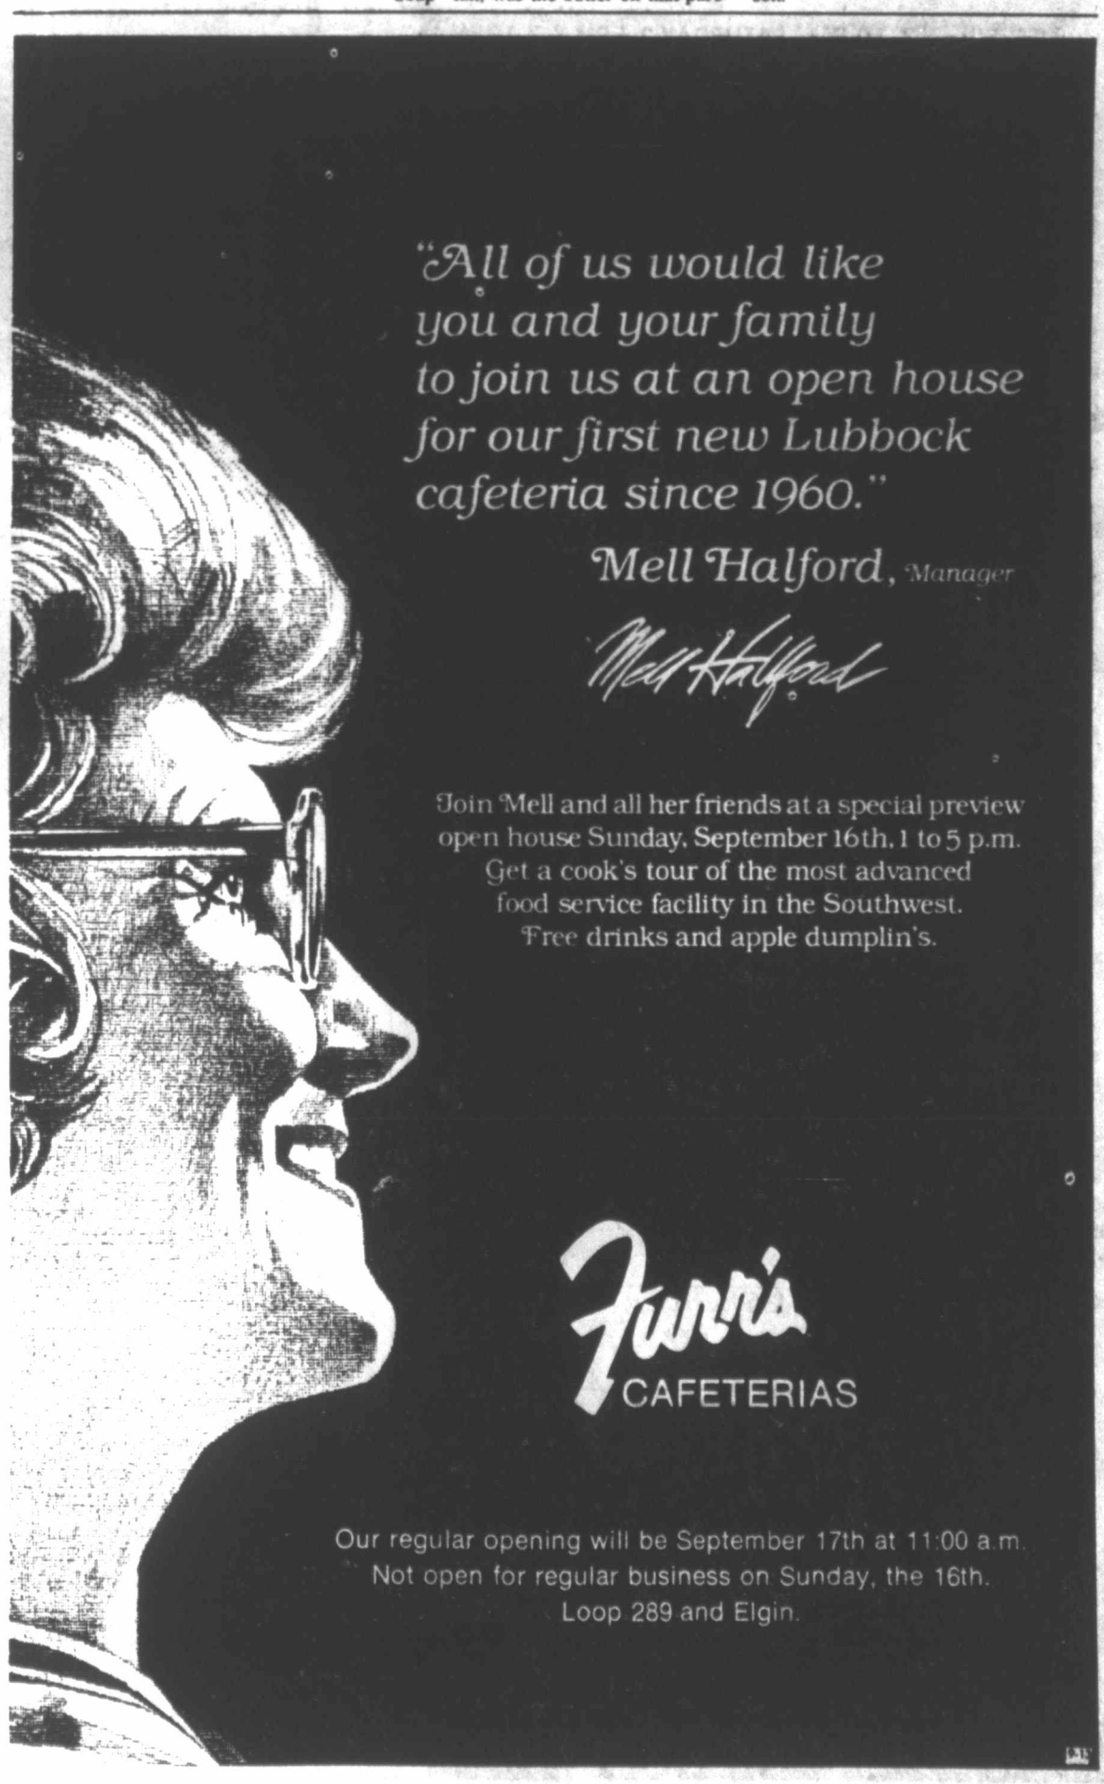
One of the exhibits which attracted a crowd was the Soviet Export Ministry's display of oil drilling equipment.

The Soviet technicians told visitors that even though Russia still exports oil, their government stresses conservation and is looking for other energy sources.

Victor Gorohov, speaking through an interpretor, was quick to point out, "We do not import oil, only export it.

"You see, in Russia we need no special restrictions on energy," Gorohov said.

CIA reports, however, have estimated Russia will need to begin importing oil within two to three years.



CAPTAIN MARKS 25TH SEASON — Bob Keeshan, who is better known to television viewers as "Captain Kangaroo," bit into a jelly doughnut this week at a party marking the beginning of the 25th season of the children's TV series on the CBS network. The party was held at Tavern-On-The-Green in New York's Central Park. The doughnut was part of a special doughnut-topped anniversary cake for Keeshan, who is fond of jelly doughnuts. (AP Laserphoto)

Mental Health Claimed Problem In Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A leading expert on psychological stress has injected a new issue into Sweden's national election campaign: the mental health of the nation.

Professor Lennart Levi, head of the Laboratory for Clinical Stress Research, claimed politicians in Sweden, which has a cradle-to-grave welfare system, have been debating bread and butter issues in the campaign for next Sunday's balloting when they should be discussing the nation's mental health.

"Two million (of 8.3 million) Swedes have serious psychological problems," he said in a recent newspaper interview that brought the question before the electorate. "It is high time to make life-quality a major election question.

"But the politicians only talk about the daily bread and not about the needs of the soul."

He cited these research results in the interview with the newspaper Dagens Nyheter:

—Two men and three women out of four suffer a complete mental breakdown at least once before the age of 60.

—Every 10th man has alcohol problems.

—Two thousand Swedes a year commit suicide and 20,000 others try to.

The Swedes vote last week for a new Parliament and recent polls indicate a close battle between the Social Democrats on one side and the three non-socialist parties on the other. The country is presently run by a liberal minority government after Sweden's first non-Socialist government in four decades collapsed after only two years, failing to reach agreement on a nuclear energy problem.

Not all of the party leaders disagreed with Levi. Alf Svensson, leader of the small Christian Democratic Party , said: "The debate still centers around the piece of bread, although we Swedes are so materially well fed. The debate should instead deal with the fact that the Swedish people do not feel well mentally."

Svensson noted that nearly every third marriage ends in divorce, that every fourth child is unwelcome and that the number of abortions has trebled in a few years.

Other experts pointed out that Sweden is the world leader in worker absenteeism with well-paid industrial workers staying home from work an average 27 days a year. Official statistics also indicate that students at all levels have lost a great deal of their motivation. Since 1971 Sweden had a 50 percent decrease in the number of examined researchers and the recruitment of students for predoctorate courses has almost ceased.

Because your head is unique, the way your hair grows is equally unique. Really quite different from every one else's.
Precision haircutting is a technique for cutting the hair in harmony with the way it grows. Your hair eventually grows out but it doesn't lose its shape with a precision haircut. Consequently your haircut will look as good after five days as it does after five minutes. And because the hair falls naturally into place you won't have to keep fussing with it. Usually a shake of the head does it.
At Command Performance we shampoo, precision-cut and blow dry your hair for fourteen dollars, whether you're a gal or a guy. And no appointments are ever necessary.
We also offer permanent waves, coloring, frosting and conditioning. But we really shine with precision. And so will you.

HOT STUFF — Stunt man Grant Page of Sydney, Australia, covered his ears, left, as his glue covered overalls were ignited, then ran about with flames and smoke trailing behind him, and, right, displayed the remains of his overalls after the flames were smothered. All this was part of a promotion for a movie opening this month called "City On Fire" and took place in the parking lot of New York's Astoria Motion Picture Center recently. (AP Laserphoto)

Jack-Of-All-Trades Finds True Calling

FORT SCOTT, Kan. (AP) — A rover and roustabout for most of his 40 years, Jimmy Farmer says he's found his true calling prancing about on Kansas rooftops.

In an age of computer programmers and space technology, a 19th century profession has become a lifetime career for a man who used to be "a jack of all trades, master of none."

"I've done a bit of everything," said Farmer. "I've painted water towers, delivered soda pop, worked in factories, I was a long-haul trucker for 14 years. But the fuel crisis is so bad I can't make a living behind the wheel any more. I wanted something permanent that would bring a good wage and allow my wife to quit work. When I saw an ad about becoming a chimney sweep, I said 'That's for me.'"

The son of a Welsh immigrant father and a Cherokowa Indian mother, Farmer said it's his nature to be "happy-go-lucky, carefree and independent. This job is the real me. I've got 17 coats of arms tied into my family and come from a line that includes Shakespeare and pirates. A chimney sweep will fit right in."

Farmer said people stare at him as he travels around this Kansas farming community looking like a Charles Dickens character.

"Kids follow me around asking me to pull rabbits out of my hat. I go in restaurants and folks think I'm weird. In the old days sweeps in Europe were notorious for kidnapping children and forcing them to climb down the chimneys to clean them. But all that's long gone. Today it is an honorable and vital service to the community. What I really do is sell people peace of mind."

He said chimney sweeps are in growing demand because "with the fuel shortage people are turning back to fireplaces. They're putting wood and coal in old chimneys in old homes. The flues are full of birds' nests, spider webs, soot and creosote."

ACLU Threatens To Sue Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union here has joined its Boston counterpart in threatening to sue if the city uses public money to pay for the altar Pope John Paul II uses to celebrate Mass during his upcoming U.S. visit.

Frank Rizzo, Philadelphia's Roman Catholic mayor, announced this week the city would finance construction of a 27-foot-high altar for the papal Mass on Oct. 3.

"The Church offered to pay for it, but I think it's our responsibility," Rizzo said in a television interview.

Shortly after the mayor's announcement on the Joel Spivak Show, a local talk program, ACLU officials announced the group would file suit against the city if public money is spent on the project.

ACLU Executive Director Hilda Silverman called the proposal an "egregious violation" of the U.S. Constitution's separation of church and state, and said the group received calls within minutes of Rizzo's announcement.

A similar protest by the Massachusetts ACLU has been raised in Boston, the first of several U.S. cities the pontiff will visit.

The focus of the Boston controversy is the proposed construction of two platforms to hold the altar and a 300-member choral group that will participate in the Mass, which is expected to draw 500,000 persons. The total city budget for the visit, including police overtime, is $700,000.

"Whatever it is, it's well worth being available and able to spend it," Rizzo said. "It'll be an historic and proud day for the city."

Rizzo once had a personal audience in Rome with Pope Paul VI and met Pope John Paul II when the pontiff visited Philadelphia as as a Polish cardinal.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Stock Mart Shaken By Rate Hike

NEW YORK (AP) — Takeover issues and energy stocks highlighted a stock market shaken today by the continuing upward interest rate spiral.

After Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third largest, boosted its prime rate to a record 13 percent, Salomon Brothers economist Henry Kaufman predicted the prime could go to 13½ percent "within the next four weeks."

At noon, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off by 1.36 at 869.54 as New York Stock Exchange volume fell to 15.04 million shares from Wednesday's noon volume of 16.22 million.

Advances held a slim edge over declines in NYSE consolidated trading, but many oil issues moved lower after earlier sharp gains on oil and gas discoveries in Canada's arctic Beaufort Sea.

Gulf, which has an interest in a major Beaufot Sea oilfind, dropped 1⅜ to 32¼ and led the NYSE most-actives. Bow Valley Industries fell ¾ to 34⅛ on the American Stock Exchange.

Trans World Corp. jumped 2¼ to 23⅜. Takeover rumors had pushed the stock higher Wednesday, and Texas International said today it purchased an unspecified amount of TWA shares and had held talks with the owner of Trans World Airlines. Texas International fell ¼ to 14⅞.

Howard Johnson, object of a $630 million takeover bid by Britain's Imperial Group, dropped ⅛ to 23½. Chrysler was unchanged at 7¾ after predicting its losses would total $800 million this year and at least $400 million in 1980.

Lockheed was off ⅛ at 25¾ after British Airways said it ordered six Tristar aircraft worth about $282 million; McDonnell Douglas was unchanged at 26½. The Mexican airline Aeromexico ordered eight of the maker's planes for $200 million.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index fell .03 to 61.45; the Amex market value index gained .06 to 224.49.

Muzorewa Lashes At Opposition

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa today lashed out at Zimbabwe Rhodesian guerrilla leaders as "arrogant dictators" and made a renewed pitch for Britain to recognize his black majority government.

The Zimbabwe Rhodesian prime minister, speaking to reporters during a recess in talks toward a new constitution for his embattled southern African nation, said British support of his administration was a vital element in its success.

"The answers are to be found in the hearts and souls of the British people who believe, as do the people of Zimbabwe Rhodesia, in true liberty and freedom," said Muzorewa, head of the country's biracial government.

"It is entirely a question of whether courage rather than fear will carry the day ... (of whether) peace rather than terrorism will be supported," the bishop said.

Muzorewa had asked for a postponement of the morning session of the British-sponsored talks so he and his delegation could study Britain's new constitution for the war-torn African country.

Lord Carrington, the British foreign secretary who is chairman of the conference, granted the request. The conference was scheduled to reconvene this afternoon.

Carrington delivered the British proposals to Muzorewa, the head of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's biracial government, and guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe Wednesday after the three black leaders agreed to a revised compromise agenda.

The proposals were not made public, but officials said they called for drastic curtailment of the special rights granted Zimbabwe Rhodesia's white minority in the constitution which former Prime Minister Ian Smith negotiated early this year with Muzorewa and other moderate black leaders.

Muzorewa said he was studying the proposals, but rejected the contention that there is a struggle for black liberation in his country.

"Anyone who thinks or tries to persuade others they are still fighting for freedom from colonial rule by a white minority ... is suffering from delusions bordering on insanity," he said.

More Victims Found Near Volcano Site

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Rescue workers recovered three more bodies near the summit of Mount Etna today raising to nine the number killed in the first fatal eruption in years of Europe's most active volcano, police reported.

The three bodies were not immediately identified. The other six persons killed in the Wednesday evening eruption were all Italians, including three physicians who were attending a medical congress in Sicily.

Search operations, suspended because of darkness Wednesday night, resumed at dawn today. Police said they feared the death toll could go higher as rescue teams probe a mass of rocks spewed up near the lip of the crater.

More than two dozen persons were hurt in the eruption, including visitors from Britain, Switzerland and Spain. An Italian woman, one of 13 persons hospitalized, was reported in critical condition with a skull fracture. Like the dead and most of the seriously injured, she was hit by one of the hot rocks known here as "volcanic bombs" because they burst and send out flaming lava.

About 200 tourists had just begun climbing down from a breathtaking walk along the rim of the 10,705-foot peak when it "exploded like a cannon," peppering the visitors with hot, lava-filled rocks, a mountain guide said.

Silvia Daloia, a tourist from Bergamo in northern Italy, was among those near the top when the rocks began to fly. "Right in front of me there was a young couple with a child. I saw the man fall with his skull crushed, the woman was uninjured and tried to pick him up. When she understood there was nothing to be done, she grabbed her child in her arms and ran," the witness said.

A second person who saw the eruption said some of the rocks hurled up from the volcano's sizzling core were so large they snapped two trucks in half.

Hijacker Talks, Surrenders

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — A writer who hijacked a Lufthansa airliner with a toy pistol rattled off a grab bag of demands from a plebiscite on nuclear energy to longer maternity leaves before releasing 128 hostages and surrendering.

The German hijacker, Rafal Keppel, 31, who described himself as a writer but whom a Lufthansa spokesman termed "deranged," seized the aircraft Wednesday morning on a domestic flight from Frankfurt to Bonn-Cologne, to begin the 12-hour drama.

Keppel, who pulled a toy gun out of a black bag and demanded to speak to West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt about money for a "peace organization," was persuaded to put down at the Bonn-Cologne airport, which serves both West German cities.

Schmidt, who was at a regular Cabinet meeting in the capital of Bonn, dispatched his troubleshooter, State Secretary Klaus-Juergen Wischnewski, to conduct the negotiations with the hijacker over a radiotelephone link between the airport tower and the aircraft.

Economists Can Agree Only To Disagree

By JAMES A. WHITE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The bromide that the worst embarrassment befalling any economist is to agree with a colleague seems to receive affirmation regularly these days.

Take the first meeting of the International Monetary Advisory Board, a group of noted economists who gathered in New York under the sponsorship of a securities firm to review the world economic situation.

After a day of discussion and a private dinner with Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker, the sponsor, The Securities Group, invited the press to hear and question the economists.

Eugene A. Birnbaum, the board's chairman, emphasized its purpose was not to come up with uniform recommendations or a forecast but said there was consensus on several points.

For one, Birnbaum said, inflation remained the No. 1 world economic problem. Another was that all crude oil prices should be decontrolled and that the group was strongly opposed to any form of wage, price or credit controls that might be tried in the inflation fight.

"We didn't agree on any of these things," said a perturbed Martin Feldstein, a Harvard economics professor who also is president of the National Bureau of Economic Research.

"I think the one agreement we had was not to agree on anything," echoed Arthur B. Lafbessor at the University of Southern California and father of the so-called Laffer curve popular with tax-cut proponents.

Other board members, hoping to smoothe tempers, rose to suggest that there surely were areas of agreement, such as the clear need for a strong dollar.

"Not at all," retorted Feldstein, who, as head of the National Bureau, the private group which serves as quasiofficial scorekeeper of recessions, is one of the nation's most prominent economists.

Feldstein said he might agree with qualifications to the points made by Birnbaum and others but said he could not subscribe to "ll-defined statements" on the economic issues.

And so it goes at a time when there are more living economists than ever before offering more different opinions over what should be done to cure inflation, keep production up and unemployment low.

Undaunted by the earlier outbreak, members of the board pressed on with their views on what should be done to control U.S. inflation. "At the minimum, you have to have an interest rate that makes borrowing costly, which means that you have to have a rate greater than the rate of inflation," said Kurt Richebacher, executive manager of Dresdner Bank, the world's eighth largest bank based in Frankfurt, West Germany.

Interest rates "can only go up or inflation will get much worse," he said. Richebacher added that the Federal Reserve Board has not tightened credit enough.

"It's not clear that the answer is still further tightening by the Federal Reserve," Bryant said.

A news release announcing the meeting of the International Monetary Advisory Board said "the findings of the board will be presented to the IMF-World Bank meetings" in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, this fall.

Tourist Ads Contradict Gasoline Conservation

SEATTLE (AP) — The state and federal governments have urged Washington residents to conserve gasoline, but another arm of the government is telling Canadians tourists there is plenty of gasoline available.

A 5-inch-high advertising headline in last weekend's Vancouver (British Columbia) Province, declared, "Hi Neighbor! Come on down. We've got gasoline."

The enthusiastic ad was placed by the U.S. Travel Service, which says the blurbs will continue to run in Vancouver, Victoria, Calgary and Edmonton newspapers.

"I think, as a Washington resident, I would be pretty irritated about that," said Tom Magwire, acting assistant state travel director.

"We've been trying to instill an awareness that things aren't the same and that we don't have an unlimited supply of gas," he said.

As Canadians were urged to flock in and gas up, Washington state completed a $200,000 "Save It for the Best" advertising campaign, urging gasoline conservation.

There is still about a 10 percent gasoline shortage in the state, even though service station lines have shortened, says Lee Johnson, spokesman for the federal Department of Energy.

But Johnson said Washington state's sluggish travel industry needs a boost, and Margaret Corkery, director of the U.S. Travel Service in Vancouver, staunchly defended the ads.

Canadians, she said, would use "only a small percentage of the total" fuel in the United States, while the tourist industry creates a lot of jobs.

Besides, she said, energy officials should be encouraging car-pooling because commuter travel "is where the wastage is."

She said state travel officials asked for help in getting Canadians traveling in Washington.

Don Richardson of the state travel development office confirmed that he talked with Mrs. Corkery, but he said all he wanted was help to get more ferry foot traffic to the Olympic Peninsula.
