Pentagon Reviews Contract

And LISA PAIKOWSKI Avalanche-Journal Staff

If Texas lawmakers have their way, Iranians currently receiving training at Reese Air Force Base will be informed their training is over and sent home.

However, U.S. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown has taken no action to stop training of Iranian military personnel in the U.S., although he is reviewing their status

Prepaid by the Shah of Iran, the contracts for military training were assumed by the revolutionary government of the Ayatollah Khomeini with the provision that Iran will send no more trainees to the U.S. than are provided for in the original contract.

The Defense Department figures indicate there are currently 273 Iranians receiving military training in the U.S. including three pilot trainees at Reese Air Force Base. The Lubbock trainees arrived at Reese only last month to begin

But U.S. Rep. Kent Hance has requested that Secretary of State Cyrus Vance consider cancelling the contracts and is co-sponsoring a resolution asking President Carter to do the same.

U.S. Sen. John Tower wrote the Secretary of Defense earlier this week asking that the contracts be cancelled and that the trainees be sent back to Iran. But Tower received a reply from the secretary today, saying that his suggestions had been carefully konsidered, but that such action will not be taken - at least not at this time.

A spokesman for Tower said the Defense Department's decision represents a "glaring inconsistency with other moves the administration has taken so far." The spokesman said that Tower is considering other channels in his attempts to oust the Iranian trainees.

Tower reportedly doesn't think legislative channels will provide the best vehicle for his efforts. But a resolution introduced in the House Tuesday by Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., and co-sponsored by Hance, is apparently receiving a great deal of support.

Wolff reports he has about 90 cosponsors for the resolution, which spokesmen say is an impressive number for the short amount of time since its in-

Iran had appealed to other Moslem nations for diplomatic help in its confrontation with the United States. But only Libya among the 20 Arab League delegations supported such a move. Even Iraq, one of the most anti-American Arab nations, reversed its earlier stand and opposed the Libyan demand.

As the embassy impasse entered its 12th day, CBS correspondent Randy Daniels reported from Tehran that Abolhassan Bani Sadr, Iran's foreign affairs chief, told him in an interview that "all women and blacks would be freed very soon." He did not say exactly when this would take place.

Bani Sadr had told a news conference Wednesday that those who are "innocent," without a "connection with the United States," might be freed by the weekend, Tehran Radio reported.

Today, Foreign Ministry spokesman Ibrahim Mokkala told The Associated Press women and blacks "possibly' would be freed "due to the fact that Islam has got a lot of respect for women and due to the fact we consider blacks to be oppressed people."

The State Department says six or seven American women and one black U.S. Marine are among the 62 Americans. It was not clear whether Bani Sadr, in referring to "blacks," also may have meant the 36 non-American hostages, most of whom are dark-skinned Pakistani and Indian employees of the embassy.

But Tehran Radio quoted the embasmilitants as saying: "No. Something like this will not be considered. Our conditions are known. We do not recognize any statement except our statements as broadcast by Tehran radio and television or statements we issue during embassy press conferences.

In another development, militants seized three NBC-TV newsmen at gunpoint and held them for a few hours at the U.S. Embassy before releasing them, NBC reported. The network said the news crew apparently was detained because it had filmed scenes from a nearby rooftop of militants placing sandbags on the embassy roof, in apparent prepara-

The folks out at Lubbock Manufacturing are giving it their all, but the mayor has already admitted he's a "miserable flop" at it.

Remarks ranging from "it's no big deal," to "this is a nightmare!," characterized participants in the Great American Smokeout this morning.

Sponsored for the third consecutive year by the American Cancer Society, the smokeout is an awareness campaign aimed at encouraging cigarette smokers to quit - cold turkey if need be - for at least one day.

"The idea is to get smokers to try (quitting) for a day, to get a handle on their habit," explained John Altis, director of the cancer society here.

'There is always a certain number of smokers who are ready to quit and look ing for an excuse to," Altis continued. "We're just giving them that excuse." One place where the idea of dropping

LONDON (AP) — Opposing parties at the Zimbabwe Rhodesia talks today accepted Britain's plan for a new interim government, paving the way for a peace settlement.

Britain announced the agreement after intense telephone communication throughout the night and further meetings this morning.

The 10-week-old talks arranged by Britain now can move to the final stage of working out a cease-fire in the sevenyear-old war between government and nationalist guerrillas in Zimbabwe Rhodesia that has left 20,000 dead.

ahead, the prospect of an end to years of durng new elections and a cease-fire by international ostracism and bloody conflict was in sight for the breakaway British colony of seven million blacks and

The final plan called for a British governor to rule Zimbabwe Rhodesia and supervise new elections before it is granted legal independence.

Nicholas Fenn, spokesman for British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington. told a news conference: "Lord Carrington is delighted. He pays tribute to the statesmanship of both delegations.

Agreement came after Britain Despite the difficult negotiations amended its original plan for direct rule stating that the Patriotic Front guerrillas will, like Salisbury's government troops, come under the direct authority of the proposed British governor.

George Meany, one of the American labor movement's most durable and powerful forces, bade farewell to the AFL-

Front spokesmen said this satisfied the guerrillas' fundamental objection that Britain intended to legalize the government troops by taking them over, leaving the Front's forces as outlaws.

Aides of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's black Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa maintained the change did not materially alter the substance of the British plan. which he and his biracial administraton accepted two weeks ago.

Eddison Zvobgo, militant spokesman for Front co-leader, Robert Mugabe, told reporters: "A new hope now will shine upon our people. Once the governor arrives, there will be no terrorists. We'll be legal forces.'

Guerrilla leaders had charged that the British proposals would rig new elections in favor of Muzorewa and his fivemonth-old biracial government, which is to give up its power in favor of the British governor prior to the elections.

However, British officials and members of the Patriotic Front worked late into Wednesday night and the Front dropped its opposition after modifications were made in the plan.

ation's birth and Meany's election as its president 24 years ago. Speaking from a wheelchair in a weak voice, Meany choked with emotion twice as he began his thanks to God for 'granting me more than one man's share of happiness and rewards." The convention, with delegates whistling and cheering, gave the gaunt, sternfaced labor patriach a three-minute standing ovation. He acknowledged their tribute with waves and only once broke into a brief smile. After Meany spoke, William Sidell, president of the Carpenters union, said: 'I don't think that we ever will have another man in history that will reach the plateau that President Meany has."

Meany's hand-picked successor, Secretary-Treasurer Lane Kirkland, is expected to be elected as second president of the giant organization.

Meany proclaimed that the AFL-CIO is alive and well ... and ready to do battle with any foe who would destroy it."

But he said American workers face tough times ahead. "The national economy is a mess," he said in his text.

"America's energy problems are growing ... inflation is unchecked and family budgets are wrecked; the recession is at hand."

NEW YORK (AP) - Ballerina Cynthia Gregory has taken another jump from American Ballet Theater - her third since 1967.

We were able to reach agreement on the artistic side, but Ballet Theater was unable to meet our financial requirements," he said.

Miss Gregory, 33, retired from the company in 1975 but rejoined it a year later. In November 1977 she left again, saying the company had not provided her with a suitable partner. She returned two months later.

Industry analysts are expecting a worse fourth quarter for the automaker than the third quarter, in which Ford's worldwide operations reported earnings of $103 million but its U.S. operations reported a loss of $300 million.

Analysts now predict that Ford will break even in the fourth quarter of 1979 in order to fulfill the company prediction of $1.2 billion in earnings, the newspaper said. Despite the large North American division losses, the predicted $1.2 billion in 1979 earnings would be the third-best in the carmaker's history, the company said.

"The fourth quarter is not going to be a good one, that's clear," said Allan D. Gilmour, vice-president and comptroller. "But I don't want to give the impression that this is going to continue for 12 months.

Hall is a retired army colonel who decided to capitalize on 22 years experience as a motor officer by operating a trucker school, one of only about two dozen in the country.

"The course takes four weeks, eight hours a day," he said. "Don't worry. We don't let them out on the highway until they're well along in their driving skills. Jack Dodds sees to that.'

Dodds is chief instructor. He is a patient man with a deep, calming voice. In stature, though, he is not one you would pick out as a truck driver. In the cab, he pulls the seat forward. He is 5-foot-8, weighs about 150.

of crime — submachine guns, pistols and switchblade knives — was melted into construction reinforcement rods in a state program to destroy illegal weapons, and collectors and the National Rifle Association are appalled.

More than 6,000 guns weighing about seven tons and other items seized by police were trucked to a steel plant Wednesday and dropped into the furious glow of a 3,000-degree electric furnace.

The arsenal included a tiny Derringer, a big Thompson submachine gun, sawed-off shotguns, a few thousand revolvers and automatic pistols, hundreds of knives, zip guns, a crossbow and some drug paraphernalia thrown in for good

The cache's destruction at the Bethlehem Steel Co. plant outside Harrisburg was the state Revenue Department's biggest weapons meltdown since 1971.

Some of the weapons were crude — a shotgun-sized pipe bound to a length of wood with strips of a blanket, and operated only with a sharpened piece of steel connected to a spring.

But to the dismay of some gun collectors, the arsenal also included German lugers, P-38s and an original Tommy gun, popular with both G-men and bigtime gangsters of the 1930s.

"They're ruining thousands and thousands of dollars," said Ron Shirk, a Lebanon, Pa. collector and dealer.

'A good Thompson might fetch $2,-000 if it's in good condition," he said.

"It happens all the time. It's just disgraceful," said an official of the National Rifle Association in Washington, asking not to be identified. "Collectors are just driven up the wall by it, and taxpayers should be, too. They're throwing away a lot of money."

Revenue Secretary Howard Cohen said most of the guns and knives had been used in crimes before they were confiscated and were melted to keep them from getting back into circulation.

Confiscated rifles and shotguns that could be used for hunting, he said, were spared and will be sold at state auctions. Cohen said genuine antiques were spared along with the hunting guns. "We are only getting rid of what I call weapons of violence ... They can be used in crimes, so we'll take whatever flak we get," he said.

Jim Hernjak, a Bethlehem plant official, said the melted weapons probably will wind up as reinforcement bars, or perhaps railroad rails

Ohio Parents Oppose Doorless Bathrooms

NEW LONDON, Ohio (AP) - Last year, New London High School officials removed the doors on the stalls in the girls' restrooms because of problems with vandalism and smoking. Now the outside doors are gone, too, and the "open door" policy is causing an uproar.

"I have two daughters at the school, and the youngest refuses to go in (the restoom) becase there are boys standing around outside and pushing each other in," said Joyce Fallet. "I want people to know it's not just the protection of a few students, but the protection of the morals of our children.

About 140 parents have banded together in their new cause. They are calling the action an invasion of privacy and are circulating petitions to get the doors back. Some of the 390 pupils are also circulating petitions through the northern Ohio town of about 2,300.

School administrators say the doors were removed last week because of reports of vandalism and smoking. Individual stall doors were removed last year for similar reasons, but now that the outside doors are gone, parents say there is "a pretty clear view" from the boys' restrooms still have the doors on and boys smoke as much as girls. We don't want a whole lot, just the darn outside doors," Mrs. Fallet said.

She said the parents realize the school is trying to protect its property, but they feel there are other methods that should be used.

Mrs. Fallet voiced her opinion at New London's school board meeting Monday and offered to spend a few hours monitoring the restrooms. She said she thinks other mothers would gladly do the same.

Principal Robert Wenner said at the meeting that he would put the doors back on "when and if" the volunteers

"Nowadays, they don't even build restrooms with doors because of the same problems we have had reported," said Superintendent Howard Dulmage. However, he said, having parents monitor the restrooms might solve the prob-out of the impossibly complicated SALT II issue, there's one more consideration to juggle around in our heads. In addition to visions of Backfire bombers and hidden silos, we need also to keep a NOTE TO CITY Hall: If winter must come to rid us of last summer's weeds, can spring's new crop be far behind? Better plan next year?

Statements like that and Carter's beating Iran to the punch in telling them we won't buy oil directly from them have given Americans renewed hope for their much-battered self-image.

THERE'S NO WAY Fort Worth is going to kick out the Majority Leader of the U.S. House of Representatives, but a strong challenge from the right could have beneficial effects nonetheless.

Rep. Jim Wright, who is in line to become Speaker, has been taking good care of the home folks at the federal trough. Defeating him would be about like thumping Notre Dame with the Borden County All-Stars.

Fort Worth Mayor Pro Tem Jim Bradshaw is readying to take a shot at it, anyway.

The theory seems to be that if Wright can be kept busy at home, he won't have much time to campaign for Democratic Congressional candidates over the country.

A moderate by national Demo standards,

Wright has solidified his Majority Leadership by supporting the big spending, big taxing, big deficit policies of the national party.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

If he were to barely squeak through against a Republican challenger like Bradshaw, or have the fear of losing put into him, he might save us taxpayers a little pocket change here and there.

It's a longshot that might backfire, but it's hard to see Wright becoming any more liberal because of conservative unrest back home.

WASHINGTON-Rep. W. Caldwell Butler, 54, R-Va., has a sort of "lean and hungry look," but is only half-way like Shakespeare's Cassius. The bard said of this Roman conspirator, "he thinks too much, such men are dangerous.'

But Shakespeare also said of the same man "He reads much, he is a great observer, and he looks quite through the deeds of men.'

This description fits this studious, industrious Congressman. It explains why the Virginia Sixth District, the House Judiciary Committee and the 96th Congress are lucky to have him around.

Of all whom I interview for a livelihood, Rep. Butler is among the least who are afflicted with the jealous ambition that consumed Cassius. A minority representative can never be a committee chairman and most yearn also to be senator

AMONG THE DOZENS of these climbers I have seen down the years, at least half of them fail and are lost to public life.

This can't happen to Caldwell Butler. He told me he was quite satisfied with his senior ranking which allows him time to read, think and write. When Butler finishes what he can do for his District and his country, he will be quite content to return to private life and law practice. Rare, indeeed, is such sagacious contentment in a politician. Butler offers his people the high compliment of assuming that they can think out public problems if given the information. These are some random subjects, and their treatment, that he sends home in his weekly report to those who pay his salary:

* CLEAN POLITICS: ONE way to keep our public servants honest is to make an example of the crooks. But Congressmen of both Houses hate to punish their members, and as a result there may be as many unhanged rascals under the Capitol Dome as in the Mafia.

Recently, the Senate got the goods on Herman Talmadge, but went no further than to denounce" this veteran Southern Democrat.

In October, the House had before it the Black Democrat, Charles Diggs of Michigan, convicted on 29 counts of mishandling public funds, sentenced to three years in the pen and out on bail.

A vote to "expel" Diggs failed. Butler had the nerve to vote for explusion.

* Free Lunch: Agriculture giveaway is not the act of charity, as claimed. It began as a farm subsidy, and became a dirty racket. Butler believes there are more culprits battening on Food Stamps than living on them.

He thinks the law could best be tightened by

Among the pointers the authors give you:

* IF THE IRS has examined a certain aspect of your return in either of the two previous years and there was little or no adjustment in your taxes, notify the IRS appointment clerk or examiner as soon as possible.

* It is standard IRS policy to avoid repeat ex-

When colleges required foreign languages from applicants, the college-bound student enjoyed or suffered through two or four years of foreign languages in high school. They had to take it whether they found it delight or bitter

The deficit started when colleges abandoned and relaxed the language requirement. Only 10 percent of the nation's 33,000 academic insttutions now demand previous study of a second lang-

Coccia, principal of Cranston High West in Cranston, R.I., said even President Carter has recognized that the United States is alone among nations in its neglect of the study of foreign languages

The president did what presidents frequently do about problems -he appointed a committee, the Presidential Commission on Foreign Languages, to study the problem and ways of reversing the trend.

Coccia claims all students can learn a foreign language, not just the collegebound. He said it is important to the nation and students who may use the sec-

"In this model, let's forget formal homework assignments, let's forget textbooks, let's forget structure.

"Let's concentrate on learning vocabulary and pronunciation, the necessary ingredients for speaking the language. Eventually this should lead to writ-

ll Doubts House Will Pass Hospital Cost Bill

Thomas P. O'Neill expressed pessimism today about the chances of House pasof President Carter's plan to impose standby federal controls on hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) - Speaker

But O'Neill told reporters that White House officials insisted that the House take up the controversial legislation today, anyway. They really pressured us, I'll tell you that," O'Neill told reporters. "I guess they figured they're in as good a shape as they'll ever be" on the bill.

Carter says the hospital cost bill is a cornerstone of his fight against inflation and would save more than $40 billion over the next five years.

House opponents quickly sought to torpedo the bill

Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., called putting federal controls on hospital an "asinine ... and absolutely wrong" action. He said it would only increase the red tape and bureaucracy for the Quillen said he supports an amendment that would kill the proposed federal hospital controls, and instead set up a special commission to study the reasons for raising hospital costs.

Carter supporters say the study commission would be worthless.

"This is the most important piece of anti-inflation legislation that has been in Congress in recent years," says Stuart Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic Carter, in a letter sent to all House members, claims the hospital cost proposal could save more than $40 billion over the next five years. And Vice President Walter Mondale has been telephoning members to drum up support.

Under the bill, slightly less than half of the nation's 6,000 community hospitals would be subject to the controls. The remainder have won exemptions.

The administration bill would establish guidelines for increases in hospital expenditures. Hospitals that fail to stay to mandatory federal controls on how much they could charge for certain serv-

While the administration has been pressing for passage, congressional staffs say lobbying against the measure has been equally intense.

The hospital industry set up its own voluntary program to slow rising costs two years ago and argues that those efforts are now bearing fruit and should be allowed to continue without govern-

However, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Patricia Harris and presidential inflation fighter Alfred E. Kahn say the voluntary program has been a flop, with hospital costs going up 13.3 percent in the first seven months of this year.

The administration bill attempts to keep hospitals from being penalized by general inflation by allowing them to pass through all increases in the prices of goods and services they buy.

The federal guidelines also would take into account population growth of the community, certain capital spending and increased use of the hospital. Hospitals in states that have their own hospital cost containment program would be exempt.

Extradition Waved By Suspect

Joseph Michael DePauw has agreed to waive extradition and is scheduled to return to Lubbock Tuesday to face charges of murdering a 63-year-old busi-nessman, Lubbook County Sheriff C.H. 'Choc' Blanchard said this morning.

The sheriff said deputies Ernest Rector and Jack Keeling will go to San Jose, Calif., Monday morning and return with the murder suspect Tuesday afternoon.

The 28-year-old DePauw is accused of the Oct. 5 murder of Oland Kenneth Anderson, owner of Neon Speciality Co. at 2402 Ave. J. Anderson was found dead inside his business by a brother and part-time employee of the sign company. He apparently had been beaten to

"hard-headed"

fore 1 a.m. June 16 when the Corvette in which they were riding was in collision with a car allegedly driven by Ramaldo Belasco Jr. at 22nd Street and Boston

The 17-year-old Belasco, of 3017 30th St., was charged with involuntary manslaughter in each of the deaths and is standing trial this week for Bravenec's

Koko Klub manager Cliff Pearson said the two men came into the club between 10:30 and 11 p.m. June 15, but staved only 30 minutes. He said he did not pay close attention to the two men, but assumed they probably had a drink.

Pearson added, however, that because of the short amount of time spent in the club, he did not believe either man had more than two drinks.

And he said neither Bravenec, who was principal of Rush Elementary, nor former Ballenger Elementary School principal Herring appeared intoxicated when they left.

Wolffarth Elementary teacher Ann Lee told the seven-woman, five-man jury she, too, was at Koko Klub that night and sat for a while with Bravenec. whom she had known about four years, and Herring.

She agreed with Pearson that both men did not stay at the establishment much more than half an hour. And Mrs. Lee said although she was sitting with Herring and Bravenec, she did not remember whether they were drinking. That they did have a couple of drinks was a possibility, she said, but she did not remember for sure.

Mrs. Lee also testified that neither man appeared intoxicated, either when they arrived at the club or upon leaving to meet more friends at another Lubbock restaurant and club.

Wednesday, prosecutors Travis Ware and Clint Averitte began piecing together evidence in an effort to prove Belasco was driving recklessly when he was involved in the fatal collision.

Among witnesses called to the stand as Belasco's involuntary manslaughter trial entered its first day of testimony

·A city police officer who pursued the 17-year-old defendant's Pontiac Grand Prix for several blocks before the fatal crash, at one point during the chase reaching 90 mph before he gave up the attempt to stop Belasco's car.

·A blind man who lives at a house located on the southeast corner of 22nd Street and Boston Avenue, where the two cars collided just before 1 a.m. June 16. The man said he heard no car brakes screeching immediately before hearing a loud crash

·An ambulance driver who took Belasco to the hospital for medical treatment and was told by the defendant that he had had nine beers before the wreck. Police Detective David O'Haver said Belasco's car was going 90 mph and "appeared to be gaining speed right up to the point of impact.

O'Haver had been trying to stop Belasco's speeding car, the officer said, and witnessed the collision. When he arrived at the crash site, O'Haver testified, he found Bravenec thrown from the vehicle, apparently decapitated by the impact. Herring was slumped in what was left of the front of the car. O'Haver said.

The driver's side of the Corvette was completely ripped from the body of the car, and the Grand Prix was north of the crash site on its hood, O'Haver said. The driver of the Pontiac, he added, was not in the car or the area and the vehicle smelled strongly of alcohol.

The officer said Belasco returned to the crash site with a woman while police were investigating the crash and told officers, "I'm sorry." O'Haver said the young man smelled strongly of alcohol and appeared to be intoxicated. Belasco was taken by ambuiance to Methodist Hospital for treatment.

Before ending his testimony, the offi-cer added that the Grand Prix never slowed down before the accident and the driver did not swerve in an effort to miss the Corvette.

Additional testimony concerning whether Belasco tried to avoid the collision was given by Roger Smith of 2629 22nd St., the house at the southeast corner of the intersection.

Smith, who is blind, said he and his wife had been in bed only 15 minutes when they heard "a tremendous crash." But, Smith said, he did not hear any sound - such as screeching brakes precede the loud crash.

Emergency Medical Services technician Forrest Broom said when Belasco was being taken by ambulance to the hospital for head and chest injuries, the defendant told the ambulance attendant that he had drunk nine beers.

In response to questions from defense counsel John O'Shea and Mark Hall, Broom conceded that Belasco's unsteadiness could have been caused by injuries suffered in the collision.

But, Broom told prosecutors that his experience as an EMS technician caused him to believe that Belasco's symptoms were the result of intoxication rather than injuries. Broom added that vital sign tests adminstered to Belasco during the ambulance ride also made intoxication the more probable explanation.

Lubbock Community Hospital while a new medical clinic is under construction at 52nd Street and Avenue X.

However, five residents of the area around the hospital notified the board of their opposition by letter, claiming parking already is inadequate around the facility and that the mobile home would aggravate that situation.

Renfro told board members the temporary facility is needed so doctors can be recruited while the new building is under construction

Board members approved the request, but said the mobile home must meet city codes and be moved by Aug.

Patterns/Needlework | Some Interest Rates Stop Climb

By CHET CURRIER
NEW YORK (AP) — Amid all the excitement lately over tight credit and double-digit interest rates, it has been easy to overlook one potentially important development.

Since the end of last month, some key interest rates have stopped rising for a change, and have in fact started to Whether this drop is anything more than a temporary pullback after the surge in rates during October is an open question. But it has already gone far enough to merit investors' attention.

At the end of last month, returns on short-term securities sold by the U.S. Treasury climbed to the neighborhood of 13 percent.

Since then, however, they have dropped by about three-quarters of a percentage point.

Six-month money market certificates offered by banks and savings institutions, which pay a rate equal to the stated rate on six-month Treasury bills, got as high as 12.65 percent in the last week of October. For the current week they are down to 11.945 percent.

This has helped revive the debate among financial analysts over whether interest rates are near, or even past, a peak. For several reasons, the recent decline has been met with widespread skepticism.

That's not hard to understand when you consider how often in the past year or so the experts have gotten burned with forecasts of an imminent downturn

The doubters also contend that it is premature to expect a lasting decline in interest rates until the Federal Re-

The optimists counter by pointing out that the money supply has been growing much less rapidly in recent weeks — a sign that the pinch on credit has begun to achieve its desired objective.

The problem for people trying to manage their money in such confusing times is that turning points in the various markets are almost never recognized when they occur. No green light goes on, no announcement is made, and it is often several months later before people begin to conclude, "That was the time to take action."

With a full awareness of this blind spot in our crystal ball, here is a summary of how various types of investments are likely to be affected should a decline in interest rates indeed be at hand:

SIX-MONTH MONEY MARKET CERTIFICATES: Returns on new MMCs are adjusted weekly based on the latest Treasury-bill auction. Yields on existing MMCs remain "locked in" until maturity date. After that, however, investors will have to shop for a new place to put the money at then-prevailing rates.

HOUSES AND MORTGAGES: Declining rates would presumably put new upward pressure on house prices, which have been reported flat in many areas of the country in recent months. Given assumed underlying demand for houses, however, most experts foresee no more than a modest decline of mortgage rates to, say, the 10 percent level from the current 12-14 percent until inflation is significantly reduced.

STOCKS AND BONDS: A drop in rates would presumably be a boon to serve's credit-tightening produces some evidence of subsiding inflation. both markets - in the case of stocks, particularly for issues such as utilities that are highly sensitive to interest-rate trends. Here, too, progress or the lack of it against inflation is considered a key remaining uncertainty.

MONEY-MARKET

FUNDS: Returns would move downward day-by-day with declines in interest rates. A decline might slow the boom that has expanded money-fund assets from $10 billion to nearly $4 billion since the start of the year. But experts believe rates would have to fall sharply, to well below 10 percent, before any major outflow of money occurred.

One of the selling features of money funds has been their flexibility — easy in, easy out, so that you can take advantage of other investment opportunities quickly. Many fund groups stress the feature that allows you to switch money back and forth among their various funds for example, from a group's money fund to its bond fund, when you want to lock up high yields for the long term. What isn't always stressed is the diffi-culty of picking just the right time to make such a switch. As we said at the outset, the turning point unfortunately doesn't come equipped with an alarm

rious Problems Possible For Savings Banks

And MYRON KANDEL The squeeze on savings banks in New York City - and to a lesser degree on thrift institutions in other parts of the country - has created a sticky problem for bankers and their regulators. What do you do with a savings bank (or a savings and loan) that fails because of credit market conditions?

There isn't any sign of a failure in New York, although many of the savings banks are running in the red. The cost of attracting deposits is running well ahead of the interest they can get on home mortgages, and deposits are flowing out in favor of higher-paying investments such as money market funds.

No savings bank has ever failed in the U.S. and as far as anybody can tell, none has ever even missed a dividend payment. Still, if the credit markets don't ease soon and allow interest rates to come down, the possibility of serious problems certainly exists.

Depositors, of course, wouldn't have to worry about their money. The first $40,000 in any account is insured by federal agencies. But there's still the problem of continuing service to those depositors (so they can get their money when they want it) and allaying the fears that certainly could follow the breakdown of any bank. (Some bankers have told us they've gotten calls from anxious depositors because a bank in Roslyn, Long Island, said it won't let customers with six-month savings certificates cash them in early.)

Neither the bankers nor their regulators are willing to be quoted, for fear of causing the concern they're trying to avoid. But they do agree that saving a failing savings bank would be a difficult and complicated problem.

Bank failures are nothing new, and there are many procedures in place to handle them. Even when the big Franklin National Bank went under in 1974, its customers found little difference other than a new nameplate on the door. But the present situation is different.

Where most banks fail because of bad management - which means there are others around to absorb them - the savings banks are all in the same boat. The chances are, none of them would be strong enough to take over another, at least not without broad changes in the laws and regulations covering the banks (which vary among the states). One regulator told us there are four

Presidential Hopefuls To Visit Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Presidential politics in Texas so far has been mostly the home-grown variety with Republicans John Connally and George Bush furnishing most of the action.

Times will be changing shortly, with most of the major players announced or scheduled to take the step.

Most of the active Republican candidates are expected in Austin Nov. 18 for ciation meeting where they will make their campaign appeals to 21 GOP gover-

President Jimmy Carter is expected in Texas on Dec. 8 as part of his first campaign tour after officially announce ing. Plans include a fund-raising brunch for the big givers and public reception in the municipal auditoriu

Backers of Sen. Ted Kennedy hope he will be in San Antonio the same day. Favorite sons Connally and Bush have made numerous appearances, including some very successful fund raisers, in Texas during the past year. Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, Sen. Howard Baker and some of the lesser known GOP candidates have paid Texas brief visits recently.

California Gov. Jerry Brown has made two trips to talk with Texas Democrats and Rosalvnn Carter has attracted Texas crowds twice in recent months. Some of the campaign organization, particularly for Connally and Bush, began almost a year ago, but others are now getting under way. Connally has a state campaign headquarters in Houston plus another office in Austin. Jim Campbell of Pampa is his state coordinator. Bush also has his state headquarters in Houston with Hal DeMoss, Houston, as state campaign manager. Reagan set up his state office in Austin long before his announcement. Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo is state campaign coordinator. Carter, Kennedy and Brown have not announced state headquarters or campaign managers.

Democratic and Republican leaders are split on Carter-Kennedy support with at least two of the state's nine members on the National Democratic Committee openly supporting Kennedy. They have accused State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg of being partial to Carter.

Presidential races will attract most of the attention from now until November 1980, but there are also three statewide races on the May primary ballot.

Railroad Commission contests which John Poerner is challenged by Buddy Temple and Jim Nugent faces challenger Jim Hightower are already underway. All are Democrats but Republicans promise they will field a can-

The state's newest Texas Supreme Court justice, Will Garwood, a Republican, is expected to draw Democratic opposition in the general election. Also on the general election ballot will be eight proposed constitution changes, including such firecracker is-sues as legalization of bingo, electronic banking, property tax appraisals and budgetary power of the governor.

possibilities: 1) Find one bank big enough to take it over; 2) divide it up and sell it off to several banks; 3) get around the law by declaring the bank closed and selling it to a commercial bank, or 4) just pay off the depositors. "None of them would be easy," he

The stickiest part of the problem appears to be the quarter-point more difference in the interest that depositors get in thrift institutions.

"The quarter-point would be a major impediment," one New York banker said. "Personally," I don't think it makes much sense, but the savings bankers have always fought for it. If you soid it to a commercial bank and they couldn't pay the quarter-point, a lot of deposits would just run out, so what is there left to sell? And if the commercial bank could keep paying the extra interest — say phasing it out over a period of some months - it would mean a break in the wall, and the savings bankers would

The Washington regulator agreed. "I don't know how a commercial bank would handle that," he said, "but it banks wouldn't be so interested in acquiring a savings bank at all. I guess we could push if we had to, and give them the right to pick and choose the loans they wanted to take over, but it might not be very attractive anyway.'

Some months ago, the Banco Credito in Puerto Rico failed. The bank was bro-banks in the commonwealth. The buyer of the bigger part, though, was Banco Popular, a commercial bank. That wouldn't be permitted under current law in New York and some other states.

The officials and bankers all are hoping that they won't have to figure out a plan to save a savings bank - but they admit they aren't quite sure what they would do if it comes up.

By JOHN CUNNIFF NEW YORK (AP) — Since traditional thinking so often fails to resolve old nuisances or support our favorite as-sumptions, little harm and perhaps great good can come from listening to the contrary thinkers.

Such as Vincent Giuliano, senior member of the research and consulting firm of Arthur D. Little, Inc., who declares that some of what we hear about declining American productivity might Giuliano believes that our productivity measuring devices might be outmod-ed because the market-oriented industrial economy has evolved into an information economy.

He maintains that the traditional measurements fail to take into account a transformation produced by three waves of technological change: computers, telecommunications and office automa-

Sixty-percent of the U.S. work force, he states, is now engaged in information work - gathering, processing, communicating it - but that our methodology isn't designed to measure it.

Giuliano told executives attending an information forum at Tarpon Springs, Fla. last week that technology will greatly expand office productivity and reduce what he called the information "float."

Meanwhile, economists of A. Gary Shilling & Co., another consulting firm, were questioning whether the "taxpay-ers' revolt" against government spending is really going to mean a cutback in programs.

Many Americans already have assumed that it will, and they have swayed the thinking of economists, politicians, government officials and other Americans. We are entering a fiscally conservative phase, they say.

The Shilling economists question the depth of the feeling, and they have a very convincing "fact," if that is what it is, to buttress their contention. A cur-

Accident Plagues Kennedy

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) - One of the first questions that arose when it became clear that Sen. Edward Kennedy was going to run for president was: "How is he going to handle Chappaquiddick?"

The answer appears to be "head on." The reason may be "to get it over with." In recent interviews, Kennedy has been confronted bluntly with questions about the 1969 accident in which a young woman campaign worker drowned when his car went off a bridge on Chappaquid-

Washington Window

Kennedy (1) did not change his account of now the accident happened, (2) described his own behavior in failing to report it until the next day as "irresponsible," and (3) said "I am a very different person than prior to that tragedy.' Kennedy said in some ways the accident was more traumatic to him than the assassination of his brothers John and Robert because those were things that happened beyond his control and Chappaquiddick "was a circumstance (for) which I did have a responsibility."

To those who claim there is more to the Chappaquiddick story (the theories are as varied and extreme as any that have attached themselves to the JFK assassination), Kennedy replies that his version "happens to be the way it was."

There really is nothing new in any of this. It is essentially the same response Kennedy has been making to questions about the accident for some years.

There appears to be in the Kennedy answers what political consultant Hank Parkinson calls the "a calculated repentance strategy.

In the newsletter "Campaigning Reports," Parkinson quotes former political operative Victor Gold as saying when a candidate's opponent "confesses the errors of his ways and throws himself on the mercy of the court of public opinion, anything can happen, regardless of what the polls say.

Gold said both Mayor John Lindsay of New York, Gov. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey and Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois used the mea culpa approach successfully in seeking second terms.

After 10 years, Kennedy almost surely wishes the questions about Chappaquiddick would end. But he knows better. If he is going to run for president, he is going to hear them and give answers. If he tries to cut off the questions, they will only become more frequent and hostile

But in the absence of new information about the episode, both the questions and answers eventually will cease to be news. Some people will continue to ask them hoping to catch Kennedy in an inconsistency or make him angry, but many will lose interest. That may not happen in the 1980 campaign. But while Kennedy obviously is trying to win the Democratic presidential nomination this time, his presidential possibilities would be far from ended if he lost to Carter.

So getting Chappaquiddick out of the way could be an early investment in a 1984 presidential campaign.

The University of Michigan says that nearly 62 percent of all entering freshmen in 1978 had graduated within the top 10 percent of their high-school class-

"The fact is, according to our research, that simply too many people have their feet in the government trough — 53.5 percent of the populace — for even a mild reduction in spending to go through across the board.

"Moderate cuts here and there can and will get passed as token gestures to the taxpayers, but of course this will not have any significant impact on the over-However, say the Shilling people, "the growing disillusionment of the elec-torate with big government will tend to put the brakes on proposals for expensive new government programs.

"Together with strong private-sector growth supported by favorable demo-graphics, this should produce an evolutionary - not revolutionary - reduction in government's piece of the pie."

And at Stanford University, a young economist, Michael Boskin, argues that

"Age warfare," Boskin contends, could break out in the future unless Social Security is modified. A full professor, in his early 30s, Boskin heads a Social Security study for National Bureau of Economic Research.

He explains: Current retirees receive four to five times what they contributed to Social Security, plus interest, while young workers who support the system now are unlikely to get back what they pay.

Combined with greater longevity, he

Carter Wins Battle With Sticky Tape

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's wrestling match with a line of gummy tape may earn him a new nickname - "sticky foot."

The president won, but the tape put up a good fight.

It happened last week, when the president was ushering Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch to a waiting limousine. White House aides had placed a microphone at the edge of the driveway, holding its wires down with the tape, in case Carter and Lynch wanted to comment to reporters.

But just before the men left the White House, an aide removed the microphone, placing it alongside a bush.

When Carter and Lynch approached the car, the president sought the microphone and moved it back into position. And he got one of his heavy, black shoes caught on the tape. First he gave his foot a little shake. Then a twist. A grin appeared on his face. Finally, after some more maneuvering, his foot was freed and he and the prime minister got on with their farew-

Dented Lincoln

Presidents always ride around in shiny cars that look like they just rolled out of the showroom, right? Wrong.

The president drove to the State Department the other day in a gray Lincoln that, upon close observance, bore several signs of mistreatment.

The left rear door showed three touched-up spots - the gray touch-up paint didn't quite match the original finish - and one nick that hadn't yet been

There was a foot-long scratch on the lower panel of the door, and signs that gasoline had spilled out from the filler pipe at the pump.

The car is part of the Secret Service fleet kept at a garage several blocks from the White House when not being used by the president.

A call there turned up no one who would answer the question: "Who put the dent in the Lincoln?"

Because there are no records of Carter or his car having been involved in a traffic accident, one Secret Service agent surmised that "someone must have backed into it in the garage.'

Agent Unhappy

Not all Secret Service agents aspire to protecting the president. One young agent, currently assigned to the president's detail, has asked for a transfer to protect former President Richard M.

The agent explained that, as a bachelor, he's had it with spending most of his weekends closeted at Camp David, Md., the presidential mountain retreat Carter seems to love. He's ready to move to New York City, his hometown, where Nixon recently bought an apartment.

Miller Says Workers Must Make Sacrifices

WASHINGTON (AP) - Carter administration support of a loan-guarantee program for the Chrysler Corp. will not depend on whether the new Chrysler wage contract meets anti-inflation guidelines, Treasury Secretary G. William Miller says. But he warned this week that the guarantees might not be issued until Chrysler workers make sufficient sacrifices to help their employer. His statements appeared to contradict remarks from Alfred Kahn, the president's chief inflation fighter, who suggested Saturday that if Chrysler's tentative contract with the United Auto Workers violates the guidelines, "either the loan guarantee should not be authorized" by Congress or should not be "actually extended" until the pact is in compliance.

Town Trying To Forget Tragedy

By BARBARA ROSEWICZ

HOLCOMB, Kan. (UPI) — Sightseers still wander off U.S. 50 at the bend in the road that is Holcomb and retrace the steps of two killers to the farmhouse made famous in Truman Capote's book, 'In Cold Blood "

But 20 years after the crime, the number of tourists stopping to gawk at the home of the slain Herbert Clutter family has dwindled.

Gossip at the town's only restaurant - the El Rancho - seldom turns these days to the Nov. 15, 1959, murder of the prominent wheat farmer, his wife and two teen-age children.

New families who never knew the Clutters have settled in the southwest Kansas town, whose population has quadrupled in the past two decades to 1,100. New issues confront the growing community: industrial development, plans for a new high school, window peepers.

Many of those who lived in the shadow of the Clutter tragedy have moved away or died.

Those remaining keep their memories to themselves. Some have never read the best-selling book nor seen the movie that thrust their tiny village before the eyes of the nation and bared the

'Why would I want to relive it?" asks retired farmer Charles O. Smith, who on his way home from church that Sunday morning 20 years ago passed the ambulances carrying the nearly headless bodies of the Clutters.

The night before, two ex-convicts seeking a non-existent fortune had slipped into the Clutters' buff brick house on River Valley Farm. Binding their victims hand and foot in separate rooms, the robbers searched in vain for a wall safe rumored to be full of money. There was no safe.

Wanting to leave no witnesses, they fired a 12-gauge shotgun one-by-one into the heads of Herb Clutter, 48; his wife Bonnie, 45; Nancy, 16, and Kenyon, 15.

Perry Edward Smith and Richard Eugene Hickock left with loot of less than $50 cash, a portable radio and a pair of binoculars. The confessed murderers were hanged for the crime April 14, 1965, at Kansas State Penitentiary at

Americans Continue To Protest Against Iran

By The Associated Press

While political leaders endorsed President Carter's tough approach to the impasse in Tehran, immigration officials have been rounding up Iranian students in the United States improperly.

Clements To Offer Advice

AUSTIN (UPI) - Gov. Bill Clements will go to Washington Friday along with other governors nationwide to offer his advice to the White House on the hostage situation in Iran.

Aithough Clements would not reveal specifically Wednesday what steps he thinks Carter should take to free 60 Americans being held hostage in the American embassy in Tehran, he told UPI, "It's going to get worse before it gets better

"I think the president is making a serious mistake in not advising the American public that this is indeed a very, very serious crisis.

Carter, his national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Energy Secretary Charles Duncan will meet with governors from across the nation from 11:30 a.m. until 3 p.m. Friday to discuss the Iranian crisis and implicatons of the cutoff of Iranian crude oil shipments.

'All manner of horrendous things could happen," said Clements, who as founder of the world's largest oil drilling company has had business dealings in Iran and most of the Middle East.

The Republican governor, an outspoken critic of Carter's policies on energy and many other issues, has been uncharacteristically reluctant to comment on the president's handling of the Iranian situation.

"This business is far too serious for me to be kibitzing about what our president is doing," Clements said. "It's not only unbecoming, it's not constructive to be 1,200 miles away and second guessing what the president is doing in crisis management.

Clements said he is concerned the president i not viewing the situation as a crisis, however, or stressing the seriousness of the problem to the public.

"You have to think back to the early '60s and the Cuban missile crisis, the Mayaguez incident with the seizing of that ship in the South China Sea and the Korean crisis over the shooting of the captain in the tree chopping incident," Clements said. "This situation in Iran is far more serious than all three of those

Treasury Secreatary G. William Miller said the freeze would prevent Iran

Amount Of Fortune Questioned

Iran claimed its assets totaled $12 billion, but Miller said the total is less than $6 billion. Some $1.3 billion is in U.S. government securities, making the Unit-ed States the largest single holder of Iranian government funds.

Miller said most of the rest of the money is on deposit at various banks, Including the Bank of America, Chase Manhattan and Citibank, which Wednesday used its share of the assets to pay off Iranian government loans.

U.S. banks have loans of $2.5 billion to Iran, according to George Salem, a Wall Street banking analyst with Bache Halsey Stuart Shields.

The prince's former residence, once owned by a Lubbock banker, was pur-chased by the Iranian air force for the Shah's eldest son while he received mili-tary training in Lubbock. The prince completed his training at Reese March 9 and left shortly thereafter to join his family in Morocco.

Not long after his departure, three Houston men, claiming to represent the Islamic Republic, arrived to take posse-sion of the house. # Panel Jolts Chrysler Plan

Banking Committee voted today to require the Chrysler Corp. to sell stock to its workers as part of a government plan to nurse the financially ailing automaker back to health.

On a 25-14 vote, the committee approved an amendment by Rep. Stanley Lundine, D-N.Y., to the Carter administration's proposal for $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees for Chrysler.

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill today,

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Chrysler Board Chairman Lee A. Iacocca testified that government regulation is largely to blame for his firm's economic problems.

Government regulation "is a massive cost burden which falls more heavily on Chrysler than on our two larger competitors," lacocca told the Senate Banking Committee. "It has increased our expenditures to over double the size they would normally be.

Iacocca said Chrysler spends $160 million a month to comply with federal law. He conceded that Chrysler has suffered from management shortcomings in the past, but he also singled out federal regulations dealing with air pollution and safety bags as particular problems caused by the government.

The regulations all start out as good things to do - improve safety, reduce air pollution, improve fuel economy,' he said. "The trouble is, the regulators don't know how to stop and the regulauntil something has to give."

Gerald Greenwald, excutive vice president of Chrysler, testified Tuesday that Chrysler would be "concerned" about an employee stock ownership requirement because it might dilute Chrysler stock and make it less salable.

Said Lundine: "They want $1.5 billion ... to help them get rich. I want everybody on the production line to have a chance to get rich, too.'

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee called Iacocca, Chrysler board chairman, as a witness in its hearings on

On Wednesday, the Senate committee heard from Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, who told reporters he is confident Congress will approve the bill

In his testimony, Miller repeated that he believes there is a "reasonable prospect" the loan guarantee will save Chrysler.

The House committee adopted by a 30-7 vote an amendment by Chairman Henry Reuss, D-Wis., requiring Chrysler to concentrate on making subcompact cars and other energy-savers such as rapid transit vehicles in order to get the loan guarantees. The amendment would also permit diversion of some of the $1.5 billion in guarantees to other firms making such equipment in abandoned Chrysler plants.

Lundine's amendment would cut off the guaranteed loans unless Chrysler established an employee stock option plan within six months after the bill became

Chrysler would be required to issue 10 million shares of common stock, with a value estimated by Lundine at $75 million. Employees who participated would purchase $50 million worth. The company would match this by buying $25 million worth of stock out of the guaranteed loan proceeds and turning it over to the

The amendment was one of several employee stock option plans that have been offered as part of the Chysler deal. Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has said he thinks some such plan is essential to secure Senate passage.

A bill introduced by Sen. Donald W. Riegle, D-Mich., calls for Chrysler to use a portion of the loan proceeds to buy stock and turn it over to the employees. During House Banking subcommittee action last week, Rep. John J. LaFalce, D-N.Y., offered an amendment to require employees to purchase $100 million worth of stock. This was watered down to merely require the company to offer the stock to them.

Lundine described his amendment as compromise between the Riegle and LaFalce versions.

Chrysler has said it expects to lose $1 billion this year. Members of the United Auto Workers have agreed to postpone the effective dates of wage increases they negotiated in a three-year contract which presidential inflation fighter Alfred Kahn says apparently exceeds voluntary guidelines.

Mrs. Nixon Doing Well

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) -Former President Nixon brought his wife soup for breakfast Wednesday and learned from doctors that the former first lady was "responding well" to treatment for bronchial pneuonia.

Nixon, who spent about an hour with his wife Tuesday night, stayed about 40 minutes on his second visit Wednesday morning. The former chief executive said doctors wanted Mrs. Nixon hospitalized at least a week.

King said he did not tell anyone of his plan to administer the "shock treatment" prompted by the film "Scared Straight" to anyone else because "it life as a prostitute. Also testifying this morning was KAMC-TV news director Rusty Jones, who told the three-man, three-woman misdemeanor court jury his station, Channel 28, had aired "Scared Straight" earlier this year as a public service.

Jones said station officials first previewed the film for several community leaders and the overwhelming majority agreed that the documentary should be broadcast. Several, Jones said, agreed to do promotional announcements for the film, including ayor Dirk West.

West and the crime prevention-solving organization he developed, Crime Line Inc., sponsored the local broadcast. Jones testified. Jones brought a videotape of the highly-touted documentary to court and the film, admitted into evidence by Judge J.Q. Warnick Jr., will be shown to the jury this afternoon.

The defense opened its case Wednesday afternoon by calling Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford and one of Montford's assistants to the stand.

When "Scared Straight" was aired in Lubbock, the district attorney's office was one of several agencies that recommended city youth wath the telecast.

Paulina Jacobo, chief of the district attorney's juvenile division, said shock treatment can be effective with certain personality types in correcting a juvenile offender's actions. But, she said, any kind of remedy to help juveniles must be demonstrated under certain circumstances with supervision and proper screening of the youths to be involved.

Montford told the court he recommended the viewing of "Scared Straight," but in controlled circumst-

Job Shuffle Involves Deputies

The Lubbock County Sheriff's Department reshuffled some jobs today, including moving Albert Smith from the chief deputy post to the job of jail administrator.

Cleo Rogers, former assistant chief deputy in charge of the warrants division, takes over Smith's old job, and Alton Hobbs moves from captain to assistant chief deputy.

Earl Woodward was promoted from deputy to captain and takes over as head of the warrants division.

Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard said the promotions were effective today. He said plans to reshuffle jobs began about three weeks ago when Gary McGrew turned in his resignation as administrator of the Lubbock County Jail. McGrew has accepted a job with the security division of Texas Instruments in Blanchard said he expects the changes to move smoothly, and may even "enhance the positions a little bit."

Smith's promotion means he will be in charge of the new $3.5 million county jail, which is scheduled to open the first part of next year.

Blanchard said Smith's monthly salary has been raised from $1,240 to $1,558. Rogers' monthly salary moves from $1,-042 to $1,240; Hobbs' salary increases from about $1,000 a month to $1,142 and Woodward gets a $40 raise tacked onto his monthly salary, which is about $1,-

Rogers and Smith have been with the sheriff's department since Blanchard took office in 1969. Woodward also joined the department when Blanchard was elected, but quit about two years and came back.

Hobbs has been with the sheriff's department about nine years.

The sheriff said Rogers will handle mainly administrative duties, while Hobbs will continue to be in charge of criminal investigations.

Nuclear Plant May Shift To Coal

By SCOTT MACLEOD HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The cleanup at Three Mile Island, a story fraught with technological and political uncertainties, may get an unexpected epilogue. Maybe, officials say, the nuclear plant will be converted to a coal gen-

"We're making a serious, open-mind-ed review of that," says Robert C. Ar-nold, a senior official of General Public Utilities Corp. Such a conversion to a coal-powered plant would be another in a series of nuclear firsts here.

GPU has commissioned Gilbert Associates, of Reading Pa., to determine whether Three Mile Island could be used to burn Pennsylvania coal.

It all started, of course, when the March 28 accident at Three Mile Island was declared by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to be the most serious in United States history.

Now there is the puzzle of how to mop up in the aftermath:

A million gallons of contaminated water surged out of the cooling pipes into three buildings at the nuclear station. The reactor building filled up with lethal radioactive krypton gas. The reactor itself was irreparably damaged.

Arnold, who is in charge of cleaning

"It's a carefully planned operation, with techniques that were utilized in the space program. It's an expedition," says

It will take 750 workers - scientists, engineers and laborers with buckets and sponges - four years at a cost of $400 million to eventually restore the Unit 2 reactor as a producer of 800 megawatts of electricity.

Even the first step — and evidently the simplest - was a struggle. Designers had to come up with a machine to de-contaminate 400,000 gallons of radioactive water spilled in the fuel handling and auxiliary buildings.

But when they came up with the Epicor II system, environmentalists fought, unsuccessfully in the end, to have the plan blocked for fear the cleansed water

GPU now says it plans to recycle the purified water within the Three Mile Is-land facilities for the time being. In the long run, GPU might use the water to make concrete and build a pyramid, completely non-functional, on the island.

As the first step moves ahead, plans are on the blackboard to rid the reactor containment building of about 50,000 curies of gaseous radioactive krypton-85 trapped inside. GPU has proposed it be vented into the atmosphere.

However, only the easy part is over when the decontamination is completed. That's when scientists must design an be made more risky, not less so, if American free enterprise is to become innovative once again, a panel of economists concluded at a recent Massuchusetts Institute of Technology seminar.

They said the government must make not taking risks more dangerous in the long run than being innovative.

In their formal report, they suggested the existing structure of the economy should be changed by "prohibiting corporate mergers above a certain size" in order "to avoid the reduction of risk that businesses seek by such actions."

Do we have a lot of recipes for you this week! And, for me, too. For "Jane" who wanted an "old-fashioned fudge" recipe, Mrs. Leon Fos-ter, Earth, sends the following:

OLD-FASHIONED CHOCOLATE FUDGE

3 tbsps. cocoa 2 cups sugar 1 cup canned condensed milk 1 tbsp. white corn syrup

2 tbsps. butter

Chopped pecans 1/2 to 1 cup or omit pecans as you desire. Sift cocoa and sugar into a 3-qt. heavy sauce pan. Add canned milk, corn syrup and salt. Stir until well mixed and place over direct heat. Cook with occasional stirring to a soft ball stage (235 degrees if you use a candy thermometer) or drop small amount of candy into cold water). When done, remove from heat, stir in butter and vanilla. Set pan in cold water and cool without further stirring until pan may be handled comfortably with bare hand. 2 cups apples (sliced) 1/3 cup chopped pecans 1/2 cup brown sugar (packed)

1/2 tsp. cinnamon 2 17-oz. cans yams (drained)

1/4 cup oleomargarine

2 cups miniature marshmallows Mix brown sugar, cinnamon and nuts. Mix with apples. Put yams in a casserole dish. Pour apple mixture over yams. Dot with oleomargine. Cover. Bake 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Sprinkle marshmallows on top. Brown in oven.

Mrs. E.C. Caviness, Plainview, sends the following:

SPECIAL YAMS

14 cup oleomargarine or butter 1 cup brown sugar 1/2 cup orange juice

1 tsp. orange rind

Peel and halve eight yarns lengthwise; brown in 4 cup oleomargarine or butter in skillet. Arrange sweet potatoes in 2-qt. casserole, along with butter. Add I cup brown sugar, 2 tablespoons honey, 1/2 cup orange juice and 1 teaspoon orange rind. Cover casserole and bake at 400 degrees for 45 minutes. Remove cover; bake 20 minutes longer or until tender, basting often. Makes eight servings.

While brilliant declarer play and superlative defense grab the headlines, the quiet plays that make the difference between success and failure are often overlooked. Had we not been at the table when this hand was played, East's efforts might have gone unnoticed.

South became interested in slam as soon as North raised spades. He began his probe with a quiet bid of three diamonds. North liked his hand, so he jumped to game. Now there was no denying South. He checked for aces and confidently settled in six spades when he learned that only one was

West led the queen of hearts, East won the ace and donned his thinking cap. Obviously, declarer had the king of hearts, and if he held any other heart losers, they could be ruffed in dummy. It was tempting to shift to a minor suit, but East reasoned that if declarer had any losers in those suits, there was nothing he could do with them. So East returned a trump, and in the fullness of time declarer lost a diamond trick for down one.

What's the point of this column, you ask? Look a bit closer at East's trump shift. It is a remarkable defensive play indeed, for it removes an entry to dummy before declarer has a chance to put it to use!

Observe what would have happened had East lazily returned a heart or shifted to ruffs a club high. A spade to the ten is the entry for another club ruff. Declarer crosses back to the table with the king of trumps, drawing the last trump, and ruffs another club high to set up the fifth club.

There is still a trump in dummy, and declarer can enter dummy either by ruffing the king of hearts or leading a low trump to the seven. The established club is declarer's twelfth trick.

The Lubbock Symphony has provided children's concerts to the community for the past 20 years. These concerts were given through the joint efforts of the Symphony, Allegro Music Club, and Lubbock Public Schools.

William A. Harrod, founding conductor of the Symphony, feels strongly that an opportunity for the appreciation of music should be provided early in a child's education. It is with this feeling that Harrod plans his programs for these concerts. The orchestra plays something the children will identify with and enjoy, but he also plays music from the classical background.

There will be two concerts this season. The first will be this morning for students from the sixth grades of Lubbock Public Schools and students from fourth, fifth and sixth grades from private and parochial schools and students from nine area towns.

In the past a small admission was charged to the student to help cover expenses. The concerts will be provided free to the students this year as a result of the Lubbock Cultural Affairs Council grant program developed in conjunction with the City of Lubbock through revenues generated by the Hotel-Motel Occupancy Tax. This stems from Texas Legislative passage of the "Lalor Bill" in 1977, which enables municipalities to support the arts locally with no addition-

Jim Toland, executive director of the Lubbock Cultural Affairs Council, believes "this is a positive reflection of the farsighted and innovative approaches of the symphony, the City of Lubbock and the Lubbock Independent School District in developing this quality of life for our community. ### Poor Circulation Causes Fatigue

By BEVERLY BARR

Women's News Service When you sit at a desk for long periods of time your blood does not have a chance to circulate - and poor circulation accounts for that mid-afternoon fatigue that so many officebound workers experience.

Try not to stagnate behind a desk. More important than a coffee break is an exercise break, and there's time for a dozen short ones in the course of a day. They're good for you - and good for your work.

Here are four exercises that will help anyone who sits behind a desk all day: 1. This exercise can be done either sitting in a chair or from a standing position. With head and body erect, raise your arms over your head, palms turned inward. With one arm, reach to the ceiling to a count of four. Repeat with other arm. Do this exercise as often as you like. (This is an excellent stretch exercise for torso, arms, and posture. It also stretches the lower back to help prevent

2. Sitting at your desk or standing up, place your hands on your hips, and bring your shoulders forward. Roll your shoulders up toward your ears, roll them in back of you, and return them to starting position. Repeat six times. (This is a great exercise for posture, eliminating extra inches across the back, firming ten experienced throughout shoulders and back.)

3. Sitting at your desk, push your chair away from desk. Be sure torso is erect as you place your hands on your hips, feet flat on the floor. Raise left leg, keeping it in bent position, and bring your knee in as close as you can to your stomach, then back to starting position. Repeat exercise using your right leg. Repeat six times for each leg. (Good for circulation in the legs, an easy way to strengthen muscles in abdomen and the

4. Sitting at your desk or standing up, slowly drop your head forward from an upright position. Slowly roll your head to the right, reaching toward shoulder. Slowly roll head in back of you, then slowly roll head to the left, reaching toward shoulder and slowly bring your head to an upright position. Repeat this exercise five times. (You will find this a very relaxing exercise for tired, tense neck muscles.)

5. Sitting at your desk or standing up, bend your elbows so that arms are close to your body at chest level. Then simply thrust arms forward from chest and bring them back to starting position. Repeat eight times. This will relax arms and shoulders that are tired and tense from typing and writing. It's also an easy way to strengthen chest muscles and a good way to trim inches from arms Dear Abby.

DEAR ABBY: Last summer I over-heard my clergyman talking to a young woman who is a member of his congregation. He told her it was all over be-tween them, and that if his wife hadn't been in the hospital it never would have happened. He said they should go on as ough nothing had happened.

I was so shocked I could hardly believe my ears. This minister has done much for the community and is loved and respected by all who know him. He also has a lovely wife and family.

I told my husband about it. He said we all make mistakes and that I should keep quiet because if this ever got out it might hurt the church.

Now I can't even look at that worthless man without thinking what a hypo-crite he is to preach "honor and fidelity." I would like to be able to for-

I have lost all faith in him. What should I do?

He's never more than half an hour late in getting home. Do you think he could be unfaithful to me in half an CAL'S WIFE

Four Win 1979 Lasker Awards

NEW YORK (UPI) - A crusader against blindness and three scientists cracking secrets of the brain and genes are the winners of the 1979 Albert Lasker Awards announced today by Mrs. Al-

Two winners of the prizes, given for the 34th time, are American and two English. They will share a total of $45,-000, said Mrs. Lasker, president of the Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation.

Names and achievements of those tapped for awards to be presented Friday at a New York luncheon attended by a who's who of the scientific community

- Sir John Wilson, President of the International Agency for the Prevention of Blindness, Haywards Heath, England, winner of the rarely given $15,000 Albert Lasker Special Public Service Award. Sir John, who was blinded at the age of 12, has travelled over a million miles, often unaccompanied, to organize agencies against blindness in 56 countries. Their medical teams, last year alone, performed operations that restored sight to

- Dr. Roger Wolcott Sperry, Hixon Professor of Psychology, California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif., won a $15,000 Lasker Basic Medical Research Award for advances in knowledge of how the brain works. This is expected to lead to better understanding of the normal brain, mental illness and psychosomatic disease. His findings show elther hemisphere of the brain may be dominant for higher mental function upsetting the longheld view that only one hemisphere of the brain was dominant. That theory held that the non-dominant hemisphere lacked capcity for higher mental function. - Dr. Frederick Sanger, Head of the Division of Protein and Nucleic Acid Chemistry, the Medical Research Council, Cambridge, England, won his award for devising a speeded-up technique for the sequencing of DNA molecules, the genetic material in the cells of all living things. A fragment of DNA which previously required two years to sequence can now be done in about one day. Future possibilities as a result of Dr. Sanger's work include identifying the genetcorrecting wayward genes to restore their normal pattern.

- Dr. Walter Gilbert, American Cancer Society Professor of Molecular Biology, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., won his award for creating a new technique for the rapid sequencing of DNA - chemical blueprint for all life processes. Researchers now can quickly arrive at specific knowledge of the structure of genes. They may be able eventually to establish a basic DNA defect that results in a particular genetic disease such as diabetes, and certain anemias.

Gilbert and Sanger share the $15,000 Albert Lasker Basic Medical Research award. Additional background on the achievements:

- Sperry: The right hemisphere of the brain may possess a superior capacity to comprehend relationships of space, and perhaps certain non-verbal communications, such as music. The scientist determined that the two separate seats of awareness in the two brain hemispheres arise from activity of nerve tisness is not some abstraction of its own but is a property of brain tissue in ac-

- Gilbert and Sanger: Much as computers are used to produce information speedily, so the new technique called "Rapid Sequencing of DNA" enables scientists to get quickly at the sequence of chemical components that make up the DNA molecule. Each of the trillions of DNA molecules in the body is made up of four nucleotides - chemical bases arranged in chains of varying sequences and lengths, which spell out the "letters" of a genetic "message." It is the sequence of these DNA nucleotides that determines the many chemical processes of all life forms. Gilbert and Sanger independently developed different techniques for the rapid sequencing. As result of their research, such substances for example, as growth hormone to treat dwarfism, and insulin for the treatment of diabetes will soon become available quickly, inexpensively and in quantity, scientists say. Formerly these were produced laboriously and expensively in laboratories. Research in the field called 'Recombinant DNA" has already made possible experimental beginnings for the production of human insulin and human growth hormone outside the human body.

Sir John: In two-thirds of the 42 million blind in the world, their condition is due, especially in the developing countries, to four major eye diseases trachoma, malnutrition blindness, river blindness, and cataracts. Sir John's goal and that of the International Agency for the Prevention of Blindness, is to prevent, control or eradicate these diseases - reducing by two-thirds blindness now existing.

The awards trditionally go to groups or individuals who make advances that prolong the prime of life or attack major diseases that kill or cripple.

DR. LAMB

Acne Treatment

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR.LAMB - I'm an 18year-old female and I have a very bad acne problem. I've had it now for two or three years. It's all over my back. Could this have something to do with my diet? Other than a dermatologist or drug prescription, is there any way I could get rid of it? Would zinc help?

DEAR READER - Acne, which includes pimples, blackheads and whiteheads, is caused by an overproduction of oily secretions from the skin. The substance is called sebum. The sebum may form a plug in the pores of the skin which can be white as a whitehead or the top can turn black which is a blackhead.

The black discoloration is thought to be either from skin pigment or from the effect of oxygen on the waxy plug itself. Many people make the mistake of thinking this is dirt and can be washed off. It can't. The little plug is usually just below the surface of the skin.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can Be Treated. It will give you more information about these problems and what can be done about them. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I'm afraid neither zinc nor vitamins will help you with your problem. Most dermatologists today do not believe that the diet has much to do with acne either.

About the best aid you can have is to do everything you can to prevent oily secretions to the skin. If you happen to have long hair and particularly if it's oily, you might do well to change your hairstyle.

Sun over the affected area helps in some people.

Warm moist soaks to remove the excess oil and grease two or three times a day help. You may want to use a soap that helps particularly to remove oily material.

Some people also benefit from cleansing the area with ordinary alcohol two or three times a day or at any time that the skin looks or feels oily. I think if your home project doesn't work well, you really should see a doctor and let him prescribe a skin treatment program for you. And he may wish to prescribe an antibiotic if you're having lots of pimples.

The red pustules are usually caused from the breakdown of the sebum from bacterial action. The antibiotics eliminate the bacteria and, in the course of time, significantly decrease the pustule formation.

People taking medicines to treat acne need to be careful about sun exposure. Antibiotics markedly increase the sensitivity of the skin to the sun and you can get a bad burn very easily. Retin-A, sometimes called vitamin A acid, is used to peel the skin and is good medicine but may increase the skin's sensitivity to the sun - including skin cancer over a period of time. The combination of antibiotics and skin peeling agents may create so much sensitivity that it is well to avoid the sun when taking such a combined treatment.

Leap Frog. Johnny on the Pony. Snap the Whip. Tug of War. Familiar names to familiar games, right? All part of your playground play, right?

Well, these games are not yours and yours alone. Not only did I play them when I was growing up, but most are at least hundreds and probably thousands of years old. Tug of War, for example, was apparently first played by a hill tribe in India. To find out what the fates had in store for them, one small group of tribesmen was appointed to represent the forces of evil. Another group of equal size was to fight for the good forces in nature.

The two teams faced one another from opposite banks of a river. A long leafy vine was stretched between them and you guessed it - they had a tug of

Whichever group was pulled into the water was not allowed to get out! They were forced back and left to drown

If the good forces won, the tribes felt they would be lucky the rest of the year. If the forces of evil won, this entire Indian hill tribe decided that the fates were against them, that they'd have nothing but trouble until the year's end, and so they didn't even bother to plant their crops!

How's that for child's play? Yesterday's Brain Twister: Take 20 toothpicks and make this pattern. Simple, right? Now, moving only 7 toothpicks, can you form a pair of equal-size squares and another pair of equal-size squares. Not so simple, right?

Answer: See illustration. Today's Brain Twister: If a barrel full of water weighs 15 pounds, what would you fill it with to make it weigh only 10? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

New Political Party Lures Disenchanted

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Citizens Party, a new political movement on the near left of the political spectrum, isn't naive enough to believe it will elect a president in 1980.

'We don't expect that 1980 will be the year that we take over the White House," said Jim R. McClellan, the fledgling party's national campaign committee chairman and assistant professor of history at Northern Virginia Community

'We expect to make a strong showing, however, that will go beyond 1980. We believe that 1980 will provide us with a strong foundation for the future.

The party is being formed out of what organizers believe is a growing disenchantment with the nation's two major parties, especially in response to such issues as inflation, unemployment and energy.

It hopes to include people from the environmental and anti-nuclear movements, liberals from the labor movement and the peace and disarmament movements and the small business com-

President Achieves Goal In Cabinet Shake-Up

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Three months after his Cabinet purge, President Carter has achieved a unified high dent Carter has achieved a unified high command that he hopes will forcefully promote his quest for a second term in the White House.

The midsummer shake-up that replaced half the Carter Cabinet has brought no major policy changes, but that was not its goal, Rather, the president sought to replace officials who he felt brought discord into his administration. In their place, he hoped to recruit a lineup of team players for his upcoming re-election effort.

In dozens of interviews, present and past administration officials, Democratic politicians, lobbyists and congressional sources agree that Carter has achieved this goal with his new Cabinet members.

The one note of concern, both within the White House and outside, is over the performance of Moon Landrieu at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Off to a slow start administratively, Landrieu has crossed swords with White House officials over several appointments.

But Landrieu's failure to win control over his agency is not viewed with as much alarm as was the independence of ousted secretaries Joseph Califano at Health, Education and Welfare and Rosek Adams at Transportation.

Brock Adams at Transportation.

Before the Cabinet shuffle, White House aides had collected dozens of examples of disunity that convinced the president that he had not assumed full control of the government. They saw these as a major factor in the public perception of Carter as ineffective.

Now they say they've seen an end to such antics as:

—A Health, Education and Welfare secretary letting it be known he opposed Carter's plan for a new Department of Education.

An assistant transportation secretary urging a House member to hold back votes for a Carter energy proposal in order to pressure the president into signing a highway bill.

-Treasury officials telling members of Congress that a consumer cooperative bank was not a top priority at the same time White House officials were saying that it was

"Finally, all our people are sending out consistent signals, which is essential to making the government function," said one White House official. "We can't have one person saying one thing and someone else saying another."

AMC Taking Pacer Out Of Production

DETROIT (AP) — The short, round American Motors Pacer is going the way of the Edsel and the Studebaker.

American Motors Corp. announced Monday that the last Pacer will roll off the assembly line Dec. 3 to make way for increased production of its better-selling new four-wheel drive cars. AMC said it would boost production of the four-wheel drive Eagle models at its Kenosha, Wis., assembly plant from 250 to 400 a day. Spokesman John Pichurski said some new employees would be hired, but could give no figures.

The Pacer was introduced in 1975, and has fallen in demand since.

CHILD DIES IN FIRE

PAULSBORO, N.J. (AP) — A fire in a two-story frame house Tuesday killed a 5-year-old girl who wandered back to her smoky bedroom as her mother tried to evacuate the family from their blazing home. competition between Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy: "You're not hearing all the squabbling that went before or the horror stories."

And there are examples of sure-handed political moves and of once-stalled legislation beginning to move through Congress:

—A major bill to curb inflation in hospital costs was recently approved by a House subcommittee that buried it last year and a welfare reform measure being pushed by the administration passed the House recently.

-Energy Secretary Charles Duncan journeyed to New England to discuss heating oil problems with groups that "As far as I'm concerned, my relations with the White House staff are fine," Landreu said. And Miller said, "Any differences we had are behind us."

Other friends worried about Landrieu's grip on his own schedule. Last month, Phil Wise, Carter's appointments secretary, arranged a session with Landrieu for Mayor Jake Godbold of Jacksonille, Fla. Godbold had helped Carter

Internally, one energy official gave

"Duncan walked into the worst of all worlds," said one White House source. "He had the most divisive issue around and a department with no political base. Now we have someone who enjoys the political process and knows how you build constituencies to support policy." HEALTH, EDUCATION AND WELFARE

As for the increased success in Congress, one White House aide said, "A lot of people on the Hill were angry at Joe, because he was strident and bruised egos, but we've been hearing very good things about Pat up there." Still, a former Califano aide said that two key congressmen courted by Califano had com-

The promotion of Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti to succeed Griffin Bell was so long in the works that this department has undergone the fewest changes.

Civiletti received some public criticism for accompanying Carter on a trip to an Italian neighborhood in the new attorney general's hometown, Baltimore. Critics argued it was merely a quasi-political trip to promote administration accomplishments, although Carter has pledged to keep the department out of realities.

—At a time when Kennedy was criticizing administration efforts to aid refugees, new HEW Secretary Patricia Harris refused to accept the bureaucracy's word that it would take eight months to get aid to school districts swamped with refugees. She told her agency to get the aid out in 45 to 60 days.

Even several administration officials who privately support Kennedy were unable to cite major disruptions in the government or missed political opportuni-

But, one Kennedy sympathizer still in the administration sees a risk stemming from the Cabinet purge. "They set several key agencies adrift at the worst possible time. Any incumbent's best re-election campaign is based on running the government well and letting people know that," said the official, who like most of those willing to talk, asked for anonymity.

This official wondered whether new secretaries could know their departments well enough to spot the best opportunities for using federal grant programs to political advantage.

Now Carter himself is moving to be sure those opportunities won't be missed. At a White House dinner last week, Cabinet members were told they would be assigned states in which they would appear on behalf of Carter. They were also directed to assure that their political appointees will back Carter whole-heartedly, implying that Kennedy sympathizers should be dismissed.

Here is a rundown by department of the impact of the shifts:

Engineer Predicts Full Automation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Swiss engineer forecasts that the long-heralded "automatic factory" - complete with robots doing the dirty work for humans - will be common within the glass industry by the year 2000.

Technological, social, environmental, Higher Pay Increase Sought For Military

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Joint Chiefs of Staff say a recent 7 percent pay increase is not enough to keep essential military personnel in the armed forces.

In a memorandum to Defense Secretary Harold Brown last week, the chiefs said disillusionment with military pay is the main reason skilled enlisted personnel and junior officers leave the all-volunteer military. They said civilian policy-makers must pay higher salaries or settle for diminished military readiness. While they indicated the 7 percent pay increase would not be adequate, the chiefs did not specify another figure, saying only that military salaries must keep pace with inflation.

The first recorded dynasty of China was the Hsia, from about 200 B.C. to regulatory, economic and conservation pressures are combining to acceleate its development, says Michel Cornaz.

He told a recent American Management Association seminar he believes the automatic plant will come first to the glass bottle-making industry because its straight-line production is ideal for automation and process control.

Cornaz described a plant operating at production efficiencies of 95 percent while using up to 50 percent less energy than today. It would also use a substantial amount of recycled glass as raw material. Each production line would be capable of producing 700 bottles per minute, each stronger and lighter than those being produced today.

The robots will replace worn or grammed computer instructions,' plained Cornaz, an engineer with Emhart Corp. "Twenty people per produc-tion line will keep an eye on things, and they will be doing this in a plant environment free of dust, furnes, waste oil and oppressive heat."

Other robots in the warehouse, Cornaz said, will follow instructions from the computers for the loading and shipment of customers' orders.

Steel Union Report Advocates Restraint In Wage Demands

By JOHN CUNNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the most effective restraints on inflation is selfsacrifice, or the willingness of individuals and groups to live with less. It's guaranteed to cut into inflation.

But, as it is with so many of the solutions, the difficulties begin with the exe-

Doing with less might sound good to people who feel the need for self-discip-line. But who goes first? The White House? Congress? Business? Labor? Farmers? Consumers? Landlords or ten-ants, big business or small?

Perhaps the United Steelworkers of America. At least that union's wage poli-cy committee has issued a document that takes a more comprehensive view of conditions than is customary in unionmanagement relations.

The 36-page report finds that wage and benefit levels won by the union in earlier contracts have put some employers "at a serious competitive disadvan-tage" and "cost literally many thou-sands" of jobs.

The report doesn't advocate that negotiators go easy on the steel companies, but it does suggest that the union restrict the rate of wage increases at some plants to permit them to remain in busi-A small beginning, and maybe one

ales Of Bottled Water Show Dramatic Jump

NEW YORK (UPI) - Three years ago, you could take a drink of water and not have to get into a big discussion about it.

No more. Drink a glass of H2O and you have to explain how you expect to survive on tap water, discourse on the attributes of your bottled brand or listen to someone else rant about his brand.

Drenched in water ads and commercials in which basic fact gets spiked with hype and hoopla, almost everyone has acquired a viewpoint. It's all Buce Nevins' fault

He got Perrier to ante up $2 million for a little 1977 advertising campaign. He pitched that sophisticates could get status by ordering water in the poshest places. No 2 cents plain, though - $2 sparkling.

The health-and-exercise fad was eranking up. It was okay to swear off alcohol, sugar and saccharin so long as you did it gracefully. Guzzling water was a spiffy way - what watermen like to call a "socially acceptable alternative."

One guess is there are in the United States 700 peddlers of H20 bottled one way or another. One innovator got into a Manhattan department store with $2.50 bottles advertised as pure New York Ci-

Some of the watermen have been around a few years. Poland Spring has been bottling and selling the stuff in Maine since 1793; Saratoga in New York since 1872; Mountain Vlley in Hot Springs, Ark., 1873.

Watermen - they prefer to be called purveyors of mineral water, sparkling or otherwise - catch on quick. They saw Perrier go from less than $1 million in U.S. sales in 1976 to $30 million in '78, with '79 expected to peg in at $120 million. Nevins' ad budget, incidentally, also is up — to $7 million this year.

Thar's gold in that thar water, you might say. John Scott, head of Mountain Valley, figures all bottled water sales in the U.S. will climb $50 million to hit $290 million this year, $500 million by Scott claims his spring water - not sparkling - is the only one with full national distribution. But the sparklers are getting there fast, Perrier in particular.

So you can't turn on a radio or TV without getting a water pitch. Some might call it the great water war. The biggest fight is over sparkle.

Talk to Bill White, 40, a Colorado man who, by way of Yale and the Bank of Aspen, got control of Great Western United Corp. for a time, tried his hand at politics, then bought out Saratoga Vi-chy, renaming it Saratoga Natural Sparkling Mineral Water.

"Don't call it Saratoga Vichy. When I got it, they were mixing in salt and bi-carbonate and couldn't figure why their market was declining. Someone said it tasted like ocean water with Alka Seltzer

"Now, ours is a truly natural spar-kling water," he said. "When we say natural carbonation, we mean a product in which all the water and all the carbon dioxide are issued from the same source. Every mineral water company around is making a whole bunch of claims.

"Poland buys bubbles from a well in Colorado, tank trucks it to Maine and in-

"Perrier says its water is natural and they're selling the world 120 million cases of it. They must have hit one of the world's largest wells.'

About the same time White took over Saratoga in 1977, Paul den Haene, a Las Vegas soft drink (7-Up, Canada Dry) distributor, bought Poland Spring and hired Mike Schott, Diet Pepsi's marketing manager, to push his product. They are not the only soft drink men who've hopped on the water wagon, incidental-

"Natural is natural," says Schott.

"Sure we bring our CO2 from Colorado. We disclose we are adding it. Perrier, when pressed on the issue, does state that they add natural carbonation, too."

Not for a minute does Perrier, represented here by Great Waters of France, Inc., want to get into this.

Adding 25 new U.S. markets to the 26 already entered, coming close to garner-ing a whole 1 percent of the national soft drink market, Perrier's spokeswoman says, "We do not want to be involved at this time with any competitive stories."

But about Perrier's naturalness, Jennifer Walker does say, "As we claim, Perrier is 100 percent naturally carbonated. It is carbonated when it comes out of the ground. But by French law, we must maintain a certain level of carbonation. Some carbonation is dispersed at the surface and before the surface. So we tap the carbonation in the well below ground and augment it with its own carbonation at the surface." She says the law is intended to maintain the quality of the water decreed by Napoleon III in 1863 "for the good of "We," says Miss Walker, "are maintaining the integrity of history.' So much for sparkle.

'Dinosaur Jim' Finds Remains Of Monster

By DEBORAH FRAZIER

DRY MESA CREEK, Colo. (UPI) -Dinosaurs, the immense and lumbering reptiles able to enchant youngsters despite 65 million years of extinction, have dominated the dreams of Dr. James A. Jensen for half a century.

So Jensen's summer days are spent in a remote section of southwest Colorado, unearthing the remnants of the bulky creatures. His reward - the largest dinosaur bones ever found.

"I still dream about dinosaurs, but mostly just about finding bones now," said Jensen, 64, who has hauled 100 tons of mineral-marbled bones back to Brigham Young University in five seasons at the site.

The highlight of the 1979 season was a 9-foot scapula or shoulder blade from a creature Jensen's whimsically dubbed 'ultrasaurus." He said the beast was 50 to 60 feet tall and weighed about 80 tons, surpassing in girth all previous finds.

To children enamoured with prehistoric reptiles, Jensen is simply "Dinosaur Jim." They send him letters by the hundreds, enclosing allowance dollars to further his work.

MONSTER BEANSTALK

CHESTER, England (AP) - Headscratching horticulturalists, noting that runner-bean plants "usually grow to about 13 feet at most," are at a loss to explain how young Calvin Breckon managed to coax his to 30 feet. "It's a nice, big plant," muses Breckon, "but I don't

To academics, the self-educated digger of ancient bones can be a formulator of disturbing theories. But Jensen's chosen title is vertebrate paleontologist, which means he specializes in a branch of geology that deals with the prehistoric forms of life that had backbones. Or put simply, Jensen, as curator of BYU's Paleontology Research Laboratory, is a digger of dinosaur bones. The vocation has taken him to Africa, Antarctica and South America.

An uneven red dirt road leads to the excavation site, a 120-yard quarry lodged on the edge of the Uncompangre plateau's Escalante Canyon, a furrow in the ore-red earth. The site is a rare surfacing of the Morrison formation, a pastel-tinged layer of sandstone that was part of the earth's surface 140 million years ago duing a period known as the Jurassic, or the era of the super-dinosaurs. The spot, discovered by a pair of rock hounds who knew a good bone, is a mother lode of prehistoric bones, although time has replaced the bone fiber with minerals.

"You shouldn't go skiing to get in shape; the idea is to get in shape before you ski," said Jens Husted, senior memper of the Professional Ski Instructors ssociation (PSIA) demonstration team.

Many skiers are active people the ear round, Husted points out, and misakenly think the running, swimming to prepare for the season.

Running and other forms of eardiovascular exercise are important ways to build stamina and improve coordination and circulation, qualities needed for skiing, Husted notes. However, he adds, skiing calls for sustained and repetitive activity in the knees, thighs, hips and ankles. Certain stretching exercises can help limber up the body to meet this special kind of physical stress.

Surgery, New Drug Aid 'Blue Babies'

NEW YORK (AP) - Improved surgery and an unusual, experimental drug have helped double the survival rate for newborn babies with some severe heart defects, a new report shows.

"Details of the report were being presented by a group of doctors this week at an American Heart Association news conference in Anaheim, Calif.

The report involves 492 infants treated with a drug called protaglandin E1 (PGE1) before surgery for congenital heart problems.

Dr. Alan B. Lewis of the University of Southern California, one member of the group, said in a telephone interview this week the drug brought "dramatic improvement" to some children - especially those known as cyanotic infants, or "blue babies."

These are children born with a defect that impedes blood flow to the lungs. Their oxygen-poor blood has a deep blue

"This doesn't eliminate the need for surgery. But it allows more oxygen in the blood at the time of surgery, so the child has a better chance," said Dr. Michael D. Freed, a cardiologist at Children's Medical Center in Boston and also a member of the group.

Of 385 cyanotic infants studied, Lewis said, 73 percent survived heart surgery after PGE1 treatment, compared to an average of about 50 percent survival for similar children five years ago. But he said part of that improvement was due to refinements in surgery since the drug was first developed in 1976.

The survival rate among non-cyanotic infants was only 41 percent, Lewis said, due mainly to the fact that these infants were suffering from more serious heart problems.

The number of infants who might be helped by PGE1 is small - probably no more than 1,200 a year, according to Upjohn Co., the manufacturer. And it's still considered an experimental drug by the Food and Drug Administration.

But for those babies who need it, PGE1 is a way to "buy precious time" so they won't need surgery immediately after birth but can wait a few days until their condition has stabilized, Lewis said.

blood to bypass the inactive lungs while the child is in the womb. But in infants where the lung artery is blocked — a common cause of "blue bables" — keeping it open after birth is the only way to keep the baby alive.

The discovery that prostaglandins regulate the ductus has led to another development in treating the newborn.

Dr. William Friedman, chairman of pediatrics at UCLA, says in the current issue of the magazine Drug Therapy that a prostaglandin blocker known as indomethacin can be used to close the ductus when it stays open too long.

Friedman said this problem afflicts from 15 percent to 35 percent of premature infants under four pounds. Standard treatment in the past has been to open up the chest and sew the hole shut, he

The Cleveland Clinic doctors said the testing resulted from a theory that many infants who suffer episodes of severe breathing stoppages during sleep subsequently become crib death victims.

Studies have shown that many "near miss" babies those revived by vigorous stimulation or mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, had certain abnormalities in their brainstems, doctors said.

Storytellers Making Comeback

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Once upon a time, people told each other stories.

Some of the stories taught lessons on how people should get along with each other, like Bible stories before there was a Bible. They helped explain things peo-ple did not understand back then, like thunder and lightning. Or life and death.

All stories were entertaining, but some were especially fun. These were the stories about princess and princesses, witches, trolls, dragons, giants, flying carpets, evil spells and enchanted king-

For these, you see, were the days of the old magic.

But over the years, there came to be a new kind of magic.

This was the magic of books and newspapers and radio and television. People did not need the old storytellers to come around telling the old stories.

Oh, some people still liked stories, especially children. But there were only a few storytellers left to tell them.

Then one day, actually only a few years ago, young mothers and fathers began telling stories to their little child-ren. They told the stories they had read or heard when they were little.

Of course, the children liked the stories. And the parents found that they liked them, too. Some of them found that they liked telling stories at night more than watching TV

Some parents liked telling stories so much that they began telling them to each other. They began forming little groups to tell and listen to stories.

In New York City nowadays, these young storytellers are people like Laura Simms, a vivacious young woman who performs before live audiences. Or Robert Rodriguez, who is blind, like the ancient Greek poet Homer. He tells stories over the radio, as Homer probably would if he were alive today.

There are also new storytellers like Nancy Shimmel, who roams the country in her white van, "Moby Jane," telling tales of uppity women in folklore.

The few old storytellers like Jane

Farwell of Ridgeway, Wis., are very happy about all the new young storytell-

"So many young people are enthused about reviving storytelling as a lost art," says Miss Farwell, who has been teaching folklore for 35 years.

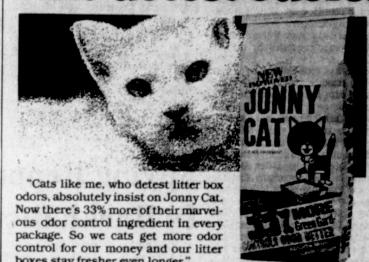

Two of these young storytellers, Reid Miller, 29, and Mark Wagler, 35, work mostly in and around Madison. They tell stories in schools, libraries, churches, hospitals, nursing homes and just about everywhere they can. "I'll tell a story whenever I'm asked, whether I'm paid or not," says Miller, who was raised on a steady diet of Pecos Bill in his native Oklahoma and later on voodoo swamp stories when his family moved to southern Louisiana. Wagler, who has a Wisconsin Humanities Council grant to travel the state collecting folklore for a planned anthology, also has worked at in-service training seminars to help teachers develop storytelling techniques.

Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach says he'd invest that problematical $1,000 in "real estate."

Ruben Bonilla, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, says he would "establish a $1,000 award in memory of my father, then award that to a migrant student."

Despite those diverse suggestions, financial experts say the trend seems to be toward investments in tangible assets, such as gold and silver bullion, rare coins, money market certificates and stocks and bonds.

Davis, who was tried for the second time for the alleged attempted contract slaying of his divorce judge, says several things appreciate faster than inflation.

"Land will do that, as well as rare stamps and coins that collectors are interested in. Those things don't ever go down, contrary to the stock market and gold. Land doesn't normally fluctuate, if you don't pay too much for it. If all I had was $1,000, I wouldn't put it into anything that would fluctuate.'

Davis adds that he doesn't "fool around with the stock market or those securities that the public is permitted to get involved in.'

Clements, who made his fortune in the oil business, says that if he had $1,-000 to invest he would put it in commercial paper. "Right now, with the general economy uncertainty, that's as safe an investment with as high a yield as you can get." the governor said.

Clements is right, according to Bill Gall, senior vice president for marketing and public affairs for Dallas' Republic National Bank.

Gall says 30-day commercial paper is paying about 13 percent interest. Commercial paper, Gall says, is a short-term negotiable promissory note issued in fairly large denominations by business-"It represents a major short-term investment alternative that competes with CDs (certificates of deposit), short-term bonds and this type of thing," Gall says. He added that businesses buy money through a bank as an investor. The businesses pay the banks 11 percent interest. They will make more on an investment than they will pay us," he said.

Another popular type of investment a money market certificate. Mrs. Cockrell would make this type of investment with her $1,000.

Money market certificates cost a minimum of $10,000. Interest on a sixmonth certificate is in excess of 12 per-

Mike Simons, manager of the Dallas Gold and Silver Exchange, says transactions in gold and silver "definitely" have gone up, especially with the skyrocketing price of gold on the world market. We are doing a lot of business," Simons said. "We are awfully busy, probably because of inflation."

But Harry Denson, an employee of Merrill Lynch in Dallas, says some stocks continue to sell well.

'Oil, energy, chemical and drug stocks have been the groups that have performed the best. People are very sensitive to energy. They see gasoline going up and have a personal involveme with everyday stocks. And people feel like the drug business is growing.

He adds, "The small investor has fewer opportunities than the larger investor. But right now, there is some proposed legislation that would give the short-term investor more opportunity.

Selma Chief Acquitted Of DWI

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) - The police chief of Selma, the San Antonio suburb known as "The Valley of the Bears" for its notorious reputation as a speed trap, has been acquitted of drunken driving charges.

A six-person jury deliberated about an hour Wednesday before returning the verdict for Tom Holland, 29, who is also the town's city manager.

The trial was moved here on a change of venue requested by the de-

Holland was arrested last Dec. 7 in Live Oak, another suburb adjacent to Selma and also known as an Interstate 35 speed trap.

Holland faced a maximum sentence of two years in prison and a $500 fine had he been convicted of the charges.

Defense attorneys Jimmy Parks and State Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio, contended in final arguments that the arrest was based on bitter jealousy and rivalry between the officers and the two suburbs north of San Antonio.

Former Live Oak police officer Gary Selman and reserve officer James Schriber, the prosecution's key witnesses, testified Tuesday that they arrested Holland after they observed his car weaving from lane to lane.

Selman testified that Holland was driving 40 miles per hour in a 20 mph zone and had narrowly missed collision with a van. His breath smelled of alcohol and his eyes were red and "glassy," the two officers said.

Selman also told the jury that he found nine full cans of beer, a bottle half full of bourbon and a half-filled glass of whiskey in Holland's late model car.

But Holland, testifying in his own defense, said he was in complete control of the car, adding that the arresting officers denied his request for a blood-alcohol test to determine whether he was in-

The police chief claimed that he refused to take a breathalyzer test because such tests "can be manipulated.

Holland testified that he had consumed only four bottles of beer over a three-hour period while playing pool at his home with two friends.

Retired U.S. Army Lt. Col. Harrison Stewart and Robert Sellars both testified that Holland was sober and capable of safely operating an automobile when they last saw him 15 minutes before his

Prison Sentence until the attempted capital murder case Upheld By Appeals Court

AUSTIN - A two-year sentence given a Harris County man convicted on a reduced charge of aggravated assault against a police officer has been upheld by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The ruling Wednesday involved Raymond Williams, who originally was indicted for attempted capital murder of a police officer. The charges were reduced because there was some question about whether he fired at the policeman or only pointed his pistol at the officer.

The court also reversed the threeyear probated sentence of Scurry County oil driller Pat N. Walker and ordered him acquitted on theft charges on grounds the scrap yard owner who accused him of stealing 6,000 pounds of metal failed to make it clear he would not sell on credit

Walker said he had a purchase agreement with the scrap yard owner, Erwin Young, allowing him to pick up any metal he needed and pay for it later.

Young denied making such an agree-

In other cases the appeals court:

Reversed a life sentence assessed Charles Douglas Oliver of Wichita County for theft. Only one of the businessmen Oliver was accused of stealing pistols from could positively identify him, the court said. - Rejected the appeal of a former employee of the Webb County tax collector who was fined $5,000 and sentenced to five years probation for tampering with auto tax receipts. The court said there was sufficient evidence Irene Perez withheld tax receipts records that should have been sent to the state comptroller. Auditors found 2,395 receipt slips with an estimated value of $250,000 missing in a 1977 check of Webb County tax records.

- Ordered new trials in 11 forgery cases because prosecutors in Houston, Austin and San Antonio failed to allege in the indictments that the forgeries were done without the consent of the named individuals.

The court ordered all 11 defendants released from jail and retried. Defendants were Frances Carr of Travis County. Joe Hernandez of Bexar County, and John Davis Teamer, Elbert Floyd III, James E. Spencer, Richard Norris Shelby, Isiah Carl Green, Yvonne Marie Taylor, L. J. Nevels, Johnnie Walker and Fayrene Wright of Harris County.

Charges Dropped

FORT WORTH (AP) - District Judge Tom Cave has dropped 21/2-year-old contempt charges against defense attorneys Richard "Racehorse" Haynes and Thil Burleson.

The attorneys, who have defended Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis on various criminal charges the last three years, were cited by Cave April 21, 1977, during Davis' first trial on capital murder charges.

Davis, 46, later was acquitted on the murder charge by an Amarillo jury hearing the case on a change of venue.

Prosecutors first attempted to try the case in Fort Worth, but a mistrial was declared during jury selection because of juror misconduct.

It was during that first trial that Cave cited the attorneys for contempt. He said an unsigned document, purportedly

Poll Reveals Changing Trends In American View On Abortion

pared for the Planned Parenthood Federation of America reveals that Americans are becoming less staunch in their opinions on abortion to the point that 90 percent now favor abortion under some circumstances.

People are beginning to realize this is not a one-dimensional issue," said Dr. Michael Rappeport, who conducted the survey along with Patricia Labaw. "There are circumstances where they would approve of abortion.

The survey, presented Wednesday at a session of Planned Parenthood's annual meeting, also revealed 80 percent of those qualified favored sex education in schools for students under the age of

The survey included 1,500 adults living in the 48 contiguous states who were reached by telephone.

Rappeport said the study was the first he has seen that goes beyond asking for a simple yes or no response on the issue of abortion. He said the subject could not be reduced to such simple

"If we simply asked people do you favor abortion, yes or no, we'd get about the same 60 percent response in favor that others have received," Rappeport eight percent of the population would be opposed to abortion under any circumstances with the other two percent

"We are pleased that public opinion suggests the aims of our organization, which include providing information about contraception, supporting sex education in schools and providing birth control counseling and abortion services," said Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood

The survey asked for responses ranging from "agree strongly" to "no opined to abortion.

Asked for an opinion to the statement "I don't really approve of abortion, but I don't think I should tell other people what they should do," 45 percent answered "agree strongly."

'Most people are not willing to make absolute judgments about abortion,' Miss Wattleton said. "They realize that options must be available, and that outlawing legal abortion is contrary to popular convictions that moral choices are essentially private choices which should not be ruled by public law."

But American Telephone & Telegraph Co. has received some unusually rough treatment on Wall Street lately. AT&T shares, trading last week between 52 and 53, were down almost 20 percent from the 1979 high of 64% they reached in the early days of the year.

Even at its current depressed levels, some analysts are decidedly unenthusiastic about the immediate prospects

The Value Line Investment Survey, which regularly ranks a long list of stocks for their market prospects over the next 12 months, early this month assigned it a 5 - its lowest rating.

1980 could be a tough year for AT& T," the investment advisory service said in its quarterly report on the company.

One problem facing the company, according to Value Line, stems from its own prosperity in recent years. With its revenues growing sharply, the company was unable to make much of a case with its regulators for substantial rate in-

"The point is," Value Line said. "that as the recession bites and revenue growth slows - as it shows signs of hikes can begin to flow again, and it is within this time gap that profits will

The firm projects that AT&T earnings will decline from an estimated $5.36 billion, or $7.95 a share, in 1979 to about $5.15, or $7.35 a share, next year.

Not everyone is quite so pessimistic about the company's near-term pros-pects. Harry Edelson, an analyst who follows AT&T for the brokerage firm of Drexel Burnham Lambert, believes earnings will probably be "flat" for the next 12-16 months, and gives the stock a "neutral" rating.

"Telephone revenue growth has been phenomenal," he said. "Now we're just seeing the first signs of a cyclical down-

Such a slowdown would be consistent with the widespread belief that the overall economy is heading into a recession or at least a slowdown, he noted. "The telephone industry is almost a coincident indicator of the economy."

But with its decline in recent months, Edelson argued, the stock has already gone a considerable way toward taking this prospect into account.

AT&T shares now are selling well below their book value, or theoretical worth should the company be liquidated, which was calculated recently by Value Line at more than $61 a share.

has sold at between .7 of book value and 1.3 times book. "It is now dropping near the low end of that range," he said.

Another important influence on the stock's recent showing has been the surge of interest rates to record levels. AT&T shares are considered highly sen-

First of all, rising rates increase the company's borrowing costs. Secondly, they increase the yields available on interest-bearing investments like bonds that compete with high-yielding stocks like AT&T for the favor of income-seek-

AT&T common, which has raised its dividend every year since 1971, recently yielded about 9.5 percent — an imposing figure by normal standards, but less impressive when it is compared to today's yields of 12 percent or better on such other top-grade investments as Treasury

"What happens with interest rates will probably be the key factor in the future of AT&T's stock price," Edelson said. "When interest rates peak, we would expect that AT&T will start to look very attractive to a lot of investors."

World Radio Meet Steps Up Schedule

World Radio Conference has moved into a stepped-up schedule of day-and-night sessions, seven days a week, after falling way behind schedule in drawing up new global radio regulations for the coming

After seven weeks of talks with only three more weeks left, the 1,900 delegates from 150 nations had completed just 220 pages of a 1,000-page final docu-

"And we haven't even started tackling the potentially explosive issues," one U.S. delegate said.

But officials at the International Telecommunications Union, the U.N. agency which convenes the World Radio Conference every 20 years, said the final agreement should be completed more or

"Everyone wants to get away by the scheduled closing date of Nov. 30, although there may be a slippage of just one or two days," ITU spokesman Rene Fontaine said.

The object of the conference is to revise international regulations allotting specific radio frequency bands to the various radio services.

It does not parcel out radio frequencies to individual nations.

In the seven weeks of talks so far, delegates managed to avoid political arguments. Work completed so far involved technical and mainly noncontroversial matters such as the phrasing of international permits for radio operators.

Among the possibly sticky issues now facing the conference is a demand by Third World countries - many of which did not even exist when the last confer-

The United States and other advanced nations oppose putting aside satellite communications frequencies for developing nations.

The U.S. delegation made it clear ahead of the debate that it believes this would be a waste of the global radio spectrum. It suggests that while satellite frequencies could be reserved, they should be used by others until the technically less-advanced nations have the capability to use them.

Another issue that may come up is a Third World idea that some of the frequencies used by the major powers for military communications be allotted instead to civilian telegraph and radio services of developing states.

There appeared to be a general feeling within the confernce that, despite the press for change, the final document will closely resemble the international radio regulations drawn up 20 years ago.

Delegates accepted a proposal that the various working groups and the full plenary hold morning, afternoon and evening sessions inc and Sundays.

CIVILIAN POLICE PROPOSED ROME (AP) - The Cabinet on Tuesday approved a bill that would revamp Italy's police corps and give it civilian status after 33 years of military domination. The measure now heads to Parliament for debate and vote, Under the measure, the Public Security Corps would become the State Police, and members would be allowed to form unions, although the bill forbids strikes or affiliation with political parties. The bill will not affect the Carabinieri and the Customs Police, both organized as military structures.

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) - No matter how it's sliced, "turkey ham" is turkey, not ham, and the turkey industry should note that fact, the nation's hog producers said in a federal suit.

Turkey is turkey and ham is ham and that's that," said George Hamilton, president of the Smithfield Packing Co., Inc., a Virginia ham producer.

Smithfield, five other pork-producing firms and two national associations filed suit in U.S. District Court in Norfolk last week in an effort to stop the turkey industry from using the label "turkey

The ham producers said the term confuses the public and falsely conjures the image of a bizarre hybrid with feathers and a snout that roots in the mud while gobbling.

Turkey producers maintain the word 'ham" is a generic term and the pork industry cannot claim it exclusively.

Mexican Beetle Part Of Pesticide Study

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sometimes it may seem a bit forward of government scientists to investigate the sex habits of insects in hopes of finding ways to control destructive crop pests.

The goal, of course, is to come up with "natural" or biological killers so farmers do not have to rely so much on hazardous and costly chemical pesti-

This time it's the Mexican bean beetle. The experiment involves what the Agriculture Department delicately describes as "a social disease" spread by amorous beetles

"The social disease is actually a parasitic mite that lives on the beetle's bouy," a department report said this

"One hundred times smaller than the beetle, the mite feeds on the undersides of its host's wings and waits for an opportunity to crawl into another beetle. That chance arrives when the beetles mate.

Consequently, the mating process is "an excellent dispersal system" for passing the deadly miteson to othr beetles, th report aid.

Mexcan bean beetles were described as "the worst insect pest of bean crops" in the United States, including soybeans, limas and snapbeans.

The tiny parasitic mite, however, does not occur naturally in this country and was imported for study from Central America, where Agriculture Department entomologist Floyd Smith observed that "in fields where the beetles were not destructive, close to 100 percent of the bean beetles were infested with the mites."

Smith and Robert F. Schroder, also an entomologist at the department's lab-oratory in Beltsville, Md., said their tests show the mite does not infest bene ficial insects.

If further research is satisfactory, the mite may work in tandem with another natural enemy against the beetles, a non-stinging parasitic wasp imported from India in 1973. The wasp has done well but does not survive harsh winters.

"Each spring, state departments of agriculture in Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, South Carolina and Virginia must redistribute the tiny beetle fighters," the report said.

"In north and central Florida, and southern Georgia and Alabama, researchers predict that the wasp will have to be released every two to three years.' The wasps lay their eggs in the larvae of the bean beetles. The young wasps then eat their way out, killing the larvae.

"You can't expect to have enough wasps in the fields when the beetles emerge from hibernation," Smith said. 'By the time the wasps increase their numbers sufficiently, the beetles have a

Corn Supports May Decline

WASHINGTON - Improved prospects for this fall's huge harvest of corn may mean farmers will get about 10 cents a bushel less than government experts had been predicting. The Agriculture Department said Tuesday corn prices at the farm nationally may average $2.25 to $2.55 a bushel over the marketing year that began on

Oct. 1. A few weeks ago, when a smaller crop was expected, a similar "supply and demand" analysis forecast prices in a range of $2.35 to $2.65 a bushel. But USDA issued new crop production estimates last Friday, pegging the record corn harvest at 7.59 billion bushels, a gain of nearly 200 million from prospects in October. Soybean production, also estimated higher in last week's report, was forecast at $5.75 to $6.50 a bushel, unchanged from earlier predictions. In 1978-79 corn at the farm averaged about $2.20 a bushel and soybeans $6.75 a bushel

New Process Preserves Raw Food

of Maryland scientists have developed a new method to preserve raw or partially processed foods which is substantially more energy efficient than canning or

Foods treated by the process can be kept fresh at room temperatures for

The GASPAK process, developed by Amihud Kramer, a food science professor, involves putting a food like sliced apples in a chamber and removing all

Then the food is treated with gases like carbon monoxide and sulfur dioxide to inhibit bacterial growth and deterioration. Finally, the treated food is packaged in a germ-free container filled with In two years of work, Kramer has worked mostly with potatoes and apples. But preliminary work has been done with beef patties, mushrooms, strawberries, salad mixtures, green beans, grapes, chopped lettuce and sliced Tests have indicated the food samples were well preserved and palatable after 30 days and 250 days. Kramer said

could result in an 80 percent savings of energy between the farmer's field and the consumer's table.

The research shows that only half as much energy is needed for the GASPAK process than for freezing and canning.

Researchers estimated energy consumed in processing, marketing and home preparation of GASPAK produce was 7,962 BTU's per pound, compared with 14,000 BTU's for canned or frozen products.

Kramer estimated that the GASPAK process itself would save at least 45 per-cent energy compared with canning and freezing. But he said the estimate is conservative because some of the experimental GASPAK equipment was ineffi-

More energy could be saved in transporting foods because GASPAK produce frigeration also would be unnecessary for wholesale, retail and home storage.

In addition, energy consumed to thaw frozen foods would be saved. Ex-cess water used in canning would be unnecessary in the GASPAK process.

Reduced energy and water use would cut food processing costs, Kramer said.

He estimated that 25 million barrels of crude oil would be saved if freezing and canning of foods were replaced with the GASPAK process.

The project is financed by the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station and the Department of Energy. The Defense Department is interested in the process for storing both potato strips for french fries and whole potatoes for several months.

world's largest employee benefits advi-

George Faunce, a Mercer officer, explained that with 8 percent of the private sector's payrolls invested in pension funds the executives seem to believe the wherewithal exists to meet current reti-

Well-run funds, he said, follow actuarial principles, maintaining a fund sufficient for paying claims as they arise. Unless a company fails, the fund is con-stantly replinished by regular contribu-

A possible problem for the future, if not for now, was indicated by the 426 responses - an above average return, according to Mercer - dealing with the issue of early versus late retirement.

Nearly three-quarters of the responses disapproved of raising or eliminating the mandatory retirement age, now 70 years, to allow greater numbers of older people to remain in the workforce. In fact, some said they favored and would encourage even earlier retirement.

"There is a paradox here," Faunce conceded, with many actuaries and economists fearing the Social Security system will run into serious financial problems if workers continue to retire at age 65 or earlier.

Faunce and other Mercer officers, including Haeworth Robinson, former Social Security chief actuary, share the fear. With early retirement, and with longevity increasing, retirement sometimes exceeds 30 years.

"Right now three workers support each Social Security pensioner, but that ratio will become two workers for each pensioner at the turn of the century. It will put a severe burden on the system,' Faunce said.

Nevertheless, Mercer found that "among the wide variety of employee benefits, those replying to the questionnaire most often cited early retirement incentives, flex-time and financial counseling as the benefits they would like to see become more popular in the eighties."

The executives favored an expanded role for employee benefits in total compensation packages, and surprisingly approved a concept that would provide a 'cafeteria' of benefits from which workers could choose.

Authorities view cafeteria or smorgasbord plans with mixed feelings.

Such plans would involve workers more actively in their futures, but the likelihood exists that some workers might become unhappy over making poor selections. Administrative problems could result also.

On other issues, the executives said: -That increases in 1980 Social Security contributions should be postponed as inflationary, since at least some of the corporate costs might have to be passed on in higher prices. (70 percent)

-They were concerned about pension portability, which means the pension benefits earned in one job would follow the worker to each succeeding place of employment. (64 percent)

-Blue collar and middle management would produce the greatest pressure for expansion of benefits in th 1980s. Forty-three percent named the blue collar category, 46 percent the middle management group.

The two congregations voted this week to broach racial barriers and merge under one roof.

The new multi-racial congregation will be known as the Swope Parkway United Christian Church. It's primary leaders, at least through 1980, will be those from the white church. The minister will be black.

"I just can't hold it in," said one black woman who hugged a white woman after the results of the separate, secret ballots were announced. "I'm one of your members now.

'This will give us a chance to see how brotherhood really works," Ruth McCallop, West Paseo deaconess, said.

The voting - 20-0 by the Swope Park members and 163-5 by the West Paseo members - followed a joint worship service in the church the group will be using, the Swope Park church.

The reason we are coming together today is we both have needs." the Rev.

STORM WINDOWS AND DOORS Roger Coleman, interim Swope Park minister, told the new congregation.

'Sissy' Plans Return To Texas

AURORA, N.Y. (UPI) - Over the last three years, she's grown accustomed to central New York's snowy winters and says she's going to miss the spectacular view of Cayuga Lake from her office, but Frances Tarlton "Sissy" Farenthold is going home to Texas - where her heart has remained.

After three "taxing" but successful years as the first female president in the 111-year history of Wells College, a small women's school located in the scenic Finger Lakes region, Mrs. Farenthold says she will return this summer to Houston, resume a law practice and possibly re-enter the political arena.

I'll see it that way. "I love the four seasons up here, but Texas is my home and I'm going back there." she said.

She lives in Wells' presidential residence with two of her four children. Her husband, George, is a Houston businessman. She says she gets home about every six weeks

One of the things I want to do in my last year here is to get the entire family together in Aurora for Christmas. With the weather up here you never know tant to me.

She said she was leaving the door open for future political involvement. "I don't know about politics at this time," she said, "but I certainly wouldn't want to rule it out. "I wouldn't want to say no," said the 53-year-old Corpus Christi native, who became the first woman to have her name placed in nomination for the vice presidency when she won 400 delegate votes at the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

Although Mrs. Farenthold announced her intentions, in early October - on her 29th wedding anniversary — she said her decision was made six months ago.

She has made an incalculable contribution to the success of Wells," said David M. Lascelli, chairman of the board of trustees.

Because of her, finding a successor will be much easier," said Wells spokeswoman Beverly Miller. "She's really put Wells on the map."
Mrs. Farenthold's years at Wells have been marked by several major ac-complishments: a balanced budget with a modest surplus; record alumnae contributions; a new athletic facility scheduled to open in January; and the highest enrollment, 529, since 1972.

She also has been responsible for curriculum innovations, an energy conservation program, and the opening of a fulltime women's career-counseling off-

"I feel very good about where the institution is now," said Mrs.Farenthold, who quickly added she has much to accomplish before she leaves.

One of the founders of the National Women's Political Caucus, the Vassar College graduate said she did not know what to expect when she entered the world of academia.

"I didn't expect the complexities of the job and the tradeoffs and how to juggle all that," she said. "And they (faculty and trustees) opposed any change at first, but I've discovered that's built into the college or university setting.

'Another thing is that the problems land on your desk real fast, that's for sure," she quipped.

Mrs. Farenthold said she found the last three years demanding, but gratify-

"It's been taxing, but rewarding, she said. "It's the most taxing thing I've ever done.

She said she has a full agenda until she leaves the picturesque campus and plans to "help the college in any way I can" once she's settled in Texas.

She also hopes to have a say in who succeeds her.

"I'm not on the search committee, but I have made my feelings known, said Mrs. Farenthold, who has remained active in many national women's groups. When I made my announcement before the trustees and students I told them, Your next president, whomever SHE

Physician Reaffirms Oswald Identification

SEATTLE (AP) - The doctor who performed the autopsy on Lee Harvey Oswald says he is certain the body was that of Oswald, the man accused of assassinating President John F. Kennedy.

"There is overwhelming circumstantial evidence that it was Oswald," said Dr. Earl Rose, chief medical examiner in Dallas in 1963. But Rose said he would not object to exhumation of the body to verify the identity. British author Michael Eddowes has filed suit asking that Oswald's remains be exhumed to recheck the identity. In a book, Eddowes asserts a look-alike was substituted for Oswald when he was in the Soviet Union before Kennedy's as-

"I think the most important thing that went on is that we kept the communication lines open between everyone,"

The midshipmen on her staff and her superiors uniformly rated her performance high, insisting the only difference from her male counterparts was the attention she received from the media.

Colvin said Miss Belzer, who at the time wore five thin gold strips on her black shoulderboards, was as respected as any other midshipman officer.

Welfare Worker Recalls Early Days In China

SHANGHAI, China (UPI) - American Talitha Gerlach and 25 other elderly foreigners walked into the Great Hall of the People in Peking to receive thanks from the government for the help they have given China. Summoned by Vice Premier Wang Zhen the 26 honored guests, including four Americans, are among the few dozen foreigners who came to China during the 1920's and '30s with a passionate urge to aid this backward nation, and who still live here. They were honored at a special banquet on China's 30th revolution anniversary for helping China for at least 30

Miss Gerlach, the first of the group to arrive in China, has worked in welfare in Shanghai on and off since 1926. A beautiful woman now in her 80's with a serene face, she has lived alone here except for an occasional cat, enjoying "my fascinating life.

She came to China as a Christian missionary, as did several other veteran Americans who have spent most of their lives in this country, cold war or no.

"I was working for the Young Women's Christian Association in Chicago -I grew up near Columbia, Ohio, and we had lived in Cincinnati and Indianapolis. My father was a Methodist minister," this quiet American reminisced as she sat in her living room beneath portraits of two of China's famed revolutionists, Chou En-lai and Mao Tse-tung.

"I traveled around the Middle West for the YWCA. Then they asked me to organize an office in Shanghai, so I arrived in 1926. When the war with Japan broke out in 1937, my hair was quite gray by then and I thought I should go back to the United States.

"After the Japanese surrender in 1945, the YWCA asked me to reopen the Shanghai office.

The communists took over China in 1949 after a three-year civil war. The widow of Sun Yat-sen, founder of the Chinese Republic in 1911, organized a welfare institute to help the homeless war refugees. Sun's widow pressed Miss Gerlach to manage the institute.

Israel Adopts Settlement Plan

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel will build five clusters of settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River in the next year, a cabinet committee decided today in a meeting chaired by Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor told reporters that the five clusters would contain 19 "points" overall, and that "several families" would live in each "point."

The different sets of numbers appeared to be an effort to minimize the impact of the decision, which is certain to be criticized by Egypt and the United ment program proposed by Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, who earlier in the day abolished the senior army post for the West Bank and Gaza Strip and took responsibility for contacts with Palestinian leaders, Israel Radio reported.

The cabinet meeting elaborated on last Sunday's decision in principle to build more settlements and strengthen existing Jewish outposts in the occupied territory. Egypt has criticized the decision as an obstacle in the peace process.

Defense Minister Weizman favors

"I didn't say 19 settlements. I said 19 building a small number of substantial Jewish towns instead of a large number of small villages. Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon, the hawkish settlement chief, lost his bid for a wider settlement

Weizman abolished the senior army post in the wake of an expulsion order against Nablus Mayor Bassam Shakaa after the mayor privately told Maj. Gen. Danni Matt, the top officer in charge of the West Bank, that he understood why Arab terrorists attack Israel.

In a mass protest over the expulsion order the mayors in 25 towns in the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip and all their city councilmen resigned Wednesday.

Weizman was reported unhappy with Matt's conduct. His order abolishing Matt's position appeared to be a way of firing the general, although the radio tion for some time.

Officials Harass Soviet Author

MOSCOW (UPI) - For a person who officially doesn't exist, writer Vladimir Voinovich has caused the Soviet government an impressive amount of trout

The small, prematurely gray author, whose impish grin makes him look younger than his 47 years, still makes light of the unwelcome attentions paid him by his government, but the laugh has become tinged with bitterness.

His latest book to appear in English in the United States is "In Plain Russian," a collection of stories just published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux.

"I simply don't exist officially," he said in a recent interview. "If I send a letter abroad, it doesn't arrive. I don't receive any, either.

"But the harassments aren't effective. No matter what they do now, it's not enough. My books will still be there. Even if they kill me, which is highly unlikely, the books will still be there.'

'Harassments" is an understatement for the poisoned cigarette given him by the KGB (Soviet secret police) in 1977, the expulsion from the Writers Union in 1974 and the contingent of 15 to 20 KGB tailing Voinovich at one point.

His "special treatment" was stepped up following the publication in Paris in 1975 of the satirical, "The Life and Extraordinary Adventures of Soldier Ivan Chonkin," written from 1963-1967, a book that circulated underground at home long before it brought Voinovich fame abroad.

The bumbling Chonkin, a carving of whom now stands on Voinovich's desk, is a far cry from the accepted Soviet soldier, who typically leads the people heroically along the path of Marxism-Leninism. The book also refers irreverently to former dictator Josef Stalin.

Nowadays, official treatment is not heavy-handed, though Voinovich and his family are still watched. But he remains a "non-person," forbidden to publish and dependent on his fame in the West for survival in his own country.

They come to me about three times year to ask me why I'm not working." Voinovich said. "I point to my typewriter and say I work all the time.

In the Soviet Union, it is illegal to be unemployed, and such people are labelled "parasites."

The "visitors" charged him with not belonging to any recognized organization, but he pointed out he is a member of the Bavarian Academy, the PEN Club in the United States, and many others.

When he offered to work cleaning the courtyard of his apartment house, the officials went along with the idea until he mentioned that of course Western journalists were bound to hear of it and come taking photographs, creating bad press for the government.

Voinovich was at one time the rising star of the official Soviet literary world.

His credentials were impeccable work on a collective farm in his youth, a factory job at 16, four years as a soldier and later work on construction sites and railroads.

When he turned to the pen, his writings brought him fame and position, and he was especially known for a song on the cosmonauts

Official disapproval first came in 1968 when he signed a letter in defense of four dissidents. Repeated straying from the sanctioned way ended in his 1974 expulsion from the Writers Union following a letter in defense of Alexander Solzhenitsyn, and an irreverent open letter to the Chairman of the All-Union Copyright Agency. In it he suggested Soviet writers be protected from the West by putting them in prison "with the necessary guards and police dogs placed at your disposal."

"Writers can't write anything honestanywhere here now," he said. 'You're not allowed even to mention a multitude of subjects - Stalin, the diffi-

ST. CATHERINE'S MONASTERY, Israeli-Occupied Sinai (AP) - Back in 1865 the Greek Orthodox monks of St. Catherine's Monastery lost a priceless manuscript of the Bible to a German scholar who "borrowed" it for research at home.

Since then the monks have tightened their security considerably, and scholars are about as welcome as the throngs of scruffy hikers who troop past the 6th century desert monastery on their way to climb Mount Sinai.

The hikers, however, are a sign of the arrival of the 20th century at an outpost of religious devotion that had existed for 1,400 years in splendid isolation at the foot of Mount Sinai.

Many come simply to pray, as pilgrims have done for centuries, but others are looking for an up-to-date religious experience on the wilderness mountain identified in tradition as the place where God thundered and trumpeted at Moses before revealing the Ten Commandments.

"If a good man comes and respects the area, we are his servants," said Archbishop Damianos, the head of St. Catherine's. "From ancent times the buildings here were for pilgrims."

The black-bearded archbishop, a man in his 40s with a cheerful smile, has been here since 1961, and he remembers times when the monastery had only one or two visitors a week

Now an estimated 100,000 people a year visit the area, which Israel has held since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war but which Egypt will take back today. To facilitate tourist travel, Israel carved a 50mile road from the Red Sea Coast, opened a military airport 12 miles away to civilian flights, and built a hotel, hostels and campgrounds nearby

"Many of the visitors are just tourists," Archbishop Damianos said. "Some are alpinists, climbers. They have bad behavior, and people come almost naked, especially in summer. It disturbs our religious life."

Although the archbishop said he hoped for a "more normal life" after Egypt takes over, the prospects are for even more visitors. Israel and Egypt have agreed that tourism will continue from Israel, and Egypt plans to build a peace monument nearby consisting of a mosque, a synagogue and a Christian

Only 14 black-robed monks live in the monastery now, and they stand in some danger of being overwhelmed by a flood of visitors. However, according to Israelis in the area, the monastery has prospered as never before because of the increased number of visitors. And the monastery does boast new buildings, including a hostel to accommodate tourists outside the main walled compound in addition to new wells and two diesel generators to supply electricity.

But the main attraction of the monastery is its ancient character. The Byzantine emperor, Justinian the Great, ordered the high-walled fortress built in the 6th century to protect pilgrims who had braved a journey to the granite mountains of the Sinai wilderness.

Over the centuries, monks created a fabulous trove of gold-painted icons and devoted scribes copied so many tracts and pages of scripture that some manuscripts were forgotten and discarded.

Some of this ancient material is coming to light again. The attention of Bible scholars from around the world, who question the monastery's ability to handle new finds of immense historical importance, has forced yet another adjustment to modern times.

Paradoxically, the main reason for the scholarly interest was the discovery in 1975 of a fragment of the same ancient Bible manuscript that was "borrowed" in 1865. Called the Codex Sinaiticus, it was written in Greek in the 4th giving Carter authority to keep the sanctions at least temporarily if he concluded that lifting them would be against the national interest. However, the same legislation also gives Congress the right to override Carter's decision by a simple majority vote of both houses within 30 days, and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he planned to introduce a resolution today to reverse Carter's decision. "We should go ahead and lift the sanctions," Helms said. But Rep. Steven Solarz, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs African subcommittee, said he thinks Carter made a "prudent and proper decision." To lift the sanctions now would be "diplomatically counter-productive," he said.

In announcing his decision, Carter acknowledged there has been "encouraging progress" at the 10-week-old Rhode sian peace conference in London. But, he said, "A termination of the sanctions at this stage could lead all the parties to harden their positions and would jeopardize the chances for a successful settle-

House Approves Public Works Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's proposed multi-billion dollar aid program for "distressed" urban and rural areas appears well on its way toward congressional passage.

The proposal - a key part of Carter's urban package - won House approval Wednesday as part of an $8.3 billion, two-year authorization for public works and economic development projects.

The aid to "distressed" areas closely resembles the national development bank proposed by Carter last year, although a separate bank would not be created under this year's bill.

Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., called

Like the bank proposal, the Houseapproved aid would consist of grants, loans and loan guarantees to help firms that locate, expand or remain in decaying urban neighborhoods and depressed rural communities.

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a key test of how Congress regards federal regulation, the funeral industry is a clear winner and consumer groups the loser.

The House voted 223-147 Wednesday night to keep the Federal Trade Commission from issuing its proposed regulation over the funeral industry.

Consumer, labor and senior citizens groups had strongly opposed the amend-ment by Rep. Marty Russo, D-III. The vote indicates that other proposed anti-FTC measures are likely to win approval in the current Congress, which is responding to calls by many businesses that they are over-regulated.

The amendment was attached to a general bill authorizing various FTC programs. The measure may come to a final vote later today. The Senate has not acted on any such amendment.

Canada Firemen Inhale Fumes From Tank Car

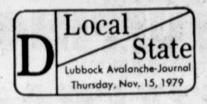

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) — Eight firemen inhaled hydrochloric acid furnes today while standing 180 feet from a chlorine tank car ruptured in a massive train derailment over the week-end. They were hospitalized and report-ed in stable condition, officials said.

They were not wearing gas masks and walked away under their own power. Doctors said they experienced water-ing eyes and a tightening of the chest and were hospitalized only as a precau-

Environment ministry officials swept the area with air monitoring equipment shortly after the incident and found chlorine levels much higher than any recorded since the derailment but they did not give figures.

The men were standing by as crews attempted to patch the ruptured tanker, emitting chlorine vapors, which, when mixed with moisture in the air, forms windborne pockets of potentially deadly hydrochloric acid.

Workers' problems were compounded by a light snow falling, cutting down

The more than 150,000 persons who returned to their homes Tuesday after three days away faced no danger, authorities said, but 75,000 persons living closest to the site were kept away for at least one more day and a large area of

In a race against the wind, exhausted and frustrated crews worked through the night to patch the car, but twice Wednesday puffs of hydrochloric acid escaped into the air.

The first escape knocked a worker off his feet and the second, which sent a 15-foot-long plume of the acid wafting south toward the lake, sent 75 workers running for their lives and the acid cloud hovered over the crash site for about 30

53 Killed In Tanker, Freighter Collision

ISTANBUL, Turkey (UPI) - A Romanian oil tanker and a Greek freighter collided in one of the world's busiest shipping lanes today, starting a series of explosions that shattered windows four miles inland and turned nearby waters into a sea of flames. Officials said 53 persons died.

Thirty sailors from the Greek freighter Evria-7 were rescued, but a spokesman for the Port of Istanbul said only three members of the 56-man crew aboard the Romanian tanker "Independenta" were believed to have survived.

Two Romanian crewmen were hospitalized in satisfactory condition and a third was listed in "very critical" condition with massive burns. The bodies of three other men were brought ashore and 50 others were missing and believed

"I'm afraid nobody else than the two survivors escaped from the Romanian tanker alive," said a port official.

The blast occurred about 5.30 a.m. and was followed by two other smaller explosions that rocked the city. Streets in the immediate vicinity were littered with broken glass from scores of shattered windows

Police radio reports said the explosion started a fire with flames as high as 300 feet. The reports said the blaze spread across more than one square mile area of the Bosphorous and drifted on the tide down towards the Marmara

"It looked like the whole world was on fire as huge red flames shot into the air." a witness said.

Istanbul port authorities declared the Bosphorous a danger area and closed the busy port to shipping.

The flames silhouetted the fabled Topkapi Palace against the dawn sky and the ancient clifftop palace of the Ottoman sultans at one time appeared to be in danger from the blaze. But an easterly wind appeared to fan the flames towards the Asian coastline, threatening

By The Associated Press

As many as 600 persons were killed and 1,500 suffered injuries in the earthquake that struck northeastern Iran, a rescue coordinator said today.

Rescue workers were still digging up bodies from rubble more than 24 hours after the quake flattened at least 18 villages Wednesday, leaving hundreds of peasants homeless, said coordinator Mohammed Ali Shirazi, reached by tele-phone in the Iranian city of Mashhad from Nicosia, Cyprus.

Shirazi, son of the religious leader in Mashhad, said the quake struck before dawn local time, crumbling dwellings on top of thousands of sleeping villagers.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the nation's revolutionary leader, called the quake "tragic and frightening" and appealed to Iranians to provide all possible aid to the victims.

"This tragedy requires everyone's help," the Iranian leader said in a statement broadcast by Tehran Radio.

Shirazi said the tremor was felt in Mashhad, 500 miles east of Tehran, but that none of the famous domed mosques, tall minarets or other buildings in the holy city suffered any dam-

The quake measured 6.7 on the Riin Denver reported.

Earthquakes occur frequently in Iran, often taking many lives. A quake measuring 6.7 on the Richter scale struck 270 miles south of Mashhad on Jan. 16, killing about 200 persons,

Wall Street Still Optimistic About Next Decade

NEW YORK (AP) - In investing, it's the future that counts. And that's why some stock market seers are peering beyond a minefield of financial woes to what they say will be a more stable decade of the '80s.

It may be wishful thinking, but they say that stocks will be in vogue, that interest rates will stabilize, that gold will lose luster, that inflation will return to single digits, that savings will grow

These forecasts aren't oddities; in Wall Street, which has had such tough competition for the individual's dollar, they are commonplace. As commonplace as forecasts of a collapse in gold and housing prices.

So common that you suspect them. Gold and housing, you realize, rose on the Wall Street's hit list because they attracted so much of the available investment money during the 1970s. The Street felt cheated. It remembers that its glory days were in the early 1960s, when prices were relatively stable, gold was "un-American," houses appreciated at 5 percent or less, and the prime rate was a third what it is

Small Firms Confident Of Future

NEW YORK (UPI) - Small business is big business in the United States.

It is responsible for 43 percent of the gross national product and accounts for 58 percent of private sector employment

Chemical Bank of New York has taken a wide-ranging survey of firms with annual sales between $5 million and $105 million in an attempt to give some voice to what it feels is a neglected segment of the economy.

While the survey was taken in the metropolitan area, Chemical says the fact that smaller businesses in New York serve virtually all of the United States and even foreign markets suggests they are not insular in their thinking.

The survey showed that 71 percent were optimistic about the 1980s."The small businessman in New York is clearly upbeat," said Robert I. Lipp, executive vice president at Chemical.

They share some of the worries of big business - inflation, the quality and cost of labor and government regulation - but the small businessman thinks he has some problems that are very differ-

Even though he is optimistic, problems have been mounting. Government regulations have impeded growth, capital for expansion and new ventures has become increasingly scarce and large corporations have increased their share of the economic pie.

Adequate financing for working capital and growth was cited as the single most important factor in the success of small business.

The survey, covering July through September and taken before the Federal Reserve's new tight credit policy was announced, showed that, of the 63 percent of the sample who sought financing in the last year, 94 percent were successful.

Lipp said he believes the figures haven't changed that much - "Rates were high, even then ... You can figure that many were paying around 15 percent at the time ... Even the high rates do not seemed to have stopped their borrow-

Fed Chairman Paul Volcker in early October urged banks to keep lines of credit open to small business.

Lipp said the bank "certainly shares his concern," and he feels that "money will be available to credit-worthy companies of the size covered in the sur-

-Eight out of 10 small businessmen feel they have no effective voice in government

-Most do not see big business as a threat, nor do they think government should limit size or growth of firms. In fact, a majority of small and intermediate firms are interested in merging with other firms or in being acquired.

"If interest rates come down and money becomes more available we should see a resurgence in mergers and acquisitions," Lipp said. Chemical said the emergence of the college-educated male executive in no way implies that the entrepreneurial spirit of the self-made man who succeeds through drive and hard work is dying out.

'It is an indiction that higher education has become so pervasive that ambitious individuals acquire it," Lipp said.

this assessment that critics claim it is a testament to faith rather than to analysis. But the attitude exists, and many brokers can be expected to promote and dissemenate it.

The time to buy, they say, is when so many things look bad - that's how smart investors make their money. An advertisement by Merrill Lynch, the biggest stock broker, provides a good exam-

'We think common stocks may very well be one of the best investment alternatives in the years ahead. And not in spite of the recession, but partially because of it.

Value Line, the largest stock advisory service, provides another example in a long-range outlook.

"The U.S. economy is faltering - in line with our expectations," it says. Bad for stocks? No, good. Many issues will double in a few years, says Value Line. In the '80s, it says, we'll solve a lot of

Do you have faith? Or do you recall that few stock brokers told you in advance about the spectacular rise in interest rates or the price of gold or, in fact, even mentioned housing as an investment?

Do you suspect that maybe they're saying all this because they need to make sales? Are you counting the number of times they've said it before? Are you angry that they haven't apologized for past forecasts?

It's up to you, but Wall Streeters will remind you again and again as we approach the 1980s of an old adage: The bigger the risk, the bigger the potential

Reagan Urges More Refineries

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) - Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan, seeking to build support in the Northeast, says the region needs more refineries to lessen its dependence on foreign oil.

heavy opposition from environmental groups.

New England is particularly dependent on imported oil because almost all of its heating oil comes from Carribean refineries using crude oil from the Middle East and other countries.

Other than his general call for more domestic oil exploration, Reagan did not spell out where additional East Coast refineries would obtain crude oil to refine.

At an earlier rally Wednesday in a Boston suburb, Reagan assalled Carter's proposal for a tax to soak up some of the additional revenues received from the gradual oil price deregulation plan already set in motion by Carter.

"Who's going to pay this windfall

"Who's going to pay this windfall tax? The oil companies? No. You're going to pay it every time you fill your tank with gas," Reagan said.

In all his appearances, Reagan also made it clear he intended to actively seek votes in the Northeast, where in the past he has not been particularly strong.

James T. McIntyre Jr., director of the federal Office of Management and Budget, defended Jimmy Carter's eco-nomic programs Wednesday when he told 300 members of the state's Business and Industry Association that many politicians offer simplistic answers to the nation's economic problems - and that those who do so are "offering the American people a cruel pipe dream.

In an interview later, McIntyre said that "many candidates, not just Kennedy, are offering easy answers."

"While the rhetoric sounds good," he said, "when you examine what's really involved you begin to get a different view of the issues. The implications behind the statements should be thoroughly examined no matter who makes those types of allegations." An aide to McIntyre said White House staff members "are going through the ceiling at some of the distorted statements Kennedy has made on the president's economic programs."

However, McIntyre said, "I'm not here to attack Sen. Kennedy or anyone else," and insisted he was using the speech "just to set the record straight."

In his speech to the business group, McIntyre said, "Some politicians claim that it is a simple matter to reduce the government's share of the gross national product to as little as 18.9 percent by 1983. Anyone who seriously advances such an idea is offering the American people a cruel pipe dream.

Kennedy has said the government's share of the gross national product, the value of the nation's goods and services, should be reduced to 18.9 percent. McIntyre said lowering the GNP to that level "would require cuts that could total as much as $85 billion." And McIntyre said that those who claim Carter has failed to provide leadership "are misguided." "Not only have we displayed leadership, but it's the kind of leadership that the word really stands for: tough, pragmatic, yet humane," he said.

Dinner Atop World With Buddha

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN Associated Press Writer

LHASA, Tibet — A living Buddha, the only one I ever met, has promised to send me a prayer wheel.

Prayer wheels seem to have gone into hiding since the People's Liberation Army came over the mountain wall in the 1950's to reclaim Tibet for China.

The only one we saw during our travels in Tibet was the enormous motorized prayer wheel in the Potala, the Dalai Lama's former winter palace, and it was broken.

Two Tibetan girls in traditional costumes were working on the gear mechanism but lost interest when we appeared with our cameras. They retreated into one of the 10,000 chapels in the high-rise palace that, out-main scenic attraction.

There were no prayer wheels to be had in the tiny shops run by the Nepalese merchants along Parkor Street, the octagonal-shaped street that surrounds the Jokka Kang Cathedral in downtown Lhasa. Like their cousins back in Katmandu, the merchants here, who still have a picture of the king of Nepal hanging in their stalls, once did a thriving business in prayer wheels, death side of the surrounding snow-capped mountains, is the Roof of the World's

and devil masks and ornate carved Tibetan beer mugs and spittoons.

Now the shops didn't seem to carry much of anything, except some rusting canned goods and sacks of barley, but our Chinese hosts were quick to point out that the shoppers no longer had to bow deep, stick out their tongues and start trembling as a sign of awe and respect when a living Buddha or a high lama passed by.

One wily Nepalese vendor, who sold me a package of Chinese cigars called "Great Wall" and almost as old and crumbling, promised to come to my guest house later that night with a prayer wheel. He never showed up, but a Living Buddha did.

None of us stuck our tongues out or trembled perceptibly, but we shook hands all around.

He was dark-haired, handsome and wore a wine-colored shawl or robe draped over one shoulder, an expensive wool pullover sweater and a white Western-style shirt open at the collar. The Living Buddha had come to dinner as part of the nightly entertainment and education that our hosts from the New China News Agency always arranged for us.

Through two translators, who took the dialogue from Tibetan to Chinese to English and back again, Pabala Gelielangjei told us he was 39 years old and had been chosen as a Living Buddha at the age of 3 back in his native Chiangdu, 800 miles to the east.

Tibet, he said, had somewhere between 20 and 30 Living Buddhas "chosen in many ways: by drawing cards, drawing lots, dreaming dreams, by wizards, by having the ghost of a Living Buddha fall in a certain position." Final approval these days, he added, "goes to the central government."

This Living Buddha seemed highly in favor of that arrangement. An obvious enthusiast for the Peking leadership, he said he had been elected chairman of the local liberation committee at the age of 10. In those days it took three months and four days to journey to Lhasa, but now since the Chinese had built a highway across 14 of the highest mountains in the world it took only four days. Comrade Lama Pabala was currently serving as vice chairman of both the national and the Tibetan People's Consultative Conference.

He said he knew the Dalai Lama well, had met him many times and "would like to see him return. If he returns as a patriot, then the government and many people would welcome him."

About halfway through the meal, in the course of lighting up an American cigarette, which he favored above Chinese brands, the Living Buddha stunned us listeners by announcing that he "no longer believed in the religion."

He said he had dropped out of the celibate priesthood in 1962 to marry and now had three children. Religion, he explained, was no longer relevant to the Tibetan way of life. He still wore the robes however and suffered the adulation of those who revered him as a Living Buddha.

The Living Buddha's defection from the lamaist religion prepared us for the final somewhat sad scene next day at the Drepung lamasry, which once had 10,300 lamas and now had less than 100. We chanced to sit in on an audience with a few of the remaining elder lamas granted to former British Prime Minister Edward Heath, who also was touring the country. My notebook records this conversation:

Heath: "With the Dalai Lama gone, whom do they now regard as their spiritual head?"

Lama: (through a double translation) Chairmen Hua and Mao.

Heath: As Hua is not a Buddhist, how can he be your spiritual leader?

Queen Elizabeth as head of the Church of England is after all, an Anglican.

Lama: (after confused consulation with others) I meant political leader.

Heath: What will happen when all the lamas here are dead?

Lama: It is something yet to happen, but I am sure the government will take good care of the monastery.

Heath: Who will take care of the Buddhists?

Lama: We are not in a position to answer since this will happen after our

Leaving the lamasery, we noticed that some bread, barley and fruit had been left on the altar of the Buddhist God of Mercy in hope and anticipation of a 15th reincarnation in case the 14th Dalai Lama elects not to return.

Expert Says Physicians Need Help

DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — A top psychiatrist says one of every 10 doctors should be undergoing some form of psychological therapy.

Dr. Thomas E. Bittker, an Arizona psychiatrist specializing in the problems of physicians, told health professionals this week pressures are so intense that at least 300 doctors commit suicide in the United States each year.

As many physicians kill themselves in one year as graduates in a single class at the University of Michigan medical school, Bittker said at an opening session of the Michigan State Medical Society's annual scientific meeting.

"Those are the ones we know about, because physicians are very capable of engineering successful suicide ventures, many of which look like accidents,"

"Patients expect doctors to maintain control of their feelings, so they suppress their problems. But then the physician begins to feel superior, and it becomes tough to reach out for help."

Bittker, director of health maintenance services for the Arizona Health Plan in Phoenix, said at least 10 percent of all physicians suffer from untreated bouts with chronic fatigue, severe depression, alcoholism and drug dependence.

Despite the potential disastrous impact on patients, doctors often fail to recognize warning signs among their colleagues and "cover" for each other when they do Pitther said.

when they do, Bittker said.

In many cases it leads to suicide, he said, because doctors have overburdened themselves with an impossible workload, yet still strive for perfection.

Another speaker at the session, Dr. Douglas A. Sargent, president of the Michigan Psychiatric Society, blamed the high numbers of impaired doctors on a tendency to "veil physicians' illnesses or conceal them altogether."

Sargent described the case of a 49year-old man who proved himself an able administrator as well as competent in medicine. Never satisfied, the doctor's high-powered career ultimately led to the breakup of his family. Two days after his wife filed for di-

Two days after his wife filed for divorce, Sargent said, the doctor mowed his lawn, put his affairs in order, smoked a last pipe and then used a final martini to wash down a lethal dose of barbiturates.

Bittker challenged the nation's medical schools to move for solutions, saying the unrealistic ideals of 100-hour work weeks and perpetual success — which he called the root of the dilemma — are ingrained during a young doctor's education.

"The problem is not working 16 hours a day, the problem is that it leaves only eight hours to do other things," Bittker said. "That has to be changed. We have to cultivate a total person with obligations to family and self."

Pinup Posters Taken Down

FAIRPORT, N.Y. (UPI) — The Rochester Telephone Corp. doesn't want Farrah Fawcett hanging around anymore.

Several pinup posters of the movie and television star were hanging around the office of the telephone company's switching center in Fairport until they were ordered taken down by Bill Clifford, district manager for network operations.

The union, Local 1170 of the Communications Workers of America, has filed a grievance asking the company to explain why the posters were considered objectionable. Clifford said his extensive and thorough analysis of the pictures led him to conclude that visitors could regard the pictures as "tasteless, socially offensive, sexist an unbusiness-like."

Although the Bears have had some teams good enough to compete, they've played this postseason game but once over the past 16 autumns. But, there is a bit of interest in them this year, and you can bank on it: The Baptists are enjoying it. Come Saturday afternoon - or the days or hours thereafter - Baylor officials could step to a hastily installed microphone and announce that, "We have accepted an invitation (to the bowl), and we're looking forward to playing. ### Injuries Ruin Mustang Hopes

By NORVAL POLLARD

Executive Sports Editor
In many ways, Southern Methodist University's 1979 football fortunes have rivaled those of Texas Tech. The season just has not gone according to plans.

Key injuries have played a major role limiting the success that was predictd before the first football was teed up pack in September. As has been the case with Red Raider mentor Rex Dockery, this season hasn't been the most enjoyathe for Mustang head coach Ron Meyer.

The Mustangs jumped off to a fast 3-Cstart and the Associated Press weekly motball poll recognized them as the 18th best team in the land at one time. Two I those first three wins were in Southwest Conference action; Mustang Mania was cruising along at full speed.

But then the roof caved in. All-America quarterback Mike Ford was lost for he season with a knee injury during the North Texas State contest. The Ponies proceeded to lose six consecutive games and that long-hoped-for conference championship.

SMU managed to find its way back into the win column last Saturday with a 34-0 nonconference victory over weak Wichita State.

'SMU has had some problems the last few weeks, but Ron Meyer still has a good football team," declared Docker-'They have had some players hurt and that has hurt them as a team, but some of their young players are playing again now and that has to help them.'

Dockery has had similar injury problems this season. When the Raiders and Mustangs meet at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Texas Stadium, it will be like two simifar ships passing in the night.

When Ford, last season's NCAA total offense leader and the second-leading passer among major college quarterbacks, went down, sophomore Jim Bob Taylor (6-2, 195) was called on to take his place. Taylor has struggled with inconsistency this season, but he will be starting Saturday against Tech.

Taylor was being spelled by freshman Mike Fisher, but Fisher was hurt during 47-14 loss to Texas A&M and now Clovts, N.M., freshman Layne Walker is Meyer's second-team signal-caller.

The Mustangs experimented with the -formation when Ford went down but have gone back to the veer attack to utilize the great running ability of freshmen Eric Dickerson and Charles Waggoner. Dickerson (6-3, 205) and Waggoner (6-2, 200) were two of the most sought after high school players in the nation ast season. Waggoner is currently the sixth-leading rusher in the conference with 612 yards in nine games. Dickerson, hurt during several contests, has added

The Mustangs also have two outstanding freshmen fullbacks in Craig James and Lott McIlhenny. James (6-1, 210) was another highly sought high school player and has expressed his displeasure with being moved to second team behind Dickerson. Rumors are That James is planning to transfer to Alabama at the end of the season, but he is still a capable running back and should see a great deal of action Saturday.

All-American wingback Emanuel Tolbert hasn't had the type of year that was expected of him, but he did become the SWC's all-time leading receiver last week with seven catches against Wichita State. Tolbert caught seven passes to bring his season total to 20 and his career mark to 163. Despite his poor statistics this year, Tolbert has to be respected for his game-breaking abilities.

Injuries have also hurt the Mustangs the offensive line. Freshman Joe Beard (6-3, 200) has been forced into duty at the left guard position. He is joined

Other starters on the SMU line are junior center Lancy Pederson (6-1, 245), senior guard Randy Katz (6-0, 245) and junior tackle Mike Jusko (6-6, 268). Jusko is considered the best blocker of the Inconsistent play defensively has also played a big part in SMU's lack of success in 1979. The Mustangs have allowed 195 points in nine games and five times teams have scored 24 or more points against the Ponies.

SMU is led up front by senior noseguard Charles Hunt (6-0, 225), one of the best in the SWC at his position. He is flanked by sophomore Harvey Armstrong (6-2, 256) at left tackle and freshman Kevin Chaney (6-2, 225) on the right

The safeties are freshman Wes Hopkins (5-11, 185) and sophomore James Mobley (6-0, 185). Mobley is a sure tackler and can usually be found around the LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - A postseason bowl package that would send Arkansas to either the Cotton Bowl or the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1 hinges on an Arkansas victory Saturday, The Associated Press has learned.

The Razorbacks will make a Jan. 1 bowl trip if they defeat Texas A&M. The arrangement sends the University of Texas to the Sugar Bowl if the Razorbacks play in the Cotton Bowl, according to sources.

Meanwhile, University of Houston athletic director Cedric Dempsey is upset because the Cougars could go 10-1 and be out in the cold.

"When you put all the different options down, there are three teams and there should be three bowls," Dempsey

Dempsey said the Cougars have had some preliminary conversations with Baylor, but may have to try and strike a deal with a team outside the Southwest Conference so the Cougars "don't get boxed out."

'We really haven't come up with who might be the best school to work with," he said.

The Sugar Bowl arrangement is in the works because the bowl bids can go out at 6 p.m. on Saturday and no bowl is going to wait until then to make plans. The whole Arkansas-Texas package with the Sugar Bowl hinges on a Razorback victory over A&M.

Here's why: Such a victory would give the Razorbacks a 9-1 record. Since Arkansas finishes against a 4-5 Southern Methodist University team, the Razorbacks would have an excellent opportunity to wind Unless Houton is upset, the only way a 10-1 Arkansas team can go to the Cotton Bowl is for Texas to go 10-1. Such a development would mean a 10-1 Texas team in the Sugar Bowl.

If Arkansas goes 10-1 and Texas doesn't, then Arkansas is in the Sugar Bowl and Houston is in the Cotton Bowl Again, a 10-1 team for the Sugar Bowl.

Apparently, Houston received little consideration from the Sugar Bowl as a possible opponent for the Southeastern Conference representative - either Georgia or Alabama. If Georgia beats Auburn on Saturday, Georgia will be the host team. An Auburn victory probably puts Alabama in the Sugar Bowl.

If Houston, Arkansas and Texas go 10-1, Houston will miss out on the bowl doings unless Dempsey can work out an arrangement with somebody.

Texas is the logical choice since the Longhorns could go 9-2 and wind up without a bowl bid.

The Cougars will be available for a second-level bowl if all three teams finish 10-1. However, if Texas loses once. Houston will be in the Cotton Bowl and Arkansas will be in the Sugar Bowl. A Houston-Texas package would then put the Longhorns in a lesser bowl.

Arkansas was not involved as a backup possibility for the Cougars because a loss on Saturday would take the Razorbacks out of the Jan. 1 bowl picture and make them a prime candidate for a second-level bowl.

Reyes Gains Second AAA Honor

By CHUCK McDONALD Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The Levelland Lobos lost to Estacado 34-6 last Friday night at the LHS Field but little Lupe Reyes won a personal battle against the powerful Matadors.

The 5-foot-10 senior cracked the EHS defense for 128 yards rushing on only 19 farries. That's the most yardage the Matador defense has allowed any runner all year long. In fact, Reyes is the first runner to go over 100 yards in a game against the Mats.

Waldrep's Group Skips Research First Year

FORT WORTH AP) - A paralyzed former TCU football player has failed to gain tax-exempt status for a foundation he established to raise money for spinal cord injury research, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram has reported.

The newspaper also reported in a copyright article Wednesday that none of the foundation's first-year projected budget of $326,700 was earmarked for research.

Kent Waldrep, who was paralyzed in a football game against Alabama five years ago, organized the foundation which began soliciting contributions last

The former athelete formed the foundation after he became disenchanted with the U.S. medical community because some doctors criticized him for traveling to the Soviet Union to undergo controversial enzyme therapy. Waldrep has criticized American doctors for trying to convince spinal cord injury victims to adjust to their new limited life, while their Soviet counterparts are pouring money into research aimed at restoring paralyzed limbs.

The foundation's prospectus, issued mher shows of $326,700 for 1979-1980. More than half of that amount - $182,700 - is allocated for executive staff salaries, including $32,400 for Waldrep as executive direc-

The budget also allocates $51,000 for travel and $93,000 for office expenses.

There is no provision in the projected budget for research. The prospectus states that the first-year budget is for "a national fund-raising campaign" seeking $5 million in its first three years.

Waldrep said all money left after operating expenses are paid will be applied to research.

Neither Waldrep nor his accountant, John Anderson, could estimate the total contributions to the foundation to date.

The Star-Telegram also said that some of the 39 prominent scientists listed as "membership elect" to the Kent Waldrep International Spinal Cord Research Foundation Inc. advisory committee said they were unaware of the foundation or the committee.

The newspaper contacted 14 of the scientists and reported only one knew he was on the committee, designed to review research proposals and make funding recommendations to the foundation's directors. Some of the others angrily objected to the use of their names and said they opposed Waldrep's efforts.

Associated Press Sports Writer

Milton Berle may have been the first comedian to utilize television, but nobody has taken advantage of the small screen better than Bob Hope, who will be taking his act on the road again. This time, the road leads to six college campuses during the frenetic football season for a TV special on NBC this Monday night.

The scene may change but the format and style remain the same for the 76-year-old Hope, who has taken his one-liners to China, the London Palladium, the Ohio Jubilee and his own birthday party for some of his TV shows in

'I had been asked to appear at Florida, Alabama and Indiana State and we needed a show for Nov. 19," Hope said of the haphazard way TV sometimes fills its time. So Hope lined up appearances at Harvard, Colgate in Hamilton, N.Y. and the University of Southern California. A snip-snip here and a laugh track there, and NBC has a two-hour show called "Bob Hope on Campus" as a ratings competitor to ABC's "Monday Night Football.

AP Special Correspondent College football starts filling its bowls this weekend - six days before Thanksgiving. Some hearty appetites are going to be satisfied, others disappointed.

A good bet not to go empty-handed is long-enduring Alabama. If the nation's No. 1 team doesn't land automatically in the Sugar, it should have its choice of the Orange or Cotton.

Ideally, the bowl matchups should have national championship ramifications. On current status, the gridiron "druthers" would send No. 1 Alabama against No. 3 Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, No. 2 Ohio State against No. 4 Southern California in the Rose, with No. 5 Florida State and No. 6 Texas in the Cotton.

agent right-hander and strikeout specialist, will sign a four-year, $4 million contract Monday with the Houston Astros, the Houston Post reported today.

However, the Post said John McMullen, Astros owner, denied a deal had been made.

Ryan, at his home in Alvin, just 26 miles from the Astrodome, would not confirm the report, saying only that he had made up his mind.

"I have one team in mind," Ryan said. "I'll let the club make its own announcement, but I've made up my mind, you can say that.'

The Post said confirmation of a $1 million-plus a year contract was given by 'highly placed baseball sources.'

In the recent free agent draft, Ryan was picked by 12 teams but the Astros, Texas Rangers, New York Yankees, and Milwaukee reportedly have been the only ones seriously considering the former California Angels star. The Post said the Yankees were expected to announce today they were dropping efforts to sign Ryan. McMullen, in New York, said he believes the Astros have a good chance of signing Ryan.

"Let's just say we're not out of the running," he said. McMullen, a New York shipbuilder, baseball player ever. Ryan, who was 16-14 with a earned run average of 3.60 and had 223 strikeouts for California this past season, sent a public letter to the Santa Ana newspaper that also appeared in today's editions. Together, they dominated the 1978 RichAstrosPact Triple Crown races — the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness Stakes and Bel-Triple Crown races - the Kentucky mont Stakes. Affirmed eked out a victoin each under the reins of jockey Steve Cauthen, who was enjoying a phenomenal season.

Affirmed won three Eclipse championships and finished his career with six straight victories as a 4-year-old.

His finale was Belmont Park's Jockey Club Gold Cup. Affirmed surged home ahead of Spectacular Bid, winner of this year's Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and Coastal, the Belmont

Bud Delp, Spectacular Bid's trainer, clamored for one more showdown with Affirmed, but Combs said the challenge was not seriously considered.

We were never concerned about Spectacular Bid," he said. "We were as relaxed after the Gold Cup in New York as if we were going to a church picnic. The value of this horse is between

25 and 30 million dollars now and it would have been a real disaster to have him hurt himself on turf," Combs said. "He had nothing left to prove. . . and bred to a Spendthrift mare, Whydidju, adding the colt will begin his fertility test next month.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) -The New Jersey Gems spent two weeks negotiating a six-figure contract with female basketball star Ann Meyers. Now, they'll have to wait a little longer for her signature.

Miss Meyers never made it to a Wednesday news conference at which she was to sign the agreement with the Women's Basketball League team, because her plane was fogged in at Seattle International Airport.

Meyers' no-show embarrassed Gems president Robert J. Milo, who penned his part of the bargain, nevertheless.

When I picked my staff, I left one erson out - a staff weatherperson," Milo said. "If I had known this, I would

Grandparents Not Impressed By Trojan Star

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Southern Cal's Charles White is the nation's leading rusher this season and the second most productive runner in college football history, but at least three people aren't tremendously impressed - Bertha and Jessie Leggett and Charles White.

"My grandparents, Bertha and Jessie, really aren't concerned with what I'm doing now in football," said Trojan tailback White, who lived with the Leggetts most of his youth.

They figure football is just a way for guys to have fun on Saturday afternoon, and they're more concerned about what I'll do when I finish playing."

White, like his grandparents, seems generally unimpressed by his running with the football. He has gained 1,650 yards on 258 carries this season - an average of 6.34 yards per carry - to move him to second on the all-time collegiate rushing list with 5,404. Tony Dorsett gained 6,082 yards during his college career at Pittsburgh.

"I guess I'm my own worst, or best, critic," said White, a taut-muscled sixfoot, 185-pound senior. "I look at the game films, and I always see where I could have done better.

White says he hopes his future holds, among other things, a victory for the third-ranked Trojans over UCLA on Nov. 24, a Rose Bowl victory on Jan. 1, and a pro football career. Some observers don't think White will go high in the National Football League draft, however, since he is small for a pro running

However, Southern Cal coach John Robinson has said that pro scouts observing the Trojans have had to re-examine their initial thoughts about White. Whatever the case, White isn't taking anything for granted.

'I'm looking forward to playing in the pros," said White, "but I know making it will be new challenge for me. It's a whole new everything, it's starting all over. You can be a great college football player and it doesn't mean a thing after

White said the 1979 season has had only one major disappointment for him - the "loss." The "loss" he referred to was actually a 21-21 tie, the only blemish on the Trojans' 9-0-1 record.

"When you're involved for a long time in a winning tradition, even a tie seems like losing," said White, who came to USC out of the highly successful prep football program at San Fernando High. "I guess you get a little spoiled."

never have let Annie go out to Seattle," Milo said during the news conference at Giants Stadium.

The purpose of the Gerns' news conference was to show off their newly signed player. She was supposed to have flown to Seattle, appear at a ceremony honoring her and Samuel Schulman of the National Basketball Association Supersonics for their contribution to wornen's sports.

The schedule called for the 5-foot-9 Miss Meyers to board a "red-eye flight" from Seattle late Tuesday night and arrive in time for the contract signing ceremony, but Miss Meyers forget to leave room for the unpredictable weather of the Pacific Northwest.

Milo announced that Miss Meyers. the former UCLA All-American, from Long Beach, Calif., would sign a six-figure contract. She has agreed to $130,000 in a three-year agreement, sources said.

The agreement calls for $50,000 the first year and $40,000 in each of the other two, sources said. Miss Meyers' agent, James M. Griffin, would not discuss contract details with reporters.

The Gems acquired the rights to sign Miss Meyers from the Houston Angels, who named her as their No. 1 draft pick. While at UCLA, she averaged 17.8 points per game with shooting averages of 50 percent from the floor and 78.5 percent from the free-throw line.

Miss Meyers tried out for the NBA's Indiana Pacers this season but was cut. Until a few weeks ago, she was exercising her contract rights to do color broadcasting for the Pacers, Griffin said.

Milo denied he was "exploiting" the 23-year-old star to sell tickets. "I'm not signing her to fill seats. I have to win games to fill seats. We think she's going to contribute to the final score.' Gems captain Wanda "Wicked Wanda" Szeremeta, who played against Miss Meyers in college, said she's looking forward to having her join the team. Miss Meyers played at UCLA, while Miss Szeremeta and Carol "The Blaze" Blazejowski were sensations at Montclair "Ann Meyers is probably the best all-around ball player that I have ever had the pleasure of playing with or against," Miss Szeremeta said.

"What Ann Meyers did with the Pacers really helped women's basketball," Miss Szeremeta said. "She's the kind of player that can take control of a game and make things happen."

Miss Meyers is expected to be in uniform Saturday night as the Gems open their season against the Washington Metros at the Dunn Sports Complex at the Elizabeth High School.

Senate Approves Aid For Cooling Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate, working on legislation to help people pay their heating bills, has come up with a plan to assist the poor and elderly with their summer air conditioning costs.

The Senate approved an amendment this week that would allow some poor and elderly persons to use emergency fuel aid for the cooling bills if high temperatures could cause health problems. The overall legislation would provide $8.6 billion for a fixed program of aid to persons unable to pay skyrocketing fuel and utility bills over the next three

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for Friday predicts showers for most of the West Coast, snow over a portion of the Great Lakes and clear skies for the rest of the nation. (AP Laserphoto)

Fair, Warmer Days Forecast For Area

A-J News Services The South Plains had temperatures in the middle and low 20s under a clear, cold sky this morning. It was 23 degrees at Muleshoe in Bailey County and 20 at the Muleshoe Wildlife Refuge south of there.

Abernathy had an overnight low of 26, and Lubbock was relatively warm at

The forecast calls for mostly fair skies through Friday with temperatures in the low 60s today, mid-30s tonight and mid-60s Friday in the Lubbock vicinity.

Winds will be southwesterly at five to 10 mph today and tonight. A high pressure area continued to dominate the Texas weather scene today, keeping skies clear over almost all the state and temperatures generally in the 30s and 40s. The only clouds noted early today by the National Weather Service were in the Rio Grande Valley northward to Del Rio and over portions of West Texas.

Early morning temperature extremes ranged from a 27 degree reading at Marfa to Laredo's relatively warm 63.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies over the Rio Grande Valley northward into southwest Texas, where scattered showers were possible by tonight. The remainder of the state was expected

Light snow fell in parts of the upper Midwest today, and scattered flurries dusted parts of the East with snow.

A weather system skirting the U.S.-Canada border spread snow across parts of northern Minnesota and into Upper Michigan, the National Weather Service

During a six-hour period ending early today an inch of snow fell at both Duluth nd International Falls, Minn., for a total snow cover of up to 3 inches.

Isolated reports of flurries also were received from northern Vermont to northwestern Pennsylvania. Cloudy skies were prevalent across the remainder of the Great Lakes region, the northern portion of the Ohio Valley and much of the Dakotas.

Fog and overcast skies lingered over parts of the Pacific gnorthwest and central California. A travelers advisory for dense fog was in effect again early today in the San Joaquin Valley.

Poor visibility due to fog and haze made morning rush-hour driving hazardous in the area Tuesday and Wednesday. Elsewhere, skies were clear or at worst only partly cloudy thanks to a series of high pressure centers stretching from the Northern Rockies to the South-

Suspect In Rally Deaths Surrenders To Agents

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - A 15th man sought in connection with the shooting deaths of five Communist Workers Party members at an anti-Klan rally here has surrendered near Chicago, the FBI said today.

Jack Wilson Fowler Jr., 28, of Winston-Salem, a self-avowed Nazi, was taken into custody by FBI agents late Wednesday night in Hinsdale, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, said Andrew Pelczar, FBI supervisor in Greensboro.

Greensboro police have signed warrants charging Fowler with five counts of murder and one count of conspiracy

The motorcyclist, Jackie Don Tannery, 25, of 1722 22nd St. was being treated at Methodist Hospital for the fracture. Police said the woman driving the car involved in the mishap was wanted for failing to stop and render aid.

The collision occurred in the 2300block of 19th Street. When police arrived on the scene, they found Tannery lying on the side of the road not to his upright motorcycle.

The injured man said that after the accident the woman got out of her car, ran up to him and said she was going for help. He said he asked her why she turned in front of him and she ran off That was the last the victim or witnesses to the accident saw of her, according to reports. Witnesses said Tannery was eastbound on 19th Street and the other motorist was in the westbound lane attempting to make a left turn when the two vehicles collided Witnesses said the motorcycle continued some distance and that when it stopped, Tannery rolled to the ground.

The driver of the car was described as a short, white female, between 18 and 25, with light brown hair. She reportedly was driving a 1973-77 tan or brown-colored Cutlass. In other activity, a 55-year-old Lubbock woman said she was giving her granddaughter candy about 9:15 p.m. Wednesday at her son's house when her daughter-in-law got mad and assaulted

She said the woman saw her feeding the child candy and screamed, "I told you not to give that to her.'

The assailant allegedly threw a gameboard at her mother-in-law, striking her in the face, and then hit her on the head and arm with a metal ash tray. The grandmother, who reportedly was not hurt seriously, said she ran out of the house and called police.

Gunfire was heard about 11:20 p.m. Wednesday in the 3100-block of Clovis Road and when police arrived on the scene they found a watchdog shot and

House Passes Long-Awaited Meat Import Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - A long-awaited new meat import plan has taken a big step in becoming law. It includes compromises said to be acceptable to the Carter administration

The House approved the measure, 352-48, Wednesday. It would allow more foreign meat to enter the country when domestic output declines and tighten imports when production rises.

The current method, based on a 1964 law, is keyed directly to U.S. production. That means when domestic output declines - as the situation is now - imports also are reduced

President Carter vetoed similar legislation a year ago. Officials said he supports the new bill because of two compromises accepted by the sponsors.

Government economists told Congress that the measure, which involves a 'counter-cyclical" formula, wouldn't affect consumers or food prices for years.

American cattle producers, after trimming herds severely, are just now beginning to rebuild breeding inventories, and it will be several more years before much impact is felt by consum-

Most foreign suppliers also have reduced herds in recent years because of heavy losses and won't have much extra meat to offer until they adjust to the new import rules, the economists said.

Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio. and other opponents argued that any restrictions on trade force higher consum-

But Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the bill's main sponsor, said the old formula has hurt both producers and consumers within the shorter time frame of a 10year cattle cycle.

The reversal of the 15-year-old law has long been sought by the cattle industry and opposed by meat importers.

The bill was sent to the Senate after the House accepted by voice vote a Carter-administration amendment to set the minimum annual imports at 1.25 billion

Originally, the measure had a floor of 1.2 billion pounds. Gradison's attempt to raise it to 1.3 billion was rejected, 266-

In addition to raising the floor, the new bill gives Carter power to allow more imports in emergencies or after 'market disruptions." Present law gives him broad discretion, but the 1978 bill he vetoed allowed him virtually none. About 1.57 billion pounds of the quota-type meat will be imported this year from Australia and New Zealand which are the major suppliers - and about a dozen other countries. The law covers fresh, frozen and chilled beef, veal, mutton and goat meat, but nearly all is beef used by U.S. processors to make hamburger and oth-

roughly 7 percent of domestic produc-

Presidents can suspend the quotas set by the 1964 formula and allow more meat to enter if supplies are inadequate or prices "unreasonable." The cattle industry argued that presidents have used that authority mostly to make political points with consumers, depressing ranchers' prices in the process and disrupting normal market cycles.

Bo Derek Nothing Like Woman In '10'

NEW YORK (AP) - "It's nice what people are saying, but I'm not a '10," said Bo Derek, the stunningly beautiful 22-year-old actress who plays one man's fantasy of the perfect woman in the current film "10."

"There is no '10," she said. "It's just an image, an illusion we created for the movie. It's not me."

Who is Bo Derek? Some would say she's an illusion created by her husband, actor-director John Derek, who has what's been described as an hypnotic or Svengali-like hold over his young wife.

'John is my '10.' He's all my fantasies, my perfect man," the actress said. "He's honest above all things. He's beautiful and loving. Love is the most important thing to him."

It was about five years ago when John Derek first laid eyes on Bo. Then she was Mary Kathleen Collins, a 17year-old California girl who had been told by her friends she ought to be an

Larry Brooks, 47, a Caterpillar employee, was charged Monday with disorderly conduct and obstructing a police officer after he allegedly kicked an incoming car. No one was hurt, and Caterpillar spokeswoman Linda Sellers-Rundgren said the company considered the disturbance an isolated incident. No new talks were scheduled between the strike-bound Caterpillar Tractor Co. and the United Auto Workers un-

Derek insists on being the only one allowed to photograph her, and during interviews, he is like a guardian angel, offering protection and approval, and giving an occasional "thumbs up" re-

It was Derek's idea that his wife audition for "10." Bo, however, felt overweight and far from the "perfect" woman she would have to play in the film. His confidence and encouragement made up for her lack of it, however, and she followed his advice.

Although she maintains she's nothing like the woman she plays in "10," she shies away from letting the public know who she really is.

"I don't want people to know much about me," she said, smiling at her husband. "The 'me,' I want to keep private always. People will just have to pick up on little pieces. I like it that way.'

Reps. J. Marvin Leath, D-11, Kika de Garza, D-15, Mickey Leland, D-18, Manuel Lujan, R-1 (N.M.), and Harold Runnels, D-2 (N.M.), did not vote.

NO WORK, NO WELFARE - The House voted, 200 for and 205 against, to reject a Republican substitute for the welfare bill (HR 4904; see previous vote). The GOP proposal would have allowed a work requirement for welfare ecipients and provided states with block grants with which they could fashon their own welfare systems subject to rtain federal controls.

Rep.Barber Conable, R-N.Y., a suporter, said the GOP plan "would keep e focus of the welfare program on the states (and) reward them for a tight, ell-run program.'

FRONT-DOOR GI BILL - The House adopted, 236 for and 115 against, an amendment to use the student loan program to attract better-educated volunteers to the military. By entering certain fields of active or reserve duty, holders of student loans would have up to $1,000 (or 20 per cent, whichever is higher) of their loan forgiven by the government. The amendment was attached to a bill (HR 5192) extending the Higher Education Act of 1965, passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., a supporter, said: "Our military weapons are becoming more and more sophisticated and it is essential to our national defense to have the best educated service person

Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., an opponent, said that as chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, "I do no really want to go out across the country and try to explain (the program) to people who are already complaining that we do not do a good enough job in collecting back the money the federal government advances for education.

Members voting "yea" favored the use of student-loan forgiveness as an incentive to military service.

AIRCRAFT CARRIER - The Senate rejected, 20 for and 72 against, an amendment to kill a $2.1 billion appropriation to build what will be the 5th nuclear-powered aircraft carrier in the U.S. fleet. Sen. John Warner, R-Va., an advocate of the carrier, said: "We are an island nation heavily dependent on the sea for our economic and military security The aircraft carrier is an essential part of the U.S. naval fleet and is the key to our continued maritime superiority.' Senators voting "nay" wanted to build another nuclear-powered aircraft

son Schmitt, R (N.M.), voted "nay." 'SYNFUEL" - The Senate rejected, 37 for and 57 against, an amendment to scale down a proposed synthetic fuels program. The vote left intact a plan to set up an Energy Security Corp. that would spend $20 billion to create a synthetic fuel industry through price supports, government purchase agreements, direct loans, loan guarantees, joint ventures with private firms, and government ownership of production plants.

The amendment, offered to a bill (S 932) headed for final passage, would have substituted a less-ambitious $3 billion plan administered by the Department of Energy and without direct loans, joint ventures, or government-owned plants. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., a supporter of the amendment, said the larger program "threatens to turn synfuels facilities into gold-plated Edsels.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., an opponent, said the choice was between "a puny bill - really a research and development bill - or a significant bill.'

Senators voting "yea" favored a less extensive synfuel program. Tower and Schmitt voted "yea."

Bentsen and Domenici voted "nay." NOW ACCOUNTS - By a vote of 37 for and 51 against, the Senate rejected an amendment preventing banks and savings and loans from paying interest on checking accounts without the approval of the states in which they operate. The amendment, proposed to a bill (HR 4986) permitting "NOW accounts" at federally-chartered financial institutions, would have limited such accounts to states where state-chartered institutions could offer competitive services. Its effect would have been to slow the spread of interest-bearing checking accounts. The bill was passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., the sponsor, said that under his amendment if the state does not want NOW accounts, they do not have to have them."

Sen. William Proxmire. D-Wis., an opponent, said the amendment "has the Ward features a fur coat on the cover of its winter catalogue. J.C. Penney has its own knock-offs of Levi jeans and Izod shirts. Sears, Roebuck and Co. pushes a 'Designer Group' of women's apparel. Something has happened at the three mail-order giants. No longer content to supply value-conscious Middle America with inexpensive, durable clothing, they've caught up with high fashion.

Gone are the rows of stand-up fig-ures. The bulky catalogues rely increasingly on magazine-type models in settings from ski slopes to disco clubs. The inventory has changed to include the latest styles, including stretch disco pants and jogging outfits.

'They're very aware of what's happening in the fashion world. They do a lot of research about fashion trends and they do a lot of checking," says Norman Karr, executive director of the Men's Fashion Association, the public relations arm of the men's fashion industry.

The three giants have drawn battle lines in their quest for today's big shoppers - the working woman and what the chains call the "contemporary customer," the young and fashion cons-

Each store has shown a different degree of commitment - and success - in the quest. Of the three, industry observers say, Penney's has emerged as the most innovative and classy.

"Our goal is to have Penney stores look just like department stores, with the same taste level, the same environment," says Lois Ziegler, the store's fashion coordinator.

Through its Women's Fashion Program, tested in 1976 and expected to be incorporated in all 482 full-line stores by 1980, the store has stocked well-known national brands that form the moderately priced lines at expensive department stores. The quality and selection in children's and men's wear has also been upgraded.

While Penney's relies on brand names and regional specialists to make fashion decisions. Sears has gone the opposite way. The world's largest retailer has centralized its operations and is relying more than ever on its own labels. For starters, the 860-store chain recently pared down its 2,000-member women's wear buying staff and moved it from New York City to Sears Tower headquarters in Chicago. Once a risktaker with designer lines like Johnny Miller sportswear, Sears has become increasingly conservative and, many believe, uninspired.

Sear's five-year plan, a blueprint to combat its fiscal woes, says it best: "We are not a fashion store. We are not a store for the whimsical, nor the affluent. Sears is a family store for middle-class homeowning Americans.

Montgomery Ward may not be as conservative, but Jil Curry, the fashion editor of Chain Store Age, repeats a familiar cliche when asked about Ward's: 'As Sears goes, so goes Montgomery

ing Ward's fashion future for, the experts say, the 427-store chain hasn't yet established its own fashion identity.

Whatever identity Ward or its competitors adopt, all three share common weaknesses and strengths. Critics say that despite snappy clothing, they are clumsy in executing fashion displays.

Fashion directors respond that they are aware of the problem and have been trying to do something about it. At Penney's, for instance, they hold fashion shows for buyers and distribute how-to

Ag Exports Continue Fast Pace

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farm exports are setting records each year and could double again by 1985, according to some U.S. farm spokesmen.

'We have got to begin thinking and working for a national export goal. Farm exports should contribute in the range of $65 billion to $70 billion by 1985," said Winston Wilson, president of the National Association of Wheat Growers.

Exports of crops, meat animals and various products were valued at about $32 billion for the year that ended Sept. 30, a 17 percent increase in value. The volume of exports increased only 3.9

The total was about double the value of agricultural imports, leaving a $16 billion surplus to partially offset a $40 billion deficit in trading of other goods, such as oil.

Wilson and others made their predictions Tuesday at an exhibit and briefing in the Capitol sponsored by the Agricultural Council of America.

The council is a private group formed in 1973 to improve farming's image at a time of rapidly rising food prices. Highlighting the exhibit was a "scale of trade," with farm commodities offsetting imports such as oil, automobiles and electronic equipment.

A new council report, "Agricultural Exports, America's Economic Superstar," said growers and exporters of grain, soybean and cotton believe exports can be increased by $7 billion to $8 billion a year, double the recent rates of increase. The Agriculture Department last week forecast $38 billion in exports for 1979-80, if railroad, truck and barge transportation systems are able to move more commodities. It foresees a 19 percent hike in total value and a 15 percent increase in the volume shipped

Retail Giants Dressing Up

The mass merchandisers' biggest plus is their ability to reproduce designer items cheaply, offering private label garments at low prices.

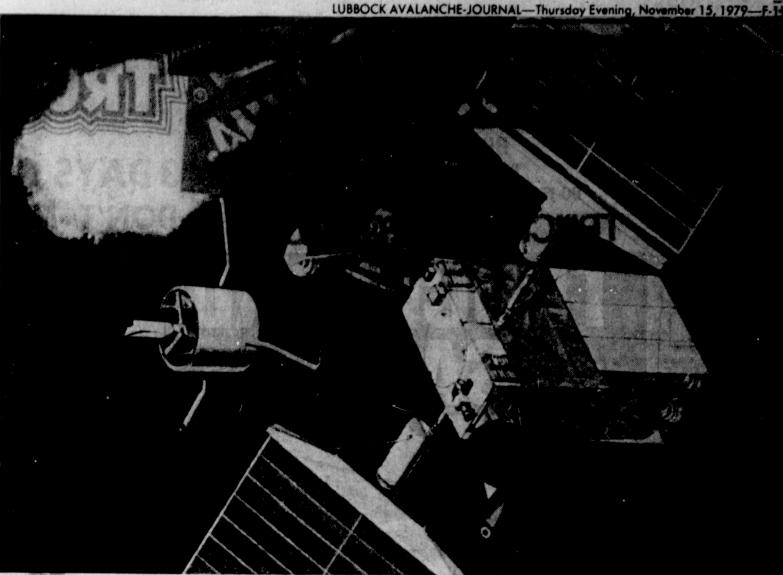

Consider Penney's campaign for its copy of the Izod sport shirt. They replaced the well-known alligator on the upper left side with a fox and invited customers to "outfox the alligator.

Likewise, Penney's and its competitors promise customers a "designer" jean for a fraction of the price. Sears has the "Thumbs Up" jean; Penney's has "Plain Pocket" jeans which fashion directors say differ from Levis only in the label; Ward's buyers say their jean is a dead ringer for Calvin Klein's.

These merchandisers manage to produce such products because of a longstanding working relationship with manufacturers.

None of the stores has its own designers per se. Instead, their fashion experts attend shows in Europe and scour the fashion pages for the latest styles. They then work directly with manufacturers who also advise them on the latest in fabrics and styles.

Couturiers the big three are not. But, then again, Sears, Penney's and Ward's, no matter how fashion-conscious they become, do not care to lead the fashion world. Their fashion experts say the three chains are content to stick to their motto, providing Middle America with "fashion at a price."

New Jersey Legislators Criticize Public Schools

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) - Like parents across the nation, New Jersey's Assembly and Senate members have serious concerns about the education their children are getting

But unlike most of the people they represent, a UPI survey shows more than half of the legislators have sent at least one child to a parochial or private

"If I had to do it all over again, I would have sent them all to parochial school," said State Sen. Brian T. Kennedy, a father of four whose children have attended public and Catholic schools "Because," he added, "then they would have learned something!

The judgment against the schools is even worse. Privately, one legislator described public schools as a "battle zone" where drug abuse and violence against teachers and students are common. Several others said essentially the same

The bulk of their criticism against public schools focused on their lack of discipline, poor emphasis on basic skills, questions about teacher quality and violence and drug abuse by students. interviews also showed many chose to live in certain communities primarily phasis on higher education. because they liked the local public he moved to his community because of the public schools. He said his "daughter was challenged to the hilt" in Westfield, one of the more affluent communities in the state. "Good students have exceptional opportunities.' Although a check showed only five of the 17 department heads in Gov. Brendan T. Byrne's chinet sent their children to non-public schools, many of the cabinet members live in affluent communities where the school systems are considered better than average.

The state's public school system enrolls 1.3 million students, compared with 220,000 in non-public schools.

Of the present 79 Assembly members, 42 have sent some or all of their children to non-public schools. Of the 38 senators, 25 have enrolled children in non-public schools.

There appeared a pattern among the lawmakers of switching between public and non-public schools in search of the learning environment the legislators felt would be best. Many said the bottom line is how well any school's students do on statewide tests, the proportion of students who go to college, and the school's em-

Many also believe non-public students progress at a faster pace and deschool pupils.

The majority of those sending their children to non-public schools chose parochial schools. The main reason cited was the religious instruction

A few male lawmakers said their wives insisted on a non-public education or that the parochial schools were closer to home. Several said public schools were overcrowded or on double sessions or that they sent their children to nonpublic schools because the youngsters wanted to be with their friends.

"I'm concerned whether school authorities are working closely enough with law enforcement authorities to control" drugs in the school, said State Senate Minority Leader Garrett Hagedorn, who added he sent his three children to parochial school to get the "Christ-centered education" that he did as a boy.

Several lawmakers said parochial schools' educational standards had declined in the past few decades - especially since lay teachers began replacing nuns and priests in the classrooms. Nevertheless, they praised the generally tougher discipline standards in non-public schools.

We have forgotten to teach children to respect other people's property and each other. We have been more concerned with teaching children to ... be happy, said State Sen. S. Thomas Gagliano, who sends his four children to both parochial and public schools.

The lawmakers said parochial schools often have fewer discipline problems because they do not have to keep disruptive students and that public school teachers who do discipline children worry if the parents will object.

"The public school system does not seem to have that upper hand," said Assemblyman Francis McManimon. Discipline used to be shared by the parents. teachers and clergy, with the entire burden now on educators, said the assemblyman who has enrolled all his four children in Catholic schools.

"The progressive attitude" of the public schools has not fared very well, said Assemblyman Vincent Pellechia, who remembers that when he was growing up, "we had to know it (the basics) before we moved on to the next class." His children attended both public and parochial schools.

The feeling of several lawmakers, however, could be summed up in the words of Assemblyman Emil Olszowy, who sent his son to a private school so that he could improve his grades in his last year in high school.

"It's not the school, it's mostly the student. You can send a kid to Harvard and if he's going to flunk out, he's going to flunk out bumped an electrical transformer at a Montana meat-packing plant sometime last June, the driver probably didn't think much of it.

But the incident had far-reaching effects as 200 gallons of a cancer-causing chemical, PCB, leaked out of the transformer and into animal feed, eventually contaminating several hundred thousand pounds of eggs, chickens, pork, beef and processed foods in at least 17 states. from the West Coast to New Jersey.

Among the businesses most directly affected was the Ritewood Egg Co., the only major industry in tiny Franklin, Idaho, which was ordered by the federal government to destroy its entire inventory of hundreds of thousands of chickens and millions of eggs. And one-third of Franklin's 400 residents underwent tests to determine whether the PCB level in their bodies was above federal standards. Fortunately, it wasn't. The contamination did not come to public light until Sept. 11, more than two months after a sample of contaminated chicken from Ritewood was taken and three months after the original PCB

PCB, or polychlorinated biphenyl, is used as a coolant for electrical equipment. It has been linked to skin disease, liver cancer, miscarriages and birth defects in tests on laboratory animals.

The Environmental Protection Agency outlawed the production of PCB in 1976, but the chemical still is found in millions of electrical transformers.

PCB accumulates in animal and human tissue, but scientists don't know how much PCB must be be ingested to affect a person.

Idaho's chief health officer, Ed Gallagher of Boise, said a person would have to eat three or four dozen of the Ritewood eggs for 45 days before the PCB would have any effect.

"I think (the incident) was extremely overplayed," said Louis Mendoza of Franklin, who said he continued to eat eggs from Ritewood Egg Co. even after they heard the eggs contained PCB.

After the truck backed into the transformer at the Pierce Packing Co. in Billings, Mont., the PCB leaked into the

A routine tissue sample from a Ritewood chicken was taken at a U.S. Department of Agriculture laboratory at Provo, Utah, on July 6. By the time the tests confirmed the PCB contamination and the USDA had notified the EPA And the U.S. Food and Drug Administration of the contaminated sample, it was Aug. 15. The owners of the Ritewood farm

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — One of Bea Orsott's greatest regrets is that she kept a dental appointment on Nov. 18, 1978 — and thus missed the chance to die with the Rev. Jim Jones and 912 of her fellow Peoples Temple members.

Mrs. Orsott was in a dentist's chair in Georgetown when her husband and other temple faithful drank poison in a death rite ordered by Jones at the church's agricultural center in the jungles of Guyana.

One of several former temple members still professing belief in Jones, Mrs. Orsott had left the remote outpost of Jonestown — her home for one year and three months — for the Guyanese capital on Nov. 14.

Had she remained behind, she says, she would have gladly obeyed the order to die.

"I was so mad when I found out I missed the end," Mrs. Orsott said in a

"I wish I had been there to share in the final moment of unity. I don't know how those who were there Nov. 18 and left alive can live with themselves."

Her brown eyes brimming with tears, the former legal secretary for the Internal Revenue Service said, "It was the most secure life, the best life I ever know."

"I knew Jim Jones for eight years, and he was the best person I ever met. He made the best possible decision (to order the deaths) under the circumstances. He was framed by the CIA, and I lay the entire blame on their shoulders."

Like many of the former Peoples Temple members interviewed by UPI. Mrs. Orsott believes Jones' repeatedly voiced fear of a government conspiracy to destroy the church was justified and that CIA agents had infiltrated the group.

Mrs. Orsott, who joined the Peoples Temple in 1970, said her first reaction to news of the deaths was to commit sui-

"Death is ultimate proof of belief in a cause. But then I began thinking there was a reason why Jim — who had such powers of revelation — told me to go to the dentist that day. So I decided to live."

Over the past year, her decision has not proved easy.

She was met with hostility and ridicule from family and friends upon her return to San Francisco.

"What happened at Jonestown was like an earthquake. It left me penniless, homeless, friendless. When I got back, my-family refused to have anything to do with me. I finally moved in with an old Peoples Temple member, who didn't charge me one cent."

In April, Mrs. Orsott began working part-time as a secretary in the office of attorney Charles Garry, who had represented the Peoples Temple.

Like the other former members interviewed, she finds it "very difficult to adjust to this world."

"There's no love here, not like the love Jim taught his 'family.' He kept his promises, he cared for the sick and elderly, which is more than you can say for this society.

"Something went very wrong at the end. The truth has not been told about what happened, and the people who know are dead. But one reason I'm still alive is that I hope somehow to learn the

Mrs. Orsott said Jones had changed in the final months.

"He was physically sick, he was drugged a lot. On the loudspeaker, his voice sounded like he was drunk. But he always made sense, and his revelations were always right."

She attended her first Peoples Temple meeting in Redwood Valley, Calif., as a "skeptic" but became impressed with Jones when he told her about a note she had written as a child.

"I wrote the note when I was six and put it behind a brick in the chimney. There was nobody who knew about the note. First chance I get I'm going back to Georgia to see if the note is still

Mrs. Orsott said she also admired Jones' lack of prejudice and sincerity.

To restructure the Peoples Temple would be "much too painful" now, she

Jonestown's Cost Tallied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government spent $4 million in dealing with the aftermath of the Jonestown tragedy

Most of the money, according to congressional accounts, went for the special Air Force operation that flew 914 bodies to Dover AFB, Del. The total does not include the cost of a grand jury investigation or a series of congressional hear-

Families that claimed the bodies of relatives — and could afford it — repaid the government $540 each for burial and mortuary costs.

The Justice Department has filed suit against remnants of the Peoples Temple seeking to regain the $4 million. Chances of success are viewed as good, since the temple had various bank accounts totalling $11 million to $12 million.

The U.S. suit takes precedence over hundreds of individual suits filed against the temple, mostly by relatives. The total of these suits, according to staff members who handled the congressional investigation, is "astronomical" and, if successful, will pay off only a few cents on the dollar.

Abound In Kansas Town

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) - This city in merica's heartland has a problem other urban centers might envy - too many obs and too few workers.

In a nine-year span, Wichita's jobless ate has plummeted from one of the all the st in the country to one of the low-

Much of the reason is the soaring sales and expansion of the aircraft indus try, the largest employer in this city of

But the city worries about its boom. The economy is so strong it's creating problems. Wichita, Kansas' largest city, is bursting with vacant jobs.

The problem here reflects the state of the skilled labor pool nationwide. Demand for skilled and semi-skilled workers has given other cities in rural America, such as Sioux Falls, S.D., Lincoln, Neb., and Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the lowest jobless figures in the country

The national unemployment rate was 6 percent in October, and many cities as diverse as New York, Mobile, Ala. and Jersey City, N.J., chronically are plagued by jobless rates above 8.5 percent. But few skilled workers are on the jobless lists. While industries are searching for qualified workers, persons who have little training are finding it more difficult to get a job.

The highest unemployment rate is among minority teen-agers, which jumped from 31.5 percent in September to 35.7 percent last month, the highest in nearly a year.

Wichita's unemployment rate is 2.5 percent and industry leaders here fear the small labor pool may stifle business

"From a practical standpoint, there Jordan Haines, president of the Fourth National Bank and Trust Co. here. "And we have mixed emotions about that.

"We really don't want the problem to go away. We'd like to see this labor see the cause of the shortage changed." Recession threatens the economies of many American cities today. Why not

The answer can be seen in the sky over this south-central Kansas community. Aircraft production is booming in the city that calls itself the "Air Capital of the World.

In 1970, Wichita had 143,000 workers and unemployment stood at more than 11 percent.

A depressed aircraft industry was at the root of the problem. Boeing Co.'s plant in Wichita, which employed 20,000 at its peak in the late 1950s, was down to about 5,000 workers. Other aircraft manufacturers were having similar prob-

Then various factors, including the the 55 mph speed limit, made air travel more attractive. Soon production of airliners and private planes began boom-

Today, record aviation sales months are routine. Hundreds of jobs are open in the field, but there are no lines of job applicants at personnel offices.

Richard Upton, director of the Wichita area Chamber of Commerce, has asked his colleagues in other cities to tell him how they have coped with such

"The response I always get is: 'When you get a plan written, make copies and send them around, will you?' We're trying to invent the wheel here," he

The chamber and business community have tried to attract the skilled, bluecollar workers so in demand here.

"Ads were run, seminars were held and workshops were conducted," Haines is no unemployment in Wichita," says says. "We said there were jobs open in Wichita, that this was a 'pocket of prosperity.

"The net effect of our efforts has been miniscule.

The total nonfarm work force in shortage solved, but we don't want to Wichita has grown 51 percent, to 216.

growing at a rate of 1,500 a month. But it hasn't been enough. The demands on the labor pool have increased. On a recent day, the local job service reported more than 2,000 jobs open.

Many Wichita-based companies are growing. But the tight labor market has funneled much of that growth to their

000, since 1970. And Upton says it's still

Beech Aircraft Corp. is building a plant in Selma, Ala., to make its new commuter airliners. The reason? Unemployment in Selma is twice that of Wichita and the average hourly wage is $2

"We don't see Wichita's labor situation changing in the next year or two," said Seymour Colman, Beech senior vice president.

Beech's labor force of 8,000 already is up 10 percent from last year, and the company has 300 job openings in Wichita

"We're even combing through the list of recent retirees to see if we can't get some help from this reserve of experienced people," Colman said.

Boeing Co.'s plant in Wichita plans to add 700 jobs over the next six months, boosting its work force here to 14,300.

Gates Learjet Corp., which manufactures corporate jets, needs 200 skilled workers in Wichita. Learjet saw the tightening labor market here three years ago and opened a "finishing center" in Tucson, Ariz. Since then, the company has moved its marketing operation to Tucson and the work force there has grown to rival that of the Wichita plant.

Cessna, the country's largest general aviation manufacturer, has more than 200 jobs open at its Wichita headquarters, and the company was hiring workers at the rate of 100 a week this month.

Another of the city's large manufacturers, Coleman Co., which produces camping equipment, announced last spring that it will build a plant in Texas to meet expanding sales of many of its products.

All of these companies have launched nationwide recruiting eampaigns for skilled workers. But they haven't had much luck.

'We could build more airplanes if we just had more skilled people," says Steve Caine of Beech. "We can't even train them in the numbers that they are

Cessna, Beech and Learjet have a combined order backlog approaching $2 billion, and further plant expansion is in

Flying Boat 'Beat' Lindy Across Ocean

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sixty-one years ago, World War I ended, leaving the Navy's new anti-submarine weapons with nothing to do. So they became the first airplanes to fly the Atlantic Ocean, eight years before Charles Lindbergh.

On May 27, 1919, six men aboard the U.S. Navy Curtiss NC-4 flying boat completed the first flying trip across the At-

Their flying boat covered 3,925 miles, puddle-jumping from Rockaway, N.Y., to New Foundland, to the Azores, and finally to Lisbon, Portugal. The trip took 23 days including time out for bad weather and repairs.

According to the records of the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum, the flight was conceived in August 1917, during World War I, by Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Construction and Repair.

Taylor reasoned the United States needed a large, sea-based patrol bomber for anti-submarine warfare and one that make it to Europe without taking up valuable space aboard a transport

In January 1918, the Navy gave aviation pioneer Glenn H. Curtiss a contract to build four NC (Navy-Curtiss) flying boats. The first NC-1, built at Garden City, N.Y., lifted off from Jamaica Bay Oct. 4, 1918.

The armistice came on Nov. 11, 1918, leaving the flying boats without a mission. But the Navy decided to send the planes across the Altantic just the same. Each plane had two wings with an pper span of 126 feet and four Liberty V-12 engines totaling 1,600 horsepower.

The crew worked from open cock-Flights across the Atlantic have been routine for years but 60 years ago it was regarded as an extremely dangerous trip. To help supply visual and radio

The NC-1, NC-3 and NC-4 left for Halifax, N.S., on May 8, 1919, on the first leg of the trip. The NC-2, cannibalized to provide parts for the other planes, was left behind.

Engine trouble and bad weather kept the planes in New Foundland eight days. When they finally approached the Azores they ran into fog so thick the crew of the NC-4 could not see from one end to the other of the fragile craft.

The NC-4 just managed to make Horta Harbor on the island of Fayal through a break in the fog. The other two planes landed at sea. The NC-3, badly battered by waves,

Advances

NEW YORK (AP) - Despite continued worries about the Iranian situation, stock prices rose briskly today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was up 4.53 to 821.08 at noon.

Advancing issues led declines by a 2-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the market was awaiting further developments from Iran, where several dozen Americans are still being held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by Irantan students demanding the return of the shah from the United States.

It was also said to be still digesting the freeze on Iranian bank deposits in the United States ordered Wednesday by President Carter following the attempt by the Iranian government to withdraw the money

IBM was the NYSE's most active issue at noon, showing an increase of 1/4 to 623/4 on volume of 259,500 shares.

The NYSE's composite index of its more than 1,500 common stocks was up .36 to 59.21 at noon. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.04 to 217.26.

Volume on the Big Board was 12.83 million shares in the first two hours of trading, compared to 12.70 million in the same period Wednesday.

Among other active issues, NL Industries was up 11/4 to 31, Allied Chemical gained 1 to 45%, Exxon rose 3/4 to 581/4, Squibb lost 3/8 to 34¾ and Goodyear was unchanged at 12%.

Hawaiian Schools Reopened

HONOLULU (AP) - Hawaii's schools, closed three weeks ago because of possible health hazards during a janitor's strike, got a sprucing up from parents and students - and half were pronounced ready for operation.

School principals were authorized to hire additional security guards and police officials promised cooperation in maintaining order today when about half the state's 167,000 students were expected to cross picket lines, said State Superintendent of Education Charles Clark.

A union official said picketing would be stepped up at some of the schools being reopened, but there were no threats of violence.

The students missed 13 school days because of a 25-day-old statewide strike by 7,700 public blue-collar members of the United Public Workers - including janitors, cafeteria workers and garbage collectors. Teams of parents and student volunteers converged on campuses Wednesday to undertake the cleanup program that brought the go-ahead from state health officials for reopening 108 of 228 public schools. "The kids have been out of school 13 days now. Parents are anxious to have their kids back in school and are willing to do what is necessary on a community basis," said parent Ed Shank. "I'm not against the strike, but they are defying the court order to provide essential services. This is tearing at the very fabric of our society. It's essential that we live by the law. If there are people who are not willing to follow the law, I'm willing to step in," said Pat Anderson, the mother of two.

Education officials said they hope more schools would be clean enough to open by Friday. At schools that cannot be reopened because of unsanitary conditions, students will be asked to come briefly each day starting Monday to pick up and turn in homework assignments.

U.S. Production At Factories Rises Slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) - Production at the nation's factories increased a slim 0.1 percent in October, in good part reflecting sluggish automobile production, the Commerce Department said today.

The October change followed a 0.5 percent rise in September and a 0.8 percent decline in August, when auto production was cut back sharply because of slow sales. "Auto assemblies were about unchanged (last month) at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.9 million units, 11 percent below the average of the first half of the year," the report said.

Despite the auto sluggishness, the output of consumer goods rose a modest0.3 percent in October.

But the production of business equipment fell 1.3 percent. The report blamed 'strikes in the farm and construction machinery industries" involving International Harvester and Caterpillar

The output of materials, meanwhile, rose 0.3 percent. The industrial production index stood at 152.5 in October, or 52.5 percent higher than the 1967 base-year figure of 100.

That was up from September's 152.3, but still below the 1979 peak of 153 in March. And it was 1.9 percent ahead of October 1978. "Industrial production tends to advance slightly more than the nation's gross national product," said a Commerce analyst who asked not to be iden-Gross national product, a measure of the value of all the nation's goods and services, fell at an annual rate of 2.3 percent in the second quarter this year, then rose at 2.4 percent in the third quarter. Economists expect output to show little or no growth in the final quarter this year, in part because of credit-tightening moves taken by the Federal Reserve on October 6.

Markets Calm After Freeze

LONDON (AP) - Foreign exchange and bullion markets were relatively calm today following President Carter's decision to freeze Iranian government assets in U.S. banks and the continued siege at the American Embassy in Teh-

The dollar was mixed while gold prices dipped $2.50 an ounce. The British pound moved up after the Bank of England raised its minimum lending rate to 17 percent.

Frankfurt-1.7840 West marks, up from 1.7823 Zurich-1.6533 Swiss francs, up from

1.6525. Paris-4.1825 French francs, down from 4.1838. Amsterdam-1.98 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9838. Milan-829.00 Italian lire, up from 827.90.

In London, the pound rose to $2.1200 from $2.1095 the night before after the interest rate announcement. The minimum lending rate is the rate charged on loans to commercial banks, which generally charge at least one percentage point more on loans to businesses, The rate had been 14 percent and the boost was larger than expected.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 245 525 yen, little changed from Wednesday's closing 245.975.

Group Wants Parole For Wilmington 10

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - North Carolina Gov. James Hunt was jeered in Iowa this week by a small group of demonstrators chanting "parole the Wilmington 10."

About a half-dozen protesters followed Hunt from a hotel where he had given a speech to the Council of Chief State School Officers, an educational group. Hunt ignored the group.

The Wilmington 10 - nine black men and a white woman - were sentenced in 1972 to a total of 282 years in prison

Last year Hunt reduced their jail terms but refused to grant a pardon. However only one, the Rev. Ben Chavis, remains in prison. He will be eligible for parole next year.

Authors Want Public To Switch To Bikes

WASHINGTON (AP) - With gasoline in increasingly short supply, the public should consider an often-neglected renewable energy resource - calories - and bicycles as an alternative to automobiles, say the authors of "Running on Empty: The Future of the Automobile in an Oil-Short World."

The authors say consumers must seek alternatives such as bicycles and mopeds because gasoline prices are rising and synthetic fuels will not be cheap. The book - by Worldwatch Institute researchers Lester R. Brown, Christopher Flavin and Colin Norman - also says bike-riding is on the rise in the United States, with 103 million bicycles sold in the past decade, compared to 102 million cars.
