

'Living In Terror,' Similar To Plot Of 'Birds' Says Family

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Tom and Patricia Smith are living in terror, the kind befitting a scene from Alfred Hitchcock's film "The Birds."

The difference is the Smiths' problem is bats — about 800 of them — which are nesting in the attic of their 150-year-old home in nearby Franklin Park.

Small enough to fit through a crack just 1/8 of an inch wide, they swarm from the house at dusk every night to find food and return before dawn.

They rattle at the bedroom windows and scare the children playing nearby. Once, one of them got through a window and scared the Smiths' 6-year-old daughter, Jennifer, so badly she became hysterical and has been receiving counseling since.

"Have you ever seen 'The Birds?'" Mrs. Smith asked.

"That's what it looks like. They come out in groups of 25 or 30 from all sides of the house. They'll fly around the house or fly off and come back at 4 or 5 a.m."

And Mrs. Smith readily admits, "We're definitely scared."

The Smiths so far have been unsuccessful in fighting off their unwanted boarders. They hired a roofer to patch the cracks and holes that let the bats out, but the creatures scared him away.

After rejection from six exterminating companies, they've contracted a national company to do the job.

But even after the bats are all dead, the problem won't be solved.

"The main thing is to kill them, but we'll have to get rid of them, too," Mrs. Smith said. "Once they die they'll become imbedded in the rafters and bring bugs upon them, which could spread a disease."

The Smiths bought the old house for $36,000 last November. The former owners never mentioned that Dracula's pets were living in the attic.

VW Plans U.S. Assembly Plant

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen "will definitely" build a new car assembly plant in the United States or buy an existing facility from a U.S. automaker within the next six months, an official for the West German company says.

Spokesman Tom McDonald said Volkswagen is considering sites in a dozen states. Volkswagen is the only foreign carmaker with a manufacturing plant in America.

VW also operates a metal stamping plant in West Virginia and a parts and accessories plant in Texas.

Haig Urges Wait On SALT Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Alexander Haig said Thursday the SALT II treaty is flawed and suggested the Senate postpone its ratification vote pending commitments for higher defense spending and nuclear weapon improvements in Europe.

"As of today I could not go along with SALT II," Haig, the former allied commander in Europe, told reporters during a break in his testimony to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

However, he said he could not reach a final decision until there is a clear picture of the strategy and programs that will be undertaken by the United States and NATO allies to offset expected Soviet military gains in the 1980s.

Only then, he said, would it be possible to measure whether "flaws of the treaty are offset by gains." He said it would be possible for decisions on strategy and programs to be reached later this year, "not an insurmountable amount of time."

Haig, a possible contender for the GOP presidential nomination, stopped short during his formal testimony of advocating either rejection or ratification of the treaty.

Instead, he proposed that ratification "be held in abeyance" until the United States and NATO allies agree on modernizing short-range nuclear weapons in Europe and the administration commits itself to increased military spending.

Significantly, however, he refused to suggest or endorse any treaty amendments or to predict whether the United States could negotiate a better deal if the proposed agreement is rejected by the Senate.

Haig said NATO partners could reach an agreement on modernizing nuclear weapons by the end of the year. He said there is "no precise schedule or mode" for deploying cruise missiles in Europe.

"We've tried to get it done but our own allies objected," said Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee.

"I would not subscribe to that statement," Haig replied.

Chance For Evening Showers Forecast

Hot afternoons, warm nights and a chance for widely scattered evening showers are forecast for the South Plains through Saturday.

The National Weather Service predicts that an upper-level high pressure system will continue over the area, prompting high temperatures today and Saturday in the mid 90s and nighttime lows near 70.

The relative humidity will range from near 75 percent in the early morning to about 30 percent in the afternoons. Widely scattered storms may develop as the humidity drops, but they are forecast mainly for northwest counties near the New Mexico border.

Winds will be light and variable today and Saturday, and there will be about 12 hours of sunshine both days.

Most of Texas had fair skies Thursday, but rains from tropical storm Claudette continued to wash over most of southeast Texas.

Winds were northerly over all of the state except for small portions of East Texas and along the coast, where winds were southerly. Temperatures cooled in the rain areas, but were hot elsewhere. Del Rio noted 102 degrees, and Lufkin's high was 75.

Reaction Unexpected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rosalynn Carter says neither she nor President Carter realized how the cancellation of his July 5 energy speech and his subsequent seclusion at Camp David would rivet the attention of the American public.

"The next day, after everything broke, we realized that we had the attention of the country," the first lady told editors of the Los Angeles Times Wednesday.

Mrs. Carter said she and the president were relaxing at Camp David on July 4, resting from the economic summit in Tokyo and assessing the speech he was to give the next day.

"I picked it up off the coffee table and began reading it," she said, "and after a few minutes Jimmy said, 'What do you think about it?'"

"I said, 'What's new? It's just more programs and proposals; I don't think anybody's going to listen to it,'" she recalled.

"And he said, 'I've already decided that. People don't want to hear new programs and proposals; they want to be reassured,'" Mrs. Carter quoted her husband as saying.

Vacations 'Forced'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Three high-paid 20th Century-Fox executives, including president Alan Ladd Jr., have been told to take "forced vacations" until next week, according to their offices.

Aides to Ladd, Jay Kanter and Gareth Wigan said the three men, who plan to resign to form a new production company, were told to depart, although Fox spokesman Phillip Myers said they were merely asked to leave in order to make the transition to new management smoother.

Neither Fox chairman Dennis Stanfill nor the three departing executives were available for comment. Stanfill is expected to tell the three they may return to their offices next Tuesday.

Ladd, Kanter and Wigan announced June 26 they would not renew their contracts with the studio. Their new production company will be under the auspices of Warner Communications Inc.

Films they have produced include "Star Wars," "The Turning Point," "An Unmarried Woman" and "Julia."

Praying Helped, Says Victim

WEST MILFORD, N.J. (AP) — Joan Dedrick said prayer helped her through the ordeal of being a kidnap victim.

"I was praying a lot," the 46-year-old mother of two sons told reporters at her home Monday. "I really think it was the prayer that got me through."

Mrs. Dedrick was released unharmed early Sunday after 42 hours of being held captive while her husband, William, made arrangements to pay $217,000 to her alleged kidnappers.

Four Paterson men were arrested and ordered held in lieu of $250,000 bail each in connection with her abduction. The ransom is still missing, authorities said.

Desert Hike Cut Short

FURNACE CREEK, Calif. (AP) — The idea was to hike through Death Valley to raise money for Vietnamese boat people, but it didn't last long.

U.S. Park Service rangers picked up Alexander Goldstein and Amin Hasan on Monday about 30 miles into their hike. That ended their second attempt to cross the desert. They decided to give up.

Goldstein, a 28-year-old Detroit social worker who lives across the Canadian border in Windsor, Ont., and Hasan, 27, of Los Angeles, had hoped to set a record walking the 125 miles from the south to the north end of the famed hot spot.

Area Plants Up For 'Solar Repowering'

Three South Plains and Permian Basin power plants are in the running for "solar repowering" or solar thermal boilers to supplement conventional oil or natural gas-fired boilers, the United States Department of Energy has announced.

A Southwestern Public Service Co. spokesman in Amarillo said the company received notice Thursday that its application for an engineering study grant for Plant X near Earth had been approved.

Frank Lee, public relations director for the utility company, said the application to the federal agency was submitted jointly with General Electric Corp.

Also being considered for the projects are U.S. Gypsum Co. at Sweetwater and Texas Electric Service Co. at Monahans, the DOE announced.

The national announcement of possible West Texas projects came with notice that construction will begin this year on an industrial solar power plant near Barstow, Calif.

DOE operations office spokesmen said the 10-megawatt electric plant in California, together with the already operating Central Receiver Test Facility near Albuquerque, N.M., "should help clear up most of the basic engineering questions about solar technology."

Ultimately, the department said, the technology might be used for commercial baseload electrical power and process heat in what was called "an attractive energy option to avoid dependence on oil or natural gas."

Plant X is powered entirely by natural gas with oil as an auxiliary source of power.

The DOE said conceptual design proposals have been drawn up for the solar repowering of a dozen major industrial plants and utility power plants with solar thermal boilers.

It will now negotiate construction of the solar units and, contingent on favorable results and available funding, the department will sponsor cost-shared construction of one or more such plants to be in operation by the mid-1980s, it announced.

Bank To Help Plaintiff

LONG BEACH, N.Y. (AP) — Adrienne Zimmerman, the 21-year-old student who sued her father to make him pay $6,700 in overdue college costs as well as her future law school expenses, has been granted a loan from a local bank which says it wants to help her finish school.

Miss Zimmerman learned Wednesday that Central Federal Savings and Loan of this Long Island town will cut through the usual red tape to help her pay her college costs.

Alan Katz, a bank vice president, said he had read how Miss Zimmerman sued her lawyer father, Theodore Zimmerman, on grounds that he broke an "oral contract" to pay for her undergraduate education at Adelphi University in Garden City, Long Island.

She said he paid for her first year, but did not finance the second and third years.

"We had read about it and would like to see this young woman complete her education," Katz said.

Zimmerman and his wife, Adrienne, separated on Jan. 4, 1976. The children remained with Mrs. Zimmerman.

"He treats her like dirt," Mrs. Zimmerman charged Wednesday. "My daughter doesn't want to sue her father ... but she really has no choice because she isn't prepared for anything."

Pope Plans Visit

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II will visit Canale D'Agordo, the hometown of his predecessor John Paul I, Aug. 26 to commemorate the selection of the "smiling pope," who died Sept. 28 after a 33-day pontificate.

The Rev. Romeo Panciroli, Vatican spokesman, said the pontiff will celebrate a Mass and visit the house where John Paul I was born Oct. 17, 1912.

Panciroli said the pope will recite the midday prayer on the nearby 10,000-foot Marmolada peak in the Dolomites mountains and bless a statue of the Madonna Queen of the Dolomites there. He will reach the mountain peak by helicopter and cablecar.

Cheated, Says Beauty Queen

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss Orient USA says she will close down the beauty pageant in California on Friday night unless the promoters come up with the $1,500 and other prizes she says is owed her.

Leilani Kyono O'Melia, 24, of Howell Township, says the promoters of the pageant are cheating her out of the $1,500, plus a three-week vacation in the Far East, a screen test in the Philippines and a root beer promotion contract.

"I've been very patient for a year," the reigning Miss Orient said Monday. "But I want to make sure all these young ladies know they're going to be ripped off."

The president of the pageant, Remedios Cabacungan of Toms River, insists Miss O'Melia eventually will receive all that was promised her.

"Generally speaking, we do not have the money. She should know we are just starting," Mrs. Cabacungan said.

Mrs. Cabacungan founded the pageant for young American women of Oriental ancestry two years ago. She says she will crown her third Miss Orient USA this week.

Gasoline Spill Costly

HOUSTON (AP) — A bit of spilled gasoline on his clothing led to a bigger problem for Ray Hines and his employer — the loss of more than 9,000 gallons of gas.

A tanker truck containing 9,175 gallons of gasoline valued at about $6,000 was parked outside his apartment after Hines advised a Petro-Chemical Transport dispatcher that he spilled some gas on his clothes and was stopping to change between deliveries.

Jack Green, terminal manager for the company, said Hines was in the apartment only minutes but the truck was stolen during that time.

Parts Of 'Horror' Story Said Born Out Of 'Many Bottles Of Wine'

AMITYVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — A lawyer for the man who killed six members of his family in the house that inspired the book and film "The Amityville Horror" said Thursday that parts of the best-seller were invented "over many bottles of wine."

William Weber, who represented Ronald DeFeo, convicted in the 1974 slayings of his parents and siblings in the house, said some events in the book by Jay Anson were made up by George and Kathy Lutz, who lived in the house for just 28 days before moving in January 1978.

Among the fabrications are so-called horrors of green slime coming from the keyholes, a stench, gnats and flies in a bedroom and unexplained noises, Weber said.

Reached at ABC where they were appearing on "Good Morning America" Thursday, the Lutzes declined to discuss the book. However, they insisted during their TV appearance to promote today's national premiere of the movie that the experiences recounted in the book had actually happened to them.

Told of Weber's charge, John Koshel, the general counsel for Prentice-Hall Inc., which published the hardcover book, said it would be inappropriate for him "to comment on the alleged inaccuracies or untruths in the book since the book is presently the subject of litigation."

Weber said the Lutzes first approached him after he had defended DeFeo and said they had had supernatural experiences living in the house. Weber suggested that their information might be useful for a book he intended to write about DeFeo.

Weber said that during numerous tape-recorded sessions with the Lutzes, the couple began to take incidents that Weber said he learned from DeFeo and weaved them into their own account.

"We created this horror story over many bottles of wine that George was drinking," Weber said. "We were really playing with each other. We were creating something the public would want to hear about."

During those sessions, Weber maintained, he supplied the Lutzes with background on DeFeo's life, what DeFeo said it was like living in the house and DeFeo's experiences during the murders.

Weber said the Lutzes' story about a stench, flies and gnats coming from a bedroom was based on his information that police reported a stench emanating from a bedroom where a body was found.

The lawyer said he told Kathy Lutz the murders were supposed to have taken place at about 3 a.m. "So, Kathy said, 'Well that's good. I can say I'm awakened by noises at that hour of the day and I could say I had dreams at that hour of the day about the DeFeo family.'"

When he showed the couple photos of the murder scene that showed black fingerprint marks on the door, Weber said, "George started talking about green slime coming out of the keyholes, the green slime that they use in their book."

Asked why he did not make his allegations earlier, Weber said: "They haven't violated the law. If the public is gullible enough to believe the story, so be it."

Weber's disclosure came during an interview about the Aug. 6 start of his $2 million lawsuit against the Lutzes, alleging breach of contract and fraud.

The Lutzes have filed a countersuit over a story by writer Paul Hoffman that appeared months before the book was released. Hoffman was to write the DeFeo book, Weber said.

Weber says that because of the Lutz-Anson effort, he has been unable to find a publisher for his still-to-be-written book, tentatively titled "Devil on My Back."

The current owners of the house, Jim and Barbara Cromarty, have moved out because of vandals and tourists and are renting it to three young men.

Oil Firms Report Profits Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc., the nation's third-largest oil company, said Thursday its second-quarter and first-half profits were more than double those of the same period last year.

And Sun Co. Inc., the nation's 17th-largest oil company, said its second-quarter profits were up 57 percent.

The two firms were the last of the major oil companies to announce earnings for what analysts are calling the best second quarter in the oil industry's history.

Although Texaco's 132 percent rise in second quarter earnings was the largest among the major companies, the other firms have also reported hefty increases.

AUSTIN (Special Lubbock County Tech University) a bill approved by the vision of the governor in Lubbock will full-time chief investigator was reorganized legal, administrative Lubbock County

Lubbock County, Texas Tech To Get Crime Prevention Grants

AUSTIN (Special) — Four grants for Lubbock County and a grant for Texas Tech University are among those recently approved by the Criminal Justice Division of the governor's office for crime prevention in the West Texas area.

The criminal district attorney's office in Lubbock will receive $53,152 for a full-time chief investigator and six full-time investigators. The office recently was reorganized into three branches — legal, administrative and investigative.

Lubbock County Juvenile Center has been granted $40,000 for four full-time juvenile probation officers to operate the 24-hour center. They will screen and divert status offenders from detention.

Lubbock County also will receive $28,000 for a full-time probation officer to operate Project Intercept, a joint venture by the juvenile probation department and the Lubbock Independent School District. The project provides an alternative school for juveniles.

Another $50,000 grant was approved to fund Project Intercept.

Texas Tech University has been granted $13,650 to provide the University Security Police at the Texas Tech School of Medicine with adequate communication between patrolmen and the communication base station.

Tech will receive 11 portable radios and a voting system, which is an electronic method of selecting the strongest radio signal and reproducing it either by radio or telephone lines to a receiver.

Motley County has been granted $5,482 in supplemental funding to provide legal counseling for two indigent defendants who were tried for the slaying of the Motley County sheriff.

According to the grant application, the original grant was awarded in June 1977 for the amount of $51,500. The project's goal was to provide adequate defense for the two defendants.

One defendant pleaded guilty and received a 40-year prison sentence in return for his testimony against the second defendant, who pleaded guilty to murder and received a life sentence.

Additional costs not included in the original grant were for medical treatment, boarding of defendants and extra court costs.

Motley County has a population of 1,800, 65 percent of which are age 60 or older, with 40 percent living below the poverty level. No surplus tax funds exist to pay the additional defense costs and taxes would have to be doubled to meet this obligation.

The Plainview Police Department will receive $7,192 to continue to microfilm records and fingerprint cards and bring the records system up to date.

Plainview also will receive $17,486 for continued employment of a juvenile delinquency prevention officer to investigate and make disposition of all juvenile offenses. A part-time secretary also will be funded with the grant.

The Hale County district attorney's office will receive $15,094 for an assistant prosecutor for the 64th and 242nd Judicial Districts. This is the second year of funding for the district attorney's only assistant.

Lamb County will receive $24,371 to establish a juvenile probation service to reduce juvenile delinquency and involvement in the juvenile justice system.

The South Plains Association of Governments has been granted $45,722 to continue its Law Enforcement Academy. Basic certification courses and advanced training courses are taught at the academy.

The second grant application approved for 1980 involves $5,819 for a Records Development Systems clerk to microfilm, code, file, develop photos and update records.

The Brownfield Police Department has been granted $22,970 for an identification officer and records secretary. The identification officer will assist in crime scene searches and investigations and the secretary will process offense and incident reports, prepare arrest file jackets and crime reports.

The Slaton Police Department will receive $13,253 for a 10-channel logging records system for instant recall capability when hysterical or garbled calls are suddenly cut off.

The Plainview Police Department has been granted $14,988 to continue employing a juvenile officer, and a part-time secretary to counsel, screen and divert to social agencies in the community status offenders and younger first offenders.

The Bailey County District Attorney's Office has been granted $8,288 for an investigator to assist in the 154th Judicial District composed of Bailey, Farmer and Lamb Counties.

The Hale County District Attorney's Office will receive $12,354 for an assistant district attorney to handle cases on the 242 District Court and 64th District Court.

The district attorney is responsible for felony cases in Hale and Swisher Counties.

Hale County also has been granted $18,347 for a full-time assistant prosecutor in the County Attorney's Office, and $5,874 for a court administrator to manage court dockets, set court calendars and handle administrative functions for the 64th and 242nd District Courts.

Deaf Smith County will receive $15,839 for an office manager and an investigator for the Criminal District Attorney's Office. This office has felony and misdemeanor jurisdiction in the county and assists Oldham County Attorney in felony and misdemeanor cases.

Lamb County Juvenile Probation Department will receive $25,608 to continue employment of a probation officer, who will supervise youths placed on probation, those on informal adjustment, and divert to alternate agencies status offenders.

Swisher County will receive $15,000 for renovation to bring their jail into compliance with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards. The work will provide a private room for attorney and inmate, a maximum security visiting room, a booking and ID room, two new stairways, life equipment and an audible communication system.

The Coahoma Police Department will receive $5,775 to buy a base station, two portable radios, two tape recorders, a transcribing machine and an evidence cabinet.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By William A. Doyle

Q. I met a man who said that the interest a person collects when he cashes

Series E U.S. Savings Bonds is a long-term capital gain and taxable as such. I told him he is wrong and if he did that he could be in trouble with the Internal Revenue Service. He said, "My bookkeeper says it's so." What would you tell him?

A. To get a new bookkeeper — one who understands the Internal Revenue Code. You collect your interest on E bonds when you cash them in. That interest, which has built up from the time you bought the E bonds, then is supposed to be reported as "ordinary income" on the federal tax return you file for the year in which you cashed the bonds.

It's taxable at the same rate as most of your other income. It is not treated as a long-term capital gain — on which the effective tax bite is lower.

An E bond is a "discount security." You buy it at one price and redeem it at a higher price. The difference between the two prices is the interest which has accrued on the bond. That interest is subject to federal income tax as ordinary income. It is not, however, subject to state or local income tax.

Heartline

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio, 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: I am 77 and can no longer live alone as I'm doing now. When my grandson was 11 years old, I took over his care. Now he is 30 and married and both he and his wife work. I would like to sell my home and use this money to help them buy a place for all of us. How do I go about this as cheaply as possible on taxes, etc.? Do I just give them the money? I'm not particular that my name be on the property. — J.L.

There are various ways you could transfer the money to your grandson and his family. In most cases, Uncle Sam will get his cut one way or another. You might consider giving your grandson and each person in his family $3,000 per year, because you can give this much a year as a tax-free gift. Depending on how much you receive from the sale of your home, you could give each member of his family $3,000 between now and Dec. 31, and then give another $3,000 to each of them again on Jan. 1. You can make this gift every year.

This would require filling out a gift tax return each year, but the gift of up to $3,000 per person is tax-free for you and them. You might discuss this with your bank, a reputable tax consultant or an attorney, but this is, as you wanted, a cheaper way to pass on funds to loved ones. Just check with the right people and make the decision that best fits the needs of you and your family.

HEARTLINE: My sister-in-law has lived with my wife and I for the last 19 years since her mother passed away. Last year, she developed a rare disease and it necessitated removal of her forearm. Since that time, she has been unable to work. I got her on Social Security disability, and on July 4, she turned age 62. I can't even get straight information from Social Security about my question.

What we really want to know is — is she eligible for Medicare or any other hospitalization insurance from her being on Social Security disability? Her only income right now is her disability check for $248 per month. Our concern is if she needs further hospitalization, whom can we write or go to? I am on Social Security myself at age 62 and my finances are also limited. One source said she has to wait two years after going on disability. Another said she is automatically covered now. Can you give us a straight answer? — G.F.S.

At least one of your sources is correct. Your sister-in-law will be eligible for Medicare 24 months from her determined date of eligibility for Social Security disability. This date is shown on her Social Security award letter. Until then, her alternatives would be private health insurance or possibly Medicaid.

"The Theatre," erected in 1576, was the first such structure built in England exclusively for the performance of plays.

Look-Alike Babies Switched; Hospital Fires Erring Nurse

BALSAM, N.C. (UPI) — Tammy Cressman was showing off her three-day-old daughter to her family and thought her father-in-law was joking when he told her a policeman at the door said she had the wrong baby.

No joke. The error, she later learned, occurred at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville when a nurse put the baby on Mrs. Cressman's bed but failed to match up the bracelets worn by the infant and the mother.

The baby Mrs. Cressman took home belonged to her hospital roommate, whom authorities would not identify.

Mrs. Cressman's mother-in-law, Mrs. Gerald Cressman, said the two infants looked so much alike it was difficult to tell them apart.

"They had the same amount of hair and it was the same color and the eyes looked alike," the new grandmother said.

David Page, associate director of the hospital, said the nurse involved had been dismissed.

HEW Mulls Extension Of Hospital Loan

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Representatives of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare didn't promise any help for Health Sciences Center Hospital but they did give the county hospital district 90 days to persuade them that a loan extension is in order.

Hospital district board members met Thursday with both Washington and Dallas HEW representatives in an effort to convince them that the county-supported teaching hospital needs an extension of at least one year on its loan payments. The HEW representatives said they couldn't make a decision based on their present knowledge of the situation.

But the government visitors gave the hospital 90 days beyond Aug. 1 to draft a financial projection on which they will base a decision. Brookwood Medical Services of Birmingham, Ala., which the board has agreed will manage the hospital for at least 90 days, has been charged with drafting the projection.

The hospital district missed its July 1 payment on an $8 million loan for the hospital's construction. The July payment was to be $449,132.25. Board members are proposing that HEW give them a year's "hold-off" to allow them to straighten out their financial problems before resuming payments.

However, during Thursday's meeting an extension of two years was also discussed.

Dallas representative Gary Silman told the board that HEW had several major concerns in considering the loan extension. These include greater community support of the hospital, increased revenue, better management and more paying patients. Board members and visiting county commissioners outlined a brief history of the hospital and its major problems at this time.

Dr. Richard Lockwood, vice president for Health Sciences Centers, emphasized that the Texas Tech University School of Medicine is completely dependent upon the future success of its primary teaching facility. The medical school needs all of the area medical centers associated with its program to accommodate projected enrollment.

"We do not have the luxury of simply turning community hospital and unloading our teaching needs," Lockwood said. Board member Dub Rushing seemed to surprise the HEW officials by asking for an additional $2 million to keep the hospital running until its finances become stable. He called the extension a common business practice, adding that the hospital's efficiency probably would diminish if the staff didn't know when it was going to be paid.

"Let's act like grownups," Rushing said. "You give us $2 million and a hiatus and we'll pay you back."

Silman said HEW does not have that kind of money. He said the two alternatives to the solution probably were a deferment of the payment or complete forgiveness of the payment for a specified period.

"But we've got to be somewhat assured that the management firm can turn this place around," Silman said.

Rushing answered Silman, saying, "They've convinced me that this thing is going to work, and I believe they're convincing you."

County Commissioner Alton Brazzell said the commissioners originally were more than dubious about building a 110-bed hospital across the street from Methodist Hospital on $4 million in revenue bonds. The group was even more concerned when plans were expanded to include 246 beds and the responsibility of paying back a massive federal loan.

Brazzell told the group that HEW officials said, "Don't worry about it. We've never repossessed a hospital."

As the meeting came to an end, Brookwood's director of hospital development, Robert A. Berryman, asked the HEW officials for a letter of guarantee indicating they did not intend to foreclose on the facility before the end of the 90-day period. He agreed to providing HEW with a monthly statement and agreed that HEW could visit the facility once a month to check on its progress.

"Every day will be O.K. as long as you don't get in my way," Berryman quipped.

Board members tentatively set a meeting with the county commissioners for early next week to approve the hiring of the management firm.

Jackie, At Threshold of 50, Cherishes Privacy

By JOAN J. CIRILLO
NEW YORK (AP) — She set trends as the queen of Camelot.

She drew sympathy as the dignified widow in the blood-stained pink suit and the pillbox hat.

She stirred controversy as the bride of an aging Greek shipping tycoon.

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis turns 50 Saturday but, even as she ages, her name evokes the powerful images of the past.

Time and new pursuits have separated her from her role in the White House and her days on the Greek island of Skorpios.

And yet, the wide-eyed, whisper-voiced celebrity still draws staring crowds and snapping paparazzi — and, as ever, remains aloof and serene, perpetuating that "Jackie mystique."

She flirts with attention but forbids it to trespass the boundaries of her personal life. And family and friends willingly oblige her obsession to keep the details of her life a secret. Most simply will not discuss her publicly; those who do speak only in vague terms.

"She's really two people," says Stephen Birmingham, an acquaintance from prep school days and author of the biography, "Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis."

"When you're on a one-to-one basis with her, she's rather shy and seems rather frightened and a little wistful and hesitant, her eyes darting around the room."

"When she's making a public appearance, she just glows. She knows how to casually stand in the perfect light for the right photo."

Her trend-setting style was etched in the public mind during her years as President John F. Kennedy's wife and, after 1963, as his grieving young widow.

Five years later, the public saw the single-mindedness for which she is known. Defying considerable criticism, she emerged unruffled from a Greek Orthodox church as the wife of divorced billionaire Aristotle Onassis.

"She still does exactly what she wants," says Cornell Capa, a longtime acquaintance and director of the International Center of Photography in Manhattan.

That includes pampering herself to preserve a youthful appearance. She reportedly spends hundreds of thousands of dollars on clothes — per year — and follows a beauty regime that includes thrice-weekly appointments at the mid-Manhattan salon, Kenneth.

Her success often elicits comments like "How does she look so good at her age?"

Doing what she wants also means exercising her influence sparingly.

Her public support is usually reserved for a few projects that coincide with her personal interests in art, photography, building preservation and antiques.

She has led the fight to save Grand Central Station, serves as a trustee for the Whitney Museum of American Art and is a board member of Capa's photography center.

Even in her official roles, though, she rarely speaks publicly.

Mrs. Onassis's friends are continually frustrated by her unwillingness to use her clout for various causes. Feminist Gloria Steinem, for example, constantly entreats Mrs. Onassis to go public with her personal support for the Equal Rights Amendment.

"She just doesn't care that much, she really doesn't," says Kitty Kelley, author of the controversial book "Jackie Oh," which paints Mrs. Onassis as a calculating and manipulative woman.

The picture that emerges of the private Jackie is as complex as the public role she has played over the years.

Since Onassis's 1975 death, she has grown increasingly involved in her work in publishing. She began as a consulting editor at Viking Press and, after two years, moved to Doubleday and Co. Her responsibilities increased with the new position — as staff editor — and she has worked Tuesdays through Thursdays at the Park Avenue publishing house for the past year.

"She takes her work very seriously.

She's called me at eight in the morning," says Raquel Ramati, who says another firm was interested in her book on preserving city streets before Mrs. Onassis grabbed it for Doubleday.

Coworkers describe Mrs. Onassis as "just one of the group," working with her office door open, chatting around the coffee machine and making her own phone calls. Her assistant, Hope Marinetti, says she has a knack for publishing, is juggling nine projects, and is "extremely articulate, eloquent and fun to work with."

And yet, especially in her work life, the conflict between publicity and privacy continually emerges. Mrs. Onassis still refuses to grant interviews, although she agreed to a "conversation" with Miss Steinem for a cover story on her work in Ms. magazine's March issue and even wrote an article about work herself.

And the Doubleday staff, like many of the loyal soldiers around Mrs. Onassis, continually protects her. Staffers kept reporters and photographers at bay even at a press reception introducing a book Mrs. Onassis edited.

Beyond work, many observers say, Mrs. Onassis is happier now than ever before. Single, her work to occupy her, she has been enjoying the independence of her new lifestyle.

She zips from her Fifth Avenue apartment to the family farm in Peapack, N.J., to her home in the Kennedy compound in Hyannisport, Mass. She is often seen jogging or walking in Central Park and continues to enjoy horseback riding, bicycling and skiing.

Her male escorts have been many and varied, among them film director Peter Davis and columnist Pete Hamill, but any inkling of her plans for marriage is purely speculative.

Friends say Mrs. Onassis continues to be fiercely proud of and devoted to her children. John, 18, has just graduated from Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass., and will enter Brown University in Providence, R.I. this fall. Caroline, 21, will return to Radcliffe College in Cambridge, Mass., for her junior year.

"She reports on her children and there's always that wonderful glow of her pleasure in what they're doing," says writer George Plimpton, one of the few Onassis intimates who would comment.

He describes Mrs. Onassis as a "marvelous conversationalist" who possesses a "rare art" of listening well. "She gives you absolutely undivided attention so one feels in the spotlight with her," he says.

The former first lady revealed that art — and her distinctive personality — in an unexpected exchange with two young women reporters covering her appearance at a recent building dedication in Manhattan.

She approached the reporters, asking about their journalism careers and joking about her illegible notes when she was the inquiring photographer in 1952 at the now-defunct Washington Times-Herald.

But then, one of the reporters asked what she thought of a possible presidential bid by Ted Kennedy and the spell was broken.

"Goodbye girls. It's been nice talking to you," she said. And she smiled, turned on her heels and walked away.

'Kid Status' Still Important To Young Actors

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Talking with 16-year-old Lisa Whelchel and 17-year-old Dion Pride, co-stars in the nifty new murder mystery "The Double McGuffin," it soon becomes obvious that both were bitten by the performing bug long ago and have no intention of seeking a vaccine. They are as excited, anxious and dedicated as they are talented. But unlike a few more recognizable and controversial stars in their age group — Linda Blair, Brooke Shields and Tatum O'Neal immediately come to mind — these two young performers have no intention of giving up their "kid status" just yet.

That point was first made when this interviewer showed up at Showplace Six and discovered the two young stars were inside one of the auditoriums watching the new comedy "Meatballs." So much for formality, right? And the point was reinforced a bit later through the friendly joking between the two (Miss Whelchel said it was fun being the only girl in the film, and Pride came back with, "Yeah, that's 'cause she got all the attention."), and also through the touching upon Pride's sports goals. Advance publicity, after all, stated that Dion Pride was still considering a career in major league baseball.

Miss Whelchel, though, was the first to comment, nodding toward her co-star and saying, "Dion just pitched a shutout, so of course he's real high on baseball right now." She wasn't kidding. Pride was indeed proud of his recent accomplishment, citing the fact he had not been throwing well of late and happily concluding, "But I got my good control back in that game. I had good speed, too."

Indeed, Pride says he does not want "to skip being a kid." A high school senior at Jesuit Prep in Dallas, he has already lettered in football, basketball and track, as well as baseball. Miss Whelchel has been acting for half her life, but she still insists she plans on going to college. And she finds time for riding horses, too.

Nevertheless, both handle their acting responsibilities very well in "The Double McGuffin" and both plan on remaining in the entertainment business.

Miss Whelchel, an extremely lovely teen-ager who sported a "Born Again" necklace and an obvious affection for jewelry on the day we met, said her acting career was born of timidity. "I guess I got started because I was shy," she said. "My mother enrolled me in an acting class to see if it would help, and I just loved it. I did some stage work, and I also practiced a little ventriloquism. . . Then I was cast in 'The New Mickey Mouse Club' in 1975."

Her agent then just happened to make a random call to Mulberry Square Productions at the same time producer-director Joe Camp was looking for a girl to play Judy in "The Double McGuffin." Bingo — she auditioned and got the part.

And she certainly hasn't slowed down since. After completing her work for "The Double McGuffin," she departed for locales in Berlin and Munich to film "The Magician of Lublin." It offers an even bigger and certainly more dramatic role, as she co-stars with Louise Fletcher and Alan Arkin and plays a girl dying of tuberculosis. While she says she will not demean herself on screen ("I'm not going to accept a part that would leave me no self-esteem"), Miss Whelchel mentioned more than once her desire to grow into an actress of consequence.

She enjoys doing commercials, for example, but says her goal is "to be the leading lady in a Robert DeNiro film." Not because of any sort of schoolgirl infatuation, but because "all of DeNiro's picture's have been very, very good. He gets good directors, too. So if I could be in a Robert DeNiro film, I'd be confident I was making a good movie."

Dion Pride also plans to keep performing — but on the concert stage more than the movie screens. The son of country singer Charley Pride, he said, "I like acting, and I'd like to make more movies and some commercials. But music is my first love. I guess you could say my goal is to be a singer-actor, but list 'singer' first."

Pride was recommended for his role in "The Double McGuffin" by his fifth grade teacher, and found himself auditioning for a small part and yet earning not only the lead role, but also a couple of music credits. "I was kind of nervous auditioning," he said, "because when Joe (Camp) moved me to a bigger part all I could think was, 'What did I do wrong with the other part?'"

Both songs in the picture are sung by Dion, but the decision to do that wasn't made until the film crew was already on location. Pride explained, "I don't think Joe even knew how much singing I'd done. But we all went down to see my father sing in Atlanta, and I joined him on stage. . . I've been singing with my dad the past four summers. I also sing at his golf tournaments, and we sang just a little while back at Six Flags. . . If my parents would let me, I'd have an album out right now."

But his parents are very firm about making sure he doesn't rush into anything. "My mom would like for me to go to college first," the muscular, broad-shouldered young star said, "but I'm not sure I want to go to college. In fact, I really doubt that I will. I want to go out and make music, make records. That's going to be my career." Asked if he's been upset with his parents holding him back, he answered, "No, not really. I want to finish high school. I know that."

"And they're not really holding me back. Like my dad said: 'If you want it (a music career), it'll still be there when you finish school.'"

Lisa Whelchel also appreciates parental support, citing her mother and grandmother as the ones most helpful in shaping her career. But she added, "It's a bit harder on my parents. I think, since they live in Fort Worth and I stay out in California most of the time."

Though "The Double McGuffin" was the first feature film for both actors, neither professed any nervousness on the set. "Film acting isn't much different from television work," said Miss Whelchel. "I was just thrilled to get my first movie. The only difference really was that the 'Mickey Mouse Club' was done on tape, so we could see our mistakes right off." Meanwhile, Pride shifted slightly in his chair and said, "I'm more nervous singing in front of a few thousand people than I am

'Non-Parents' To Be Honored

Mr. and Mrs. D'Alton Myers have been named "non-parents of the year" by the National Alliance for Optional Parenthood in Washington, D.C.

The couple, of John Knox Village, will accept the award at the national meeting in the capital Wednesday, which has been designated as "national non-parents day" in recognition of "those who have chosen a child-free lifestyle," according to the alliance.

The Myerses are being honored for their work in a book titled "None's Been Fun," which relates their own happiness in a childless marriage.

The couple dedicated the book to the National Alliance for Optional Parenthood after receiving much encouragement and support from the group in writing the book.

The alliance, formerly called the National Organization for Non-Parents, is not an anti-family or anti-child group, says Mrs. Myers. Rather, it is an organization to promote freedom of choice in having children without outside pressures from society, she said.

Two great meals at a great deal.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: What would cause a nine-year-old boy to pull his hair out of his head? This child seems to be mentally OK, also physically, but he now has a little bare spot the size of a silver dollar. His father was killed, so he lives with his mother and stepfather. Do you think this is temporary or should he have psychological counseling? — C.F.

Children who find themselves in new surroundings or with new parents face new tensions and some relieve them through a variety of neurotic habits. Hair-pulling is one. Nail-biting is another. Some youngsters ride out such rapid and are unaffected.

Hair-pulling occurs in the best of homes. Some children may be upset by school pressures. I have known dedicated hair pullers to abandon the practice as soon as school lets out only to resume it the next fall. For some, it's a temporary quirk. For others it represents a serious emotional situation that is best straightened out promptly.

A bald spot the size of a silver dollar indicates some pretty serious hair-pulling that certainly warrants some close attention to whatever factors are prompting it. If he continues, he should be evaluated first by the pediatrician, who may advise counseling to correct the emotional problem.

There is one medical complication the parents should be aware of — bezoars. These are accumulations of hair balls in the stomach from ingestion of individual pulled strands. Some youngsters engage in this practice. (Folks addicted to persimmons, too, should be aware of bezoars. Bezoars may cause digestive obstruction of the stomach outlet).

Dear Dr. Ruble: My girlfriend and I both weighed the same until two weeks ago. She went on a 14-day fast and lost 20 pounds. If I fast for two weeks will I lose 20 pounds, or do individuals vary in weight loss? — C.T.

I'm not sure I know what you mean by the word "fast." I don't think your girlfriend gave up food entirely for two whole weeks. If two people weigh the same, are of the same height and body frame, and undertake the exact same diet scheme both should lose the same amount of weight in about the same amount of time. If one is heavier than the other he or she might lose more weight more quickly (at least initially) under the same circumstances. If one is lighter, weight would be more difficult to lose. Much depends on how physically active each is.

Anything that comes close to fasting is not wise. You can accomplish the same weight loss over a slightly longer period with gradual calorie reduction and you won't be a "loser" in other respects.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please explain what the term "bloodless surgery" means. What are the advantages and disadvantages? — Mrs. G.N.Y.

You have to ask the person who is using the term. It can mean a variety of things. In general, it means cryosurgery (freezing), cautery (burning), or disintegration of tissue by such means as laser beam, etc. Too, some surgery is done using a tourniquet, as on a limb, to limit bleeding. You have seen me mention the tying off of a hemorrhoid as an alternative to cutting it away. The hemorrhoid eventually withers because of a lack of nourishment and sloughs off on its own. That's a form of "bloodless surgery." The absence of bleeding simplifies the surgeon's job.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I had a lung x-ray and my doctor told me I had a slightly enlarged heart, but not to worry about it. But I do. Should I? — Mrs. A.I.

This is usually an insignificant (but frightening) observation. An enlarged heart is not normal in the strict sense, but it can result from normal and harmless factors — years of heavy physical activity, as an example. In this respect the heart, which is made up chiefly of muscle, responds to extra exercise by getting larger, just like your leg muscles get larger when you do lot of running. A heart may enlarge if a person has high blood pressure, again reflecting the extra workload.

If your doctor says you're healthy consider your heart size normal for you. One can be perfectly healthy and have a slightly enlarged heart. Find something else more worth worrying about.

You can lose weight if you really want to! The booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level best suited to your individual needs. For a copy write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

South's one-notrump response was made because he was the dominant male half of a mixed-pair partnership. He was unhappy with his choice when he saw the dummy, but wound up getting away with murder.

He rose with dummy's ace of hearts and dropped his six. Then, in hope of forestalling a club lead, he led one to his 10. Lo and behold the 10 held the trick.

He was off and running. The spade queen finesse lost to East's king and back came the nine of hearts covered by his jack and West's queen. Now West led the 10 of hearts and East chucked a low club.

West led his last spade and South wound up with three spades, two hearts, a diamond and a club and a plus score of 90 that turned out to be a complete top. The normal North-South contract of two spades fell one or two tricks short and the East-West pairs that got into the bidding all made two clubs.

Your partner opens with a standard one notrump. A Maryland reader says that he was severely criticized for raising to three notrump instead of bidding a Stayman two clubs.

The criticism is unjust. All experts (including Stayman himself) simply raise to three notrump with this hand. If partner does hold four hearts, the chances still are that notrump will be the best game contract.

Pot-Holder Method Used For Waterfall

There is no need to invest in a loom to turn out beautiful handwoven projects. If you ever made a pot-holder as a child, you have the basic skills of weaving already. Or if you've made a placemat by guiding strands of paper or cloth in and out of strands running the opposite direction, you know what weaving is all about.

The Waterfall, pictured here, uses the pot-holder technique. It's simple to do but the finished project looks as if it took months. After some simple preparation of the big metal hoop, which acts as the frame for the wall hanging and as

Shades Give Windows New Look

Here's interior decorating news! The humble roller-style window shade is making a strong comeback. In days gone by, shades served two purposes: They insured privacy and blocked out the bright sun. Today however, homemakers have learned that a striking window treatment performs decorating miracles. It can transform drab windows into the strong focal point of a room. Colorful and glamorous murals add brightness and depth to dull areas.

By using our pattern designs, you can create one or all of the murals. Just trace the full-size patterns onto the shade surface, then paint over the tracing (by number). The instructions tell how to match the mural colors with the decor of your room. You can use inexpensive, washable paints available at all paint dealers. Of course, the mural designs also are ideal for use on walls or sliding glass doors.

To obtain Paint-It-Yourself Window Shade Patterns, number 11 (shades not included) send $2.25 (includes first class postage & handling) by check or money order to: P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, California 91409.

Crewmen Sought For August Reunion

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — David Looney is trying to track down the men who served aboard the heavy cruiser USS Los Angeles from 1945 to 1963.

Looney, who served on the ship from 1952 to 1956, wants to reunite all of the enlisted men and officers who sailed on the ship from the end of World War II until it was scrapped in 1963.

So far he and his colleagues have contacted nearly 300 of the ship's alumni, and they hope to double that number before a reunion planned for the weekend of Aug. 10-12 at the Marriott Hotel near Lambert Field.

It isn't easy finding all the sailors who manned the vessel which saw heavy action during the Korean War. The Navy cannot help because of legislation passed in 1975 which prevents the release of military records.

Looney said the Navy won't even confirm which men are still alive, although he guessed about 30 percent of the estimated 10,000 sailors have died.

Photos Become Key Part Of Life

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer
This column is in collaboration with my son, Donald M. Desfor, who recently earned his doctorate in human behavior after a comprehensive survey on how people react to photographs.

He re-emphasizes that photography is a particularly significant and vital visual force in the world today.

"Pictures are everywhere," he says. "They are framed and displayed at home and at work. They hang on walls, lockers and auto visors. Pictures are taped and pinned on bulletin boards, doors, closets, posts and windows. They are crammed into cartons, dumped into drawers, enclosed in envelopes, shoved into shoe boxes and wadded into wallets.

"Similarly, cameras have become a common artifact of American life and our society. They appear everywhere and are used by everyone. Guests and bystanders with cameras rub shoulders with professionals at weddings, graduations, opening nights and public events. We're all aware that our travel and vacation experiences must be documented with photographic evidence. In most cases, the trip is deemed a success or failure depending on how the pictures turn out.

"Out of the deluge of billions of pictures from millions of cameras, what is the impact that photographs have on us. What do they mean to us?"

To get some answers, Don conducted a research study in 1978. His subjects were men and women between the ages of 17 and 50 who lived in southern California and in the greater New York City area but who represented many areas of the country. They were a cross section of varied ethnic, social, occupational and educational backgrounds.

The subjects were asked to look at four photographs and freely give their response to each one without any prompting. Then Don probed their responses to find what motivated their thoughts. All the interviews were tape recorded, studied and evaluated.

All the freely given responses were classified into one of six categories: Deductive, Evaluative, Subjective, Photographic, Objective and Reflective.

A Deductive response is a factual statement that can be deduced from one or more visual cues in the photograph. The statement could be substantiated as to whether it was true or false. An example: "This is a mother and her son and daughter."

An Evaluative statement expresses a value, opinion or judgment stimulated by one or more visual clues in the photo but which cannot be substantiated as fact.

Example: "The girl looks happy and the boy looks hostile."

A Subjective response also expresses a value, opinion or judgment but it isn't based on visual clues or substantiated as a fact. An example: "The picture was taken at Easter." In this case, there was no basket, flowers or special attire that would indicate the picture was taken at Easter time.

Human Hair Keeps Deer From Shrubs

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer
Years ago, when spring came, Indians would cut their hair, grown long through the cold winter, and spread it on their vegetable patches to discourage animals from browsing there.

Today, scientists — and farmers — are collecting human hair from beauty parlors and barber shops and putting it in net bags they hang from trees and shrubs to deter deer from feeding on them.

It works quite well, says Jay McAninch, wildlife biologist at the Cary Arboretum of the New York Botanical Garden at Millbrook. Testing has been under way there since 1977.

The method, says McAninch, is inexpensive, the material readily available, non-toxic and completely bio-degradable.

What he wants to know is how long the hair will remain effective under various climatic conditions, and the best packaging techniques for best results. Rain washes away the hair oil, which is the key ingredient, and sunlight causes bleaching. The hair is not effective for more than one season.

McAninch says human hair will repel deer up to about a meter (approximately a yard) away; that unwashed hair is better than washed; that short hair works better than long hair because it is cut closer to the head and thus has more of the oily sebum secreted onto the hair by the scalp's sebaceous glands. The sebum is what keeps the deer away.

Checking his test results, McAninch said the hair balls repelled as follows: empty bag, 60 to 90 centimeters (because deer are timid of objects) washed hair 100 centimeters; unwashed hair 120 centimeters.

Young Actors Air Future Ambitions

 acting in front of a camera."
 But he later admitted to having butterflies during his first scenes with co-stars Ernest Borgnine and George Kennedy.
 He recalled, "I was having some trouble with my lines, and I thought a big star like Mr. Borgnine would be very impatient with me. But he didn't get angry at all. He helped me out instead, helped me with my movements and stuff like that. He made me feel more at ease."
 Both young thespians had nothing but praise for director Joe Camp, describing him as a strict disciplinarian who "demanded perfection" on the set — but adding that "between takes and off the set we had a lot of fun." Neither has any arguments with the picture's PG rating either. Miss Wheelchel explained, "All the PG is is the realism with the boys, the way teen-age boys talk." While Pride said, "And it shouldn't have a G anyway because the real little kids might not be able to follow the complicated plot."

Those attending the film, though, may be surprised to notice how smoothly Lisa Wheelchel and Dion Pride carry things off. There is nothing fake or wooden about their performances, just as there appeared to be nothing phony or stiff about them during their recent Lubbock visit. Refreshingly candid, open and gracious, they represented the film and themselves very well. But since both made mention of a desire to make commercials, it was only natural to capitalize on their frankness and ask if the "potential big bucks" attracted them to show business.
 Pride was the first to answer with, "Well, maybe to commercials and some things like that, but I love music. Backpackers Visit Pecos Wilderness

"The goal of life is living in agreement with nature." — Zeno (335-263 B.C.) Greek Philosopher. By TED J. SIMON A-J Outdoor Editor

Discovery hours away, and more than 2,000 feet uphill. Because our campsite at North Fork Lake (altitude 12,000 feet) would be surrounded by patches of last winter's snow, we also carried winter clothing.

Anderson passed around his canteen of water and noted, "Like many people, I hiked and camped as a Boy Scout and a young adult. But, I lost interest for awhile. Now I want my family to learn the joy of wilderness camping.

Determination — when a goal seems impossible.... I decided that was probably one of the values he had in mind as I groaned to stand up and start again on the trail.

Hiking higher and higher, via switch-backs, the fragrance of wildflowers complemented the scent of pine needles. The only flower I was able to identify was the Indian paintbrush.

By the way, The Backpacker, located in Redbud Square, will counsel anyone (without obligation) on backpacking equipment and techniques.

Taking our time, and stopping often to rest and enjoy the scenery, we reached North Fork Lake late in the afternoon.

MOMENT OF SOLITUDE — Bobby Nunn uses a field guide to identify some wildflowers along a wilderness stream. Even in July, snow is common this summer in the high country.

Bounded on the west by a high ridge, the setting was absolutely beautiful. Squirrels and jays went about the business of looking for food among the fir and pine forest that sheltered our side of the lake.

Each evening was memorable as we sat around the warmth of the campfire. We talked of the qualities of sleeping bags filled with goose down as compared to the man-made hollowloft.

As we drove along the primitive mountain road, we spotted mule deer, grouse and wild turkey. We stopped at Linville's Fishing Camp, in Rio La Casa Canyon.

Stephen Graham may have expressed it best when he wrote: "The adventure is not getting there, it's the on-the-way. It is not the expected; it is the surprise; not the fulfillment of prophesy, but the providence of something better than that prophesied."

Stingley Learned: 'People Cared If I Live Or Die

By HOWARD ULMAN

CHICAGO (AP) — It's that time of year again.

A time for mid-summer dreams of passes to be caught, of touchdowns to be scored. A time for pro football players to be on the move, to be running and blocking beneath the training camp sun. But for Darryl Stingley, that mid-summer dream faded into a nightmare with the paralyzing crunch of a helmet.

"I was thinking a week ago that last year I was packing my bags to take off" for training camp, he says. "I know to myself, deep down inside, what I would have been able to do if I had been there. It's just that the facts will be proven. The stats will never be written down."

Stingley was an outstanding receiver for the New England Patriots of the NFL. He had spent five seasons with them. His last was his best — 39 catches for 657 yards.

In a preseason game last Aug. 12 he was hit by Jack Tatum of the Oakland Raiders and paralyzed from the chest down. In the days that followed, he nearly died. To this day, he's not ready to reveal his feelings about Tatum.

Today Stingley can move his right arm and talks of walking again. No stats can be written down to measure his spirit.

"I really have a lot more meaning and purpose to live for now than I ever had before," he said. "I'm going to overcome as much as I can. . . as much as I can. There won't be any quitting or giving up."

For the first time since his injury, Stingley, 27, granted a face-to-face interview Wednesday night in the modern apartment he shares with his mother. On the wall above his stereo there is a plaque that he says holds special meaning for him: "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, the courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference."

At this point, Stingley said, there is nothing he thinks he cannot change. With hard work and luck, feeling may return to his legs and, perhaps, he will stand.

"It has happened overnight to some people. That's why the doctor says the sky's the limit," he said. Still, he is realistic. He exercises two hours a day, five days a week, with the help of a nurse, Barbara Bradford. He is doing it not only for himself but for the thousands of persons who wrote to him, wishing him well. Among the writers have been Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

It means that they really think about me. All those people thinking of me. There's strength in numbers. I really believe they've helped me come this far," he said. "I feel the best thing I can give them back is to get better. When I feel depressed it's always temporary because there's always somebody I can call. People really are beautiful. All you have to do is reach out. reach out. This world is going more toward the self. But there really are people who give of themselves. That's the most precious gift you can have."

Stingley, an articulate, soft-voiced speaker said he's accepted the fact he probably won't play again and has learned to live with his disability.

"I just wheel my chair into the van, like 'Ironside,'" he said. "You can really live a full life the more you become adjusted to your situation. It's unlimited what you can do."

Stingley said the recent death of St. Louis receiver J.V. Cain made him reflect on his own situation.

"All I kept thinking is maybe it's just an act of God. I never question God's acts," he said. "I've got my life and I still have my limbs. They weren't blown off. I still have that one-in-a-million chance to run and jump and dance again."

Stingley is a music lover. His nurse takes him to record shops. A Marvin Gaye album, "What's Going On," leans on a stack a few feet from the black recliner where he sits. Gaye, who had never met Stingley, visited him when he was hospitalized in California.

So did Oakland coach John Madden — many times. Stingley said Madden once noticed some machinery in his hospital room appeared to be malfunctioning and he notified hospital personnel. Stingley said that may have saved his life.

"I don't think I ever gave up. I really had this tremendous desire to live. Whether it was my attitude or God's will, I had a tremendous desire to live," said Stingley.

A religious man before the accident, Stingley said he reads the Bible even more now. He talks like a preacher, a calling his mother had hoped he would heed. Stingley said he still may end up there, if God wants that.

He also said he might like to coach football and was offered a position as a Midwest scout for the Patriots. That offer is still open, he said.

Ryan Given OK To Pitch

ANAHEIM (AP) — An examination Thursday found no damage to the throwing arm of California Angels pitcher Nolan Ryan, who left the mound in a game against the Yankees after feeling a "pop" in his elbow, the Angels said.

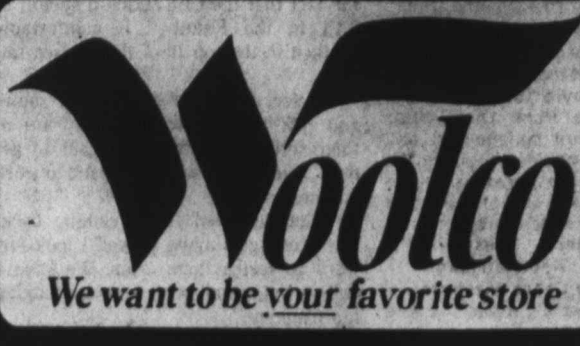

"He will throw some tomorrow (today), as he always does between starts," said Angels' spokesman Steve Grinley. "He'll be under observation, and we'll just see what happens."

Ryan may be able to pitch his next scheduled start, Sunday against Minnesota.

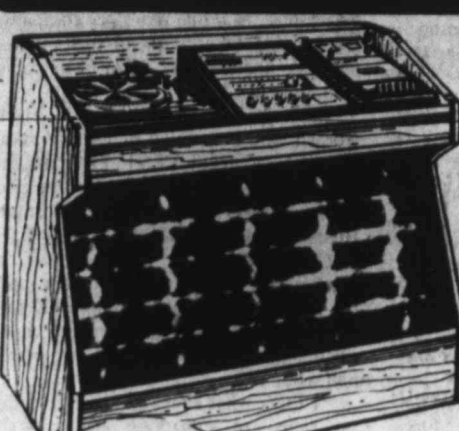

Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Robert Kerlan examined Ryan's valuable right arm Thursday and found no damage, said Grinley.

"In all probability, Ryan popped some scar tissue in the right elbow," Kerlan said.

Ryan, who started the All-Star game last week, underwent surgery in 1976 for the removal of bone chips in the elbow. He left the second inning of California's 9-5 victory over New York Wednesday night at Yankee Stadium and was flown home immediately.
