Interest Rates Too High, Carter Says

Building Trades Promised Help

SAN DIEGO (AP) — President Carter, only two days after supporting efforts to tighten the nation's money supply, said Thursday the Federal Reserve Board has set interest rates too high.

"Interest rates are too high, inflation rates are too high," Carter said in a speech to leaders of the nation's building trades unions.

Carter promised the union leaders, "I will not fight inflation with your jobs."

Experts expect the higher interest rates to cause high unemployment in the building industry because of a lack of money available for new homes and other construction.

In a nationally broadcast news conference on Tuesday, Carter endorsed the Federal Reserve's action to tighten the money supply and push up interest rates, saying he would do "whatever it takes" to stop inflation, even if it hurts him politically.

But speaking to the construction union leaders in San Diego, Carter made it clear that he does not think their industry should suffer from the higher interest rates set by the board.

"In fighting inflation, we do not sacrifice construction jobs," he said. "While interest rates have been rising because of decisions made by the Federal Reserve Board to record-high levels to cool inflation, we took special financial measures to sustain credit for construction, especially for housing construction."

The president made no reference to his statements Tuesday in which he backed the board's decision to increase its bank lending rate and tighten the availability of credit. Carter said those moves had strengthened the dollar and moderated gold prices.

As the president was flying back to Washington after the speech, Deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum said Carter did not mean to blame the Federal Reserve for the higher interest rates and that he supported the board's new higher discount rate. He said that while Carter feels interest rates are too high, they are designed to bring down inflation, which is his No. 1 priority.

No Elaboration Made

Carter did not elaborate on the "special financial measures," but he appeared to be talking about steps taken earlier this year to allow savings and loan institutions to raise money for mortage loans by offering savings interest tied to Treasury bill rates.

In his well-received speech to the 60th annual convention of the AFL-CIO's Building and Construction Trades Department, a conglomeration of 16 construction craft unions with nearly 4.5 million members, Carter vowed to work to increase construction jobs and to reject any anti-inflation strategy that relies on higher unemployment.

"I will not fight inflation with your jobs," he said.

No Indication Given

But the president offered no indication of how he hopes to preserve building trades jobs "and get some more" while the spiraling interest rates are prompting predictions of construction cutbacks and greater unemployment.

As he boarded Air Force One for the return to Washington, the president said he didn't believe the country was headed toward a deeper recession as a result of the higher interest rates.

"The degree of recession has been less than we had anticipated earlier this year," the president told reporters. He said that his economic policy was being adjusted to accommodate the special problems construction workers face in periods of high interest rates.

Seek To Hold Jobs

"We've done everything we could in spite of high interest rates to hold up employment in the construction industry," Carter said.

Despite declining stock prices, rapid increases in interest rates and signs of deepening recession, Carter offered the union leaders an optimistic view of the nation's economic condition.

"In the last few months we have begun to turn the corner," the president said. "I see a growing willingness to pitch in and solve our problems together."

And he said that in Congress there is "good momentum ... for our major energy legislation."

The speech was the focal point of a two-day Western trip — Carter's first visit to the region in five months.

Carter told the union leaders that his proposed "windfall profits tax" on oil company profits "will finance one of the biggest construction projects in world history," creating at least 145,000 jobs in energy-related building.

The speech was peppered with references to growth, despite the nation's uncertain economic picture and predictions that unemployment will increase in 1980.

Then, getting to the heart of his audi-

Market Eases; Trading Slows

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's three-day slide stalled Thursday as trading on the New York Stock Exchange, although still heavy, was off considerably from Wednesday's record-setting pace.

Analysts were cautious in predicting an end to the market's skid, ascribing the calming in the market to a number of internal factors.

The closely-watched Dow Jones industrial average, after plunging 48.29 in the first three days of the week, began the day with a slight increase, fell sharply, and recovered to close at 844.62, down 4.70.

Trading wasn't at the fever pitch that characterized Tuesday's session, when 55.56 million shares moved on the New York Stock Exchange, or Wednesday's session, when a record 81.62 million shares changed hands, but the volume of 47.53 million shares was still heavy.

Despite the recovery, there were many tales of woe.

"My children are suing me for mismanagement of their funds," quipped Donald Stone, a broker at Lasker Stone & Co. His firm suffered losses as large as any it had ever suffered. "We lost a lot of money," he said.

Check On Holdings

And at the Merrill Lynch booth at Grand Central Terminal, investors gathered to check on their holdings. "I want to get out of the market," said one man. "But my wife doesn't. So far I'm not winning. My wife bought some stocks three days ago. So far she's lost $400."

"I've lost a few hundred," said Preston Seary, a 43-year-old accountant from Morganville, N.J. "I'll just ride it out."

William O'Connor, a 39-year-old computer consultant from Toms River, N.J., said the value of his stocks had fallen from $35,000 to $30,000 in the past three days. But O'Connor was undaunted. "I love it," he said. "I can afford to buy now. And you know stocks will come back."

Steadying Effects

Analysts listed as one of the most significant steadying effects a development that seemed at first glance to be negative: IBM, a favorite of investors, particularly large ones like pension funds and insurance companies, said its earnings for the third quarter were down from last year.

The news at first did not send IBM down further, and many traders took that as a signal that the market might have reached its bottom. Investors began buying again to push the market averages up. But IBM slipped again to close at $66.625, down $1.125.

Stock exchange personnel and brokerage firm representatives will have to work Saturday morning to catch up with the week's hectic activity. But trading had slowed enough by mid-afternoon Thursday that one broker in Merrill Lynch's trading room found time to leaf through a magazine.

Trading Rooms Active

The trading rooms at major brokerage houses are where much of Wall Street's business is conducted now. The old days when the floor of the New York Stock Exchange was the center, both literally and figuratively, of trading, have given way to the electronic age. Brokers now conduct most business on the phone and through computers.

But the floor of the exchange is still a beehive of activity, rarely changing in tempo regardless of the day's volume, and the talk at the exchange is still of winners and losers — particularly in a week when the market is as volatile as it has been lately.

Holleman Services Scheduled Today

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Funeral services are scheduled today for Jerry R. Holleman, a former labor official who resigned from the Kennedy administration after it was revealed he used $1,000 from Billie Sol Estes for a banquet honoring Vice President Lyndon Johnson.

Holleman, 59, died here Wednesday.

Holleman was never implicated in any criminal wrongdoing in the incident and had steadfastly refused to discuss it with reporters.

Holleman resigned his $20,000-per-year post as special undersecretary of labor and advisor to Kennedy after the revelations.

Estes was convicted a year later of an elaborate, multimillion-dollar swindle, sentenced to prison and later paroled. He was recently convicted of fraud again.

Holleman was elected president of the Texas branch of the American Federation of Labor in 1950 and was the first president of the Texas AFL-CIO.

Firemen's Pay Raise Rejected By Council

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Saff

AS EXPECTED, the City Council rejected the request of Lubbock firefighters for a 15 percent pay raise Thursday, setting the stage for a Jan. 19 election on the issue.

Luther Dean, president of the firefighters association, urged the council to approve the raise as requested in petitions signed by more than 7,000 Lubbock voters.

The economic problems faced by firefighters when the petition drive began last month now are even worse, Dean said, with the inflation rate increasing from more than 13 percent to the current 16 percent.

Morale Problem Seen

"We need the problem settled for the continued well-being of the department," Dean said. "If it continues, it will become a morale and efficiency problem and cause us to lose good firefighters."

"The firefighters don't look upon this as an increase in pay," he said. "They look at it as a way to stay even."

Budget Struggle Recalled

Finally Councilman Bill McAlister moved to deny the requested raise "in light of the budgetary process we already went through."

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan seconded the motion, eplaining the council did not oppose the pay raise but felt it could not afford to grant such an increase.

A prior request for a 12 percent raise for firefighters was given "a lot of thought in terms of what we could afford," she said.

The council is being pressured by city employees for higher salaries and by citizens who want the tax rate kept low, Mrs. Jordan noted.

"It's not a question of whether we wanted to grant (the raise) or not, it's a question of whether we could afford it," she said.

"It was the consensus of the council we couldn't."

The council was unanimous in denying the pay request.

Now the firefighters have 20 days to notify the council if they still want an election on the pay issue and the council can call an election at its next regular meeting.

City Secretary Evelyn Gaffga told council members the pay raise petition contained 7,366 valid signatures, higher

Tight Money Curbs Home Loan Activity

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

HOME LOANS will be almost impossible to obtain in Texas by the end of the year, savings and loan industry officials warned Thursday, but some Lubbock lenders say they already have stopped making any new home loans.

"Money for home loans has been tight in Lubbock for the past six months; it's just getting tighter," said Derrell Jones, president of the Briercroft Savings and Loan Association, who added that his firm was not making any new home loan commitments "until we can make sure we can handle our present ones."

"Actually we've restricted our lending for the past few months," Jones said, "but the recent announcement by the Federal Reserve Board to drive up interest rates has made money even tighter."

Prime Rate Hiked

The Federal Reserve Board announced Tuesday that the prime interest rate — the rate savings institutions pay to borrow money to lend for mortgages — increased to 14.5 percent. Texas' usury law currently limits mortgage rates to under 12 percent, and lending institutions say it is unprofitable for them to lend mortgage money because they must pay even higher interests rates to borrow.

Charley Pope, executive vice-president of First Federal Savings and Loan Association, said Thursday that his institution has been giving home loans on a limited basis.

"Although we have not cut off home loans at this point, we are considering it because of the high cost of money," said Pope.

Jones explained that his money sources (savings deposits, prepay loans and out of state markets) were drying up and the federal government's tight money policies are making it almost impossible for his institution to make any home loans.

But Jones sees no simple answer to remedying the situation in the near future.

"What the feds are doing is driving up the rates to curb inflation," Jones said. "We'll definitely see higher rates until we win the battle of inflation and who knows how long that will take."

It probably will be the first quarter of next year before we see any change in home loans, he added.

Despite the pessimism of local lenders, the president of the Lubbock Board of Realtors said people still are buying homes.

Darryl Berry contends that even though mortgage money has been hard to get, "business has been good."

Demand For Housing

"There is still a strong demand for housing, and tight money just causes people to be more creative in their financing," Barry said. Even if savings and loans are reluctant to give out home loans, he noted, home buyers still can use FHA and VA financing and second liens involving the seller.

Restrictions Asked On Tech Pep Rallies

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TEXAS Tech University officials Thursday urged students to restrict pep rallies to the Texas Tech campus after learning that last week's impromptu street rally may cost the City of Lubbock and University Avenue businessmen almost $20,000 in expenses and damages.

Texas Tech President Lawrence Graves warned that "students who persist in breaking the law may expect both city and university action may be taken."

"Whatever It Takes"

Graves's and Alley's comments are in reference to the gathering of approximately 1,500 Texas Tech students along University Avenue late Oct. 5 for a street pep rally before the Texas Tech-Texas A&M football game.

University Avenue, from Main Street to 13th Street, was closed to traffic by police barricades in an effort keep the students in a confined area and protect them from traffic, Chief Alley said. But before the group broke up about 4:30 a.m. Saturday, $640 in barricades had been broken and some set ablaze, $300 in damage had been done to police vehicles and $15,000 worth of damage had been done to the roof covering the block of businesses just south of Main Street.

Police Information Officer Bill Morgan said city policemen were paid $2,630 in overtime and the city was charged about $300 to clear University Avenue of broken beer bottles and litter.

"If they want to have any more pep rallies, let them stay on the Texas Tech campus," Alley said. "We were just trying to protect them, but the students acted like we were the enemy and they were trying to conquer us. We will use whatever it takes — Sheriff's Department, Department of Public Safety, Fire Department or Canine Corps — to keep the students from interrupting traffic on University Avenue and damaging any of the businesses located across from the campus," he warned.

No Rally Scheduled

Although no pep rally is formally scheduled for tonight, officials believe chances are good that Tech students may rally because of the traditional football rivalry between Tech and the Arkansas team it will meet Saturday afternoon in Jones Stadium.

"Almost everything those kids were doing last Friday night was illegal and we could have arrested quite a few," the police chief said. "But if they try the same thing again, we will not hesitate to make what arrests we can." Only three

Few Propose Projects For CD Funding

THE FIRST in a series of neighborhood meetings seeking input on how $3.3 million in federal Community Development funds should be spent attracted only a handful of residents to schools in central and east Lubbock Thursday night.

Only three persons showed up at the Wheatley Elementary School cafeteria Thursday night, while five residents attended a similar meeting at Bean Elementary.

More sidewalks and a community center were the top priorities for federal funds recommended by central Lubbock residents at Bean elementary.

At Wheatley, on East 28th Street, one of the three people attending spoke on behalf of Yellowhouse Canyon Addition residents. The other two represented residents who want improvements to public housing in Lubbock.

Residents at both meetings were asked to comment on the proposed uses of funds approved last year by the Community Development Advisory Committee and the City Council.

At the Wheatley-area meeting, Willie Stewart, vice president of the Yellowhouse Canyon Community Association, asked that the federal funds be spent to provide city water and sewer service for

PICASSO EXHIBITION — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing tours a retrospective of Pablo Picasso's artistic genius which opened at the Grand Palais Museum Thursday to rave reviews. Critics Aflutter Over France's Unveiling Of Picasso Works

PARIS (AP) — In what critics claimed may be the artistic event of the decade, the French government Thursday unveiled a sweeping retrospective of Pablo Picasso's artistic genius, including several secret masterpieces from his private collection.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing formally opened the long-awaited exhibition of some 800 of Picasso's paintings, sculptures and designs, and there was no need to wait for the reviews to come in.

"Stunning", "Overwhelming", "A one-man artistic revolution", "Enough masterpieces for six great painters" — these and other superlatives buzzed through the invitation-only opening crowd of everyone who is anyone in the French art world.

"If you're not here, you're no one," one critic from the Louvre Museum mused on finding "all Paris" gathered under the glass dome of the 19th century Grand Palais to see the Picassos, most of which the French government took to settle the late artist's otherwise incalculable inheritance taxes.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman and his wife Donna, both avid art buffs, were there. American pop art painter Jasper Johns was wandering around incognito, studying canvasses and muttering "beautiful" and "wonderful."

Behind the vast exhibition there are less glittering stories, much like the ones that in life swirled around the wiry little artist with the stark bald head and burning eyes that never glowed as brightly as when in the presence of an attractive woman.

There is the the long and bitter story of the court battle waged among his six heirs, including three illegitimate children, over how to divide Picasso's billion-dollar estate. When he died in 1973 at age 91, he left no will.

Picasso scrupulously preserved almost all of his nearly 80 years' of output that was not sold. So there is also the story of the three years it took 11 experts to catalogue Picasso's personal collection.

Another story that came to light Thursday was of "Man With A Guitar," a 1911 cubist painting that somehow escaped Picasso's careful attention.

"The painting was in horrible condition. It was found rolled up and stuffed under a sink, cracked and full of bright brown water stains," said Jeanne Amoore, one of the Louvre Museum's elite six art restorers who worked on the collection.

"We humidified the painting because it was so brittle and step by step we unrolled it," she explained. "Then we used a process called relining to put it onto a stronger canvas. Using an absorbing agent we then removed the stains from the back, the way they came in. It's a major cubist painting and it's a major restoring miracle that it can now hang here today."

Almost immediately after his birth in Malaga, Spain, in 1881, Picasso was plunged into the world of painting, bullfighting and pigeons by his father, a not very successful painter named Jose Ruiz Blasco.

According to his biographers, Picasso became a young prodigy, far outstripping his father's dreams. At eight he sketched his first canvas, at 12 he could reputedly draw like Raphael. At 13 he began a series of portraits that convinced his father to do no more than forever bequeath his palette to his pupil.

The exhibition, which will later move to a new Picasso Museum in Paris, opens with a haunting vision of the Spanish-born artist himself, a 1901 "blue period" self-portrait. From there it moves to the cbist revolutin and on through the various familiar Picasso stages that reshaped the history of art.

•A huge 1938 collage and oil, the largest canvas of the collection, called "Women At Their Washbowl." It is a look-back at "Desmoiselles d'Avignon" 30 years later.

In addition to the paintings, the exhibition features a full representation of Picasso's sculpture, including eight exceptional cubist renderings of women's heads. There are also ceramics, stamps, collages and assemblages.

Visitors Bureau Topic Of Chamber Meeting

By JOE GULICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Chamber of Commerce officially took over responsibility for the Lubbock Visitors and Convention Bureau Thursday during the chamber's regular monthly meeting.

The chamber's board of directors voted to keep the present visitors and convention bureau in existance as a corporation with the bureau's board of directors to be members of the chamber's executive committee.

The board also voted to contact people about serving on an operating board of the convention bureau. The board will develop operating policies for convention and visitor solicitation, including selecting an advertising agency to develop a program for attracting conventions and tourists.

Previously, the convention bureau had been under the jurisdiction of the City Council. Earlier in the week, a contract had been signed replacing the City Council with the chamber as the bureau's authority, and the chamber board officially approved it at Thursday's meeting.

John Logan, chamber executive director, said the Lubbock Airport board has asked for a ceremony recognizing the 500,000th passenger served by the airport. Airport officials expect the milestone passenger to pass through the terminal sometime in mid-December.

Dr. Teddy Langford, dean of the Texas Tech School of Nursing, presented a slide show to the chamber board about nursing education. The presentation emphasized that 90 percent of all nurses work within 50 miles of their graduating school.

Dr. Langford emphasized the need for continuing education for nurses. The area would be benefited by higher trained nurses, she said.

The nursing school was not funded by the state this year, but if the school were to receive the necessary appropriations by late winter or early spring, it should be ready to begin classes by September, Dr. Langford said. She estimated the necessary funds to be about $400,000-450,000.

The school would probably enter about 75 nursing students the first year and would eventually reach a top enrollment of 200 to 250 students, she said.

B.C. "Peck" McMinn, president of the board,appointed the banquet committee for the 1980 banquet. Dr. Jim Granberry was appointed as chairman of the committee. McMinn told Granberry he would have a year to get a speaker as prestigious as the recent banquet speakers. Gerald Ford was the 1977 speaker, Henry Kissinger appeared in 1978 and Gen. Alexander Haig spoke last month at the 1979 chamber banquet.

'Impossible Demands' Made By Kidnappers

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Some of the demands for release of two Beckman Industries employees kidnapped three weeks ago in El Salvador may be impossible to meet, a company spokesman said Thursday.

He said the company has tried to fulfill the conditions "as specifically as we can."

A group calling itself the Revolutionary Party of Central American Workers, which claimed responsibility for the kidnappings, told the firm to place two-page advertisements stating the group's goals in several newspapers in the United States, Europe and Central America.

The kidnappers said their "revolutionary proclamation" denouncing "North American imperialists" in Central America should be the same as the example provided — which was in red, yellow and black ink.

But the two U.S. newspapers which carried the advertisements Wednesday — the Los Angeles Times and The New York Times — were unable to print them in the three colors, said Beckman spokesman Bill Gregory.

"Our approach to the papers is to do as much as they can," he said. "We're complying with the demands of the kidnappers to run them as specifically as we can to the extent possible."

He also said there is growing concern that some Central American countries in which the revolutionary group wants the ads printed may have anti-terrorist laws forbidding the material to be published.

Taken captive were Fausto Bucheli, 41, a California-based engineer, and Dennis McDonald, 37, general manager of the company's El Salvador plant, which employes about 500 El Salvadorians. A bodyguard was slain when the two were abducted Sept. 21 near Beckman's El Salvador subsidiary.

The kidnappers assured Beckman officials that both hostages are in good condition, Gregory said.

McDonald, formerly of Whittier, Calif., lives in San Salvador with his wife and two children. Bucheli, 41, an electronics engineer who is a native of Ecuador, was on a week-long special assignment from Beckman's Fullerton headquarters. Bucheli lives with his wife and five children in a Los Angeles suburb, which was not identified at the request of his family.

Simon Bolivar, hero of South American liberation, was born in Venezuela in 1783.

Expert Says Educators Should Encourage Caring In Schools

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Educators, through the leadership of guidance personnel, should encourage caring relationships between themselves and students by avoiding role playing with youngsters, avoiding judgment of students and teaching them that they are in control of their lives, says an expert in effective teaching.

Noel Burch, nationwide lecturer and vice president of school programs for Effectiveness Training Programs, spoke to approximately 900 educators who today attended the Texas Personnel and Guidance Association convention in the Civic Center.

In reference to the convention theme, "Back to Basics...Caring, Communicating through Counseling," Burch told the group that the most "fundamental of basics is the nature and quality of the human relationship in the schools. But we don't have to get back to it — we've never had it."

He noted that many adults cannot recall their childhood teachers and asked, "How is it possible that a person can spend 175-180 days in the company of another human being and not be able to recall them? That says something about their relationship."

He added, "Our identities are found out for us in relationships...they are manifested in relationships."

Burch said that educators are "still struggling" with establishing such relationships because of barriers they have set up for themselves.

The lecturer said the first barrier is that "almost everybody is into judgment evaluation. That's not damaging except it extends judgment and evaluation into areas about who and what a person is."

He said that educators must stop judging their students. "When kids are experiencing difficulties, we've got to be taught to listen."

He noted that a study of principals in San Diego County, Calif., showed that principals spend 78 percent of their time listening, "but they had no training in listening. They heard nothing...they just sat there and made judgments."

Burch identified another barrier to relationships in schools is the "apparent need to control. The need to control gets in the way of the quality of our relationships."

He said he has talked to kids all over the country and "they are all convinced by the time they are 10 or 11 that they are not responsible for anything. They are the victims and there is nothing they can do."

Burch said, "What I want for kids is responsibility. When I talk to teachers, their version (of a responsible student) is that they do what the teachers want them to do. Teachers like very passive kids.

"We've got to teach kids that they are directly in control of their lives. Nobody does anything to them. They do it."

Burch said the last barrier to relationships is general lack of trust in people. "There seems to be an opinion prevalent in this country that left to their own devices, people louse up — they're no damn good. I think that's part of the reason people also want to control."

But said Burch, "That's not my experience. When people are no damn good, they are just rebelling against all the control."

He said that educators also should stop playing roles and "start telling the truth. He told the group to "take the responsibility" and start communicating their own thoughts.

Burch told the gathering that they, as guidance counselors, must take the responsiblity for "turning the schools around where people learn the most basic responsibility of all — that I'm in charge here...I'm in control of my life."

He also urged them to "get out of quasi-administration. You can't stay with it and be effective." He said that when budget cuts are imminent, quasi-administrators are the first to be cut.

"You've got to be defined as the person who's going to do the job of turning the schools around," said Burch.

The convention will continue through Friday with interest sessions throughout today and Friday.

Man Convicted Of Pharmacy Robbery

A 237th District Court jury took only eight minutes Thursday afternoon to find Joe Allen Disheroon guilty in the April 30 hold-up of Twin Oaks Pharmacy.

Disheroon, 34, of Dallas was found guilty in August of a May 2 robbery at Chris's Rexall pharmacy and was sentenced to 33 years in the penitentiary.

The first trial was held after the defendant recovered from two gunshot wounds inflicted by a Lubbock policeman during the May 2 robbery and attempted kidnaping of a pharmacist.

Disheroon took the stand in the punishment phase of the trial and asked for a light sentence on the basis of his addiction to morphine, which he has attributed in both trials to his participation in a voluntary drug testing program while he was in federal prison in the early 1970s.

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford, prosecuting the case, has said he will ask a life sentence when the punishment phase resumes today.

Twin Oaks pharmacist Charles A. Curry and pharmacy employee Betty Lamb Thursday identified Disheroon as the man who robbed the pharmacy at gunpoint and escaped with a sack of drugs.

Disheroon admitted under questioning by Montford that he was convicted of writing a bad check in Taylor County in 1965, of carrying a prohibited weapon in Dallas and burglary in Collin County in 1969 and of interstate transportation of stolen securities in 1970.

Of the past 14 years of his life, he said to a question by defense attorney Floyd Holder, he has been free for only about two years.

"Most of my life is already gone," he told the jury. "I would like to go into a drug clinic and have an opportunity to be released drug-free. That was the only reason I committed the robbery."

Lubbock Mercury Hits New High

The calendar may say it's autumn, but Thursday's high temperature of 93 set a new record high for Lubbock on that date and more warm weather is in store for the South Plains today.

A high pressure system off the Texas coast and a trough of low pressure over Oklahoma is causing record-breaking high temperatures across the western half of the state.

For the fourth time this month, Abilene recorded a new high temperature for the date. Thursday the temperature climbed to 97 degrees there to break the previous record of 95 degrees set in 1929.

For the sixth time this month, El Paso has broken a record maximum temperature. Thursday's high of 94 degrees passed the previous record of 92 degrees, set in 1972.

Lubbock recorded 93 degrees Thursday afternoon to break the previous record of 90 degrees set in 1947.

The forecast, by the National Weather Service, calls for fair skies today and Saturday with temperatures again in the lower 90s.

Red Raider fans can forget about sweaters Saturday when Texas Tech plays Arkansas in Jones Stadium at 2 p.m. as game-time temperatures are expected to be in the 80s.

WEED WRITER — The pen may be mightier than the sword, but when it comes to the battle against weeds the City Council decided columnist Kenneth May needed some additional equipment. In honor of May's constant prodding of city officials to rid the city of overgrown weeds, council members named him an honorary Weed Eater and presented him the proper tool to get ready for next spring's crop of weeds. In turn, the Avalanche-Journal associate editor honored the council with a tune about weeds sung to the tune of "Amazing Grace." (Staff Photo by Dennis Copeland)

Area Farmers To Get Disaster Loans

Sixteen West Texas counties have been declared disaster areas by the Small Business Administration because of crop losses suffered during recent hailstorms and other severe weather.

The declaration makes farmers, ranchers and crop producers who had crop losses in those counties eligible for low interest loans from the agency.

West Texas counties include Castro, Hockley, Hale, Martin, Lamb, Dawson, Parmer, Gaines, Cochran, Yoakum, Deaf Smith, Bailey, Terry, Lubbock, Midland and Andrews.

The loans are available at either 5 percent or 7 3/8 percent interest, depending upon the applicant's ability to obtain credit from other sources, and are repayable depending on the ability of the applicant. Up to half of the loan may be used for 1979 operating debt repayment with the balance to be used for crop production next year.

Applicants may borrow only up to the amount of actual loss as verified by the county ASCS committee and loans approved by other agencies cannot be duplicated.

• Dimmitt, First State Bank, John K. Sowers and Steven Wurtz.

Loan applications must be submitted by April 10, 1980 on physical losses, and by July 10, 1980 on economic injury disaster loans to agricultural related businesses suffering losses because of disaster.

White Seeking Standards On Children's Homes

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Mark White filed suit Thursday seeking to impose state child care standards on radio evangelist Lester Roloff's reopened children's homes.

White's suit in state district court here contends that Roloff's homes are subject to licensing by the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Roloff closed his Rebekah Home for Girls in Corpus Christi and Anchor Homes for Boys at Zapata this summer rather than submit to state licensing.

The homes since have been reopened under the auspices of the People's Baptist Church, another Roloff venture.

The church, along with eight parents of former Rebekah Home residents, two girls and four staff members, filed a federal court suit last week alleging that regulation of the homes by the state would be unconstitutional.

The plaintiffs said the Department of Human Resources had deprived them of their constitutional rights of religious freedom and due process of law.

White said in a statement that he was bringing the suit under the 1975 state law which places child care homes — including those operated in the name of religion — under state regulation.

But he added that "legislative initiatives" were under way to change that law by developing "a more appropriate certification plan" for such homes as Roloff's.

White said he believes "the courts are the appropriate forum" to resolve the constitutional issues raised in a continuing series of court battles between Roloff and the state.

The Texas Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court already have ruled that state regulation of the homes does not violate the constitutional right to the free exercise of religion.

Robbery Trial Deliberations In Process

A 137th District Court jury lat Thursday was deliberating the aggravated robbery case of Joe Lee Brown, 30 of 1607 Ave. D, No. 4, who is accused in the June 5 robbery of an elderly Lubbock man.

The robbery victim, Johnny A. Dyer testified Thursday that Brown threatened him with a baseball bat while a second man took his money alongside some apartments at 16th Street and Avenue C.

Jerry L. Timmons, 29, of 2801 E. Fifth St., the other man Dyer identified as one of the robbers, was found guilty in the case last month and sentenced to six years in the penitentiary.

Both Brown and Timmons claimed that they were incorrectly identified.

Because of a 1978 burglary conviction, the minimum Brown could be sentenced if found guilty is 15 years. The maximum is life under the first-degree felony charge. The minimum is five years without a prior conviction.

Brown and his attorney, Mary Anne Wiley, elected to go before Judge Robert C. Wright for sentencing rather than to the jury if a guilty verdict is reached.

Assistant Criminal District Attorney Hollis Browning prosecuted the case.

A Message On Three 'Rs'

STATE EDUCATION Commissioner A.O. Bowen struck a responsive chord in saying it's high time Texas public schools clean out the curriculum deadwood, enforce classroom discipline and return to basic courses.

Most significantly, the Texas Education Agency chief made it clear that a lot of the deadwood has been added in recent years in the name of "progressive" education.

"I'm suggesting that we concentrate all of our resources—both human and monetary—for the next five years on reading," Bowen said in his first major address since becoming head of the TEA.

If memory serves, reading was a basic part of the curriculum 50 years ago, so is not part of the deadwood.

"WE HAVE ADDED on, incorporated into, infused and, I sometimes think, confused just about every element of our public school curriculum," Bowen noted.

"Would you believe that in the past 50 years we have not cut anything out of the curriculum?," he asked.

Yes, we would believe it. Like a new bureaucracy or a new tax, a course once added seems to be there forever.

Bilingual education is one example cited by the state education chief. Excellent as a tool for helping students from non-English-speaking homes make a transition, it has been warped and abused into a self-serving vehicle designed to perpetuate the language handicap rather than cure it.

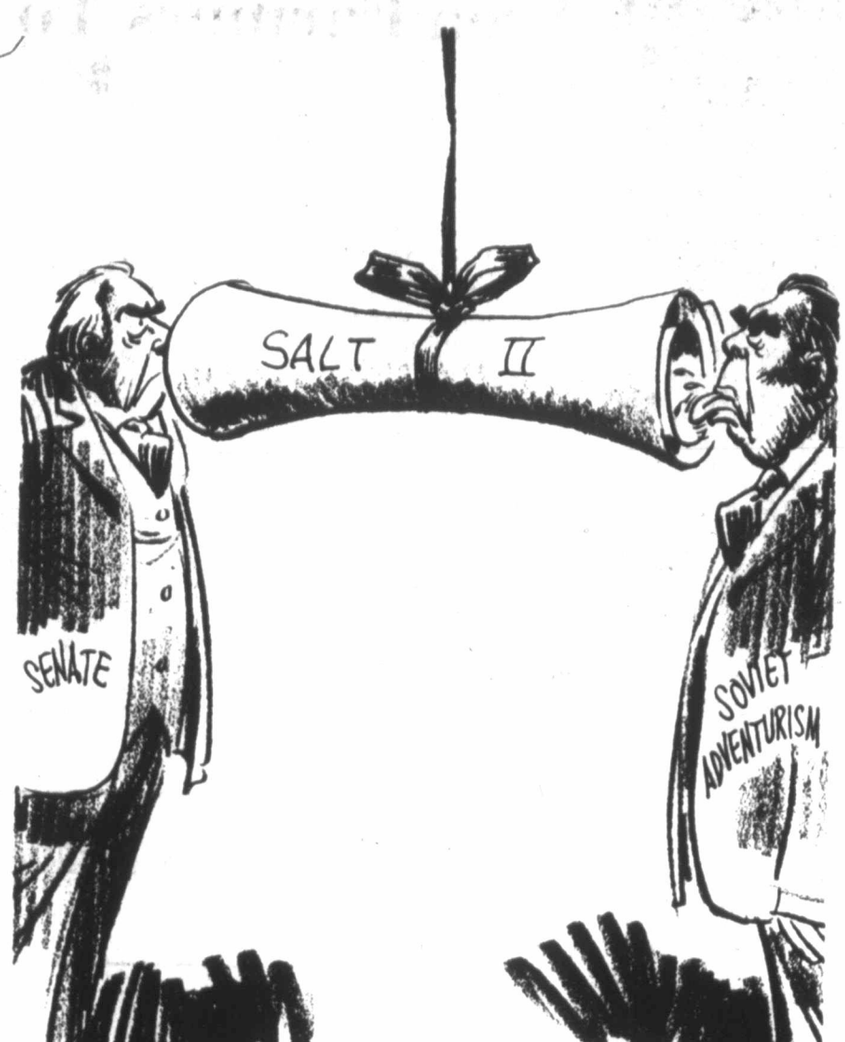
Bowen himself says "the jury is still out on bilingual education," explaining "there is some evidence (it) facilitates the educational development of limited-English-speaking children (but that) other research indicates it is not the most efficient and expeditious method."

Texas public schools should turn out students of Mexican-American backgrounds who are capable of competing on equal terms for jobs and promotions to executive positions—and that means an excellent command of English, not a crippling reliance on another language merely to preserve pride in their heritage.

SPEAKING TO school administrators, Bowen also emphasized that "we should not allow our teachers to be abused and the learning process to be disrupted by a few rowdies in the schools. We must have order."

Disciplined behavior and disciplined minds are necessary to the educational process. There has been too much buck-passing among teachers, administrators and parents with regard to discipline; all must cooperate to make certain that an atmosphere of learning is maintained in the classroom—even if it means, heaven forbid, praying about it.

Finally, if the steady decline in student achievement, as measured by standardized tests, is to be reversed, local control directed toward "teaching the basics" must replace the deadwood of warping programs to fit bureaucratic guidelines.



AN EDITORIAL:

Carter Has South Unsewed Up

WHEN THE Southern Governors' Association held its annual meeting in New Orleans, virtually all of the Democratic chief executives said they would welcome a primary contest in their respective states between The Incumbent and The Undeclared.

A bitter fight between President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., furthermore, would not in the majority of governors' opinions "irrevocably divide the party and make the South susceptible to Republican domination," a notion aggressively being promoted by Carter operatives.

Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh declined to state a preference, but offered an ominous forecast nevertheless: "Mr. Carter didn't carry Oklahoma in 1976, and he's not in as strong a position now as he was then."

IN MOST CASES, even staunch Carter supporters were unwilling to publicly criticize Kennedy, apparently seeking to maximize the political options available to them next year.

Kentucky Gov. Julian M. Carroll, one of Carter's earliest backers four years ago, proclaimed continuing support for the President, but said he won't necessarily "stick with him."

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, one of Carter's most loyal backers in the region, didn't attend the conference but told telephone interviewers that a Carter-Kennedy contest in his state would be a good race because "they both have strong grass-roots support here."

Florida Gov. Robert Graham, another Carter loyalist, predicted Carter would win the highly publicized primary in his state, but described Kennedy support there as "significant."

A SEPTEMBER region-by-region analysis by the Gallup Organization indicates that the South is "second only to the Northeast (a liberal mecca)" in terms of grass-root support enjoyed by Kennedy.

In trial heats, Carter led two likely Republican presidential nominees, Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, but his margin was far slimmer than Kennedy's in the South.

The Darden Research Corp., an Atlanta-based survey/research firm, polled voters in 10 southern states three months ago and concluded that the backbone of Carter's support—the South—has been broken. Subsequent surveys show the gap is widening.

As Claibourne Darden, the company's president, suggested in referring to the governors' apparent ambivalence:

Anytime you have that much fence-straddling with an incumbent President involved, it's an indication of possible change.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Fonda Myth Looks Pale In Light Of Retrospect

WASHINGTON—The myth about Jane Fonda, recently on tour to promote her "Campaign for Economic Democracy," is that she was an idealist of the early 1970s who "opposed the war" in Vietnam and turned out in retrospect to have been right.

The truth about Jane Fonda is rather different. To be precise, she did not "oppose the war" in Vietnam—but only the anti-Communist side of it. Her sympathies were totally with the Communist North Vietnamese, whom she praised in the most lavish terms.

She had nothing to say in condemnation of their part of the war—even though they were aggressors against the South—reserving her criticisms for leaders of the United States.

IN THE SUMMER of 1972, Fonda journeyed to North Vietnam where she made a series of approximately 20 propaganda broadcasts for the Communists.

Fairly typical of these utterances was a July 17 broadcast in which she said that U.S. war planners and munitions makers "must want to die very much themselves to think this much about new ways of killing people."

She added that "the use of these bombs or the condoning of the use of these bombs makes one a war criminal."

Elaborating on this theme, she told U.S. servicemen "the men who are ordering you to use these weapons are war criminals according to international law, and, in the past, in Germany and Japan, men who were guilty of these kinds of war crimes were tried and executed."

Concerning the suggestion that Hanoi Jane has somehow been vindicated by events, again the facts are otherwise. Her position on the war was that, if only the United States pulled out of Vietnam and withdrew support from the Saigon government, everything in Vietnam would be fine.

THERE WOULD be no more fighting, and the people of Indochina could go in peace and harmony about their business.

As she put it on her return from Hanoi, "all of the slaughter and all of the killings that are happening in Vietnam on all sides are the responsibility of the United States.

"If we pulled out of South Vietnam and if we cut off the salaries of the Saigon generals and we stopped the bombing, the war would end...The Vietnamese would not be fighting if the United States were not bombing their country to keep a Saigon dictator in power..."

Was she right? Hardly. After the United States wound down its presence in Vietnam, the North Vietnamese cranked up a final massive attack against Saigon, achieving their long-awaited conquest of the South.

Nor did the conflict end with the fall of Saigon. Upon taking power in the South, the Communists imposed a reign of terror, rounded people up into "re-education" camps, instituted a system of forced labor, moved to exterminate religion, etc.

So grim has been the repression that tens of thousands of Vietnamese "boat people" have fled the country at the risk of their lives.

This pathetic spectacle has brought public condemnation of the Vietnam Communists from such as Joan Baez—but not from Hanoi Jane.

ADD ALSO the fact that, with the collapse of the resistance in Indochina, the neighboring state of Cambodia also went under to the Communists.

The result of this conquest has been one of the most horrendous campaigns of genocide in human history—with perhaps two million of the nation's seven million inhabitants having been exterminated.

These victims of Communist brutality can also thank Hanoi Jane, and others like her, for having been abandoned to their fate.

GEORGE WILL:

Carter Muffs Bluff

WASHINGTON—In his first response, weeks ago, to what he now dismissively calls "the highly publicized" Soviet combat brigade in Cuba, Jimmy Carter went on national television in the afternoon. He warned the Soviets that the status quo was "unacceptable."

But now many people have been schooled in skepticism by his record of unreciprocated concessions in defense policy, and unmet challenges in geopolitics.

Such people tried to imagine what microscopic change by the Soviets would satisfy Carter's criterion of an acceptable change in the status quo.

No skeptic was skeptical enough. No one anticipated that Carter would take prime television time to announce that "the highest levels of the Soviet government" have given him "assurances" that they intend to maintain the status quo. All he could say was this:

Although "persuasive evidence" shows that the Soviets are lying when they assert that the brigade has a non-combat nature, Soviet statements about the future non-combat nature are "significant."

The Soviets say they will not change the brigade's "function or status," and we "understand this to mean" they will not enlarge or alter the brigade.

That is, because the Soviets insist that they will not change the status quo that Carter has called "unacceptable," he infers that they will not do anything to make it more acceptable, and so it is acceptable.

Recognize this? Carter's response is similar to, but even weaker than, his response to the Soviet Backfire bomber.

Backfire is, unquestionably, a strategic weapon, capable of a nuclear attack over intercontinental distances. But the Soviets blandly deny this (just as they deny the brigade's combat capability).

SO CARTER HAS acquiesced in the Soviets' demand that Backfire not count against their SALT totals.

In exchange, the Soviets have promised that they will produce Backfires at about the rate they have been producing them, and that they will not give Backfire the strategic capability we know it has.

Having stressed that the brigade, by itself, constitutes no military threat, Carter is deploying forces in a way that would only make sense as a response to a military threat.

Having decided on a purely symbolic response, rather than one that would inconvenience the Soviets, he has symbolized the floundering of the United States, just as he did when he sent an aircraft carrier steaming in circles in the South China Sea, and sent fighter planes to Saudi Arabia, unarmed.

To the Soviets, the significant fact about Carter's response is that he declines to mention even the possibility of considering even mild new restrictions on the eastward flow of grain, technology and credit.

ACCORDING TO Carter, the principal threat Americans should worry about is not Soviet adventurism, of which the militarization of Cuba is just one facet. No, the threat is...the U.S. Senate, which does not show proper enthusiasm for the SALT II deal he struck with the Soviets.

To the men in the Kremlin, it now is obvious that if they add to their nuclear-capable aircraft in Cuba, their submarines, and to their ground combat forces, Carter's response probably will be a televised warning to Americans about the dangerous buildup of bad vibrations in the Senate chamber.

If anyone had any doubt, this episode should have erased it: Nothing the Soviets could do would cause Carter to question the wisdom of proceeding with SALT II.

Indeed, SALT II had better be brought to a vote before Carter, who now says it is the key to "the survival of the human race," exhausts the English language's store of hyperbole.

BY ALL MEANS: Let's vote. Since July, the administration has skillfully—too skillfully for its own good—manufactured a sense of inevitability.

It has conveyed the impression that the debate is over and won, and that ratification will be perfunctory. But the problem with skillful propaganda is that the propagandizers begin to believe it.

Administration vote-counts have been studies in wishful thinking.

Sen. Frank Church, who somersaults around the political landscape with the airy lightness of a jolly jester not weighed down by worries about appearances, originally said SALT II should be shelved until the combat brigade is eliminated.

Now that Carter says the brigade will neither leave nor change, Church wants to proceed with the ratification process.

So do many opponents of SALT II. Although the administration says it has the votes, many opponents know, as the Soviets know, how safe it is to call this administration's bluff.

DONALD GRAFF:

Sea Deep In Taxes

IN ONE RESPECT, the United States is almost in a taxation class by itself.

Most major countries do not tax income earned by a citizen employed and living abroad. The United States does, above specified levels of exempt income.

Since the countries in which they are resident may also be nicking American employes, most U.S. firms operating overseas consequently have reimbursement programs to offset taxes not only on incomes but also on housing and other living-cost allowances.

The combination of U.S. and local taxation can make an American working overseas a very expensive business expenditure. Working it out under various local conditions, The Conference Board finds the cost of maintaining a $40,000-a-year American in Saudi Arabia is $153,206 and in Japan, $132,567. Mexico is a relative bargain at $84,259.

It's cheaper in many cases to employ non-Americans. For example, employment at comparable salary level in Saudi Arabia of a Swede, with no tax obligation to the government back home in Stockholm, costs only $44,000. In Japan it goes up to $118,730, but that's still $14,000 under the equivalent cost of an American.

The bottom line appears to be that Americans are being priced out of the market for American business overseas.

LEGISLATORS SERVING the supposedly economy-minded 96th Congress continue to talk out of both sides of their mouths, promising to cut taxes and the federal budget while simultaneously bragging about the expensive federal programs they have attracted to their states and districts.

The most recent example involves Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., who introduced legislation to limit the growth of federal spending on the grounds that Congress must be "truly serious about fighting inflation, cutting back federal spending and balancing the budget."

Explained Schweiker: "There has been no clearer mandate from the American people in recent years than their desire to balance the budget, limit government spending and cut taxes."

But the Coalitation of American Public Employes discovered that only one month earlier the senator distributed to his constituents a newsletter "proudly citing his raids on pork barrel."

Economizer Schweiker boasted of his role in securing for Pennsylvania federal funds to finance a $10 million highway bypass, a $7.8 million lock and dam project and $5 million for river and beach anti-erosion projects.

★

FIRST THERE WAS "psychohistory" or "political psychology"—attempts to analyze the actions of public figures with the aid of psychological techniques.

Now there's "biopolitics"—an effort to relate political behavior to an individual's physiology.

An academic survey conducted by Steven A. Peterson of Alfred University in Alfred, N.Y., reports that various researchers have sought to link politics with individuals' personal health, energy levels, physical fitness, height, weight, stress levels, sleep patterns and even biorhythms.

Some of the work, however, is highly questionable. One scientific study, for example, concluded that malnutrition leads to political apathy. It's hardly news that starving people have concerns other than politics.

JAY HARRIS:

One Man Alone...

A LOT OF successful people today would have you believe they were born that way...

And that they came into the world with a title, a bank account, credit cards and all the answers...

For some reason these days, far too many self-made businessmen and women seem to shy away from mentioning how they got where they are, the hard work, long hours, manual, sometimes menial, labor which assured them an education and often clothes and food.

It's too bad. A lot of their children, and other people's children, and some members of academia, would benefit.

The fact that there ain't no free lunches today should come as no surprise. There never have been any.

THESE THOUGHTS came to us the other night as we listened to Eddie Chiles, the Fort Worth head of the Western Company who speaks out on "what's right and what's wrong" with America today.

He spoke at the annual board of governors banquet at Lubbock Christian College. In the audience were any number of men and women who, like Chiles, graduated from the school of hard knocks. No one had to interpret his remarks for them.

You may have heard Eddie Chiles. He is the guy who sometimes comes on the radio, or television, with a message about America—how it's run, how it ought to be run, and what to do about it in both cases.

Eddie Chiles is a businessman and citizen who believes in "getting involved." He spends some $200,000 of his and his company's money each year extolling the free enterprise system and good government.

But the message he bears may be just as important as those Winnie used to rally Britain in its hour of need. Eddie Chiles is a Paul Revere urging his fellow Americans to wake up before it is too late.

But the University of Oklahoma graduate doesn't just preach a paean of success, certainly not a "government guaranteed cradle to grave" success. Nor does he fall back on the "I walked five miles to school syndrome."

On the contrary, he argues that the "right to fail" is just as much an inherent part of the American way of life as the right to succeed.

And he argues that Americans should be able to experience both rights without excessive Big Brother type help or hindrance. There are only three things the government should do for us, he says, "Guard our shores, deliver the mail and leave us alone!"

ALTHOUGH LESS than half of those qualified to vote do so in most elections these days, Chiles says "what we need is another American Revolution...

"Only this time, we need to make it a battle of the ballots, not bullets."

After graduating with a degree in petroleum engineering in 1934, Chiles set about making it on his own, so to speak. Five years later, in Seagraves, he founded the Western Company of North America.

From that modest start, his company showed steady progress. It went public in 1968 with revenues of $23.6 million. In 1978, revenue figures exceeded $215 million. Today, Chiles who says he started with "absolutely nothing," is chairman and chief executive officer of Western, now the nation's largest independent oil field service firm.

"THE GOVERNMENT," Chiles argues, "can't do anything right..."

Calling the new Susan B. Anthony dollar "an atrocity, something that looks like it came out of a Crackerjack box," Chiles says "the federal government can't even make money worth a damn!"

Chiles sees the battle lines over survival of the Free Enterprise system being drawn along Liberal-Conservative political policies. "Don't ever kid yourselves," he says, "there is a difference between Liberals and Conservatives."

Chiles sees the nation's problems starting back some four decades ago and quotes President Franklin D. Roosevelt's aide, Harry Hopkins' advocating a policy of "tax and tax and spend and spend and elect and elect" as signaling the start of many of our problems.

CHILES SEES one of the major problems confronting the average American today as "too much politics and too many politicians making a profession of their jobs..."

He would place a limit on Congressional terms as well as that of the Presidency. He would institute what he calls "truth in campaigning..."

"If a candidate pledged he would or would not do this or that and we caught him in three lies or violations of that pledge, out he would go, just like in a ballgame..."

Chiles says the government not only is playing hob with the daily lives of its citizens, but its businesses, its schools. "If we could get the federal government out of the school system, we might get God back in," he says pointedly.

Chiles sums up his feelings about government by relating the story of the Congressman who told his colleagues he "just had to get re-elected this year...I certainly don't see how I can go back home and live under the laws we've been passing up here!"

We once read that one should "say it where it counts." Eddie Chiles could use some help in his battle. And the U.S. could use some more Eddie Chiles...

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

IT'S NOT enough to report that actress Ida Lupino was born during a zeppelin raid in World War I in London. You need to say, too, that she was born under a dining room table.

The original Henry Ford kept a glassful of salt water and used razor blades on his bathroom shelf. He dipped his comb into it every morning and combed his hair. This treatment kept his hair from falling out, he said.

It was adapted from something fairly similar that was brought here by slaves from Africa.

Abortion Dispute Stalling Funds For Seven Federal Departments

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators worked Thursday toward a fragile compromise on an abortion financing dispute that is stalling an emergency appropriations bill which seven federal departments need to keep operating.

Remaining totally unsettled, however, was the separate issue of a 5.5 percent pay raise for members of Congress which also is tying up the bill.

There were indications that even if the conferees are able to agree on an abortion compromise, the proposal would face a vigorous battle on the House and Senate floors.

The seven Cabinet-level departments, meanwhile, were starting to feel the pinch from having to operate for 11 days on funds left over from the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30. The Transportation and Labor departments already have warned that their combined 90,000 employees would receive only half pay in their next paychecks.

About 1.6 million military personnel will receive no pay next week unless the bill is approved quickly. The legislation would provide new money for the departments at last year's spending levels until regular appropriations bills are passed.

The affected agencies are the departments of Defense, Agriculture, Housing and Urban Development, Interior, Transportation, Labor, and Health, Education and Welfare.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said the House would remain in session indefinitely Thursday in the hope a compromise can be worked out.

O'Neill quoted James T. McIntyre Jr., director of the Office of Management and Budget, as saying the government would be affected seriously if the emergency money bill is not passed by Friday.

The proposed abortion compromise would allow federal financing of abortions when the mother's life is directly threatened and in cases of rape and incest. The change would be in effect only for the life of the emergency bill — until Nov. 20.

Abortion financing is now allowed under conditions specified in the compromise and also in cases where two doctors certify the long-term health of the woman could be affected by a continued pregnancy. The Senate previously had insisted on all four conditions.

The House wants federal money be used only when the life of the mother is directly threatened.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, told the conferees the Senate would never accept the proposed compromise so long as the House insisted that its pay raise apply to senators as well. He suggested the conferees allow the House the pay raise and eep Senat salaries at existing levels.

But Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., replied "We're nt going t take something alone."

Stevens' proposal would mean House members would receive $60,700 a year while senators's salaries would remain at $57,500 — the current level for all members of Congress.

At one point during the negotiations, the House team suggested the Senate reduce its $25,000 limit on fees that senators can earn from speeches to the House limit of $8,625.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., said the Senate had reneged on a public commitment by voting earlier this year to extend the $25,000 limit for another four years.

Conte said the senators "making the most noise" about the House's proposed pay boost were the ones collecting the maximum allowed $25,000 in outside speaking fees. "You're getting it from private interests," Conte said.

Conte also criticized the proposed new Senate office building as the "biggest boondoggle ever" and said "it wouldn't get another brick" if it were before the conference committee.

Florida To Get Grant For Wetlands Sanctuary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state of Florida has been awarded a $1.8 million government grant to establish an estaurine sanctuary in one of the most biologically productive areas in the nation.

The grant was awarded by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Office of Coastal Zone Management. Officials said the funds will be augmented by a $1.9 million contribution from Floria's Environmentally Endangered Lands Fund.

The 192,000-acre sanctuary includes valuable wetlands along the lower Apalachicola River and Bay area, which produces 90 percent of the state's oyster crop, officials said.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Nobel Co-Winner Says Luck Involved In Feat

WINCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — "There's a good deal of luck involved in winning a Nobel Prize," Allan MacLeod Cormack remarked modestly, after learning that he had shared the 1979 prize for medicine.

"One can never hope to win it," added the quiet, bespectacled 55-year-old professor who teaches basic physics to freshmen at Tufts University in nearby Medford.

Cormack, a native of Johannesburg, South Africa, shared the award and a record $190,000 Thursday with Godfrey Newbold Hounsfield, a research engineer with the British company EMI. They worked independently to develop a sophisticated X-ray technique permitting non-surgical diagnosis of tumors.

Cormack, who says his only non-academic interest is "a bit of sailing," was jolted shortly before 8 a.m. when reporters called to tell him of the prize.

"We had a kitchen fire a couple of weeks ago and yesterday my purse was stolen," said his daughter, Jean, a 23-year-old Tufts senior who majors in music. "When I heard him (Cormack) say on the phone: 'I'm astonished,' I thought 'Now what's gone wrong'."

Cormack said he started his prize-winning research in 1956 and completed it in 1964, when his work was published.

"It was very much a solitary effort," he said. "I'm now working on other projects, chiefly nuclear physics. I've always been in my little ivory tower."

The son of an engineer, Cormack holds a master's degree from the University of Cape Town. He also studied at Cambridge in England.

He lives with his wife, Barbara Seavey, daughter Jean and a son, Robert, 15, a high school student, in this Boston suburb. Another daughter, Margaret, 27, is a graduate student in medieval studies at Yale University.

"He doesn't strike me as a person who's driven," said Jack Schneps, a friend and Tufts associate. "He never talks very much about his work in medical physics. He certainly has worked mostly alone. He's a rather calm fellow. He isn't someone who is in the lab from morning 'til night, thinking about his work all the time."

New York's Radio City Music Hall, one of the world's largest indoor theaters, seats 6,000 and has a stage 144 feet wide and 67 feet deep.

Oil Price Controls To Be Phased Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House handed President Carter a significant energy victory Thursday by voting to uphold his decision to permit a phasing out of government price controls on crude oil.

By a 257-135 margin, the House decided to let stand Carter's plan for allowing the price of domestically produced crude oil to rise to world market levels by mid-1981. The president has said this a crucial element in his drive to reduce U.S. reliance on imported oil.

However, the fate of a second challenge to Carter's oil pricing policies remained to be decided. It involved a proposal to reimpose lids on the price of home heating oil and diesel fuel for the coming winter.

The crude oil vote came as the House considered legislation authorizing Department of Energy programs for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

House liberals argued that the price control phase-out that Carter began on June 1 was lining the pockets of big oil companies at the expense of U.S. consumers.

Imported crude oil, whose price is set by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, now costs around $23 to $24 a barrel — roughly twice the average controlled price of U.S. oil.

But White House allies in the House argued that despite the added burden on consumers, the higher prices triggered by deregulation would conservation and encourage the search for new U.S. oil supplies.

A coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats joined forces with the administration in defeating the move to block the phasing out of controls on crude oil prices.

The vote removed the most serious obstacle to Carter's deregulation plan, which has never been in serious jeopardy in the Senate. It also reversed a nonbinding vote by House Democrats last spring that renounced Carter's oil pricing policies.

"Decontrol must be the base for a rational energy program for our country," said Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo. "We must be willing to admit to ourselves that the time of cheap energy is gone."

But Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., leader of the House forces opposing the lifting of controls, argued that big oil companies had invested billions of dollars in new exploration anyway, and did not need the added incentives provided by unrestricted prices.

"Now is the time to draw the line and give some protection to the American people," Moffett said.

In an unsuccessful efort to pck up votes, Moffett softened his amendment to allow deregulation of oil from Alaska and newly discovered oil.

Carter began lifting price controls under a 1975 law giving the president authority to do so without seeking further congressional approval. Moffett's amendment would have stopped the process by withholding from the Energy Department federal funds needed to carry out the deregulation plan.

Carter's proposed "windfall profits" tax, now being considered in the Senate, is based on deregulation going forth. A move to block this process would have made the tax proposal meaningless and would have been a major blow to the president's energy program.

After the vote, foes of deregulated crude oil prices lowered their sights and regrouped around an amendment by Rep. Peter H. Kostmayer, D-Pa., that would reimpose price lids on home heating oil and diesel fuel for the coming winter.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill predicted a closer vote on the Kostmayer amendment than on the more-sweeping measure offered by Moffett.

Kostmayer said that retail prices for heating oil have nearly doubled since last winter, an increase he said far exceeded the same period's increases in the cost of crude oil and in doing business.

"Heating oil prices are being arbitrarily established at the whim or fancy of the oil industry," Kostmayer said.

The effect of Kostmayer's proposal would be to restore for six months the price controls on heating oil and diesel and jet fuel lifted in 1976. It would not automatically preclude further price increases this winter but would restrict them to those forced by higher crude oil acquisition costs.

"The cold weather and snow the northeastern United States isexperiening this week should send up an unmistakably clear signal to all of us," Kostmayer said.

O'Neill, citing fuel oil prices of over 90 cent a gallon in parts of the country, told reporters "there is a great feeling that the price should be pegged somehow by the federal government."

The Massachusetts Democrat said many Americans in cold-weather states are far more troubled by the price of heating oil than they are about gasoline prices of over $1 a gallon.

Oil price deregulation has been portrayed by the Carter administration as an essential action in the drive to spur the search for alternatives to oil imported from members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

In two separate non-binding votes, a majority of House Democrats previously went on record in favor of reimposing price controls on both crude oil and petroleum products.

Oil Chairman Says Action Necessary

DALLAS (AP) — The chairman of the Texas oil and gas regulatory commission said Thursday legal action may be necessary to protect the rights of Texas producers under new federal natural gas price regulation that conflict with state statutes.

John H. Poerner said the Texas Railroad Commission cannot comply with new rules under which the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission seeks to dictate how production allowables are set.

"There is serious doubt whether FERC's system would protect correlative rights which the railroad commission is required under state law to protect," he said.

Poerner told the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association a petition has been filed for a rehearing on the new FERC rules but that legal action may have to be considered.

"We hope they will listen to reason," he later told newsmen. "But, if not, we are ready to go to court with no foolishness."

While Poerner talked about possible legal action a second railroad commissioner, Jim Nugent, said the attempt by FERC to overreach its statutory bounds is "blatant and crass."

"We are faced with threats to the very foundations of the Texas oil and gas regulatory framework," Nugent said.

Poerner and Nugent said the 1978 Natural Gas Policy Act left the determination of price categories for producing wells to state agencies but FERC is trying to take over the duties assigned to the states.

"FERC has taken the position it can independently weigh the evidece supporting our determination of the area which can be efficiently and effectively drained by a single gas well, in other words, our determination of proration unit," Nugen said.

He said the House-Senate conference report on the1978 act akes it clear the determination of poration uits is the business of the state agency.

Nugent quoted the conference report as saying Congress had no intention of allowing FERC to "second-guess" state agencies by independently weighing evidence and reversing price category determinations.

The third member of the state commission, Mack Wallace, repeated earlier charges federal regulations and environmental overkill have hamstrung numerous energy projects at a time dependence on foreign oil threatens the nation's economy and endangers national security.

"The United States has frittered away hour after hour drafting self-defeating rules and regulations when it should have left the marketplace untouched," Wallace said.

Edwin L. Cox, a Dallas independent operator, was elected president of the trade group that represents all segments of the Texas oil and gas industry. He succeeds Hank Harkins, an Alice independent.

Bullock Admitted To Hospital

AUSTIN (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock, who laughs over repeated inquiries about his health, was admitted to Seton Medical Center on Thursday after suffering a possible heart attack.

A statement from Bullock's office, which he approved, said he would be treated for "chest pains and symptoms of a mild heart attack."

Bullock, 50, became ill at home and notified aide Jack Roberts, who called an ambulance.

Bullock was taken to Seton's out-patient clinic at 9:03 a.m. and transferred to the intensive care unit for observation.

The comptroller's office said Bullock's doctors expect to keep him in the hospital for at least a week for treatment and tests.

Sister Gertrude Levy of Seton's public information office described Bullock's condition as stable.

Bullock was hospitalized in July 1972 for treatment of a kidney disorder and while he was there tests revealed a tumor-like growth in his right lung. Two large non-malignant tumors were removed along with more than one-third of the lung.

Last April 10 Bullock issued a "press advisory" saying:

"Because of the news media's habitual curiosity about my state of health be advised that I am entering an Austin hospital today for surgery on my hemorrhoids."

Bullock served in the Texas House from Hillsboro in 1956-59 and was secretary of state in 1971-73.

He was elected comptroller in 1974 and re-elected in 1978.

Bullock, who used to say "some day I fully intend to be governor of Texas," said in August he might quit politics in 1982 and start selling cars.

"I've just lost some of the romance for it (being governor)," Bullock told an interviewer.

Asked another time about his health and the fact he was still smoking, Bullock cracked, "I'm so busy I ain't got time to die."

Lt. Col. John Glenn Jr. became the first American in orbit on Feb. 2, 1962, when he circled the earth three times in the Mercury capsule Friendship 7.

Houston Mayor Seeks Bond Program

HOUSTON (AP)— Houston Mayor Jim McConn Thursday asked the city Legal Department to prepare a $200 million bond program to help low and middle-income citizens buy homes.

McConn said the need for low-interest mortgage money is crucial in the nation's fifth largest city and that many residents "are now completely shut out of the home-buying market."

The City Council must approve sale of the bonds.

The money would be used to cover mortages on 3,200 new and used homes selling for less than $70,000.

McConn said the average mortgage under the program would be $50,000 and families applying must make less than $30,000 a year.

"There are a lot of couples where both husband and wife are working, earning $20,000-$22,000, and they are completely shut out of the home-buying market," the mayor said.

Martin Perlman, president of the Greater Houston Home Builders Association, said the bonds probably would provide home mortgage in interest rates of 7.5 percent to 8.25 percent. The current rate on conventional mortgages in Houston is 11 percent while those financed through federal government-backed programs are 10.5 percent.

McConn said because of the legal work involved it would be "possibly as long as sx months, maybe a little longer than that" before the fundswould be vailable.

SALT II Running Close Race In Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of the SALT II treaty said Thursday they will have to bargain with four separate groups of Senate critics to find the 67 votes needed to ratify the agreement.

Treaty backers pinpointed their vote search as Sen. Frank Church urged that the treaty be ratified but not go into effect until the president assures Congress that Soviet troops in Cuba "are not engaged in a combat role" and pose no threat to any other country.

Church, an Idaho Democrat and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said his proposal would help "remove one of the most serious obstacles" to ratification of the treaty.

Church and Sens. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., ranking GOP member of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate's majority whip, readily agreed the treaty would fail in an immediate vote.

Javits estimated the number of treaty supporters at more than 50, but less than the two-thirds required for ratification.

"That means we have to defer in some way to concerns, criticisms and demands of some senators," Javits said.

Church and Cranston said additional votes must come from senators concerned about four separate issues: Soviet troops in Cuba, higher defense spending, greater arms reductions than contained in SALT II, and verification of Soviet compliance with the treaty.

"All these groups need to be satisfied if we are to secure the necessary two-thirds vote of the Senate," Church said.

In a speech on the Senate floor, Church said increased U.S. surveillance in the Caribbean and other steps taken by President Carter to defuse the Soviet troop issue failed to change the status quo that Carter had said was unacceptable.

"The Senate, then, must rectify and strengthen the American position," Church said.

He proposed attaching a binding "understanding" to the Senate's resolution of ratification. It would ban the exchange of treaty ratification papers between the United States and the Soviet Union until the president gave the Senate the assurances about the Russian troops in Cuba.

"I say that without this condition, the treaty cannot garner the two-thirds vote necessary for its ratification," said Church. Previously he had said the treaty could not be approved while Russian combat troops were in Cuba.

Cranston called Church's proposal "a very constructive step" toward solving the Soviet troop controversy, and said it should clear the way for Senate debate of the treaty.

Javits reserved judgment on the move.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance has said such an action as proposed by Church is "neither necessary nor appropriate."

On the issue of defense spending, the Carter administration already has committed itself to a 3 percent increase and has said it will consider doing more if necessary. A group of senators led by Sam Nunn, D-Ga., is calling for a 5 percent boost.

Treaty supporters hope a Senate Intelligence Committee report will satisfy senators concerned about the U.S. ability to monitor Soviet strategic weapon development. The report said ratification of the treaty will enhance the U.S. capability to monitor those Soviet systems restricted by the pact.

However, the report did not specifically endorse the Carter administration's position that SALT II is "adequately verifiable."

Some senators, such as George McGovern, D-S.D., and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., criticize the treaty as bogus arms control. Treaty supporters hope to mollify them by instructing U.S. arms control negotiators to seek quick and deep cuts in Soviet and American nuclear arsenals in a third SALT treaty.

Ruling Made Against Attorney's Charges

AUSTIN (AP) — An attorney hired by a county to collect back taxes may not also charge the defendants for attorney's fees, the attorney general said Thursday.

The opinion was asked by Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, chairman of the House State Affairs Committee.

Uher said a private attorney contracted with Victoria County to collect delinquent taxes for 15 pecent of the amount collected. The attorney also got a court order that said taxpayers forced to answer the tax collector's questions must also pay a "reasonable attorney's fees."

The attorney general said state law provides that no contract may be made by a county commissioners court to pay more than 15 percent of the amount of delinquent taxes collected.

Murder Defendant Admits Making Call

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Roger Dale Stafford admitted he gave authorities a telephone call that led to his arrest for the slayings of six steakhouse workers, a state law officer testified at Stafford's murder trial Thursday.

Linville said after Stafford was arrested he admitted that he had made the call after "he drank two pints of whiskey" in an Oklahoma City hotel room.

The agent said the caller claimed he had picked up two people and given them a ride in his truck. Linville said the caller identified the pair as Stafford's estranged wife, Verna Stafford, and his late brother, Harold.

Stabbings Leave Two Men Seriously Injured

Two Lubbock men remained in serious condition Thursday evening at Health Sciences Center Hospital with stab wounds they received in separate incidents late Wednesday and early Thursday.

A 50-year-old Lubbock man was taken into custody about 6:30 a.m. Thursday in connection with the stabbing of Ernest Padilla, thought to be in his early 20s, of 2306 Ave. H, No. 8.

Padilla reportedly was stabbed 17 times at his residence about 4:45 a.m. Thursday during an argument with the suspect, who is one of Padilla's neighbors.

Police Det. George Parramore said the suspect was arrested when he was pointed out to police by a witness. A 5-inch dagger was found in the suspect's sock.

The man is in custody in the Lubbock County jail.

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies answered a call to 1115 83rd St. about 10:50 p.m. Wednesday and found 36-year-old Stanley F. Thompson lying in a pool of blood on his kitchen floor. Police reports indicate Thompson had been stabbed twice in the chest.

A 32-year-old woman living with Thompson first told deputies she was in another room of the couple's trailer house when she heard someone enter their residence, followed by what sounded like a scuffle.

In her first story, she said she went into the kitchen where she found Thompson alone and on the floor in a pool of blood.

However, the woman gave a different version of what she saw after the injured man told deputies at the hospital he knew who attacked him.

The witness then told deputies Thompson picked up the suspect at the Lubbock International Airport earlier in the day and that they arrived home about 9:30 p.m.

She said all three of them were in the kitchen when an argument erupted and the suspect lunged at Thompson. She added that she saw Thompson fall to the floor bleeding, and while she was attempting to help the victim the other man ran out the front door.

After the assault, the armed man reportedly went to a nearby house and asked the resident to give him a ride south of Lubbock on Highway 87. The resident said the suspect was covered with blood, and that the man had told him he had a fight with Thompson.

However, the witness said he drank several beers with the suspect, then took him to a liquor store before letting him out on Highway 87. The suspect was last seen attempting to hitch a ride south of Lubbock.

The man reportedly was attempting to go to San Antonio, sheriff's Capt. Alton Hobbs said. Hobbs added that it was not known early today what prompted the altercation between Thompson and the suspect.

The assailant was described as a white man, about 6 feet tall, weighing 190 pounds, with brown hair and blue eyes.

The man reportedly had a scar on his chest, and was last seen wearing blue jeans, a light-colored shirt and a cowboy hat. Reports indicate the suspect also may have suffered a head wound in the fight and may be seeking medical attention.

Authorities were asked to be on the lookout for the suspect at local truck stops and hospitals in the area.

Area Man, Youth Hurt In Fight Behind Shop

A 31-year-old Lubbock man, suffering from a stab wound in the buttocks, walked into the Lubbock County Sheriff's Department shortly after 9 p.m. Wednesday and told deputies he had been injured during an altercation behind an automotive shop in the 2700-block of Avenue H.

Meanwhile, a 16-year-old boy, who the man said was one of his two assailants, was telling city police he was shot in the foot during the incident.

Neither person's name was revealed and both were treated and released at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The man said he, the youth and the boy's brother were drinking beer behind the business shortly after 9 p.m. when an argument erupted and he was stabbed.

He told authorities he got a .32-caliber pistol and fired six shots at the brothers. He added that, before driving off, the pair began shooting at him, with six bullets striking his car.

The youth also said he was injured as the result of a fight involving the trio. He said he started running away when he heard gunfire, and was shot once in the left foot.

Reports indicate neither party wished to file charges, and that they refused to sign the investigating officers' crime reports.

In other activity, a 27-year-old Lubbock woman said she was knocked to the floor of her residence, beaten and raped about 10:15 p.m. Wednesday by a knife-wielding man.

The woman, who was treated and released at Health Sciences Center Hospital, said her attacker struck her in the head, kicked her in the stomach and between the legs, tore her clothing and sexually assaulted her before fleeing through the front door.

The man reportedly broke through the front entrance of the self-employed masseuse's home when she refused to let him in, according to reports.

She said that just before being confronted by the suspect, she heard a gunshot outside her residence and turned out her lights and called her sister. After the man had fled, the sister arrived, took the woman to her house outside the city and then called Lubbock police.

The suspect was described as a white man, between 18 and 25, about 5 feet 9 inches tall, thin and with blond hair. He was reported wearing a white T-shirt, blue jeans, a red bandana and gloves.

Rickey Hass, 25, of Lubbock told police he was robbed of $18 cash and his wallet about 1:25 a.m. Thursday after being attacked by two men outside a club in the 1800-block of 19th Street.

He said he was standing next to a car when the men, described as Mexican-Americans in their late 20s or early 30s, confronted him.

One of the suspects allegedly struck Hass in the face, knocking him down. The two men then went through the victim's pockets and took their loot, according to reports.

Hass, who suffered an injured nose, said the bandits fled in a yellow four-door vehicle.

A man allegedly exposed himself to a convenience store clerk about 1:20 a.m. Thursday and then called her on the phone about 35 minutes later.

The 22-year-old attendant said she heard tapping on the business window, turned and saw the suspect with his pants down. She said he then ran off.

While a policeman was filling out a report at the scene, the man called the woman, asked how she liked the "show," and said he would be back if she would disrobe also, according to police.

Richard L. Greenlee of 3515 58th St. said about $2,000 in weapons and ammunition was stolen from his house by burglars between 9 a.m. and 10:30 p.m. Wednesday. He reported nine rifles missing.

Death Flight Termed 'Stupid'

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The balloon flight over a mountain in high winds that led to the deaths of two participants in the International Hot Air Balloon Fiesta was "stupidity," a federal investigator said Thursday.

Officials from the National Transportation Safety Board and the Federal Aviation Administration were called in to coordinate the investigation of Wednesday's accident in which a California man and woman plunged to their deaths while flying over the 10,378-foot-high Sandia Mountains.

The balloon, "Jonathan Livingston Seagull II," encountered a sudden shift in winds while at an altitude of 1,500 to 2,000 feet. Winds over the mountains just east of Albuquerque were reported at about 30 knots.

James Valentine, a local investigator for the FAA, told balloonist Alfred K. Bacon that it was "stupidity" for the 20 balloonists in the mountain flight to make the attempt in such windy conditions. Valentine, whose comment was overheard by a reporter, declined to repeat it on the record but did not deny making the statement.

Meanwhile, about 200 balloonists took to the skies again Thursday after a prayer vigil in memory of the two victims. The crash was the first fatal crash in the eight-year history of the event, which this year has attracted representatives from 32 states and five foreign countries.

Witnesses to Wednesday's accident said the balloon collapsed and was ignited by its propane burner. The balloon crashed in flames behind a ridge near a picnic area as about 100 watched in horror.

"It was such a helpless feeling," said George Welsh of Albuquerque, a chase crew member. "Someone brought a little fire extinguisher but there wasn't anything they could do. The flames just spurted everywhere."

The dead were identified as Richard Temple, 31, of Cucamonga, Calif., and Cathy Wylie, 35, of Palmdale, Calif. Mrs. Wylie was a real estate agent and the mother of four children, ages 10 to 17. Her husband was overseas on a company assignment.

Bacon, president of the Farmington, N.M., Balloon Club, was among those who refused to make the flight.

"I wouldn't fly in this weather," he said. "Anybody that went up was just asking for it."

Dewey Reinhard, a balloonist from Colorado Springs, was another who did not take part. "I will never fly in these conditions," he said. "In my opinion, this was foolhardy."

Albuquerque balloonist Harold Wolfley, who has flown over Pike's Peak, watched the crash from his balloon above the victims' balloon and said wind conditions were "as treacherous as I've ever seen."

A helicopter leased by a locl television station to cover the fiesta made a forced landing in the same area, but the pilot and a reporter on board escaped injury.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Q. I started buying shares of a mutual fund in 1952. I continued purchasing — and reinvesting all dividends and capital gains distributions — until the end of 1966. By that time, I had accumulated 3,985 shares — which I still have. My total cost — including reinvested dividends and capital gains — was $41,557.

From 1967 to date, I have taken all dividends and capital gains in cash — for a total amount of $49,840. The fund's shares are now listed as being worth around $11. I guess I shouldn't have put "all my eggs in one basket."

I need the income from this fund, plus a small pension, to live on. Do you think I should sell some or all of my fund shares?

A. Because you need income, the answer has to be "yes." The current yield from that fund — dividend divided by market price — has been running about 5.2 percent. You can get much higher yields, elsewhere.

You have also taken your capital gains distributions in cash. But only the dividends — which represent your share of the dividends and interest the fund has collected on securities it holds — can be counted as "income."

The capital gains distributions — which represent your share of the net profits the fund has realized by selling securities it has held at higher prices than it paid for those securities — technically are not "income."

Even though the fund you named has not been a world-beater, it has a reasonably good record and, as your numbers show, has served you well over the years. Its performance has perked up, lately. As I put this through the typewriter, its share value is $11.40.

But you need more income. Seems like it's time to switch into something such as an income mutual fund; a money market mutual fund or six-month savings certificates.

Q. I have some questions my broker is pretty general in answering. What is the relationship between the U.S. government and the Federal Farm Credit Banks? I recently bought a $10,000 nine-month Farm Credit Bank bond, which pays interest at the annual rate of 10.6 percent. Is this investment backed by the U.S. government?

A. First, let's get the name straight. It's Federal Intermediate Credit Bank. There is one such bank in each of 12 districts around the county, as there are 12 Federal Land Banks and 12 Banks for Cooperatives.

All these banks are part of the federal Farm Credit System. They are supervised and examined by the Farm Credit Administration, an agency of the federal government.

The bonds these banks issue, however, are not obligations of the U.S. government, nor are they guaranteed by the government. But they have never failed to pay off. Your investment is just about risk-free.

Your broker should have explained all this and more. You can get booklets describing the bonds and other securities issued by all these banks by writing to the Information Division, Farm Credit Administration, Washington, D.C. 20578.

Q. I purchased a Series E. U.S. Savings Bond, last week and the bank insisted that I provide my Social Security number. I bought E bonds years ago and never had to give my number. How long has this been going on?

A. Since Oct. 1, 1973. It's all part of the Treasury Department program to catch people who cash E bonds and "forget" to report the interest that has built up on the bonds as taxable income.

That information, along with much more, is fed into the Internal Revenue Service's computers. If your tax return doesn't show taxable income about which the revenooers have been supplied information, the computers are supposed to go "tilt."

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Gold Slumps While Dollar Enjoys Rise

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gold plummeted on jittery European and U.S. bullion markets Thursday as the dollar strengthened against foreign currencies.

But dealers said uncertainty over the effects of last weekend's credit-tightening moves by the Federal Reserve may send gold higher in coming days.

"It appears that the volatility is going to continue," said spokesman John Crowley of the trading house of James Sinclair & Co. in New York. "It's a nervous market that could go either way."

Bullion slumped to $391 a troy ounce at New York's Republic National Bank, off $24 from Wednesday's late rate, and finished earlier in London at $396.50, down $11.50. In Zurich, bullion dropped $8 to $398.50.

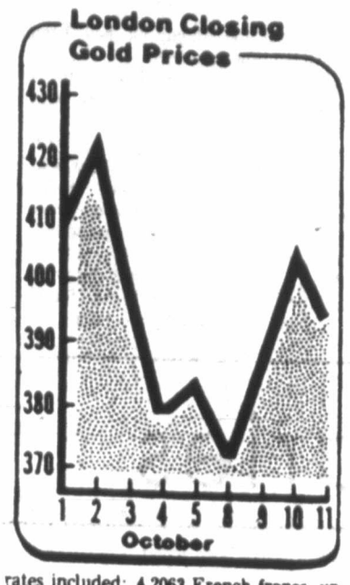
The decline was even sharper on futures markets, where traders buy and sell commitments to deliver gold on specified dates and at specificed prices. On the Commodity Exchange Inc. in New York, the October gold contract fell $28.90 an ounce to $386.

Gold reached a trading peak of $444 in Zurich on Oct. 2, but had slumped to $372.50 by Monday before making a recovery.

There were "signs of some rationality" on currency markets, a trader for a multinational bank in New York said. "It's too early to say so for sure," he said, "but signs of sanity are beginning to return."

The dollar rose to 1.7913 West German marks in late New York trading, up from 1.7734 marks Wednesday and 1.7835 marks earlier Thursday in Frankfurt. Wednesday's Frankfurt close was 1.7827 marks.

Other 4 p.m. EDT New York dollar rates included: 4.2063 French francs, up from 4.1665 Wednesday; 1.6218 Swiss francs, up from 1.6035; 226.30 Japanese yen, up from 225.50; and 1.1745 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1744.



The British pound fell to $2.1672 in New York from $2.1725 a day before. Earlier in the day in London, the pound was quoted at $2.166, down from $2.1675.

Other late dollar quotes included: Zurich, 1.6152 Swiss francs, up from 1.6122; Paris, 4.195 French francs, up from 4.17; Amsterdam, 1.9745 Dutch guilders, down from 1.98; and Milan, 825.20 Italian lire, unchanged from 825.20.

In Tokyo the dollar closed at 225.90 yen, down from 226.375 Tuesday. Tokyo markets were closed Wednesday for a holiday.

Computer Firm Suffers Drop As Sales Lag

NEW YORK (AP) — Continued problems from customers leasing more computers than they buy spurred an 18 percent decrease in International Business Machines Corp.'s third-quarter earnings, the company announced Thursday.

The computer giant said it earned $669 million or $1.14 per share in the third quarter, compared with $816 million or $1.39 per share in the year-earlier quarter. IBM said gross income from sales was $2.07 billion compared with $2.18 billion in the 1978 third quarter, while gross income from rentals and services was $3.31 billion compared with $3.10 billion.

IBM said its 1978 third quarter per-share profit was adjusted for the company's 4-for-1 stock split effected May 10 of this year.

IBM Chairman Frank T. Cary said, "The shift in the proportion of customers deciding to lease, rather than purchase (equipment) has continued." He said, "Purchases in the third quarter were significantly lower than the comparable 1978 period, when purchase activity was accelerating toward a fourth quarter peak."

The trend toward leasing of computer equipment has been growing because manufacturers have been introducing new models and lines of equipment at a rapid pace. Hence, customers are wary of making large purchases when the equipment soon might be out of date.

"As has been indicated in the past, substantial shifts in the level of such purchases can materially affect short-term operating results," Cary said, "because income from purchases is realized immediately while lease income is taken into earnings over a period of time."

In the first nine months of this year, IBM had net income of $2 billion or $3.43 per share, compared with $2.10 billion or $3.58 per share in the first three quarters of 1978. Nine-month gross income from sales was $6.21 billion compared with $5.57 billion, while gross income from rentals and services was $9.82 billion compared with $9.07 billion in the comparable 1978 period.

Answers Offered To Queries About History's Worst Oil Spill

MEXICO CITY (AP) — History's worst oil spill, the blowout of a Mexican offshore well, will continue pumping hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil daily into the Gulf of Mexico until at least late October, officials say — despite herculean efforts and $45 million spent thus far to tame it.

Here in question-and-answer form is a summary of what happened at the well Ixtoc 1, what its financial and environmental costs have been and what is being done about it.

Question: How did the well get out of control?

Answer: At dawn last June 3, oilmen were removing worn-out pipe after the drill bit of the Ixtoc test well had bored into a cavern about two miles beneath the sea floor. The drill fractured a thin rock cover, releasing a gusher and a cloud of natural gas at the site, 56 miles off Mexico's southern Gulf coast. A spark on the $22-million floating platform ignited the gas and the explosion cut down the drilling tower like an acetylene torch. It sank through 165 feet of water to the seabed, blocking access to the hole from above. Damaged automatic shutoff valves failed. No one was injured.

Q. What has happened since then?

A. The runaway well has spewed 2.4 million barrels of oil — more than 100 million gallons — along with a like amount of natural gas. Mexico's state-run oil company Pemex says half the oil and gas burns up at the well, 17 percent evaporates and ships scoop up about 25 percent more. Chemicals break up much of the rest, Pemex says, but the oil that gets away forms rust-brown ribbons of oil slick that have washed ashore on beaches from southern Mexico to the Texas Gulf coast, 500 miles to the north. At Mexico's going rate of $24.60 a barrel, Pemex has lost more than $70 million worth of oil, and has spent $348,000 a day in efforts to slow down the gusher.

Q. Who was at fault and who is being hurt?

A. Mexico's attorney-general investigated and declared it an accident. But a group of Texas fishermen filed a $155-million lawsuit against Pemex and an equipment-leasing company founded, but no longer controlled by, Texas Gov. Bill Clements for damage to shrimp, oyster and crab grounds. The equipment firm had leased the drilling rig platform to the Mexicans. Businessmen in Texas resort areas say the pollution has badly hurt the tourist business. Mexico's beaches are also dirtied and its Gulf shrimp trade threatened.

Q. What has been done to stop it?

A. After Texas blowout expert Red Adair failed to cap the rogue well, engineers dumped thousands of fist-sized steel balls, heavy drilling mud and cement into it. This cut down the flow. Pemex then brought in a 300-ton steel cone to try to narrow the gusher and control contamination, but the $25-million funnel cracked and was sent back for repair. Two wells are being drilled at an angle nearby to allow oilmen to pour more mud and cement into the hole to cap it. Officials admit this has always been the only hope.

Q. Why is it taking so long?

A. The well is more than two miles deep. The emergency wells are now nearly that deep. Pemex officials originally set a target of late September but hurricanes have forced postponements. They are now aiming at late October.

Q. Can the United States do anything?

A. The U.S. government asked Mexico to pay for ecological damage to Texas beaches, but President Jose Lopez Portillo countered that the United States never paid for salt damage done to farmland in the Mexicali Valley by saline water from the Colorado River. A future aU U.S.-Mexican environmental agreement is being studied.

Q. How does this compare with previous oil spills?

A. Previously the worst loss of oil, some 74 million gallons, occurred in the collision of two supertankers off the Caribbean island of Tobago last July. The supertanker Amoco Cadiz spilled 65 million gallons when it broke up off the French coast in March 1978, and in 1960 the tanker Marpessa spilled 64 million gallons into the Persian Gulf. Pemex claims that, because of the fire and evaporation, Ixtoc 1 has spilled less than 60 million gallons thus far and should actually be counted as the fourth-largest offshore spill in history.

Alaska Lands-Preservation Bill Intact

WASHINGTON (AP) — A move to allow quick leasing and drilling for oil in a new area of north Alaska, including a national wildlife range, failed by one vote Thursday in a Senate committee.

The Energy and Natural Resources Committee rejected an amendment aimed at putting a substantial hole in the Alaska lands-preservation bill.

That bill, which would ban most commercial development on at least 97 million acres of Alaska, would allow some government-financed oil and gas tests in the Arctic National Wildlife Range — but no drilling.

The amendment pushed by Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, an opponent of the preservation bill, would have required the government to open almost immediate private leasing of areas in the range as well as in the 23 million acre National Petroleum Reserve to the west.

The two areas straddle the big Prudhoe Bay oilfield, and Gravel said new seismic and geologic tests are worth little because big oil companies already are eager to bid for leases in the surrounding areas.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the committee, said he felt Gravel's idea of leasing to oil companies without further studies of effects of such action "is not a prudent course to follow." And the committee sided with Jackson on a 4-3 vote.

Conservationists say drilling in the wildlife range would do substantial environmental damage, threatening the survival of the largest healthy caribou herd remaining in Alaska.

But Jackson said non-drilling tests should continue in case of worsening oil supply problems for the nation. "In time of crisis, we can't ignore finding out what the facts are," he said.

Still pending is an amendment by Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., to limit tests in the range to seismic and geologic studies but to put financing in the hands of oil cmpanies rathe than the federal government.

The committee also voted, one year after the Interior Department declared 57 million Alaskan acres off limits for development, to keep that from happening again.

The committee agreed without objection to limit to 5,000 acres any future Interior Department park or refuge designations in Alaska under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act unless Congress consents to more.

Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus's 1978 action, called "this holocaust" by Gravel, remains in effect along with President Carter's orders protecting an additional 56 million acres.

However, both these designations would be lifted if Congress can agree on its long-debated legislation to write into law protection of the millions of acres of land.

Senate Denounces Talmadge Actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted overwhelmingly Thursday to denounce Herman E. Talmadge, one of its most senior members, for "reprehensible" handling of government funds.

The 81-15 vote culminated months of investigation by the Senate Ethics Committee and a brief debate on the Senate floor. It was the first time the Senate has used the word "denounce" in expressing disapproval of the actions of one of its members.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., chairman of the ethics panel, had urged the Senate to "discharge a disagreeable duty" and accept the panel's resolution of denunciation against the Georgia Democrat.

As Stevenson spelled out the charges against Talmadge, the veteran Georgia Democrat sat quietly, hand on chin, near the rear of the Senate chamber, with his lawyer at his side.

After detailing the charges of financial misconduct against the senator, Stevenson urged the Senate to "characterize his conduct as reprehensible (and), denounce that conduct ...."

A deep silence fell over the chamber as the senators cast their votes. Talmadge voted "present" — as did fellow Georgian Sam Nunn and Sens. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., and George McGovern, D-S.D. Voting present indicates a senator was on hand for a recorded vote but chose not to cast it.

Immediately after the vote by his colleagues, Talmadge arose in his chair to declare his innocence. "I have never knowingly violated the laws of this nation or the rules of the Senate," he said.

But Talmadge also said he had made mistakes of negligence and that he regretted them. However, he added that the Ethics Committee had found nothing to indicate his actions were willful. Talmadge said he had "nothing to fear" from a parallel investigation by the Justice Department.

"Accept Criticism"

"I accept the committee's criticism because I believe that senators should be held to muc higher sandards than is commonplace," Talmadge said. "In the past, I have leveled heavy criticism at others. I also know how to take it."

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a close friend of Talmadge's, had told the Senate before the vote, "I don't care how many witnesses testified." He said he would not believe that Talmadge would do anything illegal or unethical.

"The people of Georgia know Herman and they know he is no crook," Hollings said.

It is possible that Talmadge could face further discipline from Democratic members of the Senate, who could strip him of seniority and of his post as chairman of the Agriculture Committee and as second ranking Democrat on the Finane Committee.

Action Unlikely

However, such action appeared unlikely.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico, the senior Republican on the ethics panel, said that based on historical precedents and constitutional principles, he believed Talmadge should be censured, not denounced.

"The appropriate disciplinary action was censure," Schmitt said.

But he said he would not seek to change the unanimous vote of the committee, which decided Talmadge should be "denounced," — a penalty considered by many to be less severe than censure.

In the first hour of debate, there were no speeches in Talmadge's defense. But Sens. John Stennis, D-Miss., a long-tie friend, an Sen. Danel Inouye, D-Hawaii, asked Stevenson a series of questions focusing on the importance of testimony by Daniel Minchew, Talmadge's former administrative aide and chief accuser.

"I did not find the witness (Minchew) credible," Stevenson conceded. But he said, "We did not rely on his testimony" in reaching the conclusion that Talmadge should be disciplined.

Minchew, who has been sentenced to serve four months in prison on charges similar to those made against Talmadge, has said he gave the senator cash from a secret bank account which included campaign contributions and false Senate expense funds.

Stevenson conceded that while committee found Talmadge had failed to report more than $10,000 in campaign contributions, its six members did not find that he personally benefitted from the illegal conversion of such funds.

Talmadge, who is running for re-election for a fifth Senate term, has steadfastly maintained his innocence of any wrongdoing.

For 16 months, the ethics panel investigated and held public hearings into Talmadge's handling of tens of thousands of dollars of Senate expense funds and campaign contributions.

The committee found that Talmadge's office made $43,435 in false expense claims, filed false campaign financing reports and failed to report more than $10,000 in campaign contributions.

It said Talmadge's conduct "is reprehensible and tends to bring the Senate into dishonor and disrepute and is hereby denounced."

STREET RALLY — An impromptu street rally Oct. 5 by Texas Tech students before the Tech-A&M football game resulted in almost $20,000 in damages and expenses for the city of Lubbock and University Avenue businessmen. Yellowhouse Canyon Residents Protest Water System, Rates than the 4,581 required to have an election called.

A separate petition on collective bargaining rights for firefighters has not been validated yet, she said.

Also at the meeting, council members heard charges and countercharges about the adequacy of a private water system serving residents of the Yellowhouse Canyon Addition in southeast Lubbock.

Owner Travis Martin told the council 90 percent of his 71 customers were satisfied with the water service, but the 35 Yellowhouse Canyon residents at the hearing said that is not the case.

Residents said they have gone without water for 15 days at a time, that Martin is inaccessible and insensitive to their problems with the water service and that water bills on not based on the actual water used by the customers.

They told of having to bathe at the homes of friends or relatives because of the lack of water and said the water pressure often is too low even to make a rotary sprinkler turn.

Martin denied the neighborhood, recently annexed to the city, had been without water for two weeks and said those complaining about the water service are a "small minority."

"I don't feel I've been hard to get along with," he said, adding the views expressed at the public hearing don't reflect those held by most of the customers.

He denied charges he cut off water service to customers even a day late on their payments, saying most who have their service terminated are behind by three or four months on paying their bills.

Martin admitted he does not keep regular hours at the water system pump house to make collections and hear complaints, but said he can't justify hiring a fulltime person to staff an office because the water system is so small.

When he purchased the system last year, Martin said the rates hadn't been increased since 1964 and he began raising rates 10percent each month.

The rates are now roughly double those charged in 1964 by the previous owners, he said.

However, he said he does estimate how much water customers with broken meters use.

One resident complained his bill increased during a month he was away from home for two weeks and an elderly man said Martin billed him $48 for water used by himself and his young grandson.

Upon questioning, Martin reduced that bill to $14, the man said.

Martin said he was "somewhat appalled at the lack of accuracy and exaggeration" in what the residents told council members.

However, the residents had stronger feelings about Martin's comments.

"He stood there and lied," Willie Stewart said. "He lied to you and he lied to us.

"This man is lying to you and we want something done about it," Stewart said.

"Not one time has he said he would improve the system. We don't want to use this man's system if he can't improve it."

The council asked City Manager Larry Cunningham and Public Utilities Director Sam Wahl to investigate the claims of the Yellowhouse Canyon residents and report back their findings as soon as possible.

If the council determines the service provided is inadequate, it can order Martin to make necessary improvements within a specified period of time.

If he does not comply, he could face criminal charges.

The council set a 10 a.m. public hearing on Oct. 25 to get citizen input on a Human Relations Commission recommendation that Quirt Avenue be renamed in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.

If the street is renamed, it will require an amendment of a city ordinance setting criteria for street names east of Avenue A.

However, council members decided the renaming of Quirt as well as other ways of honoring the slain civil rights leader should be discussed at the hearing.

Mrs. Jordan said she had received "quite a bit of input" that the street should not be renamed and said some are trying to make the council's decision a vote for or against Martin Luther King.

"We're being put in a box and I don't want to get into the box," Mrs. Jordan said, adding she wanted to hear other suggested ways to honor King.

Council members accepted an Electric Utility Board recommendation that an interconnect be constructed between Lubbock Power and Light and Southwestern Public Service.

The council instructed the city staff to find a way to finance the additional $1 million needed to complete the $1.8 million project.

Despite opposition from one Tech Terrace resident, the council accepted the recommendation of a committee of residents to install semi-permanent barricades on two streets around Tech Terrace Park at an estimated cost of $1,200 to $2,000.

Also at the meeting, council members:

— Nominated Joe Horkey and Ray Diekemper to the board of directors of the Lubbock County tax appraisal district and approved a resolution of finacial support for the district.

— Accepted construction of Fire Station No. 12 at 79th Street and Slide Road which cost more than $300,000 to build. The fire department is expected to occupy the building later this month.

— Approved changing 15th and 16th Streets between Avenue Q and University Avenue from one-way to two-way.

Proposals Made For CD Funds

the addition, which was annexed to the city this year.

"We need everything out in Yellowhouse Canyon," Stewart said.

Earlier this week, residents of the addition approached the City Council with complaints about the private water system that serves the neighborhood.

City Planning Director Jim Bertram explained that no Community Development funds are targeted to be spent in the Yellowhouse Canyon addition, but that both the City Council and the Community Development Advisory Committee are considering including the addition in the CD program and bumping another project.

D.C. Fair, director of the Housing Authority, asked for federal funds to continue security patrols in the Hub Homes and Green Fair Manor housing projects. "With the security program, Green Fair Manor is a quiet, decent and safe place to live," Fair said.

Fair also asked for funding to landscape grounds at the housing projects, to build sidewalks and to renovate irrigation systems.

During the meeting, Bertram explained that plans for use of CD funds in the Phyllis Wheatley Redevelopment Area include spending $400,000 to continue the city's efforts to buy houses in the area that are substandard and targeted to become sites for light industry.

At the Bean Elementary meeting, resident Letta Stephenson told CD coordinator Vicki Foster that children "in the immediate neighborhood need a community center." She said the nearest center was located across 34th Street, a major thoroughfare most children are not allowed to cross.

Another neighborhood representative, Mary Bragg, requested that the funds be used to continue constructing sidewalks within the area. She said elderly persons living in the area walked daily to maintain their health, but were forced to walk in the streets because no sidewalks existed.

Thursday night's meetings were the first of eight throughout the city. Other meeting dates and their locations are:

Tight Money Plagues Home Loan Industry

for new houses exists, but there is limited money for financing.

"The only solution is for the state to raise its usury limits or for the federal government to reverse its monetary policy," Arnold said. "We plan to hold our own for another 90 days and see what develops."

Mortgage money is extremely scarce and expensive across the state, says Jerry Knippa, president of the Texas Savings and Loan League in San Antonio.

Knippa said that to remedy the home loan situation, the national market rates must come down or the state's rates go up.

"Until those two rates meet, we are going to have a decline if not a stoppage of home loans," Knippa said.

Texas' usury ceiling is based on recent interest rates on 10-year U.S. Treasury bonds. The rate is 11 percent and will increase to 11.25 percent on Nov. 1, according to the Texas savings and loan commission.

Home loans will be extremely difficult to obtain in Texas under the current usury ceiling, Durward Curlee, executive director of the Texas Savings and Loan League, said.

He said home mortgages will be almost impossible to obtain in Texas by the end of the year unless something occurs to relieve the credit crunch and lower interest rates.

"There'll be some building by people who move into the state with equities to put into a house or who can work out special deals, but it's going to severely decrease home building," Curlee said.

The money shortage will come despite an increase from 11 to 11.25 percent in the maximum lenders in Texas can charge as interest on home mortgage loans, he said.

He said savings and loan institutions cannot borrow at 14.5 percent and lend the money to home buyers at a lower rate.

Steps taken by the Federal Reserve Board to reduce the amount of money in circulation by requiring banks to hold more money in reserve will have almost as serious an impact on lending as the skyrocketing interest rates, Curlee said.

"What they've been doing to this point is raising the cost of money. What they did last weekend, they not only raised the price of money but they took very strong action to reduce the amount of money available."

Curlee said he expects the mortgage situation to be worse than occurred during the 1973-74 recession.

"I think mortgage money is going to be very scarce in the next year, and it hasn't been plentiful in the last year," he said.

"The interest rate problem pretty well cuts us out of anything but making loans from deposits that we get. It prohibits us from borrowing from the Federal Home Loan Bank or commercial banks."

Curlee said the savings and loan industry will decide by December whether to ask Gov. Bill Clements to include the interest rate ceiling in the agenda for a special legislative session in 1980.

Carter Vows Jobs For Construction

ence's concerns, he said: "I reject the advice of those who think the only way to cure inflation is to throw millions of people out of work."

Carter told the union leaders that he was responsible for cutting unemployment among construction workers by 40 percent and said without elaboration, "I intend to preserve those construction jobs and get some more, in spite of some economic obstacles."

However, Jay Janis, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates federally chartered savings and loan associations, had said Wednesday that new housing construction could drop by as much as 25 percent in 1980.

And Vondal S. Gravlee, president of the National Association of Home Builders, said last weekend's decision by the Federal Reserve Board to tighten credit "is disastrous for potential home buyers and small builders."

Landon Butler, the deputy White House chief of staff who traveled with Carter to San Diego, was unable to offer any specifics of Carter's plan to sustain credit for construction.

Carter also pledged to oppose legislation he considers to be anti-labor "and to support positive labor legislation, such as common situs picketing and labor law reform."

Common situs picketing proposals would allow a single union striking against one subcontractor to picket an entire construction site in an effort to close it down.

Police Seek End Of Pep Rally Folly

students were arrested for minor incidents during the Oct. 5th street rally.

In his statement released Thursday, the Texas Tech president cautioned Tech students against spirited demonstrations on city streets and emphasized that disruptive behavior was not condoned by the university.

Although pep rallies have been a routine part of campus life at Texas Tech, many believe the impromptu street gatherings began last October before the Texas Tech-University of Texas football game. A traffic signal at the corner of University Avenue and Broadway fell victim to that group of late night cheerleaders.

An over abundance of school spirit landed 25 Texas Tech students in jail 24 years ago. Newspaper accounts indicate the students were gathering wood for a pre-game homecoming pep rally and were arrested for tearing down part of a fence at a 23rd Street residence.

Connally Urges Israeli Pullout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel should withdraw from former Arab lands and Palestinians should be allowed to select their own form of government, Republican presidential candidate John Connally said Thursday.

In a speech to the Washington Press Club, Connally included those actions as part of a nine-point proposal he said should provide the framework "for direct negotiations between the Israeli and Arab parties" leading to a Mideast peace settlement.

The former Texas governor said that any Palestinian leader who is "willing to put aside violence" should be welcome at the peace table.

Connally also called for a stepped-up U.S. military presence in the Middle East as part of the peace process, "including major Air Force components," perhaps at former Israeli airfields in the Sinai.

Davis Prosecution Cites '76 Rampage

FORT WORTH (AP) — Invading the fringes of forbidden territory, state attorneys touched obliquely Thursday on the 1976 shooting spree at Cullen Davis' Fort Worth mansion.

Chief prosecutor Jack Strickland repeatedly invoked the names of the wounded and unharmed survivors of the bloody rampage and others involved in the subsequent trial.

He did so, apparently, to show motive for mass murder.

Davis, acquitted of a murder charge stemming from that episode, is on trial now accused of plotting the contract killing of a judge who testified against him at the Amarillo proceedings.

"Do you know a person named Beverly Bass?" Strickland asked the 46-year-old defendant during his second day of cross-examination.

"...Do you know Gus Gavrel Jr?...Do you know a person named Tom Cave?"

Davis said he knew all three.

Miss Bass eluded the mansion gunman, Gavrel was a wounded survivor and Cave was the state district judge who ordered Davis jailed without bond after the shootings.

Miss Bass and Gavrel and the defendant's ex-wife, Priscilla, testified at the murder trial that Davis was the bewigged gunman in black.

Strickland, barred by judicial order from mentioning the shootings, brought out that the trio was included on the defendant's alleged "hit list," as was Judge Cave.

"Did you ever before tell anyone that Beverly Bass was the only witness the jury believed when she gave testimony against you prior to Aug. 20, 1978?" Strickland asked.

"I certainly didn't," Davis replied.

The state's key witness, David McCrory, quoted Davis as making such a statement during a series of summertime 1978 discussions that ended Aug. 20 with Davis' arrest.

He is accused of plotting the contract killing of 15 persons, but is charged specifically only with soliciting the murder of his then-divorce Judge Joe Eidson.

Eidson was the leadoff witness for the state in both the Amarillo murder trial and the current murder-for-hire proceedings.

Under questioning by Strickland, Davis admitted that he uttered a disparaging remark about Fort Worth judges after his Amarillo acquittal, but insisted he harbored no "ill feelings."

He conceded that he did expect Miss Bass and Gavrel to testify against him in pending civil suits, one of which is a $13 million action filed by Gavrel, 24.

The young man was crippled by the mansion gunman.

"We have no relationship whatsoever," Davis volunteered, adding that he had not spoken to Bill since the split in 1973.

McCrory contended that Bill Davis was one of the names on the defendant's enemy list.

At one point, Strickland asked Davis if he had used a string of obscenities to describe Judge Cave. Davis admitted that he had, but had done so jokingly to an Associated Press reporter in Amarillo.

"That is Judge Tom Cave, against whom you have no animosity?" Strickland asked sarcastically.

"That's correct," Davis replied.

"Apparently not," snapped Strickland.

Former Union Boss Sentenced Again On Murder Conviction

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Vainly protesting his innocence, former United Mine Workers boss W.A. "Tony" Boyle was sentenced Thursday for a second time to life imprisonment for hiring killers to assassinate a union rival and his family.

"I am innocent of the crimes of which I have been convicted and I want everyone to know that," Boyle insisted in a seven-page typewritten statement read in court, claiming he had remained silent for too long.

The 78-year-old Boyle, once a frequent White House guest as head of the 400,000-member union, was twice convicted of arranging the murders of Joseph "Jock" Yablonski, and Yablonski's wife and daughter. They were killed Dec. 31, 1969, by three assassins as they slept in their Clarksville home in the heart of the soft coal fields in western Pennsylvania.

Yablonski failed in a bitter fight to topple Boyle from the union presidency only two months before he was killed. The state claimed the assassination contract was given to prevent any legal challenge to the election result.

The first verdict was set aside by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court in 1977, and Boyle was found guilty a second time 20 months ago.

Common Pleas Court Judge Francis Catania, who presided at both trials, imposed the same sentence as the first time — three consecutive life terms and $300 in fines — and gave Boyle 30 days to file a new appeal.

"I intend to do that," Boyle told the judge, as soon as he gets a new lawyer appointed by the court.

Boyle, wearing the same blue striped suit he sported at his second trial although his gray hair was now tinted a light brown, read his statement slowly but in a firm voice as a scowling judge followed the text word for word.

"In handling my case from the beginning, Judge Catania had formed an opinion about this case and had expressed the same upon my first conviction," Boyle said.

He also alleged the judge refused to withdraw "and repeated the same errors in the second trial," and denied Boyle a chance to present a total defense.

Boyle has been in custody in the prison ward of the nearby Eastern State Correctional Institution since his second conviction when $250,000 bail was revoked. He suffers from a heart ailment and also has stomach problems as a result of a drug overdose in a 1973 suicide attempt in his Washington, D.C., home before he was arrested on the murder charges.

Boyle's lawyer, A. Charles Peruto, who had won reversal of the first verdict, withdrew as counsel. He told Catania he hadn't been paid for his recent legal work.

Boyle said he is without funds and the judge said he would appoint a lawyer to represent him.

Neither Boyle's wife, Ethel, reported in poor health, nor his daughter, Antoinette, a Montana lawyer, was in the courtroom fo the sentencing. They had attended the trials, which were moved here on a change of venue from Washington County.

AP Head To Speak At DFW Banquet

DALLAS (AP) — Associated Press President and General Manager Keith Fuller will address this year's Dallas-Fort Worth journalism awards banquet Nov. 30, press club officials announced Wednesday.

Fuller was a news reporter in Dallas before he joined The AP in 1946. He later was chief of the Little Rock, Ark., bureau when it won the Pulitzer Prize for reporting during racial strife there.

The awards banquet was expanded this year to include journalists in the Fort Worth area for the first time. Gov. Bill Clements has accepted an invitation to attend.

Winners in each of 24 categories will receive "Katy" statuettes and cash awards at the banquet, the Annual Communications Award Dinner for the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex. Entry blanks have been mailed to members of the working press in the expanded 11-county contest area.

Last year more thaan 400 entries were submitted.

Jail Construction Costs Soar

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Faced with the new Lubbock County Jail being at or near capacity when it is opened early next year, a stunned county commissioners court Thursday learned the cost of completing a third wing of the jail has risen by 50 percent in the last 16 months.

The third wing is being left unfinished and county engineer Arnold Maeker told the commissioners the cost is increasing at 1 to 1½ percent per month because of inflation.

Maeker went back to the contractors working on the $3.5 million project after Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard told commissioners recently that jail population in September averaged 225 inmates per day.

The contractors reported that the third wing, which would have cost $658,569 more under contract options when bids were let in July 1978, would cost $990,000 more now if the contract additions were made this month.

With the two wings now being finished, the jail capacity will be 245. The third wing would increase the capacity to 330.

Blanchard reported earlier this week that the hard-line policies of the criminal district attorney's office have played a role in the jail population increase, boosting the daily occupancy by some 100 inmates since mid-1978.

The commissioners discussed re-bidding for third wing construction, but Maeker said that could create a maintenance problem if a different contractor won the bid and used different jail cells and related equipment.

"According to the prices we got in here today," said Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton, "We're not going to do anything without taking bids."

The court discussed the issue for about an hour but did not make a decision on whether to build the third wing soon or to re-bid. It asked Blanchard to make a detailed study of the jail population and to report back with whatever projections he might be able to make.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw indicated displeasure with Roanoke Iron & Bridge Co. of Roanoke, Va., in particular for telling Maeker that the price for detention equipment would be $587,000 now instead of the $387,000 offered 16 months ago.

Asked about having different types of detention equipment, Maeker had said, "That would be a nuisance, in my estimation. I think having things uniform would be to your advantage over the years."

"I think Roanoke knows that," Shaw said.

Maeker replied that the company "has been in business since the turn of the century" and described it as "very fair, very open and very cooperative" in his experience.

"I feel like they are trying to give the benefit of their best thinking without getting themselves into a situation they couldn't live with," the engineer said.

He recommended, however, that the court advertise for bids on third wing construction if it is decided to build it now.

Texas Tech Beginning Fund Raising Campaign

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal

The wheels are in motion for Texas Tech University to gear up for a fund-raising campaign and interim president Dr. Lawrence Graves is drumming up support by speaking engagements both on and off campus.

His message has been delivered to three groups in two days this week, plus other speeches earlier this fall. Wednesday he addressed a Rotary Club meeting and the Tech Faculty Senate. Thursday he spoke to the Tech chapter of American Association of University Professors, of which he is a past president.

All groups received the same message. "The university is in basically sound condition," Graves said, but added that strong private financial support will be needed in the coming years to provide items not covered by state legislative appropriations.

One of the needs of the university, Graves said, is to increase faculty salaries, which have not kept pace with inflation.

Fund raising could provide money for endowments and scholarships, he said, and that would free the state-appropriated salaries of those faculty members who were named to the endowed chair positions.

"That would spring the state money loose for (other) faculty salaries, faculty travel and equipment," he said.

Graves told the AAUP that an endowed chair of $500,000 to $600,000 would provide interest to pay a $40,000 faculty salary.

The fund-raising campaign, which probably will be launched in November, involves a university-wide effort, solicitation of exes by individual colleges and departments, and the Ex-Students Association.

Graves said the last Tech president, Dr. Cecil Mackey, "worked to improve relations with the Ex-Students Association," because he said in years past there "had been a gap between the university and exes."

Another step in gearing up for the campaign, which was not mentioned by Graves, was a policy adopted by the Tech board of regents last week.

The policy, regarding coordination of development of private sector support, was needed because Tech "needs an orderly, systematic procedure to coordinate efforts," Dr. Clyde Kelsey, vice president for development and university relations, told the board.

A consultant from the University of Michigan was used, Graves said, for advice in planning Tech's first major fund-raising campaign. A computer program was purchased from Iowa State University for alumni development in record keeping.

Graves also told the AAUP, "The (Tech) Foundation board met last week to plan major donations, perhaps for endowments."

The interim president said, "It's hard to interest off-campus people in long-range planning" when Tech is between presidents, but he added that fund-raising is something that cannot wait. "I'm determined to start it this year," he said.

Castro Spends First New York Day In Seclusion

By ARTHUR EVERETT

NEW YORK (AP) — Fidel Castro, shielded by 2,000 police and dozens of his own guards, spent his first day in New York in 19 years apparently holed up in the Cuban mission in a soot-begrimed, 13-story red brick building preparing his speech to the United Nations.

FIDEL CASTRO

The Cuban president, who is to address the General Assembly late this morning, was clad in familiar green fatigues and had a cigar atilt in his mouth as he arrived in the dead of night Thursday on a jet flight from Havana.

He was whisked into seclusion at the building at 38th Street and Lexington Avenue, seven blocks from the United Nations.

Noting that it was costing the city tens of thousands of dollars to play host to him, Castro gleefully remarked during his flight here:

"I am not planning to spend a single penny."

Castro, talking to American freelance journalist Jon Alpert aboard the Russian-made jet, also said that the possibility of meeting with U.S. officials while in New York "depends on the U.S. officials...I have nothing against that." The interview was aired on NBC's "Today" program.

A State Department spokesman, who declined to be identified, said there were no plans for such a meeting.

Castro also chided the United States for its response to the disclosure that a Soviet combat brigade is stationed in Cuba. Of America's decision to step up its presence in the Caribbean, he said "I believe that all that is a comedy."

Some 2,000 New York City police officers, many helmeted and wearing bulletproof vests, joined Secret Service agents and security guards from Havana in throwing a protective ring around Castro's local headquarters, where he passed his first day without showing himself.

It was far below the size of the 11,500-member police detail that spread out to guard Pope John Paul II last week. But it was unsurpassed for the concentrated protection it afforded the bearded Cuban dictator.

Rumors of assassination threats were rife. But Elsa Ybarra, an organizer for Alpha 66, one of several anti-Communist groups dedicated to Castro's overthrow, called them untrue.

"We don't want any violence," she declared.

The woman said she fought with Castro in the mountains of Cuba during his rise to power in the late 1950s, leaving when she learned he was a Communist.

With the coming of dawn, on a parapet near the top of the mission building, Cuban guards could be seen shivering in the temperatures in the 40s. One of them displayed a high-powered rifle briefly before returning it to a suitcase.

Shortly before noon, a half-dozen vehicles, including a black limousine in the center of the line, swept east from the mission in the direction of U.N. headquarters. Officials at the U.N. later said Castro was not in the caravan.

Pro-and anti-Castro demonstrators were cleared from a four-block area around the Cuban mission. They were kept separated on the fringe of the so-called "frozen zone."

Residents in the area around the mission building had to be checked on a master police list before they could enter the zone. Buinessmen within the police cordon said they expected losses running into the thousands.

Just prior to Castro's arrival at the mission about 2 a.m., about 80 Cuban security men from Havana marched three abreast for a block down Lexington Avenue. Two of them suddenly veered into a crowd of about 50 anti-Castro demonstrators and a scuffle broke out.

One of the guards pulled a gun, and police immediately moved in on him, putting a nightstick to his neck and ordering him to drop the weapon. The other guard also was grabbed by police. Both were released after they were identified by a Cuban security colleague.

It was Castro's first visit to New York since 1960, some 20 months after he took power in Cuba. His 4½-hour speech then still is a record for the General Assembly.

This time, he was scheduled to speak 75 minutes to the 152-nation assembly, beginning 11:30 a.m. today.

Prior to the address, Castro was to meet with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and Assembly President Salim A. Salim.

After the speech, a 1:15 p.m. lunch was planned with Castro scheduled to leave the headquarters at 3 p.m.

The United Nations will be closed to the public while the Cuban president is there.

U.S. Officials Cool To Castro Parley

NEW YORK (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro has signaled willingness to talk with American officials during his visit to New York, but the United States apparently has no plans for such a meeting.

During an interview aboard his plane, Castro told American freelance journalist Jon Alpert that such a meeting "depends on the U.S. officials. ... I have nothing against that."

The interview was aired on the NBC "Today" program.

American officials have had virtually no comment about Castro's visit. And a State Department spokesman, who declined to be identified, said there were no plans for such a meeting.

During the interview, Castro also chided the United States for its response to the disclosure that a Soviet combat brigade is stationed in Cuba and said he was unconcerned about America's decision to step up its presence in the Caribbean.

"I believe that all that is a comedy," Castro said.

Last week, President Carter announced that the United States was increasing its surveillance of Cuba and establishing a Caribbean task force in Key West. The government also has announced that 1,500 Marines will take part in a landing exercise soon at Guantanamo U.S. naval base in Cuba.

"It seems to me very interesting that they are spending money, that they are ruining the North American taxpayers and are not resolving a single problem," Castro said. "We are at ease. We like the movement of troops because it keeps us alert, stimulates our preparations and revives our fighting spirit. For that we are grateful."

"I'm not worried about the maneuvers," he said. "They have been doing maneuvers for 20 years, 20 years threatening Cuba, and we have never lost our dream. I am planning to continue sleeping well."

Castro also said world peace would be endangered if the United States ever took military action against Cuba.

"Anything dangerous that Carter carries out against Cuba is dangerous for world peace and is also dangerous for Carter and the United States."

"Is that a threat?" he was asked.

"A threat?" Castro asked. "I'm not threatening anybody. Nor will I ever threaten anybody. I am simply saying that any action against us of a military nature would go against world peace. That's all."

The Cuban leader also reminisced about his honeymoon visit of three or four weeks in New York 30 years ago.

"At the time the dollar was worth something. And with very few dollars, one could pay for rent, one could buy in the stores and one could cook ... so it was not a bad time. It was all right. I did not have a lot of money. But life was not very expensive then."

Even so, Castro, who is staying at the Cuban mission to the United Nations, joked that his trip here now will be even less expensive than the last one.

"I am not planning to spend a single penny," he said.

If he entertains at dinner, he added, he will serve lobsters he caught himself.

Half-Staffed Flag Mourns Castro Visit

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — Mayor Henry A. Povinelli ordered the United States flag flown at half-staff at all city buildings Thursday to mark Cuban President Fidel Castro's arrival in New York City.

Povinelli, a Republican running for re-election, said he ordered the flags into a position of mourning as a comment on the recognition conferred on Castro by the large security force guarding him.

Castro was scheduled to address the United Nations on Friday.

Povinelli also lowered flags on Good Friday in 1978 in observance of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ.

In a 1951 game, manager Paul Richards of the Chicago White Sox moved his pitcher, Harry Dorish, to third base for one play and then back to the mound, where Dorish became the winning pitcher.

Museum To Honor Charter Member, Past Curator

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"A history of the West Texas Museum is the history of a man who has devoted his talents untiringly to the development of a dream...a dream which is now a reality, and of which we on the South Plains are very proud."

It was October 1966, and the West Texas Museum Association was honoring Dr. William Curry Holden, recently retired after 36 years as museum curator and director.

The facility which Holden, who signed the WTMA charter, had helped build was bulging at the seams and plans for a new museum were underway.

Tuesday, the association, celebrating its 50th anniversary at 7 p.m. in Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, again will honor Holden — for his efforts toward the new multi-million dollar complex, The Museum of Texas Tech University, at Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue.

The old structure on Texas Tech's Memorial Circle was named Holden Hall in honor of the man lauded as "director and creator of the musem" by Tech regents in a resolution noting his "more than 30 years of dedicated service to Tech." A legislative resolution broadened the field by mentioning the "great distinction" with which he and Mrs. Holden "have served the City of Lubbock and the State of Texas."

Holden credits three men with the museum's giant progress steps — A.B. Davis, Lubbock Chamber of Commerce manager, and two Tech presidents, Dr. Clifford B. Jones and Dr. Grover E. Murray.

Davis led a 1935 "march on Austin" by 67 West Texas counties to secure a share of Texas centennial celebration funds which put the museum in a "half-dugout" basement.

Jones secured use of Tech funds amassed during World War II through "astute financial dealings of Dr. W. A. Wyburn "for the museum building fund.

When the two floors were added to the basement, Jones dedicated the museum "to the enjoyment, enlightenment and culture of the people of West Texas...a place to broaden the horizon, culturally, of the Southwest."

Murray entered the picture with his plans for an International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) which boosted to new building. He also came up with the outdoor concept of the museum's Ranching Heritage Center to show how ranchers adapted to arid land. The Holdens received the Texas Historical Commission's highest honor for their part in bringing the ranch museum into being.

Holden got into the museum business by accident, as an extra responsibility while professor of history at McMurry College.

College students, chaffing at rules covering everything but chicken stealing, were preying on the Abilene countryside for supplies for weekend chicken roasts.

Assigned to stop the practice, Holden set them to scouring the area for materials to convert an old building to a museum, then sent them out to find donations.

The resulting museum, produced at a cash outlay of $1.95 for three sacks of cement, opened to publicity reaching Lubbock where Holden was to become history professor.

When Lubbock efforts to raise funds to get the museum out of the basement failed, Holden reverted to his McMurry scavenging idea, launching a "Give A Brick" campaign that raised a mountain of bricks and $50,000 (at $12 for 1,000 face bricks) where two years before all-out efforts had failed to bring in the $12,000 it would have cost for the Works Project Administration to complete the museum.

Not until a young legislator named Preston Smith got the museum on the budget were there any funds for museum salaries which still did not include Holden or his wife, Frances, lauded in the 1936 honor as having "labored by his side without receiving compensation...for her influence and efforts which launched many of the activities of the museum."

Holden's academic duties at Tech enriched the museum with facts and artifacts with each added responsibility — archaeological excavations in New Mexico, anthropological studies among the fierce Yaqui in Mexico and research into Lubbock Lake Site.

Today, when time can be found from writing that stacked up over the years, Holden ponders the museum future, the future for which he, at Tech regents' request, researched a book yet unpublished — "Water and Man," which was to set the theme of the new museum. Land and energy have been added to the manuscript recently in a rebirth of interest in the water and arid land theme.

LESSONS AT THE MUSEUM — More than 27,000 South Plains school children tour The Museum of Texas Tech University each year for special programs coordinated with classroom study. They learn about how pioneers settled the plains, they turn into Indians with painted faces, and they journey to the stars in the Moody Planetarium, among other adventures. At left, a group heads for its museum lesson while, at right, museum programs coordinator Judy Hunter waits with a sign to direct the children. (Staff Photos by Gerry Burton)

Blaze Destroys Mobile Home

A fire which destroyed Tommy Stalcup's mobile home Wednesday morning, also sent his and bride-to-be Janis Lindsey's first home up in smoke.

The mobile home, which was located at the intersection of Farm Road 1729 and East 4th Street, burned to the ground at about 9:45 a.m. Stalcup had left for work just 15 minutes earlier, said his sister Mary Perry.

No one was hurt in the blaze, which reportedly was caused by an electrical short. However, the couple lost all their wedding gifts, furniture and clothes.

The two still plan to be married Saturday, Mrs. Perry said — "they decided they could suffer together just as well as apart."

A fire fund has been established at American State Bank. In addition, donations of clothing and miscellaneous items can be made by calling Mary Perry at 795-2748.

Fugitive Sought In City Murder Case

Although authorities are continuing their search for Joseph Michael DePauw, a 72nd District Court Grand Jury Thursday formally indicted DePauw on a charge of murder in connection with last week's death of a Lubbock businessman.

The 28-year-old DePauw was charged with murder earlier this week and police are seeking him for questioning in the death of Oland Kenneth Anderson.

Anderson, 63, was found lying in a pool of blood at his 2402 Ave. J business Friday morning. An autopsy indicated he died from a crushed skull caused from a blow with a heavy, blunt object.

Investigators, who have no address for DePauw, officially charged him Monday in the hope the publicity would prompt the public to aid in determining his whereabouts.

The indictment returned against DePauw was one of two murder chargesincluded in the 99 true bills recorded this morning.

Elias Rangel Jr., of 7504 Ave. H, Space 88, was indicted for murder in the July 15 shooting death of Jesse B. Ramirez.

An Abernathy man was charged with murder last week in connection with the Aug. 19 shooting death of Ralph B. Perez.

However, the grand jury returned an indictment against Joe Angel Garcia, 50, on the lesser charge of involuntary manslaughter. Authorities said Garcia, a security guard at El Tropical Club where Perez was fatally wounded, apparently shot the Littlefield man when he returned gunfire at a car parked outside the club.

Glen Alan Page, 31, of 4002 32nd St., was indicted on two charges this morning, attempted capital murder and aggravated assault.

The Vietnam War veteran, who remains under psychiatric observation at Methodist Hospital, was arrested Oct. 3 after allegedly threatening persons at a 22nd Street medical complex and involving a city police officer in an armed stand-off outside the building.

Two Lubbock men were indicted Thursday on aggravated robbery charges in connection with a Sept. 8 incident east of Lubbock.

Cornell Drones, 23, of 1812 Brown St. and Birdell Dunn, 22, of 2724 E. 10th St. are accused of robbing 19-year old Rene Ledesma of about $90 and then shooting the New Deal man in the back with a small-caliber pistol.

Five city women and a Lubbock County woman were indicted for alleged separate schemes to defraud the Texas Department of Human Resources out of $4,391 in Welfare payments since August 1977.

Those indicted include; Paula Castilleja, 34 of Wolfforth; Lillie Mae Foster, 41, of 1112-B 44th St.; Mercedes Chapa, 42, of 1925 E. Brown St.; Ann Worley, 30, of 2212 5th St., No. 52; Cecilia Harmon, 35, of 1913 Baylor St.; and Margaret Ann Johnson, 22, of 2304 5th St., No. 204.

A Lubbock couple accused of trying to sell a submachine gun Sept. 26, were indicted on charges of carrying a prohibited weapon. Named in those indictments were Hector Lee Castro, 19, of 4614 43rd St. and Vikky Lynn Woodruff, 22, of Rt. 10, Box 654, Lubbock.

Four Lubbock men were indicted for delivery of controlled substance. Accused of distributing methamphetamines in Lubbock are Kenneth G. Wooten, 51, of 2111 8th St.; William L. Warfel, 25, address unavailable; Jessie James Johnson, 27, address unavailable; and Teddy Joe McDonald, 23, address unavailable.

Two other men also were charged in connection with the same alleged drug distribution ring, but the grand jury no-billed, or refused to indict, Rickie Von Speigel, 22, and passed for further consideration the alleged involvement of Forest Philips, 31, of 2102 8th St.

Other persons no-billed by the panel were James L. Burns, charged with theft, and Laura Bell Young, 18, of 2404 E. 5th St., also accused of theft.

The cases of Billy Jack Limbaugh, 32, of Rt. 9, Box 111, accused of aggravated assault and the burglary charge against Timothy Johnson, 19, of 3305 E. Baylor St., also were passed for future consideration.

AGGRAVATED RAPE: Ricky Farrell Hill, 24, 2602 82nd St., No. 47; Sherman Ray Morrison, 25, Santa Maria Apartments, West 19th Street and War Road, No. 2.

INDECENCY WITH A CHILD: Jimmy Christopher Hayes, 18, address unavailable.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter was married recently in a beautiful church ceremony. A great deal of planning, work and money went into the affair.

Would you believe I received more than a dozen telephone calls from friends and relatives who were "very disappointed" that the couple did not kiss at the altar after the minister said, "I now pronounce you man and wife"? They felt as if they had been cheated out of something.

It so happens that our daughter and her fiance talked it over and decided they did not want to kiss publicly. It was as simple as that. Now I am hearing (in rather shrill tones) that the nuptial kiss is "traditional," and it was a letdown not to witness the intimate expression of mutual devotion.

What do you think about these comments, Ann? — Enjoy You In Lincoln, Neb.

Dear Lincoln: The bride and groom have the right to decide whether or not they want to kiss at the altar.

My personal opinion is that the wedding kiss is a warm and loving gesture that helps break the tension created by nervousness. Guests should not be critical, however, if the newlyweds decide against it.

Dear Ann Landers: Your column seems to be getting into supermarket behavior of late, so I would like to say a few words to your millions of readers, most of whom do some marketing at least twice a week.

I have three suggestions:

(1) Please don't chew out the cashier about the price of milk, lettuce, meat, etc. She doesn't have a darn thing to do with it. In fact, she is caught in the inflation crunch the same as you.

(2) Don't fill up your basket with more merchandise than you can pay for. It's a terrible inconvenience to take items off the bill once it has been rung up, and putting the items back takes time — it is embarrassing too.

(3) Express lane signs that say "EIGHT ITEMS OR LESS" mean just that. Ten chickens and six packages of ground round add up to 16 items. Count 'em! — Effingham Gripe

Dear Effie: Thanks for the short course. Cashiers, managers and customers alike will bless you.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I both work full-time jobs, although I take summers off. We have three children in school.

We have always lived within our means, but it's getting harder and harder to make ends meet. The problem is entertaining. We are planning a barbecue around Halloween. I say the guests should be asked to bring their own booze and meat. We will provide the salad, rolls and sweet corn, but the rest of the items are just too darned expensive.

My husband says it would be in poor taste. I would have agreed with him before food prices started to go crazy, but times have changed. Please give us your opinion, Ann. — Just Getting By In Detroit

Dear Getting By: Some people have "BYOB" parties, which means "bring your own bottle." This I can understand. But to ask guests to bring their own meat to a barbecue is tacky, Buttercup. I vote with your husband.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Hey, Mom. You with the neglected roots who has to take a glycerine pill before you go into your son's bedroom...who has spent a lifetime of shouting, "We'll see," and wonders if a convent will take a woman who considers Sara Lee a god.

I want you to imagine for a moment what it is like to be a child. It might help.

Suppose you were so insecure about yourself that you had to call your neighbor each morning to find out if she's wearing a skirt or jeans that day.

Suppose you thought you'd flatter your child by imitating his spitting, using slang and belching openly and he said to you, "That's disgusting."

Suppose your children never caught you "being good."

Suppose you had to eat a "good breakfast" while your children dieted and when you said you weren't hungry they said, "That's different."

Suppose your children forbade you to touch their games, bedroom, toiletries, clothes, or hair dryers, but when they borrowed your things told you, "If you don't share, you're selfish."

Suppose the child you loved asked you for the truth and when you told her the truth she said you were lying and believed a woman she had never seen before and whose name she couldn't pronounce.

Suppose you told your child something very personal in strict confidence and later overheard her telling it to her girlfriend on the phone.

Suppose your child dragged you away from your favorite TV show to visit a friend and told you and the friend's mother to go off and learn to know each other until it was time to go home.

Suppose a child named you "Larkspur" or "Unplanned." Would you be forgiving?

Suppose you lived in fear because an English teacher told you you'd never amount to anything unless you could diagram a sentence.

Suppose someone said, "You're all grown up, aren't you?" and you still didn't know what you wanted to be.

But worse...suppose everyone told you these are the best days of your life.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I work in a factory, and the Department of Agriculture passed out a little leaflet on "Safe Brown Bag Lunches."

I thought you might like to share this hint with our friends.

Question: What kinds of meat and poultry products are best for "brown bag" lunches?

Answer: Canned meat and poultry products, opened and eaten immediately, are a good bet (if the can is sealed and not bulged or dented).

Dry meats or fully cooked products, like bologna and franks, also keep well.

Frozen chicken or turkey is good, too.

Virtually any meat or poultry product can be used — if it's cooked and handled properly. — Alice Grant

Very good! But remember to practice good sanitation and personal hygiene habits. Be sure to wash your hands before you eat your lunch.

Also when you get home be sure to wash your vacuum bottles and rinse in boiling water.

In short, keep hot foods hot, cold foods cold, and everything clean. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

My young son asked me what a valet was.

I explained to him that some men could afford a helper who would keep their clothing in order, help them get dressed and undressed, draw their bath water and such.

He thought for a moment and then replied: "That sounds just like a mother to me." — Sonia Martin

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a big pumpkin I would like to cook and peel.

I saw in the paper some time ago about putting it in the oven.

Would you please repeat that article? Please, all the details. — Mrs. C.T.

Since it is getting pretty close to "that time of the year" for pumpkins — we thought this worth repeating.

I slice a portion off the top of the pumpkin and save this "lid." Then remove the seeds.

Put the whole pumpkin in a pan, place the lid back on and pour a cup or two of water in the pan.

Bake in 350-degree oven for an hour, or hour and a half, depending on the size of the pumpkin.

Remove from oven and just peel off the skin or cut the pumpkin in half and scrape out the inside.

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Rattles in the trunk of your car?

I keep at least two flannel-backed old tablecloths in the trunk. First to wrap tools, and secondly to spread out when needed at repair sites, or to sit on at picnics or ball games.

In addition, when carrying clothes in the trunk these old tablecloths serve as a moisture and dust barrier.

DEAR HELOISE:

If you write to someone and know that it will be a long, long time before you hear from them, enclose a self-addressed postcard.

Works everytime for me.

Sometimes I even ask a question on the card with two squares after it, yes in one and no in the other.

You'd be surprised how many questions I get answered that way. — Mrs. W. Graham

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL G. DONOHUE

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 15 and have a stomach that makes me look like I am about three or four months pregnant. It really bugs me! I do about 50 to 100 sit-ups every night, but this doesn't seem to help. The rest of my figure is OK as far as I'm concerned. I don't know if it could be from eating all the time. Everytime I get on the scale it reads 104 and I'm sure it's not broken or off. I would really appreciate any advice to help me get rid of this embarrassing stomach. — Ms. C.B.

The usual reason for a person your age to have middle-age spread is that the abdominal muscles are weak or the lower back sways too far forward.

If you don't have any serious spinal problem, you can improve with exercises. Sit-ups are good ones. You in particular should make sure your knees are bent when doing sit-ups. If you keep your legs out straight in front of you you might worsen the sway of the back and make your abdomen protrude further.

The "side" muscles of the abdominal wall are not strengthened by sit-ups. To exercise these muscles stand straight with your hips and knees "locked." Twist as far to the right as possible, return to the center, then twist as far to the left as possible. Repeat as many times as you can. Increase the number every third to fifth day. Another exercise is to blow all the air out of your lungs, then draw in your stomach without inhaling air. Hold that position for about five seconds. You might be able to work the twisting exercise into a disco routine.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 52 and in good health. About every three to five years I have a swollen jaw. It only lasts two or three days. Sweets and pickles really hurt when I'm like this. Am I having mumps? — Mrs. D.W.

Not mumps. They don't recur like that. You probably have a partial block to one of your salivary glands. When you eat something that causes excess saliva to form — like pickles — the saliva just can't get out. The gland swells and becomes painful.

If your mouth is dry all the time, certain illnesses (arthritis, for example) can be considered. An ear-nose-throat doctor can evaluate the swelling accurately.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I was told three years ago that I had a small calcium spot on my left lung. When the doctor told me this I was really frightened and I guess I still am to a certain extent. Just hearing a comment from another physician on this will help ease my tension. I go in for x-rays every three to six months and they tell me there has been no change in the spot. — P.

I think you can stop worrying. A spot on the lung that is calcified (calcium deposited) and that has not changed in size in three years is quite unlikely to be cancerous. In fact the chances are next to impossible. It probably indicates some old infection.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband is 44. I'm 43. We've been married 26 years. Ten years ago the doctor put him on Zyloprim for a slight case of gout. He takes it twice a day. He has been impotent for the last three years and partially so for a few years before that. Is there the remotest chance that the medicine could have a bearing on this? He refuses to talk to the doctor about this. He's not on any other kind of medicine. — Mrs. J.M.

Loss of potency is not listed as a side effect of Zyloprim (allopurinol). If he won't talk to his doctor about this, why don't you?

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: I noted that recently a "Mrs. C.K." complained about calcaneal bursitis in her heel. I had the same problem and my doctor suggested I buy a "broad jumper's heel" from a sporting goods store. This is made to fit into the shoe and cushion the shock when the athlete lands heels first in the pit. It is inexpensive (about $2) and does a marvelous job of relieving pressure from the bursitis.

I have recommended it to several nurses who have to stand long hours in the operating room and they tell me it works better than paddings they've tried. If someone can benefit from this I am happy to pass the suggestion along to you. — Mr. J.D.G.

Sounds like sensible advice to me. Maybe you'd like to help answer a few other questions.

The only real excuse for South's six-spade bid was that Columbus had taken a chance and achieved success on October 12, 1492.

When the dummy hit the table, South saw that he would need a lot of luck to make his slam. There was a sure club loser and potential losers in trumps and diamonds. After taking the club queen, he had to attack trumps. He led a small trump to dummy's ace (to see if a singleton queen might drop). Back to his hand with a heart followed by a successful trump fineesse. Then he drew the last trump and was ready to go ahead.

At first glance it looks as if South needed a diamond finesse, but as Le Dentu points out in "Bridge Analysis", South found a way to avoid taking it.

He came to his hand with a club and noted happily that both opponents followed. Then he cashed his last high heart to discard a diamond from dummy and played his last club.

West had to win the trick and did the best he could by leading a heart. South ruffed in dummy and discarded one diamond on that trick and two more diamonds on dummy's good clubs.

The combination of luck and skill had made up for the overbid.

Grandmother's Albums Provide Link To Past

By SANDY COLTON
Associated Press Writer

I've just received in the mail a magnificent idea from a 71-year-young lady in North Dakota.

Mrs. Cornelia Fatland Widmer, of Oakes, N.D., had read in the Fargo Forum one of my earlier columns on family photo albums. Her letter goes that column one better. I'd like to pass her suggestion along to you.

"I have 22 grandchildren," Cornelia wrote, "and decided to make an historical family album for each one.

"So far I've made seven albums, and they have been received with great appreciation and enthusiasm.

She starts each album with an original poem dedicated to the grandchild for whom the album is intended, and a picture of herself as a child of five with her parents and grandmother.

"I add pictures through the years, including some from my own 20 or so albums, up until the present time.

"I write comments under each picture and put dates on each one so they can see how we lived and grew and prospered.

"Then I end the book with another original poem called 'Grandma's Brag Book,' which contains one verse for each grandchild."

Cornelia is working on the eighth album now and is determined to complete all 22 despite recent open-heart surgery.

"Pictures are a big part of my life," Cornelia said. "I also have my mother's Kodak Brownie and it still takes beautiful pictures!"

What a great idea. And what a magnificent time to start such a project, what with all the interest in our roots. Cornelia's project takes in five generations!

I wonder whatever happened to photos of my grandparents, parents and my brothers and sister as children. I'm sure that, if I ever have any grandchildren, they would like an album such as Cornelia's and would probably build on it to pass on to their grandchildren.

Eastman Kodak celebrates its 100th anniversary next year. George Eastman popularized photography in America with the introduction of the first dollar Brownie camera in 1900. A roll of film costs 15 cents then.

As early as 1896, the 100,000th Kodak camera had been manufactured and film was being produced at the rate of about 400 miles monthly.

"You press the button. We do the rest," was the Kodak slogan of the time.

Many of those early cameras are items eagerly sought by collectors today. But what of the millions of picture that must have been made by the time most of us were born? How many are lying in attic trunks, in albums such as those discovered by Cornelia?

I don't know how Cornelia is dividing up the photos in the albums she found. One suggestion I might make, to insure that everyone has a complete collection, is to make copies of the photos that you want to include when more than one album is being given away.

There are inexpensive copying devices to fit most cameras, ranging from extension tubes to close-up filters that fit over the lens of the camera. Ask at your local camera store. To simplify things even further, make your copies on color-print film so that you wind up with album-sized prints.

Little Decorative Dolls Represent Heritage

These little dolls are great decorating items because they're inexpensive, unusual, and represent our heritage (early settlers fashioned them after Indian cornhusk dolls). Use doll heads, hands, and feet along with cornhusk bodies to create this adorable grandma & grandpa pair. All the materials you'll use are available at your local hobby shop . . . even packaged cornhusks should you need them!

Kids enjoy creating their own dolls for holiday display. Witches for Halloween, elves for St. Patrick's Day, bunnies for Easter and more. Clancey the Clown would love to appear at your next child's birthday party. And how about a pink angel for your tree at Christmas time?

This 15-page instruction booklet includes step-by-step pictures and directions for each character. You will even learn how to wrap the cornhusks to form a skirt or an overblouse.

Patchwork Quilts Now Sought At Markets Across Country

Quilts today are much more than bed beautifiers. From its humble origin as a simple and practical bed covering, the applique or patchwork quilt has risen in social stature and is now an eagerly sought-after item in many fine arts and antiques markets across the country.

Early day quilters sought inspiration for their patterns in familiar everyday objects and events, and for many years quilters relied on those design ideas and patterns from the past. However, with the recent revival of interest in crafts, needlework is again considered an art form and modern-day quilters search ever farther afield for new designs.

Contemporary quilt designers have created magnificent works of hand-stitched art on such subjects as traffic lights and tall buildings. More often than not, the quilters of today may never intend for their applique or quilted piece to rest quietly upon a bed, but rather view it as an innovative wall hanging.

Before you create a quilt of your own design, you may first want to try a variation of a traditional pattern. It's a good way to learn basic design principles and quilting techniques. Also, for many novice quilters the first project seems a huge task. Begin with a small or simple project, a mini-quilt or wall-hanging, perhaps.

Look to the world around for inspiration. Enlarge a child's drawing or browse through the pages of a coloring book for your first design. It's best to invest in a basic "how-to" book on quilting and follow it closely in your initial efforts. Or seek out a commercial pattern with detailed step-by-step instructions and add your own personal touches.

The quilted stand-in for a brass headboard and whimsical window landscape here are the type of projects both beginners and more experienced quilters alike will enjoy. The easty-to-follow patterns and instructions allow the novice to try a new craft with rave results and challenge the pro in the choice of fabrics and innovative skills. When completed, the quilted brass headboard measures 45 inches square and the window scene is 30 by 45 inches.

For the Brass Bed quilt, order Pattern No. 01007 for $3.99 plus $1.45 postage and handling. Order Pattern No. 01008 for Window quilt for $4.99 plus $1.45 postage and handling. Creative Home Crafts is required to pay and collect sale tax in Texas.

Textured Paint Covers Small Plaster Cracks

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — The wall plaster of one of our rooms has a number of cracks in it. I have been told that I can avoid patching them if I use a textured paint. Is this true? Also, what can you tell me about the kind of paint?

A. — Textured paints will cover small cracks in plaster, but large cracks or other defects should be patched first no matter what kind of paint is used. So-called sand or other texture paints create interesting walls, since you can make almost any kind of finish you want, depending on what the paint is applied with and how it is done. In fact, it's a good idea to do some testing on some scrap material. Consider the use of texture brushes, rollers, sponges, bristle brushes and almost anything else you can think of that will produce interesting designs. When you have the effect you want, repeat the process on the walls to be finished.

Q. — I soon will install insulation blankets in the ceiling of our garage so cold air won't go upstairs. I know I have to put the vapor barrier facing upstairs. Do I put them between the floor joists or over them and how do I estimate how much I need?

A. — Put the blankets (or batts) between the joists. To know how much insulation you will need, multiply the length of the area to be covered by the width. If the joists are 16 inches apart, multiply by .90. If they are 24 inches apart, multiply by .94. The answer is the number of square feet of insulation you will need.

Q. — Why is insulation given an R number? Does it show how thick the insulation is?

A. — R numbers stand for resistance to heat loss during cold weather and heat gain during warm weather. One brand of insulation might be slightly thinner or thicker than another with the same R number, but they will resist heat flow equally well. Generally, R-22 and R-19 mineral-wool batts will be between 5 and 7 inches thick; R-13 blankets 3½ to 3⅝ inches; R-11, 3 to 4 inches.

(Where and how to insulate are included in Andy Lang's booklet, "Save Money by Insulating," available by sending 35 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Dallas City Hall May Be Violator

DALLAS (AP) — The first victim of a brouhaha over the city's sign ordinance may be the City of Dallas seal that illegally decorates the front of the Dallas City Hall.

A consultant hired to review the city's sign code said Tuesday that the seal is too close to the right of way and too large to comply with the ordinance.

Kevin Lynch, whose company spent 10 months studying the ordinance, said the city should never have been granted permission to install the seal at its present location.

Councilman Steve Bartlett, who favors easing the ordinance, quickly used the seal as an example to prove his point.

"Do you see anything about the location of the city seal that is disruptive to traffic?" he asked Lynch.

Consumer Alert

By Mark White
Texas Attorney General

Used car complaints are always near the top of the list of consumer problems, according to the attorneys in my Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division.

While the great majority of dealers are reputable, car-shopping consumers should be aware of attempts by some unscrupulous used car dealers to roll back odometers. Just recently we obtained a court judgment enjoining a dealer from resetting the odometers of motor vehicles and requiring him to provide odometer disclosure statements to purchasers.

If an odometer reading has been altered, the ability to determine the car's real value, reliability, and safety is impaired. The Texas Deceptive Trade Practices — Consumer Protection Act provides protection against dealers who alter the odometer of any car or truck in an attempt to reduce the actual miles the vehicle has traveled.

Any consumer who suspects odometer tampering should contact our attorneys. If the buyer is correct, the law provides that the dealer can be enjoined from such practices and that the consumer is entitled to restitution. Or a consumer can consult a private attorney and collect damages plus attorney's fees and court costs, if a judge rules in his favor.

In addition to protection from such deceptive practices under Texas law, a federal law requires the seller, whether dealer or private party, to give the buyer a signed statement that includes the mileage indicated on the car's odometer at the time of sale. If the seller knows that the mileage reading is incorrect, he or she must indicate that the actual mileage is unknown. Then if the buyer can prove he was sold a car by someone who violated these requirements, or gave false information, he can collect three times his damages or $1,5000, whichever is greater, plus attorney's fees and court costs.

If you are in the market for a good used car, the lawyers in our Consumer Protection Division offer these tips:

•Select several established dealers and shop carefully. Reputable dealers will not object to comparisons with competitors.

•Get a history of the used car's title from the Texas Highway Department's motor vehicle registration division. Then check with previous owners if possible for information about the car and its mileage.

•Test drive the car and have your mechanic check it. A reputable dealer wants your return business and referrals and will not want to sell you a lemon.

•Be sure that any warranty is in writing and that it spells out the services that will be offered.

If you have a complaint about an unscrupulous used car dealer, contact our Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division in Austin, Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Lubbock, El Paso or McAllen or call your district or county attorney.

Council Chairman Defends Wage Guides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although conceding the nation's 13 percent inflation rate "stinks," Alfred E. Kahn defended the administration's voluntary wage and price guidelines Thursday as "basically the right course."

Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, also endorsed the Federal Reserve Board's tight money policies which have sharply pushed up lending rates and prompted a week of turmoil in Wall Street markets.

Kahn made his remarks in testimony before the Senate Banking subcommittee on economic stabilization. However, Sen. Donald W. Riegle, panel chairman, charged that the administration's anti-inflation program "appears to me to be in shambles."

Riegle, D-Mich., said President Carter had failed to provide the leadership to deal with the twin problems of inflation and recession. "Unless new steps are taken immediately, I do not see how public confidence is to be restored," he said.

Riegle asserted that the Federal Reserve's monetary policies had "effectively shut down the construction industry" and unless replaced by a new anti-inflation program within 60 to 90 days, would severely harm the economy.

Kahn said the only alternative to the voluntary anti-inflation program would be mandatory wage and price controls, which he claimed could do nothing to limit energy, housing and food prices — all key elements in the nation's inflationary spiral.

Kahn said continuation of the voluntary anti-inflation program coupled with monetary and fiscal restraint were essential if soaring prices were to be controlled. He also praised the administration's anti-inflation efforts in reducing government regulation in transportation, communications and banking.

"It's obvious that I come to you in a mood of discouragement," Kahn told the subcommittee, referring to the current 13 percent annual inflation rate. "But the course on which we are proceeding is basically the right course."

Kahn said the voluntary guidelines had been successful in most areas of the economy, but that inflation had been pushed to double-digit levels by price increases in energy, housing and food that could not be controlled.

He said continued guidelines are needed to prevent workers from trying to catch up with the recent price hikes and thus causing even higher inflation in the future.

"If workers try to recapture the income they've lost because of the increases, and if productivity continues to decline, we will very quickly have built double-digit inflation firmly into our cost base," Kahn said.

He also said the government should consider stringent steps to limit energy consumption, possibly by placing heavy taxes on oil or gasoline. However, Kahn added that he did not favor gasoline rationing.

Despite Riegle's criticism, the administration's anti-inflation actions received support from two other subcommittee members.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said the Federal Reserve's policies were "exactly right considering the current conditions."

Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., told Kahn the administration's position was not "far off from what a rational person would do in these circumstances."

However, Lugar said that Carter should have completely removed controls from oil and gasoline prices, instead of only phasing out crude oil price controls.

Medicare Deductible To Be Increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced Thursday that Medicare patients will pay at least $20 more for a hospital stay starting Jan. 1.

The government said it is raising the Medicare hospital insurance deductible from $160 to $180.

It said the deductible, which Medicare patients must pay before the government picks up the bill, is roughly equivalent to the cost of one day's stay in a hospital. The law requires the department to adjust this payment annually to keep pace with hospital costs.

Some 26.8 million persons are covered by hospital insurance under Medicare, and that number is expected to reach 27.4 million next year. The vast majority are 65 or older.

At the same time, Medicare patients will be paying more in 1980 if their hospital stay exceeds 60 days.

HEARTLINE: Is it true that the railroads will soon offer reduced railroad fares for the elderly? I had heard this, but thought it might just be another rumor. — B.V.

On Aug. 1, 1979 the Senate approved legislation offered by Sen. Jim Sasser requiring that Amtrak establish a reduced fares program for elderly and handicapped individuals and to require the Transportation Department's Federal Railroad Administration to reimburse Amtrak for the difference between the reduced fare and the regular fare. Similar legislation offered by Representatives Pepper and Luken passed the House on July 25, 1979.

HEARTLINE: Is there a nationwide toll-free telephone number veterans can call to get information from the Veterans Administration? — L.W.

VA has no nationwide number but there are VA regional offices in each state and all have toll-free numbers. Look in the telephone book white pages under United States Government, Veterans Administration.

HEARTLINE: I have read your column in the Buffalo Evening News consistently for several years and found little reference to eye disorders. I am 66 years old and thus have been on Medicare for one year. Little data is given on the eyes in government pamphlets and inasmuch as I am afflicted with glaucoma, I am extremely interested in such.

Presently it is necessary that I follow the schedule listed below:

1. Visit my opthalmologist every four months.

2. Use a prescription solution eye drop of 2 percentPilocar in the left eye every six hours.

3. Use a prescription solution eye drop of 4 percent Pilocar in the right eye every six hours.

4. Use a prescription solution eye drop of Timoptic in both eyes twice each day.

5. Have a field vision test every six months.

6. Also it is necessary at times to have the lens in my eye glasses corrected.

Any information you can furnish as to what Medicare covers will be appreciated. — G.G.

Your visits to the ophthalmologist every four months for treatment of a condition such as glaucoma would be covered by Medicare. Your field vision tests would also be covered. But, unfortunately, the glasses, the fitting of glasses and the prescriptions would not be covered.

We are happy that you have read us consistently and we will try to cover this subject more frequently in the future.

Heartline has written a book to help people understand what Medicare covers and what they do not cover. It goes much more in depth than any government pamphlet and is very easy to understand. To order, send $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 East Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381.

Importing Water Discussed At Meeting

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A declining supply of ground water from the Ogallala aquifer and an increasing demand for food and fiber around the world were cited as reasons for the need to import water to the High Plains by one expert Thursday at a seminar sponsored by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.

Duncan Ellison, executive director of Water, Inc., a private corporation set up to seek and promote water importation projects, told a group of area farmers and water research specialists that the High Plains will play an important part in meeting the demands for food around the world.

Ellison told the group gathered to discuss ways to finance the importation of water from the lower Mississippi Basin that there are two alternatives to the decreasing supply of ground water from the Ogallala: either a return to a dry land area with decreased agricultural production or a water importation plan that would bring water to the High Plains region from areas of abundant water reserves.

"At this time we have approximately 340 million acre-feet of ground water in the Ogallala Aquifer. And it is predicted that by the year 2,000 we'll have only 198 million acre-feet of water, Ellison said.

"Of course, this prediction is a little more than we'll actually have due to conservation techniques developed over the past few years because of increased energy costs."

Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, said that although there now is plenty of water in the aquifer, that amount will begin to taper off by 1980 if water is not imported.

"The amount of agriculturally productive land is decreasing at 1.8 million acres per year," he said. "What's happening is that the land is being used for other purposes, such as highways and industrial development."

Wyatt also told the panel that the High Plains region will play an important role in the agricultural economy of the nation.

"If we are going to continue to be a strong nation, we'll have to import water to this region."

Wyatt estimated the High Plains region will need between 10 and 12 million acre-feet of extra water by the early 1980s.

"The problem we're encountering is in presenting our water importation plans to Congress. Our problem lies in convincing them that we are using existing water supplies from the surface water as well as ground water, including playa lakes," he said.

Attending the meeting, which was being co-sponsored by Merrill Lynch, was State Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka and State Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo.

Pronghorn Antelope Making Texas Comeback

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

Back in the days when mostly cowboys worked the high plains area of Texas, several of the wranglers gathered around an evening campfire near Lubbock. As the embers heated a large pot of coffee, one of the men introduced the words of a new song: "Oh, give me a home, where the buffalo roam, where the deer and the antelope play....."

Although the vast numbers of buffalo are now gone, deer can still be found in limited areas and the antelope have become a conservation success story in Texas.

By 1928, antelope had declined in population to about 3,000. Today, approximately 11,000 are estimated to roam the wide open country of West Texas thanks to restocking, protection and wildlife management.

Referred to as "antelope" by explorers and early settlers, the spunky animals are not related to antelope found only in the Old World. The New World animal is a separate specie. But, by the time scientists tried to correct the misnaming, the incorrect name was too deeply ingrained for a successful renaming. Although some persons call the animals "goats," most persons use the term "pronghorn antelope" in an effort to give the species a unique identity.

The pronghorn antelope (Antilocapra americana) is definitely unique. Beautiful and almost exotic in appearance by North American big game standards, it is the only animal in the world that sheds its horns (not antlers) yearly. It is also the only animal in the world with branched or forked horns — consequently the name pronghorn. Both male and female have the interesting horns; the male's horns are longer, with a more pronounced prong. The hollow horns sometimes reach 20 inches in length, but are usually about 10 to 15. The horns are generally jet-black in color.

An adult buck in its northern range measures about three feet at the shoulder and has a height of four feet to the top of its head. Overall length is approximately four feet with a three inch tail. Mature bucks generally weigh 100 to 120 pounds.

Pronghorns vary in color from a pale tan to a reddish-tan over the upper body and outside of the legs. The coat is white inside the legs, along the belly and at the rump. The white throat is interrupted by two tan bands; a dark nose bridge emphasizes the interesting face.

All of the pronghorn senses are acute; it can see human movement up to four miles away. In addition to keen senses, the animal also has enduring speed. It can effortlessly maintain a speed of 40 to 50 mph for several miles. If alarmed, it can put on a 65 mph burst of speed for a short distance, and then gracefully leap 20 feet to clear a country road. It's quite appropriate to describe the pronghorn as beauty in motion.

Vast herds ranged across the western United States following the Civil War, but the push of civilization required pronghorn country for farms and ranches. Today only Wyoming and Montana have pronghorn in great numbers, although other states are making room for the All American animal.

DISCOVERY

Texas's population of pronghorn was increased this year in a cooperative effort between several government agencies, including Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and Wyoming Game and Fish Department personnel, and some private landowners.

Biologists of TP&WD trapped a herd of 82 pronghorn on Warren Air Force Base property near the outskirts of Cheyenne and later released them on three ranches in the Texas Panhandle.

The animals were herded by a helicopter into a net corral, a roundup method that proved efficient for wildlife personnel and least injurious to the pronghorns. The helicopter service was funded by the Panhandle Chapter of Safari Club International, an organization of hunters and conservationists.

After their capture, the pronghorn antelopes were tranquilized, given antibiotics and then transported to the Texas ranches in specially equipped trailers. It was the first restocking of pronghorns from another state into Texas. Previous restocking consisted of relocation projects within the state. The Wyoming pronghorns are slightly larger than the animals native to West Texas. The Wyoming subspecies should adapt quickly to North Texas winters.

Virtually all pronghorns in Texas are on private land. Landowners (mostly ranchers) agree to protect broodstock introductions for three years and give additional time for populations to build up before hunting can be allowed. Hunting of pronghorn is restricted by permits to ensure a productive and protected broodstock.

Why are some ranchers now interested in an animal that has been considered as a competitor of livestock for food and water? Some ranchers sincerely want to help save a specie of animal that faces a dwindling range. And the high priority of a quality hunt by pronghorn hunters has made pronghorns a valuable asset for most landowners.

HANGING ON — Wyoming pronghorn antelope proved to be larger than their Texas cousins. Each pronghorn received an identifying ear tag, anti-biotic innoculation to combat infection and a mild tranquilizer.

PEN PALS — A massive non-injurous net and a helicopter were used for the pronghorn roundup on property of Warren Air Force Base for transport of antelope to Texas as part of a restocking project.

Outstanding Season For Pronghorn Believed Probable

It is too early to know hunter success for this year's Texas pronghorn season that closed Oct. 7, but Charles Winkler, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department big game program director, predicted before the Sept. 29 opening day an outstanding season.

Late summer aerial counts showed antelope populations in both the Trans-Pecos and Permian Basin regions had been boosted by the best fawn crop in 10 years — an approximate 100 per cent reproduction rate. Forage conditions were rated "good to excellent" throughout the state's antelope range because of plentiful moisture, Winkler said.

In addition to the good fawn crop, adult populations were 12 to 15 per cent higher in the Trans-Pecos than last year, and in the Permian Basin adult numbers were about 10 per cent higher than last year. In the Panhandle, reproductive success was only 20 per cent, and adult populations were about the same as last year. Winkler said the low fawn survival in the Panhandle possibly resulted from coyote predation; twice as many coyotes were observed during the antelope census than the year before.

Hunting the pronghorn antelope can be one of the most challenging big game endeavors. The animal's acute senses of hearing, sight and smell often necessitate it being tracked for great distances and approached with stealth.

Because the animal's habitat is generally flat country, some hunters try for long distance shots. However, the true sportsman will not shoot at a greater distance than the accurate capabilities of his or her firearm; this is usually at a distance of 200 to 300 yards. Also, shots at running pronghorns are not recommended because of the animal's misleading speed. It is too easy for a doe running behind a buck to be hit in error.

A standard deer rifle is useable in most pronghorn hunts. Quality optics for rifle scope, spotting scope and binoculars are a necessity for trophy hunting.

Pronghorns usually water at mid-day. A concealed hunter between an antelope herd and a watering hole has a good chance of bagging a pronghorn.

Opening day of the hunting season has a definite advantage because the pronghorn has a curiosity for strange objects after a year of not being hunted. Some hunters have been able to "flag in" a curious pronghorn to rifle range by simply waving a piece of cloth tied to a stick. This practice usually works only during the first hours of the hunting season.

No person may hunt pronghorn antelope in Texas without first obtaining a signed legal permit from the landowner or agent of the tract where hunting. More information is available from TP&WD field offices.

FLEET OF FOOT — Pronghorn antelopes are capable of sustained speeds of 40 to 50 mph. Transportation from Wyoming to Texas was termed a success by George Litton, a parks and wildlife biologist and regional wildlife director who assisted in the roundup.

Baby's Finder Wants Adoption Proceedings

EL PASO (AP) — The baker who found a newborn baby in his garage thinks the child was meant for him and wants to adopt the infant.

"The circumstances which led us to the baby make us think he was meant for us," says Perfecto Rodriguez.

Syrian, Israeli Planes Fight Above Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian sources said Syrian and Israeli warplanes traded fire in the skies of southern Lebanon Thursday, but no jets were shot down. Israel denied the report and there was no comment from Syria.

The official spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization here said he was not aware of a dogfight but that Israeli overflights in the south had been reported.

Residents in Beirut said they heard a sonic boom that shook windows at about 2:15 p.m., the same time the highly-placed Palestinian sources said the skirmish occurred somewhere south of Damour, 7 miles south of Beirut.

A source in the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said: "If something of this sort had happened, we would have announced it."

There have been three confirmed Syrian-Israeli air clashes over Lebanon in the past three months. Last week-end, Israel confirmed a report from the Syrian air force that it had shot down an unmanned Israeli spy plane flying north of Damascus. The Israelis said the plane was in Syrian airspace investigating a reported Syrian military buildup.

In south Lebanon, Palestinian anti-aircraft gunners and Syrian peacekeeping troops went on alert, and Palestinians in refugee camps took cover when air raid sirens sounded the alarm, the Palestinian sources said.

The Syrians, whose 22,000-man Arab Deterrent Force polices Lebanon's 1976 civil war truce, have vowed to defend Lebanese airspace against Israeli raids on Palestinian-held villages. Israel has said its attacks are on guerrilla bases used to plan raids on Israel and that they are in self-defense.

In the first and third dogfights, the Israelis said their forces, using U.S. made F-15s, shot down nine Soviet-made MIG-21s. The Syrians said they shot down four Israeli jets but that report was disputed by diplomatic sources who said Israel lost no aircraft.

No planes were reported shot down.

Observers believe Syrian President Hafez Assad is ordering the air action to distract attention from civil unrest in Syria, to stress his opposition to Israel and to demonstrate Syria's need for more sophisticated weapons.

Quiz Asks Who Helped Who On Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — People have been helping each other out of jams and over stumbling blocks for centuries. And since time began, or at least since 1947, television has been dramatizing some of these heartwarming stories.

On Sunday, NBC presents an all-new version of "The Miracle Worker," one of the most extraordinary examples of this special kind of buddy system. The two-hour special stars Patty Duke Astin as Anne Sullivan, and Melissa Gilbert as Helen Keller.

Before tuning in IBM's presentation at 7 p.m. CDT, join Janis Hirsch in trying to recall other TV shows where people helped each other:

1. A 1974 comedy featured the odd couple of the carburetor set. Even though "it's not your job," name the series and earn two points. (Hint: It sounds more like one of the Marx Brothers meet his Maker than an East Los Angeles sitcom.)

2. If there's a doctor in the house, chances are he's got an older, wiser friend and mentor. For two points, name the long-running doctor show that was one of the healthiest movie-to-TV transplants ever seen at Blair General Hospital. You didn't need a stethoscope to see what a heart throb the handsome young intern was; name him for two points.

3. One-half of TV's best-known friendships rode "a fiery horse with the speed of light, a cloud of dust and a hearty, 'Hi-yo' you-known-who." Or do you? For two points, name the series about a Texas Ranger who spent much of his life "masking" his sorrows. And for one point, who was his brave companion?

4. If you believe everything you see on television, you know the classroom isn't just homework and fire drills. For three points, which former TV teacher now spends his time cutting homeroom so he can wish Americans "Good Morning?" TV's current classroom caper is more at home on center court than it is in the study hall. Name it, for three points, and for a bonus point, name the hot-shoot hoop-shooter who stars.

5. While some students are actually studious, others throught school was a joke — or at least, a situation comedy. You didn't have to be a veterinarian to love a sweathog in what long-running series? If you know that, you're two points richer. Now, let's got back to the 1950s when an exasperated English teacher and her squeaky voiced "main problem student" roamed the halls of Madison High. The teacher was played by an actress whose first name was really The First Name, and her student co-star graduated to "The Real McCoys." Who are they (for two points apiece) and for three points, name the series.

6. One more teacher-student relationship. Contrary to popular opinion, Patty Duke Astin wasn't te first 'Patty" to star as Helen Keller; who was, on TV's "Playhouse 90"? If you knew the name, you've earned three points.

7. Helen Keller wasn't the only youngster who helped, and was helped by, grown-ups. Pint sized-Gary Coleman plays the Harlem-born adopted son of a millionaire in what new TV comedy? If you've named it, take two points. There was another series about a widower-father and his young son, but his kid was too busy matchmaking to be a wisecracker. A magician turned hulk starred as the eligible dad; name him for two points, and for another pair of points, name the series.

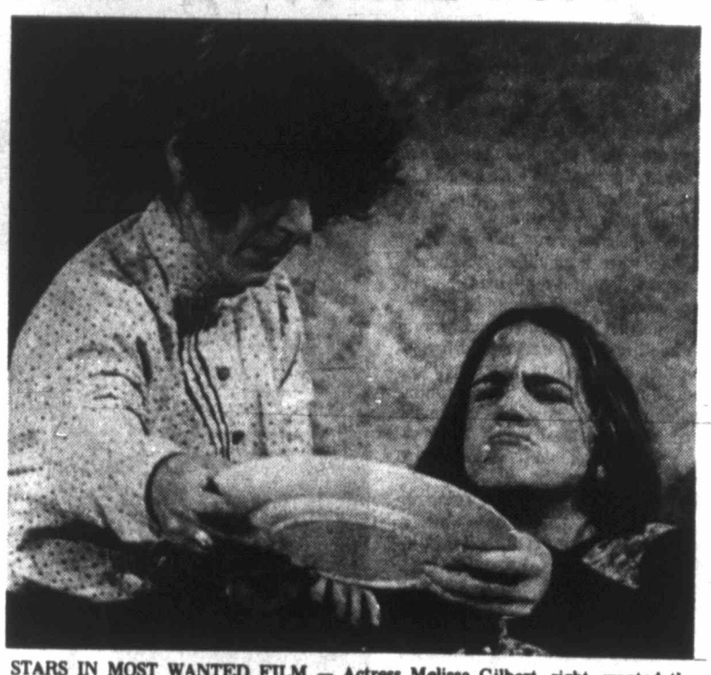
8. The most famous "Boy" of them all had a swinging friend who yelled loudly and carried a big chimp. Alas, by the time this gorilla's best friend got his own series, "Boy" was called "Jai" and the ape-man had taken elocution lessons. Name the series for two points, and for four more, who was the leading, er, man?

&. In 1967, a former TV courtroom ace starred in a series about a police chief in a wheelchair with an ex-con friend who acted as his 'legs." If you know the star, it's worth two points. Name the show and get two more.

10. In another series in which pals overcame problems, a blind insurance investigator had a buddy with real helping hands — he was a self-defense instructor whose karate chops now are legendary. Name the series for two points, the leading man for three more, and the name of his black-belted friend is worth another four.

Answers: 1. "Chico and the Man." 2. "Dr. Kildare," Richard Chamberlain. 3. "The Lone Ranger," Tonto. 4. David Hartman, "The White Shadow," Ken Howard. 5. "Welcome Back Kotter," Eve Arden, Richard Crenna, "Our Miss Brooks." 6. Patty McCormack. 7. "Diff'rent Strokes," Bill Bixby, "The Courtship of Eddie's Father." 8. "Tarzan," Ron Ely. 9. Raymond Burr, "Ironside." 10. "Longstreet," James Franciscus, Bruce Lee

Scoring: If you scored 45 to 53 points, you get the shirt off our back; 35-44 you are a friend indeed; 20-34 you could use a little friendly persuasion; less than 19, the last time you helped yourself was at a buffet table.



STARS IN MOST WANTED FILM — Actress Melissa Gilbert, right, wanted the chance to play the young Helen Keller in "The Miracle Worker" since she first saw the movie at age seven. Now at age 15 she will co-star with Patty Duke Astin, left, as her teacher in the NBC-TV movie. Miss Astin won an Oscar for her movie portrayal of the young Helen Keller in 1962. (AP Laserphoto)

Top Songwriter Honors Posted

NASHVILLE (AP) — A songwriter who nearly gave up the business because he was broke won the Songwriter of the Year award from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Rory Bourke, who co-wrote "Shadows in the Moonlight" and "I Know a Heartache When I See One," took top songwriter honors for the second time and got six other awards for his hit songs.

Recounting how he left a record company promotion job in 1971 to write music, Bourke said he was ready to give it up after one year because he was broke and depressed.

"I finally went into Christ the King Church and just sat there and thought, 'If I'm not supposed to keep on trying, then Lord please give me a sign,'" Bourke said. "The next week I got five songs recorded. None of them ever went anywhere, but then I hadn't asked for hits. I'd asked for a sign."

During ASCAP's black-tie awards dinner at Opryland Hotel, Larry Butler received the Producer of the Year award and songwriter Johnny Marks got a special country music award. Winning publishers were Chappell & Co. Inc. and Intersong Music.

Art, Cultural Grants Due Six U.S. Cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six cities will receive $10,000 government grants for demonstration projects on how to set up art and cultural activities within existing local park and recreation systems.

The projects are the first results of a 1979 cooperative agreement between the Interior Department and the Federal Council on the Arts and Humanities.

The cities to receive the awards are Oakland, Calif.; New Brunswick, N.J.; Winston-Salem, N.C.; Albuquerque, St. Louis and Detroit. Officials said the cities were selected from a review of cities eligible for assistance.

Actors Protest Portrayals Of Women

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ed Asner, Dennis Weaver and other actors denounced the film industry's portrayal of women and minorities Wednesday in a demonstration staged by the Screen Actors Guild.

"There are tons and tons of people," said SAG spokeswoman Kim Fellner. "We're going great guns."

She said the SAG filed unfair labor charges Wednesday against the Academy of Motion Picture and Television Producers with the National Labor Relations Board here.

"Those charges basically accuse the alliance of not living up to their contract obligations and preventing SAG from fulfilling their obligations to affirmative action."

Asked for comment, an academy spokeswoman said only: "The association has no comment."

The protesters marched in front of the academy's offices, carrying signs bearing such slogans as "Women and minorities not seen on the American scene" and "We want our share of the fantasy."

Police estimated about 500 people participated in the demonstration. Miss Fellner said most were SAG members, including black actors Bernie Casey, Georg Stanford Brown, Paul Winfield and Beah Richards.

In addition to protesting under-representation of women and minorities in television programming, Miss Fellner said the demonstrators also alleged contract violations by the academy.

Miss Fellner said producers had failed to provide them with statistics about hiring practices and to hold quarterly meetings about those statistics.

The choice of Warner Brothers as a target was described as "only symbolic" by Larry Keith, president of the New York branch of the guild. He said the protest was aimed at the industry for "its failure to depict American society realistically."

Keith said guild members were concerned not only with improving job opportunities for women, minorities, the elderly and the young but also with having them depicted accurately in movies and television.

Development Company Saves Chickens

LEAGUE CITY (AP)— A Houston development firm is spending $15,000 this week to save some prairie chickens.

The developer (General Homes Co.) plans to build 1,500 homes on a 370-acre track near League City. Officials of the company learned that about 60 of the rare Attwater's prairie chickens were living on the undeveloped tract.

So, the firm contacted wildlife experts and then offered to spend the money needed to fly the chickens by helicopter to a refuge in nearby Victoria County.

Nova Silvy, a Texas A&M ecologist, and Wayne Shifflett of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department, are in charge of trapping the birds and sending them to their new home.

Shifflett said, "There are so many areas being developed in Texas that prairie chickens are losing their native lands. At the wildlife refuge we can provide them with what they need."

California Completes Superinterstate

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California, often called the land of the freeways, marks completion of its longest superhighway Friday — a 797-mile link in the only U.S. interstate stretching from Mexico to Canada.

Workers poured concrete in August to fill Interstate 5's final hole, a five-mile gap south of Sacramento. Ceremonies which the state transportation director compares to "the driving of the golden spike" will be held Friday morning to open the link.

Ironically, completion of the freeway comes at a time when California is putting increased emphasis on mass transit to deal with problems created by the gasoline shortage and air pollution.

When the link is opened, motorists will be able to drive the 1,380 miles from San Ysidro on the Mexican border south of San Diego to Canada on a single, uninterrupted, $2.3 billion highway.

Vietnam War Veteran Finding Easier Roles On Broadway Stage

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1969, Bob Gunton was in the Vietnam war the hardest way, as an infantryman, in Charlie Company, 2nd Battalion, 501st Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, patrolling near the A Shau Valley.

Now he walks the Broadway stage, playing Argentinan strongman Juan Peron in "Evita," the hit musical about the life Eva Peron. It's a taxing role. But consider the one he had 10 years ago.

Back then, in Vietnam, he toted a radio, was what they call an RTO. As in the case of a platoon leader or a platoon point man, it was no way to reach old age. They were prime targets when shooting began.

But Bob's only war wound was a burn from hot shrapnel that landed on his leg when a nearby company — he still calls the outfit "hard-luck Alpha"— was ambushed one night by North Vietnamese troops.

"I felt I lived under some special protection there" he says of his year in Vietnam. "I suppose anyone who survives feels that, but I really felt a tangible kind of protection going on."

After the war, Gunton, 33, son of a retired Marine sergeant in Santa Ana, Calif., saw somewhat less risky action in regional, repertory and Off-Broadway theaters. He got supporting-player parts in two earlier Broadway shows, "Happy End" and "King of Hearts."

He wrote and still writes country music tunes that are Roger Miller in nature. And now, in addition to his "Evita" work, he's writing a Vietnam novel, whimsically entitled, "Up the Hua-Tsu."

As a kid, the tall, strapping, black-haired actor never dreamed he'd be doing all this. He planned to be a Catholic priest and even spent several years in a Paulist seminary in New Jersey.

But he found theater his true calling during a summer vacation in Tennessee. Jim Crabtree, a fellow seminarian, took him there to meet his father, Paul Crabtree, a Broadway veteran.

Crabtree Sr., then opening the Cumberland County Theater, needed a singer-guitarist for a musical. Bob was both. He took the part as a lark, "just screwing around." And he got hooked on theater.

He worked summers at the Cumberland, then did repertory theater in college in California during the school year. One year, he dropped out to do "Carousel" for Crabtree. Bad move. He got drafted.

He opened in Vietnam, a trooper instead a trouper, slogging through rice fields, foothills and jungles west of Hue, pausing at firebases called Ripcord, Bastogne and Rahkasan, then moving out again.

All the time he wrote down what he saw, felt and thought, for what is becoming his novel: "I kept notebooks, reams of them, while everyone else humped crotchbooks and extra cans of beer.

"I was bound and determined that if I bought the farm over there, at least I'd leave something behind. The notebooks came back" — a quick grin flashed — "and so did I. Sure fooled them."

Unlike many vets, Gunton says he had little trouble adjusting to life in America when he came home from the war. It's mainly, he adds, because he had a profession to come home to — the theater.

"Emotionally, there was some problem — the fact I couldn't share what the war was about with anybody except the guys who'd been there," he concedes. "Which is why I'm writing about it now.

"I'd never found a way to describe to a lay person what that experience meant to us who were over there, those of us who disagreed with the war and yet went over as sons of this country."

He nodded when asked if he considers himself in that category, one who disagreed with the war but served his country in it: "Yes. As did, I would say, a clear majority of the men I was with."

It may sound odd now, but Gunton, a thoughtful man who speaks in a strong, steady baritone voice, doesn't gripe that he got drafted and wound up fighting in America's most unpopular war.

"The (draft) lottery came in not long after I got my notice," he says. "So had I stayed in college, done the conventional thing, gotten a degree and all that, I might have been able to evade the draft.

"As it turned out — although it was a terrible, horrible war — It was a rite of passage for me. It gave me a sense of the seriousness of life that I'd never really had.

"It politicized me to some extent, but mostly it mad me look at life more seriously than I ever had. And to rejoice in it. When I got back, for me every day was a celebration. And it continues."

Mayor Proclaims Saturday 'Red Day'

Mayor Dirk West has proclaimed Saturday as "Red Day," as the Texas Tech Red Raiders gear up to meet the Arkansas Razorbacks.

All Tech supporters are urged to wear red to the Tech-Arkansas clash, said a spokesman with the Saddle Tramp Red Day committee. This includes bringing banners, pom pons, and scarves.

Recording Veteran Still Not Over Hill

NASHVILLE (AP) — Memo from Brenda Lee: she's not an old-timer.

"I want everybody to know I'm just 34 and not 55," she said in a recent interview. "I've got vim and vigor left in me."

Known as "Miss Dynamite" when she was a teen-ager, Miss Lee has resumed her recording career after a three-year hiatus. And she's cultivating a new image to combat suggestions that she's old enough to be a grandmother.

Some people may think she's older than she is because she's been singing professionally for so long. Beginning with "Jambalaya" in 1956 at age 11, she's had million sellers like "I'm Sorry," "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree," "Sweet Nothin's," "All Alone Am I," "As Usual," "Too Many Rivers" and "Coming On Strong."

"A lot of people have heard about me from their parents, so they think I'm ancient," Miss Lee said. "I'm just one year older than Linda Ronstadt."

She'll have a new look, but not a new sound, when an album is released this fall.

"I've redone my hair and I'm blowing it dry," she said. "And I'm dressing different — more natural.

"But I'm not changing the way I sing. It will be the Brenda Lee sound, an updated sound, progressive country, I guess. I can't change the way I sing; I've got to be myself."

She quit recording for three years to analyze her career.

"I've been in a little recession, like the country," she chuckled. "I just wanted to take a respite and analyze things. I decided to go back in the studio and sing the way I sing and let everybody play around me and do what I want to do and not what everybody else does.

"Earlier I was not being honest; I wasn't doing any style at all; I didn't know who or what I was. I want to be in the ball game again."

She said she believes the quality of music today is quite good.

"As a whole, the music is great. We have talented young writers and innovative people. It's astounding what we can do in the studios technically. 'I'm Sorry' was on three tracks; now they use 24 tracks and all kinds of things."

Her proudest moments were receiving her first gold record, for "I'm Sorry," and performing professionally for the first time in the mid-1950s in Augusta, Ga.

"I've been lucky. I've had good people around me and good songs. I've tried to progress in my singing ability and I've taken my role seriously. It's my life's work and I'm proud of it.

"I've learned discipline and things like staging, lighting and sound. The most important thing I've learned is to be honest with the public and keep your perspective. If you do that, you'll reach the goal you set out to be.

"We all have regrets but I don't think about them. The good overshadows the bad.

"My goal now is the same as it's always been. I love singing and entertaining. I want to put out good records and be accepted as a positive influence. I have no aspirations to be a dancer or an actor.

"I don't know if I'll ever say, 'I quit.' You're always in it to some extent."

'Yanks' Star Gives Credit To Director For Much Of Success

NEW YORK (AP) — "I became an actor as people would like me," said William Devane, star of the recently released movie "Yanks."

"But now I don't care any more," Devane continued. "In fact, once I realized some people actually didn't like me, I kind of liked it. It helps you know ... a little variety."

In "Yanks," a movie about GIs in Britain during World War II, Devane is an American army captain in love with an English woman, played by Vanessa Redgrave.

"I play a guy who's basically lonesome," the actor said. "He's past the point of bravado and insecure loudness that Americans are normally identified with. After seeing so many war war movies, I just tried to find another way to go."

The 42-year-old Devane credits director John Schlesinger with helping him find the right way to o as an actor "Some directors pretend to know a lot about acting," Devane said. "Those are the real dangerous guys. John Schlesinger doesn't pretend to know a lot about anything. He just knows a lot about how to make a film.

"He hires actors who can act, and if he doesn't like something, he'll tell you," Devane said, smiling. "But if we get into a deep conflict and he knows I'm wrong, he lets me go ahead and do it then cuts it out of the picture."

Devane said that happened with some scenes he did with Miss Redgrave. "Once in a while, when I was insecure in a situation, I would turn the end of the scene into a little joke in my favor," explained Devane, "just to lighten it up. It made me feel comfortable."

In the end, he said, Schlesinger cut the jokes. "It makes my performance much better," Devane admitted. "But to deal with me at the time wouldn't have been productive and he knew that.

"If he had let me do what I wanted, it would have been a different character, nowhere near as good, and I wouldn't have learned anything. It taught me how to be a mature actor."

Knowing how difficult it is for actors to find work, Devane helped form a theater group in Los Angeles called Actors For Themselves. "It's an organization of actors who do small theater projects," he said.

"We even bought our own theater because the single hardest barrier to get over when you try to do theater is paying the people who own the theaters," he said. "They're the ones who really cripple it and they get most of the money."

Born in Albany, N.Y., Devane arrived in New Yrk City in 1960. He remained here for 14 years, working with producer Joe Papp and others. "I had a few parts, but nothing meaty. I didn't go to the moon here."

In 1974, all that changed. Offered the role of Bobby Kennedy in the television film "The Missiles of October," Devane uprooted his family and moved to California. When he got there, there was a little problem. The role of President John Kennedy hadn't been filled.

"Hal Holbrook was tied up, and a lot of people were afraid to do it," Devane recalled. "They didn't feel they could make it work. I had nothing to lose. It was just a bigger part than Bobby."

For Devane, the role of JFK opened the road to stardom. He went on to do Alfred Hitchcock's "Family Plot," Schlesinger's "Marathon Man," and Paul Schrader's "Rolling Thunder," as well as the TV miniseries "From Here to Eternity," which now is a series.

Devane said he looks at his success from the practical perspective of an actor who had to struggle for many years. "Now I can really make a living at acting," he said, "a decent living, and get some decent parts."

Imports of goods and services by the Latin American nations grew 7.1 percent in 1978, says the Inter-American Development Bank in its annual report on Economic and Social Progress in Latin America.

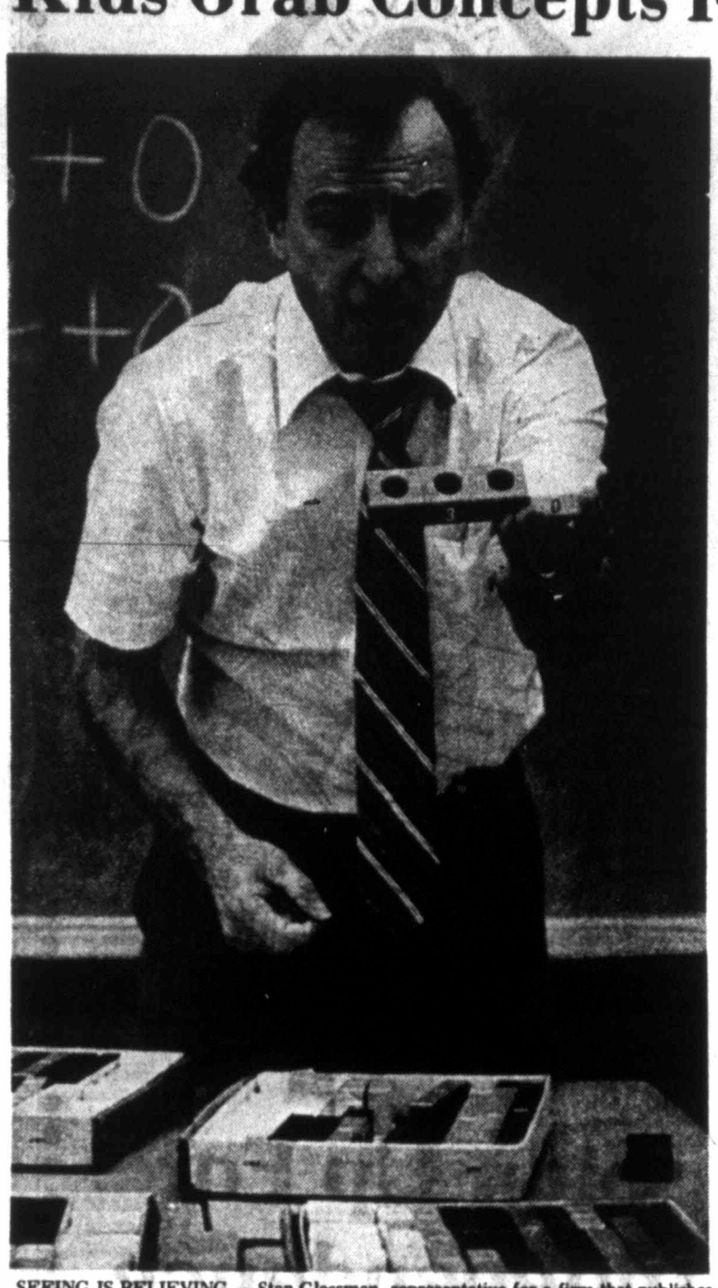
New Math Technique Helps Kids Grab Concepts Faster



SEEING IS BELIEVING — Stan Glassman, representative for a firm that publishes math materials, utilizes colored blocks to demonstrate to kindergarten students the concepts of addition and subtraction. Glassman worked with two groups of Maedgen Elementary students Thursday to show primary grade teachers the kits of blocks and fraction rods that function as concrete models of math concepts so that children can grasp the concepts more readily. (Staff photo by Linn Scherwitz)

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With the aid of some numbered wooden and plastic blocks, a group of elementary school students Thursday discovered a world of mathematical concepts normally beyond their grade levels.

The children — six third graders and six kindergarten students — participated in a demonstration of a unique new technique in math education for a gathering of primary school teachers.

Stan Glassman, representative of Great Ideas Inc., a New York firm that publishes math materials, demonstrated the technique that utilizes "Arithmablocks" and fraction rods which are concrete models of math concepts.

Although the children learned concepts that normally are taught in higher grade levels, Glassman cautioned the teachers he is not trying to change the schools' curriculum through the new technique. He said that the presentation of more complicated concepts simply showed that "you can take a child and teach him anything if you make it simple enough."

The colored blocks and fraction rods are used "as a clear way of seeing abstractions," explained Glassman.

The third graders, for example, were instructed to place a block numbered "one" on the table. They then were told to place on top of that block as many of the proportionately smaller blocks numbered "one-fourth" as would fit. The youngsters could then visualize that four fourths are equal to one.

Similarly, the kindergarten students were able to visualize that three plus two equals five by manipulating colored blocks.

Glassman explained that through use of such concrete examples of math problems, students will then be able to use their problem-solving ability learned in that manner and apply it to problems using only written symbols on the blackboard or in textbooks.

"You can get a child to generalize to the abstract if they understand what it's about," he said. "Once it hits, then they can extrapolate."

He said that Great Ideas proposed that the method be used in order to keep children "functioning up with their textbooks — to keep them from falling behind."

He said that teachers are provided an in-depth in-service training period if a school chooses to purchase the block kits. He explained that teachers need detailed lesson plans that give them step-by-step procedures in the instruction of the math technique.

The kits are meant as a technique for use with small groups of about six students. Other children in the room, however, are provided with drill books so that they might continue work on the math lesson on their own.

Glassman sees the technique as a way of "restructuring" the students' thinking and added that all children, from those with the most learning difficulties to the brightest, will benefit from the method.

"A child can learn arithmetic rapidly if they can see what you're talking about," he said.

Glassman said the technique has been implemented in San Antonio, Dallas and El Paso and that the feedback has been positive.

Ila Curry, elementary math consultant for Lubbock public schools, praised the technique as a method of building a foundation of math concepts. She said that with use of the method "our problems (in teaching math) would be over. The students just wouldn't know failure."

White House Ceremony Promotes Reading Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — A piercing scream echoed through the East Room of the White House Thursday. The children there laughed.

"You see what you can get out of reading," said the screamer, comedienne Carol Burnett. "It's terrific."

The occasion was a White House ceremony to promote "Reading is Fun Day," a nationwide event to promote reading among youngsters by giving them free books.

At the White House event, as at many similer book giveaways around the country Thursday, children were invited to choose a book to keep from among a large selection.

But at the White House, the hostess was President Carter's daughter Amy, who gave a brief reading and unveiled a poster by illustrator Maurice Sendak.

After speeches by first lady Rosalynn Carter, television reporter John Chancellor, Miss Burnett and others, the 200 or so local school children who were the principal guests were invited to the State Dining Room for cookies, then outdoors to the South Lawn for helium-filled balloons and, of course, a free book.

Chancellor recalled that the first time he met Amy she was reading a book during a White House social event, and said that at some subsequent White House events he had found himself wishing that he, too, had brought along something to read.

Chrysler Makes Cordoba More Fuel Efficient

The 1980 Chrysler Cordoba now being introduced by Fenner Tubbs Co. reflects a careful blending of classic car lines and the needs of the 1980s for lighter, more fuel efficient vehicles, company officials say.

"Building on established Cordoba tradition and styling, the 1980 models continue the heritage of Cordoba in a form that is expected to capture the fancy of personal luxury car buyers," Tubbs said.

The lines, considered by many to make Cordoba a contemporary classic, have been refined in the new sheet metal of the 1980 models, he said.

A wide range of standard and optional luxury, comfort and appearance features and packages for both the interior and exterior allow the 1980 models to be tailored to fit and personal wants and needs of buyers.

The 1980 model lineup will be Cordoba, Cordoba Crown and a special package, Corinthian edition.

Gran Fury, for many years the flagship of the Plymouth line, returns this year as an alternative for price-oriented buyers who are seeking big car passenger seating and trunk space.

Two models have been added to the redesigned Chrysler LeBaron with a two-door coupe on a shorter wheelbase and a new lower price station wagon.

Engineering changes for 1980 are stressed in other Chrysler-Plymouth lines, New Yorker, Newport, Volare, Horizon and the imports, Champ, Arrow and Sapporo.

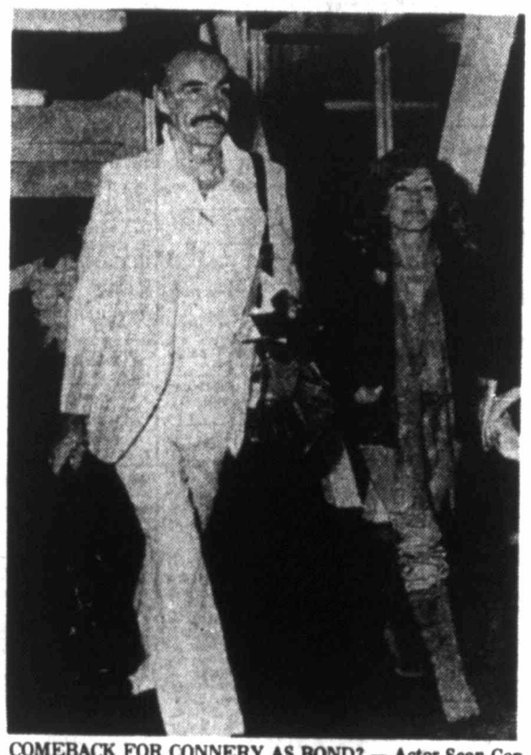
Princess To Appear

MARGARET

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — She doesn't do tuneups, but Princess Margaret will be on hand for the champagne dedication of the new service department at Rolls-Royce of Beverly Hills Ltd.

"Princess Margaret has kindly agreed that she would come and unveil a plaque," John Houlton, vice counsul at the British consulate, said Wednesday. "They're going to have 19 different Rolls models there and some well known Rolls owners. It's going to be quite an evening."

Princess Margaret is visiting the United States on a private trip, Houlton said, and will officially open the firm's new service department Oct. 19.



COMEBACK FOR CONNERY AS BOND? — Actor Sean Connery and wife Micheline leave London's Heathrow Airport Wednesday, enroute for Los Angeles. Connery is to have talks in Los Angeles about returning to the movie screen in the role of special agent James Bond, a role taken over by Britain's Roger Moore after Connery quit. (AP Laserphoto)

Gas Dealer Gives Rare Deal

BERWYN, Ill. (UPI) — A Dime, any old dime, will get you a gallon of gasoline at Harold's Super Shell these days, and the owners think they'll break even on the offer.

But a new dime won't do.

Owner Harold Granby, 60, and his son, Howard, 22, who runs the business in this Chicago suburb, say that if you want 10-cent gas, you have to pay for it in silver dimes, quarters, halves or dollars minted before 1965. They won't take any of the "funny money" issued by the U.S. Treasury after then.

The Granbys started their offer, they say, more to improve their coin collections than to improve their profits.

"Most of the coins we get are 1964 dimes," Howard said. "They're worth about $1.10 each. Regular gasoline is selling for $1.10 a gallon, super is selling for a little over $1.18 a gallon, and unleaded is selling for a bit more than $1.14 a gallon."

Even though those prices may mean a short-term loss, the Granbys figure silver coins have been steadily appreciating. And every once in a while they make a lucky find.

A few weeks ago, somebody bought two and a half gallons of gas with an 1840 quarter, which has a collector's value of at least $11. And one dime they took in had a book value of $23.

So far the Granbys haven't sold one coin.

"We're just locking them up and holding on to them," said Howard. "We'll continue to make the offer to our customers until we get the coins we really want."

'Perfesser' Wasn't So Smart

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Kay Kyser admits he couldn't read music or play any instruments, even though he used to lead a band and made a lot of money at it.

KAY KYSER

He was the "old perfesser" at the Kollege of Musical Knowledge back in the 1930s and 1940s, and in those days he wasn't so free to tell how little he knew about music.

"I brag about it now, but I was anxious to hide it back then," Kyser recalls.

Kyser, 73, was a big star once, playing host on a quiz and music show on the radio every Wednesday night for 13 years. He reached an audience estimated at 22 million people.

But then in 1950, he pretty much dropped out of sight and now makes appearances on the Christian Science lecture circuit. Speaking here this week, he urged his listeners to resist the worldly temptations of fame, ego and money.

Dick Clark Handed Injuction

DICK CLARK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The corporate remnant of the Beatles is going to court.

Attorneys for Apple Corp. Ltd. filed a motion in Superior Court on Wednesday seeking an injunction to prevent producer Dick Clark and ABC from using either the names or employing look-alikes of the Beatles in a planned movie called "Birth of the Beatles."

The civil suit seeks $40 million in general damages and $100 million in punitive damages.

Apple Corp. holds the rights for former Beatles John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr.

Mrs. Wallace Misquoted

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Alabama first lady Cornelia Wallace says she was misquoted by a national publication that reported her saying it is "hard for a short man to be president."

CORNELIA

Mrs. Wallace was referring to last Sunday's issue of Parade magazine in which she was quoted as saying President Carter's "troubles" stem, in part, from his height.

"He needs another couple of inches to project the image of leadership," the magazine quoted Mrs. Wallace as saying. "If he'd been six feet tall, it might've been a completely different story."

But on Thursday, Mrs. Wallace denied making the statement, saying: "I resent very much that any such statement was attributed to me."

SSA Goof Makes Tower Old Man

DALLAS (AP) — Sen. John Tower, in the tradition of Texas politics, might consider himself a good ol' boy, but he'd like the Social Security Administration to know that he's not THAT old, thank you.

Tower wrote the Social Security Administration in Baltimore, Md., about a problem a Fort Worth man was having with his disability benefits.

Somehow, Tower's name was punched into a computer as both the letter-writer and the Social Security recipient.

A letter from Baltimore followed, addressed to Tower. It said:

"This refers to your inquiry of recent date on behalf of Mr. John G. Tower, 4528 Odessa Avenue, Fort Worth, Texas.

"We are giving your letter our attention and will be in touch with you again as soon as possible."

The letter was signed by Stanford G. Ross, commissioner of Social Security, or perhaps by a machine adept at duplicating Ross' signature.

Tower's office pointed out that the Republican from Texas just turned 54, but is neither retired nor disabled.

Miss Goss said she is used to people asking their congressman or senator to write Social Security in their behalf.

That's because they feel they can't seem to get a straight answer, accurate information or efficient service, Miss Goss said.

Broadcasters To Get Advice On Minorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — A broadcast industry group has set up a special panel to advise on its relations with minorities.

The National Association of Broadcasters established a Minority Executive Council, which will assist in efforts to increase minority ownership of broadcast facilities, the NAB said.

The association said the council will suggest specific areas of minority participation in its conferences and propose research projects which would aid the NAB and the industry.

"We are delighted that for the first time the NAB will have an advisory committee ... which will provide input to the board and staff at top level," said Eugene Jackson, council chairman.

Hogs Could Be First Step To Cotton Bowl

AS FAR AS I'M CONCERNED, Texas Tech's Saturday afternoon contest with the University of Arkansas is the pivotal game of the season for the Red Raiders.

Here's why. (Do keep in mind this is entirely speculation on my part. It's commonly known as the if-and-then syndrome.)

Tech is currently 2-2-1 overall and 1-1 in Southwest Conference action. If the Red Raiders can slip past the Razorbacks Saturday and knock off Rice the following Saturday in Jones Stadium, that will make the ol' Red and Black 4-2-1 and 3-1 in the SWC.

With that record there will be several bowl officials around the country keeping an eye on Tech. Obviously, the Red Raiders can't stop there, though.

The Red Raiders have the following week off. That gives Rex Dockery and his staff two weeks to prepare for the University of Texas. And the way the Longhorns play defense, the Red Raiders will need two weeks to figure out how to put points on the scoreboard.

Tech has to travel to Austin to meet the Longhorns — which will be no easy task. But there is one factor that could help the Red Raiders when they go against Fred Akers' troops. The Longhorns have to travel to Houston the following Saturday to face those nasty Cougars in the Astrodome in what many SWC followers have already tabbed the game that will decide who represents the conference in the Cotton Bowl.

BUT SUPPOSE THE LONGHORNS get so excited about the Houston clash that they sort of forget about the Red Raiders. If Tech could upset Texas it would do two things. Number one, it would put the Raiders back in the running for the SWC crown. Number two, it would solidify Tech's chances of winning some kind of bowl bid.

The Red and Black would be 5-2-1 overall and 4-1 in league play. Tech then returns home for Texas Christian and travels to Dallas the following weekend for a battle with Mike Ford-less Southern Methodist.

Victories over TCU and SMU would improve Tech's record to 7-2-1 overall and 6-1 in the SWC. That should give the Red Raiders a sure shot at a bowl game and would give them the opportunity to be playing for all the conference marbles the final weekend of the season when they head to Houston to meet Bill Yeoman's Cougars.

THERE ARE MANY IFS involved should Tech be successful enough to be in the running for a championship come November 24, the first one being Arkansas Saturday.

Tech's offensive unit jelled in the fourth quarter against A&M last Saturday and the confidence gained during that upset victory over the Aggies should be enough to have the Red Raiders rolling out of the blocks against the Hogs.

The fact that Ron Reeves, James Hadnot and the rest of the offensive cast did move the football when they needed to — along with Tech's steady defensive play against the explosive Aggies — is all the reason I need to predict a Red Raider victory over Arkansas.

True the Hogs are 4-0 this season, but they haven't been put to the test yet. Tech should provide that test and I predict the winner of Saturday's game will be the Red Raiders, 24-17.

All four of my SWC predictions were right last week. That gives me 19 of 29 for the season — a winning percentage of .655. Here I go again.

OKLAHOMA AT TEXAS IN DALLAS

The Sooners have a great offense. The Longhorns have a great defense. Both have great tradition.

College coaches always say you have to have a great defense to win championships or the big game. I agreed to an extent, but you must have some type of offensive attack to put a few points in the basket.

Texas' offense has sputtered so far this season. It may not score a point. You can bet Oklahoma's offense will score a couple times.

BAYLOR AT SOUTHERN METHODIST

The Bears have to disappointed after losing that three-point contest to Houston. I don't know about you, but I'd never want to tangle with an angry Bear.

Mustang Mania has seen better days. Baylor by seven points.

Sanguillen Shoots Birds

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pinch-hitter Manny Sanguillen delivered a two-out, two-strike single during a continuing downpour in the ninth inning, scoring Ed Ott with the winning run Thursday night as the Pittsburgh Pirates nipped the Baltimore Orioles 3-2 in the second game of the 1979 World Series.

The victory tied the best-of-seven series 1-1, with the teams moving to Pittsburgh for the next three contests, beginning Friday.

Sanguillen, the seldom-used third-string Pittsburgh catcher, won a battle of nerves with Baltimore reliever Don Stanhouse and drilled the decisive hit on another rainy, bone-chilling night in Baltimore.

Pinch-hitter Bill Robinson opened the ninth with a single to left against reliever Tippy Martinez. Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver immediately went to his bullpen for Stanhouse, a right-hander who saved 21 games this season.

The frizzy-haired pitcher made just one pitch to Bill Madlock when pinch-runner Matt Alexander took off for second. The speedster previously had been thrown out only once all year, but Orioles catcher Rick Dempsey gunned him down.

After Madlock flied out, Ott bounced a bad-hop single off the chest of Baltimore second baseman Billy Smith. Then, Phil Garner, goat of the Pirtes' 5-4 opening-game defeat, worked out a walk on four pitches.

That brought up Sanguillen, one of the last survivors of Pittsburgh's 1971 World Champions. The 35-year-old catcher had batted only .230 this season, with only 17 hits and four runs batted in.

Stanhouse, working deliberately as a heavy mist fell on the already soaked Memorial Stadium field, worked the count to 1-2. Sanguillen, always a bad-ball hitter who has a reputation for swinging at almost anything, fouled off three pitches, then drilled his hit to right.

Ken Singleton charged the ball and his throw to the plate was cut off by first baseman Eddie Murray. Murray relayed to catcher Rick Dempsey, but Ott, running all the way, beat the tag for the deciding run.

Armed with the lead, Chuck Tanner, manager of the National League champion Pirates, went to relief ace Ket Tekulve to nail down the victory. The lanky right-hander, who saved 31 games in the regular season, made quick work of the Orioles in the ninth, striking out Dempsey and Kiko Garcia for the first two outs, then getting Al Bumbry on a bouncer to shortstop.

This was a game filled with drama and excitement, as first one team and then the other took turns building threats only to have them turned back.

The Pirates scored first, nicking Orioles starter Jim Palmer for two runs in the second inning on three straight singles. Willie Stargell started the rally with a single to right and moved to second on John Milner's single.

Murray got one of those runs back in the bottom of the second, ripping a 1-1 pitch from Pittsburgh starter Bert Blyleven down the right field line and just inside the foul pole for a homer.

It stayed 2-1 until the sixth when the Orioles tied the score. Singleton opened with a single and circled the bases on Murray's double to the left-center field fence.

The relay to the plate got past Ott but Blyleven backed it up. It turned out to be a crucial save for the Pirates.

Murray moved to third on a grounder, then tried to score on John Lowenstein's fly ball to right. Dave Parker, who threw out two runners to become the most valuable player in the All-Star Game this year, charged the ball and threw a strike to Ott, cutting down a non-sliding Murray at the plate with room to spare.

Both teams had a shot at breaking it open in the seventh, but both threats

Ex-Red Raider Star Makes Knicks Team

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks placed center Marvin Webster and Earl Monroe on the injured list Thursday to get down to the National Basketball Association roster limit of 11.

Former Texas Tech star Geoff Huston, who was drafted in the fourth round by the Knicks after his senior season last year, is still listed on the roster.

Webster is suffering from tendinitis in his right knee, the same injury that hampered his play last season. His leg has been placed in a cast and he is expecte to be sielined about wo months

Monroe, the team's captain, has an inflammation of the right hip. He will be eligible to return to the active roster after sitting out five games.

The Knicks also announced that center Tom Barker and forward Ron Behagen, both of whom left the club recently to play in Italy, had been placed on the suspended list. New York thus retains rights to the players should they decide to return to the NBA.

A BIG MOUTH TO FEED

Gabriel Rivera, Texas Tech's 300-pound freshman middle guard, captivated SWC press tourists in August by disclosing he hasn't yet run across any vittles he doesn't like. Maybe head coach Rex Dockery remembered that interview a few days ago when trainer Ken Murray approached him with a minor mystery: the same number of football players were eating 20 more pounds of beef at pre-game meals than they ate last year. "Ken," Dockery reasoned, "we didn't have Gabriel last year."

The new Chryslers and Plymouths have arrived in the showroom. So now you can see for yourself why the Chrysler-Plymouth engineers are calling 1980 their year.

Look at the new LeBaron. It's been restyled for 1980 with a new grille and dramatic new hood and roof lines. And Chrysler's engineers have made the 2-door model smaller than last year, while actually increasing interior headroom and rear shoulder room.

Cordoba's totally redesigned for 1980. The engineers wanted to get the gas mileage up, so they made Cordoba shorter—but with more interior leg room—and over 400 pounds lighter than last year. And Cordoba's still a classic personal car.

New Yorker for 1980 is the ultimate Chrysler. Engineered from the inside out to be a true luxury car. New Yorker owners say its luxury and comfort put it in a class with Cadillac or Lincoln.

ARKANSAS' GREG KOLENDA

SWC Player Focus

Arkansas tackle Greg Kolenda and Houston guard Dennis Greenawalt accept the plight of the offensive lineman — a lot of work and very little recognition. They also accept that things still need improving on the offensive line, though the stats don't bear that out. Arkansas and Houston are one-two in Southwest Conference total offense after four games and both are undefeated with tough opponents coming up Saturday. Arkansas travels to Texas Tech where the Raiders last week defeated Texas A&M. Houston helps the Aggies open remodeled Kyle Field in College Station. Greenawalt is a senior from Baytown Lee while Kolenda is a senior three-year letterman from Kansas City. At 6-3, 235, Greenawalt was a consensus all-conference and is the strongest player on the Houston squad. The two members of the front wall talk about their teams and upcoming opponents:

Q — How about rating your offense?

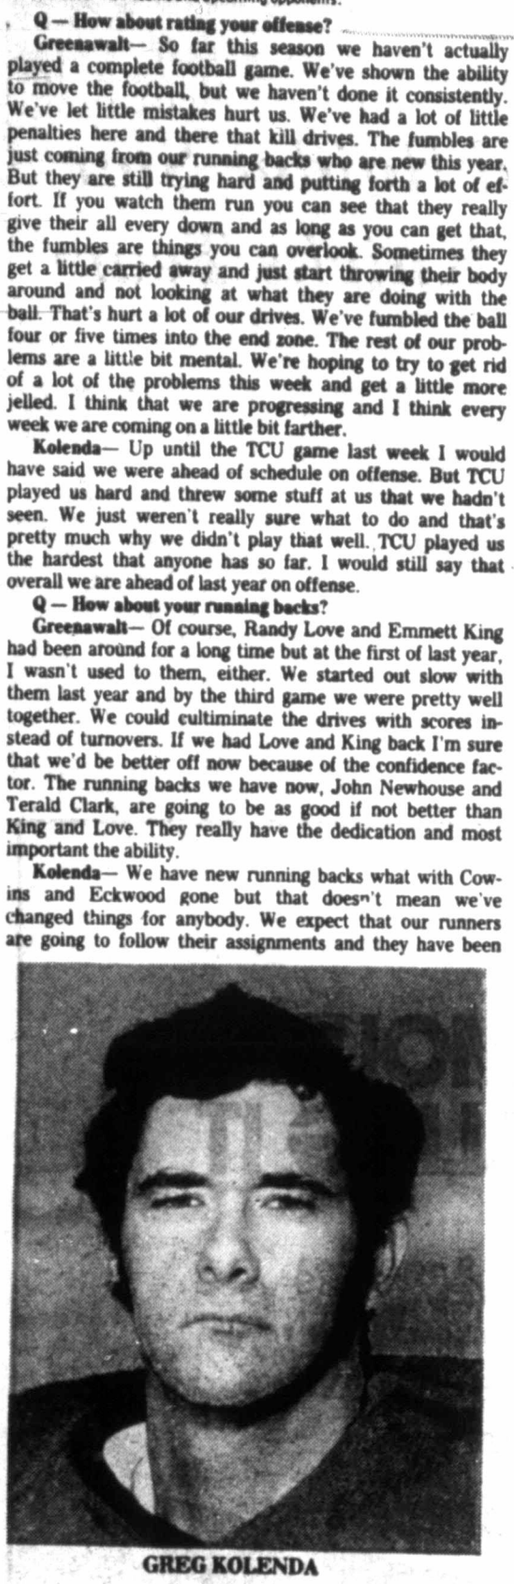
Greenawalt— So far this season we haven't actually played a complete football game. We've shown the ability to move the football, but we haven't done it consistently. We've let little mistakes hurt us. We've had a lot of little penalties here and there that kill drives. The fumbles are just coming from our running backs who are new this year. But they are still trying hard and putting forth a lot of effort. If you watch them run you can see that they really give their all every down and as long as you can get that, the fumbles are things you can overlook. Sometimes they get a little carried away and just start throwing their body around and not looking at what they are doing with the ball. That's hurt a lot of our drives. We've fumbled the ball four or five times into the end zone. The rest of our problems are a little bit mental. We're hoping to try to get rid of a lot of the problems this week and get a little more jelled. I think that we are progressing and I think every week we are coming on a little bit farther.

Kolenda— Up until the TCU game last week I would have said we were ahead of schedule on offense. But TCU played us hard and threw some stuff at us that we hadn't seen. We just weren't really sure what to do and that's pretty much why we didn't play that well. TCU played us the hardest that anyone has so far. I would still say that overall we are ahead of last year on offense.

Q — How about your running backs?

Greenawalt— Of course, Randy Love and Emmett King had been around for a long time but at the first of last year, I wasn't used to them, either. We started out slow with them last year and by the third game we were pretty well together. We could cultiminate the drives with scores instead of turnovers. If we had Love and King back I'm sure that we'd be better off now because of the confidence factor. The running backs we have now, John Newhouse and Terald Clark, are going to be as good if not better than King and Love. They really have the dedication and most important the ability.

Kolenda— We have new running backs what with Cowins and Eckwood gone but that doesn't mean we've changed things for anybody. We expect that our runners are going to follow their assignments and they have been doing a good job of it. Now it doesn't make any difference to me if I'm blocking for an Earl Campbell or a fourth grader, I still have to do the same job. Roland Sales is running well and Thomas Brown is coming on well. It really hasn't taken any kind of adjustment on my part blocking for them.



GREG KOLENDA

Q — Does the lack of attention bother you as an offensive linemen?

Greenawalt— I tell you what — for me it's just gotten to be something I accept. Sure it would be nice to see in the paper that so-and-so had a great blocking game and led the backs into 150-yard games or something like that. I don't think any of us are really bitter about it. We're going to get our recognition if the team does well. So we just try to perform as best we can so the backs can perform as best they can and that makes us look good. I get really excited when they do well. It makes me feel good. It's the measure of my performance.

Kolenda— It doesn't really bother me. When I first came here I knew I was going to be an offensive lineman. I knew then that there was no glory in it. I got my glory from the backs. When Ben Cowins gains over a thousand yards in each of three years, that's my glory right there. When you help somebody like that, you know that you're a part of it and that's all you need in the way of recognition.

Q — How about your Saturday opponent?

Greenawalt— This is going to be the wildest banzai attack we've faced this year. They get total dedication from the people at A&M. I think they're going to be prepared and give it their all. We are going to have to be totally prepared if we are going to stay in the game. We've watched them play and sometimes they play so good it's unbeleivable. I think they'll be ready this week because it will really be their first home game in the remodeled stadium. Anytime they play at home with all those fans, the A&M fans always get so together in their support. I look forward to games like that because it pumps me up when the fans are wild. I know when I look up in those stands and see all those people rocking back and forth, it's going to fire me up something fierce.

Kolenda— We've watched Tech on film and they play a similar defense to TCU. We watched the personnel in the Baylor game and the main thing about Tech is their enthusiasm. Everytime a guy makes a big play he's mobbed like it was the play of the year. So you can figure that they aren't letting down on any play. I took a close look at their freshman, Gabriel Rivera. For a guy who weighs 300 pounds it's unbelievableg how quick he is. There were a lot of plays where he was tackling the quarterback from behind. You'd think a guy that big couldn't do that. He's a fine athlete. But overall, Tech is a fine team. I don't think we'll be looking ahead to Texas, not after last week. The do it at any given time. Take away that interception by Mike Massey and it would have gone the other way. It certainly it something we'll learn from.

Q — Do you see your team as SWC champions?

Greenawalt— I definitely think this year's team is as good as last year's team and maybe better. I think the start of any good offense has got to be up front on the offensive line and we're all back this year except for Chuck Brown, our center. And the one we have this year, Randy Swisher, is stronger but maybe not as quick. Our defense played its best game against Baylor. If they can play consistently and we can quit putting the ball on the turf, we will be better. We have a great start this year and things are going well. We're pleased but not satisfied. The championship is at stake and if we keep it up against several very good opponents, who knows, we might be back in the Cotton Bowl. What happened to us in the Cotton Bowl last year certainly stays with me, especially when someone brings it up. People asked all summer why we blew the Cotton Bowl. It's something that helps us get it in gear a little more, just thinking about it.

Kolenda— I think we can do it. The backs are coming on and getting a little better each week. The line and the receivers are all back and have the experience, plus we have two great quarterbacks in Kevin Scanlon and Tom Jones. I don't think we'll have any problem staying in the picture.

A&M Tabbed Favorite For Basketball Crown

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Southwest Conference basketball teams can't even begin practicing until next week, but SWC coaches were already applying the pressure Thursday on Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf and his heavily-favored Aggies.

"I just hope these other coaches know what they're talking about. I just hope they're right," Metcalf responded at a luncheon to kick off the 1979-80 season.

The season ends here in late February, with San Antonio hosting the SWC tournament for the first time. The tournament had a successful two-year run in Houston.

To a man, the SWC's other eight coaches were picking the experienced Aggies to win the SWC, especially when they could needle Metcalf in front of the large luncheon crowd.

"I think Texas A&M is the team to beat. I think they are a possible Final Four team. So, Shelby, the bug is on you," quipped Baylor Coach Jim Haller.

"I think it will be the best race in the history of the Southwest Conferece, other than A&M going through undefeated and winning it," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis.

"Metcalf will beat you as bad as he can beat you. It shouldn't be called the Southwest Conference tournament. It should be called the A&M Invitational," said Rice Coach Mike Schuler. "If he doesn't win it all, you Aggies can fire him."

Southern Methodist Coach Sonny Allen, whose Mustangs are expected to be one of the SWC's top teams this year, didn't let up on Metcalf: "We feel that if we play up to our potential, we have a chance of finishing second behind the Aggies."

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers, who was in Metcalf's position when he had 6-foot-8 star Rick Bullock, noted that Metcalf returns 6-foot-11 star Rudy Woods and told the Aggie coach, "Shelby, it's the big price you pay when you have a big man."

Metcalf was one of the last coaches to address the crowd. When he reached the podium, his eyes searched the crowd for Dr. Charles Samson, the SWC president and chairman of the powerful A&M Athletic Council.

"I want to get something straight here," said Metcalf, who is entering his 17th year as the Aggie head coach. "I want you to know, Dr. Samson, that these people are just kidding."

Shrine Bowl Set For Monday

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Followers of Texas Tech football will have an opportunity to see the Red Raider stars of the future in action Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Jones Stadium when Tech's junior varsity squad — the Picadors — host the University of Houston junior varsity in the 13th annual Khiva Shrine Bowl.

The yearly contest is sponsored by the Lubbock-area Khiva Shriners and proceeds from the game go to the Burns Institute in Galveston. The hospital is one of 22 Shrine hospitals in North America that treat children with orthopedic problems or severe burns who might otherwise not be able to afford proper care.

"Our players consider it an honor to play in a game that aids such a worthy cause," said Tech junior varsity head coach Jerry Bomar. "The junior varsity program at Tech allows some of our younger players the chance to play in a game situation. This game not only helps the football program at Tech, but it gives our players the chance to help others who are less fortunate."

The Tech junior varsity squad is made up mostly of freshmen who have not had the opportunity to see varsity action. There are also some sophomore and junior scout squad members on the team.

The Picadors played their first of three games three weeks ago against the University of New Mexico junior varsity and emerged with a 10-8 victory. Tech's junior varsity ends its season October 25 when it hosts Ranger Junior College.

Houston's Kittens come into the Shrine Bowl with a 1-1 record. The Kittens lost a 23-7 decision to the Louisiana State junior varsity three weeks ago, but rebounded last Monday and defeated the University of Texas JV 24-6.

The last time Tech and Houston junior varsity squads tangled was during the 1977 season and the Kittens took a 21-15 victory.

"I think we'll be a little more prepared for this game than we were for New Mexico," Bomar added. "We've had a little more time to work with the players than we did before the New Mexico game. Our players are very excited about playing, especially since this will be the first time many of them have played at Jones Stadium."

Defensively, freshmen Jeff McGowan and Rob Wills will open at outside linebackers. Another pair of rookies, Stan Williams and Greg Chafin, will start at the inside linebacking slots.

Four first-year players will make up Tech's secondary. They are cornerbacks Steve Heniford and Calvin Wilke and safeties Keith Davis and Jerry Hatchett.

All area youth-league participants (Youth Football League, Lubbock Soccer Association, etc.) will be admitted to the game free if they wear their jerseys.

MONTEREY INVADES BADLANDS

Matadors, Ponies In Action Tonight

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

When you're down — it always seems like somebody wants to kick you.

And the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes are definitely down. So when the 0-5 'Tors meet Estacado tonight at Lowrey Field, they enter as prime candidates for a good kicking from the Matadors when they two teams meet at 7:30 tonight.

Speaking at the weekly press conference at the 50-Yard Line Restaurant Wednesday, EHS coach Louis Kelley said that tailback Kelvin White and fullback Alvin Davis will both start against Lamesa.

And that's not good news for the 'Tors. White, who hasn't played since the Matadors second game of the year, is averaging 6.3 yards a carry while Davis, who missed the Monterey game, is piling up the stats at an average of 6.9 yards a whack.

Monterey and Coronado are also in action tonight but both travel to different parts of the South Plains. The Mustangs will be in Pampa to face the Harvesters and the Plainsmen journey to Carlsbad to do battle with the Cavemen.

Lubbock High will face Amarillo Caprock Saturday night at Lowrey Field in the the Westerners Homecoming game.

It's also Homecoming for the Matadors. Estacado was off last week and should be rested and healthy. The Mats are 3-1 on the year, with only a 7-0 loss to Monterey to blemish their slate.

"We're in pretty good shape physically," said Kelley. "We were pretty beat up after that Monterey came but the off week helped us.

"We played them in a similar situation two years ago," said the EHS coach. "And we were only ahead 6-0 at the half — so we'll have to be ready for them."

But right now, the 'Tors are reeling like a punch-drunk fighter. Against Dunbar last week, Lamesa only had 21 players suited up for the contest.

And with so many players forced to go both ways, the Estacado speed could take its toll on the 'Tors.

MONTEREY AT CARLSBAD

James Odom knows why its called the "Bad Lands" of New Mexico. Because high school football teams from Texas are usually treated pretty bad when they cross the border.

"Let's just say I'd rather play this one at home," said Odom after being asked his feelings about traveling to Carlsbad for tonight's game against the Cavemen. "They (New Mexico teams) play by Federation rules. That means they can pick up fumbles and run...things like that."

The Plainsmen enter the 8 p.m. CDT contest with a 4-1 mark. It will also be the second straight week Monterey has tackled a New Mexico school. Last week MHS nailed down its fourth win with an easy 49-0 win over Hobbs.

The Cavemen, paced by 9.4 sprinter Kelly Johnson, sport a 1-4 won-loss record. But Odom, as expected, said CHS isn't that bad. "They've scored lots of points," said Odom. "But they've given up a lot, too."

Carlsbad lost its fourth game last week to El Paso Bel Air 35-22.

MONTEREY

Defense

MLB—Monte McCright; OLB—Gordon Lewellan and Tatum; E—Kent Potts, Brad Hill, Mike Gregg; T—Dale Pinkston; CB—Kevin Evans and Arthur Hanna; S—Marty Bubany and Larry Hallman.

Early in the week, Monterey was hit by the flu bug, putting quarterback Kent Potts on the shelf for a couple of practices. But Odom said the MHS quarterback should be ready to go. Also nursing injuries are running back Willie Johnson, back Dwayne Smith, back Ricky Pinkerton and defensive ace Arthur Hanna.

CORONADO AT PAMPA

Of all the City schools, Coronado takes on the toughest foe tonight when it travels to Pampa to take on the potent Harvesters at 7:30 p.m.

Pampa, a favorite along with Amarillo High to win the District 3-AAAA title, enters the game with a 4-1 won-loss mark. PHS could have easily been 5-0, but it forfeited a game to Dumas after officials learned an ineligible player had been used. Pampa had won the contest, however, 22-7.

So how are the Mustangs, 3-2 for the year, going to win the game, Quarles was asked?

"Well," replied Quarles, "I guess we'll just have to out-coach them."

If that doesn't work, though, Quarles said Coronado will "have to control the ball on offense. If we do that we can play with them."

The Mustangs are coming off a 9-7 win Palo Duro last week. In that game, CHS had to march 73 yards with time running out before kicker Darron White was called on to kick the winning three points.

CORONADO

Defense

OLB—Brian Brock and Ahlenius. DE—Kirk Roller and Eric Johnson. DT—Phillip Elizondo and Joe Barnes. MLB—Tim McGee. CB—Ricky Melvin and Kelly Haynes. FS—Harp. SS—David Grevelle.

"That was really a bright spot," said Quarles. "I was pleased with the way we were able to move the ball when we had to."

HOUSTON AT TEXAS A&M

The Aggies will be playing their first game at Kyle Field this season Saturday. That home-field advantage is nice, but I don't believe it's going to make all that much difference. The Cougars just don't care where they win — at home or on the road.

Say see you next year Texas A&M followers. Houston by 12 points.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN AT RICE

TCU better take advantage of the situation Saturday. This may be the last opportunity the Horned Frogs get to taste victory in 1979.

I expect TCU to play a tough game, but I think Ray Alborn's Owls are a better football team, and besides, they want that second win just as bad as the Frogs want that first one.

Rice by six points over Frog Fever.

VIVA THE VEER

Houston's Cougars averaged five yards a rushing play last year, the only SWC team to do so, and the Cougars are averaging 5.1 yards this season.

New Mexico High Schools Licking Texas Wounds

"I still believe we've got a championship caliber football team. And, I still believe we're going to prove it."

For today's quickie quiz on District 4-AAAA football, sports fans, simply identify the coach who uttered those words after last week's results. Was it Jim Cromartie of Hobbs; Dave Perini of Carlsbad, Paul Ehrmann of Roswell, Joe Boyd of Roswell Goddard or Eric Roanhaus of Clovis?

If your answer was Perini, grade yourself an A-plus. If you selected one of the other four coaches, don't grade yourself any lower than a B, because those words could have easily come from any of those 4-AAAA mentors.

To some degree all of the 4-AAAA teams find themselves in the same boat with district play just one week away. Of course, some are merely trying to patch up small leaks while others are already up to their neck in water.

Perini's words about his Cavemen still being a championship caliber football team came minutes after Carlsbad had played a catch-me-if-you-can game with El Paso Bel Air. The Cavemen couldn't catch up, falling 35-22. The setback left Carlsbad with a 1-4 record.

That's the same record being carried by the Hobbs Eagles, a team picked for some lofty accomplishments in pre-season polls but still unable to leave the runway. Hobbs was buried 49-0 by Monterey last week.

"As long as we've got ball games, we've got a chance to turn it around," he said.

Fans who enjoy comparing scores will be able to play that game this week when the same Monterey team that humiliated Hobbs plays Carlsbad in the Cave City.

Last week was a lost weekend for most of 4-AAAA as even defending district and state champion Clovis was sidetracked. The Wildcats dropped their first game of the season 25-0 to Plainview. The defeat brought an end to Clovis' 13-game winning streak dating back to a 1-4 start in 1978.

It won't get any easier for the 4-AAAA fraternity this week. Besides the Monterey-at-Carlsbad bout, Hobbs hosts El Paso Eastwood in its homecoming game; Clovis plays once-beaten Amarillo High; Roswell tangles with highly-regarded Alamogordo and Roswell Goddard has a date with Artesia, the No. 2-rated Class AAA team in the state.

Tucumcari remains the only undefeated team among Southeastern New Mexico leagues, but the Rattlers had a closer-than-expected call (33-30) against AA-Jal last week. Friday the Rattlers will be seeking their sixth win a row when they play Clayton.

Portales, unbeaten until a 12-0 setback at the hands of AAAA Roswell a week ago, attempts to get back into the win column in a non-league bout with New Mexico Military Institute.

Johnson Begins His Magic Tricks Tonight

By The Associated Press

Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Larry Bird, two of the most heralded rookies to enter the pro ranks in years, will share the spotlight tonight when the National Basketball Association opens its 34th season.

Johnson's debut with the Los Angeles Lakers, on the road against the San Diego Clippers, will be nationally televised by CBS (10:30 p.m., CDT). Bird, meanwhile, will be with the Boston Celtics when they open their season against the Houston Rockets at tradition-steeped Boston Garden.

In other NBA openers, it will be New York at Atlanta, Cleveland at New Jersey, Philadelphia at Washington, Indiana at Detroit, Milwaukee at Kansas City, Golden State at Phoenix and Utah — formerly New Orleans — at Portland.

"I expect to do a lot of business with the magic Johnson makes," says the Lakers' colorful new owner, Jerry Buss. "Sports is a business of stars and this youngster has star quality."

The 6-foot-8 Johnson is famous for his infectious enthusiasm, a quality that critics say has been lacking in pro basketball in recent years. His brilliant passing and floor leadership helped Michigan State to the collegiate championship last winter and he was the first player selected in the NBA draft, the Lakers using a choice they had obtained several years earlier from the Jazz.

Johnson, who will team with Norm Nixon in the backcourt, is one of several important newcomers on the Los Angeles roster. Forward Spencer Haywood, formerly of Utah, and center-forward Jim Chones, who spent the last five years with Cleveland, have been acquired to provide rebounding help for center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

San Diego, meanwhile, may be without its prize acquisition, center Bill Walton, who was signed from Portland as a free agent to a $1 million a year contract.

Walton suffered strained tendons in his left foot in an exhibition game two weeks ago and has not played since. He was on crutches briefly earlier this week, and although he said Thursday the pain had nearly disappeared, his status for the opener was questionable.

There's no question about Bird's impact in Boston. Tonight's game is a sellout, and after two dismal seasons the Celtics' fans are talking playoffs once again.

Bird, the 6-9 forward whose scoring and passing carried Indiana State to national prominence last year, became the highest paid rookie in NBA history when he signed a five-year contract worth $650,000 per season. He teamed well with Boston center Dave Cowens in pre-season and impressed all those who saw him.

"You would not realize he makes that kind of money, because he does his job and doesn't make a big deal of it," observed K.C. Jones, the Celtics' assistant coach. "He has lots of smarts. He is relaxed and confident, and those are very important ingredients. You need arrogance with smarts to be a pro player."

Houston is led by center Moses Malone, the NBA's most valuable player and leading rebounder last season.

"I don't intend to stop working," promised Malone, whose club finished one game behind San Antonio in the Central Division last year and was eliminated in the first round of the playoffs. "There may be better players, but I don't want there to be harder workers."

The league has adopted, on a one-year experimental basis, the three-point goal rule of the old American Basketball Association.

Monterey Fems Whip Lubbock

The Monterey girls tennis team whipped Lubbock High 9-0 Thursday afternoon at the Westerner courts. That victory came on the heels of a 9-0 MHS shutout of the Lubbock boys teams earlier in the week.

The toughest match of the day came in the No.1 spot where Monterey's Kelly Martin had to go to three sets before defeating Jennifer Smith 6-3, 0-6, 7-5.

SINGLES

Kelly Martin, MHS, def. Jennifer Smith 6-3, 0-6, 7-5; Katy Weaver, MHS, def. Shawn Hoffman, 6-3, 6-3; Leigh Mires, MHS, def. Karen Smith 6-0, 6-0; Shelly McGill, MHS, def. Lisa Doggett 6-2, 6-2; Cheryl McCorkle, MHS, def. Selah Williams 6-1, 6-1; Suzette Robnett, MHS, def. Charlotte Jones 6-0, 6-1.

DOUBLES

Weaver-Mires, MHS, def. Smith-Hoffman 6-1, 6-1; Martin-Robnett, MHS, def. Doggett-Williams 6-1, 6-1; McCorkle-Price, MHS, def. Smith-Jones 6-0, 6-1.

Western Hills Hoping Better Days Lie Ahead

It has been more than five consecutive defeats that plagues Western Hills Baptist Academy football coach Jim Briggs.

The margins of victory have been less than encouraging as in each of the Eagles' last three games, the six-man football rule that terminates a contest when one team falls behind by at least 45 points has been invoked.

Western Hills, 0-5, lost to Cotton Center 53-8 last Friday and takes on Lake Arthur, N.M. on the road Saturday at 2 p.m.

Briggs said, "but I know we're going down to Lake Arthur to beat 'em.

"They're 3-2 but haven't played near the competition we have. We're ready."

Western Hills has lost four of its five games to teams of the powerful District 3-B. That will work to Western Hills' advantage, Briggs believes.

"All those 3-B teams are state-ranked," he said. "Those are some fantastic clubs. I've never seen so many schools with fast boys.

"But we're learning. This is the second year of our football program and the first year we played competition that was no competition, a parochial schedule. This is like our first year, really."

Elsewhere, Christ the King calls on Abilene Christian tonight at 7:30, while Lubbock Christian High School visits Abernathy, also at 7:30.

OU, A&M, Hogs Given Victory Nods

By The Associated Press

Once again, the college football world is faced with the age-old question — what happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable object?

On the surface, it will be third-ranked Oklahoma's offense, featuring Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims, against Texas' defense, led by tackle Steve McMichael and All-American safety Johnnie Johnson.

"We'll probably have a tougher time against their defense than their offense will against our defense," says Switzer.

The psychological pregame war of words sometimes is better than the 60-minute war between these two neighboring state institutions on the field of the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, the game's annual home.

"It would," says Akers, rising to the occasion, "be a mistake to assume that Texas doesn't have an offense and Oklahoma doesn't have a defense. But I think their offense is better than a year ago. They miss (quarterback) Thomas Lott's leadership, but their staff has done an excelent job adapting to J.C. Watts' abilities. They do more things. They pose the threat of passing, but their running game is so good they have a tough time finding the proper time to throw the ball."

Obviously, Saturday's winner will be the crowd that gets to sit in on what could be another classic in the Red River rivalry. It says here that the winner of the game will be...Oklahoma 20-12.

Last week's score was 45 right, 22 wrong and three ties for a .672 percentage. That dropped the season-long count to 237-92-7—.720.

Stanford at Southern California: Perfect spot for an upset since USC is looking ahead to Notre Dame. But Stanford's looking back to UCLA ... Southern Cal 34-14.

Alabama at Florida: Would you believe the injury-riddled Gators only played 37 people against Louisiana State last week? Florida Coach Charley Pell, a one-time Bama tackle, says he's still in awe of Bear Bryant — and with good reason ... Alabama 31-0.

Washington at Arizona State: The Huskies have a 5-0 record but they really haven't played anybody. The Sun Devils have had a week off to get ready. Upset Special of the Week ... Arizona State 24-21.

Houston at Texas A&M: Who can figure the Aggies out? They lost to Brigham Young and Baylor, then beat Penn State. Last week they lost to Texas Tech so they're favored by a point over seventh-ranked Houston. Somebody must know something ... Texas A&M 20-13.

Indiana at Ohio State: Lee Corso once rejoiced because he made Woody Hayes throw the ball. Now the Buckeyes love to throw it, and Corso won't rejoice ... Ohio State 28-14.

Mississippi State at Florida State: Would you believe the pass-happy Seminoles are doing it with defense? Believe it ... Florida State 27-10.

Minnesota at Michigan: The Little Brown Jug goes to the Big Maize and Blue Machine ... Michigan 24-7.

Arkansas at Texas Tech: The Razorbacks will be looking ahead to Texas. Nevertheless ... Arkansas 21-14.

Louisiana State at Georgia: LSU forsakes the frenzied faithful of Tiger Stadium and gets sandbagged between the hedges of Sanford Stadium. Second Upset Special ... Georgia 16-14.

Wake Forest at North Carolina: Demon Deacons are the nation's Cinderella team and if Carolina is looking ahead to N.C. State, who knows? Strictly on the home field advantage ... North Carolina 27-21.

Oklahoma State at Missouri: Tigers have had a week off to recuperate from the Texas embarrassment ... Missouri 28-17.

Maryland at North Carolina State: Terrapins are terribly crippled ... N.C. State 31-17.

Tulane at Southern Mississippi: Two of the best in South, with some bowl or other casting covetous eyes at the winner ... Southern Mississippi 28-4.

Rogers Takes Lead At Golf Tournament

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Bill Rogers tamed the damp English conditions to beat Britain's Sandy Lyle 4 and 2 over 36 holes in the first round of the World Match Play Championship Thursday.

It was the first time the 28-year-old Texan had ever competed in match play as a professional. He had to master slow fairways and sluggish greens on the rain-soaked, 6,945-yard, par 35-37—72 Wentworth Course, and it took him most of the long day to get into his stride.

Gary Player, five times winner of this unique head-to-head knockout event, again proved himself a master of match play. He was four holes down to Japan's Tohru Nakamura with 11 holes to play, but charged back to win two up.

MONTEREY WHIPS HEREFORD

Monterey ran its District 4-AAAA record to 1-0 Thursday night by defeating Hereford 15-9, 15-13. The loss leaves Hereford with a 0-1 mark.Leading the Plainsmen were Janice Rhea and CArla Hamlet. The win gives MHS a 9-8 won-loss mark on the year.

Chiefs, Broncos Fight For Lead

By The Associated Press

More than a few of Kansas City's sports fans figured they'd be packed into Royals Stadium this time of the year, cheering for their baseball stars in the World Series.

Instead, they'll be across the street in Arrowhead Stadium on Sunday rooting for the surprising Chiefs as they take on the Denver Broncos in a meeting of the divisional leaders in the National Football League's American Conference West.

Sunday's other games are Seattle at San Diego, Pittsburgh a Cincinnati, Buffalo at Miami, New Orleans at Tampa Bay, San Francisco at the New York Giants, Washington at Cleveland, Philadelphia at St. Louis, New England at Chicago, Houston at Baltimore, Atlanta at Oakland, Detroit vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, and — at night — Los Angeles at Dallas. On Monday night Minnesota visits the New York Jets.

Few people seem to be as surprised at the Chiefs' surge to prominence this year as Coach Marv Levy. He has rebuilt Kansas City's defense into a young unit -- average NFL experience just 2½ years — which has allowed a mere 67 points, the fewest in the league by far this season.

"I didn't really think they would be as strong as they are right now," Levy admitted. "They've been playing exceptionally well. I had hoped they would be good because we felt there are good people on the defense — but I think they've risen above what I realistically thought at the start of the year.

"I keep saying that if you have a good defense, a solid kicking game (Bob Grupp leads the NFL in punting and J.T. Smith is the league's third-best punt-returner), and don't make any mistakes or turnovers on offense, you can get the job done."

The Chiefs and Broncos go into the game with 4-2 records, tied atop the AFC West with San Diego. It's Kansas City's best start since the club won five of six in 1971 en route to its last division title.

Is it too soon to begin dreaming of another crown? Levy says yes.

"The race is great for the fans, it's fun," he said. But he added: "I'm not thinking about the race right now. I'm just thinking, 'Let's get ready and beat Denver if we can.'" The Chiefs have lost six straight to the Broncos.

"It's the seventh game of the season and we want to win it as much as any of them, but I can't expect our players to play this game any harder than I expect them to play all the other games."

Last week, while the Chiefs were limiting Cincinnati's winless Bengals to one touchdown and winning 10-7, the Broncos were scoring only one — but winning 7-0 by silencing San Diego, one of the NFL's highest scoring teams.

The Chargers will be trying to wake up their attack against the Seahawks, 2-4, one of the weaker defensive clubs. Seattle, thanks to a pair of timely interceptions including a club-record 91-yard runback for a TD by Sammy Green, beat San Francisco 35-24 to keep the 49ers winless.

While San Francisco tries to break the ice against the Giants, who picked up their first victory last Sunday by upsetting previously unbeaten Tampa Bay, the Bengals will be going from the frying pan into the fire. Cincinnati hosts the Pittsburgh Steelers, fresh from their 51-35 victory over Cleveland.

Chicago's Walter Payton, who picked up 155 yards (685 for the year; 6,001 for his career) and a touchdown in the Bears' 7-0 victory over Buffalo, will try to retain the NFL rushing lead. The Bills battle Miami, trying to snap their 19-game losing streak against the Dolphins. Buffalo, with NFL passing leader Joe Ferguson, is one game behind Miami and New England, the co-leaders in the AFC East.

Richard Inks Contract

HQUSTON (AP) — J.R. Richard, this year's major league strikeout king, signed a four-year contract with the Houston Astros extending through 1983, the club's general manager announced Thursday.

Richard led the National League in strikeouts this season with 313 and became the first NL pitcher to fan 300 or more batters in consecutive seasons since Sandy Koufax did it in 1955-56.

He struck out 303 in 1978 to become the first right-hander in the league to break the 300 mark.

Richard also led the league with a 2.71 ERA while chalking up a season record of 18-13, giving him 74 wins in the last four years.

The 29-year-old pitcher finished second in the league in complete games with 20 and tied for second in wins with 18.

SMU FROSH ROLLING

With SMU's Charles Wagoner ranked fourth and Craig James eighth, this is the second freshman duo from one school ever to rank among the SWC's top ten rushers. Last pair to make it was Texas' Earl Campbell (fifth) and Gralyn Wyatt (eighth) after games of Nov. 2, 1974.

Richard started slow this season, taking a 7-10 record into the All-Star break. But he went 11-3 the rest of the way, with 1.74 ERA in 16 starts. He was voted the league's pitcher of the month for September.

Ponies Garner District Win

Coronado notched a 15-5, 10-15, 15-4 win over Plainview in its first district volleyball game of the season Thursday night.

High-point servers were Laura Richardson and Tammy Edmonson with nine each as the Mustangs advanced their record to 14-6 on the year.

In another district game, Dunbar beat Brownfield 15-13, 15-2 to advance its record to 6-14. Lisa Caviel was the high-point server in the first game with six points while Linda Flowers had five in the second. The Panther junior varsity also won, 15-12, 15-7.

Pirates Outlast Orioles For Win

Madlock beat out a single to third and reached second when Doug DeCinces, who had made two errors in Wednesday night's opener, threw the ball away. Garner was walked intentionally and Mike Easler batted for Blyleven. He walked on a 3-2 pitch, loading the bases with two out.

Now, it was Palmer against Omar Moreno, who had left six runners stranded in the first game. The veteran Baltimore hurler needed only three pitches to do the job, getting Moreno to swing and miss at the last one, a high, hard fast ball.

With one out, Dempsey and pinch-hitter Pat Kelly both walked on 3-2 pitches from reliever Don Robinson. Bumbry struck out, but pinch-hitter Terry Crowley drew another walk, again on a 3-2 pitch, loading the bases.

Baltimore had one more chance in the eighth. Murray opened with his third hit of the game and DeCinces bunted. Robinson tried for the force at second, but Foli dropped the ball for an error.

Lowenstein then drilled the first pitch to Foli, who faked a play at third, causing Murray to hesitate. Then the Pirates' shortstop fired to second, forcing DeCinces. Garner then threw to Madlock at third, trapping Murray in the rundown and completing a double play.

For Friday night's third game, it will be a battle of left-handers, with Scott McGregor pitching for Baltimore against John Candeleria for the Pirates.

Thursday was to have been a day off. But the scheduled first game of the Series was postponed for one night by a heavy rainstorm on Tuesday that turned to snow early Wednesday morning. But the delayed game was played Wednesday night in temperatures that dropped into the 30s.

For Thursday night's game, an announcement was made that the temperature was 52 degrees at game time. But early readings given out at the stadium had the temperature at 47 degrees, and it dropped during the night.

In about the sixth inning, a heavy mist hung over the stadium and it turned into a shower in the seventh that continued through the remainder of the game.

Idalou After Revenge Against Muleshoe

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Both the Mules and the Wildcats went on to take their loop crowns and, by the luck of the bracket, faced each other in the bi-district round of the playoffs.

"This is a big football game, I guess," said unexcitable Tom Ritchey, head coach of the 5-0 Wildcats. "Of course we'd like to play well, we always want to play good against good people.

Muleshoe's Mike Wartes agrees. "We had two good games with them (Idalou) last year. I think that both games were just real good solid football games.

"Last year doesn't mean anything anymore."

What does mean something are the teams statistics from this season. Idalou is ranked No. 5 on the South Plains while Muleshoe is No. 8.

The Wildcats have the best offensive stats of any local Class AA team, averaging 388.0 yards a game. The defense ain't bad either, with a 190.8 mark.

Mule Mania, however, has the upper hand on the defensive stats. Muleshoe has allowed its foes only a measly 156.7 yards a game, while racking up 272.5 themselves.

Quarterback Mike Northcutt, last year's all-South Plains pick at that position, leads the Mule offense while Idalou's yards are split pretty evenly among three players.

Ruben Reyes is the leading runner with an average of 107 yards a game. Quarterback Brad DeBusk is averaging 65.6 passing, but has completed 29 of 51. The other back, Alan Emery, hasn't gained as many yards but is still the team's leading scorer with 58 points on seven touchdowns, 14 extra points kicked and one run across.

"Their record speaks for their team," MHS's Wartes said of the Wildcats. "I think they've got one of the best Double-A teams around. They're pretty balanced, they run, they throw the football.

"I'll tell you what, when they lost (Rickey) Hobbs and (Buckles) Bryant (a pair of running backs who carried most of the Wildcats' weight for the last couple of years), I thought that would hurt them.

"But they've got just super running backs again this year. They pick their holes very well. All it takes is a little bitty crack and they squirt through.

Idalou's Ritchey says the thing he worries most about the 2-1-1 Mules is quarterback Northcutt.

"His ability to run and his abilty to make the big play does a lot for that team," Ritchey said. "With him in there, any time the football is snapped they can go the length of the field."

Muleshoe opened the season with a 7-2 loss to New Mexico's Portales Rams. They then beat Floydada 9-7 on a field goal after time had expired. Finally they blew Tulia out, 24-0 for their first decisive win of the season. But last Friday, after an open date the week before, the Mules were tied by Abernathy 20-20.

"We were naturally disappointed that we didn't win the game against Abernathy," said Wartes. "But they played well against us. Our kids are getting better. I feel like we'll be OK."

Petersburg coach Ronnie Reeger must certainly feel good about his team. After struggling through the early weeks of the season, the Buffaloes have come on strong recently.

They opened the year by tying Abernathy 6-6, lost to Idalou 19-0 and then barely got by Kress 20-17. But that fourth game against Hart was just what the doctor ordered. They blew the Longhorns out 30-0. Last week they opened the district schedule with a 38-0 win over Ralls. Tonight they will really be tested when they travel to Hale Center.

Offense is the key to the Petersburg fortunes. The Buffs are averaging just over 330 yards a game total offense. Leading that wave is running back Mike Phillips, who is rushing at a 138.2 pace.

They're allowing only 138.7 yards a game, that's second-best in all of Class A on the South Plains.

"Our kids take a lot of pride in their defense," said Humphreys. "That's definitely paying off. Our conditioning is paying off too. We do a lot of running in practice. At first the kids thought we were trying to kill them. Now they see how it pays off in the last quarter."

A couple of kids who need all the conditioning they can get are Robert Smith and Gordon Compton. They play both running back and defensive end for the Owls.

Nazareth coach Eddie Hooper must know what it feels like to try and bottle lightning nowadays. Tonight his Swifts take on the explosive Valley Patriots.

"Old Valley's got a good ball club," he said. "they've got some fine athletes. They've got lots of speed and they're pretty big this year too.

"But there's no doubt about it. Speed is their strong point. They've got really fast people at quarterback, both halfbacks, fullback and both ends. We don't have anybody who can outrun any of those kids."

Though it's hard to single out any one player on a team that is averaging almost 380 yards a game on offense, in Valley's case you can probably point at James McNary.

McNary has carried the ball only 28 times this year, but he's gained 497 yards. Taking into account one game he missed with an injury, he's averaging 165 yards a game rushing.

But the name of the game is scoring, and every third time he's touched the ball he's scored, accoring to the averages. He has nine touchdowns for 54 points.

"You can contain, contain, contain, and then they'll break the next one loose and score," moaned Hooper. "Besides McNary, they've got (Roy) Williams running inside, he's a big old kid too."

That's what Hooper says is his team's strong point too. "We've had two shutouts," he said. "We feel like we have a good defense. We're going to need it. Against Valley all you can do is hope for the best, play as sound as you can. When you've got those kind of people in the backfield, you can't contain every play."

Valley coach Ted Giddens says he's also impressed with the Nazareth offense, but for a peculiar reason for a Class B school

"I'm really impressed with the way their quarterback throws the ball," he said. "They run that sprint-out pass, I think that's probably the strength of their offense. They've got two real good ends."

Normally, Class B football teams are not noted for how well they throw the ball.

"Consistently, it would be hard to base your offense on the pass," Giddens said. "But once in a great while you come up with a quarterback and receivers at the same time. They you can have a lot of success because nobody in Class B can defend against the pass either."

The Red Raider volleyball team will be one of seven Texas Division I teams entered in the 20-team Houston Invitational that begins this morning. The Red Raiders are entered in Pool A of the tournament along with Texas-Arlington, New Mexico State, Southwest Missouri State and Illinois State.

Tech, 16-9 this season, is scheduled to begin action at 9 a.m. today against New Mexico State.

Coach Janice Hudson's starting six include Foydell Nutt, Sonja Pittman, Christy Cotton, Irene Solano, Carolyn Tubbs and Rhonda Farley.

Sixteen teams from the South and Southwest, including Texas Christian, Trinity and Southern Methodist, will be on hand for the three-day tourney.

The Tech cross country team is coming off a fifth-place finish at it season opening Oklahoma State Invitational and will be trying to improve today during the North Texas State Invitational in Denton.

McCullough Takes Lead At Southern Tourney

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Mike McCullough fired a 5-under-par 65 Thursday to take an early 1-shot lead over defending champion Jerry Pate in the first round of the $200,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament.

McCullough, who has never won during his eight years on the tour, had six birdies and one bogey over the hilly 6,791-yard, par 70 Green Island Country Club course with half the 156-man field still on the course after an early morning fog delayed the start by 75 minutes.

Pate, aiming for his third consecutive triumph here, has won $188,000 this year without capturing a tournament. The 26-year-old blond from Pensacola, Fla., also had six birdies but bogeyed two holes for his 66.

Two shots back at 68 were Frank Beard, Barry Jaeckel and Scott Simpson. Gibby Gilbert, Mike Hill, Bill Kratzert and Calvin Peete were at 69 while Hubert Green had a 70.

Lubbockite Jeff Mitchell has shot two rounds of 37 for a two-day total of 74, putting him nine strokes off McCullough and with a pack of other golfers.

Five boys and five girls from the High Plains have won state 4-H awards entitling them to expense-paid trips to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago, Nov. 25-30, according to Texas Agricultural Extension Serivce officials.

The winners included Linda Sellers of Seagraves, home environment; Kevin Igo of Plainview, natural resources; Sharon Schumacher of Plainview, bread; Tanya Tyer of Hale Center, recreation; Jeff Kester of Pep, automotive; Wesley Burress of Idalou, gardening; Julie McClurg of Tulia, achievement; Forrest Mote of Tulia, sheep; Kyle Odom of Happy, field crops; and Angie Stark of Tulia, consumer education.

Miss Sellers, a 10-year veteran of 4-H, won the state home environment program for her work in housing and home furnishings.

Miss Sellers has presented talks and method demonstrations about mobile home living and living for the elderly. She also helped remodel her family home.

She has competed in county and district food shows and dress revues and has had projects in clothing, foods, citizenship, leadership, civil defense, food preservation, vegetable production, rabbits, archery and sheep.

Miss Sellers has served in various capacities on the local, county and district levels and was a participant in the national 4-H Citizenship Short Course and Heritage Tour in Washington, D. C. recently.

As a seven-year member of the Halfway 4-H club, Igo has served as president and vice president as well as president and district delegate on the county level.

He has won first place in state competition in conservation of natural resources, community improvement and share-of-the-fun programs.

Igo's interest in conservation stems from topsoil waste due to dust storms and his goal is to make best use of conservation practices and pass the knowledge to others.

The 17-year-old has attended state and national 4-H functions and participated in exchange programs with youths from Iowa, Minnesota and Kentucky.

Igo is a high school senior and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Merwyn Igo.

Miss Schumacher included the nutritional value of bread in the daily diet in her bread projects that have won numerous awards in the Hale County fair and at the state food show.

The 17-year-old Plainview High School senior participated in the National Citizenship Short Course and Heritage Tour and has projects in foods, food preservation, clothing, feeding and showing beef cattle and home environment and leadership.

She won first place in the community improvement demonstration at the 1979 state Roundup and also has placed at county and district food shows. She participated in an exchange trip to Minnesota and attended the Texas 4-H Congress.

Savings of more than $5,500 in auto repair bills over five years have been realized by Kester.

In addition to the savings, Kester's skills have enabled him to obtain various jobs dealing with automotive and tractor repair. He also started a 4-H "wheels" program to help other members learn about autos and auto safety.

Kester has participated in state and national 4-H events and was Hockley County Gold Star Boy last year. He has held offices on the local and county level and has had projects in foods and automotive repair.

A graduate of Whiteface High School, Kester is currently working for Cactus Operating Co. He is the son of Mrs. Alice P. Kester.

As an eight-year member, Burress has competed in the state 4-H Roundup and participated in leadership labs, electric camps and the Texas 4-H Congress.

He has had projects in horticulture, foods and nutrition, wildlife, conservation of natural resources, plant and soil sciences, entomology and leadership.

Burress, 18-year-old son of Mrs. Norma Burress, is a freshman business major at Southwest Texas State University.

A variety of projects, from growing cotton and sorghum to sewing clothes, won the state achievement program award for Miss McClurg.

The Tulia High School junior has been a 4-H member for eight years with projects in foods, clothing, horses, citizenship, leadership, beef, consumer education, field crops, child care, money management and home environment.

Mote will receive a $100 U. S. savings bond from the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

The 18-year-old high school senior has been feeding and showing lambs since 1971 and has won prizes at Tulia, Swisher County, Lubbock and Amarillo shows.

By hosting an annual lamb sale and selling club lambs, Mote hopes to finance his college education.

He has held offices, received honors and attended 4-H functions at the local, county and district levels.

Mote is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wood Mote.

Odom, who is engaged in wheat and sorghum production, is state winner in the field crops program.

Odom's 4-H activities have enabled him to travel to junior leadership camp at Brownwood, district electric camp at Cloudcroft, N. M., Texas 4-H Congress in Houston and an exchange trip to Minnesota.

In addition to field crops, Odom has conducted projects in leadership, citizenship, lambs, horses, beef, dog care, yard and garden care, method demonstrations, judging, foods and nutrition, and student pilot.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A PRIVATE CROP ESTIMATE COMPILED here this week pegs cotton production in the 25-county High Plains area at 3,011,900 bales, up from the independent projection a month ago of 2,914,200 bales.

This still is well below the U. S. Department of Agriculture's September forecast. The last USDA estimate, adjusted to compensate for geographical differences between the government's High Plains crop reporting districts of 1-North and 1-South and the 25-county area, projected the Lubbock territory's crop at an all-time high of about 3.4 million bales.

Private crop forecasters said September weather, which featured above-average temperatures and sunlight and below-normal precipitation, was more beneficial than detrimental. They said at least a "normal" October — with no early freeze, especially in the northern areas — will be needed for the private crop estimate to be achieved.

The acreage standing for harvest has been revised slightly upward to 3,764,900, compared with 3,730,200 a month ago. Measurement services now have been completed in many counties, resulting in adjustments in some acreage estimates.

A particularly puzzling aspect of the yield outlook is the micronaire situation. Micronaire affects the weight of the bolls and the number of bolls required to make a bale. Normally, around 156,000 bolls per acre will make a bale. This year, some experts believe, a larger number may be required in many fields, especially where cotton has been opening prematurely and where it has shown evidence of heavy stress.

This view is based partly on preliminary results of mike sampling and testing procedures. Private crop analysts say early projections point to an average mike of only about 3.2, down from last year's 3.7 and the average two years ago of 4.3. It currently is indicated that only about 35-40 percent of the crop may be in the base mike range of 3.5-4.9, against 52 percent last year.

Not enough cotton, representative of the area, has arrived for USDA classing to support pertinent pertinent mike analysis. Besides, it is remembered that some people got excited in 1973 when some prematurely desiccated cotton produced official mike readings in a few early USDA classings of around 2.9. The final areawide average for the 1973 crop was 4.1.

BUT IF THE INDEPENDENT MIKE ANALYSES are indeed reflective of the crop as a whole and an accurate indication of what is to come, some experts say, it may be difficult to reach the projected yield of 384 pounds.

And yet there also is the perplexing thought of what happened in 1972, when the average mike was 3.1 and the yield reached 457 pounds per acre. If that crop had miked an average of 3.5 or better, with heavier bolls, the yields would have been of whopper proportions.

The 1979 crop set a heavy fruit load in a short time — beginning about the first of August, since comparatively little cotton was set in July — and still is carrying in many fields a large number of bolls. This, however, is a highly variable crop.

In portions of northern Lamb County, for example, prospects are bright. There is talk there of potential yields in the area of two bales per acre. Elsewhere in the county, however, the crop is described as "very poor."

Some cotton in southern Floyd County may yield an average of around a bale per acre, some reports indicate, while farmers in northern sections of the county would consider themselves "lucky" if they made half that. A big crop is in prospect in eastern Dawson County, but cotton in western areas of the county — although improved from a month ago — is described as generally "sorry."

And on it goes.

THIS CROP VARIABILITY MAKES representative sampling difficult and yield and production projections hazardous. Yield uncertainties are compounded by questions on boll size.

If the bolls in general turn out to be on the small side, as some specialists believe may be the case, boll counts could prove deceptive. Some crop scientists, noting fairly widespread evidence of cotton stress at a time when many bolls still were immature, say the principle is somewhat similar to that of a heavily laden apple tree. A tree with a large number of apples will tend to have smaller fruit. Conversely, the apples tend to be larger, other factors being equal, when they are fewer in number.

In any event, few cotton experts feel comfortable in assessing this crop. On top of bollworm damage reports and everything else, the acreage for harvest remains a little on the cloudy side, although this appears for the moment to have come into reasonably sharp focus.

Weather in October of course could affect the final crop outcome. The National Weather Service, in a longer-range forecast issued earlier this week, predicted much-below-normal temperatures for West Texas for the five-day period ending Oct. 19 and above-normal precipitation. Forecasts for much-below-normal temperatures in mid-October or later tend to conjure up speculation about a possible freeze or frost in the northern areas, although this wasn't mentioned by the NWS.

One thing that bothers private crop estimators is that they may have to contend in their November projections not only with assessing the effects of October weather but also with dealing with the possibility they may not have been on-the-mark in the month-earlier appraisals.

IT IS BELIEVED THIS MAY HAVE happened to the USDA in its September crop report. The USDA estimates, it was believed, were high on both acres for harvest and yields, based on Sept. 1 conditions.

A new USDA crop estimate will be released today after the market closes. Many expect it to show a reduction from the month-earlier estimate for the High Plains, despite the belief here that the crop, on balance, improved during September. But the government estimate is beleived highly likely to remain considerably above the new private forecast.

The USDA may wait until more complete figures are available before revising its acreage estimate. The Crop Reporting Board, however, still could temper the possibility that the current acreage estimate may be high through a certain degree of offsetting adjustments in the yield and overall production projections.

It is thought in some quarters the Texas estimate may be slightly below 5.5 million bales, down from 5.6 million in September. A guess on the U. S. crop is around 14.1 million bales, down from more than 14.2 million last month. There are expectations for a small increase in the Far West, a modest decrease in the Southwest, and little change in the Mid-South and Southeast. A slight increase in the Mid-South and a slight decrease in the Southeast wouldn't be surprising.

If achieved, the 25-county estimate would be a big jump from last year's 2,049,100 bales and would compare with the all-time high of 3,215,400 bales in 1977. If accurate, the estimated acres for harvest would be an all-time high, topping the previous record of 3,638,800 acres harvested two years ago.

LIGHT COMMISSION HOUSE SELLING at the close edged cotton futures slightly off gains of as much as 45 points in nearbys Thursday as the three front months finished up 43 points to virtually unchanged.

The firmer market was the result of continued morning trade buying and afternoon local short covering, brokers said. Rather quiet market conditions prevailed, they added, in anticipation of today's USDA crop report.

The USDA reported after the close that U. S. cotton export sales activity continued strong in the week ended Sept. 30. For the current marketing year, sales increased by 212,000 running bales and included 52,900 bales to South Korea as well as smaller amounts to Taiwan, Indonesia, Hong Kong, Bangladesh and Italy.

Export shipments eased to 81,600 bales, of which 79 percent was destined for Asian countries and 12 percent for European nations.

Livestock Futures Mart Drops Via Unexpected Dip In Demand

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 45 to 125 points lower on 31,355 cars Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Weakness in beef at noon and an expected slowdown in cattle demand as a result put pressure on futures as did weakness in gold. There was also profit taking after Wednesday's sharp gains. Trade was again fluid with locals and commission houses on both sides of the market.

Deliveries total 1,737 thus farm. Wholesale beef was off 1 to 2 at 100 to 101 cents a pound, f.o.b river points. Cash cattle were steady to up 25 cents with the best top $68 per hundredweight at Illinois Direct. Slaughter was 125,000 head. About 7,950 head are expected today at the major markets.

There have been 86 deliveries thus far. Cash feeder cattle were steady to off $3 with the best top $98 per hundredweight at Oklahoma City. Receipts at the major terminals today are expected to total 6,650 head.

Increased hog arrivals and mostly lower cash prices combined with weakness in gold and other meat pits to trigger selling after Wednesday's sharp advance. The heavy pace of kill this week easily offset some higher pork prices at noon and discount of futures to cash.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up ½ at 66 to 77 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off $1 to up 75 cents with the best top $37.50 per hundredweight. Kill was 370,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 25,300 head today.

Traders also noted heavy hog runs and kill which easily offset heavy belly storings out of town last week and firmer cash product.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures edged higher Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade amid brisk commercial business and talk of possible dry weather damage to young winter wheat.

Commercial grain firms were both buyers and sellers of wheat, an analyst said. There also was talk that dry weather might impair development of the recently planted winter wheat crop in some Great Plains states.

The exchange reported that wheat trading both Tuesday and Wednesday shattered a previous volume record set in 1933. The new record set Wednesday was 39,070 contracts, or 195,350 bushels of wheat, traded in a single session.

Stock Prices Stabilizing

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices stabilized Thursday after three days of sharp losses as the market reeled from the effects of the Federal Reserve Board's weekend move to tighten credit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 4.70 to 844.62 but gainers led losers by a 5-4 margin in New York Stock Exchange trading.

Big Board volume came to 47.53 million shares, heavy by normal sandards but well under the record 81.62 million traded Wednesday.

"It's a settling down day," said Larry Wachtel, an analyst at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields. "The panic of the last three days has gone away, but it's been replaced by uneasiness."

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.
