Taiwan Pact Ruled Still In Operation

Judge Strikes Down Carter Action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Federal judge Wednesday struck down President Carter's action to end the Mutual Defense treaty with Taiwan, ruling the president must have the support of Congress to terminate the 1954 treaty.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch, in a decision that could jeopardize the United State's improved relations with the People's Republic of China, ruled the president needs the approval from either two-thirds of the Senate or a majority of both houses of Congress to break a defense treaty.

The judge said he was blocking Secretary of State Cyrus Vance from terminating the treaty on Jan. 1, as scheduled.

A Carter administration spokesman said the ruling would be appealed.

Gasch ruled in a lawsuit by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and 25 other conservatives who contended they were denied their senatorial right to advise and consent on the treaty termination.

The administration, at one point sending former Attorney General Griffin Bell to the Federal courthouse to argue its case, argued Goldwater and his colleagues had no standing for the suit and the question was "non-justifiable" because it involved a foreign policy decision.

Goldwater said Gasch had stopped the administration from breaking the law.

"I am elated at the court's ruling," he said in a statement. "It is the first time in this nation's almost 200 years of constitutional history that a federal judge has ruled directly on the power of treaty termination and it means that no American, not even the president, can break the law of the land.

"I think the president was persuaded into doing something that is unconstitutional by persons in the State Department who wanted to increase their power, not to promote his policy.

"I hope the president will now submit a proper request for legislative approval of his policy on its merits rather than continue to battle Congress over an issue of constitutional power."

Goldwater contended that since the Senate had ratified the treaty, then it required the Senate to abrogate it.

The administration contended that the Senate's obligations and rights ended when it approved the original treaty in 1954 and that ending the treaty was an executive branch decision, not subject to Senate approval.

The Senate voted 59-35 June 6 on an amendment by Sen. Harry Byrd, D-Va., approving language saying a president cannot terminate a mutual defense treaty without approval of the Senate.

Gasch said the vote "stands as the last expression of Senate position on its constitutional role in the treaty termination process. By that vote, the Senate rejected a committee substitute that would have expressly approved of the action taken by the president in terminating this treaty."

"The important point is that treaty termination generally is a shared power, which cannot be exercised by the president acting alone," Gasch said. "Neither the executive nor the legislative branch has the exclusive power to terminate treaties.

"At least under the circumstances of this case — involving a significant mutual defense treaty with a faithful ally, who has not violated the terms of the agreement, and the validity of which has not otherwise been destroyed — any decision of the United States to terminate that treaty must be made with the advice and consent of the Senate or the approval of both houses of Congress.

"That decision cannot be made by the president alone."

The case has broad ramifications for U.S. foreign policy because termination of the Taiwan treaty was linked to the opening last March of full diplomatic relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China.

Administration officials have expressed concern that the Peking governmment might break off relations if the defense treaty were reinstated.

The State Department said the decision required no immediate action by the United States.

"We're studying the decision and we'll have no further comment tonight," spokesman Jil Shucke saod. "But we will have something to say Thursday. As we understand it, the decision will be appealed and Judge Gasch's decision requires no immediate reaction from the State Department."

Gasch dismissed the suit once, on June 6, on grounds the Senate had failed to indicate its objection to Carter's action. But within hours, the Senate voted on the Byrd amendment and Gasch granted Goldwater's request for reconsideration.

Marines Flex Strength In Guantanamo Landing

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba (AP) — The U.S. Marine Corps flexed its might on soggy Cuban soil Wednesday in a landing exercise by 1,200 soldiers who surged onto the island's U.S.-held eastern tip aboard helicopters and amphibious craft.

No weapons were fired and no injuries or problems were reported in the maneuvers at the U.S. Navy base on Guantanamo Bay.

President Carter ordered the landing earlier this month. Carter said at the time that he wanted there to be no doubt that the Unites States could stand up to the threat to American shores posed by the presence of Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

Troops Entrench

In the landing exercise, the Marines moved into the 45-square-mile base in a downpour Wednesday morning. The troops then entrenched in positions which they would take to reinforce the base in an emergency.

Military spokesmen said they saw no evidence of Russian surveillance Wednesday around the base — the only United States base on communist soil.

However, the officials said a small Cuban observation boat was spotted about two miles from the base and about 2,000 yards from a Navy carrier early Wednesday. The Cuban boat moved away after a Navy frigate approached it.

Several hundred Navy and Marine personnel worked in support roles behind the 1,200 Marines who landed in helicopters and amphibious craft on the base's rock-strewn Windmill Beach.

Carry Unloaded Rifles

The Marines, carrying unloaded automatic rifles, marched to their positions and a few tanks rumbled into the area.

"It's not bad. It gives us something to do," one Marine, who asked not to be identified, said as he stood outside a bunker.

Officers planning the exercise emphasized that it was a routine maneuver. U.S. officials put the cost of the exercise at $500,000.

"I do not consider it a big deal," said Marine Col. Mark Fennessy, commander of Marines at Guantanamo Bay, said Tuesday.

Carter's scheduling of the landing marked the first time in four years that such an extensive exercise has been held at the base about 500 miles from Havana.

450 Marines Stationed

About 420 Marines are permanently stationed at Guantanamo Bay.

Col. Louis J. Piantadosi, commander of the landing forces, said live ammunition was kept nearby but not loaded into weapons because "this is an exercise. We do not want anybody to get hurt."

The rain delayed some parts of the landing for a few minutes, but Piantadosi said he considered the operation to be a success.

"I think what the exercise does is show the American people that the resolve is there and we have the capability to defend," he said.

"Do not be prepared for a John Wayne-type landing by the Marines," said Lt. Cmdr. Jerry Ryan, one of six public affairs officers assigned to travel from Washington with reporters.

It took a week to move the Marines and supplies from their base at Camp Lejeune, N.C., to Guantanamo. But officials emphasized that in a real emergency Marines would be flown to the isolated base in a matter of hours.

The base, on lowlands surrounded by mountains, is separated from communist Cuba by a 17-mile fence and what the military says is the world's largest minefield.

U.S. soldiers man observation towers facing the remainder of the Caribbean island. Cubans have 21 observation posts around the base.

Manslaughter Trial Defendant Acquitted

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MARCELO Palomo Jr. was acquitted Wednesday afternoon of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the May 31 traffic death of a Lubbock boy.

A 237th District Court jury took only an hour Wednesday afternoon before deciding that Palomo was not criminally responsible for the death of 9-year-old Greg Wilson.

The Wilson youngster and 10-year-old Kenny Ray McDowell were killed when the bicycle they were riding in the 1400-block of Parkway Drive was struck by Palomo's car. Palomo was indicted on involuntary manslaughter charges in connection with both deaths, but stood trial this week for only the Wilson boy's death.

Palomo, who sat with his hands clenched atop the counsel table during most of the three-day trial, took the stand Wednesday morning and calmly told the jury he was not intoxicated when the collision occurred. He added that he had seen the youths riding along the right shoulder of Parkway Drive and tried to avoid striking them.

"It was just something that happened," the 25-year-old defendant said.

Intoxication Ruled Out

In order for the jurors to return a guilty verdict, they first had to find that Palomo was intoxicated at the time of the wreck. If they decided Palomo was drunk, panel members then had to determine whether the defendant's intoxication was the cause of the collision.

Jurors, however, did not deliberate beyond the first question, deciding that evidence did not prove Palomo was intoxicated when the wreck occurred.

Defense counsel Pat Simek told the panel during final arguments that the state's case against Palomo created "a tremendous doubt as to what condition Marcelo Palomo was in the day of the accident."

Simek argued that Palomo could not have avoided striking the youths who were "in the middle of the road on a major thoroughfare."

"There is no evidence to show Marcelo Palomo operated that vehicle in a manner any different from a normal person," Simek said. "His testimony indicates he made every effort to avoid them. It didn't take someone who had had a beer to be faced with that situation."

The defendant had told the panel he saw the two boys as he was going down one of the small hills in the Parkway Drive canyon area. After passing another car, Palomo said, he changed lanes to avoid the youths, but they continued riding the bike across the street and when he slammed on his brakes, he skidded into them.

"Just because two children were killed," Simek told the panel, "that alone is no reason to punish a man more; especially when he did nothing wrong."

Prosecutors Danny Hurley and Everett Seymore, however, argued that Palomo's maneuvers the evening of the wreck were not consistent with the actions of unintoxicated drivers.

Both prosecutors pointed out Palom-

City Rejects Role In EMS Rate Plea

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 40 PERCENT increase in Emergency Medical Services rates does not need the approval of the Lubbock City Council, city officials determined Wednesday.

Lubbock County Hospital District board members had thought they needed council approval to raise the EMS base rate from $60 to $100.

However, Mayor Dirk West said the city attorney determined EMS is an "extension of the emergency services offered by the hospital district" so the city has no authority over the rates charged.

Set Own Rates

"They set their own rates for the emergency room and the hospital," West said. "It's their right to set their own rates for EMS."

The council always has set rates for private ambulance services operating in the city, West said, but the city's authority to establish the rates of an ambulance service run by another governmental entity is unclear.

But the council did approve the last EMS rate increase in April.

Mayor Relieved

West admitted he is relieved the council will not have to rule on the EMS rates.

"We might be put in a position of disagreeing (with the proposed rates) and they might waste our time by asking us to help fund EMS," West explained.

"I'm glad they're not coming — we're not in the hospital business and we ain't gonna get it it," West said emphatically.

Although the city's authority for rate making or setting performance standards for EMS is in a "gray area," West pledged the council "will continue to monitor response times" of the ambulance service.

The hospital district still is seeking the approval of Blue Cross, Blue Shield of Texas for the rate increase because the insurance company approves medical rates for insurance payments.

New Tremor Jolts Area Around L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sharp earthquake measuring 4.1 on the Richter scale jolted a five-county area of Southern California on Wednesday, rattling windows and triggering several minor rockslides.

There were no reports of injuries or damage from the quake, which was centered in the Pacific Ocean just off the coast.

The tremor came two days after a 6.5 shaker in the Imperial Valley — 150 miles to the southeast — caused damage estimated at $18 million.

It prompted so many telephone calls that telephone service was stalled briefly throughout Los Angeles.

The 1:52 p.m. tremor was centered in the Pacific Ocean eight miles south of Malibu, said Melinda Brinza of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

"There was a sudden jolt, like a truck had run into the side of the building right here on the ninth floor," said banker John Hainer, who was at work in a downtown skyscraper.

"The door started swaying. I could hear things rattling throughout the house," said Susan Gillott of Echo Park, a northwest suburb.

Nearer the Malibu epicenter, the Pacific Coast Highway was closed temporarily as a precautionary measure while workmen inspected Malibu's perennial slide area at Big Rock beach, which closed the busy highway for 2½ weeks last spring, sheriff's deputies said. The

CARTER SEES GAME

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter flew to Baltimore Wednesday to watch the seventh and deciding game of the 1979 World Series. Carter, who made the trip by helicopter, joined House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill and Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in watching the game.

City Junior High Damaged By Fire

The blaze was reported to the Fire Department at 8:02 p.m., after three women walking near the school spotted flames shooting out of the dressing room windows on the west side of the school.

Although fire officials have not determined the cause of the blaze, they believe heat from a ceiling light bulb might have ignited the fire in foam rubber athletic mats piled on top of lockers.

Principal Ronald C. Dingle said the fire may postpone today's eighth grade football game between Smilie Wilson and Mackenzie Junior High.

Cut Viewed In Lifestyle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans face a reduction in their living standards if inflation is to be brought under control, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board said Wednesday.

"The standard of living of the average American has to decline," Paul A. Volcker told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress. "I don't think you can escape that."

Volcker said Americans must accept less because they are producing less with the same amount of effort as before, while the nation is losing billions of dollars of its wealth each year to oil producing nations.

"If we fail to recognize that, and people try to catch up with the existing standard of living, or try to increase their standard of living ... up goes the price level some more," he said.

Volcker said his best outlook for inflation this year is to reduce the annual rate of price increase below 10 percent by the end of 1979, down from the cur-

Racial Clash Hits Boston School

BOSTON (AP) — Dozens of black and white students battled with their fists on the steps of racially troubled South Boston High School on Wednesday in the second racial clash in two days. Classes were canceled.

The fistfights involving up to 100 students followed a fracas inside the school Tuesday in which two students, three school aides and a teacher were hurt.

Such flareups have been frequent in the nation's oldest school system since it was integrated under federal court order five years ago.

Later, Mayor Kevin H. White ordered City Hall closed at 5 p.m. to prevent a meeting called by the South Boston Information Center, an anti-busing group, to discuss alleged racial harassment of whites and news media bias.

The meeting was scheduled to be held in the City Council chambers over the mayor's objections. He ordered the building closed when police learned that a sometimes violent pro-busing group called the Committee Against Racism planned to hold its own demonstration there.

The FBI is investigating reports that violence is planned and directed by adults in South Boston, the Irish neighborhood that has been the center of resistance to busing.

Earlier this fall, masked whites stoned a bus loaded with blacks in South Boston and a black football player was shot and paralyzed during a high school game in the white Charlestown section.

Wednesday's fighting broke out when buses loaded with blacks arrived at the school about 8 a.m., police said. A pair of white pupils spotted one of the youngsters and shouted, "There he is," witnesses said.

Several whites attacked the youth, then a large group of white students waiting nearby swept into the crowd of blacks getting off the buses.

"Some of the buses were still full of black kids, and we wouldn't let them off," said Joseph Caggiano, a policeman assigned to the school. "Some of the blacks smashed the windows on the buses with their fists in frustration. Keeping the kids on the buses was the only way we kept this from turning into a full-scale riot."

Estimates of the number of students involved in the fight ranged from 40 to more than 100. No one was arrested or seriously hurt. After police broke up the fracas, pupils inside the school were sent home.

Pipeline Abandonment Laid To Excess Hassle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Standard oil Co. of Ohio had to abandon plans to build the first west-to-east pipeline in the country because it took almost five years and $50 million just to secure permits, the government said Wednesday.

The general accounting office, in a report requested by sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said the pipeline would have moved surplus Alaska north slope crude oil to refinery centers in the central and eastern portions of the country.

But the gao said sohio had to abandon its project because of "adverse effects from delays in obtaining permits and from litigation.

"Sohio said it has invested more than $50 million and almost five years of work in trying to secure more than 700 federal, state and local permits," the report said.

Sohio has selected a long beach, Calif., to midland, Texas, route in January 1975.

But on march 13, 1979, Sohio's Chairman announced it was abandoning the project because of "endless government permit procedures, pending and threatened litigation, and the prospective unavailability of the two natural gas lines which Sohio proposed to covert to the oil pipeline."

According to the gao chronology of events:

•One year passed from Sohio's inception of the idea to the time California began drafting an environmental impact report.

•Nine months pased between the time Sohio applied for an air quality permit and hearings were started.

•It took 15 months from the time the hearings were concluded and an air quality permitk was issud.

•Four years and four months after Sohio selected its route, the California air resources board approved the air quality permit.

"Sohio said that in the three years during which the California environment impact report was in preparation, the costs of the project increased," the report said. According to Sohio's figures, the cost had increased from $728.6 million in 1976 dollars to $982.4 million in 1980-82 Dollars.

Because of the delay, the gao said, the crude was transported by other means, significantly reducting the amount available for Sohio to transport if it had been able to operate its pipeline.

The report said that, as originally projected, Pactex "would have provided marine transporation savings on approximately 1.5 billion barreis of surplus Alaskan north slope oil. Completion by mid-1982 would provide savings on only 0.93 billion barrels. The Delays have, therefore, caused an irrevocable loss of nearly 40 percent of the project's earning power."

School Set On Auto Diagnostic Systems

A two-day school on the operation of Allen automotive diagnostic systems is scheduled Monday and Tuesday at National Distributing Co., 1012 17th St.

The six-hour school, meeting from 7 to 10 p.m. each night, will be conducted by a manufacturers representative, and the $5 fee covers the cost of all materials used in the course.

About 30 students can be accomodated, said Jim Lindsey of National Distributing. Inquiries should be directed to Lindsey at 744-1215.

Other schools dealing with gasoline fuel injection systems and carburetion and emissions control will be conducted late this month and in early November, Lindsey said.

Morning Cloudiness, Shower Chance Forecast

Despite considerable morning cloudiness and a slight chance of thundershowers, the temperature is expected to climb to near 80 degrees today in the Lubbock area.

Although Lubbock has set new high temperature records this month, it's less than two weeks away from the city's average freeze date of Oct. 31.

Other South Plains and Panhandle cities will reach their average freeze date within a few days, including Perryton where the temperature usually plunges to freezing by Oct. 21, which is Sunday.

A weak cold front, extending from the Red River into northwestern Texas, is expected to trigger some scattered showers today.

The South Plains forecast by the National Weather Service, however, notes that area rainfall will be generally less than one tenth of an inch.

In addition to the Texas cold front which blew in from Oklahoma, early this morning a cold front will be moving into northwestern New Mexico and continuing to trigger showers as it moves southeastward into Texas.

The South Plains, positioned between the Oklahoma and the New Mexico shower activity, has a 20 percent chance of rainfall today.

County Commissioners Disturbed Over $60,000 In Dirt Work

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County commissioners have found that $60,000 in uncontracted work is being done at the site of the new county juvenile detention center without their authorization.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw has been in contact with Austin architect Lamar Youngblood and representatives of Page & Wirtz Construction Co. about the work this week. The architect and contractor are blaming each other for the lack of consultation with the commissioners, and the dispute is scheduled for discussion at a Monday commissioners meeting.

The $60,000 for the dirt work on the foundation was not included in the $1 million contract awarded to Page & Wirtz in the late summer.

"At the present time, I feel like the architect and the contractor are good, reputable firms," Shaw said, "and I feel like they will come up with a logical explanation.

"It appears that the thing was not done in the procedural manner in which it should have been done, but we are dealing with honorable people, so I expect it to be brought to a logical conclusion."

Shaw said he was told that the construction site near North University Avenue and North Loop 289 had to be elevated with previously unforeseen dirt work but said the commissioners court, over which he presides, would have preferred to consider possible alternatives.

"We're hearing an amount we didn't authorize," he said, "and from the viewpoint of the commissioners court, it was work that was not done in the right way."

The matter was first discussed at a recent commissioners meeting, but a question arose as to whether the contract authorized the contractor to do any necessary dirt work on a per-unit basis.

Shaw had been gathering more information since then, and he reported Wednesday that the contractor and architect had given different accounts of how the work came to be done.

He said Page & Wirtz reported being authorized by Youngblood, who has direct supervision of the project, to do whatever dirt work was necessary to proceed with the foundation.

But in a Wednesday conversation with Youngblood, he said, the architect told him Page & Wirtz had been told to evaluate what extra-contractual work would be neccesary and to report back to Youngblood before proceeding with it.

Shaw said a representative of Youngblood's firm may appear at the Monday commissioners meeting.

Before the possibility arose in the last meeting that the contract may have authorized the work, Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton said he would oppose the county paying for any work not called for in the contract or otherwise authorized by the commissioners, which would mean Page & Wirtz having to pay the $60,000 out of its profits.

Shaw said Wednesday, however, that he was not ready to discuss what action the court may take.

"We need to get all the facts in and then see what our reaction should be," he said.

Parents Begin Program For Older Handicapped

A group of concerned parents of handicapped persons older than 21 are initiating a program to provide facilities currently unavailable to their children on the South Plains.

"These people are not being served at all because of a lack of representation," said Weldon Ferguson, vice president of the newly formed South Plains Center for Mentally and Physically Handicapped.

The group has received a charter making it eligible for tax deductible donations and making it tax exempt, and has been assigned an aide by U.S. Rep. Kent Hance to help it get on its feet.

Members have toured facilities similar to the one they are proposing in San Angelo and Amarillo and have contacted more than 40 potential clients. They suspect many more "simply are out of touch."

Officers and directors of the proposed center hope the new facility will include a work activity center, production workshop, respite care, extended day care, recreation, and extended sheltered living for all handicapped persons.

A state law became effective in 1975 which requires public schools to provide free, appropriate education for the handicapped to age 22, said Ferguson, "but after that its nothing but a hodge-podge situation."

Limited services in Lubbock for the older handicapped group are provided in Lubbock through Goodwill Industries, the Texas Rehabilitation Commission and Mental Health Mental Retardation Center. The services usually are limited according to degrees of affliction.

Services for handicapped children also are varied depending upon functional capacities of the clients, said group members.

Those defined as "educable" are placed in special classes in public schools, those considered "trainable" attend Ballinger, and those in the "severe and profound" category may attend Milam Children's Training Center, a private school.

The Lubbock State School cares for handicapped persons whose parents have decided they cannot care for their children at home, Ferguson said.

747 Jumbo Jet Practice Run Alarms Some

That inordinately large airplane that spent most of Tuesday circling the city and catching the eye of hundreds of residents wasn't in trouble, as many callers to the Lubbock control tower thought, but was merely practicing.

The huge Braniff International 747 jumbo jet was carrying a new flight crew that was using the extremities of Lubbock International Airport to practice landings and take-offs, said BI vice-president Jere Cox.

"We usually use airports near Waco and Wichita Falls for our training," Cox said. "But Lubbock has the kind of airport we like to use, too. It's plenty big for us and the traffic isn't as thick as some of the airports near Dallas."

"Our phone was ringing like crazy," said John Mydlow, deputy facility chief of the Federal Aviation Administration office at the Lubbock airport. "We don't get many planes that big around here, and I'm sure it caught a lot of people by surprise, especially when it hung around for so long."

Cox said Braniff crews undertake such practice sessions two or three times per week, but that the airline was initiating more crews because of fleet expansion.

Mydlow said several airlines have sent crews here for such practice sessions, and that the FAA gives them their blessing. "They fly in the same traffic patterns as do the other planes and they're not in the way, so there's really no problem," he said.

"Those 747s are so big though," he added. "I think a lot of people got shook because even when it's in the normal approach pattern, it's so huge that it looks like it's almost right on top of you."

Sigma Xi Meeting Scheduled Today

Dr. A. A. Meyerhoff, consultant to Panarctic, Petro-Canada, and the Canada Department of Indian and Northern Affairs, will be speaker at the Texas Tech Chapter of Sigma Xi fall dinner meeting.

Meyerhoff is internationally recognized for his research in structural geology, plate techtonics, continental drift and paleobotany.

Petroleum resources of the Soviet Union and the Peoples Republic of China have been the focus of his recent interests.

Meyerhoff received the bachelor's degree in geology from Yale University and master's and doctoral degrees from Stanford University.

Co-sponsored by Lubbock Geological Society and Texas Tech University department of geosciences, the meeting will be held today at Hillcrest Country Club. Introducing Meyerhoff at the dinner will be Dr. Donald R. Haragan, professor of geoscience.

Company Head Claims More Electricity Needed

CLEVELAND (AP) — The United States needs to double its electric supply from nuclear power in the next 20 years, says the president of Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co.

Robert M. Ginn predicted drastic changes in the economy and American lifestyle if nuclear power is not pursued.

Libs Run For Political Life

IN POLITICS, as in life, the survival instinct is paramount. A politician can't save the world if he loses his seat. And only a defeatist would dwell on the possibility, however remote, that the world does not wish to be saved.

On Capitol Hill, where self-preservation has been raised to an art form, defeatists are in short supply.

However, in the Senate, at least, there are signs of the jitters among the shrinking band of liberal Democrats whose profile is getting low enough to qualify them as an endangered species.

Terms expire next year for 34 senators, 24 of whom happen to be Democrats—half of whom are old-line liberals.

THEY ARE running scared, mindful of the fate which last year befell such like-minded colleagues as Dick Clark of Iowa, William Hathaway of Maine, Floyd Haskell of Colorado, Wendell Anderson of Minnesota and Thomas McIntyre of New Hampshire.

None of whom, you'll notice, is currently around the Washington scene available to save the world.

If the liberals share a common jeopardy, they assuredly do not agree on the most effective way to combat it. The best illustration is the striking contrast between the approach adopted by Sen. Frank Church of Idaho and that taken by Sen. John Culver of Iowa.

Both are lifelong liberals. Both face challenges from conservative Republicans. Both have been targeted for defeat by an array of conservative political organizations. But there the similarities end.

CHURCH HAS abruptly changed course on a number of issues, apparently hoping to catch the conservative breeze prevailing in Idaho right now.

It was Church who first sounded the alarm on Soviet troops in Cuba, and Church who demanded something be done about it if SALT II is to emerge from his Foreign Relations Committee. Never mind that this saber-rattling is by one of the Senate's most famous doves.

John Culver has chosen to sail directly into the wind rather than tacking to run before it. Culver, a burly ex-Marine, regularly shouts his defiance of those who would condemn liberalism to the political scrap heap.

"I have no apologies for my record," Culver says. "I have no intention of 'hunkering down' just because political fashions may have changed." If he goes down to defeat he will go down swinging from the stance he's always used.

From the safety of the sidelines, it's tempting to say Culver's course is the honorable one; Church's a sellout.

What matters to the players is the outcome next November. In politics, it isn't how you play the game that counts, but whether you win or lose.

AN EDITORIAL:

Midland Doth Protest, Too

AS PROTEST demonstrations go, the one in Midland this week was pretty tame stuff. Nevertheless, it might go down as something of a turning point in this era of the protest movement.

What Midland had was a "pro-oil rally" in advance of Wednesday's Big Oil Protest Day demonstrations in such places as Washington, Houston, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Philadelphia.

More than 200 organizations lent their support to the anti-oil campaign. They include the United Auto Workers, the National Education Association, the National Council of Senior Citizens and numerous misguided "public interest" groups.

BY CONTRAST, the Midland pro-oil rally was sponsored by folks who know a little something about the oil business and how to solve the nation's energy crisis. Such folks as the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the West Texas Geological Society.

"It's already been shown that price controls discourage domestic production, subsidize costly imported oil and postpone development of alternative energy sources," Al Dillard, president of the Midland-based PBPA said.

Nevertheless, the anti-oil demonstrators went ahead with their plans in more than 20 cities to vent their misdirected grievances.

They want strict oil and gas price controls and creation of a public energy corporation to explore for and develop oil, gas and other energy resources on federally owned land.

The idea that the government can do anything better and cheaper than private industry can is an idea that survives in the socialist heart despite all evidence to the contrary.

AS THOUGH TO underscore that fact, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries saw two of its members raise the price of crude oil on the very eve of the protest gatherings.

They are able to get away with price gouges precisely because price and other controls in this country have discouraged production that would make Americans less dependent on imported oil.

What the anti-oil demonstrators actually are demanding, then, is more of the medicine that has made them sick. They should be demanding, instead, that the government get out of the way and let the domestic oil industry produce.

That would bring about ample supplies and lower prices in the long run.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Gun Control Law Aimed At Innocent, Not Guilty

WASHINGTON—Eleven years ago, in a reflexive effort to "do something" about the murders of Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy, Congress passed the Gun Control Act of 1968.

It was a fairly typical instance of Federal policy-making under stress—with results that could have been, and were, predicted.

To the surprise of virtually no one who has studied such matters, the '68 law has done virtually nothing to impede the growth of crime in our society.

All the indices of criminal activity—including armed robbery, assault, and homicide committed with a firearm—have continued moving upward at their usual giddy pace, with no evidence that the law has affected the problem in any way whatever.

ALL OF which suggests, to those who favor gun control, that the law didn't go nearly far enough.

A number of congressmen and senators, however, have come up with a different reading of the subject.

They note that, while the '68 law has done nothing visible to alter behavior patterns among the criminal element, it has done a great deal to infringe the liberties of the law-abiding.

In particular, they charge, the law has been used to harass citizens engaged in the perfectly innocent sale and collection of guns, and has given the enforcement agency—the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms—inordinate power to impose unreasonable regulations.

A NUMBER of examples are cited by Sen. James McClure, R-Ida., and Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo.

They point out that, under the existing gun law, there is no clear definition of what constitutes "engaging in the business" of selling firearms and ammunition—and charge that BATF refuses to provide one.

As a result, a given individual may be (1) denied a dealer's license on the grounds that his level of transactions is too small to constitute a business, (2) cited by BATF thereafter for doing business without a license.

McClure and Volkmer give numerous other such examples under existing law: Seizure of firearms that have nothing to do with alleged criminal violations, searches and seizures without sufficient probable cause, onerous record-keeping requirements, enforcement of regulations that were never intended by Congress, and so forth.

TO REMEDY the situation, these lawmakers—along with more than 50 co-sponsors in the House and Senate—have proposed a bill they call the Federal Firearms Law Reform Act of 1979.

The McClure-Volkmer bill seeks to straighten out the ambiguities of the 1968 law, lay down stricter guidelines for BATF enforcement activities, and overturn specific measures the agency has taken which, in the view of the legislators, violate the original will of Congress.

Among other features, the Reform bill would establish clear standards for determining who is "engaging in the business" of dealing in firearms; require BATF to have reasonable grounds for believing a violation of the law had occurred before inspecting the premises of a licensee; establish a "legislative veto" over BATF gun regulations; and create a uniform standard for sales to out-of-state residents.

ALSO, THE McClure-Volkmer bill seeks to strengthen existing law in the other direction, beefing up mandatory sentencing provisions for crimes committed with a firearm.

Under this bill, a defendant committing a second violent offense involving a gun would be ineligible for probation or parole until his minimum sentence had been completed.

In other words, rather than mantling millions of innocent people in rigid controls, McClure and Volkmer would seek to restrain criminal behavior by punishing the guilty. It's a novel idea, but it just might work.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

No Cuban 'Training'

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The Soviet Union's insistence that the combat brigade it keeps in Fidel Castro's Cuba is really a training unit to help sharpen Castro's forces is contradicted by evidence available to U.S. intelligence.

"We have never seen one bit of evidence in pictures or otherwise that the Soviet brigade has ever had any contact whatsoever with the Cuban military," one intelligence specialist told us.

What that means is that the Soviet troops have their own, distinctively non-training mission: either to protect Castro from any possibility of anti-Castro revolt in the Cuban army or by the people; or, to provide some guarantee against the possibility—however remote—of U.S. military action against Cuba.

A footnote: U.S. intelligence in Cuba had reached an alarming nadir before it was stepped up somewhat because of the Soviet brigade question.

It is still marginal at best—only a tiny fraction of its cost in the late '60s and early '70s.

CRYING FOUL, several top Republican foreign policy experts were furious at President Carter for claiming their full support in his handling of the Soviet brigade issue.

According to at least three of the "wisemen" summoned by Carter for help on the Soviet-Cuban question, there never was anything close to unanimity or even consensus in two days of secret White House talks with Carter.

They are former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, who was President Ford's national security director, and John J. McCloy, a top foreign policy operative in many Republican administrations.

They could not believe it when they read stories that the wisemen "wound up in remarkable accord" about what to do. Those reports came from a single high-level source: Jimmy Carter.

The Republicans wanted much stronger U.S. action than Carter accepted, including a firm statement that the U.S. would not pursue detente so long as Moscow continues to subsidize worldwide Cuban intervention.

CHAMPION FOR years of tax reform that would end the "three-martini lunch" and similar tax breaks for businessmen, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has confided to economic aides he is giving up the battle.

In any future Kennedy tax-reform program, "reform" will be centered not on such small-time items as the deductible ("three-martini") business lunch but on substantial items such as stimulation of capital formation.

This is just part of the senator's effort to move toward the center as he nears his announcement of presidential candidacy. The three-martini lunch is one victim, to the joy of many Americans who do legitimate business over lunch.

CAMPAIGN MANAGER John Sears' tireless quest for a prominent moderate Republican to take a high position in Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign nearly succeeded when the widely-respected Gov. Robert Ray nearly accepted but finally decided not to.

Insiders report he was sorely tempted to accept a position of leverage inside the front-runner's campaign before saying no. He has not closed the door to another candidate—most likely Sen. Howard Baker or George Bush.

A footnote: Former Gov. Louie Nunn of Kentucky, one of the few big Republican names to back Reagan in 1976, won't do it this time. He won't announce his plans until after the Nov. 6 Kentucky election for governor (Nunn vs. Democrat John Y. Brown), but he leans toward John B. Connally.

If Nunn upsets Brown, that endorsement could make a big difference in Kentucky's May 23 presidential primary.

FOR THE first time, Soviet military units disguised in mufti have been identified in Afghanistan, where Soviet repression is being fiercely contested by anti-communist Moslem tribesmen.

How large these units are is not known. Their presence in the capital city of Kabul, however, indicates that Moscow fears its puppet Afghan government may come under uncontrollable military pressure from the dissidents.

But the Kremlin apparently fears world anger if it sends organized troops into Afghanistan to join the thousands of Soviet military technicians and advisers already there.

So, to avoid disclosure, the organized units are moving quietly in as plain old civilians—with arms, uniforms and orders ready when needed.

"It was either that," one U.S. official told us, "or it would have to be the Cubans again, and maybe the Cubans aren't ready for Afghanistan yet."

ANDREW TULLY:

Pangs Of Gasohol

WASHINGTON—The debate over gasohol brings a reminder that one of Sen. George McGovern's many appealing qualities has always been his capacity for getting down to his South Dakota grassroots and talking horse sense about a problem.

A happy result of his defeat was that he stayed in the U.S. Senate, where cornfield logic so often is lacking.

McGovern talked people talk again the other day when he fought a good and winning battle in the Senate Agriculture Committee. Before the committee was a bill authorizing $2 billion annually to promote production of energy from farm and forestry products.

THE CENTERPIECE of the bill was, and is, an item to appropriate $1 billion in federally-guaranteed loans and $250 million a year in direct federal loans to produce wood alcohol.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., usually a sensible man, wanted to make less money available for such loans. McGovern took him to the mat.

He said he'd talked with "thousands" of farmers recently and found interest in alcohol fuel production "as intense as anything I've seen in my political life."

Harking to McGovern's intelligence from the nation's heartland, the committee accepted his stipulation that at least half the direct loans must go for small plants that farmers could operate.

Thus, in one fell swoop, the committee guaranteed that the gasohol project would not be bogged down by the bureaucracies of Big Business.

HURRAH FOR George McGovern—and, for that matter, the Red, White and Blue. There is no better way to make sure the ingredient for gasohol is produced with a minimum of horsing around than to put production into the hands of the guys who need gasohol most, people who have always lived with the necessity of getting today's job done today.

Farmers are practical and ingenious. They have to be to survive. Lend a farmer a measly $100 and within days he'll have a family still operating in his backyard, and producing all the alcohol he needs to mix with his gasoline, and probably that of several neighbors. Lend him $5,000 and within weeks he'll be a junior-grade tycoon of the fuel industry.

Call this part-time farmer Mr. X, lest some official idiot order his arrest for daring to resort to individual enterprise.

BUT HE DESERVES a footnote when the history of the energy crisis is written. He built his own still several years ago, and every time he buys 10 gallons of gas for car or tractor he adds a gallon of his own alcohol.

A joyful tinkerer, Mr. X lately has embarked on a project with a friendly auto mechanic to adapt the engines of his 1973 sedan and his 1976 tractor so they'll run on pure alcohol.

"Alcohol is a lot kinder to the air," he says, "and the engine doesn't heat up so much, so a car will last longer."

Wonderful. See to it, farmers of America. You may be our last ruddy hope of delivering a swift kick in the pants to the extortionists of OPEC.

JAY HARRIS:

On Book Learnin'

OUT IN THE west part of Lubbock, possibly more dreams and hopes, and on occasion disappointments, have been recorded than almost anywhere else in West Texas.

There, for more than half a century, "tomorrow's adults" have become the next generation, for better or worse, or something in between.

Here, and on similar campuses, have been molded the doctors and lawyers, merchants and mathematicians, the engineers and homemakers, the teachers and researchers and all the countless other professional people who go to make up today's complex society.

And while each person who finally earns a degree has every reason to be proud of a personal accomplishment, in almost every case, standing somewhere on the sidelines or in the background have been parents and friends, relatives and other students, and professors...

Quite often, they have silently cheered and laughed with, or suffered and cried for "today's youth, tomorrow's adults..."

WE OFTEN wonder if those among the 23,000 students at Texas Tech University, and for that matter those on most other campuses, understand what has been done in their behalf...

By those parents, friends, faculty members, the business system and yes, that oft-forgotten but much maligned John Q. Taxpayer...

A college education is something that since World War II has been taken more or less for granted by most young people. And for most, it has been a goal within reach, with massive parental help, government funds and work on the part of students themselves.

Four years in an institution of higher learning has never been "cheap." And today, American higher education, like Americans in general, is suffering from the effects of double-digit inflation.

A LOT OF people may not realize it, but from 1951 to 1975, student enrollment in colleges rose steadily, often exceeding 10 percent a year.

Then, in 1976, campus enrollment nationwide fell by 1.5 percent. It rose again by only 2.6 percent in 1977, then slumped 0.2 percent last Fall.

Now, as the nation's campuses approach the end of the Seventies, many educators see the Eighties as a period of declining enrollment.

The U.S. Census Bureau tends to support such a view.

According to the head counters, the nation's college-age population should drop 18 percent in the next decade, with most of that in the next five years.

To make up for the loss of an expected 1.7 million 18- and 21-year-olds by 1985, many colleges will recruit harder, including going after the older, adult and non-degree credit students.

THERE ARE many reasons given for the expected drop, other than just fewer potential students.

The main thing, of course, is the increased costs. Another is the growing belief that in certain jobs, a degree as such doesn't mean that much more income.

As a result, many students and their parents have concluded that a college education may not be worth the ever-mounting costs.

However, to this point in time, at least, there hardly has been anything a family wouldn't do in order to see that "John or Mary or Susan or Sam" got a college education. There was no sacrifice too large, no detail too small.

While we have accused many parents of spoiling today's generation by seeing that its young didn't have to go through what they did, most rightfully did see to it that their children have had a chance at a college education, something many parents did not have.

WHICH RAISES the question again. Do students really appreciate the opportunity afforded them in a university, and do they understand the vast amount of money, effort and yes, sacrifice, involved, particularly by parents?

Perhaps in today's affluent society where parents in many instances are able to furnish a car, with credit card, in addition to the thousands of dollars for tuition, board and room, the word sacrifice may seem out of place.

And it is still true that many hundreds of students pay much if not all of their educational costs by working long, hard hours and keeping up full study loads in the process.

But, for those thousands of parents, here and elsewhere, we wonder if it is sometimes taken for granted.

THE THOUGHT came to us the other day as we read a letter from "A Dad." A portion of it follows:

"As another Dad's Day approaches, I still reflect with regret that my student never, in all his years in college, invited me to visit the campus, or take in the ball game on his supposedly big day.

"Had it been proper to invite myself, I would have been there. I did not live hundreds of miles away, only minutes from the campus.

"How I remember with pride how my chest swelled until the buttons almost popped when my student walked across the stage and received that long-sought sheepskin. I still take pride in seeing my student take his place in life, quite successfully, I might add. Our sacrifices have not been in vain!

"Self pity? I don't think so. I think in years to come, my student might realize we both lost. To the present students at Texas Tech or wherever, if your Dad is alive and available, invite him to Dad's Day. You'll both be richer for it..."

To which we add: In addition to books and laboratories, education comes in small packages, sometimes no larger than a hug and a heartbeat...

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

WHICH OF the modern nations would you regard as the most vulnerable in a big war? Some experts contend it's Japan.

If that country weren't visited by two supertankers loaded with oil every day, it's entire industrial machinery would have to shut down.

A bomb on the port of Yokohama would defeat Japan in minutes, they claim.

Hard thought, that. But Japan is not unique. Do you get the feeling sometimes that we do little more than build paper castles between our wind storms?

Am advised that Missoula County in Montana is the only area nationwide where nuclear power plants have been banned by popular vote.

Rex Barnes

IDALOU (Special) — A memorial service for Rex Barnes, 39, of Idalou will be at 1 p.m. today in the Idalou Methodist Church with the Rev. William Wright, pastor, officiating.

A private burial will follow in the Idalou Cemetery under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors.

Barnes suffered an apparent heart attack Sunday afternoon while visiting friends at Buffalo Springs Lake. Slaton Justice of the Peace Arvin Stafford ruled the death was of natural causes.

The Tulsa, Okla., native moved to Idalou in 1966 from Sperry, Okla. He was an electrician for Clark Electric Co. in Lubbock. Prior to working at Clark, he had been employed by Lubbock Power and Light for eight years.

He was a member of the Idalou United Methodist Church and had been a Little League baseball coach in Idalou.

Barnes was married to Janice Fawcett March 10, 1961, in Stillwell, Okla.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, James Rex III and Timothy Michael, both of the home; a daughter, Tonya Faye of the home; his father, James Rex Barnes of Sperry, Okla.; his mother, Margaret Louise Barnes of Crailshien, West Germany; and three sisters, Mary Frances Enevoldsen of Crailshien, Janice Marie Wood of Briggs, Okla., and Judy Gayle Bowman of Sperry, Okla.

The family suggests memorials to the Idalou Little League in care of Idalou State Bank.

Mabledene Brown

Services for Mabledene (Mable) Brown, 57, of Lubbock will be at 1 p.m. today in the W.W. Rix Chapel with the Rev. Verne Rhoads, pastor of Calvary Temple Assembly of God, and the Rev. Jerry Venable, pastor of the Southside Assembly of God, officiating.

Graveside services will be at 4 p.m. today in the Denver City Cemetery under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors.

Miss Brown died at 6:55 p.m. Monday at Health Sciences Center Hospital after a lengthy illness.

A native of Pineland, she was a former resident of Beaumont, Houston and Vidor and had lived in Lubbock since 1968. She was a graduate of Modern Beauty College in Houston.

Survivors include her mother, Lillian Brown of Lubbock; five brothers, Thomas E. of Lubbock, James L. of Denver City, Leonard L. of Houston, A.J. of Austin and Dennis O. of Bridge City; and two sisters, Norma LouViere of Lubbock and Katie Cobb of Hemphill.

Samuel Buckner

Services for Samuel S. Buckner, 79, of 3506 Ave. K are pending at Sanders Funeral Home.

Buckner died at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday at Highland Hospital after a long illness.

He was a farmer and rancher in Saint Jo until he moved to Lubbock in 1944. He was employed by the Texas Highway Department until he retired in 1950.

Survivors include his widow, Alma; six sons, Franklin of Muleshoe, Bill of Fort Worth, Lyndel and Gary, both of Hamilton, and Sammy and Jake, both of Lubbock; five daughters, Ann Hodges and Sandra Gorrell, both of Arlington, Wilma Chisholm of Littlefield, Martha Riendal of Scarville, Iowa, and Beverly Hicks of Oxnard, Calif.; two brothers, John of Hennessey, Okla., and Alex of Lubbock; four sisters, Effie Vice of Carnegie, Okla., Rachel Boyer of Hennessey, Okla., Kit Wilson of Tulare, Calif., and Dot Hawkins of King Fisher, Okla.; 26 grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren.

Committee Rejects Killer Amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a test of support for the SALT II treaty, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 9-6 Wednesday against a "killer amendment" that would have counted the Soviet Backfire bomber as a strategic weapon under the new pact.

Unexpectedly, two Democratic senators — Richard Stone of Florida and Edward Zorinsky of Nebraska — joined Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker and three other Republicans in supporting the amendment.

"I did pretty well," Baker, R-Tenn., said later. "If that 6-to-9 vote holds, the treaty will fail because it takes two-thirds (of the Senate to ratify the pact)."

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, on Capitol Hill to discuss the treaty with Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, said he believes assurances on the Backfire, given by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev at the Vienna, Austria, summit in June, are legally binding on the Soviet Union.

"I believe the treaty will be ratified," Vance said. "I don't suppose we have the votes now, but by the time the final decision has to be made, we will have the votes."

The committee on Tuesday voted to include in the ratification resolution the Brezhnev pledge that the Backfire will not be given intercontinental capability and that no more than 30 will be produced a year.

The Backfire amendment, defeated Wednesday, was drafted by Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, a leading treaty opponent.

Baker, in presenting the proposal, contended Soviet arms control negotiators out-traded the American side. He asserted U.S. negotiators accepted at face value the Soviet view that the bomber is a medium-range aircraft that should not be counted under SALT II.

Sens. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the committee chairman, and Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., said U.S. negotiators achieved the best deal possible.

They said that had the negotiators insisted on including the Backfire in the treaty, Moscow might have succeeded in writing restrictions on U.S. forward-based nuclear weapons in Europe and on cruise missiles.

Biden said that although the Backfire can reach the United States on a one-way mission from Arctic bases, all available U.S. intelligence data shows the bomber was designed and deployed for use against shipping in the North Sea and Atlantic Ocean.

"This would be a killer amendment which at a minimum would delay ratification of this treaty and at the maximum kill it altogether," Biden said.

"The Backfire bomber can destroy every living thing in any city in the United States and should be counted (in the treaty)," Baker argued.

"It would be a decade mistake, a lifetime mistake, a century mistake, a millenium mistake — and even longer — to ratify this treaty as is," Baker said.

Stone called the Baker-Garn amendment "a reasonable proposal." And Zorinsky said he voted for it because Strategic Air Command officers testified the United States will have to prepare an air defense against the bomber.

The committee also voted 13-0 to approve an understanding by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, instructing the United States to consider, as grounds for withdrawal from the treaty, any Soviet action to significantly increase the effectiveness of its lightweight long-range missiles.

In another development, Church ordered an investigation into whether any employee or member of the Foreign Relations Committee was involved in the leak of portions of a highly classified Senate Intelligence Committee report on the verifiability of the SALT II pact.

Priceless Art Objects Stolen From Churches

SAN GIMIGNANO, Italy — Thieves stole priceless art objects from five churches in central Italy, possibly acting on order, police here said.

The thieves stole silver and golden candelabra from the cathedral in this medieval Tuscan town, a 12th century-wooden satue from Monte Tranquillo shrine in Pescasseroli, a paintingfrom an ncient church at Caporciano, artistic sacred objects from a church in Barrea, and 16 candelabra from the church at Vitarenga, police said Tuesday.

Art thefts from churches not protected by alarms have become a major and growing problem in Italy.

Convicted Killer Called In As Murder Witness

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A federal judge ruled Wednesday that convicted contract killer Charles Voyde Harrelson and his wife must appear before a grand jury investigating the assassination of a federal judge and the assault on a federal prosecutor.

Harrelson, 41, who was sentenced in 1973 to 15 years in prison for the 1968 murder-for-hire of Hearne businessman Sam Degelia Jr., is among 36 witnesses subpoenaed to appear this week before the panel. The jurors reconvened to hear the first of the witnesses Wednesday.

The witnesses include Harrelson's wife, Joan Starr Harrelson, officers of the Bandidos motorcycle club and reputed New England organized crime leader Salvatore Michael Caruana.

The subpoenas do not mean the witnesses are targets of the investigation, only that the grand jury feels they can shed light on the case.

U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., 63, known as "Maximum John" for his stiff sentences in drug cases, was cut down by a sniper May 29 as he left his townhouse for work.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, involved in an investigation into an international drug smuggling ring centered in El Paso, escaped serious injury last Nov. 21 when his car was riddled by bullets from a gunman firing out a back window of a stolen van.

There have been no arrests in either case, despite massive investigations. An FBI agent has testified in court hearings that a former member of the Bandidos is "a prime suspect" in the Kerr attack.

Harrelson's attorney, Charles W. Tessmer of Dallas, had sought to squash the subpoenas, calling them "a fishing expedition," "uncertain, indefinite and overbroad" and "unreasonable and oppressive."

But U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears, in denying the motion, said, "You're complaining that this is a fishing expedition. It might very well be. Under my impression of the law, unless a fishing expedition becomes overly oppressive, they can do a little fishing."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Wayne Speck said the grand jury had instructed him to resist Tessmer's motion to quash the subpoenas.

Federal officials and Tessmer said the Harrelsons would return Friday to testify before the panel.

Harrelson, also acquitted in the 1968 slaying of Houston carpet company executive Alan Berg, was discharged from his parole on the Degelia conviction in 1978 and now lives in Dallas. The first trial in the Degelia case resulted in a hung jury.

Harrelson was represented in all three trials by famed defense attorney Percy Foreman.

When approached by reporters Wednesday outside the grand jury room, Harrelson coldly said, "Why don't you leave me alone?"

Informant Says Bike Club Solicited Killing

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An FBI informant says he was asked by members of the Bandidos motorcycle club to participate in the assassination attempt last Nov. 21 on Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, an FBI agent said in a document revealed in court Wednesday.

The document also said that in a police lineup last spring, Kerr positively identified a Bandido as the driver of the van from which a gunman riddled his car. He also selected two other Bandidos, one a convicted murderer, as those who looked like the gunman.

Kerr, 38, was involved in a massive federal crackdown on an international drug smuggling ring centered in El Paso when he was ambushed near his San Antonio home by a gunman firing a .30-caliber automatic carbine from a back window of a stolen van.

More than a dozen shots riddled his car, but Kerr escaped serious injury by ducking behind the dashboard. He was constantly guarded by federal marshals after the attack, but left the Justice Department in August for another federal job in an undisclosed location.

There have been no arrests in the case. But federal grand juries in San Antonio and El Paso, which are investigating drug smuggling, the Kerr attack and the May 29 assassination here of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., have subpoenaed numerous Bandidos and their associates.

The document revealed Wednesday was an Aug. 8 affidavit in which FBI Special Agent Gregg Van de Loo requested a warrant to search a San Antonio residence for the rifle used in the attack on Kerr.

FBI agents searched the residence of Daniel Adam Thomas Jr. on Aug. 8, but did not find the rifle the unidentified informant had claimed was beneath a mattress there 13 days before. Other weapons were found and Thomas, a Bandido associate, was charged with federal firearms violations.

Defense attorney Charles Butts, claiming there wasn't enough legal reason for U.S. Magistrate Joseph F. Leonard Jr. to issue the warrant, unsuccessfully sought Wednesday to have the key evidence suppressed. U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears denied that motion.

"Confidential informant has stated that he was asked by 'Panhead,' 'Boo-Boo' and 'Mario' to participate in killing Assistant U.S. Attorney Kerr," the document stated. Van de Loo said the informant had passed a lie detector test on the information.

The document identified "Panhead" as Bandido Steve Jonas and "Boo-Boo" as Bandido Steve Barbour. "Mario" was not identified.

Barbour, identified by Kerr as the van's driver, was sentenced in 1971 to 10 years in prison for the stabbing death of an Air Force lieutenant during a bar brawl. He was discharged from parole last June.

Several members of the Bandidos, including Barbour, Timothy Kenneth "Timkin" Larson and Richard Paul "Rick the Dick" Ricks, participated in the lineup viewed by Kerr last March.

Kerr had undergone hypnosis in an attempt to enhance his memory of the attack.

Five In Family Perish In Crash

BOERNE (AP) — Five members of a Leoti, Kan., family enroute to South Texas for a funeral were killed Tuesday when their car was overrun and crushed by a tractor-trailer rig, the Department of Public Safety said.

The collision happened on Interstate 10 west of this Hill Country town.

The victims were identified as Severo Reyna, 44; his 33-year-old wife, Irene; and their three children, Yolanda, 16, Margaret, 14, and Esmerelda, 9.

The truck driver, Dale Hood, of Carlsbad, N.M., was treated for minor injuries at the scene.

Investigating state troopers said the eastbound truck collided with the rear of the Reyna car, rolled on top of it, and both shot across the median, the westbound lane, up an embankment and into a fence.

Parts of the car were scattered along the drag path.

Officers said the family had received word that a brother-in-law had been killed in Raymondville. They had left Kansas at 1 p.m. Tuesday to attend his funeral Wednesday afternoon. A surviving 15-year-old daughter lives in Raymondville.

Uranium Mill's Opening Sparks Argument

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — State and federal officials are arguing over who has the authority to decide when the Church Rock uranium mill can reopen.

State officials say the New Mexico Environmental Improvement Division and the state engineer, and not the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, should decide when United Nuclear Corp. can start up its mill.

They are considering a plan that would allow the plant to reopen for 45 days.

But the NRC on Monday ordered the mill to remain closed.

Texas Supreme Court Rejects Jurors' Appeal Against Secrecy

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court rejected an attempt by 10 former Denton County grand jurors Wednesday to erase a judge's order binding them to secrecy forever.

Former grand jury foreman Jim Danielson and nine others appealed that state District Judge Robert Scofield had no authority to hold them to secrecy after the grand jury had been discharged.

The former jurors said Scofield interrupted Danielson as he was reading the jury's report and told the jurors not to report on their investigation of Denton County's fiscal affairs.

Their investigation was prompted by another investigation and eventual indictment of the suspended county tax assessor-collector by the preceding grand jury, according to court records.

On June 28, 1979, 11 of the 12 persons on the Danielson jury assembled in open court to disclose the jury's report.

In addition to the report, 10 jurors contend that they had knowledge of matters involving posible crimnal offenses requiring an investigation by another grand jury.

In their petition to the Supreme Court, the jurors say they knew of possible grounds for suspending or removing one or more county offiicals, and they add that they have information which should be conveyed to the Texas Commission on Judicial Conduct regarding one or more judicial officials.

Scofield halted the reading of the report, stating, "I'm ordering you here, in open court, not to make any reports anywhere, anytime. ... you are bound by secrecy for the rest of your lives. ... if you step out of this room and report this or talk to the press or the sheriff or the auditor or anyone else you will be in contempt of court."

Contempt penalties provide for fines of up to $500 and 30 days in jail.

All 12 jurors filed a federal suit challenging Scofield's order.

According to records, several county commissioners filed complaints alleging the jurors had conspired to violate Scofield's order by filing the federal suit and by releasing to the media the pleadings in the suit.

Judge Arthur Tipps ordered the jurors to appear individually, beginning last Monday, and show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court.

The jurors contend Scofield's order to "perpetually 'gag'" them is void and unenforceable.

They said Scofield was authorized only to advise them upon request and they had not made such a request.

They asked the Supreme Court to discharge what they called "illegal restraints," but the court denied their application for a writ of habeas corpus.

In other action, the Supreme Court:

•Refused to free from the Harris County jail former vice president Ewald Fischer of Lo-Vaca Gathering Co., who would not answer questions about bribes he had allegedly accepted.

•Ruled 5-4 that a wrongful death suit against Lubbock Manufacturing Co. should be tried in Lubbock — rather than Maverick County, where a tank-trailer made by the company crashed and killed the driver and bystanders in 1975.

•Ordered Juan Gorena to jail in San Antonio for failure to pay $1,807 in overdue military retirement benefits to his former wife as part of their divorce settlement.

Appeals Court Sanctions Store Peeking

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said Wednesday it found nothing wrong with a store security guard getting on her hands and knees to peer into a fitting room where a customer had taken a sweater.

"Foley's did not have to furnish her a place so that she could commit theft in private," said the majority opinion upholding a theft conviction.

But Judge Truman Roberts, in a dissenting opinion, said the surreptitious search was unreasonable. Judges W.T. Phillips and Sam Houston Clinton joined in the dissent.

Beth Davidson Gillett had been sentenced to a probated 30-day jail term and $50 fine for stealing a sweater from the Houston department store. Her appeal complained of evidence gathered during what she considered an improper search.

Karen Boysen, a Foley's security guard, testified she saw Mrs. Gillett take a sweater into a fitting room. The security guard testified she entered an adjoining room, got down on her hands and knees and watched Mrs. Gillett put the sweater in a purse and leave.

The guard stopped Mrs. Gillett and detained her until police came.

The majority opinion stated no right to privacy had been violated. The opinion cited signs in the fitting room that said the area was under surveillance.

"This room was for use by the public on conditions established by the business," said the majority opinion written by Judge Leon Douglas. Mrs. Gillett did not have to use the room if she did not agree to those conditions, the court said.

But Roberts's dissent said the posting of signs (which Mrs. Gillett said she did not see) does not make such searches reasonable.

"The only thing that the majority opinion has to say about the sign is that 'the posted sign on the mirror ... would under nearly all circumstances be looked at by female occupants of the fitting room.' (I suppose that this is an implied holding that the judgment would be reversed if the occupant had been male and, hence, less apt to look at mirrors)," Roberts said.

He also said customers expect privacy in a fitting room.

"Under the majority opinion, any Orwellian invasion of privacy could be held not to be a search, so long as a small, cryptic sign has been posted in advance," he said.

Roberts suggested the guard could have done her job by waiting outside the fitting area to see if the customer emerged with the sweater.

"Instead, the investigator chose to gather evidence by engaging in a very intrusive search," he said.

Texas High Court Reverses Decision On Suit's Venue

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a five to four decision, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that Lubbock Manufacturing Co. must be sued in Lubbock County for any attempt to prove its negligence in connection with a tractor-trailer explosion in South Texas which killed the rig's driver and several bystanders.

The court reversed the judgments of lower courts that the wrongful death lawsuit should be tried in Maverick County.

The legal action arose over the April 1975 accident in which a tank-trailer, loaded with liquefied petroleum gas, became disengaged from the fifth wheel of the tractor, overturned and exploded after striking a concrete headwall.

Lubbock Manufacturing was sued by the survivors of Jesus Verduzco, who was driving the rig.

According to court briefs, Lubbock Manufacturing constructed the tank-trailer.

In an opinion written by Associate Justice Charles Barrow, the majority of the Supreme Court agreed, "All acts of the manufacturer relating to the design as well as the manufacture occurred in Lubbock County. Petitioner (the manufacturer) had no connection or relationship whatsoever with Maverick County other than the fact that, unknown to it, the tank was being used in Maverick County at the time of the accident."

The four dissenting justices argued the wrongful death suit should be tried in Maverick County, contending that had been the judicial precedent for handling product liability lawsuits.

CIA Predicts Return Of Gasoline Lines Following Upturn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline lines have disappeared only temporarily and will return, along with major oil shortages, once the nation emerges from its current economic downturn, the CIA predicted Wednesday.

The real crunch probably will come in 1981 or 1982, a CIA official told a House Intelligence subcommittee. And prices will continue their upward spiral unabated, testified Maurice Ernst, director of the CIA's office of economic research.

The subcommittee was also told that world oil prices, which in just the past year have increased 60 percent to around $20 a barrel, could soar to $52 a barrel by 1995 — based on the current value of he dollar.

That possiblity was raised by Roger Glassey, assistant administrator of the Energy Information Agency, who agreed with the CIA projection that world demand would exceed supply in the 1980s.

"Hence, world oil prices may rise faster than the rate of inflation in order to balance world supply and demand," Glassey testified.

The testimony of the two officials before the House Intelligence subcommittee on oversight offered little in the way of good news for those participating in Wednesday's national demonstration aimed at forcing government action to lower energy prices.

Ernst said the CIA found that "the outlook for world oil supply is dim."

"Although oil shortages have disappeared in recent months, they are likely to reappear during the upswing of the next business cycle — perhaps in 1981 or 1982," Ernst testified.

"Thus...the world does not have years in which to make a smooth transition to alternative energy sources," he said. "Consumers are already being forced to make adjustments, not only through higher prices but also through slower economic growth."

Ernst said U.S. production already has begun to decline markedly and he held out little hopes of reversing the trend.

And the situation is equally bleak in other producing nations — both members and non-members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, he said.

The Soviet Union, the world's largest single oil producer at 11.4 million barrels per day, faces stagnating or declining production. "We expect Soviet oil production to peak this year or next and decline thereafter," the CIA official testified.

The Soviets, who now export about one million barrels a day to the West and another 1.9 million a day to communist countries, will likely become a net importer of about 700,000 barrels of oil daily by 1982, he said.

And unlike in the United Sates, energy-conservation efforts in the Soviet Union would do little to cut down on overall demand, largely because there are so few private automobiles there and because the rail-based transportation system is already energy-efficient, the CIA officials said.

Meanwhile, the outlook for oil production in OPEC nations, notably Saudi Arabia, "has worsened considerably. Plans for increasing production capacity have been trimmed or shelved and producing country-governments have imposed production ceilings that are below capacity levels," he said.

In 1977 the CIA issued a controversial report saying that world demand would begin outstripping production in the early 1980s and that the result would be sharp increases in oil prices to effectively ration the available supply.

"We have been widely criticized for being overly pessimistic in our assessment. We turned out not to be pessimistic enough," he said.

Last August, the CIA issued an updated version of the study that asserted that the world "can no longer count on increases in oil production to meet its energy needs."

"Although the world is not running out of oil, current consumption is greatly exceeding new discoveries of oil," Ernst testified in support of that August study.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the OPEC cartel said in Tokyo that oil prices "are bound to go up" after the next meeting of member nations. But Mana Saeed Al Oteiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, said the increase will not be as high as some OPEC members would like. He said OPEC's actions "will reflect a sense of responsibility toward the rest of the world."

Trade Head Says Rallies Harmful

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of a trade association representing U.S. oil companies said Wednesday that "Big Oil Day" rallies in scores of cities were playing into the hands of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Charles DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, made the charge at a guarded news conference behind locked doors at the institute's headquarters while on the street outside, 1,000 demonstrators picketed peacefully with slogans such as "API — Don't Let Us Die."

"The proposals of the Big Oil Day sponsors will harm the very people they are trying to help," DiBona said.

He said price controls on domestic crude oil and natural gas would discourage exploration and make it difficult for alternate energy sources to compete with "artifically low-priced oil and gas."

And that, he said, would make the United States even more depndent on oreign oil and make it easy for OPEC to raise prices.

"They're playing right into OPEC's hands," he said.

DiBona listed in a statement what he said would be the results of adopting proposals of the labor, consumer and senior citizen groups sponsoring Wednesday's demonstrations.

"Their proposals would deprive consumers of 2 million barrels of domestic oil a day, tighten OPEC's grip on the American economy, make gasoline lines more likely, export jobs to foreign countries and increase unemployment," he said. "They would substitute political management by the government for industry efficiency."

DiBona denied an allegation by demonstration sponsors that U.S. oil companies have increased prices of home heating oil even more than for other forms of petroleum.

Baytown Refinery Fire Hurts Five

BAYTOWN (AP) — A fire in a processing unit injured five workers Wednesday at the nation's largest oil refinery.

Exxon Co. USA reported no major processing operations at the 600,000-barrels-a-day plant on the Houston Ship Channel were affected.

"We don't know the exact cause of the fire but it was brought under control quickly by plant firemen and is being allowed to burn itself out," said Leonard Stasney, a spokesman.

Stasney said the injuries were minor, with the workers receiving treatment at the refinery.

Jury Recommends Death Penalty For Steakhouse Murderer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Roger Dale Stafford was convicted Wednesday of executing six steakhouse workers inside a freezer where he had herded them during a $1,300 robbery. The same jury then recommended that he be sentenced to death for the crimes.

The jury deliberated for about an hour during the penalty phase of the case. In considering Stafford's guilt, the jury required only 27 minutes to reach its decision on the six first-degree murder charges.

It is up to presiding District Judge Charles Owens to sentence Stafford, a 27-year-old Alabama drifter. The judge has the option of rejecting the jury's recommendation.

State law provides that the death penalty be carried out with an injection of barbiturates. The only other possible sentence for Stafford would be life in prison.

Oklahoma County District Attorney Andrew Coats, who called Stafford "a little man who wants to be a bigshot," said the mass murder was "the most dastardly crime in the history of Oklahoma."

Stafford's defense attorney said the jury's verdicts, broadcast live in a first for Oklahoma, would be appealed.

The six workers at the Sirloin Stockade were slain late at night on July 16, 1978, as the restaurant was closing.

When the verdicts came in, Cleveland County District Attorney Kay Huff said she has filed three first-degree murder charges against Stafford in connection with the June 22, 1978, shooting deaths of the Melvin Lorenz family of San Antonio.

Lorenz, 38, his wife Linda, 31, and son Richard, 12, were driving to North Dakota to attend a funeral when they were killed near Purcell, about 35 miles south of Oklahoma City.

Prosecutors in Stafford's steakhouse murder trial alleged that he used a gun he stole from the Lorenz family to murder the steakhouse workers. Testimony tracing the history of the gun was not admitted into evidence, however.

Mrs. Huff said she was "withholding a decision" on whether to file charges against Stafford's wife Verna, who testified as the star prosecution witness at the Oklahoma City trial.

In his closing arguments Wednesday, Assistant District Attorney James McKinney contended: "Evidence shows beyond any doubt of any kind that Roger Dale Stafford killed six people."

But Stafford's attorney argued that the prosecution wanted to pin the crime on someone and picked Stafford.

McKinney showed the seven-woman, five-man jury a grisly photo of the blood-stained bodies of five of the six slain workers.

Defense attorney J. Malone Brewer, in his closing arguments, attacked "the believability, the credibility and the probability" of prosecution witnesses. He emphasized the admission by prosecutors that no physical evidence, such as fingerprints, linked Stafford to the mass murder scene.

"Not one single thing put him there except Verna Stafford," Brewer said.

"No question about it, ladies and gentlemen, Verna Stafford was there," Brewer said and called the woman "a murderer."

"We're not here to feel sorry for the people who are dead," Brewer said. "We know they are dead, we're already sorry."

Brewer said prosecutors were trying "to inflame and outrage" jurors by showing them "brutal, bloody and gruesome pictures" of the murder victims.

"Somebody's got to pay for this crime," Brewer argued, saying police and prosecutors are determined to make Stafford pay even though he was innocent.

Multi-Murder Suspect Found Innocent

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Erwin Charles Simants, the often-unemployed laborer who admitted killing six members of a Sutherland family, was found innocent by reason of insanity on six counts of first-degree murder Wednesday.

It was the second trial for the 33-year-old who admitted shooting to death three children and three adults in the Henry Kellie home Oct. 18, 1975, and then sexually assaulting the three female victims.

In January, 1976, Simants was found guilty on all counts and subsequently was sentenced to die in Nebraska's electric chair by Lincoln County District Court Judge Hugh Stuart, who also presided at the retrial.

Lincoln County Public Defender Scott Helvie said the verdict is a perfect example "of why we should not have a death penalty in the State of Nebraska. Mr. Simants, who was convicted once previously of the same crimes, may have been executed by now."

Co-defense counsel David Schroeder said Simants may be evaluated in Lincoln County or may be taken to the Lincoln Regional Center, a state institution for treatment of mental disorders.

"Whether or not he ever gets out, I can't say," Schroeder said.

Simants will be lodged in the Lancaster County Jail temporarily. The next step, authorities said, will be a hearing before a mental health board.

The jury of four men and eight women received the case Monday and deliberated for 18 hours before returning the verdict.

Simants' original conviction was overturned and a new trial ordered by the state Supreme Court last spring on grounds that Lincoln County Sheriff Gordon "Hop" Gilster improperly visited sequestered jurors.

Simants, seated at the defense table as he has been since the retrial opened opened Oct. 1, had tears in his eyes and had to be helped from his chair after the verdicts were read.

Deputy Lincoln County Attorney Marvin Holscher had contended that Simants' actions before, during and after he went to the Kellie home, pointed to his being sane and in control of himself.

Holscher suggested the motivation for the killings was that Simants "wanted to have sex and he didn't care what he had to do to get it."

Simants first killed and then sexually assaulted Florence Kellie, 10, then killed her grandfather, 66, and attempted to conceal the two bodies, testimony showed.

Holscher said Simants had to kill the other four Kellies to make good his escape. The other victims were Henry Kellie's wife, Audrey, 57, their son, David, 32, and grandchildren, Deanna, 7, and David, 5.

Protesters Demand Cut In Oil Prices

By The Associated Press

Union members, senior citizens and hundreds of other Americans demonstrated against the oil industry on Wednesday with protests designed to bring an end to the energy spiral.

An Associated Press spot check showed that the demonstrations were generally low key and, in several areas, the crowds were smaller than expected. There was no explanation why the turnout fell short of predictions.

The protests focused on the budget crunch created by increases in the price of heating oil and gasoline.

"I don't want to freeze to death in the dark," read a sign carried by a picket outside the headquarters of the American Petroleum Institute in Washington, D.C.

About 1,000 retired persons, many of whom had traveled by bus from Delaware, Pennsylvania and Maryland, joined the protest at the offices of the trade association. Among them was Mrs. John Kalembe, 67, of Newark Del., who said she had never walked a picket line before and added: "I don't feel very comfortable doing it."

Mrs. Kalembe was worried about the price of gasoline. If it goes to $2 or $3 a gallon, she said, she and her husband will have to give up their occasional visits to their son who lives in Hickory, N.C.

Wednesday's demonstration was billed as a grassroots "Campaign For Lower Energy Prices." It was sponsored by the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition which said there would be protests in more than 100 cities with activities ranging from "honk-ins" by motorists to marches by peestrians.

The demonstration at the petroleum institute had been expected to draw more than 2,000 people — twice as many as actually turned out. Orgaizers of Cleveland demonstration said they anticipated a crowd of over 1,000; they got 150 people. A lunchtime rally in New York's Greenwich Village drew only 500 persons and organizers of a Trenton, N.J., protest who expected a crowd of 150 got only about two dozen.

Similar but smaller protests were staged up and down the East Coast and in West Virginia, Ohio, Texas, Minnesota, Montana and California.

Oil Offices Targeted

Oil company offices were the targets of several demonstrations and the industry responded with statements of its own. Charles J. DiBona, president of the petroleum institute, said at a news conference in Washington that the organizers of the "Big Oil Day" protest were advocating policies that would reduce U.S. energy production. "They're playing right into OPEC's hands," said DiBona.

The oil companies generally have said that they are not responsible for the rising cost of energy. They blame price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, several of whose members announced fresh hikes earlier this week.

Chairman Of Drive

William Winpisinger, president of the machinists union and head of a campaign to draft Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination, was the chairman of the coalition coordinating the day's activities.

In Los Angeles, Winpisinger told two separate rallies that a special prosecutor should be appointed to study price-setting policies of oil companies. He also called for retention of federal controls on price-setting when he spoke at a rally in suburban Carson, Calif., which attracted 700 persons and another in downtown Los Angeles attended by 500 persons.

Standard Oil Co. of California's San Francisco headquarters was the scene of a protest by 200 persons, and in San Jose, about 400 demonstrators — many of them elderly — congregated outside the Santa Clara County administration building.

Special Session Urged

The 400 persons who attended a similar protest at St. Paul, Minn., heard labor leaders call for a special state legislative session to address the energy needs of the poor.

"No citizen of this state ought to be threatened with the choice of food or fuel," responded Lt. Gov. Lou Wangberg. He said that because the governor was out of the country, it would be decided later whether a special session was in order.

In Providence, R.I., 75 persons demonstrated outside the Rhode Island Petroleum Association. Organizers said the protesters seek a state fund to aid the poor with energy costs.

On Main Street in Concord, N.H., 35 protesters marched near the Carter campaign headquarters and urged supporters to honk. In Bedford, N.H., five representatives of the Citizens Labor Energy Coalition met with presidential adviser Stuart Eisenstat. They said they got no response to requests for lower fuel prices, more production and a special prosecutor.

Meanwhile, in Hartford, Conn., 600 persons filled a church and cheered as leaders outlined a "Declaration of Energy Independence," and called for assurances that the poor wouldn't be left cold.

And in Charleston, W.Va., Gov. Jay Rockefeller could barely be heard over the shouts of 300 protesters at the state capitol. Rockefeller urged them to pressure Congress for one of their requests — an increase in coal production.

Living Standard Cut Predicted For U.S.

rent 13 percent annual rate of inflation.

On another front, Charles L. Schultze, chairman of President Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said the administration will consider its policies successful if inflation falls below 10 percent "in the not too distant future."

Volcker and Treasury Secretary G. William Miller appeared before the congressional panel to explain recent government actions to drive up interest rates and to slow economic growth in the fight against inflation.

American consumers are saving too little and borrowing too much, Miller said. He also said he did not want to "foreclose the possibility" that the government might need to impose direct controls to limit consumer credit. But Miller said he didn't think this action will be necessary.

Miller conceded that the tightening of credit "is a worry" for the housing industry because it could slow the amount of money available for homebuilding and home-buying. But he said the growth of money and credit in the economy has to be restrained.

"If we do it rapidly enough, and forcefully enough, then housing does not have to go into a tailspin," Miller said.

Meanwhile, new Commerce Department figures indicated the housing industry is so far escaping major harm from current economic conditions. It said new houses were being started at an annual rate of 1.88 million in Setpember, up from 1.81 million in August, a gain of 4.2 percent.

However, housing industry representatives have predicted homebuilding will be hurt in future months by the Federal Reserve Board's Oct. 6 decision to push interest rates up sharply.

In other economic developments:

— Carter's new 18-member Pay Advisory Committee held its first meeting and was told by Alfred Kahn, the president's chief inflation adviser, that its recommendations on new wage guidelines for 1980 will be given "very, very serious consideration."

— The Commerce Department said Americans' personal income increased $12.2 billion in September, a modest 0.6 percent gain from August that was well below the rate of inflation.

— The Federal Reserve Board said U.S. manufacturers operated at 85.2 percent of capacity last month, a gain of 0.3 percent from August, but still down 2 percent from the 1979 peak of 87.1 percent in March.

The economy has rebounded slightly from the slow second quarter growth, when the nation's gross national product declined at an annual rate of 2.3 percent. This led many economists and government officials, including Miller, to conclude that a recession was under way.

The Commerce Department will report on third quarter GNP Friday. And this is expected to show that the economy returned to positive growth in the period. However, there has been nothing to alter Miller's expectation that a recession is imminent.

Volcker told the congressional panel that "it looks as though the real downturn has been somewhat delayed." He said the outlook for unemployment, now 5.8 percent, has not been made worse by the Fed's action to drive up interest rates.

Schultze told the pay board meeting that the immediate objective of the government's economic policies is "to keep inflation from spreading and keep double-digit inflation from being widespread."

He urged the panel, made up of business, labor and public sector representatives, to help keep higher prices for energy and housing from "spilling over" into the rest of the economy.

Both Miller and Volcker warned of the dangers to the economy if inflation is not controlled. Volcker said the government's recent actions may help discourage oil exporting nations from increasing oil prices again this year because these policies should help strengthen the dollar.

"Our actions have to some degree diminished that risk," Volcker said.

MARTIAL LAW IMPOSED

SEOUL (AP) — The government imposed martial law in Pusan, the nation's second largest city, after 3,000 demonstrators converged on government and private offices and set fire to several buildings and police cars, authorities said Wednesday.

New Quake Jolts Area Near L.A.

slide area is buttressed by a 25-foot-high steel and timber fence.

Several minor rockslides were reported near the tunnel on Malibu Canyon Road, deputies said, but the highway remained open.

"My whole house was shaking. I thought the windows were about to fall out," said Culver City resident Denise Holt. "I haven't felt one like that in ages. It lasted a good five or 10 seconds."

"Nothing exciting," said Sgt. Tom Pitkin of the Los Angeles County sheriff's Malibu substation.

A Hollywood resident reported feeling one minor aftershock about an hour after the first tremor.

General Telephone, which serves the Malibu-Santa Monica area, said phone service in the area was momentarily overloaded when excited residents tried to dial at the same time after the tremor, said company spokesman Chuck Hallloran. The problem was quickly cleared up, he said.

Pacific Telephone customers in the downtown area also noticed delays in getting dial tones for about 30 minutes after the quake.

Quake Area Described

The quake was felt as far away as San Bernardino and Riverside, 70 miles to the east, as well as in Orange and Ventura counties.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. An earthquake of 4 on the Richter scale can cause moderate damage.

Despite an occasional nerve-rattling aftershock, life in the Imperial Valley began returning to normal Wednesday, two days after a violent earthquake shattered the calm of this farming region.

The state Office of Emergency Services increased its damage estimate from Monday's 6.5 Richter scale ground-shaker to more than $18 million for public and private property.

Structures Checked

An army of at least 75 structural engineers and inspectors — including about 50 from outside counties and state agencies — checked damaged buildings, bridges and highways.

Many downtown stores in El Centro, their floors littered with fallen merchandise and glass from broken windows, remained closed Wednesday, and telephones were still down in some outlying areas. A number of uneasy residents slept outdoors for the second straight night.

But schools reopened, barricades around the downtown area were taken down and most major supermarkets and department stores were open.

Most persons injured in the quake were released from hospitals, and the American Red Cross was caring for only about a dozen people whose homes were severely damaged.

The 4:16 p.m. quake was followed by a series of aftershocks, including a 5.2-magnitude shock Tuesday, almost 24 hours to the minute after the original jolt. Occasional aftershocks are expected for weeks.

Fire fighters drained 630,000 gallons of gasoline and diesel fuel from damaged tanks, eliminating a fire hazard. And the flow of water was gradually restored to the All-American Canal, a major irrigation source for the agricultural valley.

Banks of the canal caved in during the quake and the water flow dropped from its normal 3,700 cubic feet per second to 700 cubic feet per second — barely enough for municipal needs.

Manslaughter Trial Defendant Acquitted

o's testimony that he stopped at a Clovis Highway club after work and had four beers before heading for his 229 Beech St. residence.

"He (Palomo) testified he saw those kids well ahead of the collision point and if his judgment hadn't been impaired by the voluntary use of alcohol, that collision wouldn't have happened," Seymore argued.

Pointing at an aerial photograph of Parkway Drive, the energetic young prosecutor told the panel, "This roadway is not hilly and obstructed as Mr. Simek would have you believe.

"Those boys were highly visible at eight o'clock in the evening on May 31, one day before the start of summer vacation those boys never saw," Seymore continued, his voice growing louder.

Lead prosecutor Hurley also vigorously attacked the defense argument that the collision was unavoidable and that Palomo was driving normally.

Refering to the defendant's testimony of changing lanes before the collision, Hurley asked the jury, "Is it normal to be weaving in and out of traffic when he saw those kids approximately 900 feet from the point of impact?

"I submit to you that it would be normal to slow down so you won't hit those children and knock them through the air 164 feet," Hurley argued.

"Misplaced Sympathy" Claimed

Hurley also called Simek's request that Palomo, a father of two, not be punished for the unavoidable "misplaced sympathy."

"If you have any sympathy, put it where it ought to be placed — with Greg Wilson, who'll never get to enjoy life, and his family," Hurley said.

Much of the state's case against Palomo relied on a breathalyzer reading taken after the wreck. The defendant registered a .11 percent blood-alcohol level reading on the machine. The legal presumption of intoxication is a .10 reading on the breathalyzer.

Palomo, however, testified Wednesday that police officers who admistered the breathalyzer test and arrested him for being drunk and involved in an accident first told him he had passed the test. Of the breathalyzer reading, Palomo said, "Maybe they didn't set it right."

Pact Ruled In Force On Taiwan

mentarian, argued the resolution was never acted upon, is not final and the Goldwater suit lacked standing.

Gasch, in a 30-page decision, rejected administration arguments that there were precedents for a president unilaterally terminating a treaty.

"None of these examples involves a mutual defense treaty, nor any treaty whose national and international significance approaches that of the 1954 mutual defense treaty," he said.

Gasch said most of the precedents involved mutual action between the president and Congress.

Following the Byrd vote, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, introduced an amendment that would exempt the Mutual Defense treaty with Taiwan from any requirement of congressional approval, while Goldwater introduced an amendment to nullify Carter's action.

The judge, who several times during hearings expressed frustration with Congress' refusal to grapple with the delicate issue, noted neither was brought to a vote.

Besides Goldwater, plaintiffs in the suit included eight senators, 16 House members, and former Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb.

London Times Talks Stall

LONDON (AP) — Talks to reopen the Times of London broke down early today and a union leader said the impasse could mean an end to the newspaper which suspended operation 10½ months ago after nearly two centuries of publication.

"We have broken down ... If the Times mean what they say, it is closure," said Les Dixon, president of the National Graphical Association, emerging from 11th-hour collective bargaining.

"We have had enough of it. We shall not bother any longer," Dixon told reporters after a two-hour session which exhausted a deadline set by the Times parent company.

Dixon and Times negotiators met most of Wednesday trying to find a solution before the deadline imposed by the Times's parent company.

Michael Mander, deputy chief executive of the Times Newspapers Ltd., said the NGA had walked out of the meeting and no more talks were planned. "We are extremely distressed about this," he said.

Further word on the fate of the paper was expected later today when directors of the Times Newspapers Ltd. and the parent Thomson International were scheduled to meet.

The daily Times, its sister Sunday Times and three weeklies were shut down on Nov. 30, 198, as the Thomson organization called for a showdown in an effort to force a wide-ranging labor and technical reorganization it said was vital to the survival of the papers.

Canadian owner Lord Thomson warned he would close the Times for good if the unions would not agree to reduce the swollen work force of 4,000 and allow new production technology, including computer printing.

The newspapers' nine major unions fell into line during the months of bargaining that followed, and resumption of publication appeared imminent early this month when agreement was reached with one holdout group.

Clashes Close Boston School

head of the Justice Department's Community Relations Service.

Walsh said there was no serious trouble at South Boston High last year, but the school had been tense since the stoning Sept. 18.

"It's really discouraging because it's a blow to what everyone has been working so hard toward for the past couple years," Walsh said. "It's very frustrating to all of us."

On Tuesday, about 40 students fought in the school's front lobby. A 16-year-old black was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon in that outburst.

Headmaster Jerome Winegar said only 11th and 12th graders would be let into the school today. He said 10th graders would come back Friday and that all four grades would resume classes together Monday.

"We will have increased security," he said. "We will attempt to have as normal a day as we can tomorrow."

Walsh said white pupils had told school administrators that adults instigate the racial trouble, but investigators have had trouble gathering enough evidence to prosecute the grownups.

"One problem is that these youths who give information to school authorities will not talk to the FBI," he said. "They are afraid."

Whooper Arrives In New Mexico

BOSQUE DEL APACHE, N.M. (UPI) — A 6-month-old whooping crane chick, flying with its sandhill crane foster parents, arrived Monday at Bosque Del Apache Wildlife National Wildlife Refuge, the first whooper to arrive for the winter this year at the central Rio Grande Valley refuge.

The bird, a member of an experimental flock created to save the species from extinction, arrived at about 8 a.m. after flying 800 miles from Grays Lake National Widlife Refuge in southeastern Idaho, where they spend their summers, to the New Mexico refuge.

Chris Olesen, information officer for the refuge, said 12 to 17 whoopers in the experimental flock are expected to winter at Bosque Del Apache this year.

The rust-colored chick was hatched this spring from an egg laid at the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center, Laurel, Md., Miss Oleson said. It was hatched at Grays Lake after being placed in the nest of a sandhill crane and was "adopted" by the different species of crane. Miss Olesen said when the birds migrate north again early next spring, the chick will become independent of its foster parents.

Meg Denies Calling Irish People 'Pigs'

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Jane Byrne said Wednesday that Princess Margaret did not call all the Irish people "pigs," and was referring only to Irish Republican Army terrorists in conversation at a dinner party.

The mayor also speculated that dinner guests Saturday night at a socialite's penthouse may have misinterpreted an earlier conversation in which she and the princess talked about "Irish jigs."

But Irv Kupcinet, Chicago Sun-Times columnist, said he is sticking by his report that the princess said, "The Irish, they're pigs." He quoted a source alleged to have overheard the remark as the princess sat at the same table with Mrs. Byrne at the party.

The 49-year-old British princess, in Houston on Wednesday, denied she made the comment. During her last day in Houston, one of five stops during a campaign to raise funds for the Royal Opera House of England, the princess toured the cancer and heart research and surgical centers of the Texas City.

The report of the remark sparked headlines in newspapers in England and Ireland, but there was no official or editorial comment.

In Dublin, the independent Evening Herald ran a cartoon depicting Margaret being carried drunk from a party by two aides. One says, "Will you please stop referring to the next president of the United States as Curly Wee." Curly Wee is a gentleman pig in a long-running comic strip in the newspaper.

Eight paperhandlers at the New York Post refused to work for three hours early Wednesday in protest against the placement of the story on the front page.

Kupcinet said his source at the party said the comment came when the mayor told the princess that she had attended the London funeral of Princess Margaret's cousin, Lord Louis Mountbatten. Mountbatten was killed by a bomb planted by IRA assassins.

"I got my information from a good source right on the scene," said Kupcinet. "Why the hell would they be talking about Irish jigs when they were talking about Lord Mountbatten's assassination?"

Kupcinet also reported Tuesday that after making the remark, the princess realized that the mayor was of Irish descent and said, "Oh, oh, you're Irish." Kupcinet said Mrs. Byrne was "very incensed ... and left the party as soon as possible."

Mrs. Byrne denied that. "I left at the normal hour," she said.

Lord Nigel Napier, spokesman for the younger sister of Queen Elizabeth II, said, "There is no truth in the allegations whatsoever. The mayor said 'goodbye' to the princess in the nicest possible way. There were no ill feelings at all. We say again there is no truth to the allegations."

Mrs. Byrne said that dinner conversation included condemnations of the terrorist attack on Mountbatten. She said Irish dancing — Irish jigs — came up in earlier conversation and in being overheard could have been misunderstood.

"Somebody thought what she said ... somebody overheard her talking about Irish jigs and changed it a little bit," said Mrs. Byrne. "She did not say the Irish were pigs. She was discussing with me Mountbatten and his death."

Michal Sneed, spokeswoman for the mayor, said Mrs. Byrne understood the remark referred to terrorists. "But the mayor felt 'pigs' was an unfortunate choice of words and one she would not have used, although she understood it in the context of being used for the murderers and terrorists."

The princess is scheduled to visit Los Angeles, San Francisco and Cleveland before her return to the United Kingdom.

'Saint Of The Gutters' Wins Nobel Peace Prize

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Mother Teresa, Calcutta's "saint of the gutters", won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize on Wednesday and said she would spend the $190,000 purse on lepers and the destitute to whom she has dedicated her life.

"Poverty and hunger and distress also constitute a threat to peace," the Nobel Committee said in citing the sixth woman ever to win the prize.

The Yugoslav-born Roman Catholic nun, daughter of an Albanian shopkeeper and now a citizen of India, said she accepted the award "in the name of the poor".

Her order, the Mission of Charity, was founded in Calcutta's slums in 1948 when Mother Teresa opened her first school with 40 cents in her pocket and special permission from Rome to live outside a convent. The order now runs schools, hospitals, youth centers and orphanges in 50 Indian cities and in others around the world, from The Bronx, New York, to Papua, New Guinea.

The five-member Norwegian Nobel Committee said Mother Teresa, 69, was given the prize "in recognition of her work in bringing help to suffering humanity". She has been nominated for the prize for several years and has often been mentioned as a possible recipient.

President Carter was another nominee for the award for his Mideast peace efforts. He was first nominated for the 1978 award, but too late to be considered and was renominated this year. He received a special mention for his efforts in the citation given to the 1978 winners, Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

"This year, the world has turned its attention to the plight of children and refugees, and these are precisely (the) categories for whom Mother Teresa has for many years worked so selflessly," the committee said.

Hundreds of beggars, lepers, the blind, the crippled, the dying and the unwanted gather daily outside Mother Teresa's Calcutta mission for a free meal. For decades she has given the poor of the slums medical care, schooling, a bowl of gruel, a slice of bread, or just a clean place to die.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee noted this was not the first time it had awarded the prize for work undertaken to overcome poverty.

The hallmark of Mother Teresa's work, it added; "has been respect for the individual human being, for his or her dignity and innate value. The loneliest, the most wretched and the dying have at her hands received compassion without condescension, based on reverence for man."

"I accept in the name of the poor because I believe that by giving me this prize they are recognizing the presence of the poor in the world," said Mother Teresa, reached at the headquarters of her mission in the slums of Calcutta in east India. She said she had heard the Oslo announcement on local TV.

Talking with reporters after evening prayers, she spoke of love, poverty, and greed. "Greed," she said, "is the greatest obstacle to peace in the world today — greed for power, for money and for name."

With her prize money, "I will build more homes for the destitute and the poor, especially for the lepers," she said.

It was not known if Mother Teresa would personally accept the award in a ceremony in Oslo on Dec. 10. The presentation is made on the anniversary of the birthday of Swedish dynamite inventor Alfred Nobel, who set up the Nobel prizes.

Mother Teresa was born Aug. 27, 1910, in what is now Skopje, Yugoslavia, and her original name was Agnes Gonxha Bojaxhiu.

At age 12, she decided to become a nun and six years later joined the Sisters of Loreto, an Irish order, which sent her to India in 1928 to teach.

It was on a train to the northeast India hill retreat of Darjeeling in 1946 that Mother Teresa says she heard her second call, "to serve Him among the poorest of the poor."

Roping Comes Naturally To Ranch-Reared Coed

Roping came naturally for Patty Cowden. Everything and everybody on the Cowden ranch near Santa Rosa, N.M., fell prey to her swinging loop from the time she was six.

Arena action began with the fifth grade, and by high school she was ready for the national high school rodeo finals with her prowess in goat-tying.

Today, the Texas Tech coed, a veteran of two national college finals rodeos as a member of the Tech rodeo team, is practicing a new skill, team roping.

If all goes well, she will be heeling while Coke Hopping, association board chairman who also doubles as the Tech Red Raider, does the heading at the Texas Tech Intercollegiate Rodeo set Oct. 25-27 in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Probably, if the event had been on the cowgirl agenda, Miss Cowden already would have a good proficiency rating with a rope at both head and heels of a steer. However, team roping opened to cowgirls in National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association rules only recently.

Most college cowgirls are on a cowboy-cowgirl team but now and then two cowgirls take on both heading and heeling chores.

Miss Cowden, a senior physical education major, competes in goat-tying, her main event, and also in breakaway roping. She went to NIRA finals at Bozeman, Mont., once as a team member and once as a high point individual, placing second in regional goat-tying standings.

In goat-tying, she races to the tied goat, vaults from the saddle to catch, throw and tie the goat. Her best time is 8.7 seconds.

Breakaway timing starts when the calf leaves the barrier behind and ends when the roped calf breaks the rope free from her saddle. Her record is three seconds.

Calf roping isn't of the breakaway variety back home at Santa Rosa when roundup is on. Calves on her rope get dragged to the branding fire.

"I rope, flank, vaccinate, whatever," she said of spring roundup.

"We gather them out of the pasture, bring them into the pen, brand all the calves and turn them out. We bring them in again in the fall, wean the calves off, sell the steers and keep the heifer calves."

Pen calves at the ranch were her first introduction to calf roping. Before, whatever moved or stood still was a target.

She didn't do too well with her grade school competition at junior rodeos, but as a high school sophomore went to national finals at Oregon, Utah.

Then, she "laid out a while until coming to Tech," where her father, Guy Tom "Rooster" Cowden, had rodeoed on the side while going to school.

"He roped calves and steers and rode bareback."

He, also, is the reason she came to Tech, where she has a rodeo scholarship.

Her freshman year the Tech team went to the finals, but the second season found her the only Tech competitor in the NIRA finals.

The team, she explained, makes about 15 rodeos a season in the Texas-New Mexico region with their points totaled as a team effort for NIRA standings. Individuals not on the team may compete for individual standings as well as team members.

After this year, rodeo will be different for Miss Cowden. She just recently "got a barrel horse" to learn to ride barrels to stay with the rodeo action.

Some cowgirls, she said, have entered the professional ranks, but she figures the cost of hauling horses on the road would be more than winnings available that route.

For now, she plans to stick with the girls barrel racing ranks, just as soon as she rounds the cloverleaf in a respectable competition time.

The Tech rodeo, sponsored by the association, begins at 8 p.m. each night.

Jody Miller will be the featured entertainer for the Oct. 26 performance while rodeo champion Larry Mahan steps into the Oct. 27 spotlight with his own country and western singing.

Tickets are available at most Lubbock area western wear stores.

Sign Requests Scheduled Before Zoning Board

B METRO

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Thursday, Oct. 18, 1979

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Zoning board of Adjustment will be asked today to approve a computer store's sign which is two and one-half times larger than that allowed by city regulations.

Thomas E. Sowell, representing Amtex Computer, will appear at the 8:15 a.m. meeting in city council chambers to request a variance in requirements for an existing 96-square-foot sign at 3206-A 34th St.

Also at the meeting, Burl Masters, representing Lubbock Cable TV, will ask for a variance in the height requirements for a microwave receiving station adjacent to a cable TV office at 68th Street and Hartford Avenue.

The dish-like receiver would be about 15 feet in diameter and about 17 feet tall. However, zoning regulations permit a structure only as tall as the main building, which is expected to be between 12 and 15 feet.

G. Randall Andrews, representing University Park Development, Ltd., will ask the board to vary the setback requirements for a shopping center at 5015 University Ave.

Andrews will request a variance of 17 feet in the setback requirements off University Avenue and 50 feet off 52nd Street.

That would place the building within 10 feet of 52nd Street and within 43 feet of University Avenue.

Other cases on the board's agenda include the requests of:

— Susan E. Nash for a variance in the minimum area requirement for residential lots at 5212 30th St.

— J.W. Newsom, representing Advanced Electronics, Inc., for a variance of eight spaces in the parking requirements and a variance in the landscape requirements for an electronic service and repair shop to be located at 1310 19th St.

— Ron Thomas, representing Cardinal's Sport Center, for a special exception to allow a sidewalk sale at 3611 50th St.

— Bill Cox, representing Smith, Baker, Field, Clifford, Inc., for an eight-space variance in the parking requirements for an attorneys' office at 3401 22nd St.

— Mark Johnson, representing Rajohn, Inc., doing business as Mesquite's, for a variance in the parking requirements for a restaurant at 2421 Broadway.

Riding Group Captures Honors At Carlsbad

Several members of the Mackenzie Meadows Horsemen's Association took top honors last weekend in the 23rd annual Eddy County Sheriff's Posse fall show in Carlsbad, N.M.

The show was the last of 14 English and western event competitions on the New Mexico circuit. About 150 riders participated in 90 classes, with riders coming from throughout New Mexico and West Texas.

Lubbock placers included: adult class winners, Jodi Bravo, first in green hunter and hunt team of two; Lynn MacDuff, second in hunt seat pleasure; Billie Briggs, first in open hunter, jumper, hunt team of two, equitation over fences and western horsemanship, and second in hunter; and Jamie Quest, first in handy hunter, and second in fault and out jumping, equitation over fences, pregreen hunter and adult jumper.

Others included, in the age 17 and under riders, Kathy Lindsey, first in hunter over fences; Ann-Marie Simmers, second in hunt seat pleasure and equitation over fences; and in the age 11 and under category, Elaine Simmers, first in handy hunter, western pleasure and hunt seat pleasure, and second in hunt seat equitation and in equitation over fences.

Major awards were won by Billie Briggs as high point English adult rider and by Elaine Simmers as high point English rider, age 11 and under.

Kathy Lindsey won the English hunt seat medal class, which is offered by the New Mexico Horse Show Association to riders under the age of 17 who have attained the highest standards in horsemanship.

The state's championship show will take place Oct. 25-27 in Carlsbad. Several Mackenzie Meadows riders are eligible for the championship classes because of their placings in the earlier circuit shows.

Information on becoming a member of the Mackenzie Meadows organization may be obtained from Bobbie Green or Ron Quest.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Your reply to Shocked Sam of Columbia, S.C., who was amazed at a jury award of $854,000 for an off-center belly button, was to cite another bizarre news story and promise one more the next day for "a good laugh." Excessive jury awards are no laughing matter.

I am an insurance agent, and I see liability rates skyrocketing. Unbelievable jury awards are the reason. Medical malpractice rates have soared for this reason, and automobile liability and business liability rates are on the increase. If insurance companies have to pay huge sums in defense and settlement of lawsuits, premiums will be increased. To pay higher insurance costs, doctors and other businesses must increase their fees. Those huge settlements encourage more lawsuits.

1. A large suit was filed last week on behalf of a child who was accidentally kicked by Mickey Mouse at an amusement park. Mickey Mouse was dancing, and the child's leg was bruised.

2. Two boys were injured in Yosemite Park by a bear they were teasing. Although signs informed the public that bears are dangerous and the boys had been warned by a ranger, the parents sued for damages because they weren't warned "enough."

I could go on, but I imagine that Shocked Sam has the message by this time. My hope is that everyone gets it.

Unfortunately, juries view awards as "free money." They just love to see an individual, especially from the working class, get a huge settlement from a large company or a "rich doctor."

This is a serious problem. Public education is desperately needed. Your reply to Shocked Sam was woefully inadequate. — Also Shocked And Concerned In The North

Dear S. and C.: You are right. I missed a fine opportunity to point out that every time someone rips off an insurance company you and I are that much closer to getting our rates increased.

People should also be aware that insurance companies are not run by a bunch of dumbbells. They employ excellent investigating staffs. If a person is caught trying to fake a claim, he may find his credibility severely damaged and wind up uninsurable.

Dear Ann Landers: I was engaged to a terrific guy for seven months. Now he is going to marry someone else. The announcement appeared in the newspaper yesterday and it damn near killed me. "S" treated me swell but I drank too much and socked him when we got into arguments. He wouldn't call for a few days and I'd go out with somebody else just to "show him." The last time we had a fight I broke his glasses and threw his ring in his face. He never called me after that.

The girl he's going to marry is nothing to look at. I know I could get "S" back if only he'd talk to me on the phone. He hung up on me twice last week. What should I do? — Crying My Heart Out

Dear Crying: You can stop making a pest of yourself and go to work on controlling your temper and your boozing. I can't do anything for a girl who abuses a terrific guy, then goes to pieces when he finds someone who treats him right.

Dear Ann Landers: Some time ago you said, "Death is permanent." How dare you attempt to destroy the fervent hope and prayer of ALL people — that the dead will one day be brought back to life! Shame on you, Ann! — U.S. Court House Employee

Dear U.S. Employee: Sorry you took me literally. I hereby alter the statement. "Death is temporary." Sound better?

Readers Exchange

By JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Hello, homemakers! Here's another column of Readers' Swap, and this week we have more recipes and requests than you can imagine. So, let's get started.

Jane Criswell, Levelland, requested a recipe for oatmeal cookies — the kind her grandmother used to make. Because of our gracious readers, she'll have several versions to choose from.

Netha Greene, also of Levelland, sends the following:

MRS. GIBB'S OATMEAL COOKIES
1 stick butter or oleomargarine
1½ cups oatmeal
(not the quick-cooking kind)
1 egg
¾ cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
½ cup raisins, coconut, nuts, chocolate bits (or a combination)

Put one stick of butter (oleo) in large skillet with 1½ cups oatmeal. Brown slightly, then cool. Beat one egg and ¾ cup of sugar. Add one teaspoon vanilla. Mix into oatmeal mixture and add ½ cup raisins, coconut, nuts or chocolate bits (or a combination). Drop by teaspoons three inches apart onto waxed paper. Cook at 350 degrees until desired brownness. Cool, then remove. These cookies will run and later be crisp. (Note: Netha says this recipe was given to her by a friend who told her it was an old, old one.)

Terry Byers of Muleshoe sends the following:

1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 cups flour
2 eggs
2 cups of quick-cooking oats
¼ cup milk
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. soda
1 tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup chopped raisins
1 cup chopped nuts

Mix thoroughly (dough will be very stiff). Drop by teaspoon on greased cookie sheet one inch apart. Bake at 350 degrees for 10-12 minutes.

Lois Williams now lives in Lubbock but previously lived in Arkansas. She was kind enough to enclose several unusual recipes, which we will use over the next few weeks. Here is Lois's favorite oatmeal cookie recipe:

2 cups sugar
¼ cup cocoa
½ cup milk
2 tbsps. oleomargarine
Pinch salt
1 tsp. vanilla
½ — 1 cup peanut butter (optional)
2 to 3 cups oats

Mix in medium size saucepan the first five ingredients. After thorough mixing, bring to boil and boil five minutes. Remove from heat and add remaining ingredients, stirring quickly. Drop by spoonfuls on waxed paper. Let cool and remove from waxed paper. Makes about two dozen.

Thanks to Kathryn Smith of Jayton; Mrs. George W. James, Lubbock; Louise Chamberlain, Denver City; Mrs. Ken Hargesheimer, Lubbock; and Barbara Guajardo, Luboock, who also sent oatmeal cookie recipes — wish we could have used all of them!

Requests of the week: — Mrs. H.L. Hughes of Texico, N.M., wonders if any readers know what can be used to remove mustard stains from indoor-outdoor, kitchen carpet?

Does anyone have a sweet slaw recipe, similar to that served at the Furr's Cafeterias, for Laphane Burkett of Seminole?

After the recipes for solar or sun tea were published, this department was inundated by the question, "Why is solar tea so good?"

Jane Wright, Lubbock, requests a recipe for "old-fashioned" fudge, not the kind that has marshmallow creme, etc., in it. Anyone have a recipe for Jane?

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL G. DONOHUE

Dear Dr. Donohue: My daughter recently got married and started on the birth control pill because they don't want a family just now. She has been slightly nauseous since starting on the pills. I want her to tell this to her doctor, but she won't. She says she can take the nausea, but doesn't want the doctor to refuse to prescribe the pills in the future because of it. I told her this is foolish. Will you please comment? — Mrs. O.W.

You are perfectly correct. Your daughter should report the nausea. She's being foolish for more than one reason. The nausea can be a sign of an excess amount of a certain hormone in some pills. Secondly, her doctor would not necessarily tell her she cannot use the birth control pill. There are many brands of pills containing different amounts of various combinations of hormones. Perhaps another brand might not produce the nausea. There is no single birth control pill suitable for all women.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What is meant by a lipid-lowering diet? And what if one does not follow it on doctor's orders? — J.D.

Lipid is a fancy word for fat. The chief blood fats are cholesterol and triglycerides. There seems to be an association between arterial hardening and the level of blood lipids.

Diet can usually bring blood fats down to a more normal range. In a general way, the diet restricts use of animal fats (heavily-marbled meats), whole milk, butter, eggs, etc. Lean meats, poultry, fish, skimmed milk are some of the suitable substitutes.

Besides frustrating the prescribing doctor, not following the diet will obviously lessen the person's chances of lowering blood fats and theoretically increase the potential for arteriosclerosis (artery deposits).

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband had heart trouble and isn't supposed to eat eggs (the yolks) or any marbled meats or bacon, etc. One of his friends (a farmer) sells him blue eggs and tells him they have no cholesterol in them. He raises brown eggs and blue eggs, yet feeds both kinds of hens the same kind of food. Are there such things as blue eggs, and is it true they have no cholesterol? The blue egg's yolk is orange. — C.O.

You can't tell an egg by its color. The only blue eggs I've seen are on Easter morning. Red hens lay brown eggs and white hens lay white eggs.

You may have guessed my answer by now. The shell color — blue, brown, or white — has nothing to do with the amount of cholesterol inside the yolk. The yolk of all eggs is very high in cholesterol. Somebody's pulling somebody's leg. See the booklet, "Control Your Cholesterol Sensibly," for which send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have had Tietze's syndrome for four months. It began with slight pressure in the center of my chest. It is now a constant dull ache. It usually lasts a couple of minutes, then subsides. My heart examination showed nothing wrong there, yet I am worried that I'm going to have a heart attack or something. Perhaps you can shed some light on this for me. — G.S.

Tietze's syndrome is chest pain at the point where the ribs join the breast bone. The cause is unknown, but there is swelling of the cartilage. That is what produces the pain, which can be sharp, and last but a moment, or be a dull, long-lasting aching. Pain may last days.

In troublesome cases, injection of the pain area with pain-killing medication or cortisone-like drugs brings relief. The symptoms usually subside with time, but in very persistent cases surgery may be done to remove the offending cartilage.

Because of the type and location of the pain it is sometimes difficult to convince a patient that it is not due to heart disease. Tietze's syndrome may disappear, but recur later.

Birth control is a highly relevant topic in today's society. Find out what you should know about it in an easy to read booklet, "The Twelve Birth Control Methods." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents.

New Books View, Evaluate Current Changes In American Families

By DENISE PERRY DONAVIN
American Library Assn.

Juggling a career, home and family may well be this decade's best trick.

Caroline Bird's "The Two-Paycheck Marriage" is an in-depth report on how working women are affecting American life on every level. Her jumping-off point was a questionnaire circulated in "Family Circle" which elicited responses from 30,000 husbands and wives. From there, she conducted further interviews and research. The result is a book which provides no pat answers but at least provides the information on which sound decisions depend.

Marriage is, of course, the most obvious institution affected by a woman's decision to work. Profoundly changed are such issues as money management, sexual relations and the care of the house and children. To add confusion to chaos, gone are the days when husband-wife conflicts are exclusively in-house. Whose career takes precedence when job transfers, late hours, travel or business entertainment are required? The text is laced with comments from people who have faced these questions and sometimes even found answers.

As mentioned before, Bird's business is information, not advice. She does, however, engage in a bit of crystal-ball gazing and sees a race of self-actualized individuals enjoying stable marriages and fewer — and thus more precious — children.

In "The Two-Career Couple" Francine and Douglas Hall analyze the various ways couples met occupational and domestic challenges and then type them with the labels: accommodators, acrobats, allies or adversaries. Full of pragmatic advice on coping with everything from identity crises to office romances, they even cover the option of resolving conflicting career obligations through something they call a "visitors' marriage."

The Hall's sociological term-paper style, replete with charts, inventories and self-help questionnaires, makes rather dry reading. Fortunately, it also generates highly precise conclusions and methods for solving the simplest but most vexing household disagreement.

Marilyn Fabe and Norman Wikler, both professional women in their early 30s, were plagued with indecision about having children. So they started talking to other women, also in their 30s, who had made a decision. The result is "Up Against the Clock: Career Women Speak on the Choice to Have Children," organized around the three most common choices: combining a career and family, becoming a single mother, and remaining childless. The authors do not lobby for any of the three, but simply examine the decision-making process and explain how compiling the study influenced their own decisions.

The authors discuss the special medical and psychological problems some doctors believe older women risk (other doctors say it matters not whether the first baby comes at 22 or 39.) They also provide advice on getting family support when the decision is either for single motherhood or childlessness.

The final interviewee is an older woman who opted for childlessness against a strong current of conventional opinion. Her broader experience will prove enlightening to what is really the first generation of married women ever to have the freedom of this particular choice.

In "The Working Mother's Complete Handbook," Gloria Norris and JoAnn Miller accept the fact that the responsibility for child care and housework still usually falls on the mother, even when she is also working outside the home. The author's concern is not polemicizing but advising women on how to cope.

First comes an overview of what's available in child care outside and inside the home, along with a discussion of the pros and cons of relying on relatives, housekeepers, sitters or day care centers. The mix of basic advice with precise directions, such as on evaluating, hiring and firing a housekeeper, is a feature that sets this guide above its competition.

Moving outside the home, the "Handbook" also includes suggestions on job hunting and interviewing, a paraphrase of Title VII's sections on sex discrimination, and addresses for all 50 state Equal Employment Opportunity Commission offices.

Grace Mitchell's "Day Care Book" is truly, as the subtitle claims, "a guide for working parents to help them find the best possible day care for their children" — and to help them help their children and themselves adjust to day care. The author, who visited 150 centers throughout the United States in writing this book, suggests that the best place for parents to start in evaluating a center is to simply look around them. The quality of both the facilities and the attitude of both teachers and children should be obvious.

Next, they should use the checklist Mitchell provides to evaluate the people, place and program. The author describes the attributes of a good program in minute detail.

Women's Division Holds Annual Luncheon Meeting

The annual meeting and luncheon of the Women's Division of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce will be held today at the President's Dining Room at Lubbock Christian College.

Outgoing president Mrs. Charles Signor will discuss the accomplishments of the Women's Division over the past year and incoming president, Mrs. Tim Hatch, will act as mistress of ceremonies. A presentation of numbers from "Hello, Dolly!" will be given. Mrs. C.B. Carter, chairman of the annual meeting, has arranged for a tour of the Arnett House following the meeting.

The Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce is not an auxiliary, but an active orgnization of local women who work for the cultural and economic well being of the city. It welcomes as members all interested women; dues are $10 per year. Businesswomen who are members of the Chamber of Commerce are also automatically members of the Women's Division.

A variety of activities is planned by the Women's Division during the course of a year. Members serve as hosts to visitors and conventions to the city, work as tour guides and tend the information booths at the local airport and such events as the Lubbock Arts Festival. Tours and trips are planned frequently to help acquaint members with the city and area, and they also visit other cities and points of interest. The Women's Division possesses two outstanding collections of art, which are loaned without cost to interested organizations and businesses.

A new project of the Division this year is the Host Family Program for student pilots at Reese Air Force Base, which was initiated this fall.

Plans are underway for a tour of Reese Air Force Base in mid-November by members of the Division. Hosted by the officers' wives, members will visit the flight line and the parachute assembly facility and the Reese Officers Wives will host a wine and cheese reception for the participants during the day.

In early December, the Women's Division will again host the Community Christmas Party at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Last year, over 5,000 people attended the pre-Christmas festivities, which included musical entertainment, refreshments and a chance to visit Santa Claus.

Planning for this year's party began in July with the appointment of Mrs. H.A. Anderson to chair the committee. A special feature of this year's party will be that children and their families will be invited to bring an ornament to decorate one of the Christmas trees in the Civic Center. The beginning of the Christmas season with this community Christmas party for the whole family is one of the most rewarding events the Women's Division sponsors and is unique in that it is indeed a party for the whole community.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Keep a candle in a holder in one certain place and place a book of matches under the holder. Keep out of reach of children.

In the event of a power failure you'll be prepared. — Mrs. William Ford

DEAR HELOISE:

Have I got the best tip ever! An old folk recipe, dating back to the 1800s, has rid my house of roaches, and for a few bucks.

I'm doing cartwheels with delight! Five years ago, when we moved, I was horrified to find that our new home was infested with American brown roaches and German banded roaches.

For years I fought them, but now it's a thing of the past, and unbelievably simple — boric acid! That's all!

Take powdered boric acid and sprinkle it under the refrigerator, the stove, in cupboards, by the drain, in all the cracks and crevices.

I used a baster to blow it into the hard to get to places. Leave it there. It will take about ten days, but works like a charm.

Boric acid is toxic, so take care if you have children or pets. Never sprinkle it on a shelf that holds your supply of baby food.

Sign me, "not bugged." — Nancy Sander

Amazing, isn't it, how old home remedies do the trick. But as a word of caution: remember, the Poison Control Center says boric acid can be harmful to small children and pets if taken in large quantities, so take precautions, please! — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

After many attempts to communicate with a credit department over an apparent error in billing, only to get back the same mistake on the bill, I finally got an immediate response:

Before putting the bill and my letter into the envelope, I carefully bent, folded and mutilated the bill! — Elizabeth Z.

That'll do it every time... — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have a lightweight pan lid with a ring or metal handle you know that it gets very hot.

Just clip a spring-type clothespin on the ring or handle as an aid in lifting. — Kay Pattison

DEAR HELOISE:

One of our children had difficulty swallowing pills and capsules.

My husband solved this by dipping the pill in butter.

Then my son put the pill on his tongue and drank some water. Down went the medicine with no trouble at all.

After this he always preferred tablets or capsules instead of liquid medicine. — Mrs. Kenneth Scott

DEAR HELOISE:

I happened on a nifty idea for cutting leaf-bagging time in half when you use flimsy plastic bags. It really works.

Begin by packing leaves in 20-gallon metal or plastic garbage cans as tightly as possible.

Place a plastic leaf bag over the packed can and turn upside down.

Reach inside the bag along the sides of the can and grab the can handles. Then raise the can out of the bag, shaking gently all the while to break the vacuum.

As the handles near the top of the bag, grab the edges of the bag with your spare fingers and hold until the vacuum breaks completely and all leaves fall smoothly and quickly into the bag.

By repeating the operation, it's amazing how many leaves you can compact into one bag. — Norman L. Larsen

DEAR HELOISE:

A fun-time for toddlers (and older kids, too) is to cut fish out of construction paper and tape or glue a paper clip to the mouth of each fish.

Cut different sizes of fish. Then the game is to see who catches the largest or smallest.

Use something suitable for a pole and tie a string with a magnet on the end. Put the paper fish in a box. You'll have something to keep them busy for quite some time. — Luci

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

East and West bid up to three spades, which is what they can make. North and South continue to five diamonds and South's problem is to make that contract.

The defense starts out with two rounds of spades. A careless South can go after six by the simple process of ruffing that second spade and playing out two high trumps. If both opponents follow, he cashes his ace and king of clubs, enters dummy by leading the five of trump to dummy's six and discards his three losing hearts on good clubs.

A careful South sees that in this mundane sphere trumps frequently divide 3-1, in which case that line of play won't work. He also sees that by discarding a heart from dummy on that second spade lead he can insure his contract against that 3-1 break. So he does just that.

If East leads a third spade, he ruffs in his hand with the eight of trumps. He has to keep that five spot. Then he leads out the ace-king-queen of trumps and ace-king of clubs, leads his five of trumps to dummy's six and gets those three heart discards.

Short Skirts Deemed Fashionable Again

PARIS (AP) — Fashion for the '80s is looking up as Paris hoists skirts and shows legs, and sometimes more, in ready-to-wear collections for next summer.

A '60s nostalgia, complete with many mini-skirts, is sweeping fashions. But that is not the whole story. Paris offers lots besides short skirts.

There was a good deal of hype in this week's collections for spring, 1980. Some designers assailed audiences with deafening stereo noises and weirdo clothes that you might not wear to a costume party.

But with all the show-off, some good ideas, adaptable to real life, strike out on their own. The ready-to-wear shows are a hot-bed of ideas.

This time minis made the scene, but not everyone was carried away by them; most skirts were cropped just below the knee.

Before you get your scissors out, remember that '80's minis have a new look. Tulip-shaped, wraparound, or gathered bell-shapes, they usually have short-tie bolero jackets with short puffy sleeves (as at Dior), or elegant modified melon sleeves (Saint Laurent).

Geometry and asymmetry are two other keynotes of 1980's fashions. Designers make bold use of bi-and tri-color combinations in paneled dresses, either in horizontal bands on tubes or bias-cut for triangular looks.

Suits are favorites, beautifully done by the "serious" houses, but usually in contrasting tops and skirts. They have neat jackets and full skirts at Chanel. They're in alternating black-and-white or bright-colored panels for a well-cut straight look at Saint Laurent. At Dior, they're appealing with puffy-sleeved boleros in uninhibited, bright cotton satin poplins.

The chemise dress is having its big comeback, most strikingly at Givenchy, who gives it a liquid flow, delicately draped down to a narrow skirt, using diagonal pastel stripes for geometric effect.

Every designer showed a version of the off-one-shoulder dress, in silk crepe, glazed cotton or organdy, sometimes with an uneven hem for a completely angled look. At Chloe, designer Karl Lagerfeld adds or subracts deep flounces to change lengths from above the knee to far below, for evening.

Prints and colors range from abstract and Picasso-style with diamonds — fabulous in Saint-Laurent's painterly pastels — to pop city skylines at Chloe and bold jungle-rhythms at Ungaro, Chantal Thomass and elsewhere. There is a new look in chintz, cotton satin or glazed voile and flowing crepe de chine.

There are all sorts of trousers for next spring, but the best novelties are from Saint Laurent, who perfects his versions of bubbly Turkish bloomers in all lengths, for all times of day. Especially striking versions are in glazed cottons and iridescent silks for evenings.

The Paris sportswear pants story features short-shorts, Bermudas, pedal pushers and even baggy jodphurs at Chantal Thomass. If you're going to wear shorts, top them with strapless draped bras and a well-cut bolero jacket. If you want to be dressy, wear a hip-length trenchcoat, as at Chloe.

The bathing suit that Paris went mad about is sleek and slinky body-hugging Lycra. It just avoids looking like sex-shop stuff, even in a one-piece maillot style, or more daring in two or three pieces roped together, as at Givenchy.

Black, white and bold color is important in these fashions. Paris often mixes pinks and oranges to border on bad taste, but pulls it all together with a super eye, as Saint Laurent does.

Evening wear has all of Paris's best ideas, but the message is "relax" in short dresses with ruffles, long chiffons split up to the knee or so; you can also ruffle yourself out like a Spanish dancer or bullfighter a la Saint-Laurent.

Accessories for all this range from nutty to sensible. Crazy ideas include Chloe's bi-plane net hats over huge and hairy heads, and iridescent cellophane coifs that look as if you could crumple them up yourself. All Paris seems to say you've got to have long hair to be fashionable, even if you wear a wig or two.

Mini-Swimsuits Unveiled In Spring 1980 Preview

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California designers have unveiled a daring fashion surprise for the spring of 1980 — skimpy bathing suits that show off a lot of bottom.

With 40,000 fashion buyers in town this week, the designers also are showing off a revival of the miniskirt.

Trend-watchers said the miniskirt might prove to be a fad, but predicted the innovative "mini-swimsuits" would be the biggest little thing to hit the market since the bikini.

"One of these swimsuits is almost a diaper, a loincloth," says California Mart fashion director Pam Roberts.

The new idea, which has reshaped the style Esther Williams made famous, is the removal of traditional leg holes.

Outrageous? Not when variations are being shown by such mainline companies as Elizabeth Stewart and DeWeese.

However, in the major spring showing at the California Mart, the barest minimum with the most flash came from relative newcomers to the California swimsuit clique.

There was Kamali with a startling black number cut waist high and Elon by Monika Tilley, which drew applause with a "kaleidoscope" one-shouldered suit of multicolors cut high on the sides. For added bareness, Connie Benko's geometric suits were strapless.

"The bikii has been out for quite awhile, except for kids," said Mart fashion director Pam Roberts. "But the swimsuit business is better than ever before."

"It allows a woman to look pretty in a bathing suit even if her figure isn't perfect," said Miss Roberts.

Thus, even the most minimum suits are constructed of space-age stretch fabrics designed to reduce bulges. And many of the skimpier suits come with matching sarong skirts and caftans to hide under when modesty strikes.

In a show where the message was less is more, the return of the miniskirt got the cold shoulder. Buyers gave scant applause to the first one shown, then stopped applauding altogether.

"I think it's an unflattering look," said Miss Roberts. "I fought it for two seasons. But it's definitely going to happen. The miniskirt is coming back."

"It won't be like the '60s, when you had to wear a miniskirt," she added. "Fashion has become too liberated for that. But women will wear it to say, 'I can wear anything I want to wear.' They need it to express themselves."

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR OCT. 18, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals:	6, 17, 29, 40, 52, 63, 75	Look before you leap
Highs:	7-16, 30-39, 53-62	You brim with vitality
EMOTIONAL
Criticals:	12, 26, 40, 54, 68, 82	Bad temper can hurt
Highs:	1-11, 27-39, 55-67, 83-85	Smooth sailing
Lows:	13-25, 41-53, 68-81	You tend to brood
INTELLECTUAL
Criticals:	3, 19, 36, 52, 69, 85	Caution highlights day
Highs:	4-18, 37-51, 70-84	Top memory time
Lows:	1-2, 20-35, 53-68, 86-95	Don't initiate new things

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Talk Advises Grocers On Inside Thefts

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Sixteen years ago Jack Henry doubled his income while he went undetected as a dishonest bread man in Lynchburg, Va.

He was an expert vendor who altered invoices and made just the right mistakes to steal from the grocery stores where he delivered his bread.

Today, Jack Henry is a changed man who travels the country conducting seminars for retail grocery merchandisers to show them how to control burgeoning employee and vendor theft in their stores.

"The best controls for internal theft are getting the employees involved in reporting thefts to their supervisors," Henry told a group of local grocers gathered for Wednesday's day-long seminar at the Holiday Inn sponsored by the Texas Retail Grocers Association.

He suggested setting up employee hot lines or suggestion boxes so employees could report internal thefts and remain anonymous. "It has been shown that at least 50 percent of all employees know who is stealing but are afraid to tell on them."

Henry, who operates the Accurate Inventory & Calculating Service Inc. in Longview, said a perpetual book inventory method coupled with frequent physical inventories is the best way to detect internal theft.

"The U.S. Commerce Department is estimating that white-collar crime will account for more than $60 billion in business losses this year, an all-time record," he said.

Before he goes into methods for controlling internal theft, Henry gives a psychological profile of potential dishonest employees.

"There are three types of individuals who are potential thieves that enter a store each day — the neurotic who is basically honest, those that are totally honest and the psychopathic thief who will steal and feel no remorse."

He said it is the neurotic thief who will steal because the opportunity is there.

"The neurotic thief will only steal if three basic criteria are present: the need for money, the ability to steal undetected and a rationalization that what he is doing is all right."

Henry emphasized that eliminating the ability to steal while going undetected is the key to stopping internal theft.

"The neurotic thief doesn't like to steal. He does it because he knows he won't be caught. If you eliminate his ability to go undetected, he'll stop stealing."

Henry said 85 percent of the population fit into the neurotic category, 5 percent are psychopathic stealers and can't be helped and 10 percent are totally honest.

"In 1976, 34 percent of all businesses that failed to stay in business was due to employee theft," he said.

"For every $1 a customer steals, an employee will steal $4, according to statistics compiled by the U.S. Commerce Department."

Henry said the proper inventory controls and internal security methods would help eliminate the problem. He suggested formal training programs for all new employees so they know it would hard for them to steal, strict punishment programs for those who get caught stealing and placement of undercover agents in stores where the problems are the greatest.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to work out the details of plans that have already been placed in motion. You are able to come to a new rapport with other persons and improve relationships with them by evening.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Know what is expected of you by associates and talk over policy matters with them. Get together with friends but don't overspend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Make plans early that will help you express your talents more intelligently later. Take time to clarify matters with coworkers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Improve family matters early before meeting friends. Handle business affairs wisely. Daytime may be nerve-wracking.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of correspondence and bills before you consider recreational pursuits. Study every phase of any new enterprise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Tackle property repairs during daylight hours when light is good and better work can be done. Handle correspondence well, too.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Morning is best for pursuing personal aims. Don't neglect bookkeeping; be sure it is done correctly. Improve health where possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Do whatever will relieve you of a personal worry. Get suggestions from a trusted adviser. Be social in the evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Know what your goals are and then you can understand what is puzzling you. Talk a situation over with a friend and get good advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle civic affairs during the day. Be sure your credit is good, otherwise improve it. Take no risks with money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study plans well before you present them to a bigwig for backing. Follow hunches and get good results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of routine chores before you go out for enjoyment. Come to a better understanding with mate, loved one. Be firm.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Have a conference with associates and then do your share of any work for best results. Be more thoughtful of relatives.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... He or she will express self early and hit on the right course in life. Provide as happy a home life as you can and give good advice early. Be proud of your progeny.

Presentation Of Awards To Highlight 'Dad's Day'

Induction of three members into the Texas Tech Athletic Hall of Fame and presentation of the Spencer A. Wells Faculty Award will highlight the 1979 Dad's Day Association luncheon Saturday in the University Center Ballroom.

Three Lubbock residents, E.F. Arterburn, G.B. Morris and R.P. "Bob" Fuller, have been selected to the Hall of Fame. Dr. Norman W. Hopper, professor of plant and soil science at Texas Tech, will be presented the $1,000 Wells Award.

Arterburn was selected All-Border Conference in 1951. He quarterbacked Texas Tech to a 25-14 win over Pacific in the 1952 Sun Bowl, the first bowl victory inthe school's history. After a brief professional football career Arterburn joined the Texas Tech coaching staff. He then went into private business before returning to Texas Tech as assistant to the dean of admissions. In 1975 he was named director of graduate admissions, a position he still holds.

Morris played for the Red Raiders in the early 1930s. He coached high school football at Breckenridge, Highland Park and Vernon high schools before coaching at Texas Tech in 1950. Now retired, Morris served as director of guidance for the Lubbock Independent School District for 20 years.

Fuller was instrumental in modernizing the track stadium which bears his name. He was chairman of the All-American Football game for five years. He is an active member of various civic, religions and professional organizations. Fuller is an independent oil producer with headquarters in Lubbock.

The 14th recipient of the Wells Award, Hopper is being honored for making "outstanding contributions to the unicersity and its programs," said Dad's Day Association Executive Director James G. Allen. W.B. Rushing, former association president, will make the presentation.

Dr. Glenn E. Barnett, vice president for planning, will speak at the luncheon. Music will be performed by Kyung W. Shin, an associate professor of music at Tech, who will be accompanied by Marilyn Arland, staff accompanist in Tech's department of music.

Temple Hospital Receives Funds From Martha Ann Cogdell Trust

The Lockney-based Martha Ann Cogdell Hospital Trust has given $100,000 to the Scott and White Memorial Hospital in Temple.

The gift was made in response to Scott and White's $25 million expansion fund and will fund a new linear accelerator in the radiation therapy department to be used in the treatment of cancer patients.

Dr. Richard D. Haines, president of Scott and White Memorial, announced receipt of the gift and said, "Once again, Scott and White is the recipient of a fine gift from the Cogdell family. This West Texas family has been extremely generous to us, beginning with the original gift in 1960 of Mr. and Mrs. D.M. Cogdell Sr. We are most grateful for their help."

This contribution brings the total gifts from the Cogdell family to $575,000. In 1960, Mr. and Mrs. D.M. Cogdell Sr. gave the first gift to help establish the radiation therapy department at Scott and White. In 1975, the trust made a $250,000 grant to Scott and White to fund the installation of a new EMI brain scanner.

The Martha Ann Cogdell Hospital Trust was created by the will of the late David M. and Johnnye Kate Cogdell, ranchers from Snyder. The trust is named for their daughter, Martha Ann, who died at the age of 13.

Many West Texas hospitals, clinics and educational institutions have been the recipients of grants from the trust.

MERCHANDISE FOUND

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Police found about $1 million of merchandise in the home of a department store clerk charged with stealing nearly $20,000 worth of jewlry.

Grenadan Actions Termed 'Regrettable'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Wednesday the arrest of 20 persons, including a prominent opposition leader, by Grenadan authorities is "another regrettale indicaion" of the direction of that country's 7-month old government.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter also expressed "deep regret" over the Grenadan government's decision to close a newspaper, The Torchlight.

"Both these events represent a serious setback to freedom of expression for Grenadans of all opinions," Carter said.

"This is all the more regrettable given the respected tradition of basic civil liberties and democratic processes in Grenada and many other Caribbean countries."

The Grenadan government, which has pursued a leftist course since taking power last March in a coup, announced Tuesday that the 20 arrested persons face a number of charges, including involvement in an alleged plot to assassinate the government's leadership.

SAILBOAT LANDS

MIAMI (AP) — A 35-foot wooden sailboat, carrying 105 Haitians was landed Tuesday in south Florida. A Coast Guard patrol boat towed the vessel into port after locating it near Fowey Rocks, on the edge of the Gulf Stream about 15 miles southeast of Miami.

Snake Hunters Cautiously Search For Elusive $250 Rattler

PIERRE, S.D. (UPI) — Ted Uecker hooked the snaps on his leather chaps and adjusted the dusty black cowboy hat to shield the sun from his eyes.

"It's up that hill about a hundred yards," he said, pointing to the rising prairie land dotted with boulders. "I Think we killed about 30 snakes off that den so far, but there should be a lot more. At one rattlesnake den, they killed 70 rattlers a day for a week."

Uecker, 21, earns $600 a month and room and board as a ranch hand, working six days a week from dawn to dusk. But he said a man had promised to pay him $250 for a big prairie rattlesnake, if he could capture it alive.

"He probably knows a reptile garden that'll buy it," Uecker said. "I know this den has got a big rattler. I saw it go down one of the holes."

The money was incentive enough for Uecker, the second oldest of seven children who quit school after the eighth grade. "I've worked hard ever since," he said, pausing to clear some tobacco juice from his mouth. "I once took a vocational course to become a mechanic, but when I finished it nobody needed a mechanic."

Uecker's arms were covered by a mass of nicks and scratches from stacking hay bales for winter feed. It wouldn't be long before the first frost, and that was the reason for the visit to the snake den.

"They say a den will draw snakes from 12 miles around," Uecker said. "I don't know if that's true or not. But I believe rattlesnakes return to the same den every year to spend the winter. There's no telling how many there might be on this hill. And maybe there won't be any."

Uecker removed a 12-gauge double barrel shotgun from the car. He loaded the gun and slipped a handfull of shells into his shirt for easy access. "Things can get hot," he said. "I shot a snake here once and suddenly they were all around me."

Uecker's brother, Joe, 16, loaded a 20-gauge single shot for backup and also carried the stick and bag for capturing the snake.

"As long as the snake rattles, you've got fair warning," Uecker said. "The trouble is they haven't always been rattling lately. These snakes will chase you, too. You can't be certain what they'll do."

He said it's often hard to spot a snake until it rattles because they blend in perfectly with the drab green and brown prairie grass.

"They say you're supposed to remain still if you come on one," Uecker said. "But I bent over once and one was staring me right in the face. There's no way I could have remained calm. I must have jumped three feet in the air."

The two brothers cautiously approached the snake den area, eyes searching every inch of ground and ears tuned for any warning rattle.

The tense search continued for 15 minutes and just as the two were about to quit without catching sight of their quarry, they were unnerved by a jackrabbit suddenly bolting in front of them.

"It doesn't matter how many times I've done this," Uecker said, running his hand through his blond hair. "It always makes one hell-of-a wreck out of me."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. At the end of this year I will quit job to become a mother. My compa- will give me $4,000 in profit sharing. husband earns $20,000 annually. We $12,000 in a passbook savings ac- nt and $3,000 in growth stocks. Our se is worth $70,000 and we hope to a bigger home in three years. Pen- and life insurance are already taken of.

How should I allocate our funds?

A. Let's start with the money you receive from your employer. If that 00 will be a lump sum distribution of ney the company contributed for you a qualified retirement plan, the nat- advice is to roll it over into a special ividual retirement account (IRA).

By putting the money into an IRA over account you won't have to pay me taxes on it until you start with- wing it — normally at age 59½ or er. The money your $4,000 earns — in erest or dividends — will also be shel- ed from taxes.

As a young couple who olearly have r financial ducks in a row, you uld be able to forgo use of that mon- until later in life. Meanwhile, you'll beefing up your retirement nestegg.

There are a number of different in- tments you can use with an IRA. In r circumstances, I would suggest ei- r growth stocks in a "self-directed', ount with a brokerage firm or a wth no-load mutual fund.

The only other reallocation of your ney should be the movement of some it out of that passbook savings ac- nt, where it is earning relatively low erest of 5 or 5½ percent. You can get ost double that yield in money mar- mutual funds or an insured six- nth savings oertificate.

And, if you're not going to need your h to buy a bigger home in just three rt years, I feel you should use some it to buy more growth stocks or a no- d growth mutual fund — on a gradual moderate basis.

Q. I have been buying stocks for my ndchildren and have also been buying cks for my daughter, the children's ther. The last three stocks I bought, ely for my daughter, were put in the lest grandchild's account. This was t what I wanted.

The broker who made this mistake ims there is nothing he can do to cor- t this except sell the stocks and buy em back. That would mean paying re commissions. Is it possible to have ese stocks transferred to my daugh- r's name?

A. Of course it is. Assuming that the cts are as you state them and that the istake was the broker's, it's up to him nd his firm to correct it.

Just recently, I had a session with the top marketing officers of six major brokerage houses. They swore, up and down, that their firms "eat" brokers' mistakes all the time.

My advice is to take your story to the top brass at that broker's firm. If you get no results, contact the Office of Consumer Affairs, U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission, 500 North Capital St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20549.

Q. A reader recently suggested to you that a person having difficulty selling one or a few shares of stock because of the high brokerage commission could make a gift of the stock to a charity, church or college and take a charitable deduction for the value of the stock on his income tax return.

You replied that it "doesn't seem very charitable" to pass that problem (of selling the stock and paying the commission) on to the charity, church or college.

I'd guess that, if a church received the stock, an enterprising pastor could find a broker among his parishioners who would handle the sale without charging the church a commission — and probably take a charitable deduction of his own for his expense in handling the sale.

A. Good thinking. That's a point I overlooked and one that should be very helpful to members of the clergy who read this column and who faoe this problem.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Dollar Climbs In Tokyo; Gold Stumbles

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar briefly reached a 19-month high in Tokyo Wednesday but otherwise was mixed in foreign exchange trading at home and abroad. The price of gold fell.

Analysts said the dollar was helped in trading against the yen by worries over the effect of the latest round of oil price rises on Japan, which imports 99 percent of its oil. In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 233.95 yen, up from 231.65 yen Tuesday.

The closing figure set a high for the year. At one point the dollar hit a 19-month high of 235 yen before profit-taking again pushed the U.S. currency down.

The dollar was as low as 175.50 yen last Oct. 31, just before the Carter administration announced a package of measures to bolster the dollar.

Elsewhere, though, the dollar had a so-so day. "It was kind of a topsy-turvy market," said one New York trader.

Gold prices continued to ease after setting a record of $444 an ounce two weeks ago. Republic National Bank in New York said gold fell $3 to $385 a troy ounce, while on the New York Commodity Exchange, October gold futures traded at 385.30 an ounce, off $2.30.

The metal closed in London at $381 an ounce, a drop of $9.50 from Tuesday's close of $390.50. In Zurich, the metal finished at $385.50 an ounce, a fall of $9 from Tuesday's finish of $394.50.

Dealers said gold's decline was helped by worries about the new U.S. Treasury auction policy.

The Carter administration said Tuesday it was dropping monthly auctions of 750,000 ounces of gold in an attempt to keep gold buyers guessing on any future sales and thereby "deter" the speculation which has undermined confidence in the dollar. In the future, the Treasury said, gold sales will be in varying amounts and at dates announced only a few days in advance.

Paris — 4.2325 French francs, up from 4.2245.

Milan — 829.30 Italian lire, down from 830.55.

Amsterdam — 1.9925 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9935.

In London the dollar improved slightly against the British pound. It took $2.1462 to buy a pound late Wednesday compared with $2.1535 late Tuesday.

Marks — 1.7969, down from 1.8045.

French francs — 4.2162, down from 4.2315.

Yen — 233.51, up from 233.0.

Canadian dollar — 1.1782, up from 1.1749.

Ford Begins Recall Of 400,000 Capris

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has agreed to recall about 400,000 Capri automobiles because of front seat and gear shift lever defects, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported Wednesday.

The recall covers 1971-73 cars whose reclining front seat backs could fail and 1971-74 and 1976-78 vehicles on which the gear shift lever could separate.

Congressmen Seeking Loans For Chrysler

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michigan congressmen proposed on Wednesday creation of a government board that could guarantee loans to Chrysler Corp. and dictae management hanges to the ailing industrial giant.

Rep. James J. Blanchard said his bill would permit the three-member board to authorize direct government loans as well as guarantees.

Sen. Donald W. Riegle said the measure he would introduce would not permit direct loans and would require Chrysler, in order to get a loan guarantee, to use at least part of the money to establish an employee stock ownership plan.

The two Michigan lawmakers, both Democrats, did not specify the amount of loans or loan guarantees that could be made.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller has said the administration will consider loan guarantees of $500 million to $750 million if Chrysler comes up with an acceptable financial plan.

Chrysler, the 10th largest U.S. corporation, suffered losses of $207.1 million, the largest in its history, in the second quarter of this year.

Both the Riegle and Blanchard bills would permit the government board to require, before guaranteeing any loan to Chrysler, that the company make management and fiscal changes and develop a long-range management and fiscal plan "to give the enterprise a sound managerial and fiscal base."

Under Blanchard's bill, the board would be made up of the secretaries of the departments of Treasury, Labor and Transportation. Riegle's bill would substitute the secretary of commerce for the secretary of transportation.

The House Banking Committee will begin hearings on Blanchard's bill Thursday.

Blanchard was asked at a news conference whether the legislation would effectively mean the government would run Chrysler — dictating, for example, the mix of large and small cars produced.

"Ultimately, we want the company to run its own affairs," he said. "But it would seem very difficult to get a major commitment unless it is clear that Chrysler is going to make a fuel-efficient car."

Head Of Neighborhood Group Questions Concern Over Schools

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Public school administrators fear the economic consequences of including two schools in the Overton South Design-Historic District, but the leader of the Overton South neighborhood group questions the need for such concern.

Ed Irons, superintendent of schools, said that administrators oppose the inclusion of Lubbock High School and Thompson Junior High School in the historic district because the future market for the properties could be restricted by standards imposed on the school buildings.

But Roger Loter, president of the Overton South Neighborhood Association, questions why the school district would want to sell the two schools.

"I would hope with the LEAP program (a magnet project designed to draw students to Lubbock High) at Lubbock High and the city's commitment on the revitalization of Central Lubbock, there would be no need for the school district to ever contemplate" selling the buildings.

Loter said that if Central Lubbock were revitalized, there would be a need for schools in the area.

Irons fears there would be few willing buyers of the buildings because owners would have to conform to historic district standards requiring that new construction or remodeling of existing buildings be compatible with one of the architectural styles featured in Overton South.

Irons also explained that school officials' last minute opposition to including the schools in the historic district is the result of a bureaucratic foul-up.

Final approval of the boundaries and landmarks recommended for the district is expected to be discussed by the city council next week.

Irons said that previous notices of hearings concerning the district were never received by LISD central office officials.

Irons said he contacted the city when he learned the ramifications of participation in the district from a September newspaper account of plans for the historic district.

He said he found that notices of the hearings by the Urban Design Commission and the Planning and Zoning Commission were sent to the individual schools this summer rather than to the central office.

The principal of Thompson received neither notice, said Irons, and the principal of Lubbock High received only one of the notices.

Lubbock High principal Knox Williams said he sent the notice back to the city with a note that he was not opposed to maintenance or upkeep of the neighborhood, but said he made no reference to Lubbock High School.

Irons said the decision to oppose the boundaries for the historic district was made after "a lot of research" into the consequences of participating in the district.

Irons said, "We cannot tie the hands of future boards and future administrators" who want to sell the buildings "We have to sell to the highest bidder. We're talking about tax money here."

Irons added he thinks "it's great" that Overton South is attempting to preserve the neighborhood, but said he had to be concerned with the school district and not just isolated neighborhoods.

Irons pointed to the planned addition of a greenhouse at Lubbock High as a problem for the school district if the school were included in the historic district, because "any addition or renovation that would change the exterior of the building" would be prohibited.

Loter said, however, that the school district would merely have to apply to the Urban Design Commission for permission to expand and the architecture would have to be compatible with the Lubbock High architecture — "they wouldn't have to have a Spanish colonnade for the greenhouse."

Loter said he believes school officials, as well as many residents, do not understand or do not know the standards for the district.

School district attorneys and city officials have questioned whether the city could enforce the standards of the historic district on the school buildings because the two entities are two equal legal units.

Loter acknowledged the legal question involved, but said whether the buildings are included in the district or not, the school board should make a commitment to preserve the architecture of a school like Lubbock High.

Government Limits Playing Of Song

NICE, France (AP) — A government official has promised that a controversial pop rendition of "La Marseillaise," the French national anthem, will not be aired on national radio more than once a week.

The new version, by Serge Gainsbourg provoked a protests by war veterans and French nationalists when it was aired last june. The accused Gainsbourg of profaning the memory of Frnce's war dead.

Maurice Plantier, Secretary of State for War Veterans, said the government restriction was not enough. "I want it totally repressed"

Early-October Votes Of Area Members Of Congress Listed

HOUSE

VISTA VETOES — The House adopted 229 for and 178 against, an amendment permitting local officials to keep Federal Volunteers in Service to America projects out of their areas. VISTA volunteers give economic, educational, health and social assistance to the poor.

The amendment, attached to a bill (HR 2859) authorizing domestic volunteer programs, was one of several offered to counter alleged political activism in VISTA. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo., the sponsor of the amendment, said Washington must realize it cannot "force down the throats of local communities those things that they are resistant to" . . .

Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., an opponent, said the amendment would politicize VISTA "by bringing politicians into a situation to engage in harassment of poor people . . ."

Members voting "yea" favored the local veto.

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Jim Mattox, D-5, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Mickey Leland, D-18, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, and Abraham Kazen, D-23, voted "nay."

Rep. Martin Frost, D-24, did not vote.

LEAA MONEY — The House rejected, 183 for and 224 against, an amendment to enable small police departments to get Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grants for buying equipment. It was proposed to an LEAA bill (HR 2061) the thrust of which was to direct federal crime-fighting grants away from equipment purchases and toward improving the criminal justice process. The bill was headed toward final passage and the Senate.

Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., the sponsor, said his amendment was needed because otherwise the bill prohibited small communities "from getting the actual things they need such as photographic equipment in order to take photographs . . . at the scene of a crime right after the crime has been committed."

Rep. Lamar Gudger, D-N.C., an opponent, said "the greatest criticism against the LEAA in recent history was the use by so many law enforcement agencies of federal dollars . . . to buy hardware . . ."

Members voting "nay" did not want LEAA grants to fund small equipment purchases by police and sheriff's departments.

Eckhardt and Frost did not vote.

ABORTION — By a vote of 162 for and 234 against, the House refused to soften its hard line against federally-funded abortions.

The vote came on an amendment that would have continued present law, which permits subsidized abortions when pregnancy results from rape or incest, or when it will endanger the mother's life or long-term health. The House chose instead to allow taxpayer-financed abortions only when the mother's life is at stake.

The amendment was offered to a bill (HJ Res 413) providing funds for the Department of HEW that was approved and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., a supporter of the softening amendment, said "we are voting on whether poor women are going to have the same rights" as those who can afford to pay for abortion without government help.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., an opponent, said: "When we talk compromise on this issue what we are asked to compromise is human life."

Roberts and de la Garza did not vote.

SENATE

ENERGY BOARD — The Senate approved, by a vote of 68 for and 25 against, a bill creating an Energy Mobilization Board to speed projects intended to reduce U.S. oil imports.

The measure (S 1308) would permit the board to override other federal agencies if they failed to act on designated "fast-track" projects. The board could also waive certain state and local regulations. The bill was sent to the House.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., a supporter, said the bill would be the "centerpiece by which we really move in the field of energy."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, an opponent, said the bill's "unprecedented intrusions into the state and local prerogatives to protect the health and safety of citizens" are objectionable.

Members voting "yea" favored the energy board.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, John Tower, R, and Pete Domenici, R (N.M.), voted "yea."

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R (N.M.), voted "nay."

WORLD BANK — The Senate adopted, 50 for and 44 against, an amendment that killed House-passed language that would have prohibited U.S. contributions to the World Bank. Dozens of developed countries contribute to the bank, which in turn lends to Third World countries.

The vote came during debate on a foreign aid bill (HR 4473) later passed and sent to conference with the House. The language killed by this vote also sought to prevent World Bank loans to Cuba. In a separate vote, the Senate went on record as opposed to any U.S. foreign aid reaching Cuba.

Sen Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., sponor of the amendment, said the House-passed language must be killed because in the long run "it may mean the death" of the World Bank.

Sen. Harry Byrd, I-Va., an opponent of the amendment, said its message was "that we do not want to use tax funds directly to aid Cuba but it is all right to go in the back door and have tax funds used for that purpose."

Senators voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Tower, Domenici and Schmitt voted "nay."

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

STATE SEN. E. L. SHORT OF TAHOKA says a critical situation on fuels is facing West Texas farmers.

"Based upon the area's usage in the last six months, I feel there will not be enough gasoline available to gather these crops which are ready to harvest nor to prepare the land for next year's production," Short said in a letter to Gov. Bill Clements.

"This is a critical situation and I believe it deserves our immediate attention," Short said.

Short recalled that the governor three or four months ago was given authority to set priorities for gasoline. At that time, Short noted, the governor designated the urban areas of Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston and no rural areas.

"In West Texas, this is a critical time," Short said. "We are in the early stages of a tremendous harvest of food and fibers and the preparation of land for next year's crop production."

The senator said he has had several requests recently to assist in obtaining additional gasoline for the operation of dealerships and so on. It is his opinion, he said, that 85 percent of all the gasoline used in West Texas is consumed in the production of energy, foods and fibers, and-or related activities.

"THE LAND PREPARATION ITSELF for next year's crops is unique in this area," he said. "It is a standard conservation practice that the soils of West Texas be tilled extensively in the winter months and this takes a tremendous amount of both gasoline and diesel."

Pointing out that more energy is produced daily and annually in his senatorial district than in any other district in Texas, Short said it "seems strange to me that the gasoline priority goes to the urban areas.

"Much of the gasoline in our area is used by the people going out to tend to oil rigs, work over rigs and related oil field equipment, in order for there to be enough gasoline to keep everybody going," Short said. "There seems to be a gross inequity here concerning the gasoline priorities and to whom they are assigned."

Short, appointed during the last legislative session as chairman of the Special Subcommittee on Diesel Fuel Shortages in Agriculture, said it now is his understanding that a change has been made in the manner in which applications for set-aside are made, both for gasoline and diesel.

The senator said meetings earlier this year of his subcommittee with the Texas Energy Advisory Council, Fuel Allocation Office, and energy users and oil refiners had indicated there was a bottleneck in the processing of set-aside applications. These applications, he said, "consisted of a great number, even into the thousands."

It was determined, Short said, that the Fuel Allocation Office would work with the dealers and accept applications from them. Names and requests of farmers were to be listed, all for 100 percent agricultural use.

"THIS PROCESS DID WORK AND IT WAS reported back to our committee that the Fuel Allocation Office was making progress in catching up and processing the numerous requests," Short said. But now, he added, this policy apparently has been changed.

Short said he understands the Fuel Allocation Office now is requesting that each individual file separately. He said he also understands that "great numbers of requests" are being made and that the delay to farmers in getting applications processed is as much as a month.

"I would respectfully ask that you call these people on the carpet and try to figure out a more equitable manner for this to be accomplished," Short told Clements.

Short said it has come to his attention that if a farmer's application is for 3,000 gallons or less for diesel set-aside, it is "more or less automatically approved." But if the request is for 3,000 gallons or more, he said, it is "more or less not considered at all.

"I would like to know if this is the accepted practice at this time," Short said, "If so, this is pure discrimination, especially to West Texas farmers, because of the large operations that many of our people have. I do not believe the people who decided this method ever realized how much fuel it takes to operate the various farm units here in this vast area.

"Governor, let's face it — you have forgotten more about energy than most of us will ever know. But where the priorities lie might be another matter."

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED AN ERRATIC session mixed Wednesday with prices up 17 to off 33 points.

Trade buying and local short covering near the close managed to lift December from losses of as much as 52 points to close down 33 points at 65.74 cents, floor brokers said.

Nearby March lost seven points to finish at 66.20 cents on mixed commission house and local activity, while May traded thinly to close up 17 points at 67.17.

Receipts at the U. S. Department of Agriculture's classing office at Lubbock have edged upward to about 600 a day. Classings for the season total about 1,400 bales. Seasonal classing offices at Levelland and Lamesa will be opened Monday.

Increased Fertilizer Shortage Indicated

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

The fertilizer supply in 1979 was tight but will be tighter in the coming year, according to Ed Harre of Muscle Shoals, Ala., representative of the National Fertilizer Development Center of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Harre addressed about 400 delegates to the annual convention and exposition of the Texas Plant Food Institute here Wednesday at the Memorial Civic Center.

"There will be shortages amidst a glut," Harre said. "And the cost of fertilizer will be higher in 1980."

Though the production of nitrogen will increase by 1 million tons, Harre projected, the supply will not be sufficient to support the 5-6 percent growth in use.

Nitrogen, which was described as relatively inexpensive in the past, will be affected by both higher prices and shortages of natural gas used to produce it, he said. With increased demands, he said, the worldwide surplus will decrease to 1 percent.

"The trend of applying phosphates will get progressively tighter," Harre predicted, "as a result of a shortage of sulphur used in phosphate production."

The United States, which supplies 60 percent of the phosphate in world trade, is at 95 percent of capacity with no new growth anticipated, he said.

With inventories declining and no new sources of potash foreseen, Harre said, exports of the nutrient may need to be restricted in 1980.

Jerry Stoller of Houston, president of the Stoller Chemical Co., discussed the use of micro-nutrients.

"Micro-nutrients don't occur uniformly in the field," Stoller noted, "so farmers need to learn how to sample the soil and identify the presence or absence of nutrients."

Zinc deficiencies, for example, are beginning to surface on the High Plains, Stoller said, as farmers deep-plow sandy soils for erosion control.

The convention and exposition, with 50,000 square feet of exhibit space covered by 60 exhibitors, will continue today.

"The Profit Picture" will be the 8:30 a.m. topic for Ed Wheeler, president of The Fertilizer Institute of Washington, D. C. The exposition will be open from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. featuring the latest in agri-fertilizer industry products and equipment displayed by dealers from 14 states.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures rose and corn and soybeans were mostly higher Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Exporter buying in wheat and bullish indications on traders' price charts helped boost wheat futures, an analyst said. Dry weather in some winter wheat-producing states continued as a background factor, with scattered showers in those areas overnight failing to provide adequate moisture for planting and germination.

Cattle Futures Mixed

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 100 points lower to 27 higher on 27,470 cars Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. January led the decline with October and distant December higher...The market skidded 122 for a time after rising 72.

Initial buying continued from Tuesday and was prompted in part by the outlook for a constructive cattle on feed report. Evening up and profit taking sent prices lower as traders noted slow beef demand and mixed trand to cash cattle.

Deliveries total 1,938 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 94¼ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were off $1.50 to up $1.25 with the best top $66 per hundredweight which equals the lowest since August. Slaughter was 117,000 head. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 10,100 head.

Feeder cattle closed 32 to 75 lower with May the weakest after slipping 105. Sales totaled 3,005 lots. The market was up 75 early but ran into profit taking when some cash feeder cattle prices fell.

Increased feeder arrivals and uncertainty over beef demand also made for selling as did evening up ahead of today's cattle on feed report.

There have been 119 deliveries thus far. Cash feeder cattle were off $15 to up $5 with the best top $111 at San Antonio. About 6,600 head are expected today at the major terminals.

Hog futures closed 57 higher to 30 lower on 7,073 contracts. December was up the most at the day's high and the best in two weeks. August led distant months lower. Early loss of 62 followed lower cattle.

Light hog runs and higher prices brought support as did continued firmness in most pork products despite the heavy kill this week. The discount of futures to cash was also a positive influence.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 at 69 to 74 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to up $2 with the best top $36.65 per hundredweight at Indianapolis. Kill was 365,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 32,000 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 50 higher to 27 lower on 5,744 cars. May was up the most with July at the most loss. Prices were down 100 to up 65 early.

Some profit taking followed Tuesday's rally when cattle futures eased. Later support was generated by light hog runs and higher prices coupled with firmness in cash bellies despite the increased slaughter this week.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 at 29 to 31½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

HEW Seeking Awareness Of Possible Careers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is seeking to make elementary and secondary school students more aware of career opportunities available to them.

The Office of Education established an information program aimed at spreading the word about federally funded career education programs.

NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF CLASS ACTION TO:
(1) All those voters in the City of Lubbock who signed a petition for an election to be called on the proposed amendments to the Charter of the City of Lubbock.
(2) All those voters in the City of Lubbock who did not sign the described petition.
NO. 95,710
CITY OF LUBBOCK, PLAINTIFF
VS.
ROBERT D. GREEN, CARROLL F. GARNER, DANIEL J. FAULKNER, AND STEPHEN M. SWINT, INDIVIDUALLY AND AS REPRESENTATIVES OF THE SIGNERS OF PETITIONS FOR CHARTER AMENDMENTS, DEFENDANTS

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF LUBBOCK COUNTY, TEXAS 140TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT
NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF CLASS ACTION

You are hereby notified that the District Court of Lubbock County, Texas, 140th Judicial District, has ordered that the above-captioned action proceed as a class action consisting of two separate and distinct classes as follows:

(a) Primary class — All those voters in the City of Lubbock who signed a petition for an election to be called on the following proposed Charter Amendments:

1. The annual ad valorem taxes levied by the governing authority of the City government shall not exceed the rate of $1.12 per $100.00 valuation of taxable property.
YES NO
2. The annual ad valorem taxes levied by the governing authority of the City government shall not exceed 60% of the fair market value of the property as the assessed valuation of property subject to tax.
YES NO
3. The annual ad valorem taxes levied by the governing authority of the City government shall not be increased on the basis of an increase in the rate of evaluation of taxable property nor on the assessed valuation of property subject to tax, from the preceding tax year, without first securing approval of said increase at an election submitting said proposed increase to the voters of the City of Lubbock. Said increase, if any, requiring a majority vote for its approval.
YES NO

which petitions were presented to the City Council on July 12, 1979.

(b) Secondary class — All those voters in the City of Lubbock, Texas who did not sign the petitions described in paragraph (a) above.

The City of Lubbock, a home rule municipal corporation, has commenced this legal action in this Court seeking a Declaratory Judgment. In this action the Court shall determine questions of construction involving art. 8 sec. 21 of the Constitution of this State, art. 11 sec. 5 of the Constitution of this State, art. 7246c, Vernon's Annotated Civil Statutes of Texas, art. 1165, Vernon's Annotated Civil Statutes of Texas, art. 609e-15, Vernon's Annotated Civil Statutes of Texas, art. 1170, Vernon's Annotated Civil Statutes of Texas, and Senate Bill 621 (Property Tax Code) in order to ascertain the City of Lubbock's duties under the petitions presented to call an election on the proposed Charter Amendments.

THE COURT HAS NOT EXPRESSED ANY OPINION ON THE MERITS OF THE ACTION AND THE SENDING OF THIS NOTICE IS NOT TO BE CONSTRUED AS AN EXPRESSION OF ANY OPINION BY THE COURT.

The purpose of this notice is simply to advise the members of both of the classes above-described that the action has been brought and the rights of each member of both classes with respect thereto as follows:

1. You will be included in the primary class if you have signed the aforementioned petitions for an election on three proposed amendments to the Lubbock City Charter and any judgment will be binding on you.
2. If the Court deems it appropriate to assess court costs against such primary class you may be liable to share, proportionately in the court costs so assessed.
3. You will be included in the secondary class of voters in the City of Lubbock who have not signed the petitions aforementioned if you choose to enter your appearance in this cause and can show
(a) a justiciable interest and
(b) a justiciable controversy
in the pending litigation. If you choose to enter this litigation as members of the secondary class, you are advised that any judgment entered by the Court will be binding upon you.
4. If the Court deems it appropriate to assess court costs against such secondary class you may be liable to share proportionately in any court costs as assessed.
5. The attorney representing the primary class as described above is E. Warren Goss, 1607 Broadway, Lubbock, Texas 79401.
6. The attorney ad litem representing the secondary class as described herein is Leota Alexander, 1107 Main, Lubbock, Texas 79401.

Davis Insists He Was 'Really Victim' In Alleged Death Plot

FORT WORTH (AP) — Millionaire defendant Cullen Davis ended six days of cross examination Wednesday after claiming he was "really the victim of this whole thing."

He told the jury in his murder-solicitation trial he did not concoct the critical "FBI connection" and denied plotting mass murder with informant David McCrory.

"You thought you were cooperating with the FBI and here they turn around and arrest you, is that right?" asked prosecutor Jack Strickland.

"Yes, that's what happened," Davis replied.

"If I understand it correctly," Strickland asked sarcastically, "you, and not Judge Joe Eidson, are really the victim in this whole thing...?"

"That's true," Davis snapped.

"Pass the witness," Strickland said, shaking his head in mock disbelief.

Davis, 46, took the stand almost two weeks ago to tell his version of the summertime 1978 events that led to his arrest in a purported murder-for-hire scheme.

He said he did not induce McCrory to arrange the killing of Eidson or anyone else but was tricked into discussing money and murder by his onetime friend turned informant.

"I've always known him to be a loser," Davis said of his chief accuser.

At the heart of the defense theory is the contention by Davis that he was acting on instructions from a purported FBI agent when he met with McCrory last year.

He said a man identifying himself as agent Jim Acree telephoned him 10 days before his arrest and told him to "play along" with McCrory to expose an extortion plot.

But after his arrest, Strickland demonstrated Wednesday, Davis did not demand to see Acree nor did he tell his attorney friend Hershel Payne of the FBI connection.

Davis said Payne and another business associate visited him at the jail on Aug. 21, the day after his arrest, to discuss a uranium property.

"Did you in any way mention to Hershel Payne that you thought ... you were working for the FBI?" Strickland asked.

"We did not discuss the subject," he said.

"... Did you advise Hershel Payne on Aug. 21 that 'this is some terrible mistake ... some terribe misunderstanding?'"

Davis said he did not recall saying that.

Strickland: Did you say, "Hershel, go down there and find Jim Acree and find out what the devil's going on?"

Davis: I know I didn't say that.

When Strickland suggested the reason Davis did not tell Payne was because he "hadn't thought of it yet," the defendant declared:

"That's not correct."

Strickland likewise suggested that Davis did not summon Acree to appear at his bond hearing "because you had not yet concocted this story."

"No," said Davis, "that's not true."

Senator Says Kennedy Bill Not Answer To Immigrant Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal allowing more Mexican immigrants to legally enter the United States would set a precedent for other nations to be treated the same way, Sen. Walter Huddleston said Thursday.

"The piecemeal addition of a few tens of thousands of people in the category of refugees, a few tens of thousands of people from one particular from the next point of pressure, is not the way to build a coherent and logical immigration system," Huddleston said.

The bill would allow immigration from Mexico and Canada to rise above the 20,000 annual ceiling per nation. Any part of the quota not used by one border nation could be shifted for the other to use the next year.

Since immigration from Canada is well below its current quota, the balance of the proposed 70,000 total quota could be expected to go to Mexico.

A quota of 20,000 immigrants per year is currently in effect for each nation, with no provision for Canada's unused portion to shift to Mexican immigration.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the increase was proposed to relieve "a serious and unfortunate backlog" in visa applicatons from immediate family members of permanent resident aliens.

Kennedy, the bill's sponsor and the committee's chairman, said Mexican applicants for visas to the United States under that section of the immigration law now wait almost nine years.

Huddleston said nations such as Taiwan and the Philippines also have substantial backlogs of family applicants, and approving the bill would create pressure to increase other quotas.

Al Perez of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund said increasing the quota would improve U.S.-Mexican relations, help families to be reunited and protect the rights of illegal immigrants.

"I believe that the futures of the United States and Mexico are inextricably linked," Perez said in a prepared statement. "These relations compel a favored-nation status for Mexico, particularly with regard to the numerical quota, a quota that at 20,000 is much too low."

David Crosland, acting commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, testified that the administration would support a quota of 35,000 immigrants each for Mexico and Canada.

The bill would allow the quotas to be increased but does not specify a figure.

The bill also includes provisions that Crosland said would streamline immigration procedures at a savings of at least $1 million a year.

Silver Mining Firm Sets Out To Mint Coins

DALLAS (AP) — Sunshine Mining Co. wants to hitch its star and its stock to the rising price of silver by "Americanizing" international silver trade and taking other bold steps that could include minting its own silver coin.

Sunshine's president, G. Michael Boswell, has sold off all the Dallas-based company's assets except its silver mining operations near Kellogg, Idaho. The money has been reinvested in silver production, refining and marketing.

"We are going to eliminate everything between what happens to the price of silver and the price of our stock," Boswell said Wednesday. "We want Sunshine (stock) to clearly reflect the price movements of the products we mine and sell."

Boswell's strategy is to make it cheaper and easier to buy Sunshine stock than to purchase silver coins or bullion.

Boswell says Sunshine is even considering minting its own troy-ounce silver coin and market it, somewhat like South Africa has marketed its gold Krugerrand.

He said a plan to pay stockholders in silver instead of dollars also is under consideration.

Sunshine's adventures come in the wake of what Boswell calls the "Hunt International trauma." He refers to a tender offer by Hunt International, later withdrawn, and Sunshine's subsequent purchase of Hunt's 1.6 million shares of Sunshine stock.

Sunshine has used the $31 million it gained from selling manufacturing assets to, among other things, buy a London-based silver trading company to make entry into the international silver market easier.

"The silver trade is still using 150-year-old methods," Boswell said. He plans to introduce "American methods" to the trade. "It has not been systematically attacked with modern business techniques," Boswell said.

Sunshine also has made plans for an Idaho refinery using a Sunshine-developed chemical electrolysis technique, making the company's final product silver bullion instead of silver ore.

Exploration rights also have been pursued in several states, and a new shaft at the Idaho mine hopefully will boost production by 80 percent in three years.

Calling the silver market "out of kilter," Boswell said, "We want to put ourselves in position to take advantage of that opportunity."

TRIBES WANT REGULATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization of 25 American Indian tribes recommended Wednesday that the tribes themselves be allowed to regulate coal surface mining and reclamation on their land. The Council of Energy Resource Tribes made its recommendations in a 300-page report called for by the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 and prepared under a contract with the Interior Department's Office of Surface Mining.

Cosmetic Tycoon Robbed

NEW YORK (AP) — Police say three gunmen took perhaps $1 million worth of jewelry and $2,000 in cash from the luxurious three-story East Side home of cosmetics tycoon Estee Lauder.

ESTEE LAUDER

"It was well rehearsed and well planned," said one policeman.

There were no injuries to Mrs. Lauder, chairman and co-founder of the $100 million cosmetics firm that bears her name, or to four other people who were there at the time.

Police said a man wearing a chauffeur's uniform came to a side door of the house about 5:30 p.m. and said he was there to pick up Mrs. Lauder.

When the man was questioned by the real chauffeur, John Drummand, he pulled a gun and forced his way inside, with two partners following.

Mrs. Lauder, hearing them coming up the stairs, locked herself inside her bedroom, police said.

But the men kicked in the door. Under threat of her life, Mrs. Lauder opened a safe containing the valuables, police said.

The thieves then tied up and taped the mouths of Mrs. Lauder, Drummand, an unidentified family friend and two maids. They were discovered a half hour later when Mrs.Lauder's husband, Joseph, arrived home.

Beating Hogs 'Sure Thing'

AUSTIN (UPI) — Mayor Carole McClellan, in what she calls a sure thing, has made a bet with the mayor of Little Rock, Ark., on the outcome of Saturday's Southwest Conference game between undefeated Arkansas and Texas.

If Mrs. McClellan loses, she'll wear what she calls an "obscene" red razorback hat to next week's council meeting.

If she wins, Little Rock Mayor Webb Hubbell will wear an orange cap with horns on it to his next council session.

"I am absolutely confident Texas is going to pevail decisively on the field," Mrs. McClellan said.

"I have no doubt."

Investment Loser Sues

DALLAS (AP) — A man convicted of attempting to bribe Addison Police Chief Richard Sullivan says he wants his $6,400 in bribe money back so he can pay his attorney.

The lawyer for John Handy Jones filed a claim for the money in state appeals court this week.

A state district court judge ruled June 27 that the money belonged to the state and Dallas County.

The appeal, filed by attorney Mel Bruder, says the money rightfully belongs to his client.

Jones was convicted in 1976 of offering the money to Sullivan in exchange for freedom to fly marijuana in and out of the Addison Airport, just north of Dallas. He did not appeal his conviction.

No date has been set for the appeals court to hear arguments in the case.

Barrow Headstone Stolen

DALLAS (AP) — As if Clyde Barrow didn't have enough trouble in his lifetime, somebody's made off with his headstone again.

Barrow and his machine-gun-toting moll, Bonnie Parker, have been buried in Dallas since they died in a hail of police gunfire in a 1934 ambush in Arcadia, La.

Ever since, their tombstones have been a favorite target of pranksters, usually about the time of the Texas-Oklahoma football game.

Last weekend, police officer Vance Shearer took his rookie partner by the Western Heights Cemetery just west of downtown to show him the landmark stone.

Sure enough, it was gone.

Investigators figure the hefty stone was spirited north across the Red River and has been secreted in some Norman, Okla., fraternity house.

"We are assuming they did it again, partly because of the time and partly because lifting something that heavy would have taken several people and an organized effort," Shearer said.

Swap With The Pope

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — It was a papal cap swap.

During Pope John Paul II's recent visit to America, seminarian Robert Cunningham confronted the pontiff outside the chapel at St. Charles Borromeo Seminary and held out a white skull cap, called a zuccheto.

Cunningham said he stepped into the pope's view and called, "Holy Father."

"He turned, looked at me and saw me holding the zuccheto. He smiled, gesturing towards me and I walked towards him."

Cunningham said the pope asked, "For me?"

When Cunnigham replied that it was, the pope said, "Nice, nice."

ELVIS' WIDOW IN NEW YORK — Priscilla Presley, widow of Elvis Presley, looks out from the set of ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" in New York Wednesday. Elvis' three stepbrothers and their mother, Dee Presley, have revealed that the three times Elvis was hospitalized between 1973 and 1975 were "to dry out from drugs." That disclosure was made in copywrighted pre-publication excerpts from their biography of Elvis—"Elvis: We Love You Tender." The excerpts appear in the November edition of Ladies Home Journal. 'Too Many Laws'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti says there are too many laws on the books.

BENJAMIN CIVILETTI

"I'd recommend alternate sessions of Congress — one to pass laws, the other to repeal them," he said half-seriously in the October issue of Johns Hopkins Magazine, published by Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

"The attorney general takes an oath to execute and faithfully enforce laws, but he doesn't have to advocate never-ending proliferation of law — every time an issue comes up, you cannot pass a law — nor does he have to execute the law without using discretion," Civiletti said.

Pompons Traded For Pads

CORAOPOLIS, Pa. (UPI) — Kelley Etters, 11, used to lead cheers for a midget football league, but she didn't like performing on the sidelines.

So the blonde, blue-eyed lass turned in her pompons at the end of last season and now wears football helmet and pads.

"I hated cheerleading," she said. "I wanted to be out on the field where the action was."

Kelley, a lineman, suits up for the Panthers in the Pee Wee football league sponsored by the Cornell Youth Athletic Association. Her coaches praise her ability.

"I don't even think twice when I need someone to fill a spot on the line," said Gary Flasco, head coach of the Panthers. "If I need her I send her in."

"She can block better than half the guys on this team, and hit harder, too," said Ray McCutcheon, one of the assistant coaches under Flasco.

Kelley signed up for Pee Wee football in July, after pestering her mother for a chance to play. Her brother, Tom, 13, also plays for the Panthers and a younger brother, Tim, plays for another team.

"After I tried to talk her out of it, I tried to talk her into it," said her mother, Kathy Etters. "I'm all for it, but I Told her once she started she couldn't quit."

Mrs. Etters shrugs off the effect of the rough and tumble sport on her daughter's femininity.

"She has plenty of time to act like a lady. Right now she's a kid and I want her to have fun like a kid," she said.

Kelley, 4-foot-8, keeps her weight just below the 130-pound maximum pound and enjoys stopping a sneering opponent dead in his tracks.

Dying Boy, 7, Gets Wish To Be Cub Scout

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Gilbert Hurley is dying but more than anything else he wanted to be a Cub Scout.

The frail boy, in the twilight of his life at the age of 7, was granted his wish Monday. The Scouts bent their rules a bit to make it possible.

Cub Scouts are supposed to be 8 years old or in the third grade. Gilbert, who has spent all but 6 months of his life in hospitals, is neither, and he may never be.

The boy has a respiratory disease that doctors say may end his life before his eighth birthday, only a week away.

Scout officials waived the rules and allowed Gilbert to become a full-fledged Cub in a special induction ceremony at Children's Memorial Hospital.

The child's blue eyes sparkled when he talked about his plans as a Cub.

"I'm going to learn the Cub Scout Promise and the Law of the Pack," he said. "I want to learn how to cook, and tie knots. I want to collect butterflies, and stamps, and shells."

Lloyd Kingsbury, a recreational therapist at the hospital, agreed to be Gilbert's cubmaster.

"We'll start cooking this week," Kingsbury told the boy. "I'll teach you the Cub Scout Promise and the Law of the Pack."

Gilbert's parents, Eddie and Jeanie Hurley of Waurika, Okla., said he has not been told the gravity of his health.

"We believe he knows," Mrs. Hurley said.

Stargell Named MVP

Pirates Win 4-1, Capture Series

BALTIMORE (AP) — Remarkable Willie Stargell cracked a game-winning two-run homer Wednesday night to give Pittsburgh a 4-1 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles and make the Pirates only the fourth team to overcome a 3-1 game deficit and take a best-of-seven World Series.

Stargell, known affectionately as "Pops" by the rest of the Pirates, put the third of his four hits for the night over his team's bullpen in the sixth inning for his third homer of the 1979 Series.

He was the 40th player in World Series history to get four hits in a game and the fourth batter to do so in this Series.

Stargell unloaded against left-hander Scott McGregor, who pitched a courageous game in defeat for the Orioles.

D ★ SPORTS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Thursday, Oct. 18, 1979

Phil Garner opened with a double to left — his 12th hit of the Series — and scored on Omar Moreno's third hit of the game.

A single by Tim Foli moved Moreno to third and then Dave Parker and Bill Robinson were hit by pitches, forcing home the final Pirates run.

The Series loss, after they had won three of the first four games, was a heartbreaker for the Orioles. They went into a stifling slump after Game Four and never came out of it, snapping a string of 21 scoreless innings with a run in the third.

They launched a crowd-thrilling comeback attempt in the eighth inning that was ended by Pirate relief ace Kent Tekulve with three Orioles standing on the bags. Tekulve, the fourth Pittsburgh pitcher went on to complete a four-hitter.

Pittsburgh's historic comeback from the 3-1 deficit matched the accomplishment of their 1925 club that came back against the Washington Senators, the Detroit Tigers against the St. Louis Cardinals in 1968 and the New York Yankees against the Milwaukee Braves in 1958.

The Boston Red Sox did it against Pittsburgh in 1903, when the Series was best-of-nine.

McGregor nursed a 1-0 lead through the first five innings, a lead provided by a third-inning home run by Rich Dauer that set off a long, loud celebration by the crowd of 53,733 that included President Jimmy Carter and Speaker of the House Thomas "Tip" O'Neill.

Willie the Wonder Man wasted no time. He jumped on the first pitch from McGregor and sent it soaring high and far into the night. From the crack of the bat it was gone, another one of his rainbow homers that landed beyond the Pittsburgh bullpen in right field well over 400 feet from home plate.

It was Stargell who also scored the winning run in the final game of the 1971 Series, a seven-game showcase for the late Roberto Clemente. But 1979 belonged to "Pops," who was named the Series' most valuable player.

Stargell sparked his club with a record seven extra-base hits, four doubles and the three home runs, in this World Series. His 25 total bases tied the Series record set by Reggie Jackson in 1977.

Stargell has made the Bucs' chase to the title a personal crusade this season. He was the source of strength in the clubhouse and started the "Family" slogan that accompanied the team through

Quinney Always Around Football

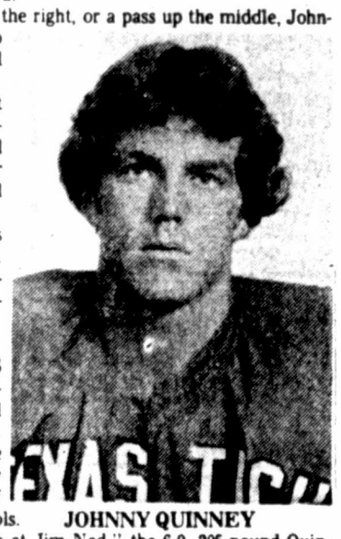
HOW MANY TIMES HAVE YOU heard one of those stuffy television color commentators describe one of the NFL's top linebackers? Nine times out of ten it goes something like — "Frank, the man simply has a nose for the football."

A nose for the football — let's see, that pertains to Jack Lambert, Randy Gradishar, Bill Bergey, D.D. Lewis and about a dozen other linebackers in pro football.

At Texas Tech, that description fits Johnny Quinney.

Quinney, a senior linebacker from Tuscola, isn't a flashy football player. Hard-nosed, tough, dependable, consistent and determined are better adjectives to use when his name is mentioned.

Be it a run to the left, a sweep to the right, or a pass up the middle, Johnny Quinney will be in the vicinity to lend a hand in bringing down the ball carrier.



JOHNNY QUINNEY

After six games, Quinney leads the Red Raiders in tackles with 54. He's made 33 of them all by his lonesome. He's also recovered one fumble and intercepted one pass.

BEFORE HIS PLAYING DAYS at Tech, Quinney was a standout performer at little Jim Ned High School in Tuscola, 30 miles south of Abilene. Quinney's parents moved to Abilene before his senior year, but Quinney wanted to stay at Jim Ned instead of playing at one of Abilene's larger schools.

"I always enjoyed the atmosphere at Jim Ned," the 6-0, 205-pound Quinney said. "All my friends were there and I'd been a part of school for three years. I really didn't have any desire to attend one of the big high schools."

So Quinney made the 60-mile round-trip from home to school daily. It didn't bother him and it didn't bother Jim Ned football coach Larry Aldridge. Quinney, who played running back and free safety, rushed for 1,987 yards and scored 227 points in leading the Indians to 13 straight victories before they were stopped in the Class A state semi-finals in 1974.

"Coach Aldridge played a very important role in my going to college and playing college football," Quinney recalled. "He told me after my junior year that he thought I was good enough to play in college. So I worked all summer to get in the best shape I could before my senior season. It paid off because I had the kind of year it takes to impress the college scouts."

TECH, RICE AND TCU went after Quinney, as did many of the Lone Star Conference schools such as Abilene Christian and San Angelo State. Quinney liked Tech.

"At the time, my brother was living in Lubbock and I was real impressed with the friendliness of the people and the attitude of the players I met. I felt Tech had a winning program going."

Quinney, who has earned two letters, started nine games in 1978 at free safety, but was moved to inside linebacker during spring drills. He made 46 tackles and had two interceptions and two fumble recoveries last season at the safety spot, but made the move the linebacker because he felt it would strengthen Tech's defense.

"I WAS A LITTLE apprehensive at first, but the whole idea is to try and get the 11 best athletes on the field at one time," Quinney stated. "I knew I couldn't compete with Ted Watts (Tech's present free safety) in the speed department, so I did what the coaches thought was best.

"Things went well right off the bat during the spring. I liked the position and I've been here since."

Quinney did have to adjust his playing technique once he made the change.

CLASS A ROUNDUP

District Tough Enough For Two Losses

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

With talented teams stacked two, three and even four deep in at least two of three districts, it's a sure bet there's going to be some spirited football played during the waning weeks of the season.

Vega and Kress are sure to resume their annual battle again this year, with Springlake-Earth a possible dark horse contender in District 3-A.

In District 4-A, there are more candidates than you can shake a stick at. New Deal, Hale Center, Crosbyton and Petersburg are all lining up for shots at the crown. One thing's almost certain, one defeat won't knock anybody out of the race.

Then there's District 5-A where the two best Class A teams on the South Plains must also make room for defensive Plains.

As you can see, nothing's for sure except that, eventually, the season will end. So let's take a look at the area, district by district.

DISTRICT 3-A: This is one district where nobody is super strong, but that doesn't mean there won't be a fight. It's just that more people will be able to get in on it.

Defending champ Vega looks solid with a 3-1-1 record (wins over White Deer, Sunray and Friona) but Kress, again, is making its presence known.

Al Mitts' Kangaroos have a speedy running back in Eddy Johnson (a 122.8 yard per game rusher). He paces an offense that is averaging 364 yards a game.

Defense is Springlake-Earth's strong suit and the Wolverines are ranked fifth on the South Plains in that category. A stingy 223 average belies a 1-3-1 record that includes losses to title contenders Amherst (in Class B) and Hale Center (in Class A).

DISTRICT 4-A: You can tell how stacked this district is by looking at the standings. Four teams finished the predistrict season with winning records.

Leading that list, of course, is defending champ New Deal. The Lions have quietly gone about piling up a 5-1 record without beating anybody of note. Their sole loss was in the opener against Idalou.

But make no mistake, those huge linemen and speedy backs are for real. Defensively, New Deal is allowing an average of only 141 yards a game, nearly half it's offensive output.

The Lions like to spread the goodies around. So much so, in fact, that their leading rusher, Tony Howell, is averaging only 76 yards a game.

That's not the case with Petersburg. The Buffaloes may be averaging 351 yards a game, but you can be sure who's getting the lions' share, back Mike Phillips.

Phillips is averaging 138 yards a game, but more tellingly, has carried an average of 23 times.

Hale Center's got three good backs, but Gordon Compton is probably the best. He's got the most yards anyway, a 115-yard average. As a whole, the Owl offense is averaging 275 yards a game while their stout defense allows only 170.

What's Crosbyton done this year? Nobody seems to know. And yet the Chiefs are 4-1 on the year and are outscoring their opponents nearly three to one. Offensively, Crosbyton is averaging 265 yards a game. Defensively, the Chiefs are allowing 174.

DISTRICT 5-A: As we said before, all this district has are possibly the two best teams in the area.

First there's Seagraves, undefeated and nearly untouched through five games. The Eagles have outscored their opponents by an average of nearly 39-5, and their stats show why.

Seagraves is averaging 392 yards a game on offense, by far the best on the South Plains. The main thrust to that attack is, as with all Jim Eddins teams, the running game.

This year the Eagles are blessed with three talented backs, Ronnie Griffin perhaps the most so. He's averaging 131.6 yards a game despite carrying only about 13 times each contest. Then there's Davis Morgan, also averaging at over 100 yards a game. And last, but not least, there's Johnny Castro, averaging almost 80 yards a contest.

Not to be overlooked is the Eagle defense, led by monstrous lineman Mike McCormick, a 6-10, 235-pounder who was an all-South Plains pick last year. Seagraves is allowing its foes only 124 yards a game on offense, second best in the area.

Who's best in the area? That's Stanton with a 123 average. The Buffs are also undefeated on the year, with a tie against McCamey. On the plus side, Stanton numbers a 28-14 upset of Class AA power Tahoka among its victories.

Leading the Stanton offense, averaging right at 300 yards a game, is quarterback Craig Eiland. He's averaging almost 100 yards a game passing, having completed 31 passes out of 59 attempts. For you stats buffs, that's an average of almost 16 yards a connection.

No matter how good Stanton and Seagraves are (they will meet Nov. 9 in the next to the last game of the year), you can't overlook a team that plays defense like Plains does.

The Cowboys haven't been out of the game against anybody they've played, holding every opponent to two touchdowns or less.

They also showed they can play some offense, as quarterback Jimmy McElroy, a sophomore, has guided Plains to 54-7 and 24-0 wins in his last two outings.

Owls' Abundant Talent Belies Depressing 1-5 Season Record

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Rice University has played six football games in 1979. And the Owls have lost five of them — giving up 206 points and scoring only 78 in the process.

But despite the losing record and the unimpressive statistics, the Owls possess some talented and capable athletes. Athletes able to whip an opponent if they are not held in check.

The Owls come to Lubbock Saturday for a 2 p.m. Dad's Day meeting with the Texas Tech Red Raiders. While the Red Raiders will be trying to hold Rice in check, they will also be trying to improve their 2-3-1 record.

The Owls have had many offensive shortcomings, but one of them isn't senior running back Earl Cooper — a 6-2, 225-pounder who represents a dangerous combination of power and speed. Cooper has been Rice's offensive show so far this season.

The versatile Cooper has rushed for 361 yards and scored three touchdowns on the ground. He has also caught 28 passes for 283 yards and another TD. Cooper leads the Southwest Conference in receiving with 4.7 receptions per game.

Cooper is the type of performer who can turn a game around on one play. He turned in a 70-yard touchdown run against Oklahoma three weeks ago and then scored on a 68-yard pass-run play the following week against that super Texas defense. Without a doubt, Cooper is always a threat when he has the football.

"Earl Cooper is a great running back," declared Tech head coach Rex Dockery. "Our defense will have to slow him down in order for us to win the game."

"Earl is having an exceptionally good year for us," Rice's second-year head man Ray Alborn stated. "He's done it all for us. I don't see how anyone could leave him off their all-conference team. He's done a great job and I'm tickled to death for him."

The Owls also have a dangerous quarterback in Randy Hertel. Although the 6-1, 180-pounder is not having the type of year throwing the football that he did in 1978 (Hertel finished second behind SMU's Mike Ford in SWC stats last year with 167.7 yards per game passing), Hertel remains a capable passer. The junior signal caller is currently ranked eighth in the conference passing standings with 88.1 points, but he is first in total offense with an average of 152.8 yards per game. Hertel has passed for an incredible 1,027 yards, but he's been intercepted 16 times in only six games.

Joining Hertel and Cooper in the Rice backfield will be freshman fullback Tim Sanders (5-7, 195) and senior wingback Bo Broeren (6-0, 175). Broeren is replacing the injured Mike Firestone, who has been slowed with a knee injury.

Rice's offensive line consists of junior center Keith Kveton (6-3, 225), sophomore tackles Mark Ricks (6-5, 238) and Paul Garcia (6-2, 240) and guards John Joyce (6-3, 240, senior) and Bobby Wilburn (6-2, 225, sophomore).

Rice also has several standouts on its defensive unit — namely junior end Will Rub (6-4, 216), junior linebacker Lamont Jefferson (6-0, 205) and senior cornerback Don Rutledge (5-11, 178).

The front three for the Owls consists of sophomore noseguard Kyle Rice (6-2, 240) and tackles Bryan Hill (6-2, 215, sophomore) and Tom Adams (6-2, 260, junior).

Rutledge will be assisted in the secondary by fellow cornerback Rickey Thomas, a 6-0, 167-pound junior, and junior safeties David Darr (5-11, 177) and Mike Downs (6-3, 177).

The Pirates' fifth World Series championship did not come easily.

First they had to overcome Dauer's early homer. The Orioles' second baseman had only nine all season and 20 in his three years with Baltimore, but he reached Pittsburgh starter Jim Bibby for a shot into the left field bleachers on the first pitch of the third inning.

Disappointed Orioles fans began to stream out of the stadium moments before the Pirates clinched their title as Tekulve struck out Gary Roenicke and Doug DeCinces, then got pinch-hitter Pat Kelly to loft a Series-ending fly ball to Omar Moreno in center field.

Tekulve was protected by security guards as he walked off the field.

President Carter stayed until the end, surrounded by Secret Service men who faced the stands and never watched the game. As the game ended, he headed for the winners' clubhouse to shake the victors' hands.

But a series begun in rain, cold and disappointment for the Pirates ended on the kind of warm autumn night that baseball looks for in its fall classic.

And baseball is out of tomorrows until next season.

Quinney Satisfied With Change To New Position

The hard-hitter had to get even more involved with the contact aspect of the game.

"I guess the biggest difference between the two positions is the amount of contact," Quinney added. "At safety to stay away from a lot of the contact because you have to keep your feet free. At linebacker you're in the middle of a lot of the contact. You have a responsibility to fill a hole or plug a gap and you get involved at the line of scrimmage much more."

Quinney is proud of Tech's defense.

"We take a lot of pride," Quinney said. "We realize the importance of good defense and we always try to get 11 men around the football. The most disappointing thing for us this season is we haven't been able to come up with as many big plays as we did last year.

"Last year we led the Southwest Conference in turnovers, but this year we just haven't been able to get that big interception or fumble."

This will be Quinney's last year to play for the Red Raiders, but he wants to stay with football. He wants to coach. He may stick around and become a graduate assistant for the Red Raiders next season or he may try to land a coaching position at the high school level.

If you have a chance to see the Red Raiders play the remainder of the season, keep an eye out for number 26, Johnny Quinney. He's the one with a nose for the football.

Dockery Says Owls Much-Improved

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Just ask him.

"Snuck up," repeated Dockery with a laugh. "Boy that's a nice way to put it — they like to gave me a heart attack."

Exactly what happened last year was that after the Raiders built up a 35-6 lead, the Owls came roaring back and Tech had to fight nail-and-tooth for a 42-28 victory.

And according to Dockery, the Raiders will face a much improved Owl outfit this Saturday in Jones Stadium.

"Rice is a lot better team than they were a year ago," said Dockery after practice Wednesday. "They're moving the ball a lot better and Earl Cooper is having a great year."

But Cooper may find it tough to run inside on the Raiders come Saturday. Because the middle of the line will be manned by one of the biggest athletes to don a Tech uniform in recent years.

"We're going to start Gabriel (Rivera) at noseguard this Saturday," said Dockery. "We feel like he merited a start after looking at the films from last week."

Big Gabe, the Raiders lovable giant, earned his first collegiate start by making 13 tackles — seven of them unassisted — against the Hogs last Saturday. But Dockery added that the coaching staff is still trying to get the 300-pound freshman to shed a few pounds.

Although that was the only lineup change that Dockery said the Tech staff had in mind, he also mentioned that freshman quarterback Jim Hart could play a bigger role against Rice.

"Jim's a good, quick athlete," said Dockery. "He got in all the work with the first team today and we think there's a good chance he'll get to play more this Saturday."

But how much playing time Hart will get could be determined by the physical status of No.1 quarterback Ron Reeves.

"Ron's still pretty sore from the Arkansas game," reported Dockery. "He hasn't been able to throw this week. But we're hoping that he'll be ready Friday."

Overall though, the Raiders are in good physical shape and Dockery indicated they would go with the same lineup — except for the change at noseguard — as last week's.

"I'm encouraged by our practice," he said. "I think the player's have responded well after the loss — that's good to see.

"Everybody wants to win. I guess if we didn't — we'd be in the wrong business."

Monterey, 'Dogs Set For District Clash

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Down in Coasta Caliche the natives would call it "muy conteste grande." But on the High Plains it's just a "big 'un, hon."

Sorry, but West Texican isn't a romantic language.

No matter, though, both terms fit tonight's meeting between Monterey and Plainview like a velvet-lined Riddell headgear. Kickoff for the important District 4-AAAA encounter is 7:30 p.m. at Lowrey Field.

The contest is the conference opener for both teams. But that's only about half the story. What's more important is that it pits the loop's two top teams. And although the new season is just getting unloaded, a loss could all but knock either the Plainsmen or the Bulldogs out of the playoff picture.

"I'd have to be crazy to say this wasn't an important game for both teams," commented MHS head coach James Odom.

If statistics told the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help them Knute, then there'd really be no need for PHS to show up for tonight's meeting.

On paper, the high school football contest is a mismatch from the word "hutt". But on the field, it's a different story. That's why they play games on grass and not wood-pulp.

Monterey enters the matchup with a 5-1 won-loss record, an average of 345.2 yards of total offense per game and a defensive mark of 131.0 per outing. It also owns the league's top runner, tailback Willie Johnson, and the number-two quarterback, Kent Potts.

After reading those stats, MHS head coach James Odom is no doubt shining his fingernails on his blue windbreaker somewhere.

Shed no tears for the Greg Sherwood-coached Bulldogs, though. Plainview comes south sporting a 2-3 record, averaging 255.6 yards on offense and 172.8 defensively. The numbers aren't that great until noticing that they came against teams like Estacado, Amarillo High and Midland Lee — all three contenders in its respective districts.

While Johnson has been rolling up 804 yards on 131 carries, his counterpart, PHS back Ervin Davis, has gained 434 yards on 86 tries. Davis, hobbled most of the season with a series of nagging injuries, came on strong two weeks back, gaining 210 yards against Clovis.

Although the PHS offense, which has scored only 73 points in five games, is capable of breaking the long play at any time, Odom says it's the Bulldog defense that worries him the most.

"That by far is their strongest point," commente Odom about the PHS defenders. "They scare me to death, they're so strong."

The 13 points scored by Estacado were the most allowed by the PHS defensive unit. In five games, it's allowed only four touchdowns and hurled a shutout against Clovis.

Monterey's defense is no push-over, either. Led by Monte McCright, Dale Pinkston and Mac Tatum — three of the top ten tacklers in the district, so far — the Plainsmen haven't allowed a touchdown since Sept. 21. It's also put three shutouts on the shelf.

On offense, Monterey will be paced by Potts, who trails only Johnson for the lead in the individual total-offense department. The burly signal-caller has passed for 462 yards and carried for an additional 132.

While Potts is the second-leading passer in the loop, Britt Mayberry is at the bottom of the list. Plainview has gained only 144 yards through the air, with Mayberry hitting on 7 of 23 attempts and nary a touchdown.

To beat Plainview, Odom says the Plainsmen must " play good, solid football and avoid the costly mistakes."

Plainview, on its way to its first-ever district football championship last year, knocked off Monterey 47-26.

Odom remembers the thrashing rather well.

"Let's say I have a memory like an elephant," said Odom during Wednesday's high school news conference at the 50-Yard Line Restaurant.

Sherk Points Toward Need Of Confidence

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Jerry Sherk, the massive 10-year pro who prowls the Cleveland Browns defensive line, says he knows what his team needs most of all to get back into contention in its division.

Confidence.

"I'm afraid we have lost confidence in ourselves, individually and collectively, because we gave away our last two games," said the Oklahoma State alumnus.

Sherk was referring to a 51-35 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers and a 13-9 loss last Sunday to the Washington Redskins. Both defeats occurred in Cleveland Stadium.

"Now we need to win our next game (Sunday in Cleveland against the Cincinnati Bengals) to get our confidence back to where it should be, to where we believe in ourselves and in each other again," he said.

The Browns opened the season with four straight victories before losing in Houston to the Houston Oilers.

NEW MEXICO ROUNDUP

Hagerman, Texico Top Class-A Teams

"Hagerman's No. 1...until somebody beats them," Topliff said.

Of course, he hints that that "somebody" could be his own Texico team, which is sporting a nifty 6-0 record after last week's 41-14 thumping of Capitan. However, he hasn't forgotten that it was Hagerman that upset Texico in the 1978 Class A state championship game and that, until somebody else proves otherwise, Hagerman is the state champion.

He's not at all unhappy that the state's sportswriters and sportscasters have tabbed his Wolverines the top team in Class A, though.

"We're real tickled to be No. 1," he said. "But we still have some important games to play. We want to be the best, but so many things have to happen first."

Texico and Hagerman, 5-0-1 and rated second in the polls, aren't scheduled to meet during the regular season. So the two giants of the state's smallest division will probably have to answer the big question about who's really No. 1 in Class-A in the playoffs.

Texico and Hagerman will wait one more week before jumping into district races they're favored to win, but district warfare will be breaking out on several fronts elsewhere in Southeastern New Mexico.

In District 4-AAAA where defending champion Clovis has the first week off from league play and will play Garden City, Kan., pre-season favorite Hobbs (1-5) tries to straighten out a season that has gone off course when it visits Roswell High (3-3) and Carlsbad (1-5) plays the host's role to Roswell Goddard (2-4) in a couple of league battles.

It was an all-losing week for the 4-AAAA bunch last Friday. The worse beating was taken by Carlsbad, which fell 51-18 to powerful Monterey. The whipping was so bad that Carlsbad coach Dave Perini wouldn't even show the film of the game to his players, suggesting it was too much like a horror movie.

"I don't think there would be any point in it," Perini said.

Eunice, the state champion in Class AA three of the last four years, begins defense of its District 4-AA title against Dexter but will be doing it minus the coach who led them to all those titles. Tommy Gruber is now tutoring the triple-A Portales Rams, who will be taking a week off from the schedule to prepare for an Oct. 25 collision with defending district and state champion Artesia.

Jal and Tatum also take the wraps off their district schedules. Jal, ranked fourth in Class AA, visits Fort Sumner and Tatum, the defending champion in 4-A, launches its championship bid against Cloudcroft.

Coach Said Kush Urged Lying

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Athletic Director Fred Miller produced sworn statements from five players and five assistant coaches today to back up the firing of Arizona State University football coach Frank Kush.

"At my last press conference ... I stated that Frank Kush lied and attempted to cover up that lie," Miller said as he read from the transcripts.

Among those who gave sworn statements was interim head coach Bob Owens. He recalled a recent meeting of Kush's staff.

"Coach Kush indicated that we were having problems....and he indicated at that time, that if we didn't stick together and all stay together as a group, even it meant lying or perjurying ourselves, that we would probably all go down, meaning that we all would lose our jobs," Owens' statement said.

Kush, one of the winningest coaches in the nation during his 22 years as head man at ASU, said Monday that he had told his staff "we as a coaching staff must stick together." But he told a news conference, "I never would ask anybody to lie for me."

Kush and the school have been sued for $1.1 million by former punter Kevin Rutledge, who claims Kush punched him after a poor kick in the Washington game a year ago. Kush also denies this.

Most of the statements released today by Miller counter Kush's denial of hitting Rutledge, who since has transferred to Nevada-Las Vegas.

At least two other assistant coaches attended the meeting with Kush, Owens said. Owens added that Kush asked him to relay the information to the rest of the coaching staff.

When other assistant coaches were told of the instructions by Kush, Owens said, "the comment was made at that time that, 'you know — we don't believe that. That can't be true'."

Owens said he asked assistant coach Bob Karmelowicz, who was in the meeting with Kush, to verify what Kush had said, and Karmelowicz did. However, assistant coach Dick Mann swore that he attended the meeting with Kush, Owens and Karmelowicz and "you can take it either way."

"But like he (Kush) never said — you know, come right out," Mann said. "All he said was that we need to stay together, and if we're going to be strong, we have to be together." Owens said that while he relayed Kush's instructions, he told others on the coaching staff, that "what I was going to do myself was to tell the truth."

Miller, in scheduling his latest news conference, said a booster organization's call for his own suspension is "hasty and based on emotion, not fact."

Kush was not immediately available for comment on today's conference.

"My god, there are so many depositions in that Rutledge case. This will continue to come out," Miller said.

FRANK KUSH

Gary Padgen, a player who was at the 1978 Washington game, swore "I didn't see any it or anything like that take place. The only thing I observed was Coach Kush grab hold — grab his face mask, pull him towards him and say some words to him."

Miller, responding to charges Kush was denied due process in being relieved as coach last week, repeated that he attempted to suspend Kush while investigating the alleged coverup, but "Frank pre-empted that. He said he was fired. Frank has pre-empted the due process procedure."

"Hopefully, this will be my last press conference," he said. "I would hope the matters now are factual and are put to rest."

Among the players who said they saw Kush punch Rutledge were Gary Bouck, Steve Chambers and Bryan Caldwell.

"He (Kush) shoved up with left hand, the palm of his hand, the face mask and threw an upper cut with his right hand," Bouck stated.

Bouck said he was questioned by Kush and he coach's attorney, Harry Cavanagh, after it was reported he saw the punch.

Bouck quoted Kush as telling him, "Several people on the team have come up to me asking if you are the one starting rumors, saying that you are the one...They have called you a ratfink."

Bouck said Kush asked him, "Are you the one that said that in the paper?"

The Alhambra, Calif., linebacker said of the meeting, "Wheher or not I was intimidated verbally, just being in the room with Coach Kush and his attorney, and the door was shut, it was intimidating enough if you know what I mean."

"I just wanted to tell them exctly what he wanted to hear. So I said, 'No, I did not see you do it.' He says, 'Will you testify in a court of law to that?' I said, 'Sure I will.' Just telling him exactly what he wanted to hear."

Bouck said Kush's attorney, Harry Cavanagh, questioned him about his relationship with Rick Lynch, a dragstrip operator and Sun Devil booser who had a falling out with Kush.

Bouck said he responded, "The only money I got from Rick was what I earned."

Lynch has employed several ASU football players during the summer. Kush said his relationship with Lynch soured when he sought private medical care for injured players without consulting with the athletic department.

Lubbockites Claim Altus Race Events

Two of five Lubbock drivers who journeyed to Oklahoma over the weekend won main events at Altus.

Of three Lubbockites competing in late model/modified ranks, Danny Everette managed a third in the main event. Charley Whorton left the main with a blown rear end and Jimmy Bilbrey suffered a blown tire and bent tie rod and was forced to retire.

CTK Opens Loop Play

Christ the King High School opens its district football season on the road at Muenster Sacred Heart at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Christ the King, still wincing from a 34-14 loss to Abilene Christian last Friday, will attempt to balance their season-record, which stands at 2-3.

Sacred Heart is 5-1, but CTK coach Jimmy Durham could not be certain about his opponent's previous brand of competition.

"I don't know what the competition is like over in east Texas," Durham said. "I would imagine Sacred Heart is pretty tough, though. They're probably comparable to Klondike in this area.

"They (Sacred Heart) would be a Class B power if they were a public school, but, of course, I think we would be, too."

"I can tell you that the same thing is not going to happen this week."

The same thing happened again last Friday to Western Hills Baptist Academy. Lake Arthur, N.M., handed Western Hills its sixth consecutive loss of the season, 42-18.

Cosell Gets Close Shave

BALTIMORE (AP) — Network sports announcer Howard Cosell was the object of fan frustration here Tuesday night.

As Cosell was leaving Memorial Stadium after the sixth game of the World Series, a group of spectators yelled obscenities and sprayed his limousine with what was apparently shaving cream.

Cosell could not be reached for comment, but he told police that he was not injured in the incident and the limousine was not damaged.

Police spokesman Mike Bass quoted Cosell as saying it was unfortunate the incident should happen "in a great city like Baltimore."

Bass also said that Cosell was miffed at the fracas, noting that he had had nothing but praise for Baltimore and the Baltimore Orioles during the telecasts of the World Series.

The controversial announcer has been the object of much criticism in both Baltimore and Pittsburgh by fans who accuse him of being biased towards the other team.

YMCA DEADLINE SET

The deadline for any church group interested in signing up for the YMCA-Church League basketball program is Oct. 29. The season will run from Nov. 15 to Feb.7 and competition will be held in eight divisions for men and women plus some league play for the youngsters. Team entry fees are due at the YMCA. Interested parties should contact the YMCA at 762-0588.

Road To NBA Not Easy

By The Associated Press

Larry Bird was wined, dined and finally signed to the largest contract ever received by a rookie in the National Basketball Association — $650,000 a year for five years.

But the road to the NBA is not paved with that kind of gold for all first-year pros.

Thirty-nine rookies were among the 242 players who made NBA season-opening rosters, with 10 more on the injured list.

Not all of them were household names carrying fancy price tags.

Some could sign in as mystery guests on "What's My Line" and stump the panel. They are more than happy to be playing for the minimum salary of $30,000. After all, it beats unemployment.

Take Paul Dawkins. The 6-foot-5 forward average 26.7 points per game for Northern Illinois last season, but apparently didn't make much of an impression on the pro scouts. He lasted till the 10th and final round of the NBA draft before being picked by Utah, No. 185 of the 202 players chosen.

Yet Dawkins made the roster of the Jazz — beating out, among others, the club's No. 1 pick, forward Larry Knight of Chicago Loyola.

Then there's Hollis Copeland. The 6-foot-5 forward from Rutgers was the last player cut by Denver a year ago, but he decided to give pro ball one more shot. The New York Knicks invited him to their rookie-free agent camp, liked what they saw and invited him back to the regular camp. Copeland kept on playing well every chance he got, and when the final cuts came down, Copeland made the squad — beating out veterans Glen Gondrezick and John Rudd.

Bill Willoughby is another player who was waived out of the league a year ago but made a successful comeback.

A 6-foot-8 forward, Willoughby turned pro directly out of high school in 1975, the same year as Darryl Dawkins. But while Dawkins became a celebrity, and more recently a starter, in Philadelphia, Willoughby languished on the bench in Atlanta, then bounced to Buffalo and San Diego and out of the league.

He played with the Los Angeles Lakers' team in the summer league and made a good impression on the club's coach, Stan Albeck. When that Laker aide became head coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers he invited Willoughby to try out, and he made the squad. Since the Cavs had traded away their No. 1 pick in the NBA draft, and their second and third-round picks had elected to play in Europe, Albeck now refers to Willoughby as "my No. 1 pick — with three years experience."

Major Jones of Houston, Bob Carrington and Stan Pietkiewicz of San Diego, Eric Fernsten of Boston, Duck Williams of Utah, Marlon Redmond of Kansas City, Bubba Wilson of Golden State, Mike Evans of San Antonio, Jeff Cook of Phoenix, Delmer Beshore and Sam Smith of Chicago and Gus Bailey of Washington are other players who fought their way off the waiver lists and onto NBA rosters.

The most intriguing comeback, however, was achieved by John Roche, the guard who used to play for the New York Nets in the old American Basketball Association. Even though he'd been out of basketball three years, Roche tried out for the Denver Nuggets — and made the team.

Others were not so lucky. Among those who were unsuccessful in comeback bids were former NCAA scoring champions Bo Lamar, Johnny Neumann and Larry Fogle and familiar names like Marvin Barnes, Ron Behagen, Wesley Cox, Andre McCarter, Gary Brokaw, Phil Walker, Mel Bennett, Glenn Hansen, Fly Williams, Mo Layton, Lew Massey and Earl Williams.

The New York Knicks lead the league with five rookies: Copeland, third-round draft pick Geoff Huston, a former Texas Tech Red RAider and first-round picks Bill Cartwright, Larry Demic and Sly Williams. Detroit also has five — first-round picks Greg Kelser, Roy Hamilton and Phil Hubbard, third-rounder Terry Duerod and 1978 draftee Earl Evans, but Evans is currently on the injured list.

Tech Cross-Country Race Set Saturday

Thirty teams will come from miles around to run around for miles as the Texas Tech Invitational cross-country meet is held Saturday in conjunction with the prep Lubbock Invitational beginning at 10 a.m. at Mae Simmons Park.

Over 400 runners will compete in six different races that include both girls and boys' races on the junior varsity and varsity levels, a men's junior college event and, of course, the main feature, the men's major college varsity run.

The Raiders are co-defending champions of the Tech Invitational along with West Texas State University. According to Tech coach Corky Oglesby, duplication of that feat may not be anticipated.

"West Texas State should be favored, without a doubt," Oglesby said. "Oh, gosh, they're tough. We just don't have the experience and the manpower to go against them."

WTSU will enter five runners from Kenya, some of whom have world-class abilities. Tech will counter, principally, with senior star Greg Lautenslager, who ran in last year's NCAA meet and is now tuning up for the Southwest Conference meet later this month in Houston.

"We've got as good, or better, a runner than WTSU has, in Lautenslager," Oglesby said, "but after that we don't have the depth. New Mexico State University has pretty good strength and I think they'll probably challenge us for second."

Also entered in the major college division are Angelo State, Abilene Christian, Eastern New Mexico and Wayland Baptist.

The Tech cause will be hindered by the absence of junior Bert Torres, Lautenslager's main support, who has been hobbled by shin-splints.

The high school runners will come from — in addition to the five Lubbock public schools — Amarillo, Caprock, Tascosa, Palo Duro, Pampa, Borger, Dumas, Levelland, Brownfield, Abernathy, Midland, Midland Lee, Odessa, Odessa Permian, Abilene, Abilene Cooper, Big Spring and Clyde.

Tate To Cross First Obstacle Saturday

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Should John Tate beat Gerrie Coetzee Saturday night, he would have what once belonged to Muhammad Ali. But he'd still be in the shadow of Larry Holmes.

Most people in the fight game consider Holmes the best heavyweight in the world. Holmes is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Council. Tate and Coetzee are fighting for the World Boxing Association title which became vacant when Ali retired earlier this year.

"Every day when I get up to train I think about people in the boxing world not accepting me, and it motivates me," Tate said Wednesday before traveling 30 miles to Pretoria, the site of the fight, to train. He wanted to get the feel of the surroundings.

Tate wants to settle the matter of who the real boss of the heavyweights is and he knows that to establish true championship credentials he must fight Holmes. But that is for another time and place — and he is not looking ahead.

"I'm just an old country boy and I've been taught to cross one bridge at a time," said the 24-year-old from Knoxville. "I haven't beaten Gerrie yet. After that, then I'll talk about Holmes."

Tate, a black, and Coetzee, a white South African, were talking about each other Wednesday, and saying nice things.

"Kallie likes to take you out with one punch," Tate said of South African Kallie Knoetze, whom he stopped in eight rounds June 2 to earn his title shot.

"But Gerrie is a type of guy who likes to box. He can take you out with either hand. But he's a boxer."

"I think I'm a boxer," said Coetzee. "But I can punch. Tate will beat any boxer without a punch."

But Coetzee credits Tate with the ability to take a punch and says, "I expect it to go 15 rounds. I'm training to go 15 rounds. I don't want knockout to be in the back of my mind. I want to be able to react if I don't knock him out."

"I've trained for 15 rounds," said Tate who has only gone as far as 10 rounds once in a career that has seen him win all 19 of his fights, 16 byknockout.

Coetzee, also 24, has been as far as 12 rounds once, when he outpointed Mike Schutte for the South African heavyweight championship April 16, 1977. He has won all 22 of his pro fights, 12 by knockout, including his one-round destruction of former world champion Leon Spinks last June 24.

A crowd of at least 70,000 is expected to watch Coetzee try to become the third South African to win a world championship, while Tate bids to join Spinks as members of the 1976 U.S. Olympic team to win world titles.

Lubbock Duo To Race

Two Lubbock area drivers competing in NASCAR's late model sportsman division are en route to Bakersfield, Calif., today to compete in the first of a pair of western states auto race classics.

J.D. Hughes of Sundown and Jay Turner of Lubbock will drive Camaros in the Bakersfield event this weekend and then will head back to Las Vegas, Nev., for another LMS event the following weekend.

Both drivers began their racing careers here were favorites with crowds at Lubbock Speedway. When the track reverted to dirt from pavement late in 1978 they began campaigning major paved ovals in the South, Midwest and West.

Last outing for the pair was earlier this month at Colorado Springs, where both experienced engine problems.

Turner, now running without a sponsor, said last week he hoped to attract sponsorship for two major winter calendar events that will follow the western race dates.

Both Turner and Hughes are entered in the fourth annual Texas Race of Champions slated Sunday, Nov. 11, at the two-mile Texas World Speedway at Bryan. That event will consist of two 50-mile heats bracketing the U.S. Auto Club's Texan 250 for late model stock cars.

In late January the pair will go to Phoenix for the Copper State Classic, contested at 100 laps over the high-banked mile at Phoenix International Raceway.

Longhorns, Hogs Set For Emotional Game

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Fred Akers was raised and played in the land of Razorback Red, but his blood is burnt orange.

Akers played football in Blytheville, Ark., and then went on to Fayetteville and the University of Arkansas. In fact, it was Akers who kicked the field goal that beat Texas Christian University 3-0 in 1959 and helped the Razorbacks share the Southwest Conference championship.

Now, Akers is the head football coach at the University of Texas and his second-ranked Longhorns play the 10th-ranked Razorbacks Saturday here.

"I would be less than honest if I said this game didn't have more significance for me," Akers said Wednesday in a telephone news conference. "You always like to do well when you go before the home folks.

"I have mixed emotions about my feelings with the people of Arkansas. However, when I get on that football field I'm sure they would be disappointed if I didn't try everything I could to win That's the way they expected me to play when I was a player and I'm sure they expect me to coach that way."

Both Texas and Arkansas have been excellent on defense — the Longhorns are third in the nation, allowing an average of 6.2 points per game; and the Razorbacks are seventh, allowing an average of 7.4 points per game.

Akers says the Arkansas defense has "jelled into a real unit."

"That phase of Arkansas' game has shown more improvement, more change than any other," Akers said.

Ironically, each team has given up a touchdown per 109 plays — Texas two in 218 plays and Arkansas three in 327 plays.

Despite the defensive statistics, Akers refused to predict the complexion of the game.

"Coaches will say it's going to be low-scoring and it winds 50-48. They'll say it's going to be high-scoring and it's 7-6.

"I would be elated with a victory involving any score," Akers said. "Big games usually involve great defense.

"The significance of this football game is tremendous," Akers said. "Not just to me and just to fans in the Southwest Conference. This game has developed over the years to the point where it has national appeal."

That is one reason the game will be televised regionally.

Texas is coming off a 16-7 victory over arch-rival Oklahoma. The Sooners were ranked second in the country and averaging 40 points per game before last week.

"I don't know how to judge levels of emotion, but we try to sustain a high level during this part of our schedule," Akers said. "This is not new to us. It's a situation most teams in the country don't have to face.

"Our respect for the University of Arkansas from prior knowledge has been enough to spur us," he said.

"I've heard it said that all you have to do to have good morale is win," Akers stated. "I don't believe that. I don't think our team is satisfied with just winning. I think they're disappointed if they win and don't show improvement."

"I don't think we're close to reaching our potential," he added.

Asked what he could do for an encore, Akers replied, "Let me say this. We signed on to play 11 (games) — 12 hopefully. It may be a one-game season for a lot of folks but not for me or our players. There's nothing deader than last week's news."

He said since Texas faces No. 10 Arkansas this weekend, "We had etter expct a real dogfight. They have an explosive offense and are more balanced, much more so than Oklahoma. Their offensive line is among the better ones in the entire nation."

"They're throwing at an extremely high completion rate ... and apparently their defense has jelled," Akers said.

Asked if Texas players had been able to put the Oklahoma game out of their minds and concentrate on Arkansas in practice this week, Akers said:

"Yes, our players have won that battle. Our full attention is on Arkansas."

The kickoff is set for 3:10 p.m. and the game has been sold out for months.

WORDS FROM THE MASTER — Arkansas coach Lou Holtz decided the best way he could explain what he wanted from his offensive linemen was to get down and show them himself. So as the 10-ranked Razorbacks started practice in preparation for Saturday's showdown with the No. 2-ranked Texas Longhorns, Holtz got down and showed them. The Razorback offensive line will need a lot of coaching to go against the Longhorn defense. (AP Laserphoto)

Westerners' Cuevas Named Top Player

A year ago, Gilbert Cuevas was playing football for the Abernathy Antelopes. But now that's all changed.

Instead of guiding the Antelopes, Cuevas is now the starting quarterback at Lubbock High. And doing a pretty nice job at it, too.

Last week, Cuevas electrified a homecoming crowd of well over 2,000 by leading the Westerners to their second win of the season, a 20-13 victory over Amarillo Caprock. It was one of those come-from-behinders that makes either a hero or a goat out of the quarterback.

With time running out and the Westerners' trailing 13-12, Cuevas guided LHS down the field like an old pro. He capped the 80-yard march by scoring from the one-yard line himself to put Lubbock up 18-13. On the PAT, Cuevas hit Tino Chapa for the two points, giving the Westerners their final margin of victory.

Cuevas ended the night by hitting four-of-nine passes for 59 yards, including a 38-yard TD heave to Larry Walker in the second quarter that gave Lubbock a 12-0 halftime lead.

But that's not all, folks.

Cuevas also carried the ball 14 times for 63 yards and handled the LHS punting chores after Walker was ejected from the game late in the second period.

Perhaps his biggest run came during the game-winning drive when he rambled nine yards down to the CHS 11. From that point, the Westerners used a 10-yard bolt by Johnny Johnson to put the ball into scoring position.

Since taking over the quarterbacking duties from Walker three games ago, Cuevas has become the third leading passer in District 4-AAAA. He has hit 20 of 54 attempts for 281 yards, an average of 14.1 yards. He's also hit three passes for touchdowns and thrown four interceptions.

Cuevas edged teammate Thomas Romero for the A-J honor. Romero scored the first LHS touchdown and added 94 yards on 16 carries to the winning cause.

The big night moved Romero into the eighth position on the list of District 4-AAAA rushing leaders.

Also nominated for the A-J honor were:

• Larry Walker of Lubbock High caught a 38-yard TD pass from Cuevas and passed for 54 yards on a fake-punt attempt to help lead LHS to its win over Caprock before being ejected from the game.

• Kent Potts, the Monterey quarterback, had his best night as a passer, hitting 4 of 5 attempts for 160 yards and one touchdown of 78 yards to Clay Powell. He also scored one touchdown in Monterey's 51-18 win over Carlsbad.

• One of these days Monterey back Willie Johnson is going to be stopped, but that didn't happen against the Cavemen. Johnson carried the ball 20 times for 210 yards, upping his season total of 804 yards through six games. It was the sixth straight time he's gained more than 100 yards this season.

• The Coronado defense, all 11 of them, put on quite a show in limiting Pampa to a minus 3 yards on the ground and 101 through the air. CHS won the game 20-0.

Wellman Running On Diesel

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Theirs is a game of long fuses in a a league of instant explosiveness and sudden points.

The Wellman High School six-man football team likes to stroll through enemy defenses en route to the end zone. The trip may take a bit longer than it does for the likes of District 3-B adversaries Loop and Cotton Center, but the results are much the same...

Victories, victories and more victories.

Wellman, coached by Harvey Wellman (purely coincidental), is undefeated in six games this year, including a 39-30 victory over previously-unbeaten Three Way in a district opener last Friday.

The team's record, as much as its style of football, is an uncommon occurrence in the district.

"We just run with it," Coach Wellman said. "We're a big, slow team, but we're able to block real well. We don't have any breakaway speed so we go for five, six yards at a time. We march it downfield.

"Some schools, like Cotton Center, can explode; break the big ones. But as long as we have the ball, the other team can't score. That's how I look at it — as an advantage."

Mazda 626 Coupe Cited

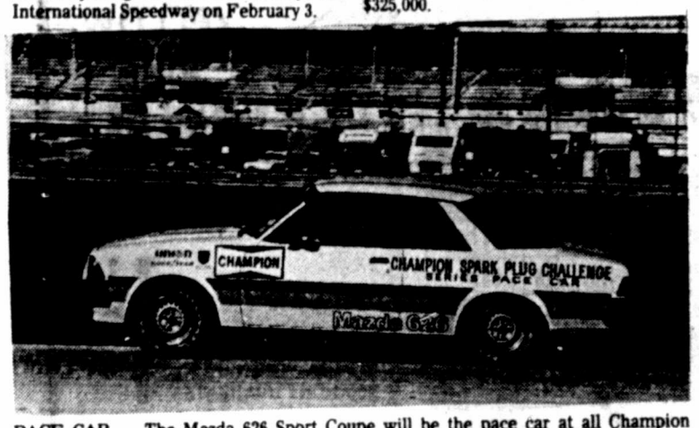
Mazda's new 626 Sport Coupe has been named the official pace car for the 1979 Champion Spark Plug Challenge series.

Announcement of the selection was made jointly by officials of the International Motor Sports Association, race sanctioning body for the Challenge, and Champion Spark Plug Company, which sponsors the professional road racing series.

A Mazda 626 will lead IMSA racing stock sedans to the starting flag at all 1979 series events, beginning with the season-opening 100-mile race at Daytona International Speedway on February 3.

The 1979 racing season was a highly-successful one for Mazda. Walt Bohren of Flemington, New Jersey, won the Challenge series driving championship in a rotary-engine RX-2. In route to the makes championship, Mazda drivers won six of 14 series races, with Bohren leading the contingent with three outright wins.

The Champion Spark Plug Challenge is a 17-race series for import and domestic sub-compact sedans that race on street radial tires. Race purses, contingency awards and year-end prize funds for the 1979 series are expected to top $325,000.



PACE CAR — The Mazda 626 Sport Coupe will be the pace car at all Champion Spark Plug Challenge series races this year. The car was chosen for its aerodynamic design, sophisticated suspension and weight-distribution. The series will start Feb. 3 at Daytona.

Prison Stabbings Kill One, Injure One

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — One inmate was killed and a guard was wounded in unrelated stabbings at two state correctional facilities, police said.

Reginald Grady Allen, 18, an inmate at the Maryland Correctional Training Center, was stabbed in the back and died Tuesday as he returned from a movie, Maryland state police said. Police said no arrests had been made.

At the Maryland Correctional Institution, guard Charles Snyder was stabbed, but not seriously wounded, by an inmate serving time for robbery.

Millionaire Attempting To Finish Landmark

MEXICO CITY (AP) — For three years, the tallest building in Latin America — the 45-story Hotel de Mexico — has stood an almost-vacant landmark on this city's skyline, the paralyzed dream of an 84-year-old millionaire who ran out of funds.

Now, with a tourist boom causing a terrific shortage of hotel accomodations, the millionaire's son and two U.S. business concerns are trying to put together the $30 million needed to complete it.

The structure of metal, glass and concrete was conceived and started in 1971 by Manuel Suarez, one of Mexico's wealthiest businessmen. It was to have 1,508 rooms, 7 restaurants, 10 bars and discotheques, a swimming pool, 8 scenic outside elevators and convention space for 30,000 people.

An economic crisis in 1976 caught Suarez short of cash, with the structure up but the inside uncompleted. However, he refused to seek outside financial help, saying at the time: "This is my child. I would never sell it. I could not sell my soul."

His son, Alfredo Suarez, who trained in hotel-management in the United States, has quietly taken over and started talks with Hyatt International Hotels and the Bank of America to raise the $30 million.

"We could start finishing the hotel right now with Don Manuel's money — selling some of the old man's vast holdings — but it would take at least three years," the son said in an interview with The Associated Press.

He said that with Hyatt-Bank of America cash financing, the hotel could be completed in a year.

"On behalf of Hyatt, we are prepared to make available the funds in conjunction with the bank," said Allan Turner, a Chicago lawyer representing Hyatt, a major U.S. hotel chain. "It's terrific for Mexico City and the people of Mexico City. It will be a great source of revenue."

The number of tourists visiting the Mexican capital doubled to 3.7 million in 1978 over the previous year, according to the government's tourist bureau and is definitely much higher this year.

Of the visitors last year, 1.7 million were foreigners — mostly Americans.

Occupancy rates jumped similarly to 86 percent and 98 percent in the better hotels — a worldwide record, hotelmen say. Bookings of 60 percent to 65 percent on a month's average is considered very good by most of the world's top hotel keepers.

Tourist bureau officials say there are a total of 16,573 deluxe and first-class hotel rooms in the city, and once the Hotel de Mexico goes into business it will increase the capital's capacity to house visitors by close to 10 percent.

"Sure I'm more optimistic than I have been in a long time. This hotel is going to be finished," Alfredo Suarez said. "Don Manuel exaggerates a little bit about his hotel ... but this is going to be the largest complex of its kind in the world when it is done."

"I'm an old man, but I have big dreams for Mexico," Don Manuel told a reporter who interviewed him in the revolving restaurant. "This is one of my fantasies becoming reality."

Then, with a sweep of his arm, he started talking about adding an adjacent complex, boosting convention space to 250,000 people, 500 stores, a parking lot for 12,000 automobiles and many other grand things.

Census Bureau Sees Connection Between Homeowners, Voting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stronger community ties lead homeowners to vote at twice the rate of persons who rent their homes, the Census Bureau reported Wednesday.

The bureau's look at registration and voting in the November 1978 elections disclosed that 59 percent of persons who owned their homes said they had voted, compared with only 28 percent of renters.

"The difference occurred regardless of age or race and apparently reflects owners' stronger ommunity ties and interest in government decisions," the report said.

Overall, 46 percent of eligible voters turned out in 1978, about the same as in 1974 but well below the 59 percent that went to the polls in the presidential election of 1976.

In addition, the longer people had lived in an area, the more likely they were to vote.

The bureau said 60 percent of people who had lived in the same house for six years or more voted, compared with 26 percent of those who had been residents for less than a year.

Voting was particularly low among new residents aged 18 to 24, the bureau said, with only 15 percent going to the polls.

The study also showed that the more education people have the more likely they are to vote.

'Riddler' Changes Costumes; Villanous Portrayal Remains

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Gorshin spent a couple seasons in the mid-1960s as The Riddler on TV's "Batman," and he's back Thursday evening to conclude a two-week guest run in another series drawn from the comics — "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" on NBC.

There is, in Gorshin's mind, a connection.

"My first inclination when they suggested 'Buck Rogers' was negative," says Gorshin, perhaps best known as a master impressionist. "The part was too much like Riddler.

Riddler was. He was in outer space, as Riddler was not.

"Then I thought, what the heck, I got a big boost from 'Batman,' so why not do 'Buck Rogers'?"

Indeed, Gorshin is convinced taking the role in "Batman" was a big step forward in his career.

"I could feel the impact almost overnight," he recalls. Gorshin says he was recognized on the street, and soon became a headliner in nightclubs in Las Vegas and around the country.

"Since then, I haven't done that much acting," he says, "though I'd like to do more."

In "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century," NBC's new space adventure series starring Gil Gerard, Gorshin plays Kellogg, an evil character who runs a so-called Legion of Death. "He fancies himself as a genius," Gorshin says, "a man who is capable of doing things others can't.

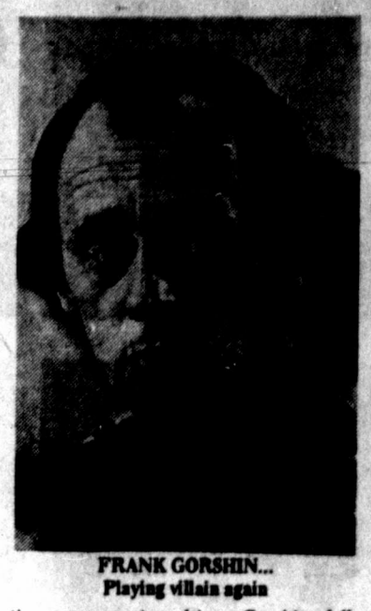
"He disintegrates in the second episode," the actor says. "I Asked Bruce Landsbury, the producer, 'I don't suppose this character will ever reappear?' He said, 'Oh, sure, anything can happen.'"

Frank Gorshin was born in Pittsburgh, and began doing impressions of some of his movie heroes — Al Jolson, Jimmy Cagney, Cary Grant, Edward G. Robinson — as a teen-ager.

In 1951 — he was 17 — Gorshin won a talent contest in Pittsburgh, with his prize a week-long engagement at Jackie Heller's Carousel nightclub.

He attended the school of drama at Carnegie Tech, and later spent two years in the service. A man he met while in the Army introduced him to a Hollywood agent, who in turn got Gorshin his first motion picture role — in "The Proud and the Profane."

In 1957, while visiting his family in Pittsburgh, Gorshin was summoned to Hollywood for a part in "Run Silent, Run Deep," with Clark Gable. During the cross-country drive, Gorshin fell asleep at the wheel, crashed and suffered a fractured skull. The role went to Don Rickles.



FRANK GORSHIN... Playing villain again

There were, however, parts in other movies — "The Bells are Ringing" with Dean Martin, and "Where the Boys Are" — and in 1958, Gorshin made his first nightclub appearance.

"I found I had this real talent for impersonation," he says, "and that led to appearances on 'The Steve Allen Show' and 'The Ed Sullivan Show.' But the problem was, the acting part of my career seemed to subside.

"Then along came 'Batman,' and that really established me as a nightclub performer," he says "but my interest in acting didn't diminish."

That situation began to gnaw at Gorshin's nerves. "After a number of years I began to resent living on the West Coast, so close to all the acting jobs and still unable to get anything I Liked."

Two years ago, he moved to Connecticut, and since then he's had two TV appearances and recently began work on a movie, "Underground Aces."

"I love it back here," Gorshin says. "It would take a lot to get me to go back. Should a series a come along, I guess I'd have to think about it."

Actor Finding Life After TV Series

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Is there e after "Dobie Gillis" and "Gilligan's and?" Indeed there is, says Bob Den-, though it may be something of a sy existence these days.

Denver, 44, earned a bit of fame in 1950s and 1960s, first as Dobie Gillis' tnik sidekick, Maynard G. Krebs, and r as the title character in "Gilligan's nd," the continuing saga of a group people shipwrecked on a desert is-d.

Maynard G. Krebs would be proud of nver's approach to his latest calling. stead of running back and forth be-een home and stage, Denver, 44, and fe Dreama, 29, live on the road. Out a suitcase. All the time.

They've been married about two ars, and have been traveling the din-r theater circuit since the wedding.

"Our marriage is getting better and tter," says Denver, who is appearing rough Oct. 28 at the Derby Dinner layhouse in Clarksville, Ind., across the hio River from Louisville.

He and his wife are featured in a production of "The Star-Spangled Girl," a play by Neil Simon detailing what happens when an all-American girl moves in next door to two fellows trying to publish a "protest" magazine.

"The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis," with Dwayne Hickman in the lead role, was broadcast 1959-62. "Gilligan's Island," featuring Alan Hale Jr., Jim Backus and Tina Louise, aired 1964-66.

After several years on television, and a stint as Woody Allen's replacement in the Broadway production of "Play It Again, Sam," Denver says he "discovered dinner theater in '71."

It was love at first sight, he says. Not only was it steady and satisfying work, but it rescued him from the eye-burning smog of Los Angeles, his home for 20 years.

Although plans don't include anything as settled as buying a house, the Denvers do plan to establish some roots in Tacoma, Wash., in November.

"I'm going to open a Bob Denver Dinner Theater in Tacoma next month," he says. "I give them my name and let them have the responsibility. I'd like to take this show up there."

Later this year, the Denvers plan to cart the show to Australia.

When there is a spare few days, the Denvers retire to a remote area in Hawaii where, in true Krebs fashion, they spend their time "doing nothing."

For her part, Dreama is thinking more along the lines of Denver's character in "Gilligan's Island." Someday, she says, she hopes they can have a small South Pacific island all to themselves.

Runner's Relay Helps Hungry

NEW YORK (AP) — A baton, relayed by hundreds of runners and bearing a message on behalf of the world's hungry, is to be presented Thursday to a group of congressmen on the steps of the nation's Capitol.

The bator's message says, in part: "Twenty-eight people died of starvation each minute we carried this message to you — more than 300,000 during this run. ... The time has come to end hunger and starvation forever."

The relay started last week and will cover more than 2,000 miles and 14 states along U.S. 1. Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., is scheduled to carry to baton the last five miles.

Soldier Of Fortune Ads Being Defended

Bob Poos, whose magazine claims an international circulation of 180,000, said Soldier of Fortune does no recruiting of its own but carries notices from countries that are hiring soldiers.

Energy Saver Wraps House Up In Plastic

PERRYSBURG, Ohio (AP) — Like other energy-conscious homeowners, Richard Ammerman insulated his home this year. But unlike them, he did it by bundling the house in plastic, from the roof to the foundation.

The northwestern Ohio resident wanted to stop the winter wind and cut his heating bills, and wrapping the house seemed a good way to do it, he says.

"One day, we were sitting here talking about how we could make the house non-drafty," Ammerman's wife, Jacqueline, said. "We've used plastic on porches before, so we decided to try it on the whole house."

Using clear vinyl purchased for about $75 at a lumberyard, Ammerman and his two teen-age sons covered all the outside walls, the windows and the front door, leaving only the roof and back door uncovered.

They hammered the sheeting on the roof of the one-story frame house, dug six-inch-deep trenches around the foundation, tucked the vinyl in and anchored it by filling up the trenches again.

They nailed stripping over the plastic around the windows to hold it tight to the house.

The plastic comes in 10-foot wide, 100-foot long rolls and is the type used in new home construction as a vapor barrier between inside and outside walls, Ammerman said.

Consumerist Worries Over Oil Company Propaganda

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Herb Schmertz, vice president of Mobil Corp., doesn't think his firm is getting a fair shake. Jim Flug says Mobil and other oil companies are disseminating "propaganda" far faster than Flug and other consumer activists can rebut it.

The American public is often caught in the middle.

Oil company advertising, a decade ago devoted mostly to extolling the virtues of particular brands of gasoline, now is used often to refute the many charges brought against the industry by an increasingly skeptical Congress and public.

"Our credibility as a company and as an industry is so suspect," said Edward J. Mulligan, vice president of Conoco Inc. "If we see a charge that we think is serious one, an important one, and it has gone unchallenged, we're going to take it up and challenge it."

"I don't think our motivation is to defend ourselves from attacks, but rather to present ourselves to the public," said Schmertz, who heads Mobil's public relation's effort. "Jane Fonda, because she's a pretty movie star, gets an awful lot of publicity for her radical policies. We don't get that because we're not as pretty."

Mobil is probably the most vocal of the oil companies. It runs weekly ads on the op-ed pages of several major newspapers and in Parade magazine and other Sunday supplements in 400 newspapers. The annual tab for these two programs comes to about $5.5 million — about a third of the firm's total advertising budget.

Not all of Mobil's advertising defends the industry. Some of it has nothing to do with oil. A few of the op-ed ads this year have included plugs for the Boy Scouts and programs underwritten by Mobil on public television.

But the majority of Mobil's broadsides involve energy, and the company's responses to its critics. A series of the ads promoted nuclear power, others explored other alternatives to oil. And quite a number answered charges that Mobil and other companies had created the oil shortage and were profiteering from it.

One, titled "Chilling the Debate," said that charges leveled against the company by many critics were based on "patently false and misleading information." Another, responding to criticism from Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was headlined: "Senator Metzenbaum Ought to Know Better."

"There's a dialogue out there, and you're either in it or you're not," said Schmertz. "We've decided we want to be in it."

Exxon Corp., the nation's biggest oil company, also has gotten into the fray. Its ads do not run as regularly as Mobil's, but they're a lot more noticeable — full-page ads in up to 200 newspapers and a couple dozen magazines. The Exxon statements don't take positions, company officials say, they just outline the facts.

"We try to give the Exxon facts on one specific issue — in 100 words or less," said Elliot Catarulla, deputy manager of the company's public relations program.

The company has held to its word limit in five of the six ads it has run since June — at a total cost of $2.4 million, about a fifth of what Exxon will send on adertising this year. The sixth ad, explaining the firm's profits, was a bit longer. But generally the Exxon ads are shortnd simple, explaining the company's side of monthly gasoline allocations and heating oil inventories.

"We try to stay away from what would be called opinion," said Catarulla, "but some people would disagree with that."

Flug, for example.

The head of Energy Action, a Washington-based consumer group, calls the oil company advertising "the most one-sided, unfair, misleading sort of propaganda."

While Schmertz and other oil executives believe the companies are getting the short end of the publicity, Flug says the companies have the upper hand.

"There's this tremendous and constant flow of propaganda, and there's no way the other side, the public side, can counter," he said. "There's no way all the consumer-oriented and public-interest groups together could work full-time to answer those ads, and even if we took the time, there's no way we could get them published."

The companies say public response to their advertising has generally been favorable.

Small Coffee Company Survives Price Wars

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Every day, David de Lima sits down to several cups of coffee.

He doesn't do it to keep himself awake or help him get through another day at the office. He does it to taste-test the quality of the coffee produced by the Paul de Lima Coffee Co., one of the few family run companies left in a business dominated by comglomerates.

The Paul de Lima Coffee Co., which traces is origins back 80 years to the de Lima Bros. Coffee Co., has endured the takeover by big business of the coffee industry, and it has survived the crossfire of bigger companies like Folger's and Maxwell House, who went to war over shelf space in local grocery stores.

Today there are three de Limas running the company. David de Lima is president. Paul de Lima, and Peter Miller, grandsons of the original Paul de Lima, are vice presidents.

David de Lima credits much of the company's perservance to its independence. "We're rather independent. If someone offered to buy us out, maybe we weren't listening," he said, explaining how the company escaped the trend that saw many of the family-run coffee producers taken over by big business.

Although the company has been selling its Paul de Lima brand coffee around Syracuse for 63 years, its product has been a scarce item on local grocery shelves in recent years. It was was driven out of most stores in the coffee war between Folger's and Maxwell House.

The de Limas managed to endure the price war by concentrating on institutional business, the hospitals, restaurants and hotels which now make up 85 percent of the company's business.

The Federal Trade Commission has intervened, meanwhile, in the price war, and Paul de Lima is venturing back into stores.

"We're coming back into the grocery business very modestly, store by store," said David de Lima. "We're still very apprehensive, very leery of the grocery situation because we don't know what the large coffee houses will do."

"We still haven't recovered the volume we lost on the retail side that we had before the Folger's entry," said Paul de Lima. "Our company was not devastated, is not devastated, but we have been made aware of the ongoing problems within the indusry, particularly in the retail market."

Paul de Lima said he can envision the day when the coffee business is dominated by a few mammouth companies. "The potential is undoubtedly there for that sort of thing to happen, particularly in light o what we'e seen happen in the last five years on the retail side of the business in central New York," he said.

Surviving the price war matured the de Limas as people and as a company, said Paul de Lima, and the company is continuing to go about its business, roasting seventy 500-pound batches of coffee beans a week in its Syracuse plant.

"We are optimistic about our ability to prosper," said Paul de Lima.

Although the Paul de Lima Coffee Co. has survived past challenges, the de Limas have not taken steps to assure a fourth generation will control the company. "That is too far into the future," Paul de Lima said. "We're more concerned with the problems of today and we've certainly got enough of those."

'La Luna' — Another Film Maker's Risk?

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I took the risk of a big adventure, not a little adventure," remarks Bernardo Bertolucci, the Italian film maker whose career has been marked by risk-taking.

His early works reflected strong political stands, always left-leaning. He made his international reputation in 1970 with the powerful "The Conformist," then directed Marlon Brando and Maria Schenieder in "Last Tango in Paris."

"A judge in Italy condemned 'Last Tango' not only to be banned, but to be burned — like witches," Bertolucci recalled with a rueful smile. "Recently the judge said in a interview that today he would not condemn the picture. That's how much morality has changed in five years."

The Parma-born film maker next devoted three years to his monumental "1900," tracing generations of life in an Italian village. His final version ran five hours and 20 minutes.

Now, "Luna."

"The film has had no trouble with the law in Italy," he reported. "The reviews were very bad, but it is now the major attraction in Italy. In France, the critics were almost too complimentary." So far in America, he noted, some reviewers have sided with the Italians (New York Times), others with the French (Time).

American audiences are likely to be similarly divided, some considering it a work of art, others finding it offensive. The theme concerns incest between an American opera star (Jill Clayburgh) and her troubled, dope-addicted teenage son (Matthew Barry).

"The story is shocking, but sometimes it is worth it to be shocking," observed the 38-year-old director. "I started out to do a story of the great adventure between mother and son, taking them through different kinds of moods and experiences. I took the risk of a big adventure, not a little adventure. The film went even deeper than what I wanted in the beginning. That is the result of the collaboration of Jill and the kid."

He wrote the script with brother Giuseppe and Clare Peploe, who was to become Bernardo's wife. Originally it was fashioned for Liv Ullman; after three postponements because of her other commitments, Bertolucci decided not to wait.

"Then I saw Paul Mazursky's 'An Unmarried Woman,'" he said. "I thought she had incredible impact as a real person, which was what I needed for the role of a prima donna; you had to feel she had a personal life as well.

"At the time I didn't know how famous Jill was in America. She was not known in Europe."

Bertolucci approaches film making as a "work in progress," and at the beginning of "Luna" had not decided the crucial question: Would the incest be consummated?

"As I was going on with the movie, I realized two things:

"1. Incest is something within the instinct of everyone. It exists within the unconscious, though it is repressed. The physical relationship between mother and son starts at the very beginning of his life and is expressed in many ways. Incest could be something tender, not the kind of violence that might result with father and daughter.

"2. Both characters of the film were in an emotional turmoil and hence are carried to incest because the kid is a drug addict. The mother doesn't know what to do and decides the minimal answer is the only one she can give.

"In the bedroom scene in the hotel, she realizes that love-making could be something completely destructive. She acts with such violence, so sexually obsessive that she becomes the image of the depraved mother. She wants to be refused, and she is refused."

Bertolucci considers Clayburgh "very courageous to accept going so far." He picked young Barry out of 200-300 applicants in New York "because he was the only one who never pretended to act; the others were the image of adolescents in movies."

Barry, who turned 16 during the filming, is a street-wise New Yorker, said Bertolucci; "he knows life — I don't think I did anything violent to him with the film." He admitted the erotic scenes were the most difficult.

"Afterward the actors were liberated. I could only shoot the scene twice. I couldn't stand it another time."

Separate Department Formed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a bill Wednesday creating a separate Education Department, the 13th Cabinet-level agency.

The department, which had been given high priority on the president's domestic agenda, will have about 17,000 employees and a budget of $14.2 billion.

"Education is the biggest single national investment in the United States," the president told several hundred department supporters, members of Congress and a class of fourth grade guests invited to watch the signing ceremony.

"I want to see that investment pay rich dividends in the future. It hasn't in the past, not nearly up to its potential," the president said.

Carter said federal funding for education has increased more than 60 percent during his term in office.

He suggested that the new department could help improve public confidence by giving educational programs greater visibility and attention and establishing a clear line of responsibility.

The president also said it should remove some of the obstacles to better performance in the schools.

"I hope, I pray and I am determined that we are going to cut out unnecessary forms, applications and red tape," he said.

The ceremony in the East Room at the White House culminated a long battle in Congress over creation of the department. Success on the education department legislation represented one of Carter's few legislative victories of the year.

Released Ex-Teamster Plans Book

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — Former Teamsters organizer Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien was released from a federal prison camp Wednesday and said he plans to write a book about his life with missing union leader James R. Hoffa.

The 45-year-old O'Brien quietly slipped out of the Eglin Federal Prison Camp about 3:30 a.m., went to nearby Fort Walton Beach and caught a plane to New York City.

He said he was scheduled to appear on NBC's "Tomorrow" show early today.

O'Brien, who calls himself Hoffa's foster son, entered the minimum-security prison on Feb. 28 under sentences totaling a year and a day. Prison officials said he earned early release through good behavior.

In December 1977, a federal grand jury in Detroit accused O'Brien of using a falsified withholding statement to obtain financing for a $35,000 condominium in a posh Detroit suburb. O'Brien was then a southern organizer for the Teamsters and lived in Plantation, west of Fort Lauderdale.

Stocks Halt Worst Skid

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market halted its worst decline of the year Wednesday with a moderate rally led by energy issues.

But trading was light, and prices were slipping from their mid-afternoon peaks as the market closed.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen 68.09 points over the past seven sessions, rose 1.20 to 830.72. Less than two hours before the close the average had been up more than 7 points.

New York Stock Exchange volume dropped off to 29.65 million shares from 33.77 million, setting the slowest pace since a a 24.98 million-share day on Oct. 1.

Aside from a decline in the price of gold, analysts said there wasn't much in the news to account for the upswing.

Instead, they attributed it to "bargain hunting" by traders attracted by the sharply lower prices of many issues after the market's recent slide.

Prices made a couple of false starts in an upward direction Tuesday before settling back again.

Among actively traded energy issues, Exxon was up ½ at 57¼ as of the 4 p.m. close in New York; Occidental Petroleum rose ⅜ to 26; Louisiana Land & Exploration 1⅛ to 44⅞; Standard Oil of Indiana 1½ to 76½, and Allied Chemical, which has extensive energy interests, ⅜ to 42⅜.

New York (AP) — Wed.'s national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Man Struggles To Restore Good Name Of Ancestor Aaron Burr

By JULES LOH

LINDEN, Va. (AP) — He lay in a hospital bed four months thinking of names, names of persons who believed, as he did, that history had given his distant cousin, Aaron Burr, a bum rap.

In 1946 he had gone to the Library of Congress and had scoured telephone books from around the country until he had a list of 1,000 Burrs. He wrote to every one; about 100 replied. A beginning.

Over the years the list grew until more than 1,500 American Burrs, or relatives of Burrs with names like Dyer and Edwards and Jonnson, became members of Samuel Burr's "Aaron Burr Association" and received monthly mailings in his lonely crusade.

"What we have in common," Samuel Burr said, "is resentment over the assumption, which you even find in textbooks, that Aaron Burr was a scoundrel and murderer and traitor. Lies."

He lives alone on the side of a remote mountain where the loudest sound is birdsong and the view, far below, is of the Shenandoah River. He lives with his memories. Tears come easily.

His own resentment, as a Burr, began building when he was an eighth grader in New Jersey, both his and Aaron Burr's home state.

"My teacher clenched her fists and told us Aaron Burr was an infidel who tried to cheat Thomas Jefferson out of the presidency, had murdered Alexander Hamilton, had tried to tear apart the country.

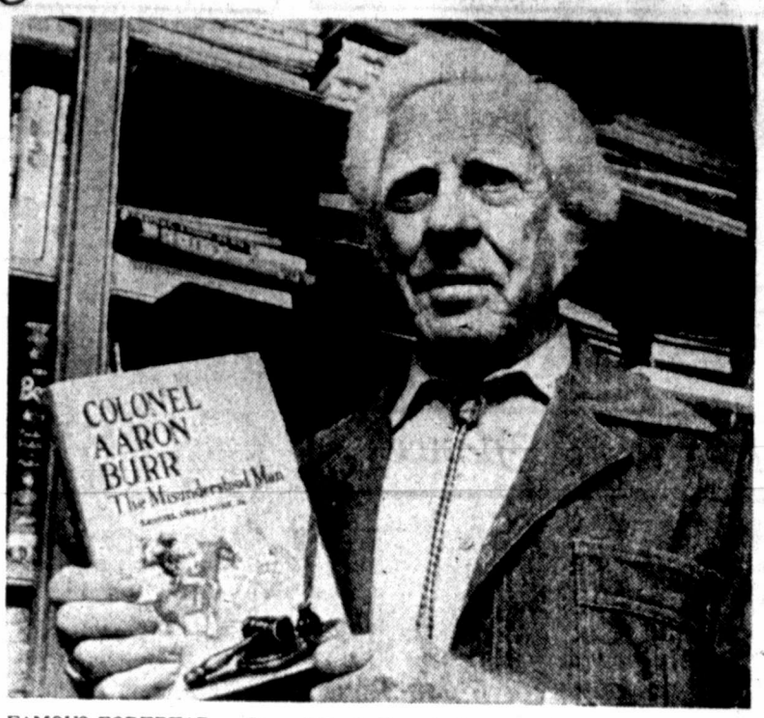
"Every child in the class turned to me and glared.

"That night I told my father what happened. He said, 'Yes, I know, it's too bad. It isn't true. It's just something we Burrs have to live with.' That's when I decided to fight back."

He fought with a passion. In time, he amassed a trove of research: shelves of books; 46 file drawers of documents, lecture notes, genealogies, correspondence, mailing lists.

On an icy February night in 1978, it all went up in flames.

The fire that engulfed his home took the life of his wife of 53 years. He was spared. He was found, naked and unconscious, 200 yards away, where he had crawled on broken legs seeking help.



FAMOUS FOREBEAR — Samuel Engle Burr Jr. has spent his life trying to convince the world that his ancestor, Aaron Burr, got a historical bum rap. He holds a book he authored. (AP Laserphoto)

"Everything was gone. Everything. Only the garage did not burn and all that was left of our possessions, of our lives, was the contents of the glove compartment in the car.

"While recuperating in the hospital, I tried to recall everything we owned, an impossible task. Then I set about trying to recall my mailing list. I could picture whole pages in my mind's eye. I am amazed that I could recall about 400 names and addresses.

"I am now back in touch with at least that many people. I am trying to reconstruct a life and they are the nucleus."

It overlooks the same view of the Shenandoah Valley, now in its autumn glory. Off to the right of his new porch, a flagstone terrace is visible behind a bed of geraniums, all that remains of his former home.

"I no longer live in terms of years of age," he said, "but of projects to accomplish.

"The first is to continue the work of the Aaron Burr Association. Perhaps through it I can recover some of the material I shared with the members down through the years.

"It is a worthwhile work. History should not casually deny a man his good name."

Banks Being Warned To Slow Down Credit

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Thanks to the likes of John Heimann and Paul Volcker, you may have trouble getting a loan to pay for your new house or car. You may also wind up with fewer credit cards in your pocket.

The two government officials have, in effect, been telling banks to be more careful about who they loan money to.

They have been trying to slow our national borrowing spree. To slow the growth of the economy. And to slow the rate of inflation.

Heimann is the comptroller of the currency. His office regulates the nearly 5,000 banks which have national charters. Volcker is the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. That's the agency which is in charge of our commercial banking system and is supposed to be able to decide how easy or hard it will be to get money.

The amount of credit outstanding has been increasing steadily, thanks in part to inflation. During a period of rising prices, people are often encouraged to borrow; they can repay their loans with dollars that are worth less than the ones they started with.

For a while, all this borrowing was good for the economy. Companies expanded production; they hired more people.

But just as inflation can lead to borrowing, borrowing can lead to inflation. People who borrow create a demand for money and for goods and services. The demand boosts interest rates and prices.

•The prime lending rate — the amount the banks charge their best customers — went up.

Why do you care? When the prime goes up, other interest rates tend to follow. Banks lend to whoever is willing to pay the most. People and companies who are unwilling — or unable — to pay the price, can't get money. You could be the one who's left out.

If the increased interest rates don't discourage borrowing, meanwhile, we could wind up with even worse inflation. That's because borrowers who CAN pay more will pass the cost on to the people they do business with. A company which has to pay an extra $100,000 in interest on the money it borrows to build a new widget plant will charge mor for its widgets.

•The bank lending rate also has been going up. The Federal Reserve Board announced on Saturday that from now on, banks would have to pay 12 percent interest on the money they borrow from the board.

So what? Like the prime, the bank lending rate influences other interest charges. When banks pay more, they charge more.

The Federal Reserve Board also increased some reserve requirements. The reserve is the amount which member banks have to set aside. When they are required to keep more of the money they take in, they have less to lend.

Volcker told bankers in New Orleans that "this is hardly the time to search ... for exotic new lending areas or to finance speculative or purely financial activities." Volcker's advice, combined with the higher interest rates and reserve requirements, may make banks think twice about granting loans.

•Where does Heimann come in? He said that because of the actions of the Federal Reserve Board, banks will have trouble getting money. He urged them not to extend loans that they can't back up with capital. If the banks aren't careful, he warned, some of them could fail.

This wasn't Heimann's first warning. About a month ago, Heimann talked about the dangers of consumer loans. "It is in the area of multiple credit lines, particularly, where observers perceive the greatest potential risk," he said.

That means you may see fewer letters from the bank promising you overdraft checking privileges with a pre-authorized debt limit. The solicitations from banks you've never even dealt with may dwindle. Offers of Visa and Master Charge cards from competing banks may end.
