

NATO Backing Seen To Pressure Iran

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance gained "virtually universal" support from U.S. allies in Europe on Thursday to seek U.N. sanctions against Iran if its 50 American hostages are not released, a U.S. official said.

Foreign ministers of the 15 NATO members unanimously approved a statement condemning the Nov. 4 U.S. Embassy takeover in Tehran, but assuring Iran's revolutionary leaders they "have no desire to intervene in Iran's internal affairs," said a senior U.S. official who asked not to be identified.

"We have no doubt about the robustness of the statement," the U.S. official said after vote, taken at closed meeting. He said "there was no description as to what anyone would, or would not do" to bring economic and diplomatic pressure on Iran to free the hostages.

The U.S. government has refused the demand by revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to send ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran to stand trial, and may ask the U.N. Security Council to impose a trade embargo on Iran.

Sources said the United States would seek U.N. action if the International Court of Justice in The Hague ruled that the hostages be freed and militants holding them refused. A decision by the court is expected soon on a U.S. suit brought to secure the hostages' release.

The senior U.S. official said Vance has broached economic sanctions with the Soviet Union, which could scuttle the U.S. plan by using its Security Council veto.

Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin is due to return to Washington early next week with the Kremlin response to what U.S. officials said was a stern warning not to stand in the way.

The senior official said the United States is prepared to form a joint economic front with its allies against Iran even if the Security Council turns down a request for sanctions.

He said Vance consulted a number of European leaders this week and found that "other countries would be willing to take similar actions" to the U.S. boycott of Iranian oil and freezing Iran's overseas assets.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers' statement paral-leed a unanimous Security Council resolution passed last week asking Iran to allow the hostages to leave the country. It referred to the "grave situation" and called the embassy takeover a "flagrant violation of international law and human rights."

"Any taking of hostages, for any motive whatsoever, is totally unacceptable and must be firmly opposed by the international community as a whole," the statement said.

U.S. officials said all 15 ministers made brief statements during the meeting condemning the embassy takeover, and adopted the statement in their capacities as national representatives rather than as members of NATO, which has no treaty jurisdiction over Iran.

NATO has rarely addressed events beyond its military sphere. One occasion was an expression of support for French involvement in wars in Indochina during the 1950's.

The resolution responded to an appeal Tuesday by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, who said it was time the allies took concrete diplomatic and economic steps on behalf of the hostages.

Firefighter Pay Woes Foreseen

By SYLVIA TEAGUE

FINANCIAL pitfalls and unequal treatment of employees could be ahead for the city if voters approve a 15 percent pay raise and collective bargaining rights for Lubbock firefighters in next month's election, City Council members were warned Thursday.

In a report on the two issues which will appear on the Jan. 19 ballot, City Manager Larry Cunningham told the council that giving firefighters collective bargaining rights would be "expensive, time-consuming and very divisive" and the pay raise "would create more problems than we could cope with."

At Cunningham's suggestion, the council agreed to place a resolution on the Jan. 10 council agenda which will detail the council's opposition to collective bargaining rights for the firefighters or other public employees.

The manager said the firefighters association seeking collective bargaining

HOLIDAY WEATHER — The 5 p.m. traffic rush got to watch more than traffic on the way home Thursday as snow began descending upon the city. Lubbock received a trace of snow on Nov. 10, but this was the city's first significant snowfall of the season. With Christmas less than two weeks away, the snow arrived just in time to add a bit of realism to the Christmas shopping season. Late Thursday night the Weather Service changed the forecast to up to 6 inches of snow accumulation. (Staff Photo by Bill Janscha) rights has misrepresented what those rights will mean.

Mayor Dirk West said collective bargaining "has been presented as just the opportunity to sit down and discuss salaries with the boss."

"Anybody would be naive to think that's what it is," Cunningham said. "Collective bargaining is much, much more."

It would mean the "whole realm of working conditions" could be negotiated, he said, adding the bargaining process is very formal.

The negotiating process "would make the fire chief a figurehead and undermine the budgeting process of a dozen high-ranking fire department personnel," Cunningham said.

"To allow labor leaders to determine salaries would render our personnel department useless in our efforts to keep our salaries competitive with other cities and to be fair in our treatment of all city employees."

Cunningham said he is most concerned about "the cost of the negotiating process and the wasted effort of superimposing union demands over professional personnel and management."

Lengthy Negotiating Process

The annual negotiating process would require at least two months time, he said, and the cost of city staff handling the negotiations could range from $20,000 to $40,000 a year.

Based on the experiences of other Texas cities, Lubbock could be forced to hire a professional negotiator, Cunningham said.

City Restaurant Hit By Gunman

A BANDIT armed with a long-barreled handgun robbed the El Sombbrero Restaurant, 5402 Slide Road, of about $200 Thursday night.

Police were searching for the robbery suspect, described as a white male about 24 wearing a denim jacket, jeans and a blue ski cap.

Rudy Rangel, co-owner of the restaurant, said the suspect walked into the restaurant about 9 p.m. and demanded money from the cash register. Rangel said he gave the man about $200 in twenty-dollar bills. The suspect left when a customer walked up to the register to pay a bill.

Goodfellows Offer Means Of Spreading Good Cheer

IT WAS a letter to give any Goodfellow a warm glow inside.

"Every year is a real happy Christmas, thanks to people like you that make it very happy for kids. Have a happy Christmas and a happy New Year."

Chief Goodfellow's mailbag is filled to overflowing with letters about the woes families have at Christmas time, but now and then he gets one filled with happy thoughts.

It makes him and all Goodfellows feel a lot better about all the long hours they put in each year to make Christmas a happier time for thousands of Lubbock children.

There will be happy Christmases in store for about 10,000 children this year, according to Chief Goodfellow's estimate.

He figures he will need about $20,000 to fill them, but he isn't worried that any child will miss Christmas for lack of donations. Lubbock folks always come through.

Anyone wishing to spread a little happiness on Christmas may fill in the coupon on Page 10, Sec. D, and it to Chief Goodfellow, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Tex.

Iran Offer Draws Doubts From U.S. Hostages' Visit Terms Questioned

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and Iranian militants gave the go-ahead Thursday for independent observers to visit the 50 Americans held captive at the U.S. Embassy. They said their decision was intended to counteract "aggressive propaganda about treatment of the hostages."

Neither the Iranian leader nor his Muslim militant followers said when the outsiders might be allowed into the embassy, who they would be or whether they would see the Americans.

But ambassadors from 12 countries met Thursday with Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh to discuss visiting the hostages, and most observers thought the diplomats would be allowed to visit the embassy in the next two or three days.

The diplomats attending the meeting were from Australia, Austria, Canada, Finland, Greece, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland, Denmark and Spain. The delegation was headed by the ambassador from Spain.

In Washington, White House press secretary Jody Powell questioned the Iranians' sincerity.

He said the observers must be internationally recognized and impartial, must be allowed to visit all of the hostages and must see them frequently. Otherwise it would be just a "cynical" attempt to divert attention from the hostages' plight, Powell said.

The hostages' 40th day of imprisonment was yet another with little sign of progress toward winning their release.

Chances for U.N. mediation appeared to improve, however, with the announcement that a full ambassador, Mansour Farhang, was being assigned to the Iranian mission at the United Nations. A lower-level diplomat had been representing Iran.

U.N. spokesman Rudolf Stauduhar said in New York that the ambassador's arrival "will facilitate talks" between Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and Iranian authorities.

Farhang is a professor of government at California State University in Sacramento, the school said Thursday. According to spokesman Charles McFadden, Farhang said on his application for employment that he became a U.S. citizen in 1969. Farhang has defended the ayatollah in public appearances in this country and has criticized media coverage of Iran as biased in favor of the shah.

In his instructions to Ghotbzadeh, reported by the government's Tehran Radio, the ayatollah told his foreign minister to form an international commission as soon as possible "to investigate the aggressive policy of the United States in

Shah Health Reported Worsening

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Attorneys for the shah of Iran said Thursday the deposed ruler's health is deteriorating and doctors may have to perform further surgery for his neck cancer.

The information about Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's health was contained in a court brief filed in Fort Worth.

The brief said the shah's New York doctors would arrive today to examine him at his quarters on the Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio.

Five Iranian students opposed to the shah's stay in San Antonio vowed Thursday to continue their 4-day-old hunger strike in the Bexar County Jail and city officials and religious leaders urged city residents to show restraint of their sentiments.

The students rejected an offer Thursday by the Iranian government to pay their bail. The five talked by telephone with Ali Havivian, a representative of the Iranian embassy in Washington, then announced through their attorney they were turning down the offer.

"It's a matter of people, not of governments. It would be improper to accept the bail money," the Iranians said.

Attorneys revealed the shah's condition after he was ordered by a judge in Fort Worth to give a deposition to a court reporter Saturday while being videotaped at his quarters.

The deposition was subpoenaed by Fort Worth attorney Jim Lane, who represents former employees of Bell Helicopter International, Inc. who are suing the company.

Attorney Fletcher Yarborough of Dallas, representing the shah, said such a ment was yet another with little sign of progress toward winning their release.

Reports On School 'Rankings' Differ

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PUBLICATION of a list ranking the most segregated schools in the nation, including Lubbock, produced conflicting responses Thursday from a federal department and U.S. Rep. Kent Hance's office.

A spokesman for the Lubbock congressman claimed the list of school districts was contained in a U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare inter-office memo, and did not rank the schools.

But an HEW spokesman contacted late Thursday denied that claim.

The Associated Press reported Thursday morning that HEW's Office of Civil Rights issued a list of the most segregated schools in the country after the news service requested the list. Lubbock was ranked 20th on the list of 100 school districts.

Inner-Office Memo Cited

However, a spokesman in Hance's office said an aide heard from an HEW employee that the list, contained in an inter-office memo, named school districts that have had desegregation problems at one time or another, and that no rankings were included.

But HEW spokesman Larry Velez denied that, saying, "It is simply a list of the 100 most segregated schools in the country."

Velez also rejected the idea that the agency had released the list at the request of the Associated Press, saying the wire services instead had "obtained" the school rankings.

He said the list is a preliminary report that the agency did not want to release because there still could be "a lot of holes — a lot of mistakes."

Hance Aides Investigating

Spokesmen in Hance's office said they were investigating the situation and have asked for a copy of the HEW paper containing the list of schools.

Lubbock public school officials, who are baffled at the reported findings, contacted Hance's office Thursday to get more information on the list and the survey from which it reportedly was drawn.

The list supposedly ranks 6,069 school districts based on their responses to a civil rights survey of elementary and secondary schools.

There are about 16,000 school districts in the country, but HEW said the survey covered most major districts and the majority of students in the United States.

The agency warned of possible errors in the rankings, even though school responses on the survey that appeared to be in error were discarded. Velez said that errors may have occurred because respondents did not understand some of the questions.

Lubbock public schools' superintendent Ed Irons said he "would challenge" See REPORTS ON Page 18

Ashes Of Indian Chief To Be Returned

MEDWAY, Ohio (UPI) — The ashes of Chief Spotted Deer, a grand nephew of Chief Sitting Bull, will be returned to this western Ohio community of 900, until funds can be raised to find a Sioux Indian medicine man to give him a proper burial.

Mrs. Little Owl Justice, 25, of Medway, his adopted granddaughter, said the remains of Chief Spotted Deer who died Monday, "somewhere in his sixties," were cremated in a Springfield, Ohio, funeral home Wednesday.

"We will keep them in a safe place until we get enough donations to get a Sioux Indian medicine man, probably from the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota to perform the tribal rituals," she said.

She said Chief Spotted Bear came to live with her and her husband several years ago from Fort Wayne, Ind. "He was in poor health, suffering from cancer and heart trouble, and I guess he came here to be around loved ones when he knew he was going to die," she said.

According to the Justice family, Chief Spotted Deer was born on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation near Fort Meade, S.D., and was a grand nephew of Chief Sitting Bull.

Sitting Bull led the Indian charge at the battle of the Little Big Horn where Gen. George Custer and his troops were massacred. Spotted Deer was also a chief of the Hunkpapa Teton Sioux tribe.

If they can raise enough money to bring the Sioux medicine man to Ohio, the Justice family said they will bury the chief in an Indian mound in Spring Valley.

Mrs. Justice said contributions are needed to pay expenses for bringing in a medicine man not only for the burial but for the traditional 10-day burial service.

Chief Spotted Deer told us he didn't want any mourning so we will have singing, chanting, and the burning of cedar," she said. "On the second day food is placed on the grave."

Richard A. Winger, former school district maintenance supervisor, was indicted on 24 counts, including one count of conspiracy, one count of obstruction of justice and 22 counts of mail fraud.

School district employee Aubrey Gene Hester was indicted on one count of conspiracy.

Eight employees have been fired since he probe began last summer amid allegations of conflict of interest and contracts being signed without competitive bidding.

On the tenth day there will be a large traditional festive feast," she said. "It is Indian tradition that the spirit of the deceased person comes to the feast and eats with the others and that in so doing, the spirit is released and can rest in peace."

When we bury the ashes we will mix them with the earth," she said. "There will be no grave marker. Indians do not want the ground desecrated."

Sugar Major Cause Of Holiday Depression, Psychologist Says

ELKINS, W. Va. (UPI) — Wondering why you feel depressed during the Christmas season?

It just might be the food you eat, says Joe Belanger, chief psychologist at the Appalachian Mental Health Center.

"You know, some people don't metabolize sugar well — They get depressed when they eat too much of it," Belanger said.

"Christmas is a time of great celebration with lots of special recipes and lots of parties... the special foods include lots of sugar, shortening — carbohydrates in general."

And Belanger notes that many people drink more liquor during the holidays than usual and that alcohol, too, contains sugar.

He said another factor contributing to Christmas depression is gaining weight.

"If (people) are at all sensitive about their body image that's going to make them feel bad," he said. Belanger said many religious people get depressed during the Christmas season because it may not meet their expectations of joy and happiness.

"They are not as happy during this celebration of Christ's birth as they think they should be," he said. "Priests and ministers work very hard to counteract this feeling — but for fervent believers it can still be a real problem."

Belanger said children who have only recently discovered that Santa Claus is not exactly who they thought he was also can become depressed.

Fire Kills Eight; Arson Suspected

CHICAGO HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — A raging fire that may have been deliberately started with gasoline engulfed a frame house Thursday, killing two adults and six children who were trapped in an upstairs bedroom. It was the third fire at the house this month. Some of the victims were found lying across the charred remains of a bed, others on the floor. Firemen from a station house two blocks away set up a ladder and donned gas masks but could not reach the bedroom.

"If there was just smoke, we could force our way up there," said fire Lt. Eugene Skowronski. "But there was too much fire."

Ernestine Gaston, 26, mother of five of the dead children, jumped from the second floor of the house and suffered minor injuries. Joseph Scales, 19, another resident, fled to safety from the back door.

Court Backs Carter's Authority To End Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Thursday cleared the way for the termination of the mutual defense treaty between the United States and Taiwan by refusing to hear a case challenging President Carter's authority to unilaterally end the pact.

The Supreme Court voted 7-2 against hearing arguments by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and 24 other current and former members of Congress who contended the Constitution requires the president to get congressional approval before ending a treaty.

In refusing to hear the case, the court did not address the constitutionality of Carter's action. The seven justices who voted against the Goldwater group did so for differing reasons.

The court's official statement came in a one-paragraph order. It sent the case back to a federal trial judge "with directions to dismiss the complaint" by Goldwater's lawyers.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. wrote a brief concurring opinion in which he said the case was "not ripe for judicial review."

Justice William H. Rehnquist, joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Potter Stewart and John Paul Stevens, said the issue was a "political question" that should not be considered by the high court.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. voted to affirm a federal appeals court ruling that said Carter was authorized to end the treaty on his own. Justice Thurgood Marshall concurred in the court's action but did not explain his reasons.

Only Justices Byron R. White and Harry A. Blackmun said the Goldwater group should have a chance to argue its case.

The case was appealed to the Supreme Court after the U.S. Court of Appeals turned down the Goldwater argument.

Earlier, a U.S. District Court judge had ruled in favor of Goldwater saying that his reading of the Constitution indicated a treaty could be ended only if two-thirds of the Senate or a majority of both houses concurred.

Lawyers for the Goldwater group had sought speedy Supreme Court review of what they called "an important and unprecedented allocation of constitutional powers between the executive and legislative branches of the federal government."

"No other president has claimed such authority. No other court has ever asserted that he possesses it. The singular gravity of the question cannot be swept under the rug," the appeal argued.

In response, government lawyers argued that the Goldwater group had no legal right to sue Carter. They said also that the court should not consider the "political question."

Ending the 1954 defense treaty with Taiwan had been one condition set by the Peking government before the United States and China could assume normal relations.

After U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch ruled in favor of the Goldwater group in October, State Department officials warned that China would "feel obliged to reconsider the entire relationship" with the United States and that "a reversal of steps already taken is a distinct possibility."

Chinese leaders had said U.S. relations with Peking would be in jeopardy if the defense treaty with Taiwan did not end.

Heavy Rains In Colombia Preventing Delivery Of Food, Medical Supplies

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Torrential rains prevented aircraft from delivering medicine, food and other relief supplies Thursday to earthquake-stricken areas along Colombia's Pacific coast where at least 200 persons were reported killed.

Search parties found the bodies of more victims of the major earthquake as they dug through tons of mud, trees, boards and other debris covering the remains of hundreds of houses. About 50 towns and villages suffered heavy damage, the Colombian Red Cross said. Six small fishing villages were swept away by a 10-foot-high wave that followed the earthquake early Wednesday.

Colombia's minister of government, Hernan Zea, listed the dead as at least 200.

Tons of relief supplies are waiting at airports in Colombia. Heavy rain and low cloud cover prevented pilots from reaching stricken areas, said reporters who also tried to get into the areas.

"The situation here is one of terrible agony," said a Roman Catholic priest in the fishing village of Charco where 76 bodies have been recovered and 30 persons are missing.

Villagers flashed a six-foot wide sign of carboard at a plane load of reporters. The crudely lettered sign bore the message: "We need medicine and food."

"We have no food, no drinking water, and the ones who are suffering most are the children," said the priest, Jose Pablo, by radio-telephone.

He said an aftershock early Thursday morning sent people running amok "as if the world were coming to an end." The priest said 90 percent of the houses in the village of 4,000 inhabitants were destroyed. About 650 persons there were injured, the Colombian Red Cross says. Victims were being buried in mass graves.

In Tumaco, a port city just 50 miles from the epicenter of the earthquake, thousands of people wandered through streets looking for loved ones, food and drinking water, according to accounts from interviews with survivors broadcast over Bogota radio stations.

Women wept as they embraced the bodies of their children and husbands. Tots sat on curb stones crying, not knowing where their parents were.

Hundreds of other people streamed out of the city on foot, claiming that they would never return. Tumaco, a city of about 50,000 inhabitants, was destroyed by a 1906 earthquake.

"It all happened so fast that I really don't know what happened," a Tumaco resident, Hector Antonio Quijano told a reporter from the newspaper El Pueblo of Cali.

He said that he ran out of his house and that when he returned after the ground stopped shaking "nothing was left."

His wife, all four of his children and two nephews were killed. He was the only survivor from the house.

"I lost everything. That's fate. But I don't want to live any more," said the 43-year-old fisherman. The bodies of his family lay a few feet away, covered with sheets. His house was nothing but chunks of cement block and twisted steel and broken wood.

At least 40 persons were killed and 750 injured in Tumaco, rescue workers said in radio-telephone reports. Long trenches two and three feet wide where the earthquake split the earth and cut some of the streets.

The police say about 10 percent of the city's houses and other buildings were destroyed.

Six boats, one with 40 passengers aboard, were still missing along the coast, and it was feared that all were lost. There are no coastal highways connecting the villages and towns along the southwest Colombia Pacific coast, almost all of which is covered by jungle vegetation.

AN EDITORIAL:

Tossing It Back In Streets?

MOST AMERICANS, we feel, already angered over what is happening in Iran and a renewal of Iranian student protests in the U.S., have had their ire raised again. This time, the burr is a ruling by a federal judge that the government is violating the Constitution in its deportation proceedings against those Iranians who have been found to be in this country illegally. U.S. Dist. Judge Joyce Green ruled in Washington this week that what she called the government's "roundup" of Iranian students "violates the fundamental principles of American fairness."

THE GOVERNMENT moved immediately to overturn the ruling. In the meantime, the students can stay—as well as protest. It will be recalled that President Carter, in one of his first actions following seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran ordered the Immigration and Naturalization Service to start checking the more than 50,000 Iranians in this country on student visas. Those found to be here in violation of their visas faced deportation if the facts justified such action. No one was to face a secret kangaroo court or a midnight firing squad. More than 600 persons under the "religious benevolence" of an Ayatollah Khomeini.

THE ADMINISTRATION said it took the action it did because of fears demonstrations by the Iranian students could provoke violent counter-demonstrations by Americans that might jeopardize the 50 Americans being held hostage. Judge Green rejected this argument and said singling out the Iranians for possible deportation violated the equal protection guarantee of the Fifth Amendment. The judge made much of the fact that in zeroing in on the Iranian students as opposed to non-Iranian that the government was acting in a discriminatory way.

WE FIND fault with both the government's reason for initiating the order, other than its concern about violence, and certainly with Mrs. Green's ban against it. In the first place, if an Iranian student is in the U.S. illegally, then he or she should face deportation. And if that student is involved in activities which may lead to violent confrontation or attempts to undermine this nation's foreign policy, then that student is assuming rights we seriously doubt are guaranteed under the Constitution. In brief, it makes no sense to us to let those here illegally remain and in many instances let them agitate against those things which made it possible for them to be here in the first place. As for "singling out" the Iranians, they did it, we didn't.

John Connally Rings A Bell

JOHN CONNALLY'S decision to run for President without dipping into the public till to finance his campaign is one we'd like other hopefuls to copy. But we don't expect that they will. Like everyone else who finds it easier to live off the taxpayers than work for what they get. Presidential candidates like the idea of public financing of their private political ambitions. Connally, of course, had good political reasons for deciding to forego $7 million in public matching funds which he might have used to help finance his campaign. BY RAISING HIS campaign war chest solely from private sources, Connally still will be bound by a limit of $1,000 per individual contributor and of $5,000 for a qualified political action committee. But he will not be bound by spending limits which vary from state to state depending on the voting-age population. For Connally, who can't get the free TV exposure reserved for an incumbent or a Kennedy, this is a handicap. In New Hampshire, for example, where Kennedy already is widely known, a candidate who accepts public campaign financing can spend only $280,000. The former Texas governor believes that

D. L. STANTON EVANS:

'Faulty' Reporting Gives Propaganda Good Name

WASHINGTON—Who lost Indochina to the Communists and who's to blame for the horrendous toll of suffering in that region are items being hotly debated in the media. Sceldom noted in this battle of recriminations is the degree to which the media themselves should be held accountable for what is happening. It is a subject worth discussing. The evidence is tolerably plain that inaccurate reporting, one-sided treatment of disputed issues, and emotional reactions that played into the hands of the enemy created vast confusion about Vietnam and eroded backing for the war. The point has been documented by professional journalists who have no ideological axe to grind. Peter Braestrup of the Washington Post has demonstrated in great detail how the U.S. media misplayed the Tet offensive of 1968, handing a propaganda victory to the Communists. NOW YET ANOTHER journalist of liberal credentials has added to this grave indictment. Uwe Siemon-Netto, former managing editor of West Germany's largest Social Democratic paper and former correspondent in Vietnam, told the recent annual conference of Accuracy in Media that faulty reporting from and about Vietnam contributed materially to the Communist victory, and that media bias muffled accounts of terrible atrocities committed after the Communist takeover. Whole families butchered as an example to others, to insure that no one would dare resist the advance of Communist power; mass burials of murdered civilians discovered after the Tet offensive; inhuman tactics in which children were used as cannon fodder by the North Vietnamese. All of this happened on a regular basis, said the visiting journalist, but seldom got reported—precisely because it was so routine.

INSTEAD, HE and other reporters focused on such things as the My Lai massacre, precisely because it was so unusual. They thereby conveyed the false impression to the Western world that America was the guilty party in the Vietnam fighting. The net result of such reporting, he contended, was that "the Vietnam war was the first one in history that was won by one side essentially via the media of the other." To underscore the point, Siemon-Netto attacked the current notion that the Soviet Union faces a "Vietnam" of its own because of its involvement in Afghanistan, where it is battling against Moslem guerrillas. That bland comparison, he said, ignores the fact that the Soviets have no hostile media within their country hammering home the enemy's propaganda themes to the Russian public.

"SOVIET TELEVISION," Siemon-Netto said, "will never show its viewers the charred bodies of Afghan women and children killed by Soviet napalm." Pravda will never tell its readers of the corruption and cruelty of the Kabul government which is so staunchly supported by the Soviet regime. "No Izvestia reporter will ever file a sympathetic story from the tribal village serving as headquarters of the Moslem guerrillas. And no Russians, Ukrainians, Georgians, Tatars, or for that matter, Poles, East Germans and Outer Mongolians will ever be prompted by information from their media to march for peace in Afghanistan, even if the war lasted 50 years. "If the Soviet Union were to withdraw from Afghanistan, which is unlikely, it will certainly not do so because the Soviet people have grown tired of reading their own casualty figures every morning, tired of having that war piped into their dash-cases every evening."

The point is as well taken as it is disturbing. And it suggests that until the media come to grips with their own responsibility in helping cause the holocaust in Indochina, the lessons of the Vietnam war will remain unlearned.

Conductor

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Teddy Isn't Steady

WASHINGTON—Unbeknownst to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy but symbolic of his burdened presidential candidacy, the U.S. had virtually completed arrangements for the shah of Iran to go to Argentina for his exile when Kennedy's blast at the toppled shah as one of history's worst tyrants killed the deal. The collapse of the secret U.S.-Argentina negotiations, following the earlier, sudden switch of Mexico in turning back the shah, may be the only damage to President Carter and his Iranian policy from the senator's harsh assault on the shah. But for Kennedy himself, self-inflicted damage from the calculated effort to promote his unnoticed presidential campaign back onto page one will not be so limited. Indeed, in portraying Teddy Kennedy in yet another stumblebum guise, it is potentially disastrous. The calculation is indisputable. The formulation of Kennedy's attack on the shah "had been thought out carefully," Tom Southwick, his press secretary, told us. Traveling across the country to campaign in California Dec. 1 and 2, Kennedy and five top aides worried about the lack of page one play despite the large traveling press contingent that accompanied him. The reason: The only story in the world is Iran and the American hostages, the only beneficiary of that story is Jimmy Carter, whose job Kennedy covets. Kennedy had heard criticism from Hispanics in Los Angeles about unfair immigration procedures for Mexican immigrants and their families. THE NEXT morning he read in the Los Angeles Times a suggestion from Ronald Reagan that the shah be given political asylum in the U.S. Having carefully ducked any critical comment on Iran for the past month, Kennedy grabbed the Hispanic complaint and made it a bridge for his attack on the shah. Hours after that attack, which was couched in characteristic Kennedy hyperbole, neither the senator nor his aides realized that he had committed a major campaign blunder. This failure to grasp reality is a mark of the amateur. It can be corrected simply enough by the addition of a senior staff man familiar with the special day-to-day problems that abound in any presidential campaign. YET, FINDING a senior staff man skilled in practical politics has not been given high priority in Teddy Kennedy's campaign. Instead, the staff bulges with ideological experts untutored in the arts of politics but deep in pursuit of relatively obscure objectives in foreign policy unlikely to win votes. For example, Mark Schneider, a key State Department architect of the Carter administration's much-criticized human rights policies, resigned his job last month to join Kennedy's staff as an "issues" adviser. Amateurism is one deficiency that was not expected in Kennedy's presidential campaign by most politicians. The expectation that Teddy Kennedy would show the same professionalism of his brothers John and Robert absorbed its first setback in his CBS television interview with Roger Mudd. There have been additional setbacks since then. BUT THE failure of Kennedy and his entourage to comprehend the damage of his attack on the shah is by far the most dangerous setback. Some politicians now are asking each other: Is it possible that Teddy Kennedy really is a stumblebum? A still deeper problem for Kennedy lies beyond this lack of professionalism: the problem of his depth of ideological conviction. Sen. Henry Jackson, a centrist, defense-oriented Democrat, has privately told party leaders of similar persuasion—particularly labor leaders—that like John F. Kennedy, Ted Kennedy is pragmatic and political, not ruled by ideology. Wanting to find out, J.C. Turner, president of the AFL-CIO operating engineers, was promised after a private chat in Kennedy's office Nov. 5 that the senator would send him speeches and statements showing an acceptable record on defense issues. TURNER IS still waiting for them. To the many Democrats like Turner who worry that Kennedy's ideological commitments may in fact be deep and abiding, and not merely political, the assault on the shah has ominous overtones. It smacked of real conviction that in Kennedy's mind, the shah is indeed one of history's monsters. For the senator, that could prove even more costly than the curable problems of political amateurism.

JAY HARRIS:

So, Play It Again

HAVE THE MEDIA become too "involved" in the nightmare that marks much of what is happening in Iran these days? Are they being "used?" The answer to the first question is not in the sense that some claim. The answer to the second is still out. The matter became an issue in the events surrounding the holding of 50 American hostages this week. It boiled to the surface following the airing by NBC of an interview with one of the hostages, an interview conducted under conditions and ground rules set forth by the hostages' captors. The two other networks, ABC and CBS, refused to take part in the interview, but did allude to it or use a "handout" film made by the Iranians themselves. The uproar sparked a debate which has long simmered inside and outside media circles. FOR MORE than a month now, the American people, and much of the world, have been privy to a piece of history being made. The shouting mobs, the bearded "spokesmen," the grim face of the Ayatollah Khomeini and the reaction of the American people, from President Carter on down, have been duly recorded, along with instant comment and analyses. Events such as those taking place in Iran aren't easy to cover. Spot breaking news in which emotions, charges and counter charges, even bloodshed are involved pose a dilemma for all newsmen. This is doubly so for the television medium because of the "see it now" emphasis and for the most part the medium's inability to report on such events in depth and many feel, in balance. THE LATEST flap over the handling of such events again has focused the spotlight on this very problem. The prestigious Wall Street Journal put it this way: "American television reporters are conditioned to cover wars, rebellions and civil uprisings in much the same way they cover fires. "You get your camera and soundman on the scene and stick a microphone in front of anyone you can find, the more important the better. The reporter asks questions and the subject gains access to a vast worldwide audience. If the latter has the argumentative skills of a Persian rug dealer, he might be able to persuade the audience that he has hurts and grievances that would make men shudder when in fact what interests him most is the excitement of violence and unaccustomed power. THE WSJ NOTES that the debate has been going on ever since political and social activists first learned, some 25 to 30 years ago, that they could get the attention of the TV cameras if they could stir up a big enough ruckus. The media event being staged by the Iranians at the U.S. embassy in Tehran is not so much different from thousands that have been staged on college campuses and city squares in the U.S., the paper continues. The yelling and waving of fists is a familiar sight. No doubt some of the Iranians running the Tehran show even learned their business on U.S. campuses. There, you have it. It is an issue which has concerned responsible newsmen, in both the broadcast and print media, for years. And in Iran, while the media has done an excellent job of handling a most difficult assignment, there has been growing concern that Iran's not-so-dumb revolutionists are "using" prime time, if not instant replay, to push their own propaganda tune. THE RESULT has been, The WSJ notes, that Americans have been bombarded with a vast amount of anti-Shah and anti-American rhetoric for five weeks. The paper makes the same point we did here the other day, that being that the Ayatollah Khomeini and his fanatics have achieved much of what they set out to do. "They have used American television to persuade Americans, a high percentage of whom have only a superficial knowledge of the history of Iran, that the Shah must have been a pretty bad person to arouse all that hostility [and] that the U.S. must be pretty bad in having allied itself with him. Very little emphasis has been given to the things Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi did which helped bring his nation out of the dark ages. One sees few in-depth stories, on television or elsewhere, about the roads and houses and hospitals and schools and factories and jobs Iran's oil and the Shah's regime and American know-how brought about. One hears little about how the Shah refused to join the Arab Oil Embargo during the 1973 Middle East War, nor how Iranian oil helped Israel and the U.S. win that war, as we noted here some weeks ago. THE IRANIAN crisis emphasizes a problem which came to a head during the Vietnam Era. It is that far too much emphasis is given to every rag-tag protester and activist with an axe to grind and far too little to knowledgeable persons on the other side who also may have something to say. Whether it is in Hanoi, Chicago, Tehran or Lubbock, Texas, all too often someone, with only a smattering of history and sometimes the facts, pushes a microphone in front of an equally uninformed person and suddenly you have two "experts" solving problems, whether it be renaming a street or what the Shah did or did not do or what is going on in South Africa. This is not to say that the Shah's faults should not be discussed, that various opinions aren't needed in a free society, nor that the average protester or activist isn't due his day in court, which most have had in spades we might add. But it is to say that both television—and the print media—have an obligation to present all sides of an issue, to do it as accurately and objectively as possible, and with depth and balance which an open society deserves. It's been that way for most of our 203 years.

Rivalry With Soviets Hurts Economy Drives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's search for effective economic sanctions to use against Iran is being made much more difficult because of rivalry with the Soviet Union, diplomatic sources say.

Administration officials, speaking privately, said Thursday there was much doubt about whether the Soviets would cooperate in any effort to impose sanctions against Iran at the United Nations in the continuing U.S. effort to free 50 American hostages held in Tehran.

Some officials predicted that the Soviets would try to increase their influence in Iran by circumventing any sanctions imposed by the United States and its allies without U.N. approval.

Nonetheless, a senior American official traveling with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance told reporters in Brussels on Thursday that Vance has broached the idea of sanctions with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin.

Vance warned Dobrynin against Soviet interference, the sources said. The sources also said the United States might seek U.N. sanctions if Iran refuses to obey an anticipated World Court order for the release of the hostages. If an effort in the United Nations failed, they said the United States could try to organize economic sanctions among its allies.

The Soviets have played two roles in the Iranian crisis. They voted in favor of the United Nations Security Council resolution condemning Iran for taking the hostages, and they stopped broadcasts into Iran from Soviet Azerbaijan which supported the Nov. 4 takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

But the Soviet press also has been quick to take up the theme that the United States is hostile to the Iranian revolution and is attempting to provoke an opportunity to reverse it.

"Their policy is to do everything they can in Iran to increase their influence," one official said.

A Soviet diplomat put it differently. "You can't expect us to join in sanctions. We believe it is a problem that will be solved by diplomatic measures between the United States and Iran. And it seems to us that the United States is having a lot of trouble convincing even its allies to go along with them," he said. The diplomat asked not to be identified.

Doubts about Soviet cooperation are known to be making it more difficult to win European cooperation for sanctions against Iran.

Some Europeans argue that the Soviets would blunt the impact of any sanctions and could use them to destroy long-term prospects for better relations between Iran and the West.

"Our experience has been that for these things (sanctions) to be effective, they must be universal," said Sir Nicholas Henderson, the British ambassador to the United States, at a breakfast Thursday.

Henderson said Britain, before it imposed sanctions, would want to know whether they would speed the release of the hostages and impede future Western trade with Iran.

American officials said they were not certain what the Soviets could do to help Iran in the event of an embargo. The Russians probably could not buy much Iranian oil, because they do not have the tanker fleet to do so. But they could send food, military equipment and other commodities, the officials said.

Russia Issues Warning On New Missiles

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union Thursday condemned the NATO decision to deploy new missiles in Europe and President Carter's plan to boost defense spending, warning that the East bloc will not ignore the moves.

In the first concrete counter-move, East German leader Erich Honecker, declaring that the Western nations were putting new rockets "at the front door of the Soviet Union," announced that his country would increase its arms spending.

Honecker, who made the announcement at a Communist party Central Committee meeting in East Berlin, did not give figures on the size of the budget increase.

Other Warsaw Pact governments in Eastern Europe also attacked the North Atlantic Alliance plan to station longer-range missiles in Western Europe.

None of the denunciations contained any hint that the Eastern nations were planning to reduce their ties with the West or take similar far-reaching steps. Honecker, in fact, told the Central Committee he hopes to improve relations with West Germany.

Official Soviet commentators lashed out at Carter, who they said "has not listened to the voice of reason," and at what they said was "crude American pressure" that produced Wednesday's decision by NATO to station 572 new American nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

The Soviet Union had demanded that NATO delay its decision on the rockets pending urgent talks on reducing Western and Soviet nuclear armaments in Europe. If NATO went ahead with approving the new missiles before such talks, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said Nov. 23, this could "destroy the basis" for negotiations.

With Wednesday's decision, NATO rebuffed the Soviet argument and leaves the decision on negotiations up to the Kremlin.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and other American officials said deployment of the missiles actually would help lead to arms reduction by spurring negotiations.

But Tass said the decision was aimed at "an all-round growth in the nuclear missile and conventional arms race. They destroy the very basis for further talks."

Said Soviet radio commentator Igor Dmitriev, "Washington must be well aware of the fact that NATO's attempts to gain military superiority will not be ignored by the socialist countries."

The Soviet press was sharply critical of Carter's announcement that the United States plans to boost its military spending for the next five years through annual increases of more than 4 percent.

Tass said the plan showed the Carter administration was "ignoring the public opinion of the vast majority of countries, which oppose the arms race and support detente and the quickest ratification of SALT II."

"The U.S. president, judging by his speech, has not listened to the voice of reason," Tass said.

There was no reference in the Soviet press to a Brussels announcement by NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns that the United States will "as soon as possible" withdraw 1,000 of its estimated 7,000 tactical nuclear weapons from the European theater.

The Soviets, following through on a pledge by President Leonid I. Brezhnev, have begun withdrawing up to 20,000 troops and 1,000 tanks from East Germany, where they are believed to have some 350,000 to 400,000 troops garrisoned.

Marine Burned In Japanese Fire Dies

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The death of a severely-burned U.S. Marine this week at Brooke Army Medical Center here has raised the toll to 13 in an October freak fire at a Japanese base.

The victim was identified Thursday as Cpl. Earnest E. Gutierrez, 22, of Moore Park, Calif. He died Wednesday.

More than 70 Marines were burned when winds from Typhoon Tip caused a rubber fuel tank to rupture, sending 5,000 gallons of flaming gasoline into a barracks area.

Four Marines died in Japan. Thirty-eight were airlifted to Brooke, one dying en route. Eight have died at Brooke.

Three Marines have been released. Five of the 26 remaining are in critical condition, two are in serious condition and 19 remain in satisfactory condition, said Brooke spokesman Gerald DuBois.

Senate Refuses To Block Filibustering On Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate refused for a second time Thursday to end a filibuster that is blocking action on the "windfall-profits" bill. Democrats showed no signs of backing away from demands for a stiffer tax.

By a 56-40 vote, four short of the necessary 60, the Senate defeated an effort by Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd to limit debate and bring the bill to a final vote. The first attempt at debate-limiting (closure) fell seven votes short, a third attempt will be made Friday.

The Thursday vote left the Senate just where it started 26 hours earlier: locked in a filibuster by Republicans and oil-state Democrats who are trying to block a "minimum tax" amendment that would add $30.8 billion to the "windfall-profits" tax on the oil industry.

The stalemate also is keeping the Senate from acting on emergency legislation to aid Chrysler Corp. That bill cannot be debated until the tax bill is passed.

Byrd told reporters that a proposed Republican compromise on his "minimum tax" probably would not be accepted by most Democrats. That would add about $25 billion, rather than $30.8 billion, to the windfall tax and raise the Senate tax over the 1980s to about $180 billion.

In contrast, the House-passed bill, which President Carter favors, would raise $277 billion.

Acting Republican leader Ted Stevens of Alaska agreed with Byrd that private negotiations toward a new compromise would continue.

However, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, Republican manager of the tax bill.

emphasized that GOP senators cannot accept any tax on a major category of oil known as newly discovered. That generally means any U.S. crude oil discovered since 1978.

Republicans and oil-state Democrats say that while the oil industry will reap a windfall on some types of oil because of Carter's decision to phase out federal price controls on crude oil, there can be no windfall on newly discovered oil because most of it is yet to be found.

The filibuster was launched Wednesday after the Senate refused to kill Byrd's original "minimum tax" amendment. The talkathon kept the Senate in session for 17½ hours, ending at 3:35 a.m. Thursday.

Byrd's amendment, designed specifically to pull the Senate bill closer to the revenues that the House measure would raise, would impose a 20 percent tax on three categories of oil that the Finance Committee voted to exempt from any windfall tax in an effort to spur increased production.

Those three categories are newly discovered oil, which will account for about 43 percent of U.S. production by 1990; increased production from expensive "tertiary" recovery methods, that include chemical injection of oil wells; and heavy oil, a type of oil found mainly in California that is so thick that costly extra efforts are required to pump it.

Dole and Stevens said Republicans are willing to compromise and allow a tax — even 30 percent — on heavy and tertiary oil if Democrats would agree there would be no tax at all on newly discovered oil.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., manager of the tax bill, told reporters Thursday the two sides had been "close enough to an agreement that one should have been made."

He said some parties to the negotiations — which include representatives from the Carter administration — "would absolutely rather die than move another inch" from their position.

INDUSTRY AID PROPOSED
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency proposed new water pollution rules Thursday that it says will save the rubber industry millions of dollars. The agency said the change will save the industry about $65 million that it would have had to spend for new equipment plus $14 million a year to maintain that equipment.

Peking Bar Gives Jobs To Unemployed Youths

EMPLOYMENT OUT-OF-WORK YOUTHS — Young women who work at Peking's "Cooperative Ordinary Citizens' Wine Inn," a neighborhood tap house and deli, serve customers recently. The shop is one of hundreds, perhaps thousands that gives work to unemployed youths. (AP Laserphoto)

PEKING (AP) — Down an ash-gray alley, at No. 97 Shen Lung Jie, eight young women and one shy man run a neighborhood tap house and deli — one of Peking's happier solutions to the troublesome unemployment of its young.

The sign outside the shabby green pub on the corner, where coal and cabbages are piled to dry, says, "Cooperative Ordinary Citizens' Wine Inn." Inside, the ordinary citizens sit at six small tables covered with white plastic cloths in a chilly, pale yellow room heated by a small wood stove.

Men drink beer and wine from chipped bowls, contemplate handkerchiefs full of steamed peanuts or pick at orders of pig stomach.

A father and his young daughter arrive to refill a bottle with beer. An old woman, teetering on tiny feet, buys a tiny order of sliced kidneys and a few ounces of cooking oil in an old wine bottle.

The shop sells 50 items: beer, fruit wines, rice liquor, moon cakes, cold cuts. Patrons write in the suggestion book: "The weather is cold. Why don't you heat up the wine?" or "Serve home-baked specialties to show you really love the people."

Other suggestions urge workers to work for great socialist advances, to buy uniforms and to serve bread, biscuits and hot water.

The shop is one of hundreds, perhaps thousands in this capital city. What sets it apart is the staff — all educated but unemployed youth, among 400,000 young people reported out of work in a city of 8.5 million people. It is part of a new wave of similar enterprises.

At this shop most of the staff — aged between 18 and 20 — failed their college entrance examinations and are waiting for assignment of permanent work.

Today's FOCUS

Business has been so good — 200 to 300 customers a day and gross receipts of more than $9,000 a month — that the saloon-snack house had to move to larger quarters.

Youths have been put to work in 120 kinds of cooperatives, producing arts and crafts, furniture, clothing and other items. Some are learning crocheting, carpentry and appliance repair in various cooperatives. Some open photography umbrellas in vast Tian An Men Square and take pictures of Chinese tourists, operating as branches of photography studios.

Along busy Qian Men shopping street, the neighborhood committee has built long rows of rough-hewn stalls where languid young people and a few hustlers hawk their wares: bright scarves, socks, shirts, vacuum bottles, calendars showing sexy starlets, snapshots of movie stars, bed springs and gaudy kiddie rings.

China, a nation of more than 900 million, has about 10 million unemployed, including the educated young people and those returning from the countryside, to which they were banished during the cultural revolution.

Peking officials say they hope to have jobs by the end of the year for the 400,000 unemployed youth they reported out of work in September. They said then that 88,000 had been organized into 1,200 cooperatives. Others were assigned jobs in factories and state enterprises, enrolled in college or sent back to the countryside.

But with just half a month left in 1979, the goal of full employment is still a glimmer. Young waitresses at a wine shop in the city's Grand Gate district said 40,000 youth are still unemployed there.

Cooperatives like the wine shop on Shen Lung Jie were started by neighborhood committees, worried by jobless kids getting into trouble.

The committee received an interest-free loan from the state to open shop. It has set a business target of 12,000 total sales per month. And the pressure is on the young people to turn a profit.

"If we lose money," said Yang Chiu Yuen, a graceful girl in braids and the official blue padded uniform, "then we must pay out of our own pockets."

So far they have been making money. In September they broke even, in October they made $75. In November, they turned a profit of $375 to $450.

Each person makes 90 cents a day plus a monthly subsistence from the state of about $3.70 to help keep up with the cost of living and recent food increases.

Although workers in some cooperatives receive bonuses, workers in the wine shop must wait until they are assigned regular work.

Asked how she liked working in the wine shop, one girl shrugged her lone male worker grinned and another young woman said without much enthusiasm, "We have no choice."

The old adage of "Pull out one gray hair and 10 will grow in its place" is untrue, since only one hair can grow from each hair bulb.

U.S. Warns Against Alteration Of 'Path'

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The United States, concerned by a bloody shootout among rival military factions, advised the government Thursday it would take a dim view of further moves by hard-line military officers to keep the country from a path toward democracy.

On Wednesday a group of generals ordered the arrest of 11 moderate officers, and troops shot their way into a compound to make some of the arrests. On Thursday, U.S. Ambassador William Gleysteen met with a group of unidentified civilian and military leaders to deliver a U.S. warning that more similar moves would have an adverse impact on U.S.-South Korean relations.

President Choi Kyu-hah, who has taken steps toward democracy, apparently had no advance knowledge of Wednesday night's military power struggle, sources said. He was scheduled to name his Cabinet on Thursday but delayed it.

The headline generals, all strong supporters of assassinated President Park

Chung-hee's authoritarian system, were reported working behind the scenes Thursday to put their conservative stamp on the new Cabinet.

Koreans and foreign diplomats have avoided using the word "coup" to describe Wednesday night's military shake-up. One Western observer said, "to know whether there was one or not, we have to see how the formation of the Cabinet is affected."

Soldiers loyal to the hard-line generals fought an hour-long bloody gun battle Wednesday with bodyguards of the moderates, then arrested martial law commander Gen. Chung Seung-hwa and 10 other ranking moderate generals, including the commander of the third army and the commander of the special forces, informed sources said.

Estimates of the number wounded ranged from four to 28 and included special forces commander Maj. Gen. Chung Byung-joo, who was reported seriously wounded.

A statement issued under Defense Minister Ro Jae-hyun's name early Thursday called the incident "a minor clash" and said Gen. Chung and several other generals were arrested because new evidence implicated them in Park's Oct. 26 assassination.

A presidential spokesman said Choi had accepted Chung's resignation and appointed Gen. Lee Hee-sung, 55, to replace him as army chief of staff and martial law commander.

The court martial of Park's admitted assassin, former Korean CIA chief Kim Jae-Kyu, and seven others was scheduled to resume Friday after a one-day delay and it was secret testimony by Kim that implicated Chung and the other generals in the assassination plot, the defense minister's statement said.

On Saturday, Kim testified in open court he assassinated Park to end his one-man rule and to restore democracy to South Korea.

It was still unclear exactly why the hard-line generals headed by Maj. Gen. Chon Doo-hwan, the defense security commander who headed the government's investigation of the assassination, wanted to oust the moderates.

Some sources said they were worried about being fired because of policy disagreements with Gen. Chung. Other sources said they were worried the country was moving too fast toward democracy and at the very least wanted to slow down the timetable.

President Choi is expected to oversee revision of the 1972 Yushin constitution, which Park imposed to perpetuate his one-man rule, and then prepare the 37 million South Koreans for a presidential election, initially expected in one or two years, although no timetable has been announced.

Britain Joins France In Opposing Cuts In National Nuclear Forces

BRUSSELS (AP) — Britain joined France Thursday in barring reductions in its national nuclear forces during planned third-phase strategic arms limitation talks — SALT III — between the United States and the Soviet Union, informed sources said.

The move, reported by senior British authorities, came as members of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance agreed on new arms control offers to Moscow, one day after the NATO decision to deploy 572 new medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

In Moscow, the Soviet Union lambasted NATO's decision to deploy the missiles, saying the move would speed up the arms race. The East German news agency ADN reported East Germany would boost its military spending, but did not say by how much.

The refusal of the British to permit their Polaris-carrying submarines and aging nuclear-capable bombers to become the subject of Soviet-American negotiations follows the lead of French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

This means if and when SALT III takes place — and it can only be after Congress ratifies SALT II next year — Moscow almost certainly will demand bigger concessions from the Americans in theater nuclear force cuts.

While the ministers did agree to deploy the cruise missiles and Pershing II rockets, they also pledged to launch a new set of arms control initiatives. A high level consultative group is being set up to follow American-Soviet negotiations both in strategic weapons reductions and in those related to the European theater. The purpose, as a NATO document put it, is "to avert an arms race in Europe."

Arms control measures agreed to by the foreign ministers for proposal to Moscow included:

—Withdrawal of 13,000 U.S. troops from Europe if Moscow agrees to pull back 30,000 to their homeland. This will be pushed at the long-stalled East-West force reduction talks in Vienna within the next 12 days. Bigger cuts may be proposed later.

—Broad support for France's project to convene a Europe-wide conventional disarmament conference which the Soviets have favored in principle. This is a project that would open up "European Russia," meaning the Soviet Union West of the Urals, to military manpower and armament cuts, plus inspection and verification arrangements.

Draft Workers May Campaign For Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who worked for the Kennedy Draft movement may shift to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's presidential campaign without running afoul of the law, the Federal Election Commission ruled Thursday.

The decision is critical for the many people involved in the draft movement who may wish to switch to the campaign without violating election laws that prohibit collaboration between campaign committees and independent operations such as drafts.

The ruling was given in response to a request by the Virginia Democrats for Leadership and Commitment. That group had registered with the FEC as a draft committee but said it ceased to function on Nov. 7, the day before Kennedy formally announced his candidacy.

While the draft committees were active, they were prevented by law from coordinating or otherwise cooperating with Kennedy or his staff. Any coordination would have made them part of an official Kennedy campaign, and any money thus raised or spent by these draft groups would have counted toward the legal contribution and expenditure limits applied to the campaign itself.

President Carter's re-election committee had assailed the activities of the draft groups, complaining they were spending money for Kennedy, accepting money in excess of the limits applicable to an official campaign, and otherwise evading the law.

But the commission held that the money raised and spent by truly independent operations cannot be charged against the limitations imposed on a candidate or potential candidate who disavows such operations. Kennedy disavowed association with each of the draft committees.

The Virginia group asked the FEC specifically whether its members may now join the Kennedy campaign without creating a legal link between the campaign and the defunct draft movement.

The commission's advisory opinion concluded that "given the situation presented (and assuming that no coordination between committee personnel and agents of Senator Kennedy occurred before the committee became inactive) officers and personnel of the committee may, as individuals, communicate and cooperate with the Kennedy presidential campaign without effect on the committee."

The FEC cautioned, however, that key officials or personnel serving on two committees might constitute a legal link for applying the monetary limitations to the campaign. But it concluded that the link does not apply for draft groups that have passed out of existence.

The situation you present does not suggest that the persons involved would simultaneously be officers or principals of two active committees raising funds for federal election purposes," the FEC said.

The commission also reminded the Virginia group that it remains an active political committee until its books are closed out — a matter of paying off some $500 in net debt.

The committee had tried to file termination papers with the FEC because it is no longer politically active, but the agency rejected the move. However, the FEC said that raising money to retire a small debt was not the same as raising money for an active movement.

Kenya Tribesmen Cross Border Of Uganda

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The government-run Uganda Times claimed Thursday that 2,000 tribesmen from neighboring Kenya, armed with rifles and machine guns, crossed the border last week, stole livestock and terrorized the population.

Quoting "intelligence reports," the paper said the tribesmen raided the Kapron and Kaserem regions of eastern Uganda last Friday, burned homes, stole cattle and kidnapped two women, one man and a child.

Your Personal Biorhythms

by Bernard Gittelson

For your own permanent biorhythm number for the Physical (P), Emotional (E), and Intellectual (I) cycles, just follow these steps:

| STEP 2. | A-B MONTH OF BIRTH | | | |
| STEP 3. | DAY OF BIRTH | | | |

YOUR PERMANENT NUMBERS

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2 — Month of birth. Find the corresponding numbers for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

| Jan | Feb | March | April | May | June | July | Aug | Sept | Oct | Nov | Dec |
|-------|--------|---------|---------|--------|----------|----------|---------|----------|----------|---------|---------|
| P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I | P E I |

Step 3 — Day of birth. Enter your day of birth three times in the figure chart, once each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I).

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's biorhythm readings.

Appeals Court Strikes Down Taped Evidence

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court recently ruled that an anti-tax crusader was unfairly convicted of tax violations because the videotape of a television talk show he appeared on was used as trial evidence.

In reversing the conviction of Irwin A. Schiff of Hamden, Conn., the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled that allowing the videotape of NBC-TV's "The Tomorrow Show" into evidence was "prejudicial."

The original show was broadcast April 12, 1978 with host Tom Snyder interviewing Schiff and a tax lawyer.

The videotape was played at Schiff's trial later that month in U.S. District Court in Bridgeport, Conn. The jury convicted Schiff of failing to file federal tax returns for 1974 and 1975.

In ordering a new trial, the appeals decision noted:

"This case raises an issue never before considered in a federal court of appeals, the question of the admissibility in evidence in a jury trial on a criminal information of the videotape of a talk show which includes the opinions of unsworn strangers on the very issues before a jury."

The appeals judges said trial Judge T.F. Gilroy Daly erred in allowing the videotape to be used as evidence.

"We viewed the videotape, as did the jury, and concluded that its admission was prejudicial and prevented Schiff from getting a fair trial," the court said.

Schiff's prosecution stemmed from his filing of individual federal tax forms for 1974-75, with the headings altered to read "U.S. Individual Income Confession." He refused to declare his income, citing constitutional claims in declining to answer tax questions.

The appeals court decision, written by Judge Murray I. Gurfein, said Schiff was "a self-proclaimed iconoclast in the field of federal income taxation and a prolific writer and lecturer on the subject of money." It said Schiff "fancied himself as a constitutionalist," and wrote a book entitled, "The Biggest Con: How the Government is Fleecing You."

At his trial, Schiff contended he could not be compelled to file tax returns disclosing his income because of the constitutional protection against self-incrimination.

UNEMPLOYMENT CLAIMS JUMP
WASHINGTON (AP) — New claims for state unemployment benefits jumped sharply to a seasonally adjusted 469,000 during the week ending Dec. 1, possibly reflecting heavy layoffs in the auto industry, the government said Thursday.

State Head's Absence Leaves Long Line Of Acting Governors

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Here is a quiz — Who ran New Jersey on Thursday?

Question 1: Who is the governor? Answer: Brendan T. Byrne, but he's in Washington, D.C.

Question 2: Who is New Jersey's lieutenant governor? Answer: New Jersey doesn't have one Question 3: Does New Jersey have an acting lieutenant governor? Answer: Not exactly. But the state Senate president serves as acting governor when the real governor is out of state. The Senate President is Joseph Melino, D-Trenton.

Question 4: So is Merlino acting governor? Answer: No. He's at a conference for lieutenant governors being held for two days in San Diego and two days in Palm Springs, Calif.

Question 5: So who is the acting, acting governor? Answer: Next in line is the state assembly speaker, Christopher Jackman, D-Jersey City. He's in the hospital recovering from hypertension, but he's serving as acting, acting governor anyway because he signed a bill into law. That's what governors do.

One more question: Suppose Jackman couldn't be acting acting governor — who would be in charge of New Jersey?

Answer: The Emergency Powers Act would make Atty. Gen. John Degnan the governor.

Question: What's wrong with that? Answer: Nothing, but Degnan's out of state too. He's in Washington at a criminal justice seminar.

Hostage Stresses Awareness Of Concern

By The Associated Press
On the 40th day of captivity for the Tehran hostages, Americans found new ways to vent their anger Thursday while deluging the post office with Christmas cards addressed to Iran.

And one of the Americans being held prisoner in Iran sent a message back home. Minnesota Gov. Al Quie released a telegram from Bruce Laingen, the American charge d'affaires in Tehran who was the governor's schoolmate at St. Olaf College.

Laingen, a native of Minnesota, said in the telegram that he and the other hostages are aware of the support from Americans.

"I want to thank you for the support and concern you have shown us during this time of trial," the telegram said. "My colleagues and I are proud of the way the American people are standing squarely with their government in defense of the fundamental principles that are at stake in this crisis."

As post offices bulged with cards and letters bound for Iran, postmasters were under orders from Washington to let them go through whether they were stamped with enough postage or not.

In the meantime, various individuals and groups found their own ways to register their protests.

The city council of Chowchilla, Calif., which saw 26 of its children held hostage in 1976, has sent the Ayatollah Khomeini a resolution demanding the release of the Americans.

Citizens of the city of Chowchilla are outraged by this act," the resolution says. "The citizens of this community are united in their support of our government's attempt to secure such release."

On July 15, 1976, a busload of Chowchilla summer school students was abducted and buried underground in a van for 27 hours before they dug themselves out. Three young men were convicted of kidnapping in the case.

In Tulsa, a Methodist church has begun a 14-hour-a-day prayer vigil, with church members signing up to pray for 30 minutes at a time.

"We don't think prayer from the church is any more efficacious than prayers offered at home or anywhere else," said William O. Brown, a Sunday school teacher who with his wife, Trudie, organized the vigil. "It's just the example we set, the effort we are willing to make, and it does insure an unbroken continuance of prayer."

Lloyd Krohn stretched a red and white sign across his barn outside Dogwood, Ind.

"America First," it says. "We Want Our Unauthorized Captured 50 Prisoners Back."

The 54-year-old retired Army sergeant also is telephoning merchants throughout the county asking for cash or food donations for a "patriotic picnic" he's holding on his 46-acre farm on Saturday.

In other developments in this country:

—Five Iranian students pulled from the steps of the City Hall in San Antonio as a cursing mob swarmed around them continued their hunger strike in jail.

—The deposed shah of Iran, recuperating from gall bladder surgery and cancer treatments at an Air Force hospital in Texas, has been subpoenaed to tell what he knows about a labor dispute between Bell Helicopter International Inc. and 69 former pilots.

—A New York detective agency says it has interviewed about 100 applicants seeking jobs as security guards for the shah's son, 19-year-old Reza Pahlavi, who is attending Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., and lives in a 12-room estate near the campus.

—The 588-foot tanker barge Venture, loaded with American soybean oil intended for Iran, has been ordered to anchor in the Mississippi River about 25 miles upstream from New Orleans because pilots refuse to go it to the mouth of the river. The Coast Guard has sent a patrol boat to watch ship "as a precautionary measure."

Senate Leader Expecting Hostages' Release

WASHINGTON (AP) — The acting Senate Republican leader said Thursday he has a "gut instinct" Iran will make a dramatic Christmas gesture and release many of the 50 hostages held at the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska said his hunch is not based on any inside information but rather on the knowledge that Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh spent four years in the United States as a student "and knows that Americans take the Christmas holiday as seriously as Iranians and other Moslems take their high holy days."

Stevens said he would not be surprised if as many as 35 of the hostages were released with the Iranians holding on to 15 or so.

But he added that the United States will not be satisfied until all of the hostages are released unharmed.

Stevens said the Carter administration's decision to expel 183 Iranian diplomats has bipartisan support.

"Considering the fact that they are holding our people, I think it is a most fair decision," he said.

My gut instinct is that Ghotbzadeh will give up some of the hostages as a Christmas gesture," Stevens said. "I think he will make some dramatic gesture in the next week."

Stevens said that if this happens, the problem will become the extent which America's allies will continue to lend support for freeing the remaining hostages.

"It then becomes a matter of size of the cause celebre," he said, "that if they release them all, Sar Claus will have a deep sigh of relief."

"But even if they keep only a few and harm him, they are in deep trouble."

Iranian Bank Governor Visits Switzerland To Seize Funds

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Iran's central bank governor visited Switzerland for two days this week, the Swiss news agency reported Thursday. Observers say it may involve efforts to seize an assets of the deposed shah and his family that Iran estimates at $10 billion.

The Iranian ambassador denied the report but said he was told a deputy to Airesa Nobari, the bank governor, had been in Switzerland recently. Swiss government officials said they did not know of any visit by an Iranian official.

In a dispatch compiled here and in Geneva, the news agency said Nobari was in Switzerland on Wednesday and Thursday and said he had already left the country. It did not say where he was going.

Two days ago, Iranian officials announced they would, "within days," petition courts in the United States and Europe to freeze personal bank accounts and properties of the shah.

It also was reported that Iran is suing the Swiss canton of Grisons to force it to hand over information on the luxury villa owned by the shah on the outskirts of St. Moritz, one of Switzerland's most fashionable ski resorts.

On Tuesday, Nobari told a Tehran news conference the Iranian central bank had proof the ousted royal family had amassed a fortune in Switzerland, Spain, France and the United States.

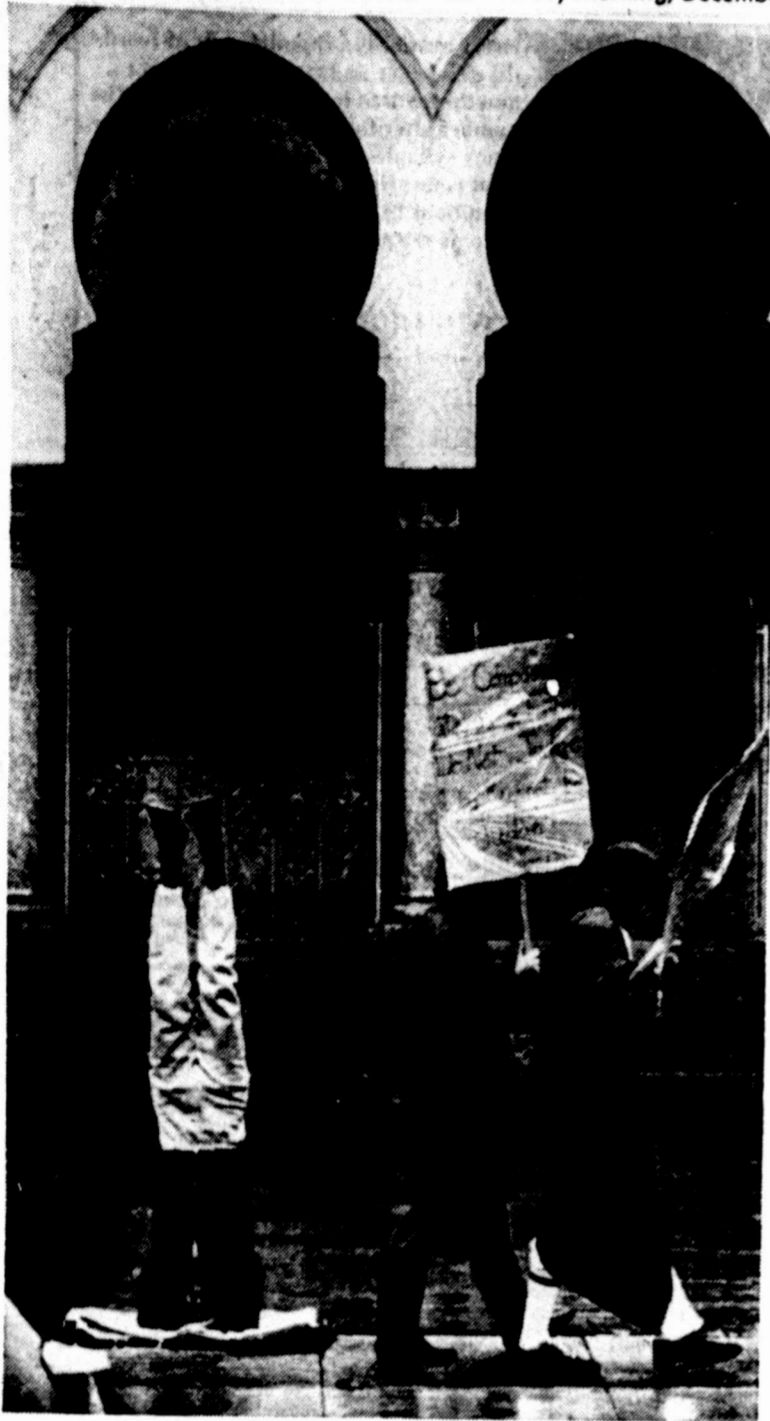

He said the petition to freeze the assets was the revolutionary council's first step to recovering the money allegedly taken from Iran by the shah and his family.

Nobari said then that he would be traveling to Europe after visiting Nigeria. His trip was designed to counter efforts by U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to get Western European countries to retaliate against Iran if American hostages held at U.S. Embassy in Tehran are not freed.

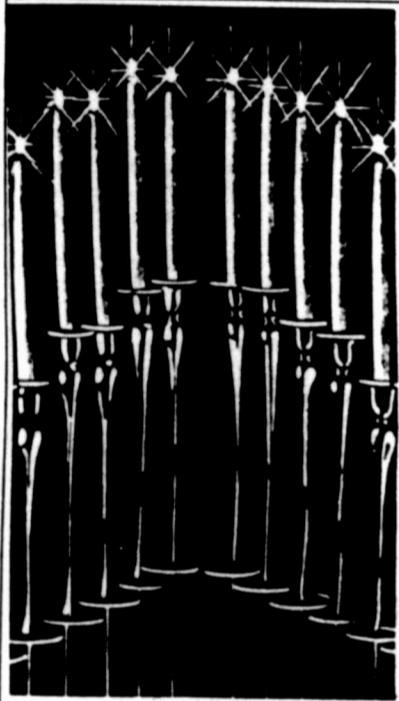

The hostages have been held since militants occupied the embassy in 4.

WIFE-SLAYER SENTENCED

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — Billy Ray Wallace, 38, entered a plea of guilty Thursday to charges he strangled his 36-year-old wife last July 12. He was sentenced to life in prison. Janyth Wallace's body was found two weeks ago in a shallow grave in Hopkins County he had been missing since July 12 when he abandoned car was found near Rockfall.

TOPSY TURVY PROTEST — A disciple of Swami Vishnu Devananda stands on his head in front of the Islamic Center near the Iranian Embassy in Washington Thursday. Brothers Found Guilty Of Plotting To Bomb Grade School

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Two brothers were found guilty by a U.S. District Court jury Thursday of plotting to bomb an elementary school in protest of court-ordered desegregation.

John Gerhardt, 28, and his brother Edward, 26, were convicted after a four-day trial and two hours of deliberation by the jury.

The brothers were not immediately sentenced.

The Gerhardts still face arraignment in Franklin County Common Pleas Court on charges of conspiracy to commit aggravated arson and conspiracy to commit arson. That court had decided to wait until after the federal court had disposed of charge of conspiring against the civil rights of citizens, attempting to damage an institution and obstructing a court order.

The brothers were accused of conspiring to bomb Olde Orchard Elementary School. That school is attended by the daughter of U.S. District Judge Robert M. Duncan, who ordered desegregation of the 78,000-pupil Columbus public school system.

The brothers were arrested Oct. 10. No bomb was ever built or planted.

Both brothers said a paid police informant was the instigator of the plot. Edward Gerhardt said he never believed the bombing would actually happen.

He said George Giammarino, a factory worker who was paid by police for two years to associate with the Gerhardts, repeatedly suggested that the brothers join him in illegal acts of violence, such as burning school buses and fire-bombing an Ohio State University area bookstore they regarded as communist. No actual acts of violence have been attributed to the brothers.

Giammarino met the Gerhardts in 1977 and worked with them as a member of the American White Nationalist Party, a right-wing group of about 50 members which they founded.

During his testimony, John Gerhardt said Giammarino enticed the brothers into going along with the plot.

Giammarino and another informant, Terry Dillon, a Columbus fireman, were the prosecution's chief witnesses.

Dillon, known as Terry Dill, was recruited to build and plant the bomb. Dillon is a member of the fire department's bomb squad.

The prosecution used tapes and film of bomb planning meetings between the Gerhardts and the informants to build their case.

Under cross-examination, John Gerhardt verified that the tapes were accurate.

On the tapes a voice identified as John Gerhardt spoke several times about the bombing plans and at times was encouraged to speak in greater detail by the police informants.

Man Immolates Himself Inside Own Automobile

LAKE OSWEGO, Ore. (AP) — Police on Thursday were trying to find someone who knew the silent young man who immolated himself inside his car in this suburban community.

Authorities said they knew nothing about Douglas P. Schaack, 22, except his name and age. The county medical examiner listed the cause of death as incineration.

"We know absolutely nothing about the gentleman. He's not known to us at all," said Sandy Minton, information officer for the Lake Oswego police.

Schaack's car was registered at an address in a rural community in the foothills of the Cascades, but several neighbors and businesses in that small town said they had never heard of him. Officers said his last previous address was a street in north Portland, but neighbors there also were unacquainted with Schaack.

Schaack burned himself alive Wednesday afternoon after dousing his clothes and car with $2.28 worth of gasoline from a Lake Oswego service station, authorities said.

"He'd never been in before," said Marland Countryman, 42, the station manager who waited on Schaack. "He didn't put any gas in his car and I couldn't get him to talk."

"He grabbed the unleaded hose and began washing his pants. I thought he was cleaning some grease off

"Then he started putting it on his shirt and all over the car. I went over and had to fight the pump away from him. I didn't know what he was going to do."

Countryman said Schaack was dressed in casual clothes and wasn't acting "crazy at all" when he first pulled up to the station on a busy street in Lake Oswego, just south of Portland.

The station manager said Schaack paid him for the gasoline and then tried to light a match. Countryman stopped him, but Schaack jumped in his car and drove out into the street.

"He got out of the car, lit a match and threw it on top of the car, and then got back inside. It went up like nothing," Countryman added.

Children from an elementary school and passersby stared helplessly.

Countryman said that while he ran in to call the police, a man ran out with a fire extinguisher from an auto parts store but "he couldn't do anything. The flames were going 15 feet high."

Willie Brown, 31, said that before going for the fire extinguisher he had tried to get Schaack out of the blazing car.

"He didn't want to come out," Brown said. "He was still alive when we got there, but then the flames just engulfed him."

Police said the car, a 1968 Dodge two door hardtop, was destroyed by the fire. The body was recovered and examined by Clackamas County officials.

FCC Votes To Reduce Space Between Dials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission voted in closed session to reduce the amount of space on the radio dial between AM stations, a move that could ultimately allow from 200 to 1,400 new stations to open around the country.

The unanimous decision, with commissioner Robert E. Lee abstaining, was disclosed by staff officials who asked not to be identified.

Radio stations in the AM band are currently separated by 10 kilohertz, meaning that if one station is operating on a frequency of 750, then the closest frequency that can be used by another station is either 740 or 760 on the radio dial.

The commission decided that the 10 kilohertz spacing could be reduced to 9 kilohertz with little danger of increased interference.

That small reduction would open 12 additional channels on the existing dial for use by new stations.

The number of stations that could be added across the country would depend on their strength and location, and the number and strength of existing stations in each market, as well as on international agreements.

The FCC decided the issue by voting to recommend that the State Department endorse the change in spacing at the Regional Administrative Radio Conference scheduled next year in Buenos Aires.

Nations in the Western Hemisphere will be attending that conference. Europe, Africa and Asia are already using the 9 kilohertz spacing.

The issue had been presented to the FCC by the National Telecommunications and Information Agency, a division of the Commerce Department that serves as the administration's policy-making office on communications matters.

The NTIA suggested and the CC's staff agreed, that the reduction in spacing would allow more AM stations to be established, increasing not only competition and programming in the marketplace but offering new opportunities to minority and educational broadcasters.

Officials questioned about the closed meeting said the staff had told the FCC it had concluded the change would not cause a significant increase in interference, and that the costs of converting existing broadcasting equipment would not be as substantial as originally feared.

Estimates of those costs were not immediately available, nor was there any information on whether cheap AM radios already in the market would be able to handle the closer spacing of stations.

Those staff members interviewed noted, however, that it would be some time before the change was implemented even if the regional radio conference approved it next year.

The World Administrative Radio Conference, which just ended last week in Geneva, voted to expand the AM radio band by 100 kilohertz at the top end, from 1605 to 1705 kilohertz. That change is not likely to occur before 1987 and the change in spacing will probably be coordinated with that, officials said.

In addition, it will take time to plan the juggling of existing stations to new frequencies, they noted.

According to FCC figures, there are a total of about 4,500 AM stations in the United States now, of which 2,250 are allowed to broadcast 24 hours a day.

Iran Harvest Reduced By Severe Frost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Severe frost last spring "reportedly has sharply reduced" Iran's pistachio harvest to an estimated 10,000 metric tons, nearly 80 percent below last year's output, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

Iran, the leading producer of the nuts, harvested a near-record 60,000 metric tons in 1978-79, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said in a report.

Meanwhile, the United States — which some industry officials have said could attain pistachio self-sufficiency — has a 1979 crop estimated at 6,400 metric tons, up from 2,300 last year, the report said.

In the pistachio marketing year that ended on July 31, the United States imported 10,506 metric tons of unshelled pistachios from Iran, by far the leading foreign supplier.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds. Looking at Iran's pistachio situation, the report said that with "the reduced supply situation and high domestic prices, exports are not expected to surpass 7,000 tons during the 1979-80 campaign. Exports a year earlier (to all countries) amounted to 25,000 tons."

City Woman Assaulted In Northeast Lubbock

A Lubbock woman said she was beaten and raped about 3:45 a.m. Thursday by a man who had offered her a ride after her car broke down on the Idalou Highway.

The 19-year-old victim was found covered with blood and lying on her kitchen floor. She told police she had been attacked on a dirt road near North Quirt Avenue and Municipal Drive.

Police Thursday evening were looking for a 31-year-old Lubbock black male in connection with the incident.

The woman, whose clothes were covered with mud, said the man had stopped and offered her a ride home. But when she got into his car, he allegedly drove to the dirt road, parked and asked to have sex with the woman.

When the woman refused, the man allegedly threatened to run over her and began striking her in the face. The attacker apparently was not carrying a weapon.

The victim's mother took her to Health Sciences Center Hospital for treatment.

In another incident, a blood-soaked man was found by police wandering in a daze in the 2900-block of Avenue H about 2:30 a.m. Thursday.

An apparent assault victim, Juan Gutierrez, 36, of 2900 Ave. H, Apt. 17, was taken to Health Sciences Center Hospital. He was listed today in satisfactory condition, suffering from broken ribs, a fractured jaw and multiple bruises and cuts.

Gutierrez, his eyes swollen shut, told police he had been assaulted by several Mexican-American men who had invited him to their house.

However, reports indicate the victim was unable to tell officers where the beating took place or give a description of his assailants. Police also were told $40 was taken from the injured man's wallet.

A Texas Tech University student told police his $5,000 sportscar was stolen from his apartment building's parking lot.

Tony Ray Pierce, 21, of 3434 Frankford Ave. told investigating officers he unloaded several items from his 1978 brown Fiat X-19 about 9:15 p.m. Wednesday and forgot to take the keys out of the vehicle. Reports indicate the car was unlocked.

Pierce said when he went to the parking lot about 7:30 a.m. Thursday, the car was missing.

In other activity, the owner of a Lubbock apartment complex reported to police that $1,433 in rent money was missing.

Mike Hollub, owner of the Plaza Apartments at 2102 34th St., explained to police that a married couple managed the apartments. Hollub said the woman told him that because her husband was drinking heavily Wednesday night, she slept in one of the complex's vacant apartments.

The woman said when she returned to her own apartment, her husband had taken all of his clothing and left. Reports indicate the woman noticed the money missing when she checked a bank bag where rent money was kept.

A 27-year-old Lubbock man was shot in the hand about 1:30 a.m. Thursday as he walked out of a telephone booth in the 500-block of Idalou Road, according to reports.

Jerrell Nathan of 2101 E. 29th St., who was treated and released at HSC, said he had just walked out of the booth when several Mexican-American men in a passing car yelled at him and then began shooting.

After being wounded, Nathan ducked to the ground. The suspects continued traveling east on Idalou Road. Nathan said he did not get a good look at the men, but did say they were traveling in a maroon vehicle, possibly a Buick or Oldsmobile.

Isaac Peter Chase, an 18-year-old Texas Tech student, said he was assaulted shortly before 3 a.m. Thursday by a man in front of a restaurant at 19th Street and University Avenue.

Chase said he was walking out of the restaurant when a white man called him back and struck him several times in the face. He was treated and released at HSC.

Two city employees were traveling on Slide Road shortly after midnight Thursday when they saw a tire fly over a fence at Don Crow Highway, 5211 Southwest Loop 289. That observation led to the arrest of two burglary suspects, both of Slaton.

Police arrived on the scene and chased down one of the suspects, a 21-year-old man. His companion, 25, was found lying underneath a van on the dealer's lot. Both men were taken to the county jail, where they were booked on suspicion of burglary of a vehicle.

Reports indicate two vans parked on the lot had been burglarized and their radios ripped out. Police were notified of the burglaries after a city dispatcher was contacted by the two city crewmen.

A 19-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 11:45 p.m. Wednesday after he allegedly threatened a woman with a pistol at a club in the 5200-block of 34th Street.

Reports indicate the man confronted two other men in a bathroom at the club, showed them his pistol and said no one at the nightspot better give him any trouble or he would use his weapon.

County Resident Shot To Death

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 43-year-old Lubbock County man was shot to death shortly before midnight Wednesday at a club on North Avenue Q Drive, and police said they captured the suspected killer minutes after the shooting.

Wenceslao Carrillo of Route 2, Box 113B, Lubbock, suffered wounds to the chest and arm when he was gunned down inside The Sportsman Club at 803 North Ave. Q Drive about five minutes before midnight.

Carrillo, an apparent victim of an argument at the nightspot, was pronounced dead on arrival about 1 a.m. Thursday at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack ruled the death the city's 30th homicide of the year and ordered an autopsy, which was to be performed Thursday.

Carlos Gonzales Garcia, a San Antonio truck driver who was arrested about midnight in the 900-block of North Avenue J, was charged this morning with Carrillo's murder by the Lubbock Criminal District Attorney's Office.

A bond of $50,000 for the 54-year-old man was recommended by the district attorney, and the suspect remained in the county jail at noon today.

Witnesses told police Carrillo and Garcia walked into the club together and sat down at a table. The two men began arguing and the club owner's wife asked them to quiet down, according to police.

Minutes later, the men got into a fist fight and Carrillo picked up a chair and was about to throw it at Garcia, police were told at the scene. Garcia displayed a pistol and shot Carrillo once, witnesses said.

After Carrillo had dropped to the floor, Garcia allegedly fired another shot into him. Club patrons said the gunman then turned around, fired a shot into the ceiling and yelled, "I'm from San Antonio. Anybody else want some more?"

After making his challenge, the pistol-

Friends, Strangers Provide Funeral For Man

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Thanks to his friends and some anonymous benefactors, Tom Johnson will have a proper funeral after all.

But it wasn't enough and they didn't want to accept the alternative — turning Johnson's body over to the state Anatomical Board to be used for medical research.

left $350 and vanished. Another man said he would foot the entire bill if his name was not publicized. Many small donations were made.

There was even money left over for some flowers.

The funeral is scheduled for today at Western Oaks Baptist Church.

Those who lived with Johnson at the Agnew Rooming House in downtown Oklahoma City worried that the 71-year-old retired mechanic would not receive a decent burial. Although they were poor themselves, they scraped together $846.71 for a simple funeral.

The plight of the rooming house residents was reported two days ago. By the afternoon, callers from all over had offered to pay part or all of the funeral expense. Rose Hill BurialPark donated a plot. One man appeared at the rooming house,

Carter Sees Mood In Iran Changing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter said Thursday he has found substantial change in the attitude of Iran's revolutionary Moslem regime with most of it "in the right direction."

In an interview with a group of Gannett newspaper and broadcast executives, Carter said the Iranians have in some degree moderated their threat to try the 50 Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran as war criminals.

"In my judgment, there has been some substantial change in attitude among the Iranians ... if you take the early statements and compare them to the more recent ... there has been some evolutionary change," Carter said.

He said most of the change appeared to be good.

"In some cases not always in the right direction but I think in general it has," he said.

Carter said the Iranians have "lowered if not eliminated all together" their refusal that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi "through blackmail would be returned" to Iran.

But Carter warned that he "will not permit this instance (the hostage drama) to become acceptable and to be dragged out."

"I will do my utmost to prevent that," he said.

But he said he did not want his remarks "to be interpreted as threatening military action."

"I'll do everything I can to avoid any bloodshed, provided our hostages are not physically harmed," he said.

He said United States "will not forget those hostages one day and that we will continue to keep the issue of their illegal incarceration in the forefront of the consciousness, not only of Americans, but the entire world."

"We will not let it become a dormant issue," he said. "We will not let the status quo become acceptable."

Carter said the United States has "adequate military" power in the Arabian Sea at the mouth of the Persian Gulf.

No "Idle Threats"

"We've not made idle threats," he said. "We have not had to. We've made a clear statement of our purpose and resolve which will be exercised if necessary."

Carter took a slap at Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who is challenging him for the Democratic presidential nomination. Kennedy has criticized the fallen shah's rule in Iran.

"As far as our country is concerned, the hostages are the only issue," Carter said.

He said "it's important to maintain one issue in our mind and national consciousness in our dealing with Iran."

"Not Proper Time"

"It's not the proper time to discuss or debate the wisdom or role the shah played as a good or bad leader," he said. "It's not a proper time to debate whether he is sick, or how sick, or where he goes, or to discuss the history of Iran."

Carter said that the United States wants "a good relationship" with Iran and "is not trying to decide which form of government they should have."

Carter said he anticipated the World Court may rule on the demand for release of the hostages Friday and "we hope it will be in our favor."

"We are trying to keep legality, propriety and world opinion — the right on our side," he said.

Jailed Iranians Refuse Release proceeding would "pose an extremely serious threat to his health."

"Within the past few days medical personnel attending the shah have come to believe that his condition may have worsened and the principal doctors who attended him during his stay in New York Hospital are currently scheduled to arrive at Lackland Air Force Base Dec. 14 to commence testing, examinations and evaluations," the brief read.

The employees claim they were unjustly fired two years ago by Bell after they entered a contract to set up a training school in Iran for helicopter pilots and mechanics. There was no action on the suit until now, because the shah has been unavailable to testify as a witness.

The jailed Iranian students — Jahl Rezal, Ali-Seved Fanaikhat, Farshad Rafizadeh, Mohsen Towlat and Fashid Furooz-Andeh — refused an offer of release if they would promise not to return to the steps of City Hall. They were jailed Wednesday on misdemeanor charges of blocking a passageway.

The students said they would not post their $1,500 bonds and would instead continue their fast at the jail, consuming only a cup of tea with three sugar cubes every eight hours.

"They heard a radio commentator ... say he didn't think they were really going without food," said the Iranians' attorney, Louis Linden. "So they decided to refuse bond to prove they were fasting. They took great offense at that remark."

Police stepped in at noon Wednesday and took the Iranians into "protective custody" as about 20 counter-demonstrators threatened to charge them.

"We believe we will put more people on the hunger strike," said Mohammad Kamiab, a spokesman for the Iranian Muslim Association which has been denied a parade permit to protest the shah's presence.

"The students who were fasting there (City Hall) have been humiliated and people have tried to beat them up. The city is shutting out the Iranian students from telling the truth to the American people."

"We question whether it is the policy of the city to protect one man, the shah, better than the Iranian students," he said.

Students Might Die

Another student, Mehdi Hadjin, said the five students might die of starvation because of the hunger strike.

"We talked to them last night and they are in very bad shape and feel a lot of weakness," Hadjin said. "The Iranian Muslim Organization has such strong feelings toward the shah that we are all willing to die for this."

An angry crowd, which at one time contained as many as 200 persons, gathered at city hall and taunted the Iranians — making obscene gestures, cursing, threatening to hurt them and eating hamburgers and fried chicken with exaggerated pleasure in front of the hunger strikers.

"It has been my goal from the very beginning of learning that the shah of Iran had come to Lackland AFB to urge that we conduct ourselves with dignity and restraint," said Mayor Lila Cockrell, in calling for calm.

"Peaceful Society"

"I think it is extremely important that here in San Antonio we demonstrate to the rest of the country and to the world that this is a lawful, peaceful society — that we have processes for dealing with issues such as the crisis in Iran and the demonstration on the steps of city hall," added Huebner.

Huebner — who called the Iranians "fools" for sitting in the rain and the counter-demonstrators "trash" for threatening to kill them — said "The worst anyone can do is act like the mob in Tehran that is holding American hostages. There must be no threats of violence. We must be above that."

"It is easy for people to get caught up in a wave of hysteria," said Dr. David Jacobson, retired rabbi of Temple Beth El. "... If we really want to help the situation to free the hostages, particularly in San Antonio where the shah is, we need to do everything possible to follow the president's lead. We need to avoid stirring up excitement or violence. Anything we do might be reported to other countries."

Dr. Thomas Youngblood, pastor of Central Christian Church, deplored the anti-Iranian sentiment being expressed by some San Antonians.

"I think it's deplorable. It contributes nothing at all to the solution of the problem and it simply inflames the community in a way that is neither constructive nor helpful," Youngblood said.

Ricci Ware and Jud Ashmore, two country disc jockeys who led a counter demonstration and tore up the Iranians' signs and a picture of Ayatollah Khomeini Tuesday, objected to Huebner's remarks about the counter-demonstrators being "trash." Thursday they indicated they would discuss the remark with Huebner when he returned from an out-of-town trip.

Government Loses In Canadian Vote

OTTAWA (AP) — The combined opposition defeated Prime Minister Joe Clark's minority Conservative government Thursday night in a no-confidence motion over a tough proposed budget, which could mean new elections for Canada as early as February.

The vote was 139 to 133 in the House of Commons against Clark's seven-month-old government.

Three of the 136 Progressive Conservatives were absent and tiny Social Credit Party's five members, who had been the edge for Clark in previous confidence votes, did not participate.

Clark, 40, told the Commons immediately after the vote that he regards the defeat as loss of confidence in his administration and "I will be seeing the governor general" in the morning — presumably to offer his resignation.

U.S. Casts Doubt On Visit Plan

diplomats held at the Foreign Ministry here, sent a telegram to Minnesota Gov. Al Quie saying he and his colleagues were proud of how the U.S. government and people have dealt with the crisis and urging friendly treatment for Iranian students in the United States.

— The foreign ministers of the 15 NATO nations, meeting in Brussels, Belgium, issued a statement denouncing the embassy takeover.

— Iran's major political party, the Islamic Republic Party, announced it plans a demonstration Sunday against the Western press, particularly against what the Iranian news service Pars called the "lying" Western news agencies that "serve Carter and his Zionist masters."

— A Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman in Beirut, Lebanon, denied a CBS report that Palestinians are assisting the militants at the embassy.

The Khomeini regime, distracted the past week by anti-government disturbances among ethnic minorities in the west, apparently had a new regional problem on its hands in southern Iran.

Tehran Radio said Khomeini had sent a special envoy to Fars province to investigate problems in tribal areas there and to urge the local people to unite and avoid "division and disputes."

Tens of thousands of Azerbaijanis, chanting support for both ayatollahs, demonstrated Thursday in Tabriz, indicating tensions had reduced.

Firemen's Pay Plan Labeled Too Costly

am said, if the association hires an outside expert.

"This, of course, adds to the cost of collective bargaining for any city," he said.

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan recalled city officials were negotiating with people from San Francisco and Washington during the 1972 sanitation strike.

"It is our feeling that the elected City Council should be responsible for determining all city pay scales and benefits, because it is the City Council that is responsible for setting the tax rate and other charges that finance all budgeted expenses," Cunningham said.

If a negotiated agreement with the firefighters were rejected by the council, a decision would be made by an outside arbitration board, he said.

"Legal Issue" Rules

Under collective bargaining, Cunningham said, "problems and grievances are no longer solved on the basis of equity and fairness" but become a "legal issue."

Because the state collective bargaining law requires the city to discuss all conditions of employment with employee representatives of the association, Cunningham said "personal contact with employees with grievances or problems will be impossible."

He said it would be "disastrous" if the city's salary policy of not granting one class of employees more than another class were replaced "with arbitrary demands and tradeoffs" under collective bargaining.

"If we are forced away from this policy," he said, "our citizens will pay the price sooner or later."

Other Organizers Feared

"Should unequal raises and benefits be granted, it would be just a matter of time before other union organizers are seeking to sign up disenchanted employees," he said.

Despite the firefighters' contention that there is no possibility of strikes if collective bargaining rights are approved, he said employees of one Texas city have gone on strike because of "higher wages and benefits granted to union policemen and firemen there."

"Based on the experience in other Texas cities, collective bargaining is certain to pass if it goes unchallenged by the city administration," he said.

"It is important that the City Council take a firm stand against decision-making by labor leaders."

Regarding the request for a 15 percent pay hike, Cunningham said the council would have to find $285,000 in additional revenues or spending cuts to finance the raise.

"The money is not available in the approved budget," and the tax rate already has been set for this year, he said.

"The most likely source of new revenue would be an increase in the garbage service charge," he said, adding an increase of $1 per month in the fee beginning in April could generate enough revenue to finance the pay hike.

The only alternative to increasing revenues would be cutting expenditures which could hamper service delivery to the public," Cunningham said.

The council also would have to decide whether the same pay increase would be given to other city employees.

Although Cunningham said it would be wise to continue the policy of granting equal raises, he said financially "it would be very difficult" because the cost to the city would be $1 million.

Cunningham noted turnover in the fire department has ranged from 3 to 6 percent during the past six years, and half the firefighters leaving their jobs do so because of retirement.

"Recruiting firefighters to fill these vacancies as well as added positions has proven to be no problem," Cunningham said, adding there are seven applicants for every fire department opening.

"It is obvious that a major reason for the high retainage of fire department personnel and the high interest among persons wanting to join the fire department is pay structure," he said.

Among the different fire department ranks, base salaries have increased in amounts ranging from 67.9 percent to more than 110 percent during the past six years, Cunningham said.

During the same period, he noted the consumer price index rose 64.9 percent.

Median Income $15,900

The 1979 median income for a Lubbock firefighter is about $15,900, higher than the 1979 median income for a family in Lubbock County which is $14,900, he said.

"Lubbock ranks above average in every job within the fire department (compared to other Texas cities), and our starting salaries are higher than all but four of the state's largest cities," he said.

"Lubbock firefighters do an excellent job and are paid for that job as well as firefighters in cities elsewhere in Texas," Cunningham said.

"We have certainly seen to it that our firefighters are paid enough to retain them, to recruit highly qualified replacements and to keep their buying power well ahead of inflation."

"I personally feel the additional raise would create more problems than we could cope with," he said.

Absentee Voting Set

Absentee voting begins for the election on Dec. 28 in the City Secretary's office.

Also Thursday, the council awarded the bid for construction of a Southwest Lubbock branch library to Ed Lampe, after shifting projects from one funding source to another to cover the cost of building the facility.

Lampe's bid was for $512,373 and the total cost of building the library is expected to be $544,000.

The council also decided to pursue as far as possible a plan to sell tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds to provide funds for low-interest home loans.

However, city officials learned Lubbock does not qualify for such a program under so-called transitional rules under consideration by the U.S. House of Representatives so they plan to lobby against the legislation.

Ford Gives Praise To Carter On Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford emerged from a meeting with President Carter Thursday with praise for Carter's handling of the Iranian crisis and some swipes at Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Ford would not say whether Iran was discussed but, in a context that made it evident he was referring to the efforts to win freedom for 50 U.S. hostages in Tehran, declared, "I was pleased by what I heard."

After turning aside a question about Iran, Ford told reporters, "I was very anxious to get the full story from the president and I was pleased by what I heard."

Asked if he thought the hostages would be freed, the former president said: "I am hopefully optimistic ... I somehow have the feeling inside that it will work out, and I certainly hope so."

Ford also said he backs Carter's decision to admit the deposed Shah of Iran to the United States for medical treatment.

"I have fully supported the president's various actions in handling the Iranian situation," Ford said.

Questioned about the Carter-Kennedy rivalry for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination, Ford said: "A month ago I thought that Sen. Kennedy was the probable winner but his mistakes, his poorly organized campaign, plus the president's handling of the Iranian crisis, I think, makes it a neck and neck ball game with lots of fireworks between now and the Democratic convention."

But if Carter is nominated, Ford said, "then he has to justify his poor handling of the economy, which is an issue where he is very vulnerable."

Acknowledging that Carter has benefited from a "very significant change in the polls," the former president said the shift in public sentiment "conclusively proves to me again that the only poll that counts is the one that comes on election day."

He said Carter has been helped not only by his Iranian policies but by "a few mistakes" by Kennedy.

Promising to continue his support of Carter on Iran, Ford asserted, "I think it's important we have a unified front in this country."

Responding to a question, Ford said he saw nothing comparable, geographically or militarily, between the situation in Iran and his own use of military force in 1975 to free the U.S. merchant ship Mayaguez from Cambodian captors.

"I support all that has been done, that needs to be done, to get the hostages back safely," said Carter's Republican predecessor. "I support President Carter's decision to admit the shah. I believe that the shah should have been admitted under the circumstances. You don't abandon a friend who has been, who has been supportive of seven presidents, who has been supportive of the United States over a period of better than a quarter of a century."

In an apparent reference to Kennedy, Ford said "those who are critical of the president for admitting the shah, I think, are off on the wrong track."

NBC Man Quits Over Interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — An NBC television interview with an American hostage in Iran that generated criticism by government officials and the other two networks has now cost NBC its Pentagon correspondent.

Ford Rowan, who has covered the Defense Department for the past 18 months, resigned Tuesday over what he considered the network's "irresponsible journalism" in airing the half-hour interview Monday night.

Rowan said Thursday his resignation was triggered by "my feeling that we were manipulated by the [Iranian] students and my failure to get the producers to include U.S. government reaction during prime time when the hostage was interviewed."

Rowan said he had tried unsuccessfully to get NBC to include his two-minute interview with a State Department spokesman when it aired the interview from Iran. The interview was later included in a special report broadcast late Monday night.

Rowan, who has been with NBC for five years, said he considered it "irresponsible to run (the interview) and not include the U.S. response."

CBS and ABC criticized NBC's broadcast of the interview with Marine Cpl. William Gallegos because of the ground rules set by the Iranian students who are holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Both networks said the conditions, such as requiring that the interview be broadcast during prime time and allowing one of the students to make a statement without editing, had been considered and rejected because they would entail giving up editorial control.

In discussing his resignation, Rowan said he "didn't want to add my voice to the cheap shots that people have been taking at NBC News. I didn't want to be perceived as going public with my complaints."

"I became convinced it was time to pack up and leave so I wrote an internal memo," Rowan said. "I never planned to make a big splash because I didn't want to join the chorus of voices from politicians who were kicking NBC around."

When word of his resignation began circulating widely, Rowan posted a notice at the NBC bureau here confirming he had quit.

Tech Student Stabbed After Snowballing

An 18-year-old Texas Tech freshman was stabbed twice in the back Thursday night after a group of Tech students pelted a passing truck with snowballs.

Timothy Andrew Thornton of 401 Coleman Hall was reported in satisfactory condition at Methodist Hospital late Thursday with two stab wounds to his right back.

Thornton was stabbed after a group of Coleman Hall residents reportedly threw snowballs at a truck driving west on 19th Street. According to witnesses, one of the truck's three black males got out of the truck and pushed Thornton to the ground. Two other students then pushed the man to the ground.

At that point, witnesses told university police, the other two occupants of the truck got out and one of them allegedly stabbed Thornton in the back. Witnesses said they did not realize the man had stabbed Thornton until the Fort Worth freshman began screaming.

The three men reportedly got back in the truck, which had been left parked in the middle lane of traffic, and drove away.

to see if the minority enrollment varies from the overall minority enrollment by 20 percent more or less.

He said the agency also took into consideration the number of students a district would have to transfer to bring the schools within the allowable 20 percent range.

Escape Two Lists

The agency also compiled a list of districts that appeared segregated in specific educational areas.

Two different lists ranked the schools that suspend a disproportionate number of minorities, and districts that have a disproportionate number of minorities in special education. Lubbock was not named in either of those lists.

Lubbock schools attorney Charles Cobb said he does not think the list will have any effect on the pending trial of Lubbock's desegregation plan. He said the list would "not be binding on the courts in any sense."

The Lubbock school district goes back to court Jan. 28. U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward has been instructed to determine whether Lubbock housing patterns would have resulted in segregation of some schools.

The Justice Department appealed Woodward's 1978 decision to partially integrate the schools. The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals sent the case back to the district court in August.

the findings of the list adding, "I cannot believe this would be true since our court order" was implemented.

Irons said he has heard that other officials in districts named in the list are just as mystified by the report findings as Lubbock officials.

Lubbock school board president Monte Hasie said he was "very surprised" by the list. "I don't believe it's correct," he added.

But Velez said that the lists are based on information obtained during the 1978-79 school year, so that LISD could still rank 20th, even though the district is operating under a 1978 court-ordered desegregation plan.

Even though the lists have been sent to HEW regional civil rights offices to help decide which districts should be reviewed, Velez said HEW will have no jurisdiction over Lubbock because it is under a court order.

If the district is complying with the court plan, "that's between the courts and the school district," he said.

Velez said the list of schools is "not a list of violators" but was prepared to help determine which districts should be reviewed.

He said that information that determined the rankings was taken from a desegregation index that results from looking at the overall minority enrollment in a district and then checking the schools

Bank Of America Predicting U.S. To Slide Into Recession In 1980

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The inflation-ridden United States is on the brink of a 1980 slide into a recession that will feature high interest rates, higher unemployment and an intensified decline in housing demand and construction, the Bank of America predicted recently.

The recession, which the bank expected to last about three quarters, is figured to take hold "no later than the early part of next year despite the 3.4 percent increase in real gross national product in the third quarter of this year."

But the expected cooling off of America's economic furnace should — if the Federal Reserve maintains its tough money policy — improve American prospects in the long run, the bank's 1980 economic outlook said.

The bank, the largest commercial bank in the world, lauded the Fed's policy of restraint in order to "get a handle on money stock growth and reduce inflation" and urged continuation of the policy despite expected great pressure to ease off on interest rates.

Short of that, the report said, the Federal Reserve will lose its credibility and the nation will face an extremely harmful pattern of ever-increasing inflation followed by only partial relief during economic slowdowns.

The forecast:

- A 2 percent decline in U.S. gross national product
- The Fed's measures to control the growth of the money supply, reduce inflation and bolster the dollar will probably make the recession deeper and longer than previously expected, but in the long run "they hold the promise of bringing rampant inflation under control."

• High interest rates and record debt levels will cause consumption to flatten or decline slightly.

• Reduced economic activity will cause the rate of unemployment to rise from just under the 6 percent level that prevailed through most of 1979 to 7.5 percent in 1980.

• Inflation will show little improvement, with consumer prices likely to rise about 11 or 11.5 percent in 1980. But by late 1980, the quarterly inflation rate should be down to the 9 percent area.

• The rate of increase in consumer food prices should ease to 8 or 9 percent range following an 11 percent surge this year.

• Expected major new oil cartel price increases will further threaten economic improvement, the housing decline will intensify due to high interest rates, debt levels and housing prices, and declining sales will slacken business investments.

Cost Of Home Mortgages Shows Sharp Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of new home mortgages increased by a record amount in November to 12.65 percent, the direct result of last month's upward push on interest rates by the Federal Reserve Board, the government said Thursday.

The November conventional home mortgage commitment rate compared with a rate of 11.62 percent in October and 10.10 percent a year earlier. It marked a continuing escalation in the cost of borrowing money to finance the purchase of new homes.

Jay Janis, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates savings and loan associations, said the record rise reflects the response of mortgage market participants to the Federal Reserve Board's action on Oct. 6.

But Janis said in a statement that since the November increase there has been an easing of upward pressures and subsequent mortgage rate movements will likely be more moderate.

The average effective rate for conventional home mortgages that were closed in November was 11.37 percent, up from 11.21 in October and 9.87 percent in November of last year. This average reflects earlier mortgage commitments. The new November commitment rate will show up in the average effective rate in future months.

Meanwhile, the Business Council predicted the nation faces a typical recession in 1980 with an unusually slow economic recovery from the downturn. The council is an organization of top executives of the nation's largest corporations.

In a new economic forecast Thursday, the council also said the outlook for inflation is worsening and that U.S. consumers can expect prices to increase in excess of 10 percent next year, on top of the 13 percent increase this year.

The council's inflation projection is in line with what Carter administration economists have been predicting.

Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, told a meeting of the administration's new Price Advisory Committee Thursday that inflation, as reflected in the Consumer Price Index, probably will rise even higher in the next few months because of higher home mortgage interest rates.

But Kahn said the CPI makes the inflation look somewhat worse than it really is for most Americans because it gives too much emphasis to the cost of home mortgages.

People do not buy homes every month, he said, so the monthly increases in home mortgages don't affect homeowners until they actually buy a new home.

But Kahn also said the upward exaggeration of inflation because of rising mortgages will be offset by a downward exaggeration when the cost of home mortgages begins to decline in a few months, as he expects it will.

The underlying inflation rate, which is the rate of inflation after discounting volatile factors such as food, housing and energy costs, is about 7 percent to 7.5 percent, the presidential adviser said. This is the inflation rate in the portion of the economy that the administration's wage and price guidelines have a chance of influencing, Kahn added.

The meeting of the Price Advisory Committee was its first since Carter named the six members of the panel on Monday. Carter talked briefly with the members of the committee at the White House Thursday.

Albert T. Sommers was named chairman of the committee, whose members represent business, labor, consumer and academic interests. Sommers is senior vice president and chief economist of the Conference Board, an economic research organization in New York.

Sommers told the panel the administration's guidelines program "has proven to be a useful ally" of other efforts to control inflation.

The committee's function will be to help design and implement the voluntary price guideline. It will complement the functions of the 18-member Pay Advisory Committee, which is headed by John T. Dunlop, a Harvard University economist and former secretary of labor.

R. Robert Russell, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said the "principal challenge" of the guidelines program will be to keep rising food and fuel prices from becoming embedded in the underlying rate of inflation in the industrial and service sectors of the economy.

"If anything, the standards are needed more this year than they were in the first year" of the program, he said.

The Business Council's new economic forecast said the recession will last until mid-1980 and the nation's economic output will decline by 2.3 percent.

"Such a contraction would approximate the average postwar recession" of a 2.6 percent decline, it said.

During the steep 1974-1975 recession, economic growth, as measured by the gross national product, dropped 5.7 percent.

"Following a turnabout in mid-year 1980, the recovery is expected to be unusually sluggish," the council said. It said its economic consultants predict that the economy will grow only about 4 percent during the first year after the recession ends, which compares with a 7.5 percent recovery rate that was typical following previous recessions.

Unemployment will rise from the present 5.8 percent rate to about 7.7 percent in the third quarter of 1980 before beginning to decline again, it said.

Victim Of Rare Genetic Defect Dies

SAN DIEGO — Penny Vantine, a 5-year-old child who suffered from a genetic defect that turned her into an old woman, died of chicken pox Thursday at Children's Convalescent Hospital.

The girl was a victim of Cockayne Syndrome, a rare disease that produces rapid aging.

She aged at the rate of 10 to 15 years for every chronological year of her life.

Chicken pox, a childhood disease, developed over the weekend, said a spokesman for the hospital. The child had appeared to be recovering from the illness, but her body was unable to fight off the malady, the spokesman said.

There are no known antibiotics or immunization methods to cure chicken pox.

The spokesman said the child was in no distress when she died at 7:50 a.m.

In recent months, the youngster was active and alert and had shown signs of improvement, the spokesman said. He compared her mental state to that of a 7- or 8-month-old child. She was unable to walk and seldom talked.

She had been in Children's Hospital for 1½ years.

Memories Of Childhood Spark Blacksmith's Art

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

As a small boy, Charles Courim whittled sticks and old boards into guns for childhood friends. As a youngster, he turned broken rails salvaged from train wreck sites into anvils for pocket money. As a teen-aged weekend cowboy, he rebuilt triggers and hammers for hand-guns worn at roundup. Today, Courim combines a love of steam railroad and cowboy heritages with a taste for flying to find subjects for a growing avocation in art. Many neighbors, in the modern fast-paced way of living, are anonymous beings who come and go along the block. Not so with Courim. When the blacksmith forge fires up and hammers sound on the anvil, his Lake Ransom Canyon neighbors know what and who it is. They also know that Courim can mend, recreate or build new from scratch just about anything unusual that they might need — from the hammer of a shotgun to the handle of an iron skillet to a bit of art for a unique handmade gift. In addition to making things for friends and neighbors, Courim is building a reputation as an artist in wood and metal on his favorite subjects. In the past, his fan club grew by word of mouth and by "someone drifting by the house and wanting to buy something," he had made. Recently, he moved into the gallery stage — "got hooked up with the Dou-

Three years ago the Lubbock Housing Authority was swamped with tenants who would not pay their rent, no matter how low it was.

But with stricter adherence to federal guidelines and a new local director, the tenant payment rate has made a complete turnaround, housing authority board members were told Thursday.

"There's been a lot of blood, sweat and tears and some ugly names involved," director D.C. Fair said, "but here's where we are." He cited this year's bad debt figure of $1,523 as a vast improvement over the $6,690 charged off as bad debts in 1976.

The housing authority has a lower occupancy rate these days, but it is making more money off its tenants. Fair stressed that the authority is not designed to be a money-making operation, but is designed to break even.

"We're not just a refuge for people who don't want to pay," Fair said. The housing authority operates three rental programs in Lubbock — Greenfair, Hub Homes and Cherry Point — and one lease-purchase program, also in Cherry Point.

Both the rental and purchase programs allow tenants to pay according to their incomes. On a graduated scale, some tenants pay nothing while others pay close to an average rental price.

Board members said they had heard director Fair accused of being "hard-nosed" about late payments, but complimented him on the improvements shown in the housing authority operation. Board member Vernon Behner said that close adherence to Housing and Urban Development guidelines would go a long way toward keeping public housing going.

The HUD guidelines don't always fit what people want, Fair said, but must be enforced. Fair's workers counsel tenants before they are approved for housing authority residence, which includes checking where they lived before and their previous rent record.

Housing authority officials attribute the lower occupancy rates to several factors. Hub Homes is down from 98 percent occupancy in 1976 to 75 percent, which officials attribute to recent renovations which made habitation impossible.

Greenfair Manor was filled to 80 percent occupancy in 1976 and has dropped to 43 percent. Assistant director Mary Myers admitted that Greenfair is probably still suffering from the reputation it developed earlier as a high crime area, as well as the renovations which have uprooted tenants there. The housing authority has increased security at Greenfair with positive results.

Cherry Point rentals are down from 95 percent in 1976 to 85 percent now. Mrs. Myers attributed many of the vacancies there to vandalism of the property.

Overall, housing authority property was suffering under a 94 percent payment delinquency rate in 1976, which has since dropped to 11 percent.

In other business, the authority approved the use of not more than four units in the Greenfair complex for the relocation of the Presbyterian Clinic, a medical facility for working people who can't afford their medical bills elsewhere.

The clinic's old location in the Chapman Building was damaged during a boiler explosion and the facilities now are in the old Posey Elementary building.

But the city's approval of that location runs out in early summer, which will force the clinic to relocate again. Clinic spokesman Dr. Jack Hays said his group has approached the city council with providing community development funds for the renovation at Greenfair. Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan reportedly questioned trading housing for health care and the question was tabled.

However, Hays thinks it may be possible to get federal start-up funds for any renovation work needed. He hopes to expand the clinic beyond its present outpatient capabilities to a facility where 24-hour care is available.

"Right now, it's just kind of up in the air," Hays said. Housing authority board members voted to allow the clinic to use no more than four three-bedroom units for the clinic and stipulated that the clinic must pay for any renovations.

The contract for occupation (the clinic will be paying rent) must be negotiated prior to Dec. 31, 1980.

Program Draws Positive Comments

An open hearing Thursday on proposals for the 1980-81 federal bilingual program in Lubbock public schools drew only a few persons, but their comments on the local program were all positive.

The annual public hearing is required for those school districts that wish to receive the Title VII bilingual education funds.

Most of those who attended the hearing were members of the bilingual education advisory committee made up of parents whose children who participate in bilingual education as well as city residents not directly involved with the program.

Rotary Club Members Honored By Award

The Rotary Club of Greater Lubbock recently honored four of its members with the Paul Harris Fellow award.

President Bob Thompson, past president Fritz Jakobsmeier, Buddy Forbes and Ron Donelson were recognized as Paul Harris Fellows because $1,000 has been contributed to the Rotary Foundation of Rotary International in each of their names. This is one of the highest honors that can be bestowed on a Rotarian.

The Rotary Club of Greater Lubbock is the newest of the three Lubbock Rotary clubs. It was founded in 1970 and has 50 members. The club has contributed more than $10,000 to the Rotary Foundation.

Written and verbal comments consisted of praise for the program, noting that the students' Spanish improved as they received the training designed to mainstream them into regular classrooms.

Several written comments also noted that the children have learned to speak English better and that parents, who are encouraged to become actively involved in the program, have learned from their participation.

All comments will be included in the school district's proposals for next year's programs.

The budget for the 1980-81 school year calls for about $156,000 in funding. Mary Gryder, director of bilingual education, said that because the grant for the Title VII program is a continuation grant, the school district will probably get funding for next year, but it might not get the amount it requested.

The funding pays for materials, a resource teacher, six aides, office personnel and parent liaisons who are employed to bring the parents into the classroom to work with their children.

Title VII funds currently provide programs for fifth graders at Wolfarth, Jackson, Harwell, McWhorter and Tubbs elementary schools. Special projects officials are asking that the programs be moved up to the sixth grade level next year. The program has been moved up a grade during each year covered under the grant.

The schools five-year grant will expire after the 1980-81 school year when the district will have to apply for a new three-year grant.

Scottish Rite Schedules Reunion

The Lubbock Scottish Rite Bodies will have a one day reunion Saturday at the Scottish Rite Temple, 602 Avenue Q in Lubbock.

Registration for prospective candidates will begin at 7 a.m. and opening ceremonies and degree work will start at 7:45 a.m. in the temple auditorium.

Registration also will be held from 1:30 to 5 p.m. Friday.

About 60 candidates for degrees are expected to attend along with approximately 300 city and area Masons.

At the conclusion of the Scottish Rite degrees, the Khiva Shrine will have a short form of the shrine ceremonial for those Masons wanting to become a Shriner.

Slaton Teacher To Conduct Student Foreign Study Tour

Lynn Bales of Lubbock, a teacher at Slaton High School, has been chosen by the American Institute for Foreign Study of Greenwich, Conn., to accompany a group of students to Europe.

Students in the "Fiesta Barcelona" group will spend three weeks studying Spanish language and culture in the city of Barcelona and two weeks visiting London, Paris, Seville, Cordoba, Granada, Torremolinos and Tangier.

The program offers an extended stay in an historic, cosmopolitan city, enabling the students to closely observe Spanish life and customs. The sightseeing during the touring portion of the program provides a broader view of European life.

Students will receive academic credit for the tour.

There are still places available in this group. Further information can be obtained by writing Lynn Bales, 3211 26th St., Lubbock 79410.

The American Institute for Foreign Study is the oldest of the student travel organizations. It has arranged foreign study programs for nearly 200,000 students and teachers since it was founded in 1964.

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I run seven or eight miles a day in preparation for my first marathon. I am 16, a female and from a running family. I understand that the thinner you are the better, so have been trying to lose weight. I have been unsuccessful.

I weigh 128 and would like to lose about 10 pounds. It is frustrating for me to watch my diet because I am so active. Could I have a metabolism problem? Is there anything to speed up my metabolism? — Miss M.T.

It is true that most successful marathon runners are quite lean. However, I would not advise you to lose weight to become a better runner unless you are now overweight. I can't tell if you are, because you don't give me your height. Your 128 pounds is fine if you are about 5 feet, 6 inches tall.

If you are shorter, then the correct approach is to keep an accurate record of how many calories you are taking in daily. You will have to buy a calorie counter to see if you are getting too many.

After you figure that out, you can cut down your intake a bit.

You mention metabolism — a nice-sounding word. That's how the body uses the energy it gets from the food we eat. That's controlled by glands, and you wouldn't want to tinker with the process. The best "speeder" of metabolism is in doing exactly what you are doing now — exercising. If you continue that and satisfy your natural hunger, you will not need to worry about getting fat or, for that matter about losing any weight you need to lose.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What is leukopenia? I know it has to do with white blood cells, but that's about it. — Mrs. E.C.

It means a deficiency of leukocytes

(white blood cells)

If the body can be said to be in continual warfare against germs, leukocytes can be called its "foot soldiers." They stand ready to leave the bloodstream to do battle any place in the body. Pus is an accumulation of white blood cells.

An abnormally low number of white blood cells is called leukopenia, and the causes for this are many.

Some blood diseases are signaled by a drop in the white blood cell count. Certain drugs can cause a drop, as meprobamate, phenylbutazone, sulfa. Rare infections, like typhoid fever cause leukopenia.

Many harmless conditions can cause a decrease in white blood cells. Some people have periodic ups and downs for no particular reason.

The white cell count must fall to very low levels before a person is in danger of losing protection against infection.

You can lose weight if you really want to. The booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level best suited to your individual needs. For a copy write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

It was such good news I couldn't believe it was in the newspaper.

A group of Boston doctors reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association that moderate consumption of beer, wine, and liquor may reduce the risk of heart attack.

Is that only wonderful? Have you any idea how long it has been since anything people enjoyed was declared good for them? Year in and year out for the last decade, we have seen "living" go from a pretty good alternative to a condition that is injurious to your health.

I immediately called my father, who is always shopping for a doctor to tell him what he wants to hear.

"Did you hear about the doctors who said people who had a little drink each day may be less likely to die of coronary disease?"

"I heard," he said, "and I don't trust 'em."

"You didn't say that when you shopped for a doctor who said exercising caused itching?"

"That was different."

"What about the dentist who found who told you you'd have healthier teeth and gums if you smoked a lot of cigars?"

"This isn't the same."

"Why not?"

"Doctors who recommend things you enjoy don't go public. Can you imagine what would happen if you found a doctor who put you on a 4,500-calorie-a-day diet and told you to cut out carrots and cottage cheese? He'd be swamped. Besides, it's not man's nature to like things that are good for him. It isn't any fun anymore. How long do you think people would eat chocolate if they thought it would clear your skin up? Or party all night if they thought it would get rid of a cold? Do you really think people would eat a pizza just before going to bed if it put them to sleep?"

"I don't understand you at all," I said. "I thought this piece of news would make you happy. Why don't you just toddle off and have a nice glass of wine before dinner and relax?"

"Do I have to?" he pouted.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My daughter gave me a matzo meal pancake recipe — I think it was from a rabbi — that appeared in your column some time ago but I lost it. Could you please print it again? — Catherine Guest

Well, just clip out this recipe right now and tuck it to your cupboard door. You'll be glad you did 'cause these pancakes are something else again — guaranteed to be an inch high and not greasy. Why, they'll float right down your gullet.

You'll need one cup warm milk (nearly hot), one cup matzo meal, four eggs (separated), one teaspoon sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt.

Mix the warm milk with the matzo meal and stir. Add the four beaten egg yolks, sugar and salt.

Beat the four egg whites in a separate bowl until stiff. Fold gently into the matzo meal mixture.

Fry in a little butter, margarine or shortening. If you use shortening, add a few drops of yellow food coloring before heating it.

Drop the pancake batter by big spoonfuls into the hot shortening and cook until golden brown on one side. Turn over and brown the other side.

Serve immediately with strawberry jam, jelly of any flavor, or syrup. Matzo meal can be bought at any supermarket. If you can't find it, ask the grocer to point it out — he'll know where it is. Happy eating. — Heloise

When she used to tell me to take something out of the freezer, I'd always forget. Sometimes we wouldn't have the supper she'd planned because I'd forgotten and I'd be in big trouble.

So I made a memo sheet with columns to write down the date, item to be taken out of the freezer, and check off whether I had or not. I taped the sheet to the refrigerator door. Now every time I open the door, I'm reminded of what I'm supposed to do.

There's no excuse for me to forget now! — Noella Jackson, Age 15

DEAR HELOISE:

For women like me who have many pairs of earrings and cannot afford a large jewelry box, I have a budgetwise suggestion: Buy plastic ice cube trays in colors that coordinate with your bedroom or bath. Put each pair of earrings in a cube compartment. The compartments can also hold necklaces, pins, etc. Everyone's remarked at how many more earrings can be stored this way. — Jane Anderson

South's jump to three hearts is a slight overbid, but in Victor Mollo's British bidding style you don't mind such slight overbids and really hate to miss a game no matter how doubtful it may be.

Furthermore, North does produce ace and another heart and without perfect defense the game wraps up.

West takes his ace of diamonds and continues with the king. Then he shifts to the 10 of clubs. South plays dummy's ace and plays ace and another heart.

East is in with the king and leads a diamond which his partner ruffs. Had East tried to cash a club the contract would make.

How did East know that the diamond play was correct?

The normal lead with ace-king is the king. When the ace is led first against a suit contract it shows that ace-king were doubleton.

How does East know that his partner holds a third trump?

West will have employed a trump echo by playing first the four and then the three. The high low play in trumps shows a third trump is left. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Club Holds Bash

The Lubbock Star Trek Fan Club, which holds annual science fiction conventions and donates the proceeds to charity, will conduct a "bookkeeper bash" Saturday in the parking lot of the South Plains Mall. The bash is a version of the car bash, except that the object of destruction will be a posting machine. "Every bookkeeper in town would probably like to take a hammer to one of those machines," said Mary Hamilton, club treasurer.

The advent of computers has made such posting machines obsolete and the machine has been consigned to the scrap heap. The bash will provide bookkeepers with "one last crack" at a posting machine.

For more information, call 885-2351. Scheduling of the event is subject to change due to weather conditions.

Challah Cover Adorns Tables On Holidays

In these days of mass production, agri-business, and pre-fab houses it's hard for us to imagine the struggle our ancestors engaged in daily to provide their families with life's essentials — food, shelter and clothing. Each day they worked from dawn to dusk, battling natural forces and praying that God would be on their side just one more day, just one more harvest season, just one more year. That's what Thanksgiving is all about.

During this holiday season, we might all reflect on the blessings of our lives. Here's a lovely way to express thanks — at mealtimes. Softly-blended colors enhance this expressive Challah cover with its symbolic Hebrew blessing of the bread. You create this heirloom in cross-stitch so it can adorn the table on the Sabbath and holidays.

Challah cross stitch kit includes stamped design on polyester cotton fabric, cotton embroidery thread, and easy-to-follow diagrammed instructions. The finished size is 18 x 22 inches. Order kit No. 14052 for $5.99 plus $1.45 for postage and handling. For two kits, send $10.99 plus $1.95 for postage and handling.

Homemade Candles Make Perfect Yule Gifts

Fancy candles make perfect Christmas gifts — they're colorful, decorative and useful; they symbolize Christmas, and they're gifts everyone likes to receive.

What's more, they are homemade gifts that don't look homemade. Cast in fancy reusable molds, they have a ready-made, store-bought look that compares with candles which bring fancy prices in gift shops. Yet they cost pennies to make and anyone can make them. The "tools" required are common household items for the most part, and hobby stores provide a ready source for the molds, wax, wicking, scent, coloring and other items.

There are many good books on candlemaking which take you beyond the basic steps explained here by Popular Mechanics Encyclopedia.

Kinds Of Molds

Candles can be cast in countless sizes and shapes, and in several kinds of molds. Flexible, rubberlike stretch molds are one-piece molds which you can remove from the finished candle by pulling them off like rubber gloves — inside out. Such molds, like others, can be used over and over.

Vacuum-formed plastic molds are two-part molds of matching halves that are self-aligning but must be sealed at the edges with masking tape.

Metal candle molds, straight and tapered, are available up to 18 inches tall. Handsome one-, two-, and three-wick candles, round, triangular, and star-shaped, can be cast in metal molds.

Wax, Wick, Coloring, Scent. Candle wax comes in slab and granular form, and can be melted and remelted again and again.

Wicking comes in spools of 100 and 300 feet, also in 6 and 12 foot lengths, braided or cored. Braided wicking is especially made for use with metal molds, whereas core wicking is for non-metal molds.

Coloring is sold in square, granular, powder, and stick form. It's added to the melted wax before pouring and allowed to dissolve completely. It comes in colors of the rainbow and color is controlled by the amount that's added to the wax. Regular coloring-book crayons also can be used to color candle wax.

Similarly you can add fragrance to your candles. Available in some 17 different scents, it's added to the melted wax after the color and just before pouring. A 1/4 oz. bottle will scent 5 pounds of wax.

Melting Wax

Candle wax is melted in a double boiler, never over direct heat. A fruit-juice can, or a 1-pound coffee can, fitted with suitable handle and pinched at the pouring lip, makes a suitable ladle in which to melt wax. It's best to have a couple of such ladles at hand so you can have two double boilers going at one time. Bring the water in your outer vessel to a slow boil, then turn the heat down to a medium simmer. Wax should be about 175-185 degrees, no hotter. You can test it with a candy thermometer.

Setting Up Your Mold

One of the best ways to support a rubber stretch mold is to rest it in an inverted cardboard paint bucket liner. A hole is cut in the bottom to accommodate the mold, and the mold is suspended in the hole. In the case of two-piece plastic molds, the two halves are sealed around the edges with masking tape (after the wax is in place, of course) and the mold is supported vertically. A simple way to do this is to use a small vise which clamps over the edge of a table and secure the mold in it.

Metal molds are no problem. They're freestanding and can't tip over.

Inserting The Wick

In most cases, depending upon the particular mold, the wick is placed in the center and supported at the top. When working with rubber molds, the wick can be held with a pencil placed across the top. In the case of two-part plastic molds, the wick is held in place with tabs of masking tape. Here the wick is cut long enough to stick out both ends of the mold and the ends taped. When working with metal molds, the wick is attached to the bottom of the mold and wound around a rod bridging the top. In each case the wick is first dipped in melted wax and allowed to cool before it is centered in the mold. Predipping the wick will make it burn better.

Melted wax is hot, so take care in pouring it into your mold. Also, avoid getting any water in the wax since it will cause bubbles in the finished candle. Fill the mold almost to the top and let stand. As it cools, wax shrinks, so when it starts to get a crust, poke a hole through the hardened wax and added more melted wax to bring it level. You may have to do this several times as the wax continues to shrink and form air pockets. It requires about three hours for the wax to harden. To cure, place the mold overnight in a refrigerator. Chilling also will give added shine to the wax.

When you are able to tilt the mold while filling it, as you can with metal molds, doing so and gradually bringing the mold upright as you pour helps prevent the wax from becoming cloudy due to excessive air bubbles.

Removing Candle From Mold

A flexible mold is removed from the candle much the same way as pulling a rubber glove from the hand; it's actually turned inside out. Dusting the outside of the mold with talcum will keep it from sticking to itself.

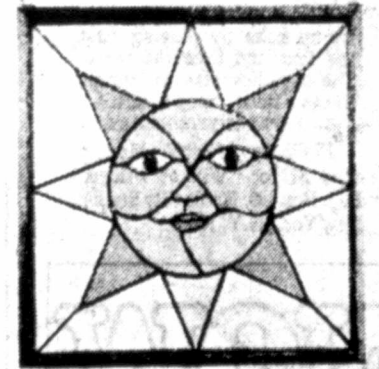

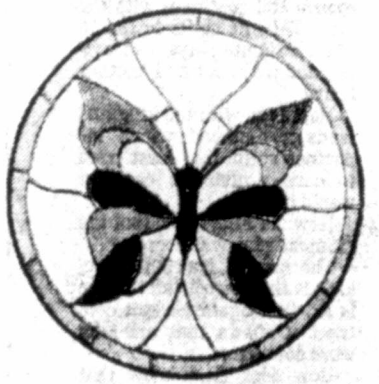

To open a two-part mold, the tape is peeled from the edges and the halves gently pulled free. If they stick, hold the mold under hot water for a few seconds. Spraying the mold beforehand with silicone or coating with cooking oil will ensure easy release. To remove a candle from a metal mold you simply turn the mold upside down and tap the bottom lightly. A knife can be used to pare and smooth any unwanted ridges.

Finishing off the bottom of candles so they sit level can be done in two ways. You can shave the wax with a rasp-like tool called Surform, or you can rub the candle over the bottom of a pan placed over low heat on your range top.

Novelty candles in the form of frogs, turtles, owls, seahorses, snowmen, mushrooms and the like are especially fun to make, as are candles that float. New for a garden pool or a romantic centerpiece, lighted floating candles are fascinating to watch with their everchanging reflections. The candles are cast in flexible molds while they rest in pans of water. You release the finished candle from its mold by gently pulling (not pushing) each of the petal "separators" away from the core.

Special Liquids Can Beautify Paneling

By ANDY LANG, Associated Press Writer

Q — We have wood paneling in the family room in our house. It has never been given any finish since we have been in the house, which is about eight years. My husband said he liked the non-gloss surface of the wood and did not want to put on anything that would make the wood shiny. Now, however, the wood appears dull and lifeless. Can we clean it with something that won't give it a gloss and yet will make it appear lively again?

A — There are several ways this can be done. The simplest is to buy a liquid that removes grease, grime, smudges and finger marks and brings out the natural beauty of the wood. A product of this type can be purchased in a hardware store, lumber yard, building supply establishment and in many supermarkets. Look on the shelves where waxes and cleaners are located.

Q — I soon will be cutting firewood from the trunks of some fallen trees with a chain saw. At the same time, I expect to cut some disks from the wood to make a patio floor. I know these should not be placed directly on the soil. What goes underneath them?

A — Make a gravel bed about 4 inches deep and put the disks in place. Be sure they are set firmly. Tamp them down or use your feet to get them firmly into the gravel. When you are sure they are level, cover the entire surface with sand. Use a hose to spread the sand into the spaces between the disks. This must be done very gently. When the sand has settled into place, spread a little dry cement powder over the sand and dampen it a bit. When the cement dries, the platters will be snugly in place. After the patio has been used a while, check to see

Lamesa Man Assessed Life Sentence As Habitual Criminal

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Ruben Ortiz, who was indicted as an habitual criminal because of two prior felony convictions, was convicted Thursday of a March 23 attempted burglary here and sentenced to life in prison.

A 140th District Court jury deliberated only 10 minutes before finding Ortiz guilty, and Judge William R. Shaver pronounced sentence after hearing evidence of the prior convictions in the punishment phase of the trial.

The 33-year-old Lamesa man was charged with trying to break into a storage building alongside Paul Enger Grocery at 3202 Ave. H.

Montford introduced evidence of Dawson County convictions for marijuana possession in 1970 and felony theft in 1975 during the punishment phase.

Ortiz had testified in his own defense that he went behind the store with a companion to urinate, and he said his parole for the 1975 conviction was revoked on a car burglary charge.

Defense attorney Bill Wischkaemper told the jury that the companion, Alcario Selestino, 40, failed to appear for trial in the case in September and is a fugitive.

The mustachioed defendant, who wore sunglasses with small, round lenses during questioning, said he walked behind the store and was unaware of what the other man might have been doing.

Kennedy International Airport in New York City handles about 50 percent of the nation's overseas air travel and is the nation's largest air cargo center.

Lubbock police responded to a burglar alarm and arrested both men near the small storage building, where the door had been forced open.

Ortiz's wife and five children sat on the front row in the courtroom while Wischkaemper argued that Ortiz would not have risked breaking into the building because of the possibility of an habitual criminal conviction and a life sentence.

Ortiz had testified that he and Selestino played pool and drank beer for several hours that afternoon and night at a downtown Lubbock pool hall. He said they walked to the 3200 block of Avenue H.

Arguing that the storage building was broken into instead of the grocery store because the men did not expect it to have a burglar alarm, Montford said, "What we have here is a professional thief."

"I appreciate the needs of those kids as much as anybody. But this isn't the kind of man who needs to be bringing them up. He needs to be where he can be watched 24 hours a day."

Ortiz reportedly turned down an offer from the criminal district attorney's office to plead guilty in return for a 20-year sentence and not go to trial as an habitual criminal.

Under state law, the conviction made a life sentence mandatory.

Brutality Cases To Top Attorney General's List

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles Renfrew said Thursday in response to Hispanic criticism of his nomination as deputy attorney general that he would put prosecution of police brutality cases at the top of his priority list.

"I think it (police brutality) must be eradicated," Renfrew said as the Senate Judiciary Committee concluded its confirmation hearing. "It undermines the entire public confidence in law enforcement."

Hispanics have charged that the Justice Department has been reluctant to prosecute police brutality cases.

The response by Renfrew, a federal judge in California, had little effect on the minority groups opposing him.

Vilma Martinez, head of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, said Renfrew's response had not changed her mind.

"To be deputy attorney general, there are certain problems you should know about. He didn't indicate to me that he knows about those problems," she said. "Police brutality is horrendous, but it's one of a range of problems."

Miss Martinez, who spoke Wednesday against the nomination, said she would decide how to press further opposition after consulting with the other Hispanic and Asian-American organizations that testified at the hearing.

It appeared unlikely that the crush of year-end business would permit Senate confirmation before the Christmas recess.

Renfrew said he was told by both supporters and opponents that he was "too lawyer-like, too deliberate" in his opening remarks to the committee.

"I can assure you that I do have a deeply felt commitment to civil rights," he said. "As deputy attorney general there are important leadership roles to be fulfilled."

Renfrew said he hoped that U.S. attorneys' offices would become places where any American could bring a civil rights complaint.

The opposition to Renfrew stemmed from a law review article he wrote in 1977 that concluded only blacks and native Americans were eligible for a national preferential admissions program for graduate schools.

Renfrew said he accepted responsibility for the article, written from notes he prepared for an oral presentation. The article was deficient in research, analysis and thought, the judge added.

Lubbock Roads Due For Share Of State Resurfacing Work

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A major highway resurfacing project approved by the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission will include 39.2 miles of roadway in the Lubbock area as part of the $197 million 1981 Special Rehabilitation Program for federal, state and farm-to-market roads.

The rehabilitation program will include projects to rebuild and improve 1,040.3 miles of U.S. and state highways and 260.5 miles of farm-to-market roads in Texas.

The program was needed because of severe winter weather over the past couple of years, delayed maintenance due to rising costs and material shortages and increased traffic loads, officials said.

Projects from the Lubbock area, estimated to cost $6.492 million, include Floyd County, U.S. 70 from FM 651 east 11.9 miles to the Motley County line; Garza County, U.S. 84 from the south Post city limits southeast 7.6 miles to near Green Tank.

Also Garza County, U.S. 84 from Justiceburg southeast 8.4 miles to the Scurry County line; Garza County, U.S. 84 from near Green Tank southeast 6.6 miles to Justiceburg; Lubbock County, U.S. 62 in Lubbock from Avenue A northeast 2.5 miles to Loop 289; Lubbock County, U.S. 82 in Lubbock from Avenue A east 2.2 miles to Guava Avenue; and Howard County, U.S. 87 from 0.4 miles south of FM 33 north four miles to FM 700 in Big Spring.

Naval hero John Paul Jones uttered his famous "I have not yet begun to fight" in 1779 in a battle against the British.

Texans 'Can Live With' 55 MPH Limit But Appeal Made For 60

AUSTIN (AP) — A national task force urging compliance with the 55 mph speed limit has been told Texas can live with it but it would be easier to take at 60 mph.

"Such a proposal (60 mph) could substantially improve voluntary compliance by the public and result in laws which can be realistically enforced," said Eugene Robbins, president of the Texas Good Roads Transportation Association.

Robbins was among 18 witnesses who appeared before the eight members of the National Highway Safety Advisory Committee in two days of hearings. The group will relay the Texas reactions on the controversial 55 mph law to the full committee and then to the president and Congress.

"Texas has been threatened with loss of $8 million a year in federal highway funds if enforcement of the speed law is not increased.

"We wish to state clearly that as long as the congressional mandate for a 55 mph speed limit remains in effect, we will continue to support compliance," said Robbins. "However, we question the effectiveness of the threat of federal sanctions in achieving compliance by the public."

Robbins said his association, one of the most powerful in its influence on the Texas Legislature, recommended the task force study the feasibility of asking Congress to increase the limit to 60 mph on interstate highways "and other highways which experience low fatality rates."

"This study may show that a 60 mph speed limit on certain designated highways would not significantly increase fatalities or fuel consumption," Robbins said.

Earlier, Joe Milner, head of the traffic law enforcement division of the Department of Public Safety, suggested that "it is not a bad view for each state to set its own speed limit and enforcement."

Milner said lack of public support for the 55 mph law was the No. 1 law enforcement problem.

Lynne Stein, of a Houston marketing research firm, said 4,000 interviews with Texas motorists showed they average driving 60.6 miles per hour with 23 percent of those interviewed traveling more than 65. The results showed the drivers felt they would be most "comfortable" at 62 mph and "safest" at 59 mph.

The head of the Texas Safety Association, a private organization supported by 1,100 member firms, said Thursday an estimated 1,400 lives have been saved in Texas since the 55 mph speed limit went into effect.

"There has been a 60 percent decrease in spinal cord injuries from automobile accidents and we are saving an estimated 5 million gallons of gasoline a day," said George Gustafson, executive director of the association.

He told the task force that compliance with the 55 mph law was the No. 1 priority for the association in 1980.

Bounty Hunters Indicted For False Imprisonment

DALLAS (AP) — Two men accosted Vicki Sprowl, 21, as she was leaving a nightclub, told her she was under arrest for "jumping several bonds," and then handcuffed her.

Later, when it turned out the men had captured the wrong woman, she was offered $100 if she would agree to drop the matter. But she refused.

The Dallas County grand jury Wednesday indicted two bounty hunters who work for the National Bonding Agency on charges of false imprisonment in the case. The two defendants, Robert Duffer, 25, and Thomas Wright, 23, could get a maximum sentence of six months in jail if convicted.

Bounty hunters track down persons who fail to make their court appearances, saving the bonding company from having to forfeit the fugitive's bail. But Miss Sprowl, who was celebrating her 21st birthday the night of the incident, was apparently mistaken for someone else.

She told police one of the men told her, "Hold it. You're not going anywhere," as she was leaving a nightclub Sept. 14. She said she was pushed against a wall and handcuffed.

She said neither man identified himself. The club's owner summoned police, and the woman was released. The two men were allowed to go free, but Miss Sprowl called police later to complain.

Police sent officer William Maloney to her house to get more information, and police say that while Maloney was there, an executive of the bonding company telephoned her and offered her $100 if "she would not make a police report."

Artist Began Craft Early As Youth

ble Ts" — when he traded a wagon for another work of art, and demand was on. "I want to bring back authentic things from steam railroading and cowboy times," Courim said. He does it with research sparked by childhood memory.

The grandson of a blacksmith and son of a railroad section foreman, Courim cut his teeth on railroad stories and spent his own time in the saddle "as close to oldtime cowboy as you can come."

Artworks began with his first pocketknife which came at a very young age for a boy growing up in a rural section house beside the rails.

On weekends, when all the section crew couldn't be located for a train wreck, Courim went with his father on the job for the Missouri Pacific at College Station.

The wrecker always tossed twisted, broken rails off to the side and Courim would go back later to retrieve the pieces.

"Rail at our house was like cordwood," he recalled, adding that his anvils, turned out sometimes en masse, brought $10 apiece from friends.

Courim, who remembers seeing his father using big kegs full of date nails on ties, was among the first collectors and has incorporated some of the collection into his art.

By high school, Courim had turned cowboy.

"Some friends had herds of cattle and we'd all go to one this weekend and another the next. We'd go brand and rope and when nobody was looking we tried to ride some of the wild stock."

On summer jobs and the weekend brandings, the group took to wearing six-guns, turning Courim into "a shade tree gunsmith repairing what broke when we fell off the horses."

Making spurs came naturally, along with a desire to duplicate relics of the Old West.

Antique collecting was not to be a problem because he could repair or replace anything to return the piece to original condition.

Moving from one media to another, one subject to the next, keeps his hobbies growing.

"I don't like monotony," he grinned.

When he has four wagons to build to scale, he alternates with other creations — spurs, andirons, furniture, airplanes, railroad cars, etc.

Creating is a thrill, but recalling legends and old stories is better — about wagons, like the four-team hitch in the field next door, and trains, like the head-on wreck of two steam locomotives behind the Courim home or the thrill of seeing men match John Henry's claim to fame.

The art is one thing, but what it brings from the past in memory is even better for the artist and for his growing fan club of collectors.

Lubbock Attorney To Lead Scout Council

Bobby J. Moody, Lubbock attorney and long-time Scouter, was elected to a second term as president of the South Plains Council of the Boy Scouts of America at the group's annual business meeting Tuesday night.

Also elected were Ransom Galloway as treasurer, Larry Cunningham as vice president for finance, Alan Henry as vice president for administration.

Most Service Stations To Close For Holidays

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas motorists should drive on the top half of their gasoline tanks Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

That was the suggestion Thursday from the Texas Division of the American Automobile Association.

The AAA said 75 percent of the 416 service stations in its latest gasoline availability survey indicated they will definitely close Christmas Day and another 5 percent said they might close.

And only one-third were certain they would be open on New Year's Day.

A year ago, when there were no supply problems, two-thirds of the stations were open on both the holidays.

The AAA also said prices have risen sharply in the past month, with three full-service grades, one self-service grade, and diesel fuel now averaging more than $1 a gallon.

Current average full-service prices were regular 96.5 cents a gallon, up from 94.6 in November, unleaded $1.001, up from 98.2, premium $1.018, up from $1.001, and premium unleaded $1.019, up from $1.002.

Average self-service prices were regular 93.9, up from 91.4, unleaded 98.1, up from 95.7, premium 98.8, up from 97.4, and premium unleaded $1.006, up from 98.0.

The highest averages full-service included Midland-Odessa 97.7 for regular, Austin $1.029 for premium, and McAllen $1.014 for unleaded.

Auto Industry Slates Plant Shutowns In Face Of Sales Skid

DETROIT (AP) — With the industry's early-December sales running 23 percent below last year's near-record pace, the Big Three auto companies said Thursday they will close 19 assembly plants next week, raising industry layoffs to the highest level in five years.

Sales figures released by the automakers showed faltering Chrysler Corp. improved its market position somewhat from November and from a year ago.

The five U.S. producers delivered 168,979 cars in the first 10 days of the month compared with 220,836 for early December 1978.

Chrysler sales were off only 14 percent compared with last year's period, the smallest decline among the Big

Three. Its sales of 16,778 cars yielded 9.9 percent of the market for U.S. makes compared with 19,584 and 8.9 percent in the first part of December 1978.

The number of workers on indefinite layoff reached more than 115,000, with 70,000 more holding recall dates, according to company announcements Thursday. At least another 12,000 indefinite layoffs are scheduled for January.

The Big Three companies employ about 765,000 production workers, so next week's 185,000 layoffs total 24 percent of the work force — the steepest since 300,000 were laid off at the height of the 1974-75 recession.

Sales always decline from late November as Christmas shopping diverts buyer attention. Chrysler's sales declined only 4.9 percent while the industry as a whole slipped 21 percent.

Chrysler started offering $300-a-car rebates on Nov. 1, but they did not visibly help sales last month. The company's share of the domestic market plunged to 8.2 percent in late November, the lowest in many years.

Ford Motor Co. sales dived 41 percent from 69,163 in early December 1978 to 41,014. Last year, a dealer contest boosted sales to Ford's best ever for the period. "This distortion should not be viewed as a weakening of the current December market," Bennett E. Bidwell, vice president of the car and truck group, said Friday.

General Motors Corp. sold 103,480 cars, a 19 percent decline from 127,310 but still good enough for an above-normal 61 percent of the market. Last year, GM's share was a normal 58 percent.

American Motors Corp. sales rose 57 percent to an estimated 5,000 cars compared with 3,178. AMC no longer reports 10-day sales, but its new four-wheel drive cars have been a hit in the showrooms.

Volkswagen of America sold 2,707 cars, 69 percent more than the 1,601 it sold in the same interval last year.

"I don't look for it to get any better — or any worse — in the next few months," said an industry analyst who declines to be identified.

He estimated that compacts and sub-compacts accounted for half of all cars sold, down from 57 percent in the spring's gasoline scare. "This to me says the mix has stopped changing and the problem is one of economics — or rather, of buyer confidence."

With only 20 selling days left in the calendar year, the five U.S. producers had sold 7,943,536 cars, 11 percent below last year's 8,883,038.

GM was down 9.2 percent from 5,140,014 to 4,683,054. Ford was off 17 percent from 2,468,309 to 2,045,646. Chrysler slumped 17 percent from 1,091,985 to 906,671. AMC dipped 8.1 percent from 165,716 to 152,776 and VW bounded up 810 percent from 17,014, a just-getting-started figure, to 152,682.

General Motors Corp. will stop nine assembly lines with 41,450 laid off for a week, GM said. Additionally, GM's transmission plant in Toledo said it would close for the week, idling another 2,115 plus 685 more indefinitely.

GM has another 45,560 workers on indefinite furlough and at least 12,265 to be added next month.

Ford said it would shut eight lines, with 11,125 week-long furloughs. Another 36,000 have been sent home for indefinite periods.

Chrysler Corp. said it would shut two auto assembly plants for longer periods to shift production caused by the closing of the Hamtramck, Mich. assembly plant for good on Jan. 4. About 8,000 workers will be laid off in those two closings. Chrysler has 32,700 more on indefinite layoff and the St. Louis plant will be down until Jan. 21 with 4,200 layoffs. Production of cars made at Hamtramck is being shifted to St. Louis, and production of some St. Louis cars is being sent to Newark to make room.

Those laid off are generally eligible for unemployment benefits amounting to 95 percent of their base take-home pay less $12.50 for commuting expenses. Chrysler workers with less than 10 years of seniority have exhausted the company supplements in those payments and now receive only state benefits.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We owned shares of a big mutual fund for years. Last March, we switched our shares of that fund into a money market mutual fund run by the same organization. If we switch back to our original fund, how will we report this for capital gains tax purposes? Will we have to hold the money market mutual fund for a year, in order to have a long-term capital gain?

A. The chances of you having either a capital gain or a capital loss on the money market mutual fund are very remote. Most money market mutual funds maintain their asset value per share at a constant level — either $10 or $1 a share.

Your money market fund is one of the handful whose share values change a little bit, occasionally. As I put this through the typewriter, the per share value of that fund is $9.99. That's the highest it's ever been. And it's never been below $9.97.

So, if you redeem and get the same price per share you paid, you'll have neither a gain nor a loss. No tax consequence. If you redeem at one cent more or one cent less a share than you paid, you'll then have a small capital gain or capital loss.

While you have held that money market fund investment, dividends have been paid to you. Those dividends are taxable as ordinary income. That applies whether you took the dividends by check or reinvested them to buy additional shares.

If you reinvested those dividends, you bought additional shares at asset value — most likely $9.99 a share. If you redeem those shares at $9.99, you'll have neither a gain nor a loss. Again, no tax consequence.

The switch from the first fund into the money market fund is a different story. When you did that, you redeemed your shares of the first fund. And you had a capital gain or loss. It was a long-term gain or loss, because you held those shares for more than one year.

Your capital gain or loss on the first fund was the difference between your total cost — the amount of money you paid in, plus any reinvested dividends and capital gains — and the amount you received when you redeemed and put into the money market fund.

Many people have the notion that a switch from one mutual fund to another within the same management group is a tax-free thing. Not so!

To get your money out of the first fund, you had to redeem. That's a sale, for tax purposes.

Q. Savings and loan associations promote four-year savings certificates which pay interest "one percentage point below the average yield on U.S. Treasury securities."

I have about $10,000 to invest. Can I get the extra percentage point, by buying four-year U.S. Treasury securities on my own? If so, how?

A. Indeed, you can. Any securities brokerage firm and many banks will be happy to place your order to buy U.S. Treasury notes. You can expect to pay a fee of between $25 and $50 to the broker or bank.

Or, you can buy Treasury notes when a new issue is offered for sale. You do that, by submitting a "tender" to your nearest Federal Reserve Bank or branch. There are 12 Federal Reserve banks and 26 branches around the country.

Q. Through your column, I learned that older Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds, will stop accruing interest 40 years after their issue dates. What will the first $25 E bonds be worth when they reach final maturity?

A. The earliest E bonds, issued in May, 1941, at a price of $18.75, will have a redemption value of exactly $98.49 each in May, 1981.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Better Cover Boosting Pheasant Tally

DON'T SHOOT! — Although two farmers at Idalou have increased the pheasant population by providing or supplementing wildlife habitat, there is no pheasant hunting season in Lubbock County. Additional habitat could result in a season in the future. (Staff Photos by Ted J. Simon)

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

"Within the past two years, the population of wild pheasant around here has increased tremendously," said Horace Drisdale as he drove along a farm road near Idalou.

Drisdale, a soil conservationist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, was showing this writer some ideal wildlife habitat developed or enhanced by concerned landowners.

We toured two farms that were understandably cotton oriented. However, in this instance, the Idalou farmers had also taken steps to provide for wildlife and in turn to conserve the land.

"Both of these farmers," noted the soil conservationist, "by allowing the brush and weeds to grow in specific areas, have provided food, cover and nesting areas for the pheasant." He added, "And such wildlife conservation measures don't have to be expensive projects or require large plots of land. The brush and weeds can be in odd areas, such as corners or in inaccessible places."

Brush, weeds and wild sunflower stalks reached a height of four feet on both sides of the dirt road that separated two fields we were touring. Drisdale explained that the narrow borders of brush and weeds will provide a lot of valuable cover not only for pheasant but also for dove and quail.

An abandoned cotton trailer had collapsed in a jumbled heap near the edge of one field. In another field, weeds grew between and around an old rotary tiller. Both farm implements, intentionally abandoned with forethought, continued to be of service — this time as cover for wildlife.

Livestock could not be seen in the general area, but one plot of land contained a small man-made pond. "This water provides recreation for the farmer and his family," explained Drisdale. "I understand that there are a few catfish in the pond."

Suddenly, as we neared the pond, a ring-neck pheasant shot up into the air. The long tail feathers streamed behind the rooster as it gained more speed to cross the road to new cover. It was a perfect example of additional benefits gained from a water source available to wildlife.

Another example of man helping the environment was a plot of land, again safe from livestock, that had been planted with Western wheat (a perennial plant) to supplement some wild grass in the same area.

Near one farm house, breaking the line of cotton fields stretching toward the horizon, was 10 to 15 acres of grain. Although the grain is harvested as an added benefit for the landowner, enough residue will be left on the ground by the combine to provide food for several varieties of wild fowl.

"Where you have plots of

harvested maize, the high residue that isn't immediately plowed under provides seasonal food and cover for many birds," explained the soil conservationist. "Also, green wheat in winter is an excellent supplemental crop that will benefit birds."

Although the pheasant usually has a short lifespan (less than a year for roosters and less than two years for hens under natural conditions) it can survive harsh winters if it can find cover and food. The food doesn't have to be exceptionally abundant or easily accessible. The pheasant can go several days without eating during blizzard conditions, and then use its strong beak and claws to dig through snow cover for food that many animals couldn't find.

Warmer months bring plenty of food where undisturbed brush and weeds are to be found. Grain is the favored food, but a pheasant's crop will also contain ants, beetles, crickets, cutworms, flies, grasshoppers, millipedes etc. Adult birds occasionally feed on mice and snakes.

Drisdale noted as we returned to his vehicle. "We welcome inquiries from landowners interested in providing habitat for wildlife. Our agency along with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has pamphlets and brochures that will aid the interested landowner." He added, "Our agency will be glad to go out to a farm and work with the landowner. We can check their soil, for instance, to determine what vegetation will be best suited for wildlife and land conservation."

The soil conservationist said that the landowners' cooperation at the two farms we had visited was appreciated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and TP&WD.

A flurry of movement could be seen in a narrow strip of corn stalks. Drisdale noted, "In a cotton area you don't see strip-cropping very often, but we encourage the practice because it helps to deter soil erosion from wind. Trees also make good windbreaks that conserve the soil and provide habitat for wildlife."

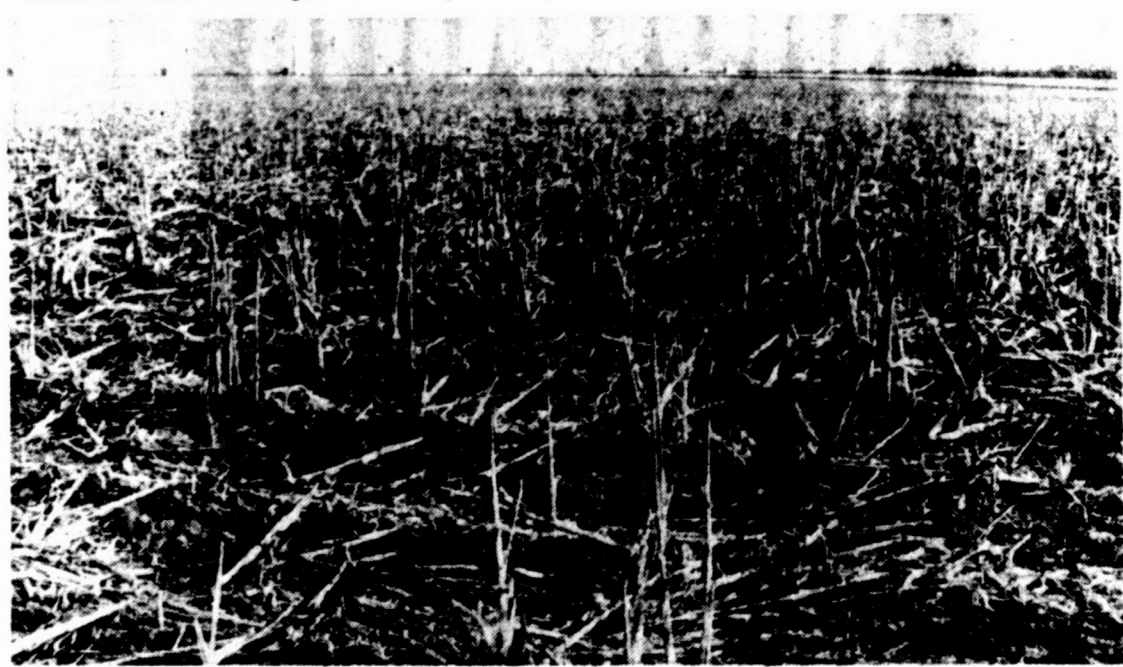

Starting back for the highway to Lubbock, the soil conservationist continued, "These farmers have also provided some small feeders. This winter the feeders will be filled with grain to help the pheasants survive the worst time of the year."

Pheasants will favor one area during their lifespan if there is plenty of cover and food. It is not uncommon for wild pheasants to spend their entire lives in one square mile if undisturbed by dogs or human activity.

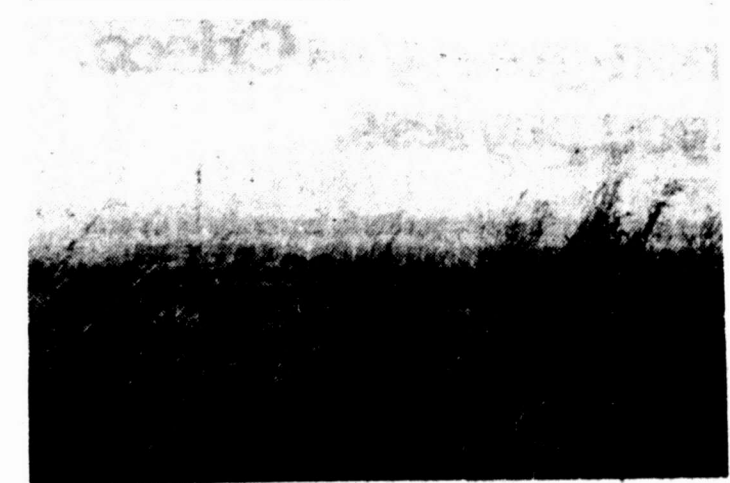

"Bird hunters know that there is no pheasant season in Lubbock County," stated Drisdale. "These landowners have helped the pheasant because the farmers enjoy seeing the birds and improving the environment."

UNIQUE WINDBREAK — An abandoned cotton trailer serves as cover for wildlife. The structure will shelter wild fowl from frigid winds and provide an area for nesting. Pheasant droppings were seen near the shelter.

BENEFICIAL STUBBLE — Residue left in a maize field will provide food and shelter for wild fowl and serve as a buffer to wind erosion. Some farmers also delay plowing under the residue as a conservation measure to retain moisture. Below, a small plot of native grass and Western wheat planted by an Idalou farmer is a benefit to wild fowl. Such conservation measures have increased the population of ring-neck pheasant in the Idalou farm area.

Appeal Of Court Ruling Discouraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of civil rights groups is urging the Carter administration to abandon plans to appeal a court ruling which held that the deportation of Iranian students without proper visas is unconstitutional. The Justice Department has asked for a stay of Tuesday's ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Joyce Hens Green, pending appeal. In a letter to Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, Peggy Shaker, national coordinator of a group known as Campaign for Political Rights, charged that the government's appeal will "not only prolong an unacceptable situation, it will also heighten the tensions which already exist."

Little Guidance Given For Redistricting

AUSTIN (AP) — House committee members said Thursday the U.S. Justice Department has offered virtually no guidance for the Legislature's massive redistricting effort in 1981.

"Those guys there are just whistling 'Dixie,'" Rep. Paul Ragsdale, a black legislator from Dallas said scornfully.

Lawmakers must draw new congressional and legislative districts after the 1980 census, but the new boundaries for choosing lawmakers may not take effect until the Justice Department approves them.

Ragsdale and Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, chairman of the House Committee on Regions, Compacts and Districts, both reported on recent contacts with the Justice Department's civil rights division.

Ragsdale said he had seen Justice Department lawyers reject local redistricting proposals simply because they were "not cosmetically proper.... They say, 'It looks funny.'"

Von Dohlen said Justice Department lawyers had told him in Washington they "didn't want to get involved" in Texas' redistricting but offered few suggestions for drawing district boundaries they will accept.

Steve Bickerstaff, a San Antonio lawyer who used to handle redistricting cases as an assistant attorney general, offered plenty of advice, however.

Bickerstaff said the U.S. Supreme Court has turned down congressional redistricting plans with as little as 4 percent deviation from absolute population equality.

GREGG JUSTICE RESIGNS
LONGVIEW (AP) — Gregg County Peace Justice Charles Cashell resigned his post Thursday following his conviction on charges related to illegal gambling and racketeering.

He said the court has tolerated population gaps as large as 16 percent in legislative redistricting plans. But deviations must result from a rational policy such as preserving counties intact within a district and may not reflect arbitrary or discriminatory action by lawmakers, he said.

When the Justice Department reviews new districts under the U.S. Voting Rights Act, the state must prove that neither the purpose nor the effect of the districts was to dilute the legislative clout of minorities, Bickerstaff said.

Improvements For City's Handicapped Planned

Lubbock's Transit Department is asking handicapped persons to comment at a public hearing Monday on difficulties they may be having with the city's mass transportation system.

Transit officials, who are mandated by the federal government to provide "accessible" public transportation by 1982 (or loose claim to any federal money), already have met informally with several handicapped Lubbockites to prepare a preliminary plan of improvement.

They will open the regular Transit Advisory Board meeting to a public hearing to discuss the plans at 12:30 p.m. Monday in the Emergency Operations Center of City Hall.

Federal requirements state the Citibus system must be non-discriminatory to handicapped persons in services, policies, procedures, equipment and facilities.

The transit department will provide two wheelchair lift-equipped vans for special routes in July 1980. 18 wheelchair lift-equipped buses for regular routes and Texas Tech by October 1980, and accessible department offices by 1982.

He advised the committee and the Legislature as a whole to cover all possible objections by:

- Conducting pre-session hearings across the state before the Legislature convenes as proof that no Texans were denied a chance to express themselves on redistricting.

- Keeping the legislative process fair and free of procedural irregularities. Bickerstaff said this was "critical."

- Documenting thoroughly the reasons for any district boundaries that deviate from federal requirements.

- Including legislators from diverse racial, ethnic, geographic and economic groups on the committees — including House-Senate conference committees — that deal with redistricting.

- Retain sufficient data to guide federal courts and the Justice Department through the Legislature's thought processes in case new districts must be defended in those forums.

- Inform legislative staffers and outside experts in advance that they might have to testify later in federal court if new districts are challenged.

Shannon said the transit department has had trouble reaching the people with whom it needs to consult.

"The handicapped are the greatest non-group ever," he commented, referring to an apparent lack of cohesion. "It's been hard to plan."

Transit officials are looking for comments and suggestions from handicapped individuals and related agencies on Monday.

"Right now our planning must be in compliance with federal laws and ours is," says Clyde Shannon, assistant transit coordinator. "The question is, 'does this meet the needs of handicapped people?'"

Seven Organized Crime Suspects Apprehended

Seven of eight persons accused in organized crime indictments of manufacturing and distributing methamphetamine were either in custody Thursday or had been released on bond.

The eighth, Glen Melvin Schoening of Austin, had not been arrested Thursday and may soon be declared a fugitive, Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford said.

Others accused in sealed indictments last week are Frederick Michael Myers.

Brown Proposes Larger Military Pay Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown recommended Thursday that members of the armed forces get larger pay raises than civilians on the federal payroll.

"They're the ones we haven't taken

24. of 2020 16th St.; Dennis Dwain Welch, 21, of 2809 33rd St.; Richard Lynn Ledbetter, 21, of 5320-A 21st St.; Rebecca Reed Ward, 20, address unavailable; Ricky Lavelle Smith, 25, of 1918 48th St.; John Scott Hendon III, 20, address unavailable; and Brian Wayne Ward, 21, of 4411-A Canton Ave.

Montford said his office would ask a bond of $25,000 against Schoening and had asked bonds ranging down to $2,500 apiece for the others.

good enough care of," Brown said during testimony on defense spending before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Federal civilian workers and members of the military received a 7 percent pay raise this year.

Smith and Myers were in Lubbock County Jail Thursday in lieu of $5,000 bond each.

Hendon is a patient at Methodist Hospital with an undisclosed ailment, and his recommended bond will be $10,000 when he is brought to jail, Montford said.

Welch and Ledbetter have been released on $2,500 bonds, and the Ward couple also has been released.

Ward reportedly has agreed to testify for the state in the case.

The indictments allege that methamphetamines or "speed" were manufactured in an Austin laboratory and sold here for $80 to $90 per gram.

Persons convicted under the Texas organized crime statute may be sentenced to from five to 99 years or life in the penitentiary.

Mother Nearer To Reunion With Infant

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Footprints of LeTisha Glass, a frail infant who disappeared from an Omaha hospital weeks ago, were en route to California on Thursday to see if they match those of a baby found by authorities in San Bernardino.

And authorities were optimistic LeTisha would be back in the arms of her 15-year-old mother by Christmas.

Police said the mother, who is not married, will be flown to San Bernardino if the infant is positively identified as the one who disappeared from the pediatrics ward of St. Joseph Hospital following surgery on Oct. 19.

San Bernardino authorities said they found a baby matching LeTisha's description alive and healthy in the care of a man and woman, who were being subsequently held on suspicion of kidnapping.

Omaha Police Lt. Charles Circo said police were "90 percent sure" the baby was LeTisha after learning she had a birthmark on the inside of her right wrist. LeTisha had a birthmark in that spot.

San Bernardino authorities also reportedly made a tentative identification of the baby by a surgical scar on her abdomen.

The child was born to Gladys Glass, 15, three months premature on June 8, a frail 2 pounds, 2 1/2 ounces. When she was abducted, the infant weighed about 8 pounds.

LeTisha had surgery to remove a cyst on her tiny lung. She was recovering from surgery and receiving antibiotics by injection when she was taken from the hospital.

"This is my Christmas present," Miss Glass said when she learned of the likely recovery of her daughter Wednesday night. "I'm so excited."

"I'm not going to sleep tonight," she told her mother, Mary Johnson.

"The other night I prayed, 'Lord, just let her be all right,'" said her mother, Mary Johnson. "And I prayed that she would be returned by Christmas."

St. Joseph Hospital Executive Director John C. Gaffney said the hospital would pay for Miss Glass and Mrs. Johnson's trip to California.

Meanwhile, the case has been turned over to the Douglas County Attorney's office.

San Bernardino police identified the couple as Air Force Sgt. Donnell Cross, 26, and his wife, Elizabeth, 28. Cross reportedly has been assigned to the communications center at Norton Air Force Base, near San Bernardino, for about 1 1/2 years.

Gaffney said Mrs. Cross is believed to have once worked in the hospital's nursing services division at St. Joseph.

Chamber Of Commerce Slates Luncheon To Honor Governor

The board of directors of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce made plans at its monthly board meeting Thursday to host Gov. Bill Clements at a luncheon when he visits Lubbock next month.

Clements is scheduled to arrive in Lubbock the morning of Jan. 21. "We've wanted the governor to come to Lubbock in a non-political vein for some time," Dr. Jim Granberry said. "We wanted him to look at Tech and the Health Sciences Center Hospital."

Rex Fuller said the actual purpose of Clements' trip is to visit Texas Tech. "There will be no fund-raisers or receptions," he said. "This is strictly an educational trip."

KKK LICENSE DENOUNCED

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A state agency says it will revoke the private patrol license of the Klan Bureau of Investigation, a branch of the Ku Klux Klan. The chief of state Collection and Investigative Services, James Cathcart, said Wednesday he has asked the state attorney general's office to file for license revocation.

The governor will arrive at 11 a.m. and will have a news conference at the airport, Fuller said. In the afternoon he will visit Texas Tech. The chamber made tentative plans to try to show the governor a slide show of the Lubbock area during the luncheon.

Board president B.C. "Peck" McMinn appointed Granberry and Fuller as co-chairmen of a committee to work out details of the luncheon.

In other matters, the board discussed plans to visit Austin Jan. 28-30 to encourage various state trade and professional associations located in Austin to consider Lubbock as a convention site. There are about 375 organizations located in Austin, chamber manager John Logan said.

The board also made plans to host a subcommittee from the U.S. House of Representatives at a breakfast Dec. 29. U.S. Rep. Kent Hance invited the cotton subcommittee of the House Agricultural Committee to come to Lubbock and hold a hearing, receiving input and testimony from the local cotton industry. Logan said.

Juarez Man Arrested For Selling Documents

EL PASO (AP) — A former employee of a firm here that manufactures secret oil-finding equipment has been arrested in the alleged sale of company documents, the FBI said.

Billie Eugene Bauer, 48, of Juarez, Mexico, was charged in a federal complaint with transporting stolen property across the international border.

The FBI says Bauer worked for Gus Manufacturing, Inc., which makes the crucial equipment for Amoco, a Standard Oil Co. of Indiana subsidiary.

The FBI alleged Bauer tried to sell machinery plans to Phillips Petroleum Co.

When Bauer left the El Paso manufacturing firm he pledged not to reveal company secrets or patents, the complaint stated.

A Standard Oil Co. attorney from Tulsa, Okla., Jim Dautremont, said Phillips had its own version of the equipment and details of the Amoco machinery are secret.

Phillips officials gave information to the Standard subsidiary after receiving a letter offering detailed plans, parts lists and computer printouts of the equipment, the complaint said. Amoco then notified the FBI, according to the complaint.

Bauer delivered more than 200 pages of documents to an undercover FBI agent Wednesday at an El Paso hotel, according to the charges.

Bauer allegedly told the agents he brought the papers from Mexico.

A U.S. magistrate set bond at $25,000 and scheduled a federal preliminary hearing for Dec. 18.

Standard Oil security officers joined the FBI in the investigation.

The FBI would not specify the exact type of oil-finding equipment.

Dr. Randy Keller, a geology professor at the University of Texas at El Paso, called the machinery "one of their top of the line pieces of gear — very sophisticated."

"It's composed of little boxes that sit in a field collecting information which goes into a big computer," said Keller.

OPEC Members Announce Price Increase

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
Associated Press Writer

Saudi Arabia and three other OPEC members announced a 33 percent price increase for their crude oil Thursday, five days before the cartel's price-setting meeting in Venezuela.

The increases could boost U.S. gasoline and heating oil prices by 7 1/2 to 11 cents a gallon if Nigeria, Algeria and Libya — which already charge around $26 — also raise their prices, industry sources said.

Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said in Brussels, Belgium that the world might see an oil surplus in 1980, as an expected economic slowdown trims oil demand.

But he warned the West against using military force to gain access to energy sources, and said oil-producing nations need guarantees that funds they invest abroad "will never be touched."

The United States froze Iranian assets in U.S. banks after militants took Americans hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest oil exporter, was joined in the $6-a-barrel increase by the United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Venezuela, a founding member of the 13-nation cartel and the host of Monday's OPEC meeting in Caracas.

With OPEC nations selling oil on spot markets for $40 a barrel and up, the increases were "an effort to organize prices" before the oil ministers' conference, Venezuelan Energy Minister Humberto Calderon Berti told a Caracas news conference.

Berti did not rule out further price increases after the conference.

Industry sources said Thursday's moves represented efforts by Saudi Arabia and other moderates to ward off even higher increases by some cartel members at the meeting of members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Saudi increase — from $18 to $24 for a 42-gallon barrel — was retroactive to Nov. 1. Mobil Corp. said, Exxon Corp. said Abu Dhabi, the largest member of the United Arab Emirates, also boosted prices effective Nov. 1, while the Venezuelan boost was set for most customers at midnight Thursday.

Because Venezuela will drop its oil surcharge after the boost, its actual price will rise from $20 to $24.

Earlier this week, a source said Nigeria has suggested to major oil companies that it would be charging at least $30 a barrel Jan. 1. On Thursday, another source said, "I wouldn't put more than a 1 percent chance" on the Nigerians refusing to raise prices.

Before the increases were announced, the average price for a barrel of crude oil was $21.50, up 66 percent from $12.93 a year ago, the federal government has reported.

But recent spot market purchases of oil at $40 a barrel and more have driven the actual average cost of OPEC oil to the United States up by 80 percent, a Treasury estimate says.

At the White House, press spokesman Jody Powell said the Carter administration is "concerned about any price increases because of the effect of price increases on our economy and the world economy."

In Brussels, Belgium, The European Common Market's energy commissioner, Karl Brunner, estimated the increase could raise the nine-nation community's oil bill by $5 billion. Another Common Market official said the move could "throw the Western economies out of whack."

Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates "have been working in a bloc," said an industry source in Venezuela. "This decision now is an effort to close the enormous gap that exists between them and other OPEC members and increase chances for unifying prices."

"This is an effort by the doves to convince the hawks to be more reasonable at the meeting Monday," said one government source, who expects OPEC to "settle on a ceiling price of about $30" on top-quality Nigerian, Libyan and Algerian crudes. The official OPEC ceiling now is $23.50.

"Saudi Arabia wants to regain their position in OPEC, and the best way is for them to bring their price in line with everyone else's," said Jeffrey Matthews of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

Pricing Violations Charges Add Up As New Allegations Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department's charges of petroleum pricing violations mounted to $8.9 billion Thursday with the announcement of new allegations totaling over $1.1 billion against Mobil and Amerada Hess.

Mobil was charged with violations adding up to $504.5 million, completing a department audit of its 1973-1976 transactions which indicated a total of $979.5 million in alleged violations.

Mobil issued a statement saying it believed it had not committed violations, and accusing the Department of Energy of misinterpreting its own regulations.

Amerada Hess was charged with $653.5 million in violations, bringing the total allegations against the company to $915 million, and completing its audit for 1973 through 1976.

There was no immediate comment from Amerada Hess.

The two companies are among the 15 largest U.S. refiners, whose pre-1977 transactions were investigated by a first round of government audits due for completion by the end of this year.

Audits of transactions since 1976 are to be conducted in the future.

Most of the department's allegations, including the latest ones, do not charge that the violations were deliberate but only that the companies misinterpreted the accounting rules or made miscalculations leading to actual or potential overcharges.

Some settlements have been reached in which companies agreed to make refunds to customers, to make compensatory payments to the government, or to reduce claims for future price increases.

But most of the $8.9 billion in alleged violations remain unresolved, disputed by the companies who claim they were right and the department was wrong in applying the complex regulations.

In a statement from its New York headquarters, Mobil said a federal appeals court ruled last month that Mobil was right in a dispute with the department over Mobil including in the calculation of its prices more than $200 million of costs since 1974.

Hance Seeking Tax Exemption For Independent Oil Producers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A West Texas congressman mounted an effort Thursday to bolster the chances an independent oil producers exemption has when a conference committee begins its consideration of the windfall profits tax.

Rep. Kent Hance announced that he will introduce a bill essentially duplicating the provisions of the exemption passed by the Senate.

Hance said he wanted to gather enough co-sponsors for the bill to indicate to the conference committee that the exemption also has strong support in the House. The conference committee will reconcile House and Senate versions after the Senate completes its work.

There were 27 co-sponsors within hours of Hance's announcement, including House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth. Other Texans first signing on included Democratic Reps. Marvin Leath of Marlin, Charles Stenholm of Stamford, Jack Brooks of Beaumont and J.J. Pickle of Austin and Republican Reps. Jim Collins of Dallas and Tom Loeffler of Hunt.

"You can think of it in terms of a pe-tion," a Hance staff member, who asked not to be identified by name, explained. "All we're doing it for is just to get names. It's a quick way to get it on record."

Hance had introduced an independent oil producers exemption before the House passed its version of the windfall profits tax.

The amendment, however, was blocked by a 7-7 vote in the House Rules Committee and never came to a vote on the floor.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, introduced the amendment in the Senate, where it passed by a vote of 53-41.

The amendment would exempt from the tax the first 1,000 barrels of oil produced each day by an independent operator — an estimated 15 percent of U.S. production.

Backers of the exemption claim the tax break is necessary to provide independents, who drill about 90 percent of U.S. exploratory wells, the money for increased exploration.

"This (exemption) would result in a boost in domestic oil production because independents are involved solely in oil production and not in any of other retail or marketing phases of the energy industry," Hance said in a statement. "They reinvest more money than they make and it all goes for exploration and production."

Mistrial Declared In Robbery Case

By RICHIE D. REECER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A mistrial was declared Thursday afternoon in the aggravated robbery trial of a city man after the jury deadlocked eight-to-four in favor of conviction.

Joe Lee Brown, 30, of Lubbock was charged in the June 5 robbery of Johnny A. Dyer, 55, of 1806 E. Oak St.

Judge Denzil Bevers, presiding in 72nd District Court, declared the mistrial after the 11-woman, one-man jury had deliberated more than an hour and a half.

Brown was tried earlier this year on the same charge, but a mistrial was declared Oct. 11 in 137th District Court. Assistant District Attorney Hollis Browning said he did not know whether the case would be tried a third time.

Dyer, a disabled veteran, testified Wednesday he was walking in an alley in the 1800-block of Avenue C shortly after midnight June 5 when Brown and Jerry Timmons, 29, accosted him and robbed him of $47.

Timmons was sentenced in September to six years in prison for his part in the robbery.

The jury had the option of acquitting Brown or convicting him of aggravated robbery or simple robbery, a lesser offense.

Dyer testified that during the alleged robbery Brown was waving a baseball bat "like he was going to knock a home run" while Timmons searched his (Dyer's) pockets for money.

Dyer said he offered no resistance because he feared Brown would beat or kill him with the bat, which he said appeared to be made of "hard plastic."

Under questioning by Browning, Dyer testified his grandchildren have a bat similar to the one used in the incident, and that he thought the bat could cause serious injury.

In final arguments, defense attorney

VISTA Gets Authorization To Continue Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Volunteers in Service to America, criticized by some Republicans as an agency steeped in "political activism," got a new lease on life Thursday.

President Carter signed legislation authorizing the VISTA program to continue for two more years. Congress enacted a compromise bill providing for the funding late last month over objections from Republican critics.

Sometimes called the domestic Peace Corps, the VISTA program will be 15 years old this month. It now has 3,400 volunteers, who earn a subsistence salary of about $317 a month in 2,000 locations.

ne's office to drop charges against Brown.

Dyer testified he had been drinking throughout the day before he was robbed, but that he was not intoxicated at the time of the robbery.

The defense also reminded the jury that Dyer had asked the district attorney's

Metals Boost Stock Mart

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's recent romance with precious metals stocks spread to copper and some other metals Thursday as the broader market remained in a holding pattern.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed up 42 to 836.09 after trading in a narrow range throughout the session. It was the third time in the past four sessions that the blue chip index changed by less than a point for the day.

Worries about rising oil prices, continued to restrain traders, analysts said. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets next week to consider oil price increases. But Saudi Arabia and several others who are considered moderate OPEC members announced 33 percent price increases in advance of the meeting.

MOONSHINE MEMORIES — Melissa Lester, 57, recalls how she used to make moonshine whiskey after she was widowed back in the 1950s. "I was left with six small kids and I had to feed them somehow," said Mrs. Lester, who says she is now retired. "I used to have the biggest still in McDowell County." (AP Laserphoto)

Moonshiner Recalls 'Present' From Agents

BARTLEY, W. Va. (AP) — Melissa Lester leaned against a gate post on a recent afternoon and recalled the worst birthday present she ever got. "It was the 29th of November, 1962," said the gray-haired Bartley resident, who recently turned 57. "I was down on the other side of the mountain makin' whiskey when the federal agents caught me."

A widow, Mrs. Lester is one of the few female moonshiners ever arrested in southern West Virginia.

"I've never even heard of any other woman getting arrested around here," said the McDowell County woman. "But I've made plenty of whiskey in my time. I used to have the biggest submarine still in the county."

Mrs. Lester said she began making whiskey shortly after her husband was killed in 1957, leaving her with six small children.

"I was only getting $57 a month from Social Security," she said, opening the gate for a couple of her grandchildren. "Heck, my kids would have starved. I had to do something so I made mining timbers and moonshine whiskey."

She laughed as several other grandchildren crowded around, giving her the appearance of a mother hen with a bunch of biddies.

"Used to make my whiskey with cracked corn, raisins and whiskey," she said. "Moonshine's mighty scarce these days, but I could run off 32 gallons at a time with my big submarine still. I had regular customers and I always sold my whiskey by the case."

She said she was arrested twice for moonshining.

"There was that time on my birthday. I got probation for that. The federales chopped up one still that time. They got two stills the next time. I hadn't been on probation for a month the second time they got me so I hired myself a lawyer and beat it. That was the last time I ever made any whiskey."

Mrs. Lester said her children were well aware of her moonshining.

"We sure were," said Brooks Lester, a strapping man in his mid-20s. "The worst whippin' I ever got was one time when I was playing federal man. I got a hatchet and chopped up my mother's mash barrels."

Mrs. Lester cackled at her son's painful recollection.

"I made good whiskey," she said. "It was a gift, I guess. I know one thing. I never had any trouble getting rid of my whiskey. One time I watched a state policeman drive away with a dozen cases in his car."

It must have been awful to lose that much whiskey, observed a visitor.

"Heck, no!" she said. "He was a customer."

Executives Finally Decide How To Spell Word For Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of dicker between some mid-level executives of two Agriculture Department agencies, a decision has been made on how to spell semiannual.

Last spring, the department's Office of Inspector General — the agency that tells other agencies how to obey federal laws and regulations — issued its first semiannual report as required by a new law.

The cover of the report included the title, "Semi Annual Report ... Office of Inspector General."

A flurry of memo-writing and verbal exchanges resulted between OIG, as the agency is called, and the department's Office of Governmental and Public Affairs, which calls itself OGPA.

Claude Gifford, who is in charge of publications in OGPA, complained that OIG had not followed department regulations by ignoring government style in the spelling of semiannual.

Moreover, he told a reporter, OIG tried to hold itself above the usual clearance procedure required of all manuscripts before they are printed for public use.

The OIG attitude came from those who "of all people, are responsible for the rules and regulations being adhered to in the department" and who "ought to follow our own rules regarding manuscripts," Gifford said.

But the immediate problem, he said, was over the spelling of semiannual.

"The question was whether government style was to separate it as two words or carry it as one word," Gifford said.

Assistant Secretary James C. Webster, who oversees Gifford's operations and other OGPA functions, said the matter has been cleared up.

In fact, the second report recently issued by the errant agency has the title: "Semiannual Report ... Office of Inspector General."

"It was one of those things where fairly lower-level people were trying to exercise their bosses' delegate authorities," Webster said.

Webster said he sent a memo outlining the complaint to department inspector general Thomas F. McBride, who replied that he did not think the matter was big enough for either of them to worry about.

India, Bangladesh Open Peace Talks

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India and Bangladesh opened talks Thursday aimed at ending a border dispute over a 44-acre parcel that has resulted in an almost daily exchange of gunfire recently but caused no casualties.

The conflict stems from a shift in the course of the Mahuri River near the town of Belonia, in India's Tripura state. The two countries have charged each other's citizens with "stealing" sugar cane and rice are grown on the disputed land.

Both sides predicted a quick solution.

"This small issue, I am confident, can be solved speedily," said Bangladesh Home Secretary M.M. Zaman. Indian Foreign Ministry official Eric Gonsalves said, "We will try to resolve the problem in such a way that it will be reasonable and honorable to both sides."

In December 1971, Indian military forces invaded Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan.

FCC Moves To Expand Competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, after receiving a report showing international communications firms are earning higher than authorized profits, moved recently to greatly expand competition in that field.

"The commission has today adopted more pro-consumer policies in the field of international communications than we have since the FCC came into existence more than 45 years ago," Chairman Charles D. Ferris said after a day-long meeting.

In effect, the commission decided to allow firms providing domestic service to compete in certain international areas. But it also decided to allow greater access to the domestic market by companies providing international service.

Specifically, the FCC decided:

- To allow the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to offer telex, facsimile and other non-voice services over its existing international telephone lines.
- To allow Western Union, which has been limited to non-voice service in the United States, to offer its current range of services in the international field.
- To authorize the international record carriers to offer voice communications on their existing lines and to extend their direct service to 21 additional cities in the United States.

The term "record carrier" is used to refer to a firm that transmits only written "records," such as telegrams, telex messages and data, as opposed to voice communications like telephone, television and radio.

Four companies now dominate the international communications market: International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., RCA Corp., Western Union International, now a unit of Xerox Corp., and TRT Telecommunications Corp., a unit of United Brands Inc.

According to a staff audit received by the commission, the four international carriers have been earning pretax profits, expressed as return on investment before taxes, of between 25 percent and 58 percent on their telex service. That compares with an authorized rate of return of 8.5 percent to 9.5 percent established by the FCC more than 20 years ago.

The audit disclosed the current international record carrier market is generating $500 million in annual revenues, of which about $300 million stems from telex service.

The staff also disclosed that the international firms are not in strict compliance with accounting requirements.

But instead of trying to develop accounting information that would allow the FCC to study and revise each company's rate of return, the staff recommended the commission increase competition as a means of better serving the public.

Earlier this year, Western Union began offering its non-voice services to foreign points by using carriers in Canada and Mexico. ITT promptly challenged the move as illegal, but the decisions will allow Western Union to offer such international service.

The FCC did order Western Union, however, to file rate schedules with the commission within 5 days.

The commission also took action in several related areas, such as ruling the public is not being adequately served by the current formula for distributing international telegrams that are not specified for handling by a particular firm.

The FCC ordered Western Union and the four international carriers to develop a new distribution system within nine months that would guarantee a customer is charged the lowest price possible.

The commission also deregulated the domestic telegram field by eliminating certain requirements governing weekly studies and office hours; ordered each international telex service to connect with each other upon demand; voted to require a separate listing of charges for terminal equipment, access lines and transmission; and ordered a new study to determine if it should change the practice of allowing carriers to provide telex terminals as part of their listed, or tariff, rates.

In voting to authorize direct service by the international firms to 21 new cities, the commission abandoned its previous designation of only 5 "gateway" cities.

Those cities — New York, Miami,

Washington, New Orleans and San Francisco — had been the only places in which an international firm could directly accept or deliver international communications.

The final result of all the various changes is expected to be an end to a strict dividing line between the provision of voice and non-voice service within and outside the United States.

Currently, for example, a customer cannot use his phone service to transmit data overseas, and must usually rely on Western Union to get a telegram or telex message to a "gateway" city for transmission.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Louisiana Supreme Court agreed Thursday to reconsider its ruling throwing out the conviction of Carlos Poree, who admitted he went on a murderous shooting rampage in downtown New Orleans a year ago.

Last month, the court overturned Poree's first degree murder conviction in the Nov. 7, 1977, rampage, in which ten people were shot, one of whom later died. Poree pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, was convicted, and sentenced to life imprisonment.

In a 4-3 decision, the justices said Poree was denied due process despite the undisputed facts that he committed the shootings. The court said prosecutors never offered evidence to show that he was sane at the time of the shootings. They ordered a new trial.

During his trial, the defense acknowledged that Poree first shot his estranged wife and father-in-law and that he then went to the French Quarter where he shot three men in a small park off Bourbon Street.

After running nine blocks and commandeering a car, testimony showed Poree then walked into a busy brokerage office, wounded three persons, walked out and shot two more men on the sidewalk. One of the men shot inside, George Held, 53, died five days later.

Poree was captured by police a few minutes after the brokerage shootings, walking away with an empty pistol stuck in the waistband of his trousers.

TOKYO (AP) — The leader of a Peking gang was sentenced to 15 years in prison for fatally stabbing a member of a rival gang in a street fight, Japan's Kyodo news agency reported Thursday, quoting a Peking paper. The Peking Daily said the leader of the rival gang was sentenced to 10 years in prison for his role in the disturbance last July 15 involving 140 young Chinese armed with knives, swords and shotguns.

NORVAL POLLARD Armchair Quarterbacks Rejoice!

IT MIGHT DO SOME OF YOU armchair quarterbacks a world of good to visit your nearest tavern or pool hall. No, not to down a few cool ones and remorse over your favorite team's latest loss, but to check out the newest in the line of computerized video games. I think they may have one stashed in the corner that I know you'll love to play.

The game is called Atari Football and, believe me, it's a real challenge and kick to play. It may be the greatest advancement in the game of football since Knute Rockne and all his buddies at Notre Dame perfected the forward pass.

This game allows you to be coach, quarterback and middle linebacker all rolled into one. And, as long as you have two-bit pieces to plug into the hungry coin slot, I guess you can call yourself president and general manager, too.

If there was ever a perfect Christmas gift for Roger Staubach, this is it. Poor Roger never gets to call his own plays in the Dallas Cowboys' huddle — with this game he could. I can just see Roger guiding his team to a winning touchdown and then tearing off his helmet and yelling to the sideline. "See Coach Landry, I told you I knew what I was doing!"

GETTING BACK TO THE GAME, it's played on an oblong table about four feet in length. One player stands at one end of the table and the other, naturally, stands at the opposite end.

Each player has a control panel at his end of the football field where he calls offensive and defensive signals. Each player has a control button that allows him to select the offensive play or defensive alignment he wishes. That button also breaks the defensive team out of the huddle and releases the ball from the quarterback's hand on pass plays.

Only the middle linebacker on defense and either the quarterback or receiver (depending which player has the ball) on offense move independently. The remaining players move according to the plays that are called. The two independent players are controlled by a grapefruit-sized ball opposite the control panel. The ball has to be pushed with the palm of the hand for the quarterback and linebacker to move. The faster you push the ball, the faster the players run. If you want to run right, you push the ball to the right. Pushing it to the left makes the player move left.

THE SECRET TO THE GAME is mastering the ball. Once you know how to move your players, you can juke a defender right out of his shorts. If you know how to work it while on defense, you can run down the quickest of wide receivers. But, you must also take the proper angle of pursuit to catch him if he's ahead of you.

The game decides who has possession of the football first the second you drop in your money. You get a minute and a half of playing time per quarter. If you're short on pocket change, like myself, you'd better be a master of the two-minute offense.

On offense, you can select from four plays — a sweep, a quarterback keeper, a down-and-out pass to your tight end or the long bomb to your wide receiver. The man playing defense also has four defensive alignments — one to stop the sweep, one to stop the keeper and one to stop either the bomb or down-and-out.

I guess what makes the game so much fun is that you can read what the defense is doing and react accordingly. If you call a bomb play and the defense has your wide receiver covered, your pass will be either incomplete or intercepted. The neat thing is you don't have to throw the ball on a pass play. You can fool your opponent into thinking that the long bomb is on the way, but then you can play the role of the scrambling quarterback, cut around the wide side of the field and take off with about 30 yards of open field ahead of you. You just have to remember to keep that ball rolling as fast as you can. Eventually, you'll find paydirt.

THE PASS PLAYS ARE THE quickest ways to score, but once you master the ball and learn how to control your quarterback, you can knife between two defenders at the line of scrimmage and, BOOM, your gone. The only thing stopping you from scoring is that middle linebacker way downfield (unless your opponent had him blitzing or playing in the flat. Then you might only pick up 20 or 30 yards).

What's really fun is playing against someone who doesn't fully understand the game. Then it's like Dallas or Pittsburgh against the newest NFL expansion team. You can roll up four or five touchdowns in less than two minutes.

And then if he's the type of fellow who can't stand to get beat at anything, tell him your defending champ and if he wants a rematch he'll have to start coughing up the quarters. Rub it in a little bit. Talk to him. Haunt him when he comes off the line of scrimmage. Sooner than you realize, you'll be mortal enemies.

AND JUST LIKE WITH REAL football, the loser always has a good excuse. "You're quarterback can run faster than my linebacker!" "This machine is all messed up." "I want to change sides or I quit." "Your players are cheap-shot artists." "We weren't up for the game." All you have to do is change sides and whip him again. Usually, that will quiet him down.

The game is realistic. The clock stops with an incompleton or when a ballcarrier steps out of bounds. There is also the element of fantasy involved. It's the only brand of football where the quarterback, coach and general manager can all drink beer on the sidelines instead of Gatorade and still win. Amazing.

Tech Blows Away Lamar

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

They came in with their fingers upraised in that good 'ol No. 1 position, circling the court and throwing bars at the crowd. They were the Lamar Cardinals and the assumption was that they were No. 1 — at least in Texas.

But they went out in a different fashion, hustling and scraping for make-up points against the Red Raider bench in the final moments as Texas Tech dealt Lamar a stunning 83-68 knockout blow. The Raiders are now 4-1 on the year, the Cardinals 3-4.

Tech broke open a tight ballgame in the second half by proving that the best defense is offense. Tech shot the ball only 23 times in that second period and made good on an amazing 18 of those efforts. And three Raider misses came as they were decked on easy layups — leading to two-shot fouls.

That comes out to a shooting percentage of around 21 of 23. Officially the Raiders were 78.3 percent in the second half and 62.7 in the game.

Put simply, the Lamar run-and-gun (first one down shoots) offense was dissected by the relatively conservative Tech style of play.

Afterwards, Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers has praise for nearly everyone on both teams.

DHS Overcomes Cooper In OT

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Stanley Whitfield found himself in a rather peculiar pickle Thursday afternoon. First off, he was on the bench — and in foul trouble on top of that.

But when given the chance to play, Whitfield did.

Coming off the bench, the Dunbar ace pitched in four overtime points to lift the Panthers to a surprising 59-53 win over Abilene Cooper. The action came in the first round at the annual Reese AFB Christmas Classic basketball tournament.

"I really didn't think I had but one of those fouls," commented Whitfield following the contest. "I thought I had good blocks on the other two."

But the man with the whistle didn't agree.

The Panthers fell behind 12-2 at one point in the first quarter. And it appeared then that Dunbar just might be in for a good tail-kicking.

But the Panthers outscored CHR 18-14 in the second quarter and trailed only 29-26 at the end of the first half.

Then with 3:38 left in the third period, the Panthers tied the game at 35-35. And the race was on a few minutes later when Joe Bagley hit a shot to put DHS in the lead for the first time, 40-39.

The two battled back-and-forth throughout the fourth period until with 30 seconds remaining Dunbar grabbed what appeared to be a comfortable three-point cushion, 52-49, after Whitfield had hit the first of two free throws.

Ten ticks later Miers hit a bucket to cut DHS' lead to one, 52-51.

The pulses started thumping. Again Whitfield was fouled — this time by Kyle Stuard. The 6-5 senior hit the front end of the one-and-one after the ball bounced around the rim for what seemed like an eternity. But he missed the second shot.

And with just three seconds remaining in regulation, Kenny Henry zipped and zagged his way through DHS' zone defense for an easy layup.

It was time for three more minutes. Dunbar controlled the tip and stalled for a minute before working the ball inside to Whitfield who hit a four footer. About 20 seconds later, Whitfield again canned a shortie to up DHS' lead to 57-53.

And that was that. The Cougars never scored in the extra stanza.

"I thought I should have made more. See WHITFIELD, Page 2

Mike Oliver, who's averaged 19 points a game this year, was held to 10 points going five of 12 from the field. Sticking on Oliver like sweat was Taylor.

"I'm just taking him (Taylor) for granted by now," said Myers. "He's been playing great defense for us all year."

Taylor was also pretty fair on offense. After scoring only two points in the first half, he exploded for 29 in the second period to finish with 22.

Little also finished the night with 22 points — it was the third time this year that Taylor and Little have shared high point honors.

LCC Uses Home, Sweet Home To Beat Pioneers

By DON HENRY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Maybe, for a time, both LCC coach Larry Hays and Wayland Baptist's Bob Clindaniel felt like the famed philosopher Pogo, who once, in a moment of great thought, mused, "Friday the thirteenth came on Thursday this month."

After all this time on the road—seven straight trips—Clindaniel should have known snow would foul up the trip home. And Hays has to leave this morning for Brownwood and the two-day Howard Payne Classic.

But, with neither team playing well, finally, the Chaparrals started pulling away, hitting a shot here, getting a steal or a call there, and wound up with an 81-74 verdict in the Fieldhouse.

The win left the Chaparrals with a 6-8 record, and the visiting Pioneers fell to 2-8. They have now lost seven in a row.
Neither coach could come away very happy. Even in winning, Hays didn't feel his troops played well.

"If we play like that, we'll get killed down there (LCC plays Angelo State today at 6:30 p.m.). I guess the difference was that our bench gave us more help than his (Clindaniel's) did."

Jim Steensma came in and hit some buckets. Ricky Murdock came in and score and settled us down (as a guard) at times.

"And Keith Gardner played well inside against their big people."

Murdock didn't miss in five tries and finished with 10 points. Gardner had a game-high 19 points, and Bruce Carver had 15. Kevin Wharton scored 14 and hauled down 14 points.
Although it opened a 9-point lead in the first half, LCC saw that pad dwindle away, and the Pioneers edged in front, both twice in the first half and then again 40-39 three minutes into the final half.

But, Gardner hit a short jumper following a shot by Bill McGee, and the Chaparrals had the lead 45-44 with 15:08 left.
Later, the Pioneers tied it at 49 on a Ken Ord's shot in the lane. But, Wharton sank a follow shot, and Carver hit a shot along the left baseline, and the Chaparrals were in control.

After the Pioneers cut it to 63-60, they went into a press, and the Chaparrals went through it for a shot and were able to slowly build their lead.
Rick Cooper led the Pioneers with 15 points as five of their players hit in double figures.

free throws," commented Whitfield. "That would have helped us. I know I can shoot better than that."

The Cougars were playing without the services of 6-9 Woody Martin, who was suspended from the team prior to the tournament by coach Marc Case. Martin is considered one of the top big men in the state and was listed on a few pre-season All-America teams.

Dunbar now moves into the championship bracket, along with winners Clovis and Lubbock Coronado, while Cooper, a Reese finalist in 1977, falls back in with the losers.

In other President's Trophy action, Bubba Jennings, another high school All-American, set a new division record by pitching in 35 points to lead Clovis to an easy 107-66 win over Andrews. Jennings hit 15 shots from the field, which was another mark.

All 12 members of the Clovis traveling squad scored in the win over the Mustangs.

Lubbock Coronado, led by Jimmy Johnson's 20 points, fought off a pesky El Paso Andress team to score a 79-54 win. Also scoring in double figures for the Mustangs were Scott Williams and Sam Law with 14 points and Dwan Neff with 11.

Andress is the defending champion in the large school division.

Shawn Williams hit 25 points to lead Lubbock Christian to an 87-51 win over Roswell.

In today's play, Dunbar and LCHS meet at 5:30 p.m. and Clovis plays Coronado at 8:30 p.m., in winner's bracket action. Cooper tangles with Roswell at 2:30 p.m. and Andrews goes against Andress at 11:30 a.m. in loser's bracket play.

Samu Govea connected on a 25-foot jump shot with two seconds left on the clock to lead defending Commander's Trophy champion El Paso Cathedral to a 51-49 win over Olney.

In other action Denver City downed Spearman 78-52. Morton trounced Idalou 82-47 and Boys Ranch whipped Roosevelt 62-44.

Today's action pits Roosevelt and Olney at 10 a.m., Spearman and Idalou at 1 p.m., Boys Ranch and Cathedral at 4 p.m., and Denver City and Morton at 7 p.m.

Probe Nabs Lobo Gridders

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—The University of New Mexico, rocked by a probe that left most of its basketball team ineligible, probably will have to forfeit six football games it won this past season, school officials said Thursday.

Three New Mexico football players were enrolled in the same college course that led to the suspension of six UNM basketball players, said Marvin Johnson, UNM vice president for student affairs.

"After consultation with the commission of the Western Athletic Conference tomorrow, we will in all probability forfeit the six victories," he said.

Tight end Chris Combs, wide receiver David Wyrick and defensive end Daryl Bryson were enrolled in the "Current Problems and Principles of Coaching Athletes" course that caused problems for the UNM basketball players.

Combs "testified that he had paid his $75 and had never done anything else — he never had any encounter with the course, never had any textbooks," Johnson said.

The course was offered by Ottawa, Kan., University at two locations in Van Nuys, Calif.

"Mr. Combs testifies that he was not in Van Nuys, Calif., but was in Albuquerque all summer and that he never did one thing" in the course, Johnson said.

Combs played in all 12 games "and he further needed that course to be eligible," Johnson said. The Lobos were 6-6 during the 1979 football season.

"The University of New Mexico has no recourse but to declare those three units void and that action, of course, made Mr. Combs ineligible during the previous season," Johnson said.

The basketball players were suspended when five of them said they had never been to the course although the credit they received for it made them academically eligible to play basketball.

A sixth basketball player was suspended even though he said he attended the course, a claim university officials said they doubt.

New Mexico's basketball squad forfeited a victory this season because some of those players took part in the game.

Johnson said Wyrick "claims they (the course) sent him an exam by mail — a true-false test — and he returned it and he got a grade."

Johnson said UNM still has many questions to answer about the course, including who signed up the football players. "We're not sure who signed up the basketball players," he said.

However, Johnson said, "You're going to find very clearly that this is not an isolated example at this university."

with 11 and also chipped in 17 points. Davis paced the Cardinals with 18 points.

Cestrahiah "Ki" Lewis had 12 points for the Cards — but at the same time summed up the Lamar dilemma. Lewis threw up 17 shots in the game — connecting on five of those attempts.

After the contest, Myers spoke with guarded optimism.

"Our guys are improving," he said softly. "And we made a lot of progress tonight because we had to play under a lot of pressure."

"I said before the game that this was the best team we've faced and it was," added Myers. "They're a strong team, they've had to overcome some adversity this year — but they were tough."

Did Myers, in his wildest dreams dream of a Tech blowout?

"I don't ever think about things like that."

Boxing Commission Draws Proposals

NEW YORK (AP) — The suspension of boxing in New York State was recommended Thursday until a six-point safety plan can be implemented.

Immediate action is essential. It will be taken and boxing will be stopped until it is," said Sen. Roy Goodman, who chaired a New York State Senate Committee investigating into the death of middleweight Willie Classen Nov. 23.

For the suspension to take effect, it would have to be enforced by the New York State Athletic Commission.

Goodman, a Manhattan Republican, said he was told that John Prenderville, commission chairman, would cooperate. "It is my understanding that he endorses it in principle," added Goodman.

Prenderville was appointed by Gov. Carey, and it was Carey who ordered the State Senate Committee's hearings following Classen's fatal injury in a fight against Wilford Scypion at the Felt Forum. An autopsy revealed that Classen's death, five days after the fight, was caused by a brain injury.

"We're focusing on the future to keep boxers from being seriously injured or killed," said Goodman, who heard about 20 witnesses at seven hearing sessions. Most of them testified they felt the fight should have been stopped after the ninth round. It was stopped after Classen was knocked down early in 10th.

"I don't believe any one person can be blamed," said Goodman. "I make no finding of criminality in the matter. But I do make a finding of an archaic system."

Goodman said he thought the recommended program, which included neurological training for ringside physicians, referees and supervisory officials, could be implemented within seven days.

John Condon, vice president of Madison Square Garden Boxing, told The Associated Press by telephone the recommendations were fine but that what really is needed is a unified set of standards for all state commissions and that no boxing should be held in states that do not have state commissions.

Goodman did urge the establishment of a good boxer identification and intelligence system so that various state commissions could keep track of records and injuries and act accordingly.

Goodman said major findings of the hearings were:

- Classen's death was a preventable tragedy.
- Ring physicians are not properly screened and that they and referees are not properly trained to prevent serious injury or death.
- There are not proper arrangements for rapid treatment of head and nervous system injuries.
- Boxers' pre-fight examinations are dangerously incomplete, postfight treatment and supervisions also is inadequate and "boxers are not required to take adequate time to recover from brain damage suffered in fights."
- Another calls for the neurological training, which would be provided in eight-hour courses. This would help physicians, referees and supervisory officials to recognize head and nervous system trauma at fights.
- Dr. Bennett Derby, professor of neurology at New York University-Bellevue Medical Center, said Thursday such a program could be developed quickly and that he and others have volunteered to run it.
- Also included in the six-point proposal.
- Inclusion of appropriate neurological testing in boxers' physical exams for issuance or re-issuance of a license.
- Use of CAT scans for injury diagnosis for all boxers when medically indicated.
- Development of a procedure in detail on how to obtain prompt ambulance and paramedic service, which hospitals to use for specific types of injury and the proper means of locating standby specialists.
- Provision of mandatory post-fight medical supervision by a neurologist or other appropriate specialists whenever a fighter has been knocked out or seriously injured.

Goodman said the next phase of the committee's boxing investigation would focus on boxing statutes and regulations, official administrative procedures, matchmaking, fight promotion and the possibility of federal supervision.

Seagraves Resumes Playoff Chase

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The Seagraves Eagles' run for the roses continues tonight as they travel east to take on China Spring in a Class A semifinal football playoff game.

The game, slated to start at 7:30 in Abilene's Shotwell Stadium, pits two teams that are remarkably similar.

Let's start with records. Both the Eagles and China Spring are 13-0 and both have cruised through their respective schedules with hardly a scare.

Then move to defenses. Both teams live by their defensive squads. Seagraves has allowed only 1,723 yards to its opponents all year, China Spring 2,189.

Both teams have been stingy with points. The Eagles have given up only 55 points in 13 games and pitched eight shutouts, all in the last 10 games. The Cougars have given up 53 and have held six opponents scoreless.

Offensively, China Spring has accumulated 4,886 yards total offense this year, including 3,642 running the football. Seagraves, on the other hand, has 5,004, including 4,524 on the ground.

But enough of the surface statistics. Let's dig a little deeper. Coaches love to point to tradition as one of those tricky intangibles. In the last seven years Seagraves has won 72 games, that's two more than they would have by playing a regular 10-game schedule. Year before last the Eagles went all the way to the state finals before bowing.

China Spring has won District 11-A three of the last five years and last season, coach Jim Byrd's first, the Cougars won state.

"I can't tell you a lot about that team," said Seagraves coach Jim Eddins. "I'm sorry, but when you win the state championship and have six starters back, that tells it right there."

"I'll say this, we've got to move the football on them. That's the key to the ballgame. If we can move it, we'll be in the ballgame. If we can't, we'll have to shut them down, I guess."

It's not as easy to stop China Spring as it has been some other teams during Seagraves' season. Reason is, the Cougars have no single running back to key on. They'll run four or five backs at you every game and sometimes as many as 10 different kids will run the ball.

The leading ground gainer for China Spring is Kenneth Elliott, but he only carried 122 times during the regular season. He picked up 754 yards.

Kirk Lewis ranks right behind him, and he only ran the ball 83 times for 566 yards.

Seagraves, on the other hand, has halfback Ronnie Griffin, fullback Davis Morgan and halfback Johnny Castro. That's about it.

Griffin has rushed for 1,507 yards during his 13 games this year. He's carried 183 times for an average of 8.2 yards a try.

Morgan has carried 170 times for 1,323 yards, an average of 7.7 a carry and Castro has gained 898 yards. That doesn't leave much spare change out of the 4,524 yards the Eagles have rushing the ball.

Eddins says the game may boil down to defense, not which team is biggest necessarily, but which is quickest.

"They even take out some of their big kids on defense," Eddins said. "They're about 180 or 185, that's big for us, but they're also extremely quick."

Last weekend the Eagles ran into the first close game of their season. And you couldn't get one much closer. Seagraves tied New Deal 10-10 on the scoreboard and had to go to penetrations to win.

"I think that probably helped us," Eddins said. "These kids know who they're playing, they've been there before."

Mike White Leads Pack For Illinois Grid Position

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — University of Illinois officials were expected to name a new football coach Friday, and San Francisco 49er assistant coach Mike White said he was the No. 1 choice.

"I've been led to believe the job is mine if I want it," White said before flying to Champaign to meet with school officials Thursday. "I feel that I want the job, but my only reservation is that I've got to go back there and look people in the eye to be convinced that everything is just right."

John P. Hummel, chairman of the Athletic Association board of directors, said the board would talk with White, then discuss the candidates and receive the recommendation of Athletic Director Neale Stoner.

Stoner, like White, is from the West Coast, having served as athletic director at California State University-Fullerton until going to Illinois in November.

At his recommendation, the board fired Coach Gary Moeller, who had a three-year record of 6-24-3.

In addition to White, the board has considered coaches John Mackovic of Wake Forest, Dick Jameson of Indiana

State, Frank Maloney of Syracuse and Larry Smith of Tulane. Smith, however, decided not to change jobs.

Western Wins 14th In Row

SNYDER (Special) — Western Texas Junior College kept its unbeaten record intact Thursday night with a 107-89 victory over New Mexico Junior College. The Chaparrals are now 14-0.

Western Texas was paced by the double-digit scoring of five players. Bill Patterson led the Westerners with 19 points. He was followed by Phil Spadling (18), David Brown (16), Greg Stewart (12) and Paul Presney (10). NMJC was led by Ricky Serkins's 24 points.

Ex-Sun Devil Players Hit With Drug Charges

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two recent Arizona State University football players — Darrel Gill and Marshall Edwards — have been indicted on charges of selling large quantities of cocaine to undercover narcotic agents.

According to an indictment returned by the Maricopa County grand jury, the alleged sales took place before the start of the 1979 football season and some of the deals were made on the ASU campus in suburban Tempe.

Edwards, from Tucson, was a starting tight end in 1978 and regarded as an outstanding pro prospect. He was operated on for a knee injury and saw little action this last fall, when the Sun Devils coach Frank Kush was ousted in mid-season and ASU forfeited five games for using ineligible players.

Gill, from Aliquippa, Pa., was a strong safety on the 1978 team.

Court records show the alleged transactions took place in August and early September.

The players, plus Melvin Jackson, 26, of Phoenix, were accused of initiating three sales of cocaine to undercover police officers G. Guariglio and S. E. Werner.

of Tempe. The three are free on bond pending trial on charges of sale of narcotic drugs valued at more than $250, conspiracy and offering to sell narcotic drugs.

The indictment was released Thursday after their arrest. They have not been arraigned.

A class-two felony, which includes the charges against the trio, carries a mandatory prison sentence if defendants have prior felony records. It also carries a possible prison term of up to 28 years.

Anderson, Eight Cowboys Top Pro Picks

NEW YORK (AP) — Otis Anderson of the St. Louis Cardinals, the National Football League's leading rushing with 1,566 yards heading into the final regular-season weekend, was named Thursday to the National Conference roster for the Jan. 27 Pro Bowl game in Honolulu.

Anderson is the only rookie on the NFC squad. The 6-foot-2, 210-pounder out of the University of Miami, who has already eclipsed the rookie rushing record set a year ago by Houston's Earl Campbell, will be joined at running back by Chicago's Walter Payton, second in NFC rushing with 1,453 yards. It is Payton's fourth Pro Bowl. Wilbert Montgomery of Philadelphia and Chuck Muncie of New Orleans are the reserve running backs.

Roger Staubach of Dallas, the league's passing leader, makes his fifth Pro Bowl appearance at quarterback, backed up by New Orleans' Archie Manning. Staubach is one of eight Cowboys on the NFC squad.

Philadelphia is represented by six players, including wide receiver Harold Carmichael. He'll start along with Ahmad Rashad of Minnesota. Wes Chandler of New Orleans and Tony Hill of Dallas are the reserves. The starting tight end is New Orleans' Henry Chulds, backed up by David Hill of Detroit.

Starting on the line are tackles Stan Walters of Philadelphia and Pat Donovan of Dallas, guards Bob Young of St. Louis and Dennis Harrah of Los Angeles and center Rich Saul of Los Angeles.

On defense, the starters are Tampa Bay's Lee Roy Selmon and Jack Youngblood of Los Angeles at the ends, tackles Randy White of Dallas and Charlie Johnson of Philadelphia, linebackers Brad Van Pelt and Harry Carson of New York and Jim Youngblood of Los Angeles, safeties Tom Myers of New Orleans and Ken Houston of Washington and cornerbacks Lemar Parrish of Washington and Roger Wehrli of St. Louis.

Parrish, the NFC's leader in interceptions with nine, is making his first start on that conference's Pro Bowl team after being selected to the American Conference squad six times during his seasons with Cincinnati. The NFC Pro Bowl specialists are punter Dave Jennings of the Giants, place-kicker Mark Moseley of Washington and kick returner Wally Henry of Philadelphia.

For the AFC, announced previously, the starters on offense are wide receivers — John Jefferson of San Diego and John Stallworth of Pittsburgh, tight end Dave Casper of Oakland, San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts, Campbell of the Oilers and Pittsburgh's Franco Harris at running back, center Mike Webster of Pittsburgh, tackles Leon Gray of Houston and Russ Washington of San Diego and guards Joe DeLamielleure of Buffalo and John Hannah of New England.

The AFC's defensive starters are ends Fred Dean of San Diego and Pittsburgh's L.C. Greenwood, tackles Joe Greene of the Steelers and Miami's Bob Baumhower, linebackers Jack Ham and Jack Lambert of Pittsburgh and Robert Brazile of Houston, cornerbacks Mike Haynes of New England and Louis Wright of Denver and safeties Mike Reinfield of Houston and Pittsburgh's Donnie Shell. Kansas City punter Bob Grupp, place-kicker Tom Fritsch of Houston and Denver kick returner Rick Upchurch are the specialists.

Sayers' Retirement Plans Deliver Reward—Finally

CINCINNATI (AP) — When Gale Sayers sought to break into the National Football League as a player, he readied himself with lots of hard running at the University of Kansas.

Now Sayers is thinking about trying to break into the NFL again in another capacity as an executive, and his training ground has been the athletic director post at Southern Illinois University.

"When I left the Bears (in 1971), I was offered a position, but it was window dressing," said Sayers, who set 23 Bear records and seven NFL marks in seven seasons. "I would not take a window dressing job for a club or the NFL."

Instead, he returned to the Kansas athletic department for a while, then took the job at Southern Illinois.

Sayers now feels he's ready for an administrative job in the pros. He said the moves have been possible because he always planned ahead.

Many players don't prepare for something else," said Sayers, who ran for 14 touchdowns in 1965 when he was NFL rookie of the year. "As I prepared myself to play, I prepared myself to quit—I was able to go from a $100,000 to a $17,000 position at Kansas."

Many players live on big money, and when it's over, they can't do it," he said. "They've not prepared their lifestyle. The smart player has a degree. He's better off."

Sayers said it's easy to agree with racial discrimination charges made in a statement by NFL Players Association lawyer Ed Garvey, but that one also must consider the reasons why there are few blacks in coaching and administrative positions at the professional level.

"If you reacted the exact second after he said the statement, you would say he's right," Sayers said. "But after you study it, where do you draw the blacks from?"

Right now, there's only a small pool to draw from, and Gale Sayers is one of them. Sure, there's a lot on the smaller level, but to coach in the NFL you don't go below Division I — that's committing suicide."

Sayers said he was content to leave his playing days behind. While he declined to rank himself among the all-time great NFL running backs, he said he filled a void in the late 1960s.

Jimmy Brown, who retired in Sayers' rookie year, was the greatest running back ever, Sayers said. Among current players, he rates Earl Campbell "a notch above the rest."

Sayers was in Cincinnati to appear at a banquet honoring high school sport all-stars from the Greater Cincinnati League.

Indiana's Corso Enjoys Hectic Bowl Schedule

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Coach Lee Corso is doing double duty for the first time as Indiana's football coach, but he's enjoying every minute of it as the Hoosiers prepare for their first bowl game since 1968.

Corso is preparing his 7-4 Hoosiers for a Dec. 21 battle with 11-0 Brigham Young in the Holiday Bowl on Dec. 21. And he's been out recruiting in the hope of luring players who can make winning seasons a habit here.

"It's been hectic because I've been recruiting and trying to get ready for the game too," Corso said. "Normally, I would have been on the road all week this week recruiting."

"It's kind of tiring, but you work very hard to get into this position. I've had it both ways and, believe me, this way is a lot better."

Corso started formal post-season workouts Monday and the weather has allowed him to hold most sessions outdoors. The team will arrive in San Diego on Sunday and hold their first practice there on Monday.

The Indiana coach, who had his contract extended through the 1985 season last month, respects the offensive potential of Brigham Young.

"We're playing the nation's ninth-ranked team, the No. 1 offensive team in America with the No. 1 quarterback in America," said Corso about the game.

"He's an outstanding quarterback,"

Corso said about senior Marc Wilson, a 6-foot-5 passing whiz who finished third in the Heisman Trophy voting. "He has a great release. He scrambles very well and he's got tremendous quickness and ability to get away from the rush."

Wilson completed 250 of 427 pass attempts for 3,720 yards and 29 touchdowns, leading an offense that averaged 521.4 yards per game while capturing the Western Athletic Conference championship.

"He's going to be one of the finest quarterbacks we have ever faced," Corso predicts.

Corso plans to mix pleasure with business on the trip to California. Planned recreation for the players include trips to Sea World and the San Diego Zoo. The coach also plans to allow his players free time for activities of their own choosing.

"We want them to see some things and do some things that will really be good experiences for them — things most of them haven't gotten a chance to do yet," Corso said. "We've told them to just follow the same basic rules they do here, and that is not to do anything that would embarrass themselves, their family or the university."

RING FINALS POSTPONED

NEW YORK (AP) — The AAU Intercity boxing championships finals, scheduled for Monday night at the Felt Forum, have been postponed, Madison Square Garden announced Thursday. The action was taken after a state committee investigating the death of pro fighter Willie Classen.

Replay Refs? Think Again

By The Associated Press

Bob Feller is still waiting for Bill Stewart to raise his thumb. Doug Mohs is still waiting for Bill Chadwick to swallow his whistle... and Larry Anderson is still waiting for Willie Spencer to pick up his hankie.

But they won't, so why get all bothered about it? It is what is known as "part of the game" and that's part of what makes it a game in the first place.

When Anderson scooped up Matt Bahr's squib kick along the right sideline last Monday night, he was dead certain he and the Pittsburgh Steelers owned the ball and a clear shot at a victory over Houston and a National Football League division championship.

But Spencer, the side judge standing inches away from the play, was just as certain that Anderson had grabbed the ball a yard or two too soon. He flagged the play and, in conference with referee Jerry Markbreit, confirmed what he said he'd seen. The Steelers were forced to kick again, the Oilers got the ball this time and they won 20-17.

On Tuesday, though, the NFL admitted they blew it, that the Steelers should have had the ball. Anything beyond that, though, is supposition.

Pittsburgh still would have needed 20 yards or so just to set up a tying field goal and 50 yards to score a touchdown. When the Steelers did get the ball in the closing seconds, they couldn't even get a first down.

So much for awesomeness. The whole point is that everybody wants everything to be perfect.

Sorry. Life's not that way.

Consider, if you will, Feller and Stewart Feller, who used to throw a baseball better than anyone around, threw one to second base during the 1948 World Series. Standing not too far away was Phil Masi, who was out by a country mile — only Mr. Stewart didn't see it that way. Safe, he signaled — and moments later Tommy Holmes singled Masi home. The final score: Boston 1, Cleveland 0. Feller never did win a World Series game.

Consider, further, Mohs and Chadwick and the National Hockey League's 1952 playoffs. Chadwick, the referee, remembers Boston's Doug Mohs getting slashed by Montreal's Doug Harvey. "It was clearly a penalty and I saw it right away," Chadwick said. "Up went my arm to signal the infraction — and then the damndest thing happened. I blew my whistle while Boston still had the puck. Just at that precise moment Mohs put the puck under Jacques Plante and into the goal. I had cost the Bruins a goal... a costly one since they lost by one goal."

"I had made the cardinal sin. I was too intent," Chadwick admitted.

Perhaps Spencer was too intent. Perhaps he was reaching for his flag before the ball and Anderson got together.

What's important is not whether he did or not. What's important is that he's human and not mistake-proof.

Why is it that the guys in the striped shirt have to be so picture perfect when quarterbacks can get away with a shovelful of interceptions in one game and still start the next one, when running backs and receivers can fumble more than a hiccupping juggler, when linemen can louse up their blocking assignments and defenders can miss their tackles?

Would you rather have a computer out there, telling you right from wrong? Just what we need — fans screaming "Kill the Uninvited!"

Everyone hollering about how instant replays can solve everything would be hollering the loudest when the officials and coaches spent four or five minutes poring over videotape while players lolled around with nothing to do but wait.

Hmm, from this angle it looks like... Hey, take a look at this shot... What about this one?"

You want computerized football? Fine. Stop into any toy store and tork over 25 bucks for a battery-operated game that doesn't make a mistake.

New Redskin Adds Dimension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neal Olkewicz, though only a rookie who has started a mere seven games, has brought a new style of middle linebacker to the Washington Redskins.

And Coach Jack Pardee, who has visions of making the Super Bowl, believes that Olkewicz has made the difference to the Redskins defense this season.

Pardee said, "Neal is just playing exceptional football. He is just amazing everybody every week."

"Not bad for a guy who was not even selected in the draft and was signed as a free agent out of Maryland."

The unusual wrinkle in Olkewicz's play is that he lines up five yards behind the defensive line, about 1 1/2 yards farther back than normal.

"Most middle linebackers are about 3 1/2 yards deep," said Olkewicz recently. "I didn't even realize that I was deep. I just went where I felt most natural. Nobody in the league plays that deep, but the coaches didn't try to change."

"At that depth I can flow down the line more. When I read where a play is going, I can make up for my extra depth by shooting up to the play instead of drifting over to it. You just have to be careful because there are a few different blocks they can throw at you."

The 22-year-old Olkewicz, who is listed at 6-feet, 218 pounds, has become the leading hitter on the Redskins with 76 tackles and 51 assists since breaking into the lineup in week seven and earning his first star in the following game against Philadelphia. The figures do not include his play on the special teams during the first six games of the season.

"Neal will stay and hit with any of them," said Pardee. He really is the difference to our defense this year, having that range inside. He's a good tackler."

The defensive linemen just love him. They know that if they are getting doubled or two are blocking one, if they just tie up both blockers for just a second Neal is gone. He's got the range to make the play. It is inspirational even to the rest of the defensive linemen.

St. Louis' Anderson Named Top Rookie

NEW YORK (UPI) — Otis Anderson of St. Louis, the running sensation who broke Earl Campbell's year-old rookie rushing record this season, heads United Press International's 1979 NFL All-Rookie team announced today.

Anderson, the former Miami (Fla.) star who was the first running back selected in the NFL draft in May, enters the final game of the season Sunday leading the NFL in rushing, holding a 3-yard advantage over Campbell, Houston's star runner.

The All-Rookie team is selected by UPI after a survey of selected NFL coaches and scouts and pro football writers.

Joining Anderson in the rookie backfield are quarterback Phil Simms of the New York Giants and running back Williams Andrews of Atlanta. The wide receivers are Jerry Butler, one of three Buffalo players picked, and Earnest Gray, also of the Giants. Cincinnati's Dan Ross is the tight end.

The tackles are Keith Dorney of Detroit and Dave Studdard of Denver and the guards are Greg Roberts of Tampa Bay and Cody Rissen of Cleveland. Mark Dennard of Miami was selected at center and Matt Bahr of Pittsburgh the kicker.

On defense, the ends are Jesse Baker of Houston and Dan Hampton of Chicago and the tackles are Fred Smerlas of Buffalo and Manu Tuasopopo of Seattle. Stan Blinka of the New York Jets is the middle linebacker, flanked by Jim Haslett of Buffalo and Jerry Robinson of Philadelphia. Henry Williams of Oakland and Aaron Mitchell of Dallas are the cornerbacks, Vernon Perry of Houston the strong safety and Brenard Wilson of Philadelphia the free safety. Bob Grupp of Kansas City, the NFL's leading punter this season, was named as the punter.

Grand Prix Stays Clouded

PARIS (AP) — The International Auto Sport Federation (FISA) Thursday lifted a threat to cancel the U.S. Grand Prix at Watkins Glen, N.Y., but allocated a date of April 13, 1980 which cast new doubts on the race.

Grand Prix until 1981, freeing that date for Watkins Glen.

Watkins Glen President Malcolm Currie, visibly disappointed at the decision, said he "accepts the date with the hope it can be changed" back to the regular October schedule.

Currie said he had steps to make desired improvements at the track in the belief that his race was still scheduled for October.

Lobo Assistant Pulls Out

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico assistant basketball coach Manny Goldstein resigned Thursday, the day before he was to appear before the university's Athletic Council to answer questions resulting from an FBI investigation of possible transcript fixing.

Goldstein tendered a termination form to university officials and it was forwarded to the office of UNM President William E. Davis, according to Tony Hillerman, assistant to Davis.

Goldstein will leave the university effective Dec. 31, a university spokesman said.

The future of Coach Norm Ellenberger could be decided today by the council, which will make its recommendation to Davis based on what it learns. Davis has the power to fire Ellenberger.

Asked if Goldstein would appear before the council, Hillerman said, "The reason for him being there would be moot. But he might still appear if he wants to. I've heard from our SID (sports information director) that Goldstein had told people on the south campus he would be there, so God knows. I'm sure the council would like to ask him some questions."

Ellenberger and Goldstein were suspended from their jobs two weeks ago after the FBI released a transcript of a wiretap telephone conversation in which the two coaches discussed a method to falsify a player's academic transcript so he would be eligible to play for the Lobos.

Goldstein served as Ellenberger's chief recruiter since joining the UNM coaching staff three years ago. He came to the university from Southwestern Louisiana University, where he was also an assistant.

The university's basketball program has been rocked by developments that began Nov. 30 with the disclosure in a sworn affidavit filed by the FBI in U.S. District Court that Goldstein had UNM basketball player Craig Gilbert's junior college transcript doctored.

Goldstein has refused to talk with local reporters about the FBI allegations. But in an interview with a national sports magazine, he said, "They have me for changing a transcript or allegedly making one up. Now you tell me how bad a crime I did. I bought a seal. I didn't steal it. I went to a print shop and had it made, and I bought it."

"Did I try to hurt the kid? He's not eligible! He had nothing to lose. I considered everything. This was the last resort. I didn't do anything illegal until I had to."

Martin Gets Reprimand

—NEW YORK (AP) — American League President Lee MacPhail warned Billy Martin Thursday that continued inflammatory remarks about the New York Yankees and owner George Steinbrenner could endanger the controversial former manager's return to baseball.

"I'm not trying to gag him," MacPhail said, after meeting for about 20 minutes with Martin. "He has the right to speak, but he could do damage to himself if he keeps it up."

MacPhail summoned Martin to the meeting following remarks the former manager made at an appearance at the University of Rhode Island Tuesday night.

"I'm not concerned about the meeting," said Martin. "I have nothing to hide. I just gave honest answers to honest questions."

Included among the answers Martin gave to the URI audience was the opinion that Steinbrenner "is sick." But Billy insisted Thursday before seeing MacPhail that he still likes the Yankee boss.

"If you think I don't like the man (Steinbrenner), you're wrong," Martin said. "He's done so many wonderful things. But he doesn't know a friend from an enemy. I feel sorry for him."

Yet Martin doesn't hide his animosity, either.

"He (Steinbrenner) said I violated being a Yankee," the ex-manager said. "How does he know? He never played for them."

Martin said he has received a paycheck every two weeks from the club and expects to continue receiving them. He had two more years on his contract when Steinbrenner fired him following the Bloomington, Minn., fight with marshmallow salesman Joseph Cooper.

But there have been suggestions that the contract may have been voided by the fight. Paragraph 3A of every contract requires that the manager "conform to high standards of personal conduct, fair play and good sportsmanship."

That raised the question of whether there had been any attempt on the part of the Yankees to halt his payments.

"Knowing how George is, he might try to stop that," said Martin. "He's tried to smear me on national television."

That was a reference to Martin's reported health and financial problems, attributed to a source who Billy believes was Steinbrenner.

"I won't answer any charges from a 'source' unless you put a name in front of it," said Martin.

The ex-pilot said he had signed a standard American League contract when he returned to the Yankees and there were no clauses attached to it. "George promised me there would be no quotes on the side to the press and he promised that he wouldn't interfere. He broke those two promises," said Martin.

There were reports that Commissioner Bowie Kuhn had asked Martin to refrain from making remarks about Steinbrenner and the Yankees as part of the agreement clearing the ex-manager from possible suspension or fine. But Martin denied that, saying "he wouldn't do that."

Kuhn is out of the country but is certain to get a full report on Martin's latest outburst when he returns next week.

He said he had not talked to Steinbrenner since the altercation in Minnesota. "George hasn't even told me I was fired," he said. "I learned that from my lawyer. I haven't talked to him and I don't intend to. I wish him all the luck in the world, good health, and happy holidays. I just don't want to be associated with him."

Martin said there was no question that the Rhode Island remarks about Steinbrenner had caused MacPhail to call him "But this isn't Iran, it's the United States of America," he said. "I have the right to comment."

But after meeting with MacPhail, Martin may think twice about future remarks.

"It was more counseling than anything else," MacPhail said. "We're not trying to muzzle him or take away his first amendment rights. He was in com-

Gerulaitis To Lead Off For U.S. In Davis Cup

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States will play Italy's Corrado Barazzutti in tonight's opening match of the Davis Cup tennis finals, the draw Thursday determined.

John McEnroe, who led the U.S. team to a Davis Cup title last year, will face Adriano Panatta in the opening session's second singles match at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium.

"The draw doesn't make that much of a difference," said Gerulaitis. But he added, "I've started off first in each of our Davis Cup matches this year and we've won them."

The best-of-five match competition will continue Saturday with doubles play. Veterans Stan Smith and Bob Lutz comprise the U.S. team named Thursday and the Italians plan to use Panatta and Paolo Bertolucci, although the makeup of the doubles teams can be changed up to one hour before the match.

Two more singles matches will be played Sunday even if one team has a 3-0 lead. McEnroe will face Barazzutti, followed by Gerulaitis against Panatta.

A 5-0 sweep by the Americans is considered a strong possibility because of their past performances against the Italian team members and also because of their familiarity with fast playing surfaces. The Italians have done best outdoors on clay courts.

"These guys can play on any surface and win, which makes it easy for me. I don't have to do any juggling," Trabert said of his players. He has turned down such U.S. players as Roscoe Tanner and Peter Fleming, who wanted Davis Cup opportunities this year.

The playing surface at the Civic Auditorium, which seats 6,300 for tennis, is Supreme Court, a green textured vinyl over concrete.

Before last year's U.S. Davis Cup victory, it had been five years since the country had even sent its team to the finals. The top players, most notably Jimmy Connors, seldom were available.

McEnroe, who won the National Collegiate Athletic Association singles championship as a Stanford freshman, got into the Davis Cup picture as soon as possible, however.

"When I was little it was what I always wanted to do," the 20-year-old New Yorker explained.

Collins' Arches May End Career

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers are rolling, but Doug Collins' wheels are flat.

Actually the problem with the four-time All-Star guard is that his feet are anything but flat. High arches, according to Collins' physician, are responsible for the recurring injuries to both feet that have hobbled the 28-year-old veteran so severely he cannot walk without pain.

Wednesday, before the 76ers sparked both offensively and defensively against the Milwaukee Bucks to raise their record to 22-7, Collins announced that he is probably finished for the season and possibly finished for good.

"I have the same problem as last year (a stress fracture), only it's the right foot instead of the left," Collins told reporters before the game.

"But at the moment I'm more concerned about the left foot than I am the right. There's a spur of some sort that has developed where the surgery was done last year," said Collins, who has missed seven games and seen limited action in four others.

Collins will undergo surgery to remove the bone spur that caused the stress fracture in the right foot. The problem in the left ankle could be scar tissue from the operation last year, but further study is necessary before treatment.

Collins underwent a radiographic examination Tuesday in New York after his feet failed to improve, despite limiting his playing time as ordered by his orthopedist, Dr. Joseph Torg.

"I would really doubt if I play anymore this year," said Collins, who was averaging 16.9 points in 30 minutes a game.

"This is my fourth stress fracture. When I get up in the morning, it's difficult to walk," said Collins, who ran five miles and bicycled 20 each day over the summer to come back from last year's injury.

"I'm not going to get out of a cast and try to play in two weeks. I did that last year and it set me back 16 weeks," Collins said. Last season Collins missed 25 games, returned to suffer the stress fracture and didn't play after April 1.

"I don't anticipate Doug coming back this year," said coach Billy Cunningham, adding that the 76ers will probably activate Al Skinner, whose injured knee should be ready in about two weeks.

"What it means is we lose an All-Star guard — we lose experience and a great competitor," Cunningham added. "We must depend on the rookie guards (Clint Richardson and Jim Spanarkel) to come through for us."

Richardson has taken over Collins' starting position, while Spanarkel broke into double figures for the first time with 14 points against Milwaukee as the 76ers won their ninth straight to keep pace with Boston for the best record in the National Basketball Association.

"Never before have I thought that I wouldn't bounce back, and I won't give up this time either," Collins said.

"The last thing in my life I want to do is stop playing basketball. But I can't predict my future," Collins said.

"I'm 28 now, and I don't want to be walking around with a cane at age 35," he added.

Rodgers Sues Chargers For Malpractice

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former San Diego Chargers wide receiver Johnny Rodgers has filed suit against the National Football League team and doctors, claiming that negligent treatment of a knee injury and negligent prescribing of medicine and drugs prematurely ended his football career.

Rodgers, who had a long-term contract with the team when he was waived last August at the final cutoff date, reportedly is still being paid by the team. However, neither his attorneys nor the Chargers would confirm the report.

Defendants in the suit include the Orthopedic Medical Group of San Diego Inc., Dr. E. Paul Woodward and the Chargers.

Rodgers' lawsuit did not specify the amount of damages sought. It alleges that the Chargers engaged in and participated in operating "an unlicensed pharmacy," permitted unregistered personnel to act as pharmacists and permitted unlicensed personnel to perform health care services, all in violation of the state business and professional code.

Rodgers also accuses the defendants of negligently failing to possess and exercise the degree of knowledge and skill in examining, diagnosing, prescribing drugs and medicine and to care for and treat the problem.

According to Rodgers' suit, the result was that he was left to suffer severe and permanent injuries and unable to engage in his usual occupation.

The 28-year-old Rodgers won the Heisman Trophy while a student at Nebraska in 1972. He was the Chargers' No. 1 draft pick. However, he signed with the Montreal Alouettes.

Researcher Indicates Soviet Superiority

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — The Soviet Union is 10 years ahead of the United States in using scientific research to help athletes set new world records, according to the sports medicine coordinator for the U.S. Olympic ski team.

"The Soviets make winning in international competition an important national goal and they use scientific knowledge to reach that goal," said Charles Dillman, who also is a professor of physical education at the University of Illinois.

"The Soviet government, therefore, provides money every year to support research and advanced training for coaches."

Dillman, who observed Russian sports research projects in September, said the Soviets spend $8 million a year on sports research, while the U.S. spends virtually nothing.

He said the Russians have a national communications network between coaches and researchers.

The Soviets also monitor workouts by analyzing blood samples and muscle activity so they can detect and prevent overtraining.

Abdul-Jabbar Complains About NBA's Bumps

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the force around which the Los Angeles Lakers are constructed, had a feeling before the basketball season opened that he was in for a rough time of it.

While Abdul-Jabbar was lifting weights and growing stronger in the off-season, the National Basketball Association was deciding to cut back down to two referees a game after a year of experimenting with three.

It was a decision based on finances. But what it has done, according to the Lakers' 7-foot-2 center, is brought back the heavy-handed tactics in the middle that characterized the game a few years ago.

What he means is that opposing players are resorting more and more to the leaning, grabbing and shoving against him that they used to do — and are getting away with it.

Abdul-Jabbar, the captain of the Lakers, isn't happy about it all, although from the standpoint of statistics he doesn't seem affected. He leads the NBA in field-goal percentage (62 percent) and blocked shots (3.9 per game). He is sixth in scoring (23.4) and seventh in rebounding (11.3).

But he has averaged just under six free throws attempted a game, the same as last year, despite what he says is a much more physical attempt to stop him.

"They are using the same methods as two years ago," he said. "If they allow everything to go back to that, it doesn't bode well.

"The whole thing with three officials started because the league was placed in a position where it had to accept responsibility for what was happening. Now they've had a year and they figure the coast is clear now and they can give up that responsibility."

What has happened, said Abdul-Jabbar, is that the officials aren't enforcing the rules. He cited as examples a recent game in which Kansas City center Sam Lacey was using his forearms to keep him from turning and another in which Milwaukee center Harvey Catchings played him like an offensive guard in football with his hands held high against the Lakers' center.

"It's supposed to be against the rules," Abdul-Jabbar said. "I made that point to the officials and they cleaned it up a little the next time. It's getting to the point where you really have to get on them to have them be conscious of it."

That doesn't always work. Abdul-Jabbar called time out in a game last week at San Antonio to complain to the referees about the roughhousing inside. But the next night, at Houston, he was thrown out of the game when he directed a stream of bad language at the officials.

He said different referees have different ideas about what constitutes roughness and that they don't want to discuss the matter.

"Fortunately I did extensive weight training in the off-season and I'm a lot stronger," he said. "That's why I think I'm still able to have a good year. But it's kind of disappointing for me in one sense — I prepared for the worst, and the worst is here."

Thursday as the only repeaters from 1978.
 The 265-pound McGriff made the so-called Little All-America team for the third year in a row.
 Hawkins celebrated Nevada-Reno's first season as a member of the Big Sky Conference by rushing for 1,683 yards, an average of 153 per game. Both were league records and also led the NCAA's Division I-AA.

Joining Hawkins in the offensive backfield are quarterback Joe Aliotti of Boise State and running backs Chris "Poke" Cobb of Eastern Illinois and Mal Najarian of Boston University.
 Aliotti, the Big Sky's offensive player of the year, led Division I-AA in passing efficiency. He threw for 19 touchdowns and set a Big Sky record by completing 65.8 percent of his passes — 144 of 219 for 1,870 yards, with only seven interceptions.

Cobb became the fifth college division player to rush for 5,000 yards and broke the all-time NCAA Division II career record, piling up 5,042 yards. For the season, he gained 1,609 yards, a 5.5 per-carry average.

Najarian was named New England player of the year by rushing for 1,137 yards, breaking his own Boston U. single-season record.
 The rest of the offensive unit consists of tight end Paul Muckenbun of North Dakota, wide receiver Jerry Young of Wisconsin-Whitewater, tackles Dave Melone of Lehigh and Jeff Lear of Youngstown (Ohio) State, guard Herb Beck of Delaware and center Jim Leonard of Santa Clara.

The defensive unit is composed of ends Plummer Bullock of Virginia Union and Pete Catan of Eastern Illinois, tackles Joe Gordon of Grambling and Doug Scott of Boise State, middle guard Ernie England of St. John's (Minn.), linebackers Andy Hawkins of Texas A&I, Ed Judie of Northern Arizona and Ezekiel Vaughn of Ouachita Baptist and backs Mike Ellis of Norfolk (Va.) State, Terry Love of Murray (Ky.) State and Jack Quinn of Springfield (Mass.).

 Aliotti, Hawkins, Catan, Judie and Love are the only juniors on the first team. The others all are seniors.
 All players at four-year NCAA and NAIA colleges are eligible for the college division All-America team except those at NCAA Division I-A schools.

Water Salvage Enhanced Playa Lake System Overcomes Silt Problem

A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — Irrigation tailwater reclamation has proven an important breakthrough for the water-short High Plains region in the past decade, but one major problem has accompanied nearly every system engineered to salvage water that might otherwise be lost.

That problem is silt buildup in the pits which serve as the collecting area for spill-off water.

Irrigation water escaping from fields picks up a load of soil in suspension as it travels from the land surrounding reclamation pits, and when this suspended soil eventually settles in the bottom of collection pits, it drastically reduces the life of these costly collection areas.

In order to continue using the reclamation pits, producers must periodically have them cleaned of their silt load, and heavy equipment time is becoming more expensive every day. In fact, paying for dragline or heavy equipment operation to re-open the pits can bear a price tag to rival the original construction costs of the pit.

With those facts in mind, personnel of the Hereford Soil Conservation Service office, working with a local irrigation farm operator, have designed a system to take advantage of the natural features of a playa lake to reduce silt buildup in the collection pit, while maximizing water recovery from the lake in the same operation.

Such a system is currently under construction on farm property northeast of Hereford owned by Bess May and operated by Rick May.

May is putting in his second system based on the principle of allowing the natural features of a playa to deprive incoming water of its silt load.

He installed such a system on a farm not far from the location of the present construction a few years ago, and has been so impressed with the results that he's enlarging on the plan at the new location.

May is bearing the cost of developing the system himself, but turned to local SCS officials for advice on the engineering.

Conservation technician Al Lee and soil conservationist Jim Bolinger and Kyle Holz of the Hereford SCS office were called on to help design and lay out water gathering facilities.

Lee, a veteran water system planner, drew up designs for the original lake system installed by May, and those plans were adapted for the system currently being built.

"This was a new idea that Doyle Vines and I worked on and came up with together. We use channeling from the lakebed and come into the pit from the lake through a pipe which controls the water flow into the pit. This gives the water time to drop its load of silt out in the lakebed somewhere before entering the reclamation pit and what we have is a relatively silt-free system. That's the beauty of it," said Lee.

According to Lee, the idea for the system was drawn from observation of differing methods of gathering spill-off water.

"We found that pump pits in the edge or bottom of lakes were not exactly satisfactory because they tend to silt up so badly. We tried to take advantage of the layout of a lake to help us do away with some of that silt," Lee explained.

According to the local technician, a major feature of the playa de-silting system is a collection ditch which comes around the south and west corner of the lake.

The ditch helps to direct water toward the collection area while taking on some of the silt load out in the lake, away from the pit area.

In designing the system, Lee advised that all dirt from channeling operations should be piled on the southwest side of the channels to break up wave action resulting from the area's prevailing winds.

He pointed out that this wave action leads to more rapid deterioration of the channels and hastens the silt-up of these areas.

"The collection ditch is a maintenance problem with this system and must be re-opened each season because of a tendency to silt up. But the re-opening there is not the problem that cleaning out a big pit would be because it can be done with a maintainer or bulldozer to a relatively shallow depth without wrapping up the time, effort or expense that would be involved in cleaning out a pit," said Lee.

According to the SCS technician, a large volume of water coming into a lake is needed to justify such a system, although the design works better on smaller lakes with more confined bottom areas that facilitate the collection of water.

On the May property, tailwater comes from 350-400 acres of cropland, but water drains from a half-section of cropland at the north end of the property and the system is designed to handle draining from an overall acreage of about a section.

In addition to irrigation spill-off, the lake system is also designed to allow the operators to take advantage of any bonus of rainwater spill-off which might occur.

May indicated that a 1,000 gallon per minute capacity pump will be placed at the collection pit at the lake when the system is in operation, and the lake pump will be tied in with pipeline from existing irrigation wells on the farm.

Lee estimated that the collection at the May farm will hold 800,000 gallons of water at capacity.

"The life expectancy of the collection pit at this site should be indefinite with the good silt collection system included and a little maintenance performed regularly," said Lee.

The Mays came in and said they wanted something they could be reasonably sure would work, and indicated they were willing to spend the money for a good system, particularly after their first success with this design," he continued.

Bolinger and Holz were responsible for laying out the system northeast of Hereford, with surveying preceding the actual designing.

"These surveys help us establish systems that are as trouble-free as we can possibly make them. Surveys help us determine the actual lake bottom and the most convenient pit location from the standpoint of practicality and accessibility. We also want to place the system near existing irrigation systems to cut down on pipe installation requirements," Lee explained.

TALK TAILWATER — Rick May, who operates a farm in the Dawn area east of Hereford, consults with Kyle Holz of the Hereford Soil Conservation Service office concerning features of a playa lake tailwater recovery system, which utilizes features of the lake to remove the silt load from incoming water before it arrives at a pumping pit. In the background, a carryall is engaged in the initial earth moving work which will result in construction of a tailwater recovery pit. (Correspondent Photo by Jim Steiert)

By DUANE HOWELL

THE UNIQUE TELCOT ON-CALL FAST-FLOW cotton program initiated in the Southwest by Hohenberg Brothers Cotton, a division of Cargill, Inc., is being reopened under a revised schedule of premiums in specific areas.

A major key to the premium schedule is the micronaire values at different gin points. Another now is related to the trucking of cotton direct from the larger-premium gins to Galveston, where the company has its own warehouse facilities.

The reason for the direct-trucking is to avoid getting the cotton caught in congestion at interior compresses, where shipment might be delayed for protracted periods.

At gins with universal density presses in most of Oklahoma and the Abilene-Sweetwater territory where the nuke has been good, as well as in part of the Big Spring area, the premium now is 150 points if the cotton can be hauled direct to Galveston. For flat cotton going direct from those areas, the premium is 130 points.

Cotton moving through conventional channels from those points under the fast-flow program will have an 85-point premium.

THERE WILL BE A 60-POINT PREMIUM at all other gin points — totaling about 100 — selected for the regular fast-flow program.

These gin points include the Lamesa area and are scattered elsewhere across the High Plains. There also are a few in this category in the Paducah-Childress area.

All the gin points are being informed that the premiums are subject to change without prior notice. Once a farmer enters the program, however, his premium as specified in his contract will of course remain unchanged.

Farmers enrolled more than 130,000 acres in the program before it was temporarily withdrawn last week for revision. Growers can fix their price on any part or all of their cotton at any time prior to next Aug. 1.

The price fixation is calculated from the area base price schedule in effect at the beginning of the day at the individual gin point plus or minus the call difference (the average price above or below the base price schedules on all Telcot sales of the day through 3 p.m.) plus the specified premium.

THE CALL DIFFERENCE IS UNIFORM throughout the program. The call price is what an individual farmer would get for his cotton.

Say the call difference is plus 40 points. This simply would mean that all the cotton that traded on Telcot to 3 p.m. that day had averaged 40 points over where the market began the day, which basically is a resumption from where it ended the previous day.

The call difference is in effect from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., the hours during which participating farmers may fix their prices. It obviously could be a minus figure, depending upon what the computer says had happened to 3 p.m. that day in relation to the beginning quotation.

It could be said that the beginning quotation involves a judgmental element, since overnight developments could inject new bullish or bearish factors following the previous day's close.

But there is a plus or minus procedure through which the quote changes during the day to reflect current trading conditions. A plus 50 points might be incorporated if cotton has been trading about a half-cent above the quote at the beginning of the day.

THIS GIVES FARMERS INFORMATION about what is happening at a given time. By looking at the electronic tube in a gin office, a farmer can see a price quotation for his particular lot which is judged to be about what the cotton would bring if it were offered for sale.

While the beginning quote essentially is where trading ended the previous day, there may have been some overnight changes in quality price differentials if some qualities had been selling substantially better or worse than others.

For example, it might be necessary, depending upon how cotton had been trading, to put a plus on some low grades or a minus on some high grades or perhaps a minus on certain low mixes or a plus on good mixes.

In general, however, if cotton had traded in a rather steady price pattern throughout the day, with no significant ups or downs, then a farmer's lot would be priced at the start one morning as it was at the end of the previous day, barring any of those adjustments in quality price differentials.

In any event, the innovative on-call fast-flow program, by separating the pricing mechanism from the physical flow of the cotton, has been likened in a sense in the merchandising area to development of the module concept which broke the lock step between the tempo of the harvest and the pace of ginning.

A FARMER ENTERING THE FAST-FLOW program is obligated for storage payments only until he turns over his warehouse receipts, no matter when he fixes his price. And the warehouse receipts are to be delivered immediately.

Until he fixes the price, the farmer loses the use of the money, a value factor of no little importance itself under present high interest rates. This of course would be true of deferred farm selling in general, whether in or out of the fast-flow program.

But the farmer also has the option outside the fast-flow program of carrying the cotton in the government loan — and having use of the loan funds — at an interest rate of 9 percent, considerably cheaper than anyone else can hold cotton inventories and cheaper than the grower himself would have to pay on any "replacement" capital borrowed from commercial sources.

Under this option, though, the farmer also would have storage charges averaging around $1 per bale per month back of the cotton, in addition to the interest costs, when he sold his loan equity or redeemed the cotton from the government's Commodity Credit Corp.

An apparent advantage to the merchant is that he presumably gets the cotton fast, delivers it quickly to the customer, collects the money, and then has use of the funds, assuming the farmer in the meantime has not fixed his price.

But if the farmer fixes the price early, the merchant would get little or no use from the money and at the same time would be paying a premium. So the merchant would have the premium to overcome.

THE SMOOTHER FLOW OF COTTON MAY BE something of an intangible aspect to the farmer. But while this, standing alone, does not mean direct monetary benefits to those outside the program, it does help the overall cotton situation.

To the extent that the fast-flow program can expedite the movement of cotton and get it out of the way, clearing it through compresses and so on, there will be commensurately less interior congestion and better use of transportation and port facilities. This is aside from worthwhile savings in storage and interest costs that can be achieved through prompt shipment.

The fast-flow program, it is said, also could facilitate additional sales to overseas customers which otherwise might be lost to competing growers.

There has been some talk that other on-call fast-flow contracts may be offered next season.

LATE BACKING AND FILLING LEFT COTTON futures Thursday with net gains of 37 to 60 points in nearby.

Floor brokers said market dips on trade selling and local long liquidation encountered support at lows from commission house short covering as March closed up 37 points at 71.77 cents and May ended with 41-point gains at 73.21. July advanced 60 points to 74.60. Estimated volume was 10,050 lots.

Petrodollars Being Used To Buy More American Farm Products

KANSAS CITY — The petroleum exporting countries are using some of their expanded incomes to buy more and more U.S. farm products even if their purchases are not enough to give this country a favorable balance of trade.

In fact, the trade balance as everyone knows who has been paying attention to worldwide news about oil has been heavily in favor of the oil exporters. But the balance would be worse if it were not for the sales from U.S. farms.

In recent months attention of Americans has been spotlighted on sales of U.S. farm products to OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) because of a well-publicized proposal to force trading of a bushel of wheat for a barrel of oil. The idea formed the basis of a slogan with a plausible ring, but nothing has come out of it.

The Economics, Statistics and the cooperative service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture has come out with a rather comprehensive report on agricultural trade with the oil exporting countries, obviously spurred by the interest in this country in oil prices, inflation, trade balances and everything else that has developed with the formation of OPEC. The report, however, does not specifically get into the controversial idea of trading wheat for oil, in fact it isn't even mentioned.

The report, contained in FATUS, a regular USDA publication which gets its name from "Foreign Agricultural Trade of the United States," is mostly just factual information.

There are many facts in the report with which American citizens may not be fully familiar. As an example, since 1974, the Soviet Union has been the world's largest producer of crude oil. The U.S.S.R. also is an exporter of oil, but it doesn't sell nearly as much outside its own borders as Saudi Arabia.

Obviously, the Soviet Union uses a lot of its own production. The same can be said for the United States, which is the world's second largest producer of crude oil. (It used to be first). The United States exports very little crude oil. It is one of the world's largest importers.

The FATUS study puts the world's oil exporters into the groups. One group consists of the OPEC nations of Ecuador, Venezuela, Algeria, Nigeria, Gabon, Libya, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, Iran and Indonesia.

The second group is made up of non-OPEC countries, some of which are primary exporters and the others secondary exporters: Canada, Mexico, Colombia, Tunisia, Congo, Angola, Egypt, Syria, Norway, Oman, Malaysia, Brunei, the Soviet Union, Trinidad-Tobago and Bolivia.

OPEC, the report says produces more than half of the world's total crude oil and accounts for more than four-fifths of the world's exports. Because of rising oil prices, OPEC countries have increased the value of their petroleum revenues from $25 billion in 1973 to $129 billion in 1978. The exports themselves haven't increased in quantity since 1973.

In calendar 1978, approximately 26 percent or $7.5 billion of all U.S. agricultural exports went to 28 oil exporting countries, including Canada and the Soviet Union, compared with only 9 percent in 1973.

Agricultural exports to the 13 OPEC countries totaled $2 billion in 1978, more than four times the value of the 1973 shipments.

For some other comparisons, U.S. exports of wheat to OPEC countries amounted to 2,550,000 metric tons in 1972, while the total in 1978 was 5,048,000, about double. Percentage-wise, rice exports increased more, from 464,700 metric tons in 1972 to 1,366,500 in 1978.

Fire Chief Calls For NTSB Inquiry

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — City Fire Chief Andy Casper wants the National Transportation Safety Board to investigate fires on Bay Area Rapid Transit trains, including a fire this week that did $750,000 damage.

The fire Wednesday charred the interior of a car and melted part of the car's aluminum roof. The blaze was controlled by Oakland firemen at the Oakland West station. No one was injured.

"There is no federal agency in charge," said Casper, a longtime critic of BART.

Blinded Woman To Meet Stars Of Soap Opera

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Judy McCormick's last glimpse of sight was an episode of the daytime television soap opera "The Edge of Night."

Miss McCormick, 34, blinded by glaucoma, still listens to the soap opera and is about to meet the characters she once enjoyed seeing. This week she will be flown to New York for a visit with the show's actors.

She said the last sight she remembers came in her late teens and was that of the soap opera.

She recently contacted the show's executive producer, Irwin Nicholson, who arranged her visit to New York. She will be met at the airport by one of the show's characters, Draper Scott, and will go to the studio for the day's show.

BART and the Public Utilities Commission's moves to avert fires. "We need minimal levels of safety."

Casper also called for an investigation of the transbay tube train fire in January that killed an Oakland firefighter, injured 40 people and closed the three-county transit network for three months.

Casper said an NTSB agent would arrive in a few days to gather information for hearings in May on mass transit safety.

The PUC, meanwhile, was trying to pin down a cause of Wednesday's fire. James Squeri, a lawyer in charge of the BART team investigating the blaze, said the exact cause of the fire was not known.

ACTOR-PRODUCER DIES

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor-producer Jon Hall, who played a strapping youth in many a jungle and South Seas movie and who invented a space camera lens, died Thursday of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, authorities said.

Hall, 66, star of the 1937 film "The Hurricane" and the television series "Ramar of the Jungle," had incurable cancer and had been undergoing painful chemotherapy treatments, police and family spokesmen said. The actor, who had tried unsuccessfully to make a recent movie comeback, was found dead around 7 a.m. by his brother-in-law, Edward Bayman, in the North Hollywood home of Hall's sister, Louise.

1980s, Decade Of Contrasts, Experts Say

CINCINNATI (AP) — The 1980s will be a decade of contrasts which will include more fast food, transistorized telephones and more bicycles, according to a survey of more than 40 researchers at the University of Cincinnati.

The educators predicted it would be a decade of fast food as people within one household develop a variety of lifestyles. On the other hand, food will be more nutritious and the diet may be designed to prevent cancer and heart disease, the researchers said.

Specialists in various fields were interviewed.

Nutritional studies will indicate dietary changes which may aid in preventing cancer, said Orlando Martelo of the university's College of Medicine.

"Maybe modification of the American diet will be an important factor in reducing cancer of the colon, stomach, pancreas or even the breast," Martelo said.

It will be a decade of shortages as food production reaches a plateau, fuel supplies dwindle and raw materials are used up, the researchers said.

However, they also predicted that the decade will demonstrate that new technological breakthroughs will enable people to survive in spite of these challenges.

Consumer products will be smaller and will use alternative sources of energy, predicted Gilbert Born, an associate professor of industrial design.

"We can anticipate pocket-sized transistorized telephones and dramatic changes in home entertainment devices and appliances," Born said. "Computers will help manage household chores and will monitor appliances and security."

Automobiles will have a computer as a sort of second driver, while many cities will build bikeways to accommodate the larger number of bicycles, the researchers said.

The population as a whole will be older, as the "baby boom" babies enter middle age, but researchers predict age will not be the handicap it has been.

New medical methods, new emphasis on fitness and nutrition and new educational opportunities will create an enriching environment in which to age productively, they said.

ing for the abolition of the holiday. Pennsylvania State University professor Stanley Weintraub said Shaw used the assumed name William Watkins Smyth when he wrote the spoof on Dec. 25, 1888, and sent it to the London Star, which published it.

Weintraub, the author of two widely read biographies of Shaw and editor of The Shaw Review, said he discovered the piece in Shaw's diaries, which he is editing and annotating. Shaw, through Smyth, purported to represent the "Christmas Day Abolition Society." He also advocated banning Christmas cards, saying, "Drop a penny into the stationer's till, and out comes an envelope with a robin and some bad verses on it."

"Write with love and good wishes" on the card, enclose it in the envelope, address it to the bore or the poor relation whom you really cannot be bothered with personally, stick on the stamp, shoot the whole into the scarlet temple at the next street corner, and there you are."

Shaw-Smyth began his letter to the Star, "Sir, I confess I am a little disappointed that The Star has allowed ... December to pass without a word in favor of the movement for the abolition of Christmas.

"On Christmas Eve ... I went about my business, anxiously calculating how little I could, without meanness, give the people who expect Christmas boxes ...

"I have no doubt such people are anxious and unsettled about what they may get as I am about what I should give, and that for the time they cannot help hating me as much as I cannot help hating them."

He noted decorated shops full of wares, adding, "Yet for every dainty thus publicly displayed, there were a hundred poor people to stare hungrily at it and go empty and envious away."

Shaw's diaries cover the years 1886, when he was 29, to 1897.

"At the time," said Weintraub, "Shaw was working as a music and art critic under his own name, but he also frequently used other names when spoofing."

New Hampshire Presidential Entries Filed

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The presidential primary season opened officially Thursday when representatives for President Carter and Ronald Reagan filed papers for New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation contest.

Carter's petition was presented by Gov. Hugh Gallen, who expressed confidence the president would defeat challenger Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the race for the Democratic nomination.

Gallen acknowledged Carter is waging an uphill fight here against the Massachusetts senator, saying: "I look on the president as being in Kennedy country in New Hampshire, so I think he has a hard job on his hands."

Candidates have been visiting the state for more than a year, but they must now file official petitions signed by 1,000 state residents and pay a fee of $500 to formally become candidates in the Feb. 26 primary.

Jeff Petrick, Kennedy's press secretary, said the senator's petition, with 12,000 signatures, will be filed today.

Nancy Reagan, wife of the former California governor, filed the petition for her husband — considered the front runner in the race for the Republican presidential nomination.

Four years ago, Reagan narrowly lost to former President Gerald Ford in the New Hampshire primary.

"I hope the outcome will be different this time," Mrs. Reagan said.

Also filing candidacy papers was Cleveland lawyer Richard Kay, a Democrat, who defended William Calley in the My Lai massacre case.

The filing deadline is Dec. 27. Each candidate needs 500 signatures from voters of his party in each of the state's two congressional districts.

New Hampshire voters have until Feb. 16 to register to vote in the primary, but Wednesday was the last day for registered voters to change party affiliation.

British Support Of U.S. May Include Iran Boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ambassador Sir Nicholas Henderson asserted Thursday that British support for the United States during the Iranian crisis is greater than most Americans think.

The United States and Iran are playing "a diplomatic game" in which the strong condemnations of Iran are important, Henderson told reporters at a breakfast sponsored by Foreign Policy magazine.

He said British Petroleum and Royal Dutch Shell, the two major British oil companies, have not signed contracts to buy Iranian oil after Jan. 1. But Henderson was noncommittal when asked whether Britain would support further economic moves against Iran.

Four of the five Great Lakes — Michigan's two large peninsulas and several islands, and the state's total shoreline is 3,000 miles.

Heartline

EDITOR'S NOTE: Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I live in what is considered to be a nice neighborhood. Within the last 30 days, there have been three burglaries, two muggings, a purse snatching and a car stolen. I repeat — ours is considered a nice neighborhood. I won't begin to tell you what goes on across town where my sister lives. She lives in a bad neighborhood. The point is, I'm scared. Most of these crimes seem to happen to us older folks. Can you give us some pointers on how to protect ourselves when we go out? — K.C.

For tips on protection, Heartline highly recommends a publication titled The Older Americans' Crime Prevention Guide, which is made available by the National Association of Older Americans. This particular publication points up the areas in which you are vulnerable and tells how to avoid being the victim of fraud, robbery, larceny, burglary and many other crimes. This publication also gives a long list of other good books on the subject of crime prevention. To order your copy, send $3.95 to The Older Americans, Crime Prevention Guide, 129 E. Somers St., Eaton, Ohio 45320. The tips listed here are taken from this publication.

1. Go shopping accompanied by another person, if possible.

2. Carry as little money as possible when you are out. If you can, keep the money in an inside pocket, instead of in your purse or wallet. If you do not have an inside pocket, at least separate your money, carrying some in your purse or wallet and some in a coat, dress or pants pocket.

3. Be on the lookout for suspicious persons and the actions of others around you.

4. Do not allow yourself to daydream or to be absent-minded when out walking or shopping.

5. Keep a record at home of all the charge cards and credit cards that you carry in your purse and know where to call or write if they are stolen.

6. If you are out in your car, keep your doors locked at all times, even if you intend to drive only a short distance.

7. If your car should break down, pull to the side of the road and raise your car hood. If someone should stop to help, send them for help. Do not leave your car, and keep the doors locked. If someone tries to enter your car, honk the horn.

8. Before you leave your car in your driveway or garage, have the key to the door of your home in your hand so that you may enter as quickly as possible.

9. If you must wait for a bus or cab, stay on or near a well-lit, busy street.

10. After parking your car, always take a few moments to look all around. If you see anything suspicious-looking, move to a different parking space. When you return to the car, be on the lookout for persons loitering near it. Check the front and rear seats before entering the car, and lock the doors after entering.

11. If you are standing or walking on a street and are threatened by an approaching car, scream and run in the direction opposite to that of the car.

12. While out walking, if you see anyone who looks suspicious approaching you from either the front or rear, cross the street or go into a store or office until the person is out sight.

13. You should never resist a robbery to protect your money or belongings, resist only to protect your person. If someone does approach you and demands your money, give it to him.

14. If you carry a purse, clasp it firmly in front of and close to your body. Do not wrap the strap around your wrist. Either keep your hand over the purse opening or keep the side of the purse which has the opening pressed against your body.

15. If you arrive home after dark, keep your headlights on until you have the car in the garage. If you can enter your home from the garage, keep your lights on until you have the door to your home unlocked.

16. When you are walking, always walk against the flow of traffic.

Triple Conjunction Of Mars, Jupiter To Take Place Soon

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — An astronomical phenomenon that may explain the star of Bethlehem seen by the Magi 2,000 years ago is destined to repeat itself during the next five months, a Michigan State University astronomer says.

According to Robert Victor of MSU's Abrams Planetarium, the first in a series known as a "triple conjunction" of the planets Mars and Jupiter will take place on the morning of Dec. 15.

Victor said Wednesday that a triple conjunction occurs when two astronomical bodies move close together three times in close succession.

Around the year 7 B.C., Victor said, a triple conjunction between Jupiter and Saturn may have created the fabled star of Bethlehem that Christmas lore says heralded the birth of Christ.

Mars and Jupiter often move close together once a year, but to have them come close three times in a five-month span is a rare event that Victor said hasn't happened since 1836-37.

The conjunctions will occur about an hour before sunrise, high in the southwest sky on Saturday, Dec. 15, and then on two evenings in 1980, Feb. 26 and May 5, Victor said. The last two will be visible all night, he added, with the Feb. 26 conjunction expected to be the brightest and May 5 expected to be the date when the two planets are closest.

Victor said the two planets will be separated by no more than three moon widths.

Iranian Students Put In Money Bind Because Of Assets Freeze

By United Press International
Bank tellers and merchants around the country are refusing to cash Iranian students' checks, leaving some in a bind for tuition, rent and food.

Much of the problem was caused by President Carter's order freezing Iranian assets last month after Americans were made hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

And some of it is pure revenge.

"I have five or six bills at my apartment that I have not paid yet," said one Iranian student at North Carolina State University who has been unable to cash a $2,000 check he received from his parents in Iran.

He said he might not be able to meet a visa requirement that students must prove they receive adequate funds to support themselves without working.

"If I don't get the money, I cannot pay my tuition for next semester," he said. "Then I will be deported."

Ahmad Zabedi, guardian of four Iranian students who attend a school for the deaf in Fort Worth, said banks won't cash their checks and he is dipping into his own savings to buy them food.

"They don't have money to go back home," he said.

Ted Good, a University of California at Berkeley foreign student adviser, said, "The check cashing problem is nationwide. The students are put in a real bind."

"The presidential freeze has resulted in no funds being available for cashing, whether the check is directly from Iran or transferred through international bank procedures," he said.

The Treasury Department has authorized Bank Melli of Iran to bring in $20 million to cover Iranian students' checks. But a Bank Melli spokeswoman in New York said banks, especially in the southern states, are refusing to cash the checks because of "strong emotional feeling."

"One officer said her supervisor told her not to accept Iranian checks. We are telling them OK that's all right, tell them to bring or send the checks directly to us," the spokeswoman said.

The banks' refusal to cash the checks "is harassment... it is discrimination," said Mohammad Zaiani, head of the scholarship section of the Iranian consulate in Chicago.

Jane Mitchell, spokeswoman for Wachovia Banks and Trust Co. in Raleigh, N.C., said the banks were simply trying to protect themselves.

"We have no way of knowing from day to day what will happen to their banks over there. They might be nationalized at any time," she said.

"I understand the merchants' problem with taking checks from Iranians," said Safar Moghadam, a University of Oklahoma student.

"Some (students) are going back (to Iran) and writing bad checks here, just saying to hell with Americans. But I like this country and I want to stay here. It's not right to judge each individual by what's going on over there."

But whatever the reasons, many students were hurting financially.

Hossein Lotfi, a senior at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, is married and has a child.

"Many students don't have money for their apartment or food," he said. "We have asked many different sources to help students. We asked to borrow money. We did not have any luck from any sources."

Postal Service Officials Say Mail To Hostages Increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mail addressed to hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Iran, continued to increase dramatically Thursday, postal officials reported.

Mail destined for Iran showed substantial increases over already swollen levels from the previous day at both facilities where mail going abroad is sorted, Postal Service spokesman Lou Eberhardt said.

"There has been a considerable increase in mail to Iran," he said.

At O'Hare Airport in Chicago, where the rest of the mail addressed to Iran is sorted, 25,320 pieces were destined for Iran, up from 16,800 on Wednesday, Eberhardt said.

Postal officials in Chicago estimated that more than 90 percent of the mail to Iran is addressed to hostages. Radio personalities at various stations as well as some others have urged that Christmas cards be sent to the hostages, though there is no word from Iran on whether the 50 hostages are receiving the mail.

The Postal Service spokesman said the surge in mail volume to Iran has not taxed the capacity of the agency, which annually gears up for massive volumes during the period before Christmas.

"The volumes we have been getting have been well within our capacity," Eberhardt said.

Mail addressed to the Iranian embassy in Washington also was up sharply, the Postal Service said. Letter carriers delivered 10,000 letters and cards to the embassy Thursday, compared to Wednesday's 4,000 and the normal flow of five to eight letters, he said.

Airmail to the embassy in Tehran costs 31 cents and should be addressed to American Embassy, P. O. Box 50; Tehran, Iran. The address of the Iranian Embassy here is 3005 Massachusetts Avenue N.W., Washington, D.C. 20008.

Show Folk, Dignitaries Attend Sinatra's 64th Birthday Fete

LAS VEGAS (AP) — It looked more like the Academy Awards than a birthday party as some of the biggest names in entertainment turned out to honor Frank Sinatra on his 64th birthday and 40th year in show business.

It was a "love-in," said master of ceremonies William B. Williams, "a love letter to the man who has given us 40 years of impeccable entertainment."

It was also a time for nostalgia and reminiscing as Red Skelton, Lucille Ball, Gene Kelly and others recalled the early years of Sinatra's career for more than 1,200 persons who jammed into the showroom at Caesars Palace Wednesday night to pay tribute to Ol' Blue Eyes.

There were as many stars in the audience as there were on stage. Cary Grant was there, and so were Rita Hayworth, Tony Bennett, Milton Berle, Red Buttons, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr., Orson Welles and Glenn Ford. Former Vice President Spiro Agnew was on hand, along with the president's mother, Lillian Carter, and manager Tommy LaSorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I loved it," Agnew said after the show. "I thought it was great."

Sinatra sat at a raised table in front of the showroom with his wife, Barbara, son Frank Jr. and daughters Tina and Nancy. He received a standing ovation when he entered to the strains of "I Did It My Way."

"You've all been so marvelous to come this far tonight to this shindig of ours," Sinatra said. "I've been marvelously entertained..."

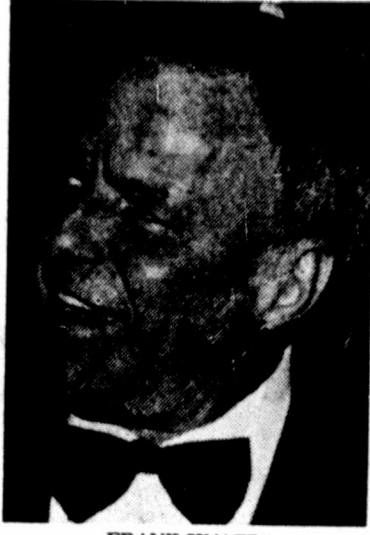

Mrs. Carter told Sinatra that meeting him was one of a "string of things I wanted to do while I was living."

Sinatra was presented with the first "Pied Piper Award" given by the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers. Veteran composer Jule Stein, in presenting the award, told Sinatra his music had "endeared you to those who write the words and music to the songs you sing."

Sinatra also received the Variety Club International "Humanitarian of the Year" award for 1980, as well as a special Grammy from the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

Welles noted that both he and the singer had made comebacks after requesting their careers start to slide.

"It's been a long time since Joe first set 'em up for us," Welles said. "We have heard the chimes of midnight. "He is, to quote Shakespeare, 'Every inch a king,'" said Welles. "Has Frank Sinatra ever walked through a room without owning it?"

The three-hour show was taped by NBC and will be telecast Jan. 3.

Sinatra sang four songs during the show, including "New York, New York," one of his first hit tunes, and "September of My Years." He closed the show with "The Best Is Yet To Come" and "I've Got The World On A String."

Veteran Hollywood Actor Proving To Be Alive, Well, Working

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "This is a man where you have to say things more in a direct way," remarks Rod Steiger. "He has undertaken eight movie roles in the past two years to prove that he is alive, well and a working actor. The films have included epics like "Break Through" with Richard Burton and Robert Mitchem and "Omar Mukhtar," in which he plays Benito Mussolini for the second time, a western with Art Lancaster, "Cattle Annie and Little Britches," and a Charles Bronson chase, "Love and Bullets." Also "The Amityville Horror" — "it has made $50 (million) to $60 million and I didn't have a piece of it, I'm a lousy businessman."

He adds: "I would do any kind of picture with quality — except those special-effects movies which are what I call humanized cartoons. I was offered one role that had 35 lines, the most important being, "Don't believe everything you read in the papers." Most of the films he has done were cameos requiring one or two weeks of work. Next he goes to Montreal and Amsterdam for a full-scale role as a Nazi officer captured by a Jewish boy in "Lucky Star."

"I had to start all over again and work my way up to roles like this one," the actor admitted.

Steiger indicates that he needed to convince not only producers that he was an employable actor but himself as well.

Prior to his recent burst of activity, he didn't work for 18 months. He had been struck by a number of catastrophes: a quadruple heart-bypass operation; a rancorous divorce from his second wife, Sherry Nelson; and the failure of "W.C. Fields and Me," in which Steiger believed he had done some of his best work.

"I suffered a terrible depression," he recalled. "I had to fight to get out of bed in the morning. Every day was a struggle to get going."

Steiger sought therapy from Beverly Hills' FREE Foundation (Foundation for the Rechanneling of Emotions and Education). The treatment worked. Steiger found he was able to overcome the morning depressions "and by the time I finished the day I would say to myself, 'Who was that guy who got up this morning?'"

His new spirit is signaled by the license plates on his cars: "Courage" and "Kep Movn."

Steiger is so grateful for his recovery

LUTHER THESES

Martin Luther, church reformer and translator of the Bible, nailed his 95 theses on the church door at Wittenburg in 1517. His original theses, directed against the sale of indulgences by the Dominican monk Johann Tetzel, were burned as heretical but translations survived and spread throughout Germany.

that he devotes two afternoons a week at the FREE Foundation as a "would-be therapist" at $3 for 50 minute sessions.

"I have actually saved three lives," he said proudly.

He told of receiving a telephone call from an Illinois family whose father refused to undergo a necessary heart operation. The Academy award actor ("In The Heat of the Night," 1968) tried his considerable powers of persuasion with no result. Finally he said, "Stop — ing around with your life. Join the zipper club."

Steiger reports: "He underwent the operation and now he's fine. It's amazing how some people won't listen to their own family but they will to a movie star."

Among Steiger's challenges as an actor was re-playing Mussolini in "Omar Mukhtar," the epic of Libya's war with Italy. Steiger had also portrayed the fascist dictator in "Mussolini — The Last Act."

"That was about his last four days, when it was possible to feel sorry for him," said the actor. "In the new film he is at the height of his power, a dynamic leader who was outrageous in the way he posed. He was such a bad actor that an audience couldn't believe him if it showed him as he really was."

Real Estate Superstar Sees No Slump In Wild Land Rush

REAL ESTATE SUPERSTAR — Elaine Young holds her book "A Million Dollars Down," which she co-authored with Ray Loynd. Miss Young's book is a light-hearted account about her amusing adventures in the real estate jungle, amid movie stars, sports figures, and rock stars. (AP Laserphoto)

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — On a recent afternoon, in this sun-blessed haven of millionaires, Elaine Young, superstar real estate gent, was showing a mansion to prospective buyers, apparently foreign.

"I was trying to be friendly, and I said, 'Where are you from?' she recalls. 'That' when I saw absolute fear in their eyes.

"Finally, one of them said, 'I'm Iranian but I'm Jewish.' It was very sad, but that's what's happening here."

In spite of the fearful mood, Miss Young says the combined crises of Iran and soaring interest rates have done little to cool the wild land rush that has made Beverly Hills a boomtown and propelled real estate agents to celebrity status.

"Everyone says prices can't go much higher," says Miss Young. "But I think they will continue to go up. This is still the greatest place to live. It has more money, more glamor, more allure than anyplace else."

It also has perhaps the highest housing prices in the land. A recent survey by the Real Estate Research Council of Southern California put the "average price" of a home in Beverly Hills at $800,000. Miss Young's properties often list at over $1 million, and interest costs don't worry her buyers.

"If they can afford to buy a house for $2 million and $3 million, it doesn't matter," she says. "Anyway, a lot of them pay cash."

Now, Miss Young, who has become a millionaire in the Beverly Hills boom, has written a book about her amusing adventures in the real estate jungle — a light-hearted account of high finance deals with movie stars, sports figures and rock stars.

The book, written with movie writer Ray Loynd, is titled, "A Million Dollars Down," a reference to often astronomical down payments to hold a hot property.

Miss Young, 44, a divorcee who numbers among her four ex-husbands the late actor Gig Young, is at home in this milieu of movie stars and millionaires.

Her Hollywood lifestyle closely matches her clients', and Elaine Young, making an entrance in her pale beige mink jacket and hat, her platinum blonde hair carefully styled, could be mistaken for a movie star herself.

The daughter of a onetime movie studio executive, Miss Young was raised amid the tinsel.

"I knew I couldn't sing or dance or act," she says in her book, "but I was caught up in the glamor and new something had to happen."

She hit on real estate almost by accident, then realized she had a talent for it.

"I sold my first house to Tuesday Weld," she recalls. "It cost her $20,000 in 1957." Her latest sale, to Sylvester Stallone, was in the vicinity of $1.5 million.

Her largest sale to date was an estate purchased by producer Dino DeLaurentis for $2 million. "It would sell for $18 million now," she says.

With a six per cent commission on sales, Miss Young's income easily hits six figures a year. And behind the bubbly, cotton-candy exterior clicks a shrewd investor's mind. Miss Young doesn't just sell properties; she buys them. She now owns about a dozen houses bought at rock bottom prices and leased for thousands.

Her accountant recently estimated her net worth at $1.5 million.

To make money, however, she concedes she must spend it. She throws frequent parties with guest lists topping 500. The bill for her glamorous clothing, with an emphasis on low-cut dresses, hovers around $15,000 a year. She drives a $44,000 white Rolls Royce convertible with the license plate "Elaine 7."

Last year, as Miss Young's fame increased, she left the agency where she worked and invested $60,000 in a partnership with two other agents. The new agency, "Alvarez, Hyland and Young," spent another $100,000 to decorate an office in the midst of Beverly Hills' high rent district.

The "think big" philosophy paid off. The office now has 15 agents and may hit $25 million in sales this year.

Blinded Man Awarded $2.4 Million

ST JOSEPH, Mich. (AP) — A jury has awarded a 21-year-old man nearly $2.4 million in a suit contending that the Parke-Davis Co. had insufficient warning labels on a drug that caused him to go blind.

A Berrien County Court jury deliberated two hours before granting Michael Mooney, 21, of Hartford, Mich., $2 million plus 6 percent interest per year — $371,700 — retroactive to the date the lawsuit was filed against the company three years ago.

Mooney's suit claimed he was "needlessly and negligently harmed" by Parke-Davis because the firm did not warn the medical profession that the drug Dilantin could cause Stevens-Johnson syndrome, an illness characterized by blindness and falling skin.

Parke-Davis contended the drug did not cause Mooney's blindness but that even if it did the firm had issued adequate warning. A company spokesman said he did not know if the verdict would be appealed.

Mooney was injured in a fall in 1962, when he was 4, and he began suffering seizures. Tests showed that he had epilepsy and a doctor recommended he start taking Dilantin. In May 1963, Mooney developed a skin rash. Two days later he was hospitalized and stopped taking the drug. He eventually went blind and sued the company in October 1976.

Acclaimed Actor Molds Own Character In Disney Space Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What's Maximilian Schell doing in a Disney space fantasy?

The Vienna-born actor has devoted most of his 25-year film career to such thought-provoking movies as "Judgment at Nuremberg" (Academy award, best actor), "The Man in the Glass Booth" and "Julia" (nominated for both). He has played "Hamlet" and "Pygmalion" on the stage and has directed four European-made films acclaimed for their artistic merit if not box office appeal.

Now here he is starring in "The Black Hole," which bends not only the mind but the Disney treasury. At $20 million, the Christmas release is by far the studio's most expensive film. It is aimed, production head Ron Miller admits, at winning a more mature audience for the Disney product.

"I must confess that I didn't know what I could do in 'The Black Hole,'" Schell remarked during a visit here. "In science fiction films, what is important are the surroundings, the special effects, the scenery. The human beings tend to disappear."

"Take 'Star Wars.' To me the most appealing character was R2D2. I don't remember much about the human actors."

Schell was cast as Dr. Hans Reinhardt, commander of the U.S.S. Cygnus, a space vehicle on which he has been traveling for 20 years as the only human passenger.

"The situation was larger than life, and my problem was: how could I make him more human?" the actor analyzed. "It was, after all, not a 'daily' picture in which you could use daily language. So I figured out that if he had been in space for 20 years with only robots to talk to, he would probably use a different speech pattern."

Schell expressed his doubts about the role to director Gary Nelson, who sympathized but suggested, "Let's wait and work on every scene." They did just that during filming, and Schell was satisfied with their efforts.

"For instance, I had one speech in which I had to deliver a plot line, and I didn't know what to do with it," he cited. "Then I had the notion: why don't I read it as the robot dictates it to me. Thus the villain was shifted from me to the robot, which incidentally was named Maximilian — before I signed for the picture."

"The device seemed to work. The doctor became ruled by the robots, and indeed almost gets into Maximilian at the end. Thus Dr. Reinhardt becomes a tragic figure, not a basic villain."

Schell also reasoned that the high-flying scientist would miss earthly pleasures after a couple of decades aloft, and a scene depicting his homesickness was invented. And when he encounters Yvette Mimieux after 20 years of mechanical companions, Dr. Reinhardt also evidences human reactions — within the Disney limitations, of course.

Walt Disney Productions reportedly paid Schell its highest fee ever for an actor. With characteristic reserve, he declined to reveal the amount.

"It doesn't really mean very much, because 50 percent goes to taxes, 10 percent went to my agent, and 30 percent went to finance 'Tales of the Vienna Woods.' That's the latest film he produced and directed in Austria, based on a play by Odon von Horvath."

Schell made another stipulation for agreeing to "The Black Hole": "I want an original drawing from 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.'" His condition was accepted, but the drawing wasn't delivered until he arrived for filming. "We want to be sure you're coming."

He was presented with a painting on celluloid of Snow White and Dopey, but he recognized that it was not an original "cell." All had disappeared, he was told. But later he did receive an original, cherished drawing of Snow White from the Disney archive.

More Babies Born In 1979 Than Same Period In 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Center for Health Statistics reported Thursday there were 3 percent more births in the United States during the first nine months of 1979, compared with the same period a year ago.

It said nearly 2.6 million babies were born by the end of September, representing an increase of 85,000.

The 299,000 live births during September boosted the 1979 total to 2,577,000, compared with 2,492,000 at the same point in 1978.

Small Viennese Theater Boasts Large Following

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — The stage is a mere podium and the auditorium seats only 250, but Vienna's English Theater boasts the best of Broadway and London's West End.

Of some 30 English-language theaters founded in continental Europe since 1945, only Vienna's English Theater has survived and flourished.

"Since Vienna's theaters and opera close in the summer, we intended to play for tourists," said director Franz Schafarek. "It never occurred to us so many Viennese would come."

Ruth Brinkmann, Schafarek's wife who helped him found the theater in 1963, credits success to a policy of using only professional actors. Others credit star names, especially from the movie world — a policy that began with its first production, Jerome Kilty's "Dear Liar," starring Anthony Steel and Miss Brinkman, with Schafarek directing.

Recent productions have included Shaw's "Candida" with Dawn Addams, Noel Coward's "Relative Values" with Anna Neagle, and James Goldman's "The Lion in Winter" with Joan Fontaine.

The English Theater occasionally has brought off acclaimed "firsts."

In 1976 it gave the world premiere of Tennessee Williams' "Red Devil Battery Sign." In February it plans the world premiere of William Saroyan's "Play Things," directed by Mai Zetterling and with scenery by Andy Warhol.

Its first plays were presented in a 90-seat "Keller (cellar) Theater" in Vienna's inner city. Then came a string of hits which helped develop a loyal public that has grown to some 6,000 subscribers.

In 1966 the Vienna Board of Education endorsed the theater's production of Shaw's "Man Of Destiny" for high school students studying English. Eight hundred students attended the first four performances.

"We were a bit overwhelmed," Schafarek said.

That led to state subsidies and to nationwide school tours playing to some 200,000 Austrian students each year. Schafarek said the English Theater could survive without Austrian government grants, though "we would have to go away from the artistic level and more literary plays."

"Instead of Shaw and Saroyan, we'd have to use Agatha Christie."

Top performers from London and New York assure sell-out performances, despite stiff ticket prices in comparison with Vienna's Burgtheater or opera.

"There are so many actors out of work that it's no trouble to get highly qualified people," Miss Brinkmann said. "We go to a great deal of trouble to look after people, to assure that actors don't feel lonely in a city where they usually don't speak the language."

This helps us get high quality people. Word gets around London that actors have a great time in Vienna."

The Schafarek-Brinkmann team looks to the future with optimism. Final negotiations are underway to purchase a second theater in Vienna with "a real stage with many more technical possibilities," Schafarek said.

"I'd like to be internationally known as a first rate theater," Schafarek said, "as a theater where any artist would like to come."

Rerun Of TV Gun Incident Panics Woman

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman watching a televised talk show telephoned police Thursday and said a guest had just pulled a gun on the host and was going to shoot him on the air.

Within minutes, three patrol cars screamed to a halt in front of WCBS-TV's West 57th Street studio. Officers muscled past station security men in a frantic hunt for the show's host, Stanley Siegel.

All they found was a rerun of his Oct. 22 show.

The host, whose show is ominously titled "Siegel's Final Days," actually was at home watching the taped replay.

On the show, anti-pornography crusader Marcia Womongold had pulled a 22-caliber pistol and waved it around to back up her assertion that women should be armed for self-defense.

Siegel said Wednesday that he had felt alarmed but not threatened at the time. He said the rerun left him cool and reassured by the rapidity of the police response.
